CONGRESSMAN WALTER ROGERS'
WASHINGTON REPORT

COMMUNIST OFFICER OF LABOR UNION

Archie Brown, an open and avowed Communist for more than a quarter of a century, served on the executive board of Local 10 of ILWU in 1959, 1960, and 1961. In 1961 he was indicted for "knowingly and wilfully serving as a member of an executive board of a labor union . . . while a member of the Communist Party, in wilful violation of Title 29, United States Code, Section 504."

A jury found Archie guilty and he was sentenced to six months imprisonment. The Court of Appeals held that Section 504 of Title 29 USC violated the First and Fifth Amendments to the Constitution, and reversed the conviction. The case was presented to the Supreme Court. That Court, in an opinion written by Chief Justice Warren on June 7, 1965, held that the statute was a bill of attainder and therefore violated Article I, Section 9, of the Constitution, and affirmed the decision of the Court of Appeals setting aside the conviction.

This was a split decision, being five for setting aside the conviction and four dissenting. The following Justices: White, Clark, Harlan, and Stewart disagreed with the conclusions of Chief Justice Warren and the other four members of the Court.

The Archie Brown decision will, in my opinion, go down in the history of this country as one of the most infamous decisions rendered by the Supreme Court. It will, I hope, create enough furor throughout the country to force remedial action.

Those of us in the Congress who have long challenged the advisability of the absolute power in the Supreme Court to declare acts of Congress unconstitutional look upon this decision as a perfect example of the tragedy against which we have long warned. The decision is this case, to set free a well-known and avowed Communist who had openly and flagrantly violated a Federal law, was based primarily on a misconception and a misrepresentation of the term "bill of attainder." I have long argued that, if this can be done, there is no limit to the power of the Supreme Court of the United States. Such decisions are final and not appealable.

It is interesting to note that the Court stated: "We do not hold today that Congress cannot weed dangerous persons out of the labor movement, any more than the Court held in Lovett that subversives must be permitted to hold sensitive government positions. Rather, we make again the point made in Lovett: that Congress must accomplish such results by rules of general applicability. It cannot specify the people upon whom the sanction it prescribes is to be levied. Under our Constitution, Congress possesses full legislative authority, but the task of adjudication must be left to other tribunals."

The difficulty lies in the fact that every time Congress exercises its legislative authority in this field, the Supreme Court declares it unconstitutional.

This problem can be solved by the people, through a Constitutional Amendment limiting the power of the Supreme Court with regard to declaring legislative acts unconstitutional. In the meantime, those of us who have long sought a solution short of amending the Constitution, will continue to search for means and methods through statutory provision to stop the dangerous course represented by the decision in the case of the United States vs Archie Brown.

BOXING PROBE UNDERWAY BEFORE HOUSE COMMERCE COMMITTEE

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (Special) — Congressman Walter Rogers will take part this week in a three-day investigation of professional boxing scheduled by the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. The committee, of which Congressman Rogers is a ranking member, will consider a proposed legislation to establish a Federal Boxing Commission.

Congressman Rogers said Chairman E. William Henry of the Federal Communications Commission would be the first witness to be called. Other witnesses will be persons familiar with various phases of professional boxing.

The hearings will be conducted Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday.

"The Commission proposed in legislation before the committee would have power to prevent the televising of interstate commerce by wire or by radio of any boxing event which the commission has determined to be in any way affected by bribery, collusion, racketeering and so forth," Congressman Rogers said.

Legislation in the matter was introduced May 27 immediately following the Clay-Liston bout in Lewiston, Maine.

The other major House committee on which Congressman Rogers serves, the House Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs has scheduled a general discussion for Wednesday on the adequacy of the nation's silver supply and reserves.

After what Congressman Rogers termed 'a bitter wrangle,' the House Rules Committee on Thursday cleared the way for action this week by the full House of Representatives on the "Voting Rights Bill of 1965."

Tuesday night's contest with the league - leading Panthers looked for awhile like the Matador team might turn the game into a rout before the Quitaque boys sort of settled down and began to play pretty good baseball.

