ALL THEY ASKED

DUILDING a new country was no easy job. But there were men and women willing to turn their backs on the comfortable way of life and their faces toward new frontiers. All they asked was an even break.

Free enterprise is another way of saying, "an even break." Free enterprise is the basic American principle of vision and personal initiative. Just give an American an even break-a chance to get ahead—and he'll go on from there.

In West Texas-where the "frontier" is a little more than one generation removed—the West Texas Utilities Company is recognized as a real pioneer. It opened up an "electric frontier" when in 1915 it constructed the first power transmission line in West Texas. This first transmission line, which helped pave the way for the economic growth of the area, was built by a farseeing group of business men who believed that a taxpaying, self-supporting company could best supply the enormous amounts of electric power that the development of this western empire depends on...at the lowest possible cost.

Today, that original transmission line has been expanded into a power system of 2,833 miles of high power transmission lines ... more than any other company in the Southwest ... serving 322,000 persons with dependable, low-cost electric service in a 45,000 square mile area.

The West Texas Utilities Company, in 1947, contributed more than $1,800,000 to local, state and federal governments ... paid more than $2,800,000 in wages to employee citizens of

There are still new frontiers in electric living to be opened .. and businessmen can do the job better than bureaucrats. Believing in the soundness of the "free enterprise system," the Company will spend $18,000,000 during the next four years enlarging plants and existing facilities, and building transmission lines in an all-out effort to "open" those new frontiers.
