AND PRESENT

Most of us will celebrate Thanksgiving Day as the tra ditional American family holiday, giving thanks for the blessings that have come to us and our loved ones. President Johnson, in his Thanksgiving Pro lamation, asked that all Ameriof worship to "give thanks to God for His graciousness and His gerenousrity to us, and to pray to Him that the forces of evil, indifference, intolerance and inhumanity may vanish from the face of the earth and that peace, reason, understanding and goodwill may reign supreme throughout the world.

Thanksgiving is a day of peace, of rest. Because of that, it is interesting to note that Thanksgiving Day 100 years ago marked the eve of the most ferocious military engagements ever fought in the Texas Panhandle — the so-called "First Battle of Adobe Walls.'

It was on November 24,18 64, that scouts ranging ahead of Colonel Kit Carson's force of 400 U. S. soldiers and friendly Indians discovered 4.000 to 5,000 hostile Kiowas and Comanches camped along the Canadian River in what is now Hutchinson County. This day was the second of the nationally established Thanksgiving Days as designated by President Lincoln's proclamation. but accounts of the battle indicate that no one in Carson's command was giving a thought to the occasion.

The questionnaires are expected to reach the farmers within a few days. This will allow the farmers a period of time in which to consult their 1964 farm business records in order to answer questions on the form accurately before enumerators begin calling on individual farmers to collect the juestionnaires. These visits are cheduled to start on November 27th in this county.

The purpose of Carson's campaign was to punish the Kiowas and Comanches for a series of summer and fall attacks along the lightly guarded Sante Fe trail. Colonel Carson had led his force from Fort Union. N. M., whose remains are today preserved as a National Monument north of Las Vegas, into the Texas Panhandle to attack the Indians in their winter encampment. After scouts found the hostile villages late on November 24th, the soldiers attacked at dawn the next day, driving the enemy from one village of some 170 tipis and moving swiftly eastward down the north bank of the river toward other villages sighted by the soldiers.

At the remains of an abandoned trading post-the old adobe fort which gave the location its name-Kit Carson orternoon with Mr .and Mrs. dered a halt and corraled the horses inside the crumbling Ewing. walls. It was well that he exercised such prudence for soon his command was surrounded by more than 3,000 Indian warriors who repeatedly charged the ring of troopers. The battle raged through the day and finally Carson was forced to order a withdrawal back through the destroyed Kiowa village and to the safety of the hills beyond.

Military men who studied the battle believe the U.S. soldiers might have been annihiliated, as Custer's command was to be wiped out 12 years later and 1,000 miles to the north, had not Col. Carson bolstered his cavalry and infantry with two mountain howitzers. The cannon kept the attacking Indians from concentrating their attacks and then provided the necessary support for the retreat Carson ordered late in the day.

It is believed that the battle will preach the Thanksgiving p.m.