The first inning was scoreless, but in the second inning, Matador scored 5 runs on a walk, 2 hits and 2 errors. LARGE QUITAQUE GROUP TO ATTEND LUBBOCK CONVENTION

The Quitaque Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses is especially pleased to announce 23 of its local members will be attending the "Word of Truth" District Assembly, most of these attending at the Lubbock Fair Park Coliseum the last part of July.

Among those attending is Mrs. Mollie Kitchens of Quitaque. What makes this unusual is Mollie is 78 years of age and although having frequented such conventions for 40 years, is not about to miss this one.

Explaining why she was traveling so far to attend the convention, Mrs. Kitchens said,

"I've never missed one of these conventions before when I was younger and do not plan to do so as long as I can get around. In fact, attending conventions keep me from getting 'rusty' spiritually and this is something I can control."

Mrs. Kitchens will not be the only elderly one from the Quitaque Congregation as others are planning to be in attendance too.

"These conventions of Jehovah's Witnesses always mean so much to me," Mrs. Kitchens went on to explain. "There you will see youths as well as persons of advanced years seated side by side taking in Bible instruction. Often you will see entire families of several generations present."

The convention will draw delegates from Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Kansas principally with a peak of 6,000 expected for the July 22-25 conclave.

Therefore will we also serve the Lord, for he is our God.—(Josh. 24:18).

We can meet any change in our life and affairs by holding steady with God. We can look to Him for inspiration and guidance and He will lead us in ways that bring success and soul-satisfaction.

Knock Out Weeds The Easy Way

Weeds are real lawn and garden culprits. They siphon food and water from the soil and restrict growth of grass and adjacent plants. They give the lawn and garden a slovenly appearance. And sometimes they shade seedlings from precious light needed to manufacture food.

In the garden, you can cut down weeding by mulching around plants with organic material such as peat moss, finely ground compost or grass clippings. Besides discouraging weeds, a mulch conserves moisture, keeps root systems cooler in hot weather and makes flower beds more attractive.

Weeds are not the cause of a poor lawn but the result of one. Weed seeds often live in the soil for years and then, when conditions are favorable, they sprout and grow rapidly. By mowing, watering and fertilizing regularly you can promote the growth of the desirable grasses — leaving few places for weeds to sprout. The aim in weed control, of course, is to establish a thick, vigorous-growing turf that will keep weeds from invading in the first place.

While the time-honored method of hand grubbing is still an effective way to control weeds, once they have started, it is time consuming and usually just plain drudgery. The National Sprayer & Duster Association suggests that an easier, more efficient approach is to let chemistry do the work for you. You can start off with a pre-emergent treatment on crabgrass, then, as needed, follow up with post-emergence weed killers, such as 2,4-D.

Success with chemical weed killers depends a lot on knowing which one to use and how to use it. One essential is to follow manufacturer's directions carefully. From early spring through early summer is the most effective time to apply them.

Weed killers come as sprays or granules. You will find that sprays are generally more economical and provide more thorough coverage. It's hard to beat the compressed air sprayer for weed control. With its adjustable nozzle and its ability to work in close, you can place the spray accurately. Air compressed above the liquid discharges the spray. You can purchase sprayers in tank sizes from 1½ to 5 gallons; a larger tank, of course, will save frequent refillings. You can buy one mounted on wheels, or get an inexpensive cart to move the sprayer about the lawn. Accessory booms with two or three nozzles are also available. They give fast, accurate coverage. For more extensive lawns, a small power sprayer will provide versatile equipment for effortless spraying.

Crabgrass is about the pestiest lawn weed. It's an annual that takes off in its growing spree in the summer, but turns brown and dies in fall, leaving bare spots during winter and early spring. And like other weeds, its seeds can remain for years and still sprout when temperatures are warm enough. There are several crabgrass killers available under various trade names. A pre-emergent crabgrass preventer, which you can apply to an established lawn in early spring, before weeds sprout, will destroy germinating seeds in top layer of soil. Usually one lawn application is enough. As soon as broadleaved weeds appear in the lawn, use a 2,4-D or similar weed killer to eliminate them. By catching these rascals while they're young, they will do less damage. Usually spot control will take care of the broadleaved lawn weeds, unless they are too numerous.

