HOW TO BAKE A CAKE CALIFORNIA RECIPE

The following recipe for baking a cake is from a friend in California. It does not particularly apply to our section where butter and eggs are not strangers to our diet, but from what we hear, it is just as difficult to assemble ingredients for a cake in many parts of the country as this recipe suggests: First week you get the eggs! We don't say how, but you may know the right hens. After securing the eggs, carefully put them down in water glass because by the time you assemble the rest of the ingredients necessary for baking a cake the eggs might get a little over-ripe.

Second week you scare up the shortening. Since this is more difficult than securing eggs, this step in cake-making will take you into the third week.

Fourth week. Find a friend of a friend who has some sugar. Put this in a tightly sealed can, because your roof may be leaking and you can't get a roofer and just anything is liable to get wet.

Fifth week. Go down a back alley, rap three times and tell Tony "You know me, I'm a friend of Joe's." That will get you a quart of milk (maybe).

Sixth week. Lock your doors and pull down the shades and start mixing. If the light and gas company hasn't gone on strike by this time, you should have a cake!

(Betty Crocker, General Mills and all advertising agencies please copy and give us no more of this "in a jiffy—just whip it into the oven" stuff.

"This afternoon we will take Mr. Frog apart and see what makes him croak," said the professor to his zoology class. "I have a frog in my pocket to be used as a specimen." He reached into his pocket, and drew out a paper bag which he emptied on the table. Out rolled a badly squashed ham sandwich. The professor mopped his brow. "My goodness!" he stammered. "I distinctly remember eating my lunch."

SUCH A CARELESS BOY

Father: "Why were you kept in at school?"
Ikey: "I didn't know where the Azores were."
Father: "Well, in future, just remember where you put things."

IT'S CARNIVAL TIME IN PANAMA

—Panama National Tourist Commission PRIZE-WINNING DANCERS, dressed in the traditional Pollera, celebrate a colorful festival that dates back to the time pirates sacked Old Panama.

EVEN Panama's hard-working banana farmers lay aside their machetes when it's Carnival Time. For four carefree days and nights each Spring everyone comes to town to join in the fun.

These charmers, like all other Panama girls and women at Carnival time, wear the famous Pollera. The crowning glory of each Panamian's Pollera is her tembleque. This is a jeweled headdress made with pairs of ornamental butterflies, flowers or birds which quiver on tiny springs whenever milady moves. One girl will often wear as many as thirty pairs of these unique ornaments, which are usually made from fish scales dyed all the colors of the rainbow.

Every village furnishes a glittering spectacle while the Carnival is on. Then it's back to work. Farming and shipping bananas is the chief occupation of Panama, as it is in many of the other Middle American Republics. Bananas mature throughout the year, but each crop must be harvested at the exact moment when it is ready for shipment. Bananas cannot be stored. Rail and ship schedules must be worked out to the day—or even hour. Aboard the ships of the United Fruit Company's Great White Fleet, the fruit is quickly cooled to 57 degrees Fahrenheit. This temperature is maintained by a special system even when the banana-laden ships sail into the cooler waters of North America.

With such care and timing going into the cultivation and shipping of bananas, it is no wonder that Panamanians love Carnival time as a welcome opportunity to abandon care and relax.

"I Give You Texas"

By Boyce House

The only diamond mine in North America is in Arkansas. Your columnist visited the mine back in 1925. I hired a service car and drove over from Nashville, Ark. The highway passed through a huge peach orchard said to be the biggest in the world. Folks said it was divided up into streets and avenues so it was no trouble to find any particular worker during the picking season as a record was kept in the office and they knew he would be working on 23rd Street near Avenue M, or something like that.

The diamond mine is near Murfreesboro. The field was discovered by a farmer in 1907. As the story was told to me, the farmer was recovering from a fever and was sitting under a tree when some of the children, who were plowing, turned up a peculiar stone, which he noticed. The rock proved to be a diamond which sold for $2,500.

On the day of my visit, as we approached the town, the driver crossed a railroad track without looking in either direction. At my exclamation, he said, "Oh, they don't have but two trains a week, Monday and Thursday, and this is Saturday."

Surrounding the diamond mine was a solid fence and the gate was opened by a man who had a rifle.

Our credentials proving satisfactory, we were admitted and walked about the place with a guide. There were armed men pacing up and down close to that high board fence like sentinels. There was a sifter through which the rocks were run and the diamonds were sorted out. Your observer, was shown 20 or so and had the privilege of letting them trickle through my fingers. I sorta thought they might give me one as a trifling souvenir of my visit but they didn't—of course. I wasn't expecting a diamond of the headlight size, just a modest little half-carat one.

These were really diamonds in the rough and it would take a trained eye to see that they were precious stones just waiting to be cut and set into rings and bracelets.

No accurate figures on the total output have ever been published but the Smithsonian Institute reported in 1928 that 10,000 diamonds with a conservative value of $150,000 had been taken from the field.

PROCUREMENT OF SUPPLIES FOR VETERANS TRAINING ON THE JOB

Due to the general misunderstanding which seems to prevail concerning the procedure in furnishing supplies, tools, etc., to veterans training on the job under the provisions of Public Law 346, commonly known as the GI Bill of Rights, the following information has been furnished by P. T. Lunquist, Manager of the Veterans Administration Center, at Muskogee:

Two types of training are offered to the veteran under this act, institutional (or educational) and on-the-job training.

