Carter Hits Soviet Move Afghanistan Action Called 'Gross Intervention'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter accused the Soviet Union on Friday of "gross intervention" in Afghanistan's internal affairs and said the United States plans urgent consultations with its allies on how the world community might respond.

In a nationally televised broadcast from the White House press room, Carter said the Soviet role in Thursday's coup in Afghanistan represented a "blatant violation of internationally accepted rules of behavior."

On Iran, Carter expressed confidence that the U.N. Security Council will support economic sanctions against Iran and said he is following a "thoughtful and determined policy" on gaining the release of Americans held hostage there.

Carter also said Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance will go to New York today "to press the world's case against Iran."

action is a grave threat to peace."

A high administration official, who asked not to be identified, said Carter discussed the situation with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Great Britain, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany, President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France, Prime Minister Francesco Cossiga of Italy and President Mohammad Zia Ul-Haq of Pakistan.

Carter said he has sent a message to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev about the intervention. Later, the administration official declined to say what was in the message, but added: "You can get a general sense of what he said from what he said publicly."

Soviet military action beyond its borders gives rise to the most fundamental questions pertaining to international stability, and such close and extensive consultations between ourselves and with our allies are urgently needed," Carter said.

He said he will send Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher to Europe this weekend to meet with leaders of allied nations to discuss the possibility of a joint response to the Soviet intervention.

He did not say which nations Christopher would visit, but the State Department said the deputy secretary would be in Britain on Sunday and would see representatives from other countries there also.

In an apparent signal to other Moslem countries, Carter pointedly noted that Afghanistan is an overwhelmingly Islamic country.

"This is the first such entree in a Moslem country since the Soviet occupation of Iranian Azerbaijan in the 1940s," he said.

The reference was to a northern province of Iran which was occupied by Soviet forces until 1946 despite a Soviet promise to withdraw at the conclusion of World War II. The Soviets finally withdrew under heavy diplomatic pressure from the United States and other countries.

In his earlier statement, State Department spokesman Thomas Reston said the United States would file a formal protest with the Soviets over actions in the Afghanistan coup that installed a pro-Soviet leader.

He said the United States has received information that Soviet troops, using armored personnel carriers, were directly involved in fighting at the headquarters of Radio Afghanistan on Thursday.

Reston added that Soviet planes were

"I expect to see adequate support in the United Nations Security Council for our position," Carter said.

The president did not answer directly when asked whether the Soviet Union had assured the administration it would not veto a Security Council resolution for sanctions against the Tehran government.

The statement essentially reiterated Carter's position that the United States wants the hostages released through peaceful means, will press for U.N. action, and is reserving the right to take other unspecified steps if necessary.

That latter suggestion of possible military action was couched in these words:

"The United States reserves the right to protect our citizens and our vital interest in whatever way we consider appropriate, in keeping with the principles of international law and the charter of the United Nations."

Carter compared the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan with the Soviets' use of armed force against Hungary in 1956 and in Czechoslovakia in 1968. Earlier a State Department spokesman said there were reports of direct involvement by Soviet troops in the fighting.

"Soviet efforts to justify this action on the basis of the United Nations charter are a perversion of the United Nations that should be rejected by all its members," Carter said.

He said he discussed the Soviet action with several other heads of government on Friday and "all agree that the Soviet

Iran Warns Pressures Will Not Help Hostages

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said Friday "there will not be the slightest change" in Iran's position on the hostages held in the occupied U.S. Embassy as long as the United States presses for international economic sanctions.

Ghotbzadeh spoke a short time before President Carter said in Washington that Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance was going to New York today to lobby the U.N. Security Council for sanctions against Iran.

Carter also warned during a brief nationally televised statement that Iran "will continue to pay an increasingly high price" for the situation at the embassy, where Iranian militants have held up to 50 Americans hostage since occupying it Nov. 4.

"I expect to see adequate support in the United Nations Security Council for our position," Carter said.

The official Iranian news agency quoted Ghotbzadeh as telling ambassadors from Western Europe during a meeting Friday night: "As long as these pressures continue, there will not be the slightest change in our stance."

Ghotbzadeh also repeated his threat that the hostages will "probably" be tried as spies if sanctions are imposed.

He previously had spoken about Iran setting up an international tribunal to investigate alleged crimes by the shah. Chances of that dimmed Friday when a spokesman for the ruling Revolutionary Council, Hassan Habibi, said some persons invited to serve on the panel had insisted the hostages be freed first.

Earlier Friday, Ghotbzadeh conferred with revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, apparently about the sanctions. There also were unconfirmed reports that Soviet Ambassador Vladimir Vinogradov met with Khomeini in the holy city of Qom. Iran is counting on a Soviet veto of any U.N. Security Council resolution on sanctions.

Iran on Friday condemned Soviet involvement in the overthrow of the Afghanistan government. Afghanistan, which borders both the Soviet Union and Iran, is overwhelmingly Moslem, and Moslem insurgents there have been fighting a guerrilla war against a succession of Marxist governments.

The Revolutionary Council released contents of a note forwarded to the Soviet Embassy here, which said: "The military intervention of the Soviet Union in our neighboring country is regarded as a hostile action not only against the people of Afghanistan, but against Moslems throughout the world."

The note also accused the Soviet Union of weakening Iran's "struggle against US imperialism" and said the Soviets had failed to learn from the U.S. experience in Vietnam.

In other developments Friday: In Washington, White House officials continued to express optimism the United States would be able to obtain the necessary nine of 15 Security Council votes and that Russia would not exercise its veto. They said a Soviet abstention was likely.

In Tabriz, capital of the northwest Azerbaijan region, supporters of the Moslem People's Party wounded one Revolutionary Guardsman and took 10 others hostage, the official Pars news agency reported. The guardsmen are Khomeini's chief security force.

Quoting the guard office in Tabriz, Pars said the guardsmen were taken hostage Thursday night while chasing an unidentified man who attacked and tried to set fire to a pavilion erected for Friday prayers.

Phillips Draws $19,600 In Fines

OSHA Acts In Fatal Mishap At Borger Refinery

THE PHILLIPS Petroleum Co. has been fined nearly $20,000 and charged with four major violations of government safety regulations that may have been responsible for the deaths of two workers at the company's refinery near Borger in October, a government official revealed Friday.

Kim Manning, 27, and Fran McGahey, 29, both of Fritch, died Oct. 25, several hours after they inhaled lethal gas and fell more than 20 feet to the ground while performing a maintenance check on Unit 22, a special refinery tower at the plant. Thirteen other workers, all of whom were exposed to the deadly fumes, were injured in the incident.

The autopsies on the two men were somewhat inconclusive but showed strong evidence the men died of hydrogen sulfide gas. Jerry Bailey, area director of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, told The Avalanche-Journal: "We feel that had Phillips been in compliance with these regulations, the deaths could have been prevented."

After inspecting the unit the night of the incident, an OSHA inspector found "two willful and two serious violations of the OSHA Act of 1970," Bailey said. "These are the two worst types of violations, and we have fined Phillips in accordance with them."

Ed Wandler, acting plant manager at the Phillips refinery four miles north of Borger, gave no comment on any aspects of the violations or fines Friday.

Most of the violations cited by the OSHA inspector deal with the fact that the workers did not have any respirators, breathing equipment or face and eye protection equipment available to them at the time of the accident. The accident occurred when toxic gases, including hy-

Lubbock Ex-Convict Charged In 1976 Drug-Related Death

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A 40-YEAR-OLD former Lubbock man, who barricaded himself in a house during a 1968 murder investigation and had to be ousted by police in an armored car, was charged with murder Friday in the 1976 death of Severo Garza Jr.

The suspect, Lloyd Dale "Skipper" Ready, is accused of killing Garza with a drug overdose. He had not been arrested Friday afternoon and was believed to be in California.

Garza, 31, was found dead in the trunk of a car at a Slaton wrecking yard almost exactly three years ago. He was believed to have been dead about two weeks.

Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford said in announcing the charge that the Garza case was the fifth pre-1979 murder case to be cleared in Lubbock County this year and that investigations continue in the nine still unsolved.

Wanted in the 1968 shooting death of a 23-year-old man who was killed outside an East 34th Street nightclub, Ready was the subject of a nine-hour police siege in a home in the 4700 block of Orlando Avenue in January 1968.

After dodging numerous shots fired from the house during the incident, officers eventually flushed Ready from the house with tear gas shells fired from an armored car. He subsequently was found to have been insane at the time of the shooting, however, and was adjudged insane at the time of his trial and released after treatment at a state hospital.

Garza was last seen in Lubbock on Dec. 1, 1976, and his body was discovered on Dec. 13, 1976, by a Lubbock policeman who was dusting Garza's 1976 Pontiac Grand Prix for fingerprints.

An autopsy was never performed on his body because of a dispute during that period between Lubbock County commissioners and area pathologists over autopsy fees. The Garza family unsuccessfully brought suit against the county in

Think Decade Of '80s Starts Next Week? Expert Says Wait A Year

CLEARFIELD, Utah (AP) — You probably think a new decade, the decade of the 1980s, begins next week. But you're wrong, says Glenn Cloward, an expert on calendars.

"The decade isn't ending. It has one more year left," says Cloward, who markets perpetual Lifetime Calendar as a sideline to his work in logistics at Hill Air Force Base.

And Cloward chides all the "economists, commentators, politicians, city planners, agricultural forecasters, radio and TV historical programmers, and just a multitude of others (who) all make fools of themselves" over the issue.

He writes them off as being among the "un-calendar-educated."

Just because Tuesday is Jan. 1, 1980, doesn't mean we will enter the decade of the 1980s, says Cloward.

Why? Because decades end in 10. So do centuries. The 20th century takes its name from the last year of the century, the year 2000, he points out.

The 1970s won't be over until Dec. 31, 1980, Cloward asserts. Still skeptical? Count to 10, Cloward suggests.

"Do you start with zero or with 1? Why start with zero when you are counting years in a decade? A decade ends with 10, or in this case, with 1980," he says. The first year, he instructs, was 1, not zero.

The New York Times, that venerable newspaper of record, understands this basic law of noting the passage of time, says Cloward. It welcomed the 20th century on Jan. 1, 1901.

Cloward, a retired Air Force colonel, first took an interest in calendars in 1959. He produced his first perpetual calendar four years later and a red-white-and-blue Bicentennial edition in 1976.

Perpetual calendars are ones that are arranged in such a way that you can find the right day of the week for a given date

Guard Bolsters Forces In Firefighters Dispute

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A fresh contingent of 200 National Guardsmen arrived in Kansas City on Friday to help fight fires and to bolster a police force weakened by a week-long work slowdown by firefighters.

The new arrivals brought to 700 the number of Missouri guardsmen called in to action since Thursday, when Gov. Joseph Teasdale declared a state of emergency in the city of 500,000 people.

With many of the 900 firefighters calling in sick Friday, city officials went to court to seek contempt citations against 50 firemen, including officers of Firefighters Local 42. A Jackson County Circuit Court judge granted a defense request that hearings on the citations be continued until Monday. The city won a temporary restraining order against the slowdown after it began Dec. 21.

The only major fire since the job action began occurred Thursday night at a recently built and unoccupied nursing home complex. No one was hurt, but the $5.5 million building was destroyed. Police arson investigators were trying to determine the cause of the fire.

The work slowdown began with the firefighters refusing to accept overtime in an attempt to force the city to meet their demands for a 20 percent increase in pay. The dispute escalated and by the end of the week more than 200 firefighters were calling in sick.

Officials said they did not know exactly how many of the 900 firefighters were taking part in the protest Friday. But Fire Chief John Was said about 50 to 60 firemen, out of a normal staff of 180 to 190, were reporting for each shift. At least 32 firefighters had been fired and more than 200 given three-day suspensions to be served later as a result of the dispute.

Mayor Richard Berkley said the city would return to negotiations if firefighters ended the slowdown and agreed to negotiate near the level of the city's contract offer.

He said the National Guard troops had stabilized the situation.

"The injection of the guard has been a tremendous help," he said. "The next step is for the firefighters to obey the law. It is very important that they cease the illegal action. Then we can enter further discussions."

The Guard troops, who were not armed, were being used primarily to direct traffic and assist police officers who have been working 12-hour shifts to cover for the missing firemen. But they also manned fire trucks and assisted officers at about eight fires, all minor, in addition to the one Thursday night.

On Friday, seven police arson investigators plodded through ashes 18 inches deep, checking the ruins of the sprawling nursing home complex. About 100 residents of a nearby convalescent home were forced to flee because of the fire.

which broke windows and scorched paint in their building.

Asked if police suspected firefighters as having a part in the fire, police spokesman Jim Treece said, "We have nothing to indicate that any firemen were involved in this."

"There is no evidence at this point to determine if it was even arson."

Firemen have been negotiating with the city for months over a new contract. The city said its final offer was to shift from a 40- to a 48-hour week and provide a 19.3 percent pay raise over the next two years. The union wants an immediate increase of 20 percent to go to the longer work schedule.

Pay for the firemen currently ranges from $12,132 to $17,982.

Germann has said the slowdown could be settled if the city could come up with a $5.8 million wage package. The city says its top offer is $5.1 million.

Since the protest began, the city has been paying $70,000 a day in overtime to its 1,183 police officers. Costs of the National Guard will run more than $26,000 daily.

In a four-day strike by Local 42 four years ago, the state paid the Guard costs, then later sued Local 42 for the costs and won.

Nation's Trade Deficit Narrows To $1 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's trade deficit narrowed to $1.4 billion in November as the volume of oil imports fell to the lowest level in nearly two years, the Commerce Department reported Friday.

Last month's deficit was an improvement from deficits of $2 billion in October and $2.8 billion in September. In both September and October, the United States paid record bills for crude oil and refined product imports.

The value of imports, including oil, fell 2.3 percent from $18.9 billion in October to $18.4 billion in November, the report showed.

Exports, meanwhile, rose 1 percent from $16.8 billion in October to a record $17 billion in November.

Because of the strength of exports, especially agricultural and manufactured products, the nation is expected to end the year with a total $23.4 billion deficit, an improvement of more than $5 billion from 1978.

Much of the November improvement in the trade balance was credited to a sharp drop in oil imports.

Crude oil and refined product imports totaled 219.6 million barrels in November, down 20 percent from October to the lowest level since imports of 218.8 million barrels in December 1977.

A Commerce Department analyst, who asked not to be identified, said the decline in November probably reflected some "inventory adjustment" on the part of U.S. oil companies.

He pointed out that oil imports had risen sharply from about 245.9 million barrels in August to 260.9 million in September and 273.3 million in October.

"My guess is that the oil companies stocked up in anticipation of an OPEC price increase and that they didn't have much storage space left (in November) and cut back on imports," he said.

R.G. Ensz, a spokesman for the American Petroleum Institute, agreed that storage facilities "were pretty full" in November. He added that imports also might have been affected by an apparent drop in gasoline consumption. Ensz said that deliveries from refineries and bulk terminals were 9.3 percent lower in November this year than in November 1978.

Ministers from OPEC, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, met in Venezuela earlier this month but failed to agree on a joint price increase. Several of the member nations have raised prices, and others are trying to work out a compromise that could result in joint price increases early next year.

Reflecting the decline in volume, the total amount of imported oil was down 19 percent from $6.3 billion in October to $5.1 billion in November.

Still, the price averaged $23.13 per barrel last month, compared with $13.30 per barrel in November 1978 before OPEC announced price increases that have boosted the cost of crude oil more than 60 percent on the world market.

The Commerce Department report showed that agricultural exports exceeded imports by $1.8 billion in November, down from $2.3 billion a month earlier.

To store apples, keep baskets of the fruit in a dark, well-ventilated, cool room. Cover the apples with sheets of perforated plastic to help maintain proper humidity.

Exports of manufactured goods exceeded imports by $602 million in November, compared with $1 billion in October. But iron and steel trade showed a deficit of $450.6 million in November, up from October's $386.2 million deficit.

The strongest import category in November was autos, which increased $207.4 million to $1.6 billion in November.

The closely watched trade balance with Japan widened slightly from a deficit of $731.3 million in October to $744.6 million in November, the report said.

But the deficit with OPEC nations narrowed from $3.2 billion in October to $2.4 billion in November, mostly because of the decline in oil imports.

Summer May Bring Worst Of Oil Slicks If Well Flow Continues

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Texans along the lower coast who endured last summer's Mexican oil slick may be facing a much worse onslaught of sludge and goo this spring, a government scientist believes.

Oil from the runaway Ixtoc I well, which has been spilling into the Bay of Campeche off Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula since the well blew out June 3, drifted northward and stained Texas beaches last August and September.

But Dr. John Robinson of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration says the worse could be yet to come.

"We would expect the situation next summer to be more serious than last summer if the well continues to flow," Robinson said. "Oil leaving the well at this moment has some probability of making it to the Texas coast."

"The chances of that increase each day the well is not capped," said Robinson, who directed the federal agency's efforts to monitor last summer's spill.

Robinson told the Corpus Christi Call-Times on Thursday that if the runaway Ixtoc I well is not capped soon there is a 30 percent chance oil will wash up in large concentrations between Port Aransas and Brownsville by late spring.

He said there is a 5 percent or 10 percent chance the oil could reach Brownsville by February.

Equipment used last summer to keep crude oil out of the ecologically-sensitive intercoastal waterways will be returned to the South Texas coast in February or March, said Coast Guard Lt. Harry Baughan.

He said the equipment would be located at Port Aransas, Port O'Connor, Port Mansfield and Port Isabel.

"We'll be staging from there," if oil heads north again. "We already made plans for where it needs to be sent out," said Baughan.

Crude oil fouled about 140 miles of Texas' resort beaches last summer. The spill dealt a damaging blow to the South Texas tourist industry and threatened coastal breeding grounds essential to the state's already beleaguered shrimpers.

"We can anticipate a more serious threat to the Texas Coast than we had last summer," said Robinson.

He said the two major currents that have kept the oil away from Texas during the fall will shift by summer. And he said oil leaving the well after Christmas still could pose a threat to Texas beaches.

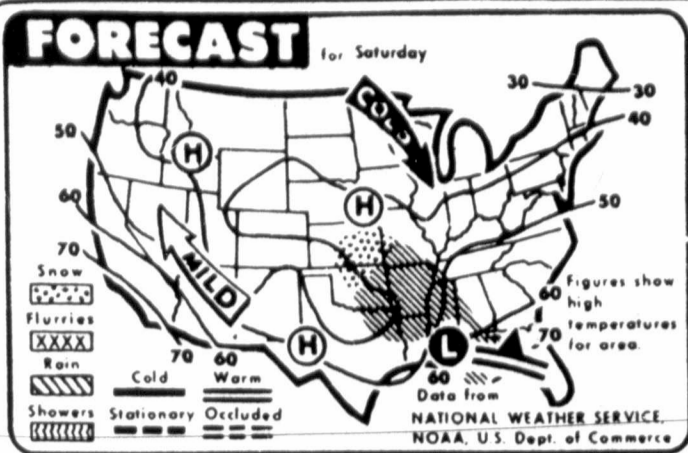

The Mexican government has said the flow at the runaway well, once estimated at 50,000 barrels a day, was reduced in October to about 2,000 barrels a day by various measures, including forcing tennis-ball sized lead balls into the well.

However, experts testifying before a congressional panel were quoted Thursday in the Washington Post as saying the flow in October was still 50,000 barrels a day.

Absentee Balloting Draws Nine Voters

Absentee voting for the Jan. 19 special election on whether to give Lubbock firefighters a 15 percent pay raise and collective bargaining rights drew nine voters to City Hall by 5 p.m. Friday.

Absentee voters will be accepted through Jan. 15 in person at the city secretary's office or until 1 p.m. Jan. 29 through the mail. Persons voting through the mail must include proper identification, including name and address, plus voter identification number and the reason the voter needs to vote absentee, according to City Secretary Evelyn Galfga.

Extradition Of Shah To Be Considered

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Iran has notified Panama it will seek extradition of the deposed shah, but a spokesman said Friday such a request will not even be considered until American hostages held in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran are freed.

President Aristides Rojo told reporters a telegram was received Dec. 21 from Iran's revolutionary government saying it would submit a formal petition for extradition of the shah now living on Panama's Contadora Island. But he said it was unlikely Iran would be able to comply with Panama's conditions.

Presidential spokesman Boris Moreno issued an official statement later making clear that release of the hostages was the first of several conditions.

The statement, translated from Spanish, said: "According to our laws we will consider the presentation of a formal request for extradition for the study of it according to our internal laws which have been established in accordance with international laws."

"That acceptance of the demand will depend on the accomplishment by the Iranian government of the international laws that protect the immunity of diplomats in their missions."

Panama and Iran do not have an extradition treaty.

Royo said earlier that Panama would reply to Iran's consul general, explaining Panama's extradition laws.

He said Iran would have 60 days under Panamanian law to present, along with a formal extradition request, Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's arrest warrant, a copy of a court sentence against him and a legal description of the monarch who fled the revolution in Iran in January.

"We are sure that Iran will not be able to fill these requirements," Rojo said, adding:

"In as much as we are a country which complies with international law, we are going to insist that Iran comply with the laws which recognize and consecrate the right of asylum and diplomatic immunity, laws which have been violated in the case of the taking of hostages and the occupation of the American Embassy in Tehran."

The shah has been living on Contadora Island since Dec. 15, after receiving medical treatment for cancer and gallbladder problems in the United States. After fleeing Iran he made stops in Egypt, Morocco and the Bahamas before moving to Mexico in June. He flew to New York in October for the medical treatment and then went to Panama when Mexico said it would not permit him to return.

