PRESIDENTIAL SUCCESSION

The Constitution, article II, section 1, clause 5, reads as follows:

"In Case of the Removal of the President from Office, or at his death, Resignation, or Inability to discharge the Powers and duties of the said Office, the same shall devolve on the Vice President, and the Congress may by Law provide for the Case of Removal, Death, Resignation, or Inability, both of the President and Vice President, declaring what Officer shall then act as President, and such Officer shall act accordingly, until the Disability be removed, or a President shall be elected."

This is the language of the Constitution as it was adopted by the Constitutional Convention. It will be noted that the proviso provides no replacement procedure when a vacancy occurs in the office of the Vice President. For many years there has been a continuing debate with regard to the line of succession to the Presidency as to whether or not provision should be made for a Vice President when the elected Vice President becomes President, and on the touchy issue of the meaning of the term "disability", and who is to make the determination. The Congress has undertaken to settle this debate. The Senate has passed a Resolution calling for a Constitutional amendment, and the House passed another one. The vote in the Senate was 72 to nothing. The vote in the House was 38 to 29. I cast my vote with the 29. Needless to say, I was queried endlessly as to my reasons. Here they are:

In the first instance, I have great hesitancy in tampering with the Constitution. I have said many times and I repeat that his document, although struck by the hand of man, was undoubtedly the work of God. Unless there is clear justification beyond any reasonable doubt for tampering with this document, it should not be amended. In the present case, the Congress of the United States is playing with political dynamite. The proof of the heretofore stability of the provisions as they now stand is unchallenged. On only two occasions in the history of the United States has there been a serious need for the answer to the question of disability. The first of these cases arose in 1881 when President Garfield fell victim of an assassin's bullet and lingered for some 80 days. The other was when President Woodrow Wilson suffered a severe stroke in 1919. On both these occasions there was much talk and serious questions of action. However, in both cases no action was taken although it could have been. And it might be well to point out that the Country survived and grew stronger. During the Eisenhower Administration, an informal agreement was made between the President and Vice President concerning the Vice President assuming the duties of the President and standing in a position of Acting President. This, in my opinion, is a rather dangerous proceeding. A President of the United States is elected by the people, as is a Vice President. Neither has the right or the power to traffic in the duties or responsibilities of those offices.

In all three cases above mentioned had an extreme emergency situation been created, the Congress of the United States could have acted quickly and decisively without endangering the basic concepts of government "of the people, by the people, and for the people."

The present Presidential line of succession is, in my opinion, completely sound. The President and the Vice President are both elected by the people of the entire Country. The next man in line of succession is the Speaker of the House of Representatives who is elected by the people of a Congressional District and in turn elected to the Speakership by other Members who have been elected in their respective Districts by all of the people of this Country, on a population basis, for 2 years and intended to be Members of the House of Representatives, the body of Congress closest to the people. The next man in line of succession is the President Pro Tempore of the Senate, who is elected by all of the people of one of the States and in turn elected by other Senators who have been likewise elected by each State. The line of succession then moves into the area of those previously appointed by the President and holding Cabinet status. If we in this Country change this and amend the Constitution as proposed in the Resolution adopted by the House of Representatives, we could very well be opening the door for the creation of a 20th Century Rasputin for constant schemes and plans for power grabs not in keeping with the best interests of our form of government. I hope the legislatures of this great United States will not ratify this amendment.

LOCAL STUDENTS POEMS TO BE ACCEPTED FOR PUBLICATION

Information was received last week from the National High School Poetry Press that the poems of four 8th grade speech students will be published in the next edition which is due off the press in the next few weeks, according to Supt. John Mason.

Those students whose poetry will appear in the High School Anthology are Sherry Stark, Larry Farley, Oliver Clark and Barry Johnson.

Since most of the students sent in more than one poem, it will not be known which were accepted until the new edition is off the press.

These four poems were selected from about 3,000 poems submitted by other students. Too, the most remarkable thing is that the 8th graders were competing against high school students.