Where weed infestations are widespread, it is best to spray the entire lawn thoroughly. Use fan nozzles designed to spray from less than 20 inches. With the nozzles set to apply coarse droplets at low pressure, just enough for a clean pattern, you will get uniform wetting and minimum drift. Apply weed killer on a calm day, preferably when the temperature is between 70° and 85°.

It is best to set aside one sprayer to use only on lawns. Even after you have cleaned a sprayer used to apply a wetting killer, there may be enough residue left to injure some of the more delicate garden plants. But you can apply liquid plant foods and pesticides to lawns with a weed sprayer. It is necessary, however, to keep the spray from drifting onto ornamentals and vegetables.

well is located thus not wasting any of the water. In most cases where a farmer has put in a multiple-purpose well, the lake bottom has been modified for drainage. In this method, much of the land that had been in the lake bottom can be used to grow crops. For further information in regard to artificial recharge, contact the High Plains Research Foundation, Post Office Drawer 2200, Plainview, Texas.

How To Enjoy Bug-Free Outdoor Living

Summertime is outdoor living time. It's the time for barbecues on the patio, splash parties in the pool—or just stretching out in a lawn chair, relaxing with family and friends. To enjoy scratch-free, slip-free outdoor relaxation, you can get rid of those insects that constantly annoy or bite you.

A good start is to eliminate places where insects breed. If possible, drain all stagnant water in the area. Check especially for stopped-up roof gutters, favorite breeding places for mosquitoes. Also remove decaying lawn clippings and garden refuse, ideal breeding places for biting flies.

Complete your insect control program by using pesticides. The most effective way to control pests is to apply a light, residual coat of pesticide on the surfaces where they rest. Mosquitoes rest during the day in the cool of shrubs, hedges, flowers and lawn. Spray or dust these places and also walls and fences up to 6 or 8 feet in height. Be sure you get under the leaves of plants, favorite resting spots. Spray or dust under the porches and crawl spaces. Treat garbage cans and compost piles, places where flies breed.

Avoid getting pesticides in the bird bath, fish pond or on surfaces where food will be handled or served. If not washed off, coatings will remain effective for weeks. The best time to spray or dust is in the morning or evening when the air is calm. Also the dew on foliage helps dusts stick better.

Which is better—spraying or dusting? Either is effective, and many homeowners do both. Spraying is more popular because it is easier to put pesticide where you want and get overall coverage. Dusting has the advantage of being already mixed. A duster is handy for quick touch-up jobs.

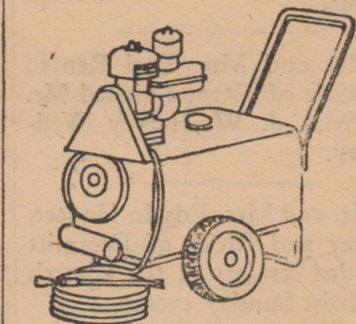

One of the most popular sprayers for outdoor insect control is the compressed air sprayer. This versatile sprayer (it can be used for most all yard and garden spraying) has a tank which holds 1½ to 4 gallons. A few strokes of the pump builds a head of compressed air in tank so that you can spray for an extended period without repumping. It has a long discharge set consisting of a hose and extension tube with nozzle. Usually the nozzle can be adjusted for both spray pattern and the angle of discharge. The sprayer can be carried by hand, over-the-shoulder with a strap, or mounted on a handy, 2-wheeled cart.

If you want extra spraying convenience or have a larger area to treat, investigate a power sprayer. A power sprayer not only has a large tank capacity (10 to 50 gallons and over), but it also provides a constant pressure which drives spray into foliage for thorough coverage. By eliminating hand-pumping, it does most of the work; it also does the job much faster. Multi-nozzle booms of broad-pattern nozzles are available to further speed up the job on the lawn or plants.

Dusters are available from handy types which hold about a pound of dust to crank-operated models which hold up to 15 pounds and will cover large areas quickly. By applying the proper pesticide, making sure you follow directions on the label, you safely and effectively these troublesome insect and then you'll agree—living is great!