Iranian militants, reacting to the shah's arrival in New York, seized the U.S. Embassy Nov. 4 and are holding up to 50 American hostages. They have said they would free the captives if the shah is returned, and if not they will try some of the prisoners as spies.

Royo emphasized that no formal request for extradition has been received, merely a cablegram from Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh saying a formal demand would be presented.

Royo said the cablegram from Iran arrived Dec. 21, but it was not announced until Friday.

Earlier this week, government spokesmen denied such a cablegram had been received.

Slaton Superintendent Named Top Administrator For Year

J. C. McClesky, superintendent of Slaton schools, has been named Administrator of the Year for 1979-80 of school districts with up to 5,000 students by the Texas Classroom Teachers Association.

McClesky will be presented with the award Feb. 15 at the TCTA convention in Dallas.

The administrator was nominated by the Slaton Classroom Teachers Association.

SCTA cited McClesky for his open door policy toward teachers, his support for SCTA, encouragement of teachers to join professional organizations and his personal interest in each campus of the district.

McClesky, who has been Slaton superintendent for 10 years, previously served as superintendent in Shamrock and Chillicothe.

He is a member of the American Association of School Administrators, Texas Association of School Administrators, National Education Association and Texas State Teachers Association.

J. C. MCCLESKY

He also is involved in various Slaton civic and school organizations.

Accident Triggers Teenager's Suicide

MITCHELL, S.D. (AP) — A teenager's Christmas suicide erased most of the questions surrounding the death of eight people in one of South Dakota's most tragic auto accidents, authorities said Friday.

Mark Frank, 18, of Huron died of an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound Dec. 25.

While the death was being investigated, police said, Frank's younger brother revealed that Frank's auto had accidentally forced a car filled with six teenagers onto the path of an oncoming vehicle on Dec. 8.

That killed five teenagers in one car and three members of a Sioux Falls family in another.

In a prepared statement, Davison County Sheriff Lyle Swenson said Frank's vehicle was passing a car on the right shoulder of a rural highway. The second car, driven by Daniel Lucid, 17, of Letcher, contained six teenagers.

The cars collided and Lucid's auto was knocked into the path of an auto driven by Verlyn Nelson of Sioux Falls, Swenson said.

"We all had various thoughts and heard stories of a third vehicle," the sheriff said. "But the evidence was — no vehicle."

Frank apparently realized an accident had occurred but did not realize how severe it was until the next day, Swenson said.

He was trying to convince himself that he wasn't really to blame for the accident," the sheriff said.

Swenson said the Frank brothers did not know any of the individuals in the Lucid vehicle and that investigators were still trying to determine why he was passing on that side of the road.

AN EDITORIAL: Soviet Power Move Alarming

AFGHANISTAN and Iran serve to illustrate the difference in the way the Soviet Union and the United States view the struggle for the world balance of power and we shudder to think that the Russians may be getting the better of it.

When a regime friendly to the U.S. was tottering in Iran just one year ago, the Carter administration at best took a hands-off attitude.

Official Says Nixon Tried To Stop Case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the final days of his presidency, Richard Nixon called the deputy attorney general to try to block the prosecution of his former treasury secretary, John Connally, the one-time Justice Department official confirmed Friday.

Laurence Silberman, the No. 2 official at the Justice Department at the time, told Nixon the plea bargain arranged with the key witness against Connally was a normal procedure that would not be reversed upon the president's demand.

Silberman, now a bank vice president in San Francisco, told UPI he could confirm the account of Nixon's intervention on behalf of Connally that appeared in Friday's Washington Post.

Silberman said that his boss, then-Attorney General William Saxbe, reactively negatively, when apprised of Nixon's demand.

According to the Post account, based on a memo Silberman wrote immediately after the series of phone calls with Nixon on April 30, 1974, Nixon ordered the firing of Assistant Attorney General Henry Petersen, who would not back down on the deal he worked out with Jake Jacobsen, Connally's main accuser.

Nixon's intervention ended later the same day when his chief of staff, Gen. Alexander Haig, told Silberman "to forget the whole matter," the Post said.

Federal fraud charges were dropped against Jacobsen in return for his testimony that he had given $10,000 to Connally on behalf of a milk producers' association after the former secretary recommended to Nixon that milk price supports be raised. Jacobsen pleaded guilty to making an illegal gratuity but Connally was acquitted in a jury trial of accepting the payment.

Connally is now running for the Republican presidential nomination, and according to a variety of published accounts was deeply admired by Nixon and was his choice as a successor until Nixon resigned on Aug. 9, 1974. "Connally was acquitted in the trial and no useful purpose would be served by trying to retry the case," his chief spokesman said. "Connally never discussed the case with Nixon. It would have been wrong to do so."

Silberman refused to discuss the matter in detail, but said of the Post account, "As best as I can recall, that's an accurate rendition of the memo."

The Post story quoted sources close to Silberman's as saying the seven-page memo, written to protect the deputy attorney general against possible accusations he conspired to obstruct justice, was sent to Watergate deputy special prosecutor Henry Ruth but was never received until later that fall after President Ford pardoned Nixon.

"My recollection is that I discussed the matter with Henry Ruth in the spring," Silberman told UPI. "I'm mystified about the memo arriving in November."

A source familiar with the case told

UPI that Ruth never considered an obstruction of justice charge against Nixon because the president's intervention was for so brief a period of time "it never went anywhere. Nothing happened."

Also, the source said, "To determine obstruction they would have had to work through Nixon, and they were having enough trouble getting stuff out of him. In addition, they were going to prosecute the milk case anyway."

Former Defense Analyst Sues Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon says in a court deposition that he paid little attention to cost overruns for the C-5A cargo plane when he learned about them in December 1969.

Nixon, interviewed by lawyers at his San Clemente, Calif., home Oct. 2-3, said he took no immediate action to check estimates of $2 billion in excess costs for the plane because he was preoccupied with the Vietnam War and other issues.

Nixon's statements appeared in a 371-page deposition filed Thursday in U.S. District Court as part of a $3.5 billion damage suit against Nixon and two of his former White House aides, Bryce N. Harlow and Alexander P. Butterfield.

The suit was filed in 1973 by Defense Department cost analyst A. Ernest Fitzgerald, who charged that the three men ruined his career after he exposed the overruns.

Fitzgerald was fired in 1969 after his disclosures but later was reinstated to a similar position at what he calls a lower level at the Pentagon.

Under questioning by Fitzgerald's lawyers, Nixon said he first learned of the overruns in a briefing book prepared for his use at a Dec. 8, 1969, news conference.

For more than a year earlier, publications such as The Washington Post, New York Times, Wall Street Journal and Newsweek magazine carried stories about Fitzgerald and the plane's financial troubles, and congressional committees held hearings.

But the former president said he paid no attention because he was preoccupied with ending the Vietnam War and other matters.

"Right at that period, for example, in early January of 1970, I was preparing my first orally delivered State of the Union message, a message on the environment, incidentally, which was then becoming a very hot issue," Nixon said.

Compared to these issues, Nixon said, Fitzgerald's disclosures were "an irritating problem, only, just an irritant. I didn't consider it vitally important, I must say."

Nixon told the lawyers he could not "recall ever having heard" of Fitzgerald until the lawsuit was filed in 1973. The former president said he refreshed his memory after listening to White House tapes and reading documents, and that he now can deny Fitzgerald's claims that Nixon ordered the Pentagon to fire him.

Fitzgerald's lawyers asked Nixon if he was concerned "that you were taking a beating ... and that the Pentagon is catching hell from liberals and conservatives for firing a guy whose only crime seems to be that he was an aggressive investigator who found mistakes in the procurement of the transport which cost billions?"

"I would say that as far as this particular issue was concerned, that I cannot recall now the level of concern that I had," Nixon responded.

Q. Not enough of a level of concern to ask anybody about it?

A. That's correct.

Reese Daycare Children Color Pictures For Hostages In Iran

Youngsters at the daycare center at Reese Air Force Base have been working hard this week making colorful pictures for the Americans being held hostage in the U.S. Embassy in A Tehran, Iran.

The children are hoping the pictures will brighten the hostages' days of confinement.

The children's pictures are not the typical holiday type, but are pictures of Lubbock of airplanes, buildings, sunsets and flowers," said Capt. Steve Headley with the public affairs office.

About 20 pictures, colored on the back of computer print-out sheets, will be sent to the U.S. Embassy in Iran today.

Children working on the pictures ranged in age from two to eight years old.

The first national effort to reduce brucellosis in the United States was launched in 1934. It was part of an emergency cattle reduction program occasion by extreme drought conditions.

For Sale: One Railroad; Train, Tracks Included

SOUTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. (UPI) — It's a little late to buy as a Christmas gift, but for $100,000 John P. Miller is selling "a beautiful little piece of an America that's disappearing."

Miller, a dentist from Newtown, Conn., says he put the Narragansett Pier Railroad on the block because he's tired of making the long drive to Rhode Island to take his colossal toy out on the tracks.

"I've had a lot of fun with it and I don't have any regrets about buying it, but I'm tired, that's all," Miller said.

The railroad, which has operated since 1876, includes a 60-ton diesel-electric engine, 6 miles of track and an ornate turn-of-the-century depot complete with stationmaster's office, waiting room and ticket window.

It's one of the few short lines left in Rhode Island. Miller describes it as "a beautiful little piece of an America that's disappearing."

In its early days, the little railroad line transported high society families to their summer homes at Narragansett Pier, a Victorian era resort.

Now, when it runs at all, the railroad transports only freight between Kingston and Wakefield. The extra 2 miles of track to Narragansett were torn up in the 1950s.

Miller says the line has lost all its freight customers and has operated in the red in recent years. The last time it ran was in October, when Miller drove over to play engineer with friends.

Miller bought the historic railroad eight years ago. He says he's selling it for exactly what he paid for it and hopes the buyer will perhaps begin passenger excursions again.

If he doesn't find a buyer, Miller said, he'll sell the 4-acre railroad for industrial use and get rid of its equipment for scrap.

But he added, "That's exactly what I don't want to happen."

Needles Left In Patient's Chest Suit Subject

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — A heart patient has filed a $200,000 damage suit accusing a doctor of leaving surgical needles in his chest that caused him such sharp pains for five years that he thought he was suffering heart attacks.

The circuit court suit, filed by Robert H. Kelly of Columbia, Tenn., names as defendants prominent Nashville heart surgeon Dr. Robert Frist and the Cardiothoracic Surgery Association, of which Frist is a member.

Frist declined comment on the suit Thursday, saying he had not seen the complaint, which involves surgery that Kelly underwent in 1974.

Kelly charged that he told Frist about his pains, was told to see a general practitioner and "he had no cause for concern."

"Notwithstanding this, the plaintiff continued to suffer chest pains and on at least two occasions was hospitalized for suspected heart attacks," the suit charged.

In January of 1979, Kelly was given a chest X-ray after which he was advised

"there were foreign objects in the plaintiff's body, close to his heart."

"It was explained to the plaintiff that these objects consisted of one or more surgical needles that had for some reason been left in the plaintiff's body at the time of the operation," the suit said.

Kelly said he informed Frist of the finding of the X-ray and was told there "was no cause for alarm."

Kelly said he asked the physician to remove the needles but that Frist replied he would only do so if Kelly would sign a form releasing the doctor from any liability connected with the operation.

"Certain movements of his body induced great pain in his chest, and that this is possibly caused by the existence of sharp needles adjacent to his heart," Kelly's suit claimed.

YOUR PERMANENT NUMBERS

Step 1 — Year of birth. Read down the left hand column to find the last number in the year of your birth then go across to the appropriate decade. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

9 A6 9 10	22 A2 23 12	A0 7 1	A16 20 24	B11 4 13	A7 17 3

Step 2 — Month of birth. Find the corresponding numbers for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Jan.	Feb.	March	April	May	June	July	Aug.	Sept.	Oct.	Nov.	Dec.

Step 3 — Day of birth. Enter your day of birth three times in the figure chart, once each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I).

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's biorhythm readings.

Boy Rescued After Night On Mountain

ASPEN, Colo. (AP) — An 11-year-old boy who got lost while skiing on Aspen Mountain was rescued Friday after spending the night in sub-freezing weather, authorities said.

Eric Carlson of Chicago was taken to an Aspen hospital where he was reported in good condition.

Authorities described the boy as "very lucky," saying temperatures dropped to 10 degrees during the night.

Officials said Eric was supposed to have met his family at the bottom of the mountain at 4 p.m. Thursday. They reported him missing about 6:30 p.m.

Ski patrol members launched a night-long search of the mountain looking for the youth.

The boy apparently became disoriented while skiing and ended up outside the boundaries of the ski area. He told sheriff's deputies he took off his skis and walked down the mountain.

NEW YORK (AP)—The former secretary-treasurer of Teamsters Local 806 was indicted by a special federal grand jury Friday on charges of embezzling more than $1 million from two benefit funds.

The indictment was handed down against George Snyder, 60, of Queens, who resigned from the Melville-based local in 1977 while under investigation by authorities.

The indictment accused Snyder of pocketing $648,727 from the Local 806 welfare fund and $367,150 from its pension fund over slightly more than two years, beginning Jan. 1, 1975.

Snyder carried out the embezzlements, it said, by directing that checks far exceeding his maximum annual salary of $55,000 from each of the funds be issued to him.

U.S. Attorney Edward P. Korman and Thomas P. Puccio, head of the Organized Crime Strike Force in Brooklyn, said the indictment resulted from an investigation by the FBI and the strike force.

In a civil suit that preceded the criminal action, the Labor Department presented testimony to U.S. District Judge Charles J. Pratt that much of the embezzled money was spent on maintenance of Sandpiper III, a 40-foot yacht Snyder berthed in West Palm Beach, Fla.

Search For Cargo Vessel Abandoned

WESTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — A Coast Guard cutter gave up its search Friday for the first sailing cargo vessel built in America since the 1930s, a two-masted schooner abandoned by her crew and buffeted by 20-foot waves and 20-knot winds.

Before the skipper, Ned Ackerman, left the 97-foot schooner Thursday afternoon during its first working voyage to Haiti, he kept a deathbed promise by burying his mother's ashes in the sea.

Ackerman and eight others, including crew members and two movie makers, were taken from the vessel by National Guard helicopter and flown to the airport here.

The Coast Guard had searched an area 250 miles east-southeast of New York City, last reported position of the John F. Leavitt.

The cutter Chase arrived at that site from Boston at about 12:30 p.m. but found no sign of the sailing vessel, the Coast Guard in New York reported. Chief Petty Officer Terry Bragen said the search was abandoned at 4:40 p.m.

Ackerman, 37, of Thomaston, Maine, said the trouble began Wednesday afternoon and buffeted by 20-foot waves and 20-knot winds.

"We were getting water from both sides. Through the day the winds buffeted the boat. We were caught in freak seas, rogue seas you can't count on," he said. "First we were listing 35 degrees to port and then 25 degrees to starboard."

Realizing that his dream of reviving commercial sailing was sinking fast, the skipper said he grabbed his mother's ashes and tossed them into the ocean.

Ackerman, a former medieval scholar and former English instructor at Merrimack College in North Andover, Mass., had planned to bury the ashes with ceremony in the warm waters of the Gulf Stream.

His mother, Ruth, who died in Tucson, Ariz., in April, "loved the sea and spoke to me about a ceremony like this the day before she died," he said.

The Leavitt carried 6,440 square feet of canvas sail on its two 80-foot masts.

Residents Cautious Despite Halt Of Gas Flow

By KIMBERLY PALMER
Avalanche-Journal Staff
Although the flow of poisonous gas from a blown-out gas well located south-east of Canadian was halted early Friday, several evacuated families stayed in motels or with relatives for one more night as an extra precaution.
Hemphill County Sheriff C.H. Wright said the well, owned by Trigg Drilling of Oklahoma City, plugged itself about midnight Thursday. However, mud and brine water were being pumped down the backside of the wellhead Friday, Wright said, in the hopes of containing pressure and preventing any further blowouts.

About 60 residents of the southern part of Hemphill County were evacuated from their homes in this sparsely populated ranching region in the northeastern Panhandle about 10 p.m. Thursday, some two hours after the natural gas well began spewing toxic hydrogen sulfide gas.

Known as "sour gas" because of its smell, hydrogen sulfide when inhaled can cause severe respiratory burns.
Although nine employees were at the rig at the time of the explosion, no injuries were reported, Wright said.

Local hospital officials reported treating no victims of the toxic fumes.
A Gulf Oil booster station located about 300 yards from the well site reportedly was not damaged.
Wright said families from ranches in a 15-mile radius of the well site were asked to temporarily leave their homes because officials could not immediately determine the concentration of deadly gas that was in the air.

"There was air testing equipment at the well site," Wright said. "But when the well blew out, employees left the scene for their own safety and didn't think of grabbing the (air testing) equipment."
"Although we had equipment coming from neighboring towns, we decided to go ahead and evacuate people as a precaution," Wright said.
A heavy fog that held the toxic fumes close to the ground plus light northeasterly winds increased officials' concern for the safety of those living near the well site, located about 20 miles south of Canadian.

"We allowed everybody to go home Friday morning and we have all their names and telephone numbers so we can reach them quickly if the well goes again," Wright said.
Some of the evacuated families notified Wright Friday that as a precautionary measure they would stay away from their homes at least until today.
Wright, who noted that Thursday night's incident was the first time Hemphill County residents had to be evacuated because of a well blow-out, said he chalks up the situation to experience.
"We will use what we learned from this accident in hopes of knowing how to handle a disaster like Denver City," the Hemphill County sheriff said.

"The people in this area are not used to working with this type of situation," Wright said. Hemphill County officials were assisted by emergency units from Pampa, Wheeler, Gem and Canadian.

City Man Reports Theft Of Jewelry

A Lubbock man told police someone stole his wife's diamond watch and bracelet while she was trying on clothes at a South Plains Mall store.
Douglas L. Guinn of 2911 64th St. told investigating officers that his wife was trying on a sweater and removed her watch and bracelet and put the items in her purse. The woman then reportedly placed her purse on a dressing room shelf.
Reports indicate the woman briefly left the cubicle and when she returned, her jewelry, valued at $2,000, was missing, but the purse was untouched.
In other activity, the owner of a Lubbock furniture store told officers more than $1,400 worth of furniture had been stolen from his firm.

Elwyn D. Beard, owner of D & E Furniture at 4604 Ave. H, told police the furniture, which included two television sets, three tables, a dining room table and six straight-back chairs, were taken between 6 p.m. Thursday and 10 a.m. Friday.
Reports indicate entry to the business was gained through a broken bathroom window.
Three Mexican-American men were arrested about 5 p.m. Thursday and booked into county jail on suspicion of charges ranging from disorderly conduct to possession of marijuana after a disturbance near Matthews Junior High School at 417 N. Akron.

Reports indicate police were called to the scene because of a fight on the south side of the school. When officers arrived, two of the suspects were fleeing toward their vehicles and police ordered them to stop.
Police said the three men were yelling wildly at each other and officers had to call in an extra unit to help subdue them, according to reports.
Upon searching one of the vehicles, police found a loaded 22 caliber Ruger pistol under the front seat.
Reports show that while police were searching the vehicle, one of the men tried to kick a baggie containing what appeared to be marijuana under the car. When police questioned the man, he said, "Hey man, I'm just closing my door."
All three men were arrested for disorderly conduct. One of the men was arrested on suspicion of unlawfully carrying a weapon and another on suspicion of a misdemeanor possession of marijuana.

Man Waives Arraignment

A 41-year-old Chicago man waived arraignment Friday while his wife continued to fight extradition on charges they attempted to pay for the murder of a Lubbock man.
Lubbock attorney Travis Shelton appeared for Vaso V. Mraovic before 137th District Court Judge Robert Wright and said his client waived arraignment on the charge of solicitation of capital murder.
Ann R. Mraovic, 69, also of Chicago, continues to fight extradition, Judge Wright noted.
The Mraovics are accused of offering a 35-year-old Jordanian living in Chicago $150,000 to kill Mrs. Mraovic's son-in-law, Arthur Boldt of Lubbock, in a dispute over the late Lillian Boldt's will.
Mraovic was freed on $250,000 bond after his Dec. 1 arrest, when he allegedly paid the Jordanian $3,500 for the purchase of a gun and slinger.
He was arrested at the Holiday Inn at 66th Street and Avenue H by Texas Rangers and officials of the criminal district attorney's office.

Guilty Plea Entered In City Drug Case

A Lubbock man indicted last June by a federal grand jury on a drug ring conspiracy charge has pleaded guilty in state court to possession of cocaine and was given a 10-year probation sentence.
Bobbie Ledbetter of 5524 Grinnell St. pleaded guilty to possession of a controlled substance, penalty group No. 1, a first-degree felony, in a transfer of his case from federal to state court. Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford said.
Ledbetter was sentenced Thursday by 140th District Court Judge William R. Shaver.

Kennedy Backers Charge Carter Campaign Using Federal Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Backers of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy charged in a lawsuit Friday that President Carter's aides, appointees and campaigners are trying to buy his renomination with federal funds.

The civil suit, filed in U.S. District Court, seeks preliminary and permanent injunctions against the alleged misuse of funds. It also asks that the Carter-Mondale Presidential Committee be forced to reimburse the federal government for salaries and expenses paid to federal officials while they were allegedly doing campaign work.