Every student was required to write at least one poem and almost all students in the class submitted a poem in the contest.

NOTES FROM THE COUNTY AGENT'S OFFICE

The number of persons participating in outdoor recreation has been steadily increasing for the past several years. These people are constantly seeking more recreational facilities and services, and we have seen the influence here in Briscoe County says Leon Grosdidier, county agent.

Popular types of outdoor recreation are hunting, fishing, camping, boating, swimming, hiking and various combinations of these.

Many rural landowners in our area could adjust their resources to provide recreational facilities for the public. Individuals interested in developing private land for recreational purposes should give careful consideration to specific requirements prior to development, advises Grosdidier.

The most important factor to consider is the landowner's attitude. A recreational enterprise, in many respects, is similar to a small business which requires the operator to deal directly with the public. Other requirements are sufficient resources, good location, sound planning, good design and construction of facilities, proper financing and diligent management.

Grosdidier suggests that persons interested in entering the recreation field take a close look at these factors before investing in recreational development. Helpful publications and other material concerning recreation are available at county Extension offices the agent said.

A committee was appointed to begin work on the project. The committee members are Gladys Stroup, James Brunson, Lester Monk, Alvin Redin and Cliff Allard. The committee would appreciate having pictures of any of the early county schools and information that anyone can furnish. Get in touch with any of the above named committee members.

Stark, Jr., Mrs. Alvin Redin, Mrs. Gordon Alexander, and Mrs. Dick Hooks. The Museum Committee members are Mrs. Joe Montague, Mrs. M. G. Moreland, Mrs. Fred Lemons, Carroll Garrison, W. E. ## SCS Completes 30 Years of Work

Urgent national erosion problems led Congress to create the Soil Conservation Service within the Department of Agriculture on April 27, 1935. Prior to that time all conservation work had been done by the Department of Interior.

In 1937 the various States began to pass Soil Conservation District laws which made conservation a local responsibility. Soil Conservation Districts governed by local landowners were made possible under these laws. The primary purpose of the SCS is to provide technical service to districts.

The Can Rock SCD, which is all of Briscoe County, was organized in 1946. The present board of supervisors that govern the district are: W. E. Autry, Chairman, Silverton; James Bailey, Vice-Chairman, Quitaque; Aubrey Rowell, Secretary, Silverton; L. A. McJimsev, Member, Silverton; Joe Fdd Burnett, Member, Vigo Park.

Today 80 percent of the landowners in the Can Rock have developed Conservation plans for their land. Twenty percent of the farmers and ranchers in the district have entered into the Great Plains Conservation Program contracts to provide for all needed land treatment. Technical assistance is provided to farmers and ranchers through the Can Rock SCD by the local SCS office in Silverton.

Ten Reasons for Measles Immunization

Of the 20 million children who have never had measles, take any ten — and you've got ten good reasons for measles immunization. The illustration above suggests statistically what will happen if a vaccine isn't used. Sooner or later, almost everyone gets measles. And each one who does, according to the U.S. Public Health Service, runs a 1-in-1,000 chance of getting measles encephalitis, or inflammation of the brain.

One of every ten measles encephalitis victims dies. A higher percentage suffer permanent brain injury, with mental retardation and sight, hearing, and behavioral problems.

There are other measles complications, including pneumonia, but danger of encephalitis alone makes physicians wonder why parents subject their children to such a risk.

At a recent national conference of the United Cerebral Palsy Associations in Los Angeles, John M. Adams, M.D., professor of pediatrics at the University of California Medical School, said: "I don't understand this indifference to measles. You wouldn't take that kind of risk in an airplane. And I doubt if you would drive on the freeways with those odds."

Luther L. Terry, M.D., surgeon general of the U.S. Public Health Service, has pointed out that last year nearly 500 American children died from measles. Measles causes more deaths annually than any other infectious disease of childhood.