Where a veteran is enrolled in a course of study in an institution and attending full-time classes, the school will furnish such books and supplies as are required of other students and bill the Veterans Administration in accordance with current regulations.

Where the veteran is receiving training on the job, all supplies, tools, etc., must be purchased by a Veterans Administration employee. The veteran should not purchase tools himself as no provisions are made whereby he may be reimbursed, neither should the training establishment supply tools to the veteran until such time as they have received authority to do so in the form of a purchase order from the Veterans Administration. There seems to be a general opinion that each veteran training on the job is entitled to a specific amount for tools. There is no fixed amount allowed for any course of training on the job. What will be furnished by the Veterans Administration in any instance will depend entirely on the course of training and the requirements of the establishment. The establishment certifies that the tools requested by the veterans are the same as are required, or would be required, or be personally owned by any other individual pursuing the same training in the same establishment. In any instance the Veterans Administration Regional Office cannot purchase supplies in excess of $100.00 without prior approval from Washington.

TOM CONNALLY STATES HIS CANDIDACY FOR RE-ELECTION

Washington, D. C.—Senator Tom Connally has filed with Honor Harry L. Seay, Chairman, Democratic State Executive Committee of Texas, his application for place on the primary ballot as a candidate for United States Senator. In connection with the matter Senator Connally made following statement:

"The rumor that I might not be a candidate for re-election, would accept a high position with the United Nations Organization is wholly without foundation. I would not accept any position with the United Nations Organization in the foreign service if tendered me.

"My preference is to remain in the United States Senate where I can be of the greatest service to the people of Texas.

"I am grateful for the support of the people of Texas and have undertaken to give my best efforts representing their interests in the Senate."

Highway Patrol Pays Turkey Surprise Visit

The state highway patrol had somewhat of a "field day" in Turkey last Friday when five (including male and female) were arrested for traffic law infractions such as speeding, driving without drivers' license, etc.

According to information reaching the Enterprise, these boys will be a little more diligent in the future than in the past concerning obedience to traffic regulations hereabouts. Also that their visits will be a little more frequent and as unexpected.

Numerous warnings have been issued through and by the Enterprise about drivers' licenses. We are not warning you now, but merely offering this little bit of advice: If you do not possess a current driver's license, stay out from under the steering wheel.

Of course, that comes under the head of your business—in a way—and it may be your money that you're going to pay out to the highway patrol for the privilege of doing as you dern please; this is America! But boys and girls, both young and old, we believe you can find a much more profitable way to spend your ten bucks (plus).

English War Bride Arrives At Estelline

Mrs. Valta D. Bowman of Estelline, a native of France, is Hall county's first European war bride. She and Bowman were united in marriage December 6, 1945 at Le Harve, France and lived there until March 27. She left there March 29 for New York, arriving there April 6, and then came to Estelline where she and her husband are making their home.

Bowman, still in the army when she arrived in the States, did not make it home until last Sunday, April 21. He receives his discharge from the army at Fort Sam Houston Saturday, April 20.

"My former home was Le Harve, France," Mrs. Bowman said. "I lived in LeHarve for about 24 years. I went to college with the intention of becoming a school teacher, but the war stopped my college work.

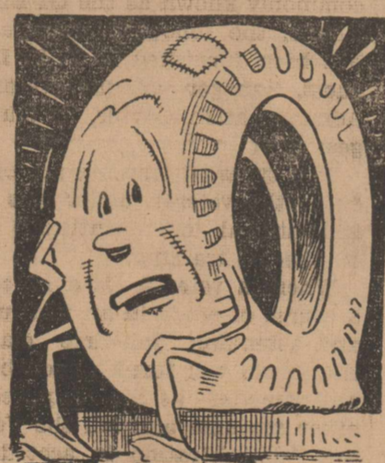

"I worked for the American army for 15 months as a secretary and teletype operator. In 1942, my home, as most of the others, was destroyed."

Mrs. Bowman, whose maiden name was Simone Canchois, says "Texas is a good state and the people are tops. I feel as if I had known them all my life.

"I speak enough English for most people to understand me, and I can understand more than I can say."

"What do you think is the trouble with farming?"

"Well," replied Farmer Bentover, "in my day when we talked about what we could raise on 60 acres, we meant corn—not loans."

I. D. MULLIN, SR., BUYS WOLF FLAT GIN

I. D. Mullin Sr., stated Wednesday that he had purchased the Wolf Flat gin, his first love, from Clayton Anderson & Co., who recently acquired the property.

"Rudy" as he is familiarly called by his friends, formerly owned and operated a gin at Wolf Flat, the plant being destroyed by fire a few years ago.

A couple of more years ago the gin now at Wolf Flat was moved to that location from Quitaque. The machinery was overhauled, new machinery installed including a new power plant, but the gin operated only part of one season.

Mr. Mullin stated that he had placed orders for new gin stands, new conveyor and other needed machinery to make the plant one of the most modern in these parts, and that he will have it in operation this fall, when the ginning season opens.

Wolf Flat is one of the biggest cotton producing areas for its size in the South, and a gin situated in that community, adjacent to its high productive land, will be a great convenience to the farmers there in the saving of time during the rush harvesting season.