The suit alleged a "misuse of federal power and federal funds to purchase the presidential renomination of Jimmy Carter." It said the defendants "engaged in a concerted course of conduct."

• To use federal salaries, travel expenses, meeting and mailing costs to promote Carter's candidacy.

• To hand out and withhold federal jobs based on support for Carter.

• And to award or promise federal community grants, loans and construction projects to state and local officials as a reward or inducement for supporting Carter.

The use of federal funds for self-perpetuation in office endangers the fundamental freedoms guaranteed by the Constitution, the suit said. It also said the alleged practices violated First and Fifth Amendment guarantees of free and equal participation in the political process. And it alleged violations of two federal statutes governing federal spending.

White House press secretary Jody Powell was not immediately available for comment. Tim Smith, legal counsel to the re-election committee, said, "It's mainly political and the aim appears to be harassment. If history is any guide it will be dismissed. This campaign is going to end up setting records for amounts reimbursed to the government."

Prominent among the seven plaintiffs was William Wimpfinger, president of the International Association of Machinists, one of the largest unions backing Kennedy against Carter and California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. for the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination.

Attorney Joseph L. Rauh said the Machinists Non-Partisan Political League, of which Wimpfinger is co-chairman, was paying him and two other lawyers their normal hourly fees for their work.

Rauh said there was no cooperation between the plaintiffs and Kennedy, although he told Kennedy's staff of the suit several weeks ago.

In addition to the Carter-Mondale committee, the defendants are seven White House aides and seven Cabinet secretaries.

The 33-page brief included numerous examples of the alleged misconduct, accompanied by an inch-thick stack of exhibits. The exhibits included internal administration memos, speech texts, travel schedules, press releases and newspaper articles.

Among the travel cited were trips by six White House officials and First Lady Rosalynn Carter to Florida before an Oct. 13 Democratic straw poll, which Carter won.

The suit also said, "Defendant federal officials expressly agreed at a meeting at the White House on Nov. 5, 1979, to schedule official appearances to coincide with campaign appearances."

It argued that the campaign committee did not reimburse the government adequately for the expenses and salaries of these officials. The suit said that reimbursement after the appearance amounted to an interest-free loan to the committee by the federal government.

On mailings, the suit said that two days after Kennedy criticized Carter's record on women's issues, White House aide Sara Weddington mailed at federal expense 6,200 copies of a letter and glossy poster with 100 photographs of Carter's women appointees.

On hiring, the suit cited an Oct. 13 statement by White House chief of staff Hamilton Jordan in newspaper accounts to the effect that any federal employee not barred from political activity was expected to campaign for Carter and would be barred for campaigning for Kennedy.

It also cited Carter's March 26 order exempting the Bureau of the Census from prohibitions in Carter's own Civil Service Reform Act against hiring on the basis of political affiliation. The bureau is in the process of hiring 275,000 employees to conduct the 1980 Census.

The suit quoted a bureau document advising personnel officers to give "preference to person recommended by the political party of the incumbent administration."

On grants, the suit listed nine federal grants to Florida jurisdictions prior to the Oct. 13 vote and said the amount of federal funds "is many times the amount for any comparable time in the history of the state."

The suit said that Detroit Mayor Coleman Young, a prominent black supporter of Carter, told White House officials Aug. 16 that his willingness to campaign was contingent on continued federal funding for 1,600 city employees. When the assurance was given, the suit said, Young announced Aug. 30 he would campaign for Carter in Florida.

Grants were also listed for East St. Louis, Ill., New York City, Los Angeles, and Newark, N.J., where mayors have endorsed Carter. And the suit cited published reports that Transportation Secretary Neil Goldschmidt had hinted he would deny funds to Chicago because Mayor Jane Byrne endorsed Kennedy. Goldschmidt has since denied he intended to do that.

Kennedy spokesman Dick Drayne said the campaign had declined an offer to join the suit, "because it isn't a function of the campaign." He declined any comment on its merits. Drayne and Rauh said they were uncertain whether Kenney himself knew of the suit. Rauh said no Brown supporters joined the suit because "the Machinists approached them but they did not express much interest."

A liberal Democratic lawyer here for more than four decades, Rauh said he had heard people say that every incumbent does this kind of thing. But he called that "a cynical position I cannot subscribe to."

"Everybody doesn't do it, and this is far and away the most extreme use of the federal treasury I've ever seen," Rauh said.

He rejected comparisons to similar practices uncovered in the Nixon administration because he said they were designed to affect a 3-month-long general election campaign, not a year-long nomination fight.

Rauh also said it differed from Lyndon B. Johnson's use of presidential powers when challenged for renomination in 1968. He noted that Johnson withdrew very early from the race.

Elaborate Scheme Costs Residents

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Authorities say an elaborate scheme involving foreign exchange cost 60 area residents from $1,000 to $5,000 each.

Chief Assistant District Attorney Charles Breyer said the operators advertised on television from February until June, offering to return $6,500 on an investment of $2,000. Callers were told that by putting up $5,000 they would be allowed to control 100,000 West German Deutschmarks for 90 days. They were supposed to get $1,000 for each penny the mark gained against the dollar, Breyer said.

Breyer said little if any foreign currency was actually purchased. Warrants charging grand theft were issued for 12 people and corporations on charges of violating the state corporation code.

Carter Confident Of U.N. Support

'Determined Policy' Seen On Gaining Hostages' Release

spotted over Kabul, the Afghan capital, on Friday but that they apparently took no hostile action.

The State Department spokesman said the ouster of President Hafizullah Amin and his replacement by a staunchly pro-Moscow former deputy prime minister, Babrak Karmal, "has serious implications."

He said, however, that the Soviet action should not be linked to U.S. Senate consideration of the SALT II treaty which, he said, "will increase the security of the people of the United States" and therefore deserves ratification.

Opponents of the treaty said, however, that the Soviet action lessened chances for quick approval of SALT II in the Senate.

"Obviously, it is not coming up," Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said of the treaty.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said the actions in Afghanistan "removed any basis for trust or confidence that the Soviet Union would be bound by any future agreement such as now pending before the Senate."

Senate supporters of the treaty could not be reached for comment.

Reston reaffirmed the U.S. view that anti-communist Moslem rebel movement in Afghanistan is an "indigenous and self-sustaining uprising which affects all strata of Afghan society."

"We do not see an external threat to the security of Afghanistan which justifies the action taken by Soviet troops yesterday," he said.

Two days ago, following reports that the Soviets had undertaken a large-scale military airlift into Afghanistan, possibly involving 4,000 to 5,000 servicemen, the United States accused Moscow of "blattant military interference."

The administration also has called on other nations to join in protest against the Soviet activities.

Carter again said his preference is for a quick, peaceful solution of the Iranian hostages' crisis through concerted international action.

The president said he is following a "thoughtful and determined policy" which makes clear that Iran will continue to pay an increasingly high price for the detention of these people.

"We must never lose sight of our basic goals in this crisis — the safety of our fellow citizens and the protection of the long-term interests of the United States," he said.

Still seeking an end to the nearly 2-month-old U.S.-Iranian crisis resulting from the embassy takeover, Carter had cut short his holiday vacation earlier Friday, returning from Camp David, Md., for consultations with top foreign policy advisers at the White House.

Presidential spokesmen said Carter would not return to his Camp David, Md., mountaintop retreat. They said he decided to remain in Washington through the New Year's holiday.

The unexplained change of plans came as the United States continued to canvass members of the Security Council for support of economic sanctions against Iran, where Americans have been held hostage since Nov. 4 by Islamic militants demanding the return of the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

The United States steadfastly refused to return the shah, who was hospitalized in New York for several weeks before leaving the country on Dec. 15 to live in Panama.

The strategy session on Friday morning lasted more than two hours, officials said. One of the participants was Donald McHenry, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

White House officials have expressed optimism that the United States will be able to obtain the necessary nine Security Council votes for the sanctions against Iran. They also have voiced confidence that the Soviet Union will not veto the move.

At the same time, some officials, declining to be named publicly, conceded that the sanctions would be largely symbolic of international support for U.S. efforts to win the freedom of the hostages held in Iran since the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was seized. These officials also acknowledged that the sanctions probably won't have an immediate impact on the Persian Gulf nation.

Iran Vows Economic Pressures Won't Gain Hostages' Release

Kazem Shariat-Madari, fired on the passing guardsmen, the agency reported.

Sabbath prayers in Tabriz were disrupted by a crowd of people who threw stones at the state radio and television vehicle. Tehran radio reported. The hostages were still being held Friday night, 24 hours after they were seized.

Violence flared in Tabriz late last month between the Azaris, the Turkish speaking minority that lives in the region, and Khomeini supporters after a Shariat-Madari bodyguard was shot dead in Qom.

Tension developed around Shariat-Madari after he criticized the new Islamic constitution, which gives Khomeini sweeping powers for life, and complained that the constitution does not give sufficient local powers to ethnic groups. The Azaris and other Turkish-speaking people comprise about one third of Iran's 35 million people.

In Kerman, capital of the southeast Kerman Province, a gunman riding a motorcycle fatally wounded a local religious leader. The killing of Sarkar Agha Abdoreza Ebrahimi was similar in method to the assassinations of six close Khomeini associates since last winter's revolution.

Two weeks ago, in the last assassination, Tehran University theology dean Mohammad Mofateh was shot dead on the campus by three youths on motorcycles. Iran blamed the United States for the Mofateh killing.

At a mass prayer meeting here Friday, Tehran's top religious leader, Ayatollah Hossein Ali Montazeri, criticized the Security Council for allowing large nations veto powers. Veto power is held by five nations — The United States, Soviet Union, Britain, France and China.

Montazeri, clutching an automatic rifle, preached to about 10,000 persons on a soccer field at Tehran University campus. The former member of the ruling Revolutionary Council said, "Why should the superpowers have the right of veto, but the Third World countries, which are the oppressed nations, be denied such a privilege?"

The United Nations, headquartered in New York was "within easy reach of Carter's influence," he added.

Earlier in the prayer service, lay minister Jalal Ad-in Farsi gave a speech heavily critical of President Carter and deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Militants have held the Americans hostage in the U.S. Embassy since Nov. 4 demanding the United States return the shah to face trial on allegations of high treason and corruption.

Also at the prayer meeting were U.S. clergymen who arrived Christmas Eve seeking to open a dialogue with Iran's revolutionary leaders. After praying with the devout Moslems, delegation leader, the Rev. Jimmy Allen, a Baptist from San Antonio, Texas, congratulated Iranians on their revolution.

"We Americans remember the sacrifice of life given freely for our own independence," Allen said. His speech was not translated.

Pars also reported Friday that Finance Minister Abolhasan Bani Sadr has renewed his attack on Ghotbzadeh, his successor as foreign minister.

"Despite the Foreign Ministry's claims of good performance, the ministry is actually doing nothing," Bani Sadr was quoted as saying.

He reiterated his allegations that state-run radio and television, which was controlled by Ghotbzadeh while Bani Sadr was foreign minister, had sabotaged his foreign policy with "baseless and false propaganda."

"My plan was to make a major international issue out of the deposed shah in order to rid ourselves of other problems, including the hostages," Bani Sadr was quoted as telling Pars.

U.N. Action Seen On Hostages

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Third World members of the Security Council, considering a U.S. request for economic sanctions against Iran, have agreed to draft a compromise resolution seeking release of the American hostages in 10 or 15 days, well informed diplomats said Friday.

The resolution would not impose immediate sanctions against Iran's revolutionary government for the holding of up to 50 Americans in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, according to the diplomats who asked not to be named.

Instead, they said, they expected it would ask Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim to visit Tehran in 10 or 15 days and if he failed to get the hostages released the council would meet again "to take additional measures."

They said the "additional measures" could include sanctions, but the proposal was far short of a rough draft shown to some council members by the United States earlier this week that would impose sanctions immediately.

U.S. delegates were not available for comment on the reported proposal, but the diplomats noted that if the seven Third World nations on the 15-member council back the compromise, it might be the most the United States could hope for at this time.

Iran rejected a resolution passed unanimously by the council on Dec. 4 asking that the hostages be released immediately.

The diplomats said the compromise arose before council members began private consultations Friday evening and continued for more than an hour.

They said consultations would resume at 10:30 a.m. today, and the schedule called for public debate on the Third World draft to start around 4 p.m., with no final decision expected before Monday.

President Carter, in a nationally broadcast statement Friday afternoon, expressed confidence the council would support sanctions against Iran. He announced Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance would go to New York today "to press the world's case" against Iran's revolutionary Islamic government.

federal district court because an autopsy was not done.

Montford did not reveal why Ready is charged with administering a fatal overdose of drugs to the victim.

Ready was convicted in federal district court in June 1977 of unlawfully receiving a firearm through interstate commerce, and he served time in El Reno federal penitentiary outside Oklahoma City until November this year.

Montford said investigation of the Garza case and the other unsolved Lubbock County murder cases had been pursued throughout 1979 and that Lubbock city detectives and investigators from his office worked on the Garza case.

"If they [guilty parties in unsolved murders] think they're clear just because of the passage of time, they're mistaken because there's no statute of limitations on murder," he said.

Islamic Revolutionaries Pledge More War Against Soviet-Backed Afghans

By The Associated Press Islamic revolutionaries vowed to continue their war against thousands of Soviet troops and the Afghan government Friday, calling newly-installed Prime Minister Babrak Karmal a "pawn" of the Russians who engineered the bloody coup bringing him to power.

Sporadic shooting was reported in the capital and Soviet Mig-21 warplanes circled overhead as Karmal formed a new government and consolidated power he assumed Thursday in the toppling of the three-month old regime of Hafizullah Amin, who was executed.

The Soviet Union acknowledged its military role in the affairs of Afghanistan for the first time and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev sent Karmal a congratulatory telegram. The Soviet Union apparently believes Karmal will be more efficient than Amin in destroying Moslem forces that are especially strong on Afghanistan's border with the Soviet Union.

Radio Kabul said Amin was executed, that others would be "brought to justice" and that Karmal was elected chairman of the ruling revolutionary council, prime minister and commander in chief of the army fighting the rebels.

A Tehran-based spokesman for the fundamentalist Afghan Islamic Movement said tribal guerrillas would "continue their struggle against the Marxist government."

"The Moslem nation of Afghanistan will not be deceived by the change of pawns," the spokesman said, calling it a coup staged by "Moscow puppets."

"The Babrak Karmal coup in Afghanistan is the direct result of Soviet interference in Afghan internal affairs," the spokesman said.

Moslem Arab, American, and other Western leaders condemned the Soviet intervention.

The U.S. State Department said the Carter administration would formally protest to the Soviet Union over reports of direct Soviet fighting. Senior administration officials met at the White House to discuss the impact of the Afghan coup on American strategic interests in the region and on U.S.-Soviet relations.

The British government said "the people of Afghanistan have the right to choose their own government without outside interference," and opposition Labor Party lawmaker Neville Sanderson called the coup "naked Soviet aggression."

U.S. Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said the Soviet Union "has crossed a major threshold and launched a serious challenge to the United States and other free world nations." He and other senators predicted the Soviet action would lessen prospects of passage of the Salt II nuclear arms treaty because of new mistrust of the Soviet Union.

The London-based Islamic Council of Europe, which represents Europe's Moslems, sought an urgent meeting of leaders of Islamic countries to discuss what it termed "the grave situation." It accused the Soviet Union of committing "wanton aggression on a Moslem country, where the people are putting up a heroic struggle to thwart attempts to impose an alien ideology on them."

In a Radio Kabul broadcast monitored in Islamabad, Pakistan, Karmal pledged to follow a non-aligned foreign policy and "will be an active and a true friend of the world Moslem movement."

But observers in Pakistan said the pro-Moslem remarks may have been a ploy to lure Islamic rebels and their foreign supporters into thinking Karmal would be more sympathetic to fundamentalist Islamic beliefs held by the average Afghani. All but a tiny handful of Afghanistan's 21.4 million people are Moslems.

U.S. officials in Washington have estimated that the Soviet Union airlifted 200 plane loads of soldiers into Kabul and that the 10,000 troops believed to be in Afghanistan are twice as many previously thought to be in the country.

Libya To Boost Oil Prices $5

By The Associated Press

Libya, the militant Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries member that has claimed industrialized countries can pay whatever it asks for oil, will raise its crude oil prices by nearly $5 a barrel Jan. 1, U.S. industry sources said Friday.

Sources also said that Mexico, which is not an OPEC member but which often follows the cartel's price trends, will announce a $7.40-a-barrel hike effective New Year's Day.

The moves lift Libya's price from $30 to about $34.50-$34.72 for a 42-gallon barrel and raise Mexico's price from $24.60 to $32.

Mexican exports account for about 3 percent of U.S. oil needs. Libya, which supplies 2 percent of U.S. oil needs and produces a top-quality oil prized for its high gasoline yields, was charging $26.27 in early December — up from $14.74 in January.

The increases came on top of price boosts of up to 18 percent announced Friday for Iraq, Venezuela and Indonesia, and widened the current rift on prices in the 13-nation oil cartel.

Iraq sends little oil to the United States, but Indonesia and Venezuela together account for nearly 6 percent of U.S. oil use.

The latest increases, which followed a series of price boosts announced before and during the OPEC oil ministers' meeting last week, might add 2 or 3 cents to the cost of a gallon of gasoline or heating oil in the United States.

But if the Libyan hike spreads to the hard-line Algeria and Nigeria, and then affects Saudi Arabia and other moderates, analysts said U.S. fuel prices could climb by as much as an additional nickel.

U.S. retail prices had been expected to climb by 5 to 10 cents a gallon as a result of the earlier price increases alone.

Saudi Arabia's current base price — the cartel's traditional benchmark for setting other prices — is $24 a barrel, up from $18 in early December. But Libyan Oil Minister Ezzedin Ali Mabruk has repeatedly suggested the Saudi price should be $34.

Mabruk — along with officials from Nigeria and Algeria — last week persuaded Saudi Arabia to agree to boost its base price to $26. But the deal fell through when the Saudis objected to the high premiums the militants wanted to charge.

Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani said Thursday that the Saudis have not yet reached a decision on future price hikes. But he has said that a worldwide economic slowdown will trim oil demand next year, possibly creating an oil surplus that could drive some producers' prices down.

One oil industry source contended Friday, though, that "the hawks are going to take the stand that if they cut their production just a bit they will be able to keep prices up."

"These guys are going to keep things real taut" next year, the source predicted. He asked not to be quoted by name.

The new prices for Venezuela, Iraq and Indonesia largely restored the differentials that were in effect between themselves and Saudi Arabia before the Caracas OPEC conference.

Venezuela's highest grade of oil will rise $2 to $28.75 a barrel Jan. 1, and the country's base price went from $24 to $26. Venezuela produces about 2.35 million barrels of oil daily but will cut back to 2.2 million Jan. 1.

Iraq produces 3.7 million 42-gallon barrels a day — 12 percent of OPEC's output — but exports relatively little oil to the United States. Sources in Rome said its price increases were retroactive to Nov. 1 and Dec. 1 in two steps of $2 apiece.

The price for its leading grade of crude, is rising to $25.96 a barrel, retroactive to Dec. 1, from $21.96. The price of the nation's higher-grade Kirkuk oil, will go to $26.18 a barrel from $22.18.

Iraq's new prices are likely to lead Kuwait, another producer in the Persian Gulf, to boost its prices by at least $4 a barrel as well, traders said.

Indonesia, which had gone up by $2 during the OPEC meeting, announced increases of $1.45 to $2.85 a barrel effective Jan. 1. The boosts lift Indonesia's top price to $30.75, about $6 above the Saudi price.

Indonesia accounts for about 5 percent of OPEC's production and about 2 percent of U.S. oil needs.

Generic, 'No-Name', Products Becoming Popular To Buyers

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

A growing number of consumers are asking "What's in a name?" as generic or "no-name" grocery products spread across the shelves of the nation's supermarkets.

For some shoppers, the answer seems to be: Not much, except a higher price.

The generics — standard or low-grade items in plain packages — were introduced in this country almost three years ago. Today, according to a recent report in the National Food Review of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, they are available in about 11,000 stores operated by 125 grocery firms.

"Generic is the low-price label that is here to stay," the magazine said.

The USDA said individual generic lines range up to 150 food and non-food products. As a general rule, the non-foods have been most popular. In the food area, the best sellers are kernel corn, green beans, peas, whole tomatoes, fruit cocktail, ketchup and peaches. "These products are generally used as ingredients in other dishes where color and quality are not considered critical," the USDA noted.

Generics now account for from 5 percent to 15 percent of sales and, according to the USDA, some industry executives expect that by the end of next year, up to one grocery dollar in four may be spent on the bare-bones items.

The primary appeal of the generics is their low price. They are, on the average, about one-third cheaper than national brands and from 10 percent to 15 percent less expensive than private-label items.

Savings come from a variety of factors. Canned fruits and vegetables are standard grade rather than fancy or extra fancy; they have the same nutritional value as the more expensive items, but are often irregular in appearance. Tissues are unscented. Packages are simple — a plain white wrapper with black lettering may be all you get. There is little or no advertising. Coupons and bonus promotions are rare.

It is important to shop around and test products. Some generics may be perfectly acceptable. Others may fall short. A low-price detergent, for example, is no bargain if you need twice as much of it to get your clothes clean.

The USDA checked the prices of 13 food items in the spring of 1978, comparing national brands and generics. It found that the generics were from 8 percent to 42 percent cheaper than the name products.