Noting that safe measles vaccines are now available, Dr. Terry said: "I urge all parents of children who have not had measles to see their physicians or health departments about measles vaccination without delay. Let's immunize the children of America against their enemy, measles."

Mrs. George Brunson and Jerry.

Mr. and Mrs. B. K. Hamilton and Mr. and Mrs. Donnie Brunson, Roger and Debbie visited Bobby Brunson in Groom Memorial Hospital Sunday.

Mrs. Bud Bailey, Charlene and Janet were in Floydada Wednesday where Janet was fitted for glasses.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

BY Joan M. Worden

PINE CLEANER INFORMATION CENTER

How's your housekeeping IQ? Gallup interviewers took a survey recently of women across the country to find the answers to these questions:

Q.1. Do you think a household cleaner should also act as a disinfectant, as a deodorant, or both?

Q.2. Have you, yourself, changed from a non-pine oil type of general household cleaner or disinfectant to a pine oil brand within the last year or two, or not?

Q.3. In buying a general household cleaner or disinfectant, how important to you is it that it contains pine oil?

Q.4. Why do you feel that way?

Q.5. Do you use disinfectants in your home, or not?

Q.6. For what purpose do you use them? Are there any other uses you have found for a disinfectant?

Now how do your answers match up with those of the women in the survey? Here's what they had to say:

A.1. Three out of four women today think that a household cleaner should also act both as a disinfectant and as a deodorant. In addition, about one woman in six thinks a household cleaner should also act as a disinfectant.

A.2. One out of every ten women say they have changed from non-pine oil type of general household cleaner or disinfectant to a pine oil brand within the last year or two.

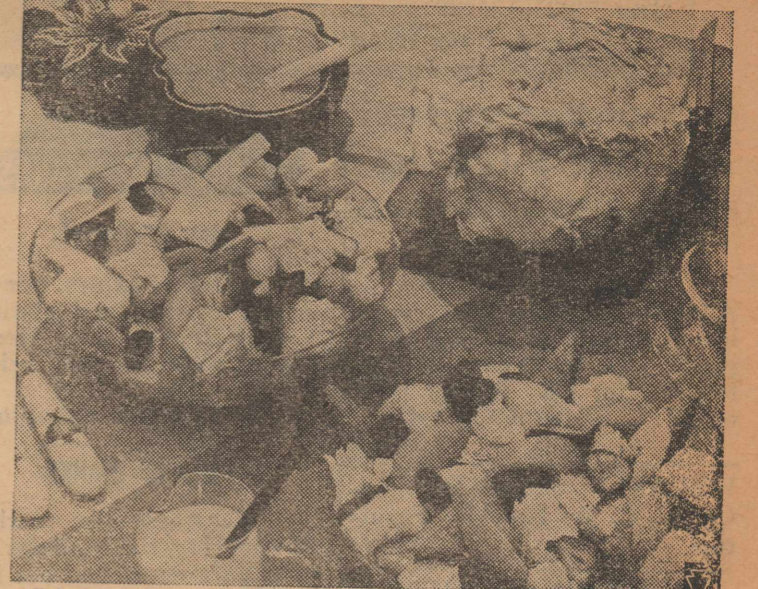

A.3. One out of seven women say that it is "very important" to them that it contains pine oil.

A.4. Pine oil gives a cleaner than clean smell, it improves the cleaning power of a cleaner, it kills germs, it makes a cleaner a disinfectant also, and "I like pine oil."

A.5. 83% use disinfectants in their homes.

A.6. The principal purpose for which a disinfectant is used in the home is to clean the bathroom; the next most widely-mentioned use is to kill germs.

New Approach to Fanciful Salads

Salads to fit your fancy — that's the beauty of "As-You-Like-It Iceberg Salad." It can be a vegetable salad or a fruit salad. Either way, it has a base of crisp, chilled bite-size chunks of western iceberg lettuce and a dressing featuring real mayonnaise. What refreshing ways for warm days!