When it checked the same items a year later, it found that the price gap had widened. The average price of the generics, said the USDA, increased by 4 percent. The average price of the national brands rose by 10 percent.

"Even though there have been wholesale price increases, many retailers apparently consider generic products as volume-builders and are reluctant to raise prices on these labels to levels that would fully reflect the increased costs at the wholesale level," the USDA said.

Not everyone agrees about the success of generics. Theodore Sullivan Jr., vice president for grocery services of the A.C. Nielsen Co. of Northbrook, Ill., told a convention of food executives earlier this year. "The bloom does appear to be off the rose to some degree."

Robert O'Neill, executive editor of Progressive Grocer, said that chain store representatives polled by the trade journal voted two-to-one that generics would increase in popularity in the near future. The same representatives, however, voted four-to-three against long-term growth, O'Neill said.

The newest development in the field of generics, according to the USDA, is "no-name" produce — fresh fruits and vegetables. Generic produce — introduced in the Midwest early this year and moving slowly to other parts of the country — is usually U.S. No. 2 or No. 3 grade. It is packaged for sale in quantities ranging from three pounds to 25 pounds. There may be only one size container for each product and the package size is usually larger than normal for retail. The average saving is about 20 percent.

GENERIC GROWTH — Generic or products have grown in popularity as food prices increase. These 'no-name' products can run up to 42 percent cheaper than name products. (AP Las-erphoto)

16 Prostitutes Arrested In China Cafe

PEKING (UPI) — Police cracked Communist China's first known prostitute ring and accused the participants of disgracing China by openly dealing with foreigners in Peking's one lively public hangout, the Peace Cafe.

The 16 prostitutes and their pimps were arrested after foreign journalists reported the scene at the Peace Cafe — a noisy, smokey cafe where Chinese and foreigners sit together at communal tables and sip coffee and eat ice cream.

Hard-faced youths, coats slung over their shoulders and cigarettes dangling from their mouths, arranged dates for their rouged and lipsticked girlfriends with foreign students and diplomats from Third World countries.

In China, girls in heavy makeup are not regarded as respectable.

The police action appeared to have been taken to stem the regime's embarrassment resulting from world-wide publicity given the illegal action at the Peace Cafe.

The arrests also came during a concerted law-and-order campaign against an increase in crime, particularly street robberies.

This gang of male and female hooligans who corrupted the reputation of China since September of this year, dressed seductively, have been hanging out in the Peace Cafe doing mischief," the newspaper Beijing Ribao said.

The newspaper said the two ringleaders of the pimps, Yang Jian Quan and Liu Shao Hua, "seduced female hooligans into hanging around with foreigners, making profit out of it, thus creating a very bad effect on the fame of our country."

The broad masses of people demanded they be punished to maintain the state dignity.

The newspaper said the two ringleaders and the chief "female hooligan," Wu Jing lu, were arrested and apparently will be tried in public under the new legal code going into effect Jan. 1 that guarantees public trials.

Others arrested were either freed or were sentenced to "forced labor" at farms.

The newspaper said the ringleaders had also been robbing pedestrians on Wang Fi Jin Street, Peking's most respectable shopping street next to the Peking Hotel and near the Peace Cafe.

The Peace Cafe — which usually closes at 9 p.m. — a late hour in Peking — remained open Thursday and employees expressed surprise when told of the news report.

The main customers at the small cafe are young Chinese. Some wear Western clothing and show off American cigarette lighters and say they are offspring of Communist Party and government officials.

SENSITIVE EQUIPMENT
DALLAS (AP) — A Southwestern Bell spokesman says the company is trying to decide how to tear down the Baker Hotel without damaging sensitive telephone equipment a block away. Southwestern Bell acquired the 550-room hotel property last July to build a new corporate headquarters. But the company's downtown offices now are only a block away from the Baker, and some fear explosives would damage equipment there.

Afghan Overthrow Brews Confusion For Soviets

MOSCOW (AP) — The overthrow of Afghan President Hafizullah Amin seems certain to come as a new shock to Soviet citizens who may already be confused by little-explained developments in Soviet-backed Afghanistan.

On Thursday morning, the Soviet news media were still praising Amin's government, as they had done since September. One report noted the opening of a new children's hospital in Afghanistan, declaring that the country was "permeated with solicitude" for children's welfare.

But in the evening, Radio Moscow broadcast a lengthy denunciation of Amin by Afghanistan's new leader. The new strongman, Babrak Karmal, called the much-praised Amin regime a team of "wild butchers" and "agents of U.S. imperialism," and said Afghanistan's citizens — including youths — had suffered "intolerable violence and torture."

Soviet television's major evening news broadcast Friday said the Soviet government had acceded to a request for aid from the Afghanistani government and that Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev had sent congratulations to Karmal. No details about Karmal were given.

Soviet citizens were left in the dark in September, when Amin's predecessor, Nur Mohammad Taraki, was overthrown.

On Sept. 10, Soviet television viewers saw Taraki exchanging embraces with Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev. Six days later, Taraki was suddenly dropped from power, and when he subsequently died the Soviet press barely mentioned the death at all.

Improving educational standards in the Soviet Union have raised public curricula.

Company Purchases Plant From Federal Government

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Boeing Wichita Co. has purchased a plant from the federal government for $44.75 million, the largest negotiated cash sale for a single property in the history of the General Services Administration.

The purchase included 573 acres and 69 buildings to be used for an Air Force plant in Wichita.

osity about world events, and the mysterious fall of Taraki did not go unnoticed.

Two weeks after he vanished from power, speakers at a Moscow public lecture hall were deluged with questions about what was going on in Afghanistan. The speakers, specialists in international relations, offered little clarification.

One speaker said only that subversion by "reactionaries" against the Afghan regime had in some way affected even the country's "leading circles."

"But really, comrades, only one thing is important," he insisted to the audience. "And that is that the new leadership stands for the same friendship with the Soviet Union as the former one did."

Western radio broadcasts to the Soviet Union have carried heavy coverage of American and Afghan rebel claims that Soviet combat troops have been dispatched to Afghanistan. The reports have fascinated some Soviet listeners.

The combat troop claim was dismissed last Sunday by the Soviet Communist Party daily Pravda as a "sheer fabrication." But the article offered no information on what precisely the Soviet military involvement in Afghanistan might be, letting rumors about other forms of aid continue.

Western diplomats believe Soviet silence on such matters increases the audience here for Western broadcasts.

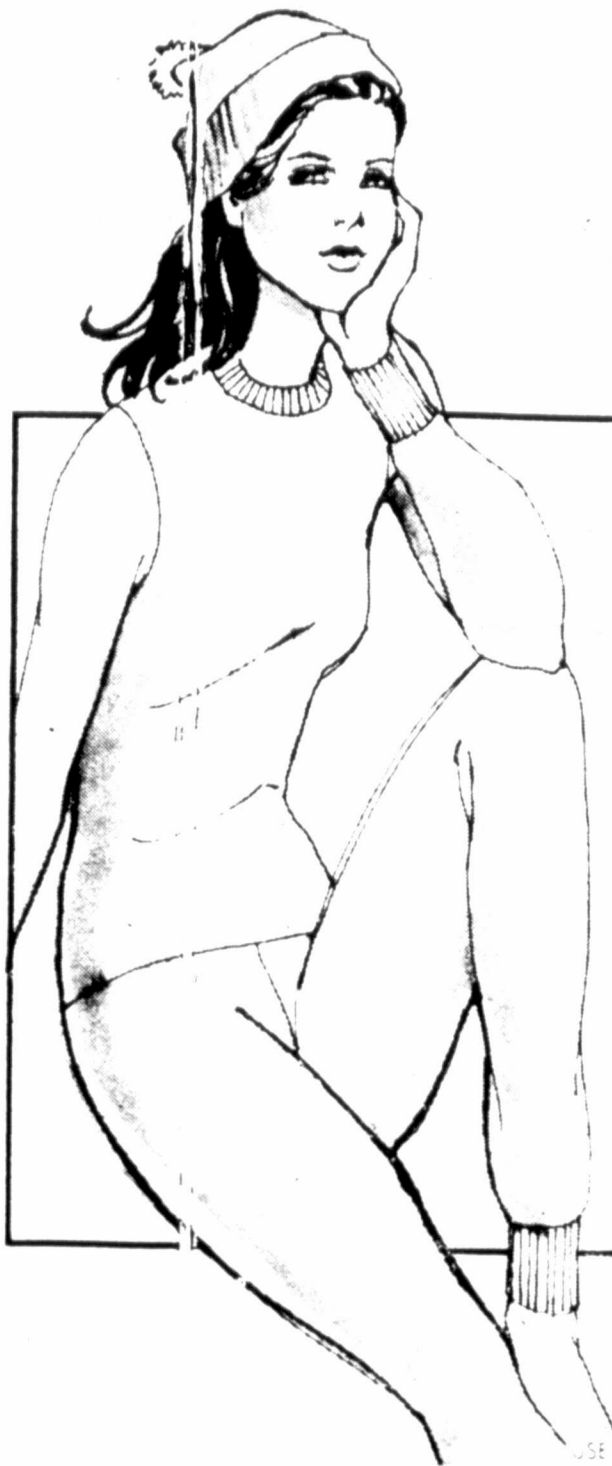

A sudden change in line in the Soviet press is not unprecedented.

Strongmen Pol Pot of Cambodia, Emperor Jean Bokassa I of the Central African Empire, Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi of Iran and Idi Amin of Uganda all received relatively polite Soviet press coverage while they were in power, but were denounced by Moscow as dictators after their fall.

A Soviet journalist commented recently that in most cases, the Soviet press is reluctant to criticize rulers in power.

"Because much of our press is related to our government, we have to be careful, because what we say could be interpreted as foreign policy," he said.

But the gloves come off when rulers are overthrown, he acknowledged. The only rulers likely to be sharply criticized while they are in power are those closely linked with the United States or China.

Earth's Wobble Still Mystery After 80 Years Of Stargazing

By JOY ASCHENBACH
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — At night, when it's 30 minutes to star time, Mac Currin rolls back the roof of a small wooden observatory, points his 6-foot-long telescope straight up, and starts gazing at stars. He's hoping they'll tell why the earth wobbles.

For 80 years someone has manned this tiny white observatory — appropriately marked with a star over its door — using the same telescope to seek the same answer to the same mystery.

Not much bigger than a child's backyard playhouse, the observatory is part of the International Polar Motion Service, a joint program of the United States, the Soviet Union, Japan, and Italy that began at the turn of the century.

All of the original observatories — two in the United States, and one in each of the other countries — are lined up along the parallel of 39 degrees, 8 minutes, and 12 seconds north latitude.

At this latitude, it was determined, the observatories could be spaced as evenly as possible around the globe — putting the one that Currin now mans in suburban Gaithersburg, Md., outside Washington. Only a small sign tacked to a tree along a one-lane road marks its location. The other U.S. site is at Ukiah, on the Russian River in northern California.

Every night telescopes at each point around the world are focused on the same set of stars — 18 pairs previously agreed upon. To maintain uniform computations, Currin and the other observers still use the same 1899-vintage, 105-power German telescopes.

By keeping track of the movement and position of these stars, they help scientists determine the extent to which the earth shimmies on its north-south axis. The axis is known to zigzag around the geographical North Pole in a generally circular motion, shifting up to 6 inches a day and as much as 72 feet over a 14-month period.

This unique group of latitude observatories — the oldest international program monitoring polar motion — was formed shortly after the earth's wobble was first detected. Since then, satellites and other sophisticated instruments scattered around the world have joined in keeping watch on the wobble. And it now appears that the answer to the mystery may not be found in the stars.

"If they continue looking at stars for another 50 years, it is unlikely that they will answer the question," according to Dr. William E. Carter, chief of the gravity, astronomy, and satellite branch of the National Geodetic Survey, which operates the two U.S. observatories. "The old system just does not have the technology required. What it has learned about polar motion in the last decade has leveled off."

As of now, there are still only theories about the strange shimmy. Scientists think it could be related to the motion of the earth's molten core, the melting of ice caps, the unevenness of the earth's land masses, or the movement of the seas. They also have noticed that when the wobble reaches its peak every seven years, as it did in 1978, this coincides with a period of major earthquakes. But whether the wobble causes the earthquakes or vice versa is not known.

The Geodetic Survey is in the process of launching a new monitoring program called Polaris, which stands for Polar Motion Analysis by Radio Interferometric Surveying.

The newer technique of using radio telescopes to reach beyond the stars, Carter said, will provide much more precise data of a higher quality — and much faster. "I'm not tearing down the historical aspects of the old observation," he added. "but we have to jump up a level in technology."

The U.S. latitude observatories, he estimated, will probably be phased out in four to five years.

Meanwhile, until his telescope is retired to the Smithsonian or the one-man observatory is declared a historic site, Mac Currin intends to do what he has been doing for 15 years — watching the stars six hours a night, four nights a week, meticulously recording his findings, and each week sending them off to international headquarters in Mizusawa, Japan, where they are tabulated.

Currin goes to work on star time, the time used by astronomers, and he can never be late. He knows in advance what time the 36 stars will pass over Gaithersburg, and he must be out there waiting to catch them through his tele-

OBSERVATORY PLAYHOUSE — Not much bigger than a backyard playhouse, this small white frame observatory and the telescope it houses are actually part of the International Polar Motion Service, a joint project of several countries, that began at the turn of the century. scope. Too dim to be seen with the eye, each one travels overhead quickly — in about 45 to 75 seconds.

About a half hour before the first star is due, which can be anytime between about 8 p.m. and 11 p.m. solar time, Currin leaves his house on the observatory property, walks across the front yard, and starts setting the instruments.

The little frame building is slatted on all sides to allow the wind and air to blow through, keeping the temperature around the telescope constant with the outside. Because of its sensitivity, there is no artificial heat and very little light to work by.

In winter Currin dresses like a skier ready for the slopes. He takes along a thermos of soup, hot chocolate, and a sandwich for a midnight snack. There's no time to go back to the house between stars.

"I just have time to reset the instruments and record the position before the next star comes in," he said.

Currin is out there every Monday through Thursday night unless it is snowing, sleeting, or raining. On cloudy nights, he's always there just in case the skies suddenly clear. "Sometimes I may wait out all night. I'll miss the first 12 pairs of stars because of cloud cover, then the skies will clear and I'll catch the last six," he explained. "Or I'll get the first pair, then the clouds will move in, and I'll miss the next 17."

On nights when the overcast conditions remain, he simply notes in his record book. "Heavy cloudiness. No observations possible." On good nights, he fills six pages with numbers.

Currin said he is too busy concentrating on the stars and jotting down their positions to get bored or lonely. "The mockingbird sitting on the flagpole outside keeps me company," he commented. "It's very nice work, very quiet except for the sound of a truck on the interstate, an occasional police or fire siren, and the ticking of the sidereal clock (which keeps star time)." During longer breaks between stars, he turns on the radio and listens to the news.

Currin, 51, wound up watching stars through the force of gravity, first joining the Geodetic Survey in 1948 as part of a team that traveled around measuring the earth's gravity. Years later when he was ready to settle down, this stargazing job appeared on the horizon. If it is eliminated, it will probably be when he is ready to retire.

So far the work has been uneventful, and Currin likes it that way. "People talk about flying saucers and UFOs," he remarked, "but in the thousands of hours that I have been looking into the heavens over the last 15 years, I have never seen anything in anyway out of the ordinary."

Breakfast Cooked On New Year's Day 1972 Still Making Rounds

By BOB SAMPSON

DECATUR, Ill. (NEA) — You could call this story stale or even overly ripe.

It's the saga of a breakfast cooked on New Year's morning 1972 and still uneaten eight years later.

Two men have passed this unconsumed meal and two successors back and forth for eight years — through the mails, inside cakes and potted plants, even spread over a bogus piece of Skylab debris.

It's one of those college pranks.

William D. Lewis, one of the participants in the breakfast shuffle, is dean of special programs at Decatur's Millikin University. The other, James Kettelcamp, is director of admissions at the school.

"In 1972," remembers Lewis, "my wife, Yvonne, and I invited Jim Kettelcamp and his wife, Emily, to our house for breakfast on New Year's morning.

"They never showed up, and my wife and I decided that rather than let the meal go to waste we'd take it to them.

"So we took the plate of sausage, eggs and toast, put a cherry on the top and went over to their house.

"We rang the doorbell, put the breakfast on the step and ran."

When the Kettelcamps came to the door, they found a cold but well-decorated meal on the doorstep.

And as Kettelcamp took the breakfast inside, he determined he would pass it back to Lewis rather than eat it.

"About three or four months later," Lewis recalls, "I noticed my car had a strange smell.

IN AMERICA

"Finally one day I opened the glove compartment and there was the breakfast."

Once Lewis recovered from the noxious fumes, he decided to get even rather than mad.

"We decided we could play that game, too," he says.

Into the freezer went the breakfast until the day Mrs. Lewis went to play bridge at the Kettelcamp home.

She put the breakfast in her purse and when no one was looking she slipped it under Jim's pillow," says Lewis.

That marked the last trip for the original breakfast. Its decomposition made creation of breakfast No. 2 imperative. The men are now on breakfast No. 3.

But back to breakfast No. 2. It made the longest trip of the three meals.

"We were visiting out in Arizona in 1974," says Lewis, "where a huge package came for us in the mail."

The Lewises were puzzled until they opened the package.

"There was the moldering plate of food," he recalls. "We put it in dry ice and brought it back to Illinois."

Lewis got sweet revenge in 1976 when Kettelcamp plunged his fork into the cake baked especially for his 40th birthday.

"We had a friend bake the breakfast into the middle of the birthday cake," explains Lewis.

Another time, when both men were attending an athletic banquet, Lewis bribed a waitress to serve Kettelcamp the breakfast instead of steak.

But the best pass, we both agree, came this summer," reports Lewis.

"I went over to the engineering department and had Bill Williams, an engineering professor, make a piece of twisted metal to look like Skylab. We labeled it 'Skylab Kitchen' and I put the breakfast on top of it and left it on Jim's desk.

"Jim now has the twisted metal hanging on his wall. He says it's a piece of art."

But he doesn't have the breakfast. It's back with Lewis after a side strip to Williams, who is probably wondering why he ever got involved with the stunt and became the third point of the breakfast triangle.

If anything, the inclusion of Williams has given Lewis and Kettelcamp expansionist ideas.

"Now I'm wondering whether to include others, too," muses Lewis, who might be a good man to avoid until the breakfast finds its way back to Kettelcamp or Williams.

'Disgusted' Residents To Build Solar Power Heated Home

UNIONTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — A group of Fayette County residents, fed up with rising energy costs, is planning to build a community heated entirely by solar power.

Construction already is under way for the 180-acre project. The community, designed initially to house 50 families, is named New Village.

Joe Corcoran, a coal miner with a master's degree in psychology, said he is "disgusted" by high energy bills, but that isn't the only reason he is participating in the solar project.

"People are building $80,000 homes which will eat them alive in 10 years," Corcoran said.

"I liked the fact that there was more going on than just building a home," he said. "For the most part, people join initially because of low-cost housing which will be inexpensive to maintain. Then they get turned on to the community aspect."

The project originated with the Charles Stewart Mott Foundation of Flint, Mich., and the Institute of Man and Science of New York. The institute supplied the know-how and the ideas and the foundation has allocated $500,000.

New Village is believed to be the first shot at a solar project that builds a town from scratch. The average home may cost as little as $30,000.

The number of families committed to the project is expected to grow from 50 to 190 in 5 years.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: You recently printed an excellent letter from a "Nurse in Oshkosh." Her remarks about child-abuse were directed to the judges in this country. I, too, hope they will take a hard look at each case and make sure they don't perpetuate a nightmare by returning children to abusive parents.

Another side to this sad story needs to be told. My letter is directed to every doctor and nurse who may not realize the vital part they could play in ending the tragedy of child abuse.

Treating, healing and loving these children is not enough. You must get involved with our courts. I've seen a number of cases fall apart, because after weeks of investigation, expert witnesses would not say, "Yes, this child was abused."

Too often, the doctor will say, "This is a classic child abuse case," but he won't sign an affidavit because he is afraid of being sued or he feels the witness fee he will be paid for his testimony is not enough to justify cancelling a patient's appointment.

It is a shame that this lawsuit-happy nation has created an atmosphere in which a doctor has to worry about being slapped with a malpractice suit every time he gives a medical opinion. Judges can do very little without the help of the medical profession. Tell them, Ann. — A Legal Secretary

Dear Legal Secretary: YOU told them I hope they listen.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have no children. We (and other childless couples) would like to know how to tactfully ask our friends not to bring their youngsters to adult-only affairs.

Please help us with this sensitive problem. — Tippy Toe In Mississippi

Dear Tippy: People with taste and judgment know enough to leave their children at home unless the invitation specifically includes the second generation.

If they DON'T know enough, tell them: point-blank. "This party is for adults only. Please don't bring your children." Any couple who would be hurt, annoyed or insulted by such a request would represent no great loss if you should be lopped off their list.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 27, married for the second time to a man who is 22. My daughter, from a prior marriage, is two. Her father was also five years my junior.

I am trying to make this marriage work, but it's an uphill battle. We don't argue or fight. Tim just clams up and says I pushed him into a marriage he wasn't ready for.

Three months ago he moved out. When I came from work there was a note on the kitchen table saying he was at his mother's and intends to remain there.

Tim comes here for dinner every Wednesday and Sunday. He doesn't say much except, "I'm more comfortable with my mother, and that's where I'm going to stay."

I have refused support money because I am financially independent. I love Tim and want to know how to make this marriage succeed. — Ethel

Dear Ethel: What marriage? You are trying to turn a mama's boy into a husband, and it won't work.

Since you are financially independent, use some of that money for therapy. You need to know why you have twice selected an immature younger man who is poor husband material.

It's not always easy to recognize love, especially the first time around. Acquaint yourself with the guidelines. Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Love or Sex and How to Tell the Difference." For a copy, mail 50 cents and a long, self-addressed envelope with your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Hints Help Ease Money Strain

By BETTY YARMON
Women's News Service

NEW YORK — With money so expensive as a result of record-high interest rates, you may be finding it annoyingly difficult to get money owed to you, while those with whom you deal are putting all sorts of financial pressures on you.

Here are some hints on how to cope in what is rapidly turning into a financially tight period:

— Don't be shy about asking for money due you. Remember the old saying about the squeaking wheel's getting the most grease? It probably never has been more true than today, which means that, unless you start to make a fuss — and loudly — you may well find that those who owe you money simply stay put until you put pressure on them.

— Take nothing for granted. For example, examine carefully the monthly statement you get from your bank, along with all other similar papers. These days, errors are common everywhere — generally against you — and you can be badly hurt if you don't check and double-check everything that comes your way.

— Keep accurate records of all money owed you. Some of your debtors no doubt hope that in time you will forget just who owes you what. It was always a good idea — but never more so than today — to put it all down in a book and refer to it constantly to always know just what is coming to you.

— Try to outwit those who would put you off with some of the standard ploys of the day, like "the check is in the mail," or "our computer just broke down." Volunteer to come over for any check due you. Or simply show up and explain that you would be happy to wait until the bookkeeper can get around to making out your check.

— Try to pay for as much as you can with credit rather than cash and try to make your credit purchases just after your billing period ends so you get extra time in which to pay. This way, you not only postpone payment, but you give yourself a lever in the event something is unsatisfactory with what you have bought. Be careful, though, to pay on time lest you be hit with a whopping interest charge.

— At the same time, be extra careful about getting into debt. That was always good advice, but never as much needed as today. These days, once you get behind, it takes a superhuman effort to get you out from under. With prices as high as they are, it can be a disaster to get in to the habit of indulging your whims no matter what the price.

— You may want to change some of your financial practices. This is not the time to act the big shot, picking up everyone's check at lunch. And this may be the time for you to learn to trade down — take buses instead of taxis, eat pasta instead of steak and generally cut down on costs without seriously impairing your standard of living.

— Don't take more cash with you when you leave home than you expect to spend. Some people simply can't keep money in their pockets, always finding something on which to spend it, not having the money is the only way to keep them solvent.

— Don't be a "saleholic" — someone who can't resist a sale, but is ready to buy something when it seems to be a bargain no matter how little it is needed.

— Don't be too proud to seek out and accept help if you find yourself deeper and deeper in financial hot water. Some groups ready to assist: local offices of the National Foundation for Consumer Credit, the Consumer Credit Counseling Service, Debtors Anonymous and, of course, the credit people at your own local bank.

Americans Want More Security

CLEVELAND, Ohio (UPI) — Americans' demand for security systems is expected to triple in the 1980s, to a total retail value of $23 billion.

Crimes against people and property have nearly tripled in the past 15 years, and expected to grow more than fourfold by 1990.

These figures were taken from an industry study recently released by the Research Group of Predicasts, Inc.

William Jenkins, project analyst for the Cleveland-based business information and market research firm, attributes the growth to more stringent fire regulations and insurance incentives — combined with greater use of electronics in security products.

Jenkins says using electronics sends prices up but also encourages the replacement of older, less efficient equipment.

To Your Good Health

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: You recently discussed a 15-year-old girl who had tetracycline-stained teeth. We dentists have known about this problem since 1955, when the drug was first introduced. No one knew what it was or what to do about it.

In about 1970, it was discovered that teeth could be bleached with a strong solution of hydrogen-peroxide. I have been doing the treatments since 1971. It does not always work on the very dark stains and it MUST be done by a dentist as the material is very caustic, etc.

If bleaching is not successful enough there is another type of plastic shield that can be glued to the teeth. It especially helps young children who cannot wait until the age of 18 for final caps, etc. I tell you these children need any help we can give them.

I hope you will give some hope to the children (and adults, too) by informing them of the bleach. If it works it is permanent or can be renewed, also. — E.T.C.D.D.S.

Thank you for your comments and I'm glad to pass them along.

Dear Dr. Donohue: RW won't be able to give you a medical name for his or her condition because a "bashful kidney" doesn't have a fancy medical name.

It means a condition that won't let a person urinate when he or she is too close to the company of another human being, such as when one has to use a bedpan in a hospital or share a bathroom facility in a public place, etc. I'm sure you get the picture. You're welcome! — E.G.

The Case of the Bashful Kidney. Solved. I was, of course, aware of the condition, but not of the colorful name for it. I'll try to think up a suitable medical description when I find time.

Dear Dr. Donohue: There's another possibility for the itching MM suffers when she wears the clothing she bought at the garage sale. If the person who had the sale was getting rid of a variety of household items and wanted them clean it's quite possible that she washed drapes or curtains made of fiber glass in her washing machine. I made the mistake of doing this once and my five kids and I damn near went bats until it was all washed out. — C.G.

That has got to be a reasonable possibility, C.G., because you are not the only reader who suggested it.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Every morning when I get up, my sputum, or spit, is bloody. After I gargle my throat clears up for awhile. Then it is bloody again. Otherwise, I feel good. Is this a sign I have cancer? — N.R.

Blood in your sputum is not necessarily a sign of cancer. It is a sign to be investigated, nonetheless. The place where the blood is coming from has to be determined.

It can be coming from the back of your nose, the throat, the voice box, even the lung. Even though you feel good, your persistently bloody sputum calls for an examination. I hope you get it promptly.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am an elderly person with whiteheads. What causes them? I did not have acne as a child, but now my face is full of hard whiteheads and I've tried everything to no avail. I keep my face clean. — Mrs. C.B.

Whiteheads are the older person's equivalent of teenage acne. Just about the same process is involved. The pores of the skin get clogged and the material from the glands is trapped under the surface.

The treatment for them is a modified acne treatment, modified because the skin of an elderly person is more delicate. A dermatologist will be able to give you the appropriate treatment in the modified doses.

There is another similar condition of ten loosely referred to as whiteheads. This is milia. It is caused by deposits in the skin that form little pebble-like nodules. This usually requires surgical removal.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I thought you might be able to help me. I've tried everything that people tell me to do, but nothing seems to help. I have such cramps with it and have lost so much weight. Can you offer some words? — Mrs. V.M.T.

Weight loss and diarrhea are a bad combination which require prompt attention by a doctor. These symptoms are too serious for self-diagnosis or for me to give you a list of possibilities. Make an appointment as soon as you can.

Acne is a terrible problem for anyone growing up. If you are afflicted with it, or have children who are, write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for a copy of his booklet, "Controlling Acne, Blackheads and Pimples." Enclose a long self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Hints From Heloise

HELLO THERE

I'll bet you thought Heloise knew everything, didn't you? Boy, how I wish you were right!

Well, I learned something this last weekend from a nifty lady, Mrs. Melvin Davis, who was nice enough to include me in a good old Texas-style get-together. That means good friends, fun, and lots and lots of food.

Everyone brought one dish, and then some. Man, oh man, did we eat!

As we were all pitching in to pack things up and head home, I was helping her put up the salt and pepper shakers — and you know what that smart lady taught me?

To put a piece of paper towel or tissue over the top of the container, then screw on the top.

How's that for being neat? While you're transporting the shakers, they don't lose a grain.

It just goes to show that one's never too young or too old to learn, or to share a good idea.

As they say down here, bye y'all and you have a nice day, hear. — Heloise

LETTER OF THOUGHT

DEAR HELOISE:

A good way to use up leftovers that have a way of accumulating in the fridge is to put them in a small pan with a lid on.

True, this soon fills up the refrigerator and also puts your small pans out of use. But that's the secret.

You get so disgusted when you need a pan and find it in the refrigerator with leftovers that you find a way to use them just to get the pan back.

This may sound crazy but it works for me. — Jan Terry

DEAR HELOISE:

When I washed a good eyelet dust ruffle, the foundation muslin shrank to such an extent that it no longer fit on the bed.

I felt all was lost until I decided to use an old fitted white sheet to make a new foundation.

I put it over the box spring, took a marking pen and marked a stitching line.

After cutting the old muslin away about one-half inch from the seam, I sewed the dust ruffle onto the fitted sheet.

I have used dust ruffles for many years but I have never had one look so good. It doesn't slip around when I'm making the bed, adjusting the mattress, etc. — Margie Brown

DEAR HELOISE:

This hint might be of help to women who wear flannel or brushed nylon night gowns in cold weather.

I'm sure they have found, as I have, that it's hard to move around or turn over in your sleep with one of these on they cling to the sheets.

What I do is put a sleeveless silk or nylon turtlet gown over the winter one so I can move freely. — Granny

You've got to be the smartest granny around! Here's a great big hug which I hope helps keep you even warmer. Love you! — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

The tags in the back of my blouses, etc., always seem to stick up and show behind my back.

So I tried placing a little piece of fusible webbing under the label and ironed it onto my blouse.

Worked perfect. Now no one comes up behind me and tucks the label in.

I know you can cut them off and eliminate the problem, but I like to leave mine on. — Angeline Takacs

I always leave those tags on because they usually have the care instructions. — Heloise

A homemaking problem got you stumped? Ask Heloise for help! Drop her a letter or postcard, 235 E. 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017, dollars gets you doughnuts, she'll have an answer for you, so keep watching her column for it.

Old Barter System Conserves Cash

By SINDY MARGOLIUS
Women's News Service

NEW YORK — The oldest form of trade — barter — is on its way back as a means of conserving cash during inflation. Swapping goods and services is as American as Tom Sawyer.

In Merritt Island, Fla., a dentist performs oral surgery in exchange for a swimming pool. In Tempe, Arizona, a lawyer trades legal work for several vacation nights in a San Diego hotel.

Thousands of Americans have bartered at least once — and many like it well enough to do it again and again. Trading your skills for somebody else's goods or services is just plain fun, say some barter "buyers." Others say they like the challenge of "working off" their bills, without checks, stamps or finance charges.

Private individuals are not alone in bartering. Large-scale businesses are trading services and products they would otherwise have to buy. It is estimated that barter deals of various kinds totalled more than $200 million in North America last year.

Where once barter was a hit-or-miss affair, organized barter clubs or networks are now springing up around the country to facilitate the cashless exchange.

The American Reciprocal Trade Systems, Inc., of Greenvale, N.Y., now boasts over 600 business and professional members, all committed to conducting business by barter. A computer evaluates all the goods and services exchanged by members, assigning each a certain number of "trade credits." That way, instead of cash, the statements received each month by members are rendered in terms of trade credits or trade debits.

By controlling the number of member-suppliers of a particular skill or goods, the reciprocity within the group is evenly maintained. Even those who work for the organization accept a portion of their salaries in trade credit that may be used for goods and services supplied by members.

In some locales, the consumer affairs offices have become clearing houses for trading information. The most widespread form of neighborhood barter is the exchange of children's outdoor clothing, playthings and sports equipment such as skates and bicycles. Informal exchanges have burgeoned into the more organized "Fifty-Fifty Shops," sponsored by parent-teacher associations and church groups.

One woman sews for a friend, who in turn provides her with transportation. An amateur boat builder helps an accountant build a boat and receives free tax assistance. A car buff helps a friend tune his engine and gets help with painting his house.

A number of labor newspapers offer a swap-and-sell column for the convenience of member families.

One advantage has always been that the money you save is usually tax-free. By not accepting cash for services, the "seller" stays in a lower tax bracket.

When the Internal Revenue Service does choose to treat barter credits as income, it still only taxes them at 65 cents on the dollar on the theory that a $1 credit is not as easily spendable.

However, with this resurgence of interest in bartering, it is inevitable that the IRS has begun to show more interest in barter "income" and new tax rules that might apply to it are under consideration.

Weddings

MRS. RONNIE EUDY

HAM—EUDY
QUITAQUE Special — Kimberly Joan Ham and Ronnie Kyle Eudy were married Friday in a 7 p.m. ceremony in First Baptist Church. The Rev. Freddie Martin officiated.

Honor attendants were Lisa Herrington and Ronald Eudy of Turkey.

Parents of the couple are Bob J. Ham and Mrs. Ross Herrington and Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Eudy of Turkey.

The bride was graduated from Texas Tech University. The bridegroom attended Tech.

The couple will reside in Cleveland, Ohio.

Citrus-Base Punch Makes Delicious Holiday Cheer

AUSTIN — The punch bowl is a good place to begin your New Year's party preparations. This year fill it with a citrus-base punch. Juice is more plentiful than ever since last winter's freeze sent crates of fruit to the juicer that ordinarily would have made it to the fresh market.

Remember — a non-alcoholic punch should be served next to the version spiked with spirits. It is a thoughtful gesture for friends who do not drink.

Desserts also benefit from the touch of citrus. If dinner parties are more to your liking, finish yours off with a delicious Orange Sponge Cake or a gorgeous Grapefruit Chiffon Pie.

Though this year's fresh fruit supply will be down — also due to last year's freeze — supplies are adequate.

Recipes are from the Texas Department of Agriculture test kitchen.

SUNSHINE PUNCH

3 cup unsweetened grapefruit juice
1 cup frozen orange juice, thawed
1 1/4 tsp ground ginger
1 1/4 tsp ground mace
2 whole cloves
2 cup apple juice
1 1/4 cup lemon juice, thawed
1 1/4 tsp ground allspice
1 1/4 cup sugar
1 cinnamon stick

Combine fruit juices, mix well and add ginger, allspice, mace and sugar. Stir well to dissolve sugar. Tie cloves and cinnamon in cheesecloth bag, add to juice mixture. Refrigerate several hours. Remove spice bag, stir and serve. Makes 10 5-oz servings.

ORANGE SHERRY COOLER

1 1/2-oz 1 can frozen orange juice concentrate
1 1/4 cup sugar
1 cup dry sherry
Ice cubes

Dilute orange juice as label directs. Add sugar and sherry, mixing well. Pour over ice cubes in tall glasses. Makes 8 4-oz servings.

SANGRIA

3 cup grape juice
2 cup dry red wine
2 cup club soda
1 1/2 cup orange juice
Juice of 1 lemon

Archaeologists Accidentally Unearth Massacre Artifacts

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Archaeologists say they accidentally unearthed remains of an Indian massacre and other artifacts that could be among the most significant finds of American Colonial history.

Remains of the massacre in which 58 settlers were believed killed in 1622 were found just 10 miles northwest of Jamestown, established by Capt. John Smith 15 years earlier.

It was pure accident that Wolstenholme Towne, the oldest British settlement unearthed in North America, was found on Carter's Grove, an 18th-century plantation owned by the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation.

When Noel Hume was commissioned by the foundation four years ago, he was charged with looking for remains of 18th-century life at Carter's Grove. Instead, the British-born archaeologist found evidence of life a hundred years older than the plantation.

"We had stumbled on one of the most dramatic incidents in American Colonial history," he says. Noel Hume and his associates finished work on Wolstenholme last week, but they still have three other 17th-century sites to explore.

Noel Hume says 220 colonists arrived in April 1619 at Martin's Hundred near here. There were a few wealthy people supported by many indentured servants. Most were killed in Indian attacks or by disease, a relative few lived the seven years it took to earn their freedom.

Noel Hume says relations with the Indians, federated under Chief Powhatan, at first were amicable. But the Indians resented the growing European presence and coordinated an attack along the entire peninsula the morning of March 22, 1622.

They believe that 58 settlers were killed on what the Virginia Company Records call that "fatal Friday morning." Another 82 survived.

The diggers unearthed a body they believe belongs to Richard Keen, a tall muscular lieutenant. His mouth was agape, his skull had been cleaved with a heavy object and the scalp was apparently ripped off.

Forty-seven graves of apparent victims of bubonic plague, called "The Contagion" by the settlers, also have been discovered and a number of other items have been found.

The place is bursting with artifacts, at least 50 major items, potsherds, clay tobacco pipes and good armor, including the first complete closed-face helmet in the New World," says Noel Hume.

"We have found pots the colonists used to smolder herbs in the rooms of the sick. Their theory was that, if it smelled good, the air couldn't be bad."

The three excavation sites here are archaeologically pure. Since the massacre, Wolstenholme Towne and the surrounding community called Martin's Hundred have lain undisturbed except for the farmer's plow.

Elderly Couple Reunited Permanently

UTICA, Mich. (UPI) — Aubrey and Imogene Cash, placed in separate nursing homes after 57 years of marriage because of Medicaid regulations, have been reunited for good.

Their plight gained national attention just before Christmas when their daughter, Mrs. Dee McKittrick of Mount Clemens, told their story to a local newspaper.

Because of Medicaid regulations, Cash, 77, and his wife had to live in separate nursing homes because of the different levels of care they needed.

Cash had been placed in the St. Joseph Nursing Home in Hamtramck, where he could receive skilled nursing care for his medical condition. He and Mrs. Cash, also 77, had been living with a son and daughter-in-law in Hamtramck.

Separated from her husband, Mrs. Cash lost the desire to eat and was placed in the Wil-Mar Convalescent Center in Utica, Mich., which provides basic — rather than skilled — nursing care.

Later, Cash's condition improved to the point he no longer needed skilled care. Mrs. Dee McKittrick of Mount Clemens, told their story to a local newspaper.

Vern Wilhelm, administrator at Wil-Mar, made arrangements for Cash to be transferred, even though it technically meant the home had one more resident than it should.

"I felt in my heart it was right," Wilhelm said Thursday. "We have a good working relationship with the public health department and I think they will be happy we did this."

Rules and regulations are not intended to cause hardship for an elderly couple.

Mrs. McKittrick said her parents were delighted to be together again at their reunion the day before Christmas.

They were talking and happy — she said — "My mother started fussing at him for smoking. My Dad is a big man and was saying, 'Now if you can just figure some way of getting us on TV again.'"

They're happy to be together again. And if there should be any unexpected problems with the new arrangement at Wil-Mar, another area nursing home also has offered to take in the couple. Mrs. McKittrick said.

CHURCH NEWS

Two Special Events Scheduled At Nazarene Church

Two special events are scheduled for Sunday at Lubbock's first Nazarene Church, 46th Street and Avenue Q.

A film, "What Wives Wish Their Husbands Knew About Women," will be shown at 9:30 a.m. in the sanctuary. The film is one of the "Focus on the Family" series by Dr. James C. Dobson, author of the best seller of the same name.

Dr. Dobson is associate clinical professor of Pediatrics at the University of Southern California School of Medicine and a staff member of Children's Hospital of Los Angeles.

At 6 p.m. Sunday, a slide presentation, "Night of Nostalgia," will be presented. More than 200 slides taken of church groups and individuals in activities during 1979 will be shown.

The Rev. Eugene Sanders, pastor, says the public is invited to both events.

Program Announced By Redbud Mission

Bill Laey, pastor of Redbud Baptist Mission, 8th and Side, has announced a program of special interest to young people for Sunday evening.

Mike Fuller of Dallas will present a special worship service directed at elementary age children. Fuller, who has a puppet ministry, has a special interest in children and young people.

A salad supper and fellowship hour will follow the 7 p.m. worship service at the church.

Evangelist Slated As Guest Speaker

Wayne Quinn will be the guest speaker at both services Sunday at Faith Christian Fellowship, South Brownfield Highway, pastor Buddy Cantwell announced recently.

Quinn, a graduate of Sunset Church of Christ School of Preaching and an evangelist for the Churches of Christ for five years, will speak at the 10:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. services.

The public is invited to attend one or both of the services.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Rebellious conditions exist early in the day but this is soon changed to a very constructive attitude by you and others. Think of your basic plans and goals and try to obtain them by organizing your efforts in sensible directions.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Study your property well and know how to improve it, make it more valuable. Make plans for the future sensibly. Start wheels rolling.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20): Get busy with your creative ideas and make big headway through perseverance. Know what you want and go after it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You have to plan your time more efficiently if you are to be more successful. Look to an older family friend for the assistance you need.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Being with older and more serious friends can spell greater success for you today. Be careful of your wallet.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): A bigwig who has given you backing in the past can be of further help to you now. Contact this person early in the day. Be wise.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Ideal day to be off to new sites and activities with associates. Persevere with some new arrangement and show that you have guts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Schedule your time and activities well so that you have greater benefits. Plan to make any necessary payments regularly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Talk over with partners how best to operate in the future for greater mutual benefits and harmony. Be tactful and all is fine.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Find best way to finish all that work in front of you. Talk plan over with co-worker first and gain fine cooperation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Once important duties are taken care of, get into amusements that will relieve tensions. Be careful with money and in driving.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Try to relieve tensions at home and be more comfortable and happy there with kin. Get in touch with persons you like.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Come to an agreement with others since they now understand your views. Good day to make out important reports and statements.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY — he or she will be one of those delightful persons who will have much ability at analyzing, organizing and setting up a firm structure and foundation for long-time projects. Sports are fine for building up the rather frail body.

The Stars impel, they do not compel. What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Stock Mart Prices Drift

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices drifted listlessly for the fourth session in a row Friday, leaving the Dow Jones industrial average exactly where it stood a week before.