Since spring-time and summer-time are definitely salad-time, make sure there's always a firm head of western iceberg and a jar of real mayonnaise in your kitchen to spruce up a bevy of salads and sandwiches.

The planting of soybeans in the High Plains of Texas is increasing each year. The constantly expanding domestic and foreign markets make this an attractive crop in this area. Farmers are requesting information on the best methods of planting and care of this crop which is new to many operators.

Barry Love, Agronomist, and Jack Werner, Associate Agronomist at the High Plains Research Foundation, were interviewed regarding these questions. Their suggestions were as follows:

"Prepare the seed beds as for cotton and grain sorghum with soybeans planted on top of the bed. Where possible, registered or certified seed should be used. The purity and germination of the seed should be determined before purchase. All soybean seed should be inoculated thoroughly with soybean inoculum."

Four years testing at Halfway have shown no economic response from use of fertilizer in any combination. A few farmers have claimed responses and in most instances the land used was of a low fertility level. There are indications that soybeans respond to fertilizer applied to the crops planted preceding soybeans in rotation.

The varieties best adapted to the area are the HINN, Hill and Lee. The soybeans should be planted May 15 to June 7 in the northern area of the High Plains and the first two weeks in June in the southern High Plains. The seeding rate under irrigation should be 60 pounds of seed per acre in single rows, 38 to 40 inches apart, and up to 80 pounds in double rows on 40-inch beds or single rows when spaced at 26 inches apart. The plant population will be less for the HINN variety due to the larger seed size, but the branching characteristics will take advantage of this space. Due to the latter characteristic, HINN variety does best with single-row planting and should not be planted in double rows. The seed should be planted one inch deep in the heavier soils and up to two inches in depth in the lighter soils."

"The lister planter or any other type row crop planter or grain drill may be used in planting. Larger plates for soybeans should be used. The seed should be checked for any splitting damage after they leave the planter. The cut off lever sometimes splits the beans and should be removed.

The soybeans can be cultivated with a conventional sweep cultivator used with other crops and the rotary hoe is highly effective from pre-emergence until the plant is five to eight inches tall.

Some method of weed control should be used until soybeans reach sufficient height to completely shade the drill area. Flame cultivation can be successfully used when the soybeans are 8 to 10 inches tall or taller. The weeds should be 1½ to 2 inches in height (or less). Treflan has been cleared by the F.D.A. for use in pre-emergence application to control weeds in soybeans. This chemical is also

"I Like My Way Better"

Gardeners have often lamented that the toughest tasks always seem to crop up when you're least ready for them. Heavy fall showers invariably hit before all the leaves have been raked, the strongest winds always blow just as you're seeding the lawn and, worst of all, the earth seems heaviest in the spring, when the winter lay-off has softened your muscles.

There's something new on the gardening horizon, however, that promises to ease the burden of spring preparation and simplify the necessary mid-season cultivating so necessary for an attractive and productive garden. Just as power saws took much of the work out of carpentry, a new electric hoe introduced this spring will lighten the gardener's load.

Equipped with a dual speed control for proper tilling or cultivating, the new hoe will dig a full six-inch wide swath through the earth to a depth of three inches. Its eight tines, made of high-carbon steel, were designed to rotate at just the right speed — fast enough for good ground-breaking of a large area in a short period of time, but not so fast that they'll throw earth any significant distance.

Working with the new hoe, named the Starlight Model 3320, any gardener, amateur or professional, can make quick work of the tedious, make-ready part of gardening and devote more time to the fun part; planting and watching things grow. A seven-foot, grounded three-wire cord assures complete safety of the tool, even in damp ground, and can easily be connected to readily available extension cords for complete freedom of movement.

Portable Electric Tools, Inc., the Geneva, Illinois, firm that makes the hoe, also manufactures an electric hedge trimmer and an edger-trimmer for lawn use. Looks like "electric gardening" is here to stay.