Analysts said rising oil prices, record levels for gold, and last-minute yearend tax maneuvering combined to keep the market locked in a standoff between buyers and sellers.

The Dow Jones average of 30 blue-chip industrials finished at 838.91, down 1.19 for the day and unchanged for the holiday-shortened week.

New York Stock Exchange volume reached 34.43 million shares, up from 31.41 million Thursday.

Dow Jones

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dow Jones industrial average closed at 838.91, down 1.19 points from Friday's close.

The average was unchanged for the holiday-shortened week, ending a four-day losing streak.

The market was flat as investors weighed the impact of rising oil prices and gold prices against the prospect of a rate cut.

Volume was up from Thursday, but not enough to move the market significantly.

What's up in low points?

While other publications are offering lists of high points of the 1970s in fields from aeronautics to zoology, Esquire has compiled a review of what it considers the decade's lowest moments. Here are eight of them:

- A few days after the Kent State shootings in 1970, President Nixon paid a 4 a.m. visit to antiwar protesters at the Lincoln Memorial and talked about football.
- In 1973, Clarkstown, N.Y., named a blind man to head its nine-man "obscenity committee" to screen cabaret acts, printed matter and movies.
- Asking "Why can't he die like a man?" David Shrimp refused in 1978 to donate the 21 ounces of What's up at the Olympics?

Chefs for the Winter Olympics are already making shopping lists for the 7,000 meals they will serve daily to athletes, coaches, managers and delegation staffs during the games.

Here are just a few entries from the list:

- 54,000 pounds of strip beef steak.
- 16,000 pounds of bananas.
- 5,000 gallons of coffee.
- 15,500 pounds of smoked ham.
- 20,000 pounds of pasta.
- 280,000 cookies.
- 16 tons of bacon.
- 30,000 quarts of grape juice.

To keep up their strength during strenuous workouts, Winter Olympic athletes will be permitted as many as three box lunches a day.

Actress Loses Ad, Gains Telethon Spot

CHICAGO (UPI) — Suzanne Somers will head an Easter Seals telethon despite Playboy magazine's publication of nude photographs of her but the photos — taken nearly 10 years ago — have cost her spot in hardware commercials.

The photographs to be published in Playboy's February edition were taken in 1970, long before her fame in the weekly TV series "Three's Company."

A spokesman for Miss Somers, Jay Bernstein, said the pictures were taken at a time when the actress was divorced, unemployed and trying to support herself and her son who had medical expenses of "thousands of dollars."

Officials of the Easter Seals program said publication of the pictures would not affect Miss Somers' relationship with the charity.

"We recognize Miss Somers as a fine sensitive woman who has shown nothing but concern in helping the handicapped child," Easter Seals spokeswoman Hope DiStefano said Friday. "Surely, we all have a skeglet in the closet we're not bragging about."

But Ace Hardware President Arthur H. Krausman said the company had decided to stop using advertising featuring Miss Somers, though the firm would honor the 15 months remaining on her contract. Ace officials said the contract would not be renewed when it expires.

Bernstein, speaking for Miss Somers, stressed the actress had not been fired from the advertising job.

"She was deeply hurt and embarrassed by the publicity," Bernstein said, "but the Ace thing was not affected."

"She has not been fired from Ace Hardware," he said.

Ace spokesman John J. Cameron said the firm was "aware that Miss Somers will be the Easter Seals chairman but we are not reconsidering our decision."

The hardware giant is reviewing the total advertising picture "not necessarily as a result of the Playboy pictures but because we generally reassess our campaigns around this time of year," Cameron said.

Easter Seals officials had no comment on Ace's move against Miss Somers. Ace said the Playboy pictures were the cause of Miss Somers' loss of contract renewal.

"When we learned of the photographs a memo was issued to our 4,000 dealers saying the magazine will include photos that could prove embarrassing to the company."

One Out Of Six Purchases Grounds For Complaints

By the Editors of Psychology Today

One out of every six purchases lead to "recognized grounds for complaining that are never satisfactorily resolved," according to a study by Ralph Nader's Center for the Study of Responsive Law.

The legal system usually is not very helpful, largely because it is inaccessible to most citizens. Now a study of such extrajudicial complaint channels as Better Business Bureaus and letters to Congress shows that their record is spotty, too.

The study was done by a group headed by the anthropologist Laura Nader, a professor at the University of California at Berkeley who is Ralph Nader's sister. Her group's findings are detailed in a pioneering book, "No Access to Law: Alternatives to the American Judicial System," which will be published this spring by Academic Press.

Overall, when consumers take their problems to third parties, they come away satisfied only about one-third of the time, according to a survey that Miss Nader's group cites.

A striking case that the group investigated concerned a stove that turned itself on and off unexpectedly. The owner compiled a three-inch thick packet of correspondence with the seller, the manufacturer, utilities and a dozen government offices. Finally, Miss Nader reports, her house burned down, and she felt vindicated.

Settling disputes for their constituents cost members of Congress and their staffs at least one-third of their working time — but achieves only a 10 percent success rate, according to data that Miss Nader turned up. "Even at that rate," she says, "the efforts pay off in votes."

Better Business bureaus also leave many complaints dissatisfied, Miss Nader found. "An arm of the business community, (they) function to give consumers a favorable impression of business without causing much inconvenience for the businesses themselves," she reports. For example, she says, "The consumer may be told that agreements are binding only if they are in writing — a misstatement of the law."

In the Christmas season, it is reassuring to know that Miss Nader's group found the department store complaint departments usually work well. "If shoppers are persistent enough, management will usually resolve a complaint in their favor," says Miss Nader.

The reason she says is that department stores are in competition. "As the complaint manager of Gump's, a luxury street in San Francisco explained, 'Honey, there ain't nothin' in this store you couldn't live without.'"

Dents left in the carpeting by heavy pieces of furniture can be fixed by filling the dents with water. After a while, depending on how badly mashed down the fibers are, they will begin to loosen and separate.

Radio and television "action lines" also do well. Miss Nader's group found that one ombudsman service run by a station in Los Angeles estimates that 80 percent of its 50,000 annual complainants get satisfactory results.

In addition, the action lines help translate individual complaints into calls for general reform. Most give extra publicity to recurrent complaints. At least some of them monitor their complaints to spot community problems, and give those further editorial comment.

Miss Nader's book proposes some innovative solutions to the general frustration, including a centralized federally-run "complaint bank" to keep tabs on all complaints that had first been taken to a retailer or manufacturer. She also favors a Department of Economic Justice that would give no-fault compensation for minor consumer grievances involving less than $200.

For the present, however, she finds that "large segments of the population, reflecting all socioeconomic groups, are exposed to low-profile, undramatic life."

SALT II Chance Lessened By Afghan Coup

Jacksboro Police Chief Denies Probe Into His Shooting Closed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Apparent Russian participation in a bloody coup that installed a new regime in Afghanistan has lessened prospects for quick action on the SALT II treaty, some senators indicated Friday.

"Obviously, it is not coming up," said Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., a leading critic of the pact. Jackson has contended that the U.S.-Soviet strategic arms accord would fail to curb the nuclear arms race and would put the United States at a disadvantage.

Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska, the assistant Republican leader who is uncommitted on ratification of the treaty, said the new Russian actions strengthened arguments for delaying consideration of the pact until after the 1980 presidential election.

"It is just another thing to add to the scales," Stevens said. "We have to reassess our complete relationship with Russia, and one of the keystones of this relationship is the SALT process."

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, a leading SALT opponent, said the Soviet actions "removed any basis or trust or confidence that the Soviet Union would be bound by any future agreement such as now pending before the Senate."

Senators supporting the treaty could not immediately be reached for comment, but an aide to one of them said, "I don't think it is going to help. There are enough significant issues that I don't think it will be determinative, but it is not on the plus side."

The aide, who insisted on anonymity, said he did not think the Afghanistan developments would affect timing of the Senate debate on the treaty.

Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., who has said he will bring the treaty up for debate in January or February, could not be reached for comment.

U.S. officials said the Russians apparently were instrumental in ousting nationalist-minded commander Hafizullah Amin on Thursday and installing former Deputy Prime Minister Babrak Karmal in his place.

Interviewed by telephone from his home in Everett, Wash., Jackson said the action was "a major geopolitical move on the part of the Soviets. Afghanistan is larger than France and it is strategically located."

Concerning the impact of the coup on the SALT II treaty, Jackson said, "If you needed an example of linkage (a term used for the interrelationship of the treaty with other international events), I couldn't think of a stronger example."

"It's like a man who comes in and wants you to sign an agreement and he brings along a boa constrictor and says, 'These two are separate. You can sign the agreement but the boa constrictor might kill you.'"

*Stevens, interviewed by telephone while vacationing in Colorado, said, "We may be seeing some profound changes in Russia."

"You can't view any one of the things they are doing in an isolated way," he said. Stevens argued that the Afghan coup, along with other recent Soviet moves, "all add up to a deterioration of relationships."

In a statement issued by his Washington office, Tower said the Soviet Union "has crossed a major threshold and launched a serious challenge to the United States and other free world nations."

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — Speaking from his hospital bed, the Jacksboro police chief said an investigation into his Dec. 15 shooting will be closed when he says so, not when the city council decides it's closed.

"The investigation hasn't even begun and it won't until I get out of here," said chief Guy Sullivan, "because I'm the one who has the information."

Jacksboro Mayor Bill Kimberlin said the investigation was closed Thursday night, after city officials failed to draw any definite conclusions during a 90-minute closed meeting.

A bullet from Sullivan's own revolver struck him in the left shoulder while he was in his apartment the night of Dec. 15. At first police broadcast an arrest order for a Bowie man, but it was later rescinded and police said they had no suspects in the case.

Thursday night, Jacksboro city council members talked to acting police chief Arthur Reaves and Texas Ranger Tommy Walker about the incident.

But after their closed meeting Kimberlin said the evidence "could not prove there was an assailant or a suspect in the apartment with the exception of Chief Sullivan. The evidence also could not prove there was not someone in there."

Sullivan took strong exception.

"I was never asked any questions by the city council or by any investigator about what happened," they're kind of getting out of their bounds," he said.

"It's none of the city council's business in a criminal matter," he continued. "They don't have any say-so and they shouldn't have an opinion."

"It's not their decision to close the case because it's not in their jurisdiction."

Sullivan said he will do the official investigation when he leaves his Wichita Falls hospital bed in "about two weeks."

"It might be five years before I find out who this guy is and catch him but I'll close the investigation," said Sullivan.

Several Jack County residents, including District Attorney Brock Smith, have been quoted as saying they have seen evidence to indicate Sullivan may have shot himself — a claim Sullivan denies.

"If later on they can prove I shot myself, which I know I didn't, they should go and decide what to do," Sullivan said. "But right now they don't have any business making a decision on my conduct."

Kimberlin told reporters it was unusual for the city council to get involved.

The investigation is closed until we can talk to Sullivan about it," he said, "and if he wants to do something else it can be re-opened."

Sullivan took the Jacksboro police chief's job two months before the shooting, following a term as a Bowie police officer.

Sullivan said the shooting resulted from a drug investigation he was conducting my Walker about the incident.

But after their closed meeting Kimberlin said the evidence "could not prove there was an assailant or a suspect in the apartment with the exception of Chief Sullivan. The evidence also could not prove there was not someone in there."

Delay In Construction Of New Jail Expected

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Although the construction of Lubbock County's new jail is scheduled to be completed by late February, it probably will be several weeks after that before any inmates are moved into the facility.

County architect Arnold Maeker advised commissioners Friday that before prisoners are placed in the jail, all jailers must be adequately trained to use the new electronic equipment that controls the movements of inmates with the jail. Maeker also said the equipment must be thoroughly checked out to be sure it is functioning properly.

"We've got to be sure we're ready when we move the inmates over," Maeker stressed.

According to the architect, jailers will face a totally new concept in the soon-to-be-completed jail. In the old jail, guards have had to manually open doors when they move prisoners from their cells.

Moving prisoners will be much easier in the new jail facility, Maeker observed. Electronic equipment will enable a jailer to move prisoners from one place to another simply by punching buttons on a console. When prisoners are moved from their cells, they will be monitored over closed circuit televisions located at the console.

However, it may take some time to train jailers to operate the electronic consoles. "It will almost be like stepping into the cockpit of a 747," Maeker commented.

So far, two training sessions have been conducted to familiarize jailers with the concept and layout of the new facility. Maeker said additional training sessions are planned on the local level.

Also, he has tentatively set a special training program for Feb. 22 to be conducted by Guy Van Cleave of the Colorado Criminal Justice Department. Van Cleave formerly was the executive officer for the Texas Jail Standards Commission.

In other business, commissioners approved a $5 increase in the hourly rate paid to jail architects Maeker and Ed Stephens. The hourly rate will go from $40 to $45 beginning Jan. 1.

Maeker said this rate increase probably will amount to an additional $7,000 on the cost of the jail during 1980.

Also today, commissioners appointed two members of the Lubbock County Hospital District board, but failed to come up with any new members for the board.

Wayne Smith and Green Stutte were appointed to two-year terms to begin Jan. 14. Commissioners also still searching for persons to fill vacancies created by the October resignation of former board Chairman Jack Strong and the planned January retirement by current Chairman Joe Stanley.

The 1979-80 U.S. flag was raised officially for the first time on July 4, 1960.

Rebellious Spirits Evident In Hostages, Say Clergymen

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A few were a bit fearful and seemed anxious. But after eight weeks in captivity there are still rebellious spirits among the U.S. hostages in Tehran, snapping at the guards, generally resigned to captivity, but their will unbroken, according to accounts of U.S. clergymen who visited them.

The story related by one clergyman after a Christmas visit of a hostage taunting a guard about whether a question about this year's Rose Bowl football game was "too political," seems to say more about the way some hostages are taking their ordeal than weeks of speculation on the psychological effects of captivity.

It was one of the series of pictures of hostage life which the U.S. clergymen related after their visit.

Iran saw its decision to allow the visit as a conciliatory gesture by a strictly religious Moslem country, and deserving acknowledgment from the critical international community.

But the visit became a deeply human tale, focusing attention on the hostages as people, instead of the grievances of Iran as a nation.

The Rev. William Sloan Coffin, the Rev. William Howard and Detroit's Roman Catholic auxiliary bishop, the Most Rev. Thomas J. Gumbleton, watched with insight and compassion as they separately saw a total of 43 hostages in groups of four or five at a time.

Some were described as very strong, including the only two women hostages who are apparently each kept in solitary confinement, unlike most of the others.

"They were very, very happy to see each other," said Bishop Gumbleton. "They told me they had not seen each other for a month."

"I had the impression they were not in touch with anyone else."

When time was up, the women, Katherine Koob and Elizabeth Ann Swift, walked back to their separate captivities singing Christmas carols, he said.

Howard, who saw the largest number of hostages, 21, said there were five or six who "might have had tears, eyes or some signs of worry."

But there were also 10 "clearly rebellious spirits," he added.

"They said sort of snappy things to the guards. They let it be known their will had not been broken. They said things like 'What do these guys (the guards) know?'"

The captors forbade political talk.

"One guy said (to the guards), 'Can I ask a question about the Rose Bowl, or is that too political for you?'" said Howard, a Baptist from Princeton, N.J.

From the clergy's description, William Keough, one of two hostages who was not on the embassy staff, was an unwitting illustration of how total is the ban on outside news.

Keough, formerly head of the American School in Tehran, came back briefly to work on school records before return-

Carter Out Of Debate Because Of Stalemate

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — President Carter has dropped out of the Jan. 7 Democratic presidential debate because of the continuing stalemate over the holding of American hostages in Iran, the organizer of the debate said Friday.

And in Washington, a spokesman for presidential challenger Sen. Edward M. Kennedy said the Massachusetts Democrat would not take part in the debates unless the president participates. "We don't feel it would be useful to debate without the president," said Kennedy press aide Tom Southwick.

NBC Nightly News quoted California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. as saying he too would drop out of the debate.

James P. Gannon, executive editor of the Des Moines Register and Tribune Co., which is sponsoring the debates, said the debates may go on without the president.

"I haven't cancelled the debates," said Gannon after receiving a letter from the White House.

"We still have two other (Democratic) candidates to consider the question is open," he said, adding Kennedy and Brown would be consulted before any final decision was made on the Democratic debate.

Democratic presidential contenders are scheduled to debate here Jan. 7, two weeks before Iowa's Democratic caucus. GOP candidates are to debate on Jan. 5.

Carter said in a letter to the newspa-

NBC To Take 'Rockford' Off The Air

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC said Friday it was taking "The Rockford Files" off the air because its star, James Garner, has not appeared for production for seven weeks.

Meta Rosenberg, executive producer of the show, said Garner was ill and has probably "gone somewhere to get away from the telephone." Garner's press agent, Jerry Pam, said the 52-year-old star had "acute sinusitis."

"The Rockford Files," ends six years on NBC on Thursday, Jan. 10. NBC will replace it with a new series called "SKAG" starring Karl Malden, which was originally to have aired Sunday nights.

"Jim has been ill," said Mrs. Rosenberg. "He's not in the hospital now and he has been at home, but he may have gone somewhere to get away from the telephones. Well-wishers have been calling him."

She said she did not know if this was the end of the series. "It will depend on his health. It will depend on the network, the studio and his health," she said.

Garner became ill in October. Mrs. Rosenberg said and had undergone tests at Scripps Medical Center to find out what was wrong.

"All I know is what the doctors said, and they said he couldn't work for four to eight weeks. That was several weeks ago," said Mrs. Rosenberg.

"He has a knee problem and has had surgery several times, he has an ulcer and he has acute sinusitis," said Pam.

Pam said Garner's intention is to complete the remaining shows when he is well. "If they still want him, too. Maybe because it's near the end of the season, they'll just keep 'SKAG.'"

Mrs. Rosenberg said there had been discussions of continuing "The Rockford Files" with Garner making only limited appearances.

"We're talking about a new format, but if they want to do it, it will take time to prepare," she said. "They may feel that it's too late for this season."

Garner recently signed a contract for a new series to air on NBC in the future. He said this would be the last year on "The Rockford Files."

Soviets Prove To Be Unpredictable Buyer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the Soviet Union emerged as a major customer of American farmers in the 1970s, it was an erratic and unpredictable buyer of U.S. grain much of the time, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

While world trade in grain steadily expanded by some 80 percent during the decade of the 1970s, Soviet imports have fluctuated dramatically from year to year, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said.

In the early 1970s, Soviet grain imports were about 9 percent of the total world grain trade. In recent years, Soviet purchases have amounted to about 13 percent, the agency said in a year-end report.

Total U.S. grain shipments to foreign countries more than doubled, rising from 39.3 million metric tons in 1970-71 to an estimated 109.3 million in 1979-80, the report showed.

The Soviet Union, in the same period, changed from a nominal importer of grain from all foreign sources — about 800,000 metric tons — to a huge buyer whose imports this year are expected to total about 34 million metric tons.

Of the current year's amount, the United States will be the major provider, with sales expected to be at the allowed maximum of 25 million metric tons. A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds.

In reviewing the huge growth in U.S. grain exports in the 1970s, the report said Soviet purchases accounted for "only less than one-fourth of that growth" in total shipments.

Demand for U.S. grain also grew in many other countries, including Japan and those in Western Europe, during the 1970s. The less-developed nations also have become big customers. Oil-rich Middle East nations have added their orders for U.S. grain and other commodities, and China emerged as a significant customer.

The report said "the two most significant factors" affecting Soviet grain imports in the 1970s were decisions by Moscow to buy foreign grain during years of short domestic crops and to protect and expand livestock and poultry enterprises.

Traditionally, when the Soviet Union had short harvests, livestock would be slaughtered to reduce the need for feed grains.

The effect of these policy changes was not fully apparent until after the first massive flow of imports during 1972-73, the report said. "This policy of grain importation versus the liquidation of livestock herds has continued throughout the 1970s."

Only during "the disastrously low crop in 1975," when Soviet grain production dropped to 140 million metric tons, were livestock — mostly hogs — significantly reduced, it said.

Last year the Soviet Union produced a record grain harvest of 237.2 million metric tons, but the 1979 output fell to 179 million, the smallest harvest since 1973.

Even so, department experts say, there is no sign that Soviet livestock inventories are being reduced significantly and that the current large grain imports are intended to help continue with Moscow's long-range plans to increase supplies of meat and poultry.

Hybrid Cotton To Benefit Production

By ROBERT L. HANEY
Texas Agricultural Experiment Station
Hybrid vigor has greatly increased yields of corn, sorghum, and many other crops. Now, it looks like scientists and the seed industry are getting in position to bring its benefits to cotton production.

Release of the male-sterile, Tamcot A-788, by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station to commercial breeders provides one of the essential components needed to develop a hybrid seed production system.

"This breeder cotton was developed at the TAES station north of Lubbock from Tamcot 788, a productive, storm-resistant variety," said Dr. W.G. Meyer, who first transferred the cytoplasm and the restorer genes from another species into the major cultivated species of cotton, Gossypium hirsutum.

"The benefits of hybrids, in general, are twofold. There are advantages in breeding and increased yield, through heterosis or hybrid vigor."

"In cotton, we're expecting perhaps a 20-percent gain in yields. Of course, on a 5-million bale crop, that's a gain of another million bales."

Research at Lubbock has established that adequate pollination can be achieved with male-sterile plants to produce hybrid seed at a reasonable cost.

The release of Tamcot A-788 has provided breeders with a good source of parental material and has spurred considerable interest in the industry.

The station is cooperating with seedmen in evaluating hybrids. Over 20 hybrids are being grown in a performance test this year.

Finding the correct parental combination to give a hybrid with superior performance will be a critical and formidable task for the hybrid seed producer.

Since cross-pollination is essential in producing hybrid seed, and cross-pollination in cotton is mainly by insects, hybrid seed production most likely will be restricted to areas which have minimal insecticide use. This makes the Texas High Plains a prime prospect for production of hybrid seed.

"The performance of genetic background of Tamcot 788 indicates a good potential for the use of Tamcot A-788 in a hybrid seed production program," says Ray, "especially where stripper harvesters are used.

"It not only has good fiber quality and yield, but its diverse genetic background should make it a good combiner."

"Since western-type cottons, mostly Acala derivatives, make up most of its pedigree, cottons developed in the southern and southeastern part of the cotton belt probably would make the most successful parental combinations."

"Although Tamcot 788 has proved to be highly adapted only to the High Plains, hybrids from it should have a much wider adaptation," Ray concluded.

Small quantities of seed of Tamcot A-788 have been distributed to commercial breeders under memoranda of agreement. Additional seed will be available to qualified seed producers. Foundation Seed Service, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas 77843, may be contacted for more details.

Research Shows Alta Fescue Best Grass

LAS CRUCES (Special) — Research comparing the nutritive values of Alta fescue, Jose Tall wheatgrass and Potomac orchardgrass shows that Alta fescue is the best grass for beef producers to use in irrigated pastures.

According to Dr. Joe Wallace, animal nutritionist at New Mexico State University's Agricultural Experiment Station, seeded pastures are used to complement native range in livestock operation throughout much of the West.

Therefore, we compared the performance of yearling heifers grazing on each of the previously mentioned grasses, Wallace said. "We also evaluated the nutritive value of each species used as hay, and finally we evaluated the chemical composition and digestibility of the total forage available and off rages selected by grazing cattle."

Wallace's research showed that over a three-year period, heifers grazing fescue gained 10 percent more than those on wheatgrass and 15 percent more than those on orchardgrass.

Averaged over the three years, beef production per acre was 454 on fescue, 332 on wheatgrass and 337 on orchardgrass pastures, Wallace explained. "We also found heifers on fescue showed no toxicity problems, such as those reported in the Midwest."

In trials on digestion, Wallace found fescue had a higher gross energy digestibility than other species. Digestibility values for Alta fescue were higher than those reported for Kentucky 31 fescue harvested in the summer. However

Monterey, Estacado Flow Into Caprock Title Game

Estacado and Monterey will face off for the third time in two weeks tonight in the large school division finals at the Caprock Holiday Tournament.

And if history and Friday night's semifinal contests are any indicators, the game should be a barnburner. Estacado used its mayhem press to turn District 1-AAA foe Canyon inside out 66-52 to win one berth and Monterey outlasted scrappy Lubbock 55-52 to finish the bracket. That championship game will be played at 9 tonight. Lubbock and Canyon will square off in the consolation game at 6.

In between, at 7:30, Lubbock Christian High and Tulia will battle for the small-school division crown. LCHS turned back Morton 61-58 while Tulia edged Dimmitt 50-45 in overtime.

In other games scheduled for today, Dimmitt and Morton will meet for the small-school consolation at 4:30. San Angelo Central and Wichita Falls will battle at 3 in the large-school consolation final and Abernathy and Tahoka will open the day at 1:30 in the small-school consolation final.

In Friday's games, Central beat Odesa 66-99 to win the right to beat Dunbar 50-46 for the consolation berth. On the other half of the consolation bracket, Wichita Falls whipped Coronado 62-51. Dunbar, Coronado and Wichita Falls are now through for the tourney.

On the losers' side of the small-school division, Tahoka beat Spur 62-43 and Abernathy crushed Crosbyton 97-67.

In Friday night's first big school semifinal, Lubbock High, a heavy underdog, took a 35-26 lead into the locker room at halftime. It should have stayed there.

Monterey exploded in the third quarter, outscoring the outsized Westerners 21-8 to take a 47-43 lead. Two technical fouls on Monterey in the last period helped Lubbock High stay close, but when Kirk Cole had a hook shot roll out of the bucket with three seconds left, the game was practically over.

Trav Clardy and Greg Thomason played Mr. Inside and Mr. Outside for the Plainsmen. Clardy getting 22 points driving the lane and Thomason collecting another 22 on set shots from the wing.

In the other semifinal game, Preston Davis scored 23 points in the last three quarters as Estacado's press harried Canyon into numerous turnovers.

That game carried some special significance since Canyon was the team

Oilers Limp Into Playoff

HOUSTON (AP) — It will be difficult to tell the Houston Oilers whether they take the field in their AFC playoff game with the San Diego Chargers at 3 p.m. today in San Diego.

Quarterback Dan Pastorini, running backs Earl Campbell and Rob Carpenter, and wide receiver Ken Burrough were all questionable participants due to assorted injuries.

But Pastorini said Friday too much emphasis has been placed on the Oiler injury list and that the Oilers would win today's American Football Conference semifinal playoff game "no matter who the quarterback is."

Too much emphasis has been placed on Earl, Kenny and myself being out and what effect that will have on the offense," Pastorini said. "That seems unfair to me. The emphasis should be on the quality of the people who back us up. Personally, I think we'll beat them no matter who the quarterback is."

Pastorini, who has not worked out with the team this week, would be backed up by Gifford Nielsen, who started one game this season and played the second half of three others.

Carpenter had been practicing in Campbell's position until Thursday when he sprained his left ankle, tripping over a blocking dummy.

If Carpenter can't play in Saturday's game against San Diego, the Oilers would be left with three healthy running backs — starting fullback Tim Wilson and reserve running backs Ronnie Coleman and Boobie Clark.

Neither Clark nor Coleman have seen much action this season.

"I won't know if I can play until I go on the field Saturday," Pastorini said. "The important thing for me is to keep my head in the preparations since I haven't practiced."

"If I can't throw the ball smartly, I know Gifford can," Oiler coach Bum Phillips said. "If worse comes to worse, we'll punt and play defense."

Campbell, despite his doubtful status, said, "I'll play. I'm not hurt that badly."

Raiders Stumble In Far West

PORTLAND Ore. Special — The Texas Tech Red Raiders dropped their second straight game here Friday night in the Far West Classic as the Oregon Ducks held off a furious rally to nip the Raiders 75-72.

The Raiders will now meet Penn State at 3 p.m. (CST) in the battle for seventh place. The Nittany Lions lost to Idaho in Friday's first contest. The Ducks will meet Idaho State.

The Raiders appeared to be out of the contest as they trailed by 10 points midway through the final period after both Ralph Brewster and Jeff Taylor had fouled out of the contest. Brewster picked up his five personals in only 16 minutes and Taylor managed the same feat in 26 minutes.

But freshman Nelson Franse led a late Raider charge that put Tech in a position to win the contest. With Oregon leading 71-70, Franse came up with a steal and the Raiders had the ball with 27 seconds remaining. But Kent Williams turned the ball over and the Ducks were able to put the game away.

The Raiders were hardly impressive Friday but the game did mark the emergence of Franse. The freshman from Clovis, N.M., finished with 14 points and hit the big baskets at the end of the game that brought the Raiders within grasp of victory.

"I don't normally complain about the officiating," said Tech coach Gerald Myers, "but this was just a case where the officials were not going to let us beat Oregon."

On that last play, Kent was bumped all over the place — that should've been a foul. But Myers was quick to add, "If we'd been playing well, we wouldn't have gotten in that position."

The Raiders had a couple of chances to go ahead in the final moments but, on one occasion, David Little was called for an offensive foul so call that Myers disputed, and, in the second instance, a

Kent Williams field goal was disallowed because of a foul away from the basket.

The Ducks were playing without starting center Dan Hartshorne and freshman guard Paul Bain — both were suspended before the game for personal reasons.

"I think that really helped Oregon," said Myers of the suspensions. "That gave the other guys something to rally behind."

Filling in for the 6-10 Hartshorne was 7-foot freshman Ron Burns — all he did was score 15 to lead the Ducks who had five men in double figures. Mike Clark was next with 14.

Kent Williams again led the Raiders with 17 points. Little had 13 and Jeff Taylor 12. For the second night in a row, the Raiders got into early foul trouble and were plagued by turnovers throughout the contest — giving the ball away 19 times.

Only Taylor, who scored 10 points in the opening half, kept the Raiders close in the first period. Tech trailed 35-31 at the intermission.

Tampa's Jordan Likes Taste Of Success

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

There was a time — just five weeks ago as a matter of fact — when the Tampa Bay Buccaneers ranked right alongside of salamanders and swamp fungus as southern Florida's "Least Popular" commodity. Yep, right there in the pleasant company with insects and rot, folks.

But all that has since changed.

The Bucs are no longer the "chokeneers" as the press so lovingly tabbed them. And mamas aren't the least bit scared to let one of their daughters accompany a Bue to the Dairy D-Lite for a cream cone, either.

Curtis Jordan is happy about the turnaround.

He is one Buc that didn't enjoy showing his ears around town. The two-time

All-Southwest Conference safety. Lubbock native and former Texas Tech stand-out, says for awhile it was more popular to be an Ayatollah than a Buccaneer.

"It was terrible and I mean terrible," says Jordan. "The fans and the media were really down on us. They kept calling us the chokeneers. That only made the matter worse, too."

Tampa, which hosts Philadelphia in the second round of the National Football League playoffs today at 11:30, needed only one win — just one — in its final four games to grab a toe-hold on its first-ever post-season spot. But the Bucs came awful close to striking out, losing three straight before beating Kansas City 3-0 on the final day of the regular season. The victory also gave Tampa Bay the NFC's Central Division title with a 10-6 won-loss mark.

"We felt we would pull it out sooner or later," commented Jordan. "But the We've never been on national TV before so there are a lot of people that have never seen us play before. They don't know how good we are. And I believe we have a good team... a competitive team."

Jordan doesn't make any excuses for Tampa's so-called easy schedule. He'll be the first to admit that the Bucs were playing the likes of a Dallas or Pittsburgh every Sunday. In fact, the Bucs played only two teams — Chicago and Los Angeles — that wound up making this year's playoffs.

"It's no secret that we had a soft schedule," noted Jordan. "Anybody can look at it and tell. But I feel the schedule really helped us tremendously. Once we beat some teams early in the season we started to gain confidence in ourselves. We began to play up to our potential because we had that confidence that only comes from winning. When we get down by, say, a touchdown, we feel like we can still come back and win. That's not the way it used to be around here."

Jordan likes to point out that the Bucs defeated Los Angeles 23-7 earlier in the season. And that only Dallas and Philadelphia posted better won-loss records than Tampa Bay.

"Hey," said Jordan, "we snuck up on a lot of people at first, but after the fifth or sixth game people knew we were for real. They took us lightly. We had that going for us and we realized it."

Although only a veteran of four NFL seasons, Jordan is considered one of the old-timers of the youth-laden Bucs. He's one of only nine original members of the first Tampa Bay club, which puts him in a trivia category. So when he talks about the bad ole days, those days when the Bucs went about losing 26 straight games, Jordan knows what he's talking about.

"There was a time," reminisced Jordan, "when the playoffs were only something we dreamed about. It didn't seem like we'd ever win a game, much less make the playoffs."

"It was really something around here for awhile," continued Jordan. "Everybody was fed up, really disgruntled. Everybody was uptight. They (the coaches) were cutting guys every day. I'll bet over 500 (players) have been here the past four years. For awhile, you didn't know if you were coming or going."

But now all that's changed. We've got a solid team and a solid coaching staff."

Still, though, Jordan isn't that happy in Tampa Bay. That's because Jordan isn't playing as much as he would like.

"I'm thinking seriously about asking to be traded," said Jordan.

Jordan is Tampa's "fifth" back — meaning he comes in during obvious passing downs. So for most of the game, he waits for a third-and-long situation.

"I think I've played well," said Jordan. "I don't have any interceptions (this season) because no one has really thrown at me that much. But I'm not playing as much as I would like to, either."

"I'm coming up to my option year," he continued. "So I need to make a decision to either re-sign or play for another year and then go somewhere else."

Jordan has been a safety since first strapping on the pads at Atkins Junior High in Lubbock. But last year, coach John McKay switched the 6-2, 210-pounder to cornerback. Jordan believes the move has hindered, rather than helped, his professional career.

"I didn't mind it, the move, as long as I was playing," said Jordan. "But I'm not a corner. I know that. I'm too lanky for the position and I don't have a lot of straight out speed. So I'm not comfortable playing corner. Safety is where I played my best ball. It's my natural position."

While Jordan was playing cornerback Cedric Brown and Mark Cotton both stepped in and took over the starting safety positions. Now Brown and Cotton are established starters, and Jordan has found it almost impossible to push either one in the direction of the bench.

"When he made the switch we didn't have any corners," said Jordan. "So I had to play there. But while I was there, Cedric and Mark started playing well and all of a sudden I was left out in the cold. But that's something I'll have to work out (during the off-season). Right now, I'm thinking about the playoffs."

Bengals Move To Forrest

CINCINNATI (AP) — Forrest Gregg, promising to provide the discipline his boss was looking for, was named Friday as head coach of the Cincinnati Bengals.

The 45-year-old Gregg replaces Homer Rice, who was fired after his team suffered through its second 4-12 football season.

asked former Bengals assistants Mike McCormack, George Sefcik and Frank Ganzs to remain on his staff.

Gregg declined to elaborate on the terms of his contract.

"It's long enough," he said.

The Bengals were able to sign Gregg after he was released from the Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League.

Gregg compiled a 5-11 record with the Argonauts last year.

He became coach in Cleveland in 1975 and remained there three years before leaving under pressure in 1977.

His first year in Cleveland, Gregg was 3-11, but then he led the Browns to a 9-5 record and was named Associated Press National Football League Coach of the Year.

The Browns were 6-7 with one game remaining when he left in 1977.

It was during that year that several players accused Gregg of being too much of a disciplinarian and said he was not able to communicate with his players.

"I don't care about that mickey mouse," said Bengals General Manager Paul Brown. "I hired him because he's a good football coach. He's a fundamentalist. I admired the way he put a team together in Cleveland."

I've heard all kinds of things about him. All I know is his team blocked and tackled and we respected the way it was put together.

Gregg tried to brush aside some of the stories about himself, but said he was going to lay down "a low hard and fast rules."

Discipline involves a lot of things, Gregg said. It involves responsibilities of the individual to be at practice on time or to be at the doctor when he's supposed to be.

FORREST GREGG

Brown said at that time he wanted a disciplinarian as head coach and Gregg said he fits the bill.

I'm not in this business to be loved," Gregg told a news conference. "I'm here to win the best I know how."

Gregg, an eight-time all-pro guard, denied, however, he tried to be a copy of Vince Lombardi, his coach for 14 years at Green Bay.

I think that everyone assumes since I played for Lombardi, automatically I try to be Vince," Gregg said. "To try and be someone else will come across false to your players."

I just try to coach to my own philosophy and be Forrest Gregg," Gregg announced that he had asked former Bengals assistants Mike McCormack, George Sefcik and Frank Ganzs to remain on his staff.

Gregg declined to elaborate on the terms of his contract.

"It's long enough," he said.

The Bengals were able to sign Gregg after he was released from the Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League.

Gregg compiled a 5-11 record with the Argonauts last year.

He became coach in Cleveland in 1975 and remained there three years before leaving under pressure in 1977.

His first year in Cleveland, Gregg was 3-11, but then he led the Browns to a 9-5 record and was named Associated Press National Football League Coach of the Year.

The Browns were 6-7 with one game remaining when he left in 1977.

It was during that year that several players accused Gregg of being too much of a disciplinarian and said he was not able to communicate with his players.

"I don't care about that mickey mouse," said Bengals General Manager Paul Brown. "I hired him because he's a good football coach. He's a fundamentalist. I admired the way he put a team together in Cleveland."

I've heard all kinds of things about him. All I know is his team blocked and tackled and we respected the way it was put together.

Gregg tried to brush aside some of the stories about himself, but said he was going to lay down "a low hard and fast rules."

Discipline involves a lot of things, Gregg said. It involves responsibilities of the individual to be at practice on time or to be at the doctor when he's supposed to be.

Curtis Jordan: Ex-Raider Defends For Buccaneers play of the special teams just kept killing us. We couldn't do a thing right. We weren't playing that bad. I thought we were playing well. The offense was moving the ball and the defense (currently number one in the NFL) was holding people down."

But, still, Tampa wasn't winning. And against sisters like Chicago, Green Bay and San Francisco, at that.

"Finally," continued Jordan, "our backs were up against the wall. People kept expecting us to put it away every week. And you have to admit we weren't playing tough teams either. But when we had to have that win — when our backs were really up against that wall — we did it. I thought we played well against Kansas City, considering the conditions (a rain storm)."

Now Tampa, along with Dallas, Los Angeles and, of course, Philly, is one of four NFC teams still left with a shot at a Super Bowl berth.

"People still think we are a fluke," says Jordan. "That we haven't really been tested, yet. Until we do beat Philadelphia, people are going to have their doubts."

AREA CAGE ROUNDUP

Dimmitt, Tigerettes Gain Tournament Final

Dimmitt and Slaton moved into the finals of the Slaton tournament by posting wins Friday night. Slaton downed Plainview 59-42 and Dimmitt edged Lockney 45-41.

Dimmitt and Slaton met in the finals of last year's tournament.

Lauri Dyer scored 12 points and Vickie Cleveland added 10 points to lead Dimmitt, while Rebecca Evans paced Lockney with 20 points.

Leading Slaton was Cindy Robinson with 17 points. Della Riggins threw in 16 points for Plainview.

In today's action, Cooper plays Canyon at 10 a.m., Monterey takes on Coronado at noon, the winners of the two earlier games play at 4 p.m., Plainview meets Lockney for third place at 6 p.m., and Slaton and Dimmitt compete at 8 p.m. for the title.

Littlefield 51-36 as Sharon Gerber scored 14 points for the winners.

ANDREWS SNUFFS VAN HORN

The Andrews Mustangs raised their season record to 13-2 Friday night with a one-sided 79-52 victory over Van Horn. Jerry Aimez paced the Mustang assault with 21 points and four other AHS players were also in double figures.

VALLEY WISS PAIR

Ritchie Fuston scored 44 points to lead Valley to a 59-49 win over Lorenzo. Mike Hood paced Lorenzo with 26 points.

The Valley girls also scored a 10-point win defeating Lorenzo 45-35 as Jenny Clay scored 21 points. Sherry Lawson had 14 points for the losers.

LAMESA FALLS

The Lamesa Tornados dropped a 66-51 decision to South San Antonio West in the second round of the Brownwood Basketball Classic Friday night and will face Waco High today at 2 p.m. in the contest for third place.

Seminole, competing in the small school division, whipped Crane 67-51 and will play in the consolation game today.

Plainsmen Outclass LHS

everyone pointed at before the season began as the favorites of District 1AAA. Now that distinction must move to the Matadors.

Though Monterey has already beaten Estacado twice this year, both games were fairly close. Both times the Plainsmen have pulled away at the end for the victory. The first was a 74-68 decision and the second a 50-40 win at Estacado.

In those small school losers' bracket games, Tracy White scored 22 points to lead Tahoka past Spur and Joey Garcia and Scott Morrison teamed for 47 to pace Abernathy past Crosbyton.

Garcia netted 27 and Morrison 20 to offset Chief Harvey Fink's 32.

Texas A&M Outlasts Ramblers

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Rynn Wright scored a game-high 26 points, including the clinching free throw with two seconds left, as Texas A&M tipped Chicago-Loyola 70-69 in the first round of the Pillsbury Classic basketball tournament Friday night.

Rutgers met host Minnesota at the second game at Williams Arena.

Texas, 8-4, led 67-64 with less than two minutes remaining but Darius Clements sank two free throws, and Kevin Sprewer hit a short jumpshot and another free throw to put Loyola on top 69-67.

Wright then put in a rebound to tie the game with 12 seconds left and converted his free throw after a charging foul by Loyola's Dan Bush.

Vernon Smith added 23 points and 14 rebounds for the Aggies.

Memphis State 74, Arkansas 67

Junior Hank McDowell pumped in 18 points and ended the game with a slam-dunk to lead the fired-up Memphis State Tigers to a 74-67 victory over 19th-ranked Arkansas.

The Tigers, 6-2, used a swarming zone defense to check the Razorbacks' offense in the first half and built up a 14-point lead. Arkansas whittled the lead to four points in the second half, but the Tigers capitalized on clutch free throws in the closing minutes to clinch the win.

McDowell, a 6-8 center, also led the Tigers in rebounds, grabbing 12. Junior Greg Moore scored 15 points for the Tigers.

Arkansas, 6-2, was led by Scott Hastings and Mike Young, who each had 18 points.

The Tigers, who won their fifth straight game under new coach Dana Kirk, hit 65 percent of their field goals and scored 14 of 16 free-throw attempts in the first half. Memphis State led by as many as 18 points.

CBS To Show Golf

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS Sports will televise 20 golf events in 1980, including the Phoenix Open the weekend of the Super Bowl and the prestigious Masters in April, it was announced Friday.

CBS will broadcast the third round of the $300,000 Phoenix Open Saturday, Jan. 19, then the final round on Sunday immediately preceding the Super Bowl pre-game show and the 5 p.m. football game.

CBS will have coverage of the Masters April 12-13 for the 25th consecutive year. Other events on the schedule include the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am Feb. 23.

SMITH REHABILITATES

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — The Cleveland Cavaliers said a new operation on center Elmore Smith's knee at Centinela Hospital in Englewood, Calif., Friday was successful, and Smith may be back in action in a month or six weeks. It had been feared that Smith, who has been on the injured list since before the beginning of the National Basketball Association season, would be out the rest of the season.

Tar Heels Continue Michigan's Misery

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Matt Kupec engineered a 97-yard, third-quarter scoring drive Friday night, helping North Carolina hold on for a 17-15 upset victory over 14th-ranked Michigan in the Gator Bowl and hand the Wolverines their seventh consecutive postseason setback.

Kupec connected on six of seven passes for 49 yards in the drive and capped it with a 12-yard scoring strike to Phil Harris with just over two minutes remaining in the quarter.

Michigan drove 74 yards in the final five minutes and scored on B.J. Dickey's 30-yard pass to Anthony Carter in the end zone with 1:28 remaining. But the Wolverines failed on an attempt to tie the game with a two-point conversion when Dickey's pass bounced off Carter's hands.

Michigan then tried an onside kick, but the ball failed to travel 10 yards before being touched by a Michigan player and the Tar Heels took over on the Wolverines' 49.

The Wolverines gave North Carolina every opportunity to turn the game into a rout. They lost two fumbles and had two passes intercepted in the fourth quarter.

However, the Tar Heels only managed a 32-yard field goal by Jeff Hayes midway through the final quarter. Hayes had missed three field goal tries in the first half from 41, 31 and 53 yards.

The Wolverines lost their key offensive weapon when quarterback John Wangler, who connected on six of eight passes for 203 yards, was sidelined midway through the second quarter. He suffered ligament damage to his right knee while being sacked.

Wangler had connected with Carter on a 53-yard scoring play earlier in the second quarter.

The victory left North Carolina with an 8-3-1 record for the year and Michigan fell to 8-4, losing its third consecutive game for the first time in Coach Bo Schembechler's 11-year career with the Wolverines.

Michigan also extended its streak of never having won its final game in a season under Schembechler, including five losses to Ohio State and six in bowl competition.

Michigan's other scoring came on Bryan Virgil's 20-yard field goal in the second quarter.

North Carolina chopped the Wolverines' lead to 9-7 with just under five minutes left in the opening half on a 1-yard plunge by Doug Paschal that capped a 42-yard drive.

North Carolina had three excellent scoring opportunities early in the fourth quarter, gaining possession at the Michigan 37 following a 23-yard interception return by Larry Winters; at the 29 after Darrell Nicholson returned an interception 22 yards, and at the 22, where Paul Davis recovered a fumble.

However, it wasn't until after Davis downed a punt by Steve Streater at the Michigan 1 that North Carolina was able to take advantage of field position for Hayes' field goal that was the winning margin.

The Wolverines only reached the 3-yard line and North Carolina took over at the 32 following a punt. Kupec hit an 11-yard pass to Jeff Grey at the 17 to set up Hayes' field goal with 7:31 left in the game.

Kupec completed 19 of 28 passes for 161 yards and Amos Lawrence led the North Carolina running game with 117 yards on 22 carries.

Chaps Fall Again In Dallas Meet

DALLAS (Special) — Donnie Coffman pumped in 22 points — 16 of them in the second half — to lead Southern Arkansas to a 70-60 win over Lubbock Christian College during the second round of the Dallas Baptist Christmas Classic Friday afternoon.

The loss drops the Chaps' win-loss record to 7-11.

LCC had lost in overtime to East Texas State 72-69 in the tournament's first round Thursday.

LCC led by Keith Gardner's 20 points, got off to a bad start, hitting only three of its first 15 shots from the floor. The Chaps, who had averaged hitting 53 per cent of its field shots this season, bucketed only 9 of 31 attempts in the first half.

However, the Chaps trailed by only eight points, 33-25, at the end of the initial 20 minutes.

The Chaps managed to get within seven points of SA, 42-35, early in the second half. But Southern reeled off 11 unanswered points and gradually put the game out of reach.

Coffman ended the day by hitting 10 of 15 field shots and 2 of 4 free throws.

LCC will now meet Austin College this afternoon at 1:30 p.m. for seventh place. AC was defeated 84-70 by Prairie View Friday.

Sutton, Razorbacks Retain Winning Tradition

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
You have to wonder if Arkansas coach

ALAN ZAHN

Eddie Sutton is a man who can be taken at his word.

Just before the season was to get under way, he painted such a bleak picture that one wondered if the poor old Hogs would win even a single basketball game this year.

"We are not a good shooting team," said Sutton, "we're not a very disciplined team and we don't have a proven player who can make the big play when the game's on the line."

But, even Sutton was forced to admit that the Hogs do have some bright spots. After all, they've won or shared the SWC crown for the last three years. Last year the Hogs were 25-3 before falling in the NCAA Midwestern finals to Larry Bird and Indiana State 73-71.

"We won't be as good a starting line-up as in the past years," said Sutton, "but we've got more depth than in the past."

So where are the Hogs right now? Well, heading into Friday night's game with Memphis State, Arkansas is 6-1 and ranked 19th in the AP's Top 20. That ranking, incidentally, is the highest of any SWC school. The only blemish on the Hog ledger was a nip-and-tuck affair that they dropped to highly-regarded Louisiana State.

And with Texas A&M experiencing early-season problems, you have to rank the Razorbacks among the favorites in the conference race. Arkansas will host the red-hot SMU Mustangs next Thursday Jan. 3 to open conference play.

Sutton is looking to senior Alan Zahn to guide the young Hogs this year and fill the void left by the departure of the great Sidney Moncrief.

"We only have one senior on our squad," says Sutton. "And that's Alan Zahn. You can never underestimate the value of senior leadership."

Zahn, a 6-7 senior from Albuquerque, N.M., has lettered the last three years and seen more than just a fair amount of success. The Hogs combined record during his first three years is 83-11.

Although Zahn averaged only 6.6 points and 4.7 rebounds a game last year, he turned on the steam down the stretch when he was a 59 percent shooter. But the Hogs have plenty of folks who can score a bunch of points. Sophomore Scott Hastings started as a freshman and showed potential. He averaged 8.3 an outing and was a factor in the Hogs' appearances in the NCAA tournament.

Scott Hastings is one of the top young players in the league," says Sutton flatly. "Right now, he's our center."

Mitchell Quits Cagers

DALLAS (AP) — Leonard Mitchell, who played both football and basketball for the University of Houston this year, has decided to quit the basketball team so he can devote his full athletic talents to football.

"I've decided it's best I concentrate on football and see what happens," the All-Southwest Conference 6-foot-7, 275-pound defensive tackle said Thursday.

"I want to go through the full off-season training program in football, really work hard at it and do the very best I can next year," said Mitchell, a junior who will start Tuesday when Houston hosts Nebraska in the Cotton Bowl game.

Mitchell played in 21 basketball games last season, averaging 5.4 points and 5.6 rebounds. He played in one basketball game this season, just two days after Houston finished its regular football season.

1980: SWC Cage Outlook

At 6-10, 215 pounds, Hastings is a good-sized center. The Hogs also have inside help from freshman transfer Carey Kelley. Sutton says Kelley is still learning, but is already making a contribution to the Arkansas attack.

U.S. Reed, a 6-2 junior, returns at guard and he should lead the Hogs in scoring although he's been hampered by a thigh injury in the early going. Reed averaged 11.8 points a game last year and, along with Zahn, is expected to provide leadership.

But the Hogs have bushels of talent and, with Sutton's track record, he ought to be able to utilize his talent to the fullest extent.

"We've got a very dedicated group of young men," says Sutton. "We've been practicing longer and harder than we ever have in the past."

"I like our quickness," he added, "and I like the fact that we've won in the past. That winning experience — knowing how to win — is just something you can't underestimate."

Apparently, coach, the Hogs haven't forgotten how to win.

Owls Hope To Escape SWC Lower Depths

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

"The Schuler shuffle," says Rice coach Mike Schuler, "is gone, over — done with."

You remember the Schuler shuffle don't you? That was a little gimmick the Rice coach came up with in his first two years at the school. Under the shuffle system, the Owls would play 10-15 men a game and they would come in and out of the contest in packs of four or five.

And Schuler didn't make any bones about why he played so many men — the Owls just didn't have the talent to go five-on-five with anybody in the league.

But as Schuler heads into his third year, he says that all that has changed.

"Our incoming kids are heads and shoulders above the group we had last year," said Schuler. "We should be a better basketball team than since I've been at Rice."

"I know you people the press will pick us low," he added, "but I'm willing to bet everything I own that we will finish in the bottom two this year. We'll have a say in who wins this conference."

Well, Schuler said that back before the season started. Now, eight games later, the Owls are 2-6 and preparing for their season opener with the Houston Cougars next Thursday. And Schuler has been right about one thing — his youngsters are better than the people he had last year.

Sophomore transfer Ricky Pierce leads the team in scoring with an average of 13.5 a game. Pierce, a 6-5 transfer from Walla Walla Junior College, was wooed by nearly every SWC school before opting for the Owls.

And freshman Kenny Austin is right behind Pierce in the scoring department with a 12.5 average. Austin says Schuler may be the best basketball player the Owls have ever nabbed.

"Kenny Austin will impress you — I guarantee it," says Schuler. "That kid has moves that no coach can ever teach. He is potentially one of the outstanding forwards in the Southwest Conference."

Austin, a 6-8 forward who is also a good ball-handler, was an all-American as a high school senior and recruited nationwide.

The only other Owl to average in double figures in the first eight games is another sophomore, Bobby Burns, who's right at 10 points a game.

The other Owl starters are 6-8 sophomore Glen Rieke at the post, 6-11 soph Willis Wilson and 6-8 freshman Robert Shaw. Bobby Tudor, who averaged 11.6 as a freshman in the old man of the Owl team. He'll also play a lot in the SWC campaign. Little Tony DeCello, a 5-10 junior, has played in the last 60 Rice contests and will be looked to for leadership this year.

Schuler is full of optimism, but he's also aware that the Owls have a tough road ahead.

"We're quicker this year, we jump better and we're better defensively," he said. "But the league is just getting so good. And I think the bottom division teams in the past few years have really improved."

"That makes it tough for us to move up," added Schuler. "But if we can stay healthy and keep our poise, we'll have a say in this thing."

The Owls, explained Schuler, lost six games last year when they led in the final 30 seconds or less. Already this year,

Rice has been involved in two one-point games. They lost the first one, but in their last pre-conference game defeated Niagra 70-69 on a shot at the buzzer.

"We're still a year away," says Schuler, "but tremendous progress has been made."

CBS, ABC Continue Battle To Gain Top Spot In Ratings Race

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS and ABC continued to swap first place in A.C. Nielsen Co.'s weekly prime-time TV ratings, with CBS nudging the previous winner from the top spot in the week ending Dec. 23.

And, as in the week of Dec. 10-16, when ABC won the networks' race but CBS had the No. 1 program, "60 Minutes," CBS finished first in the most recent competition, but the top-rated show, "Three's Company," belonged to ABC.

CBS did, however, list seven of the week's most-watched programs, with two episodes of "Dallas" in the Top 10 — a Thursday night special No. 2 for the week and the regular Friday night show just a tenth of a point behind in third place.

The rating for "Three's Company" was 30.1 to 26.6 for the Thursday night episode of "Dallas." Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 30.1 percent saw at least part of the ABC comedy. CBS's rating for the week was 20.9, the highest for any network in a month, and CBS inched even closer to ABC in the networks' ratings race for the season so far.

The networks say CBS's rating means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 20.9 percent of the homes in the country with television were watching that network.

For the season to date, ABC's rating now is 19.6 to 19 for CBS and 17.8 for NBC.

NBC's last-place finish in the week ending Dec. 23 was its fourth in a row.

The week before Christmas was not typical, with several holiday specials on the networks' schedules. Regular series, nonetheless, dominated the Top 20. The only non-recurring programs in the first 20 were "The Family Man," a made-for-TV movie on CBS, No. 16, and an ABC motion picture, "Thunderball," No. 17.

ABC's "Monday Night Football" game between San Diego and Denver was among the highest-rated in the series this season, No. 8.

"60 Minutes" dipped to sixth in the ratings, but NBC's newsmagazine, "Prime Time Sunday," continued to struggle — 63rd in the ratings.

NBC, in fact, had three of the five lowest-rated shows, including "B.J. and the Bear," No. 62, and "A Man Called Sloane," No. 63. ABC's "It Happened One Christmas" finished 61st, and "Scooby Goes to Hollywood," also on ABC, was 64th.

The week's Top 10 shows:

"Three's Company," with a rating of 30.1 representing 23 million homes, ABC; "Dallas," Thursday special, 26.6 or 20.3 million, both CBS; "Friday, 26.5 or 20.2 million, both CBS; "M-A-S-H," CBS, and "Taxi," ABC both 26.1 or 19.9 million; "60 Minutes," 25.3 or 19.3 million, and "Dukes of Hazzard," 25.2 or 19.2, both CBS; "NFL Monday Night Football," 23.9 or 18.2 million, ABC; "Alice," 23.6 or 18 million, and "House Calls," 23.2 or 17.7 million, both CBS.

Official To Witness Inquiry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chairman Michael Pertschuk of the Federal Trade Commission won the right in court Thursday to participate in an FTC inquiry into whether television commercials aimed at children should be banned.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturned a district court decision that Pertschuk should be banished from the proceeding because he had spoken out on the issue in advance.

The appeals court ruled, 2-1, that Pertschuk's expressions of opinion did not prove that he had "an unalterably closed mind" on the issue.

On television's "Today" show in 1977, Pertschuk had said, "I have some serious doubt as to whether any television advertising should be directed at a 3 or 4 or 5 year old, a pre-schooler. ... We have never treated children as commercial objects in our society."

In a speech a few days later, Pertschuk said, "Advertisers seize on the child's trust and exploit it as a weakness for their gain."

As a result of those and other remarks, the Kellogg Co., Association of National Advertisers, American Association of Advertising Agencies, Toy Manufacturers of America and American Advertising Federation went to court to bar Pertschuk from the commission's proceeding.

The district court barred him on grounds he had demonstrated a bias. But the appeals court said the commission was exercising a broad policy-making role in examining whether television commercials aimed at children should be restricted.

Commissioners must be free to discuss policy issues, just as congressmen are, the appeals court said.

The commission has conducted six weeks of hearings into whether children are harmed by commercials. The average child, age 2 to 11, sees 20,000 commercials a year costing $600 million, the FTC said.

The commission is examining whether it should regulate commercials aimed at youngsters and, if so, whether it might ban them or ban commercials for sugared food products or require that commercials be balanced by nutritional commercials funded by the food industry.

The Senate Commerce Committee has voted to deny the FTC authority to act on commercials aimed at children if the action is taken on the grounds the commercials are unfair to children.

Under a bill coming up soon before the Senate, the commission could act only if it finds the commercials are false or deceptive.

December 31 To Be One Second Longer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists at the National Bureau of Standards say you'll have to hold off an extra second before popping that champagne cork on New Year's Eve.

The Commerce Department bureau in Boulder, Colo., will give Dec. 31 a "leap second" — making the day one second longer than the normal 24 hours — so that the world's most accurate clocks will be in approximate step with solar time.

Leap seconds are mandated by the International Bureau of Time in Paris whenever solar time diverges significantly from atomic clocks at the world's time laboratories. The leap second on Dec. 31 will be the ninth since June 30, 1972.

Taxpayers Requested To Pay Before Billed

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — City taxpayers are being asked to help the city by paying their 1980 property taxes before the bills are sent.

"We just want to make sure we don't have a cash flow problem next month," Chief Administrative Officer Reynard Rochon said Thursday.

He noted the city must give out more than $2.5 million in cash tenure awards to longtime city employees, as well as meeting its regular payroll. Property tax bills will go out Jan. 15, but Rochon said he hopes some people will pay before the end of 1979.

HIGH MURDER TALLY

ST. LOUIS (AP) — When 26-year old Lance Reese fell lifeless onto his front lawn with a bullet in his head Thursday night, he became the city's 284th murder victim of 1979 — the highest total in its history. This has been the most violent year ever for St. Louis, with homicides up 27 percent over last year and reported rapes up 18 percent, police statistics show.

Movie Critic Says Expensive New Disney Release Absurd, Not So Amazing

BLACK HOLE, THE (PG) — Maximilian Schell, Anthony Perkins, Robert Forster. (Sci-Fi) This is Disney's attempt to do a big, lavish space film, and millions were spent on remarkable special effects. But they use a story they probably got for $2.98. And the actors ham it up dreadfully, so the whole thing is absurd, when they intended it to be amazing. The robots are cute, though. GRADE: C-minus.

GOING IN STYLE (PG) — George Burns, Art Carney, Lee Strasberg. Drama/Comedy. Much talent is wasted on this tasteless film about three directed, and amateurishly edited, it has some good moments because of the cast. But it can't make up its mind what it intends to do, or to be. GRADE: C

"1941" (PG) — An all-star cast. "A comedy spectacle" Universal and Columbia call it. It may be the biggest disappointment in recent years. It's Steven Spielberg's attempt at comedy, set in panicky California a few days after Pearl Harbor. But the comedy is cartoon-style, done slapstick and with heavy-handed absurdities. There is no wit, style, grace. The real war was funnier. GRADE: C-minus.

ELECTRIC HORSEMAN, THE (PG) — Robert Redford, Jane Fonda. (Romantic drama) A textbook case of much ado about nothing, this is a lavish and loving production, nicely acted, artistically photographed, with great stunts — all tacked on to a flimsy, wispy story. A famous cowboy befriends a horse. And a female TV reporter (Jane Fonda plays it again) tags along. GRADE: B

KRAMER VS. KRAMER (PG) — Dustin Hoffman, Meryl Streep. (Drama) A faithful adaptation of Avery Corman's novel, this is basically the story of a court battle over custody of a young boy, and what went before and came after that battle. No villains here, merely human beings with flaws. Magnificent performances, including one by a great new child actor, Justin Henry. But it does have a tendency to poke along in spots. GRADE: A

ONION FIELD THE (R) — James

Woods, John Savage. (Drama) The true story of two hoodlums and two cops. One is killed in the inevitable confrontation, and we learn what effect that has on the three survivors. Well acted, but slow. It is based on Joseph Wambaugh's book, which was plodding; in the movie, the plot thickens. GRADE: B

Explicit Sex Movies Filmed By Ministers Cause Controversy

By PHILLIP RAWLS
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Explicit sex movies produced and filmed by ministers are causing an unholy uproar within the United Methodist Church.

Screenings of the 10 films — intended for sex counseling — are all right if the viewers are carefully selected, says the Nashville-based Board of Discipleship. But some church leaders and members disagree: they want the films discontinued.

The denomination counts nearly 10 million members in more than 38,000 churches. Debate has been churchwide, and particularly sharp in Nashville — which has about 700 United Methodist churches — since a sex forum was ordered here.

A national task force was set up to study the films and sex forums, which have been used in some parts of the country for up to seven years. The task force recommended in October that use of the films be continued as long as audiences were strictly limited.

When the Board of Discipleship approved the recommendation, five Nashville churches were so unhappy they sided their autumn apportionments to the board.

In addition, the United Methodist Laymen of Nashville voiced opposition, and Nashville's bishop and the West End Methodist Church of Nashville have appealed to the General Conference, the highest authority in the United Methodist Church, to override the board.

The General Conference, composed of lay people and church leaders, holds its quadrennial meeting in April in Indianapolis.

Robert Sullins, a leader of the West

Today's FOCUS

End church, served on the task force and voted with the minority to halt use of all but two of the sex films. He said he was also disappointed with the board's decision to back the task force.

"I felt as though the films were contradictory to the principles of the United Methodist Church, and the films were not, nor were the forums, biblically based," Sullins said.

Dr. Melvin Talbert, general secretary of the board, defended its decision. He said the human sexuality forums in which the films are shown are intended only for people who will be counseling others.

"The forum is not open to the general public," he said.

Talbert said in an interview that the board had demonstrated its concern in October by asking the church's standing Committee on Family to review the forums and films.

The family committee begins its review in February and should report to the board or its executive committee by next October, he said.

The Rev. Dr. Ted McIvenna, director of the National Sex Forum in San Francisco, is the Methodist clergyman who made most of the films.

He said some Methodist leaders objected to the films from the beginning.

"When we established the program, they wouldn't even say, 'homosexual.' They said, 'H-people

"They just assumed that anything that is sexually explicit is pornography. The films were shot and produced by Methodist ministers," he said.

In a telephone interview, McIvenna said that at least 300 people participated in test groups before the forums were started seven years ago and since then some 78,000 people have seen the films in Methodist churches on the West Coast. He said that most major Protestant denominations and many medical schools and universities use the films.

In response to a statement by Sullins that he was worried that the footage shown in the forums might end up in pornographic movie houses, McIvenna produced a contract that all film purchasers must sign.

The contract requires that the films "only be shown in religious or educational settings. The films are not sold or shown commercially," McIvenna said.

Despite such assurances, the controversy seems to be growing, with the General Conference likely to feel pressure to settle the issue.

The Rev. J. Robert Parks, pastor of Connell Memorial United Methodist Church in suburban Nashville — one of the five which withheld funds from the board — said, "We feel that we can no longer stand by in the name of Christian stewardship and support those agencies now lobbying against basic Christian morality."
