Somoza resigns, flees to Florida

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Anastasio Somoza, toppled by revolution, resigned early today and flew in his private jet to exile in Florida, ending 42 years of dictatorship by his family.

Thousands of Nicaraguans in 26 guerrilla-held cities danced in the streets all night, drinking wine and rum as church bells pealed.

Somoza and dozens who fled with him landed at a U.S. air base in Florida, then went by motorcade to his palatial estate, where Somoza told a news conference: "I am a realist and I hope that the best thing for my people would be for me to resign... I am very happy to be in the United States of America as a political exile."

Administration sources in Washington said a U.S. Navy amphibious assault ship carrying helicopters and 19 soldiers was off the east coast of Nicaragua — but beyond sight of land — in case there was need to evacuate Americans.

Members of the Nicaraguan Congress elected the president of their lower house, Francisco Urcuyo, to succeed Somoza, but Urcuyo, 54, was expected to serve only until the arrival from neighboring Costa Rica of the provisional junta named by the Sandinista guerrillas.

The Sandinistas, in a successful seven-week rebellion, fought Somoza's national guard to a standstill and toppled the onetime strongman in the largest but most thinly populated Central American state. Somoza was still in the air en route to Florida when junta member Sergio Ramirez Mercado announced in Costa Rica that the new Nicaraguan government would ask the United States to extradite Somoza to stand trial for crimes against the Nicaraguan people, including corruption and human rights violations.

U.S. officials said Somoza landed at Homestead Air Force Base near Miami at 9:50 a.m. Defense Department spokesman Thomas Ross said an initial group of three planes brought in 70 Somoza aides and relatives. Administration sources said other planes were en route.

Base guards said the group left the air base by motorcade, escorted by the Florida Highway Patrol, and headed for Somoza's estate on Sunset Island. The motorcade brought with it crates of food, sacks of potatoes and cases of soft drinks, the guards said.

Nicaragua has more land area than Florida, but has a population of 2.5 million, little more than one-third that of Florida's 6.8 million. It has coasts on both the Atlantic and Pacific sides of Central America.

The Sandinistas began as a Marxist-Leninist movement and still have in their ranks pro-Cuban elements. But they have also split into three factions, promised free elections, appointed a cabinet representing a broad spectrum of opinion and indicated that U.S. business interests in Nicaragua will be allowed to continue operations. An aide reported the 53-year-old ex-president took a helicopter from downtown Managua to the international airport at 4 a.m. (6 a.m. EDT), then boarded his plane for Homestead Air Force Base, which the U.S. State Department ordered sealed off Monday night.

Hundreds of people in the rebel-held town of Jinotepe, 35 miles south of Managua, took to the streets in celebration as news of the resignation spread at 2:30 a.m.

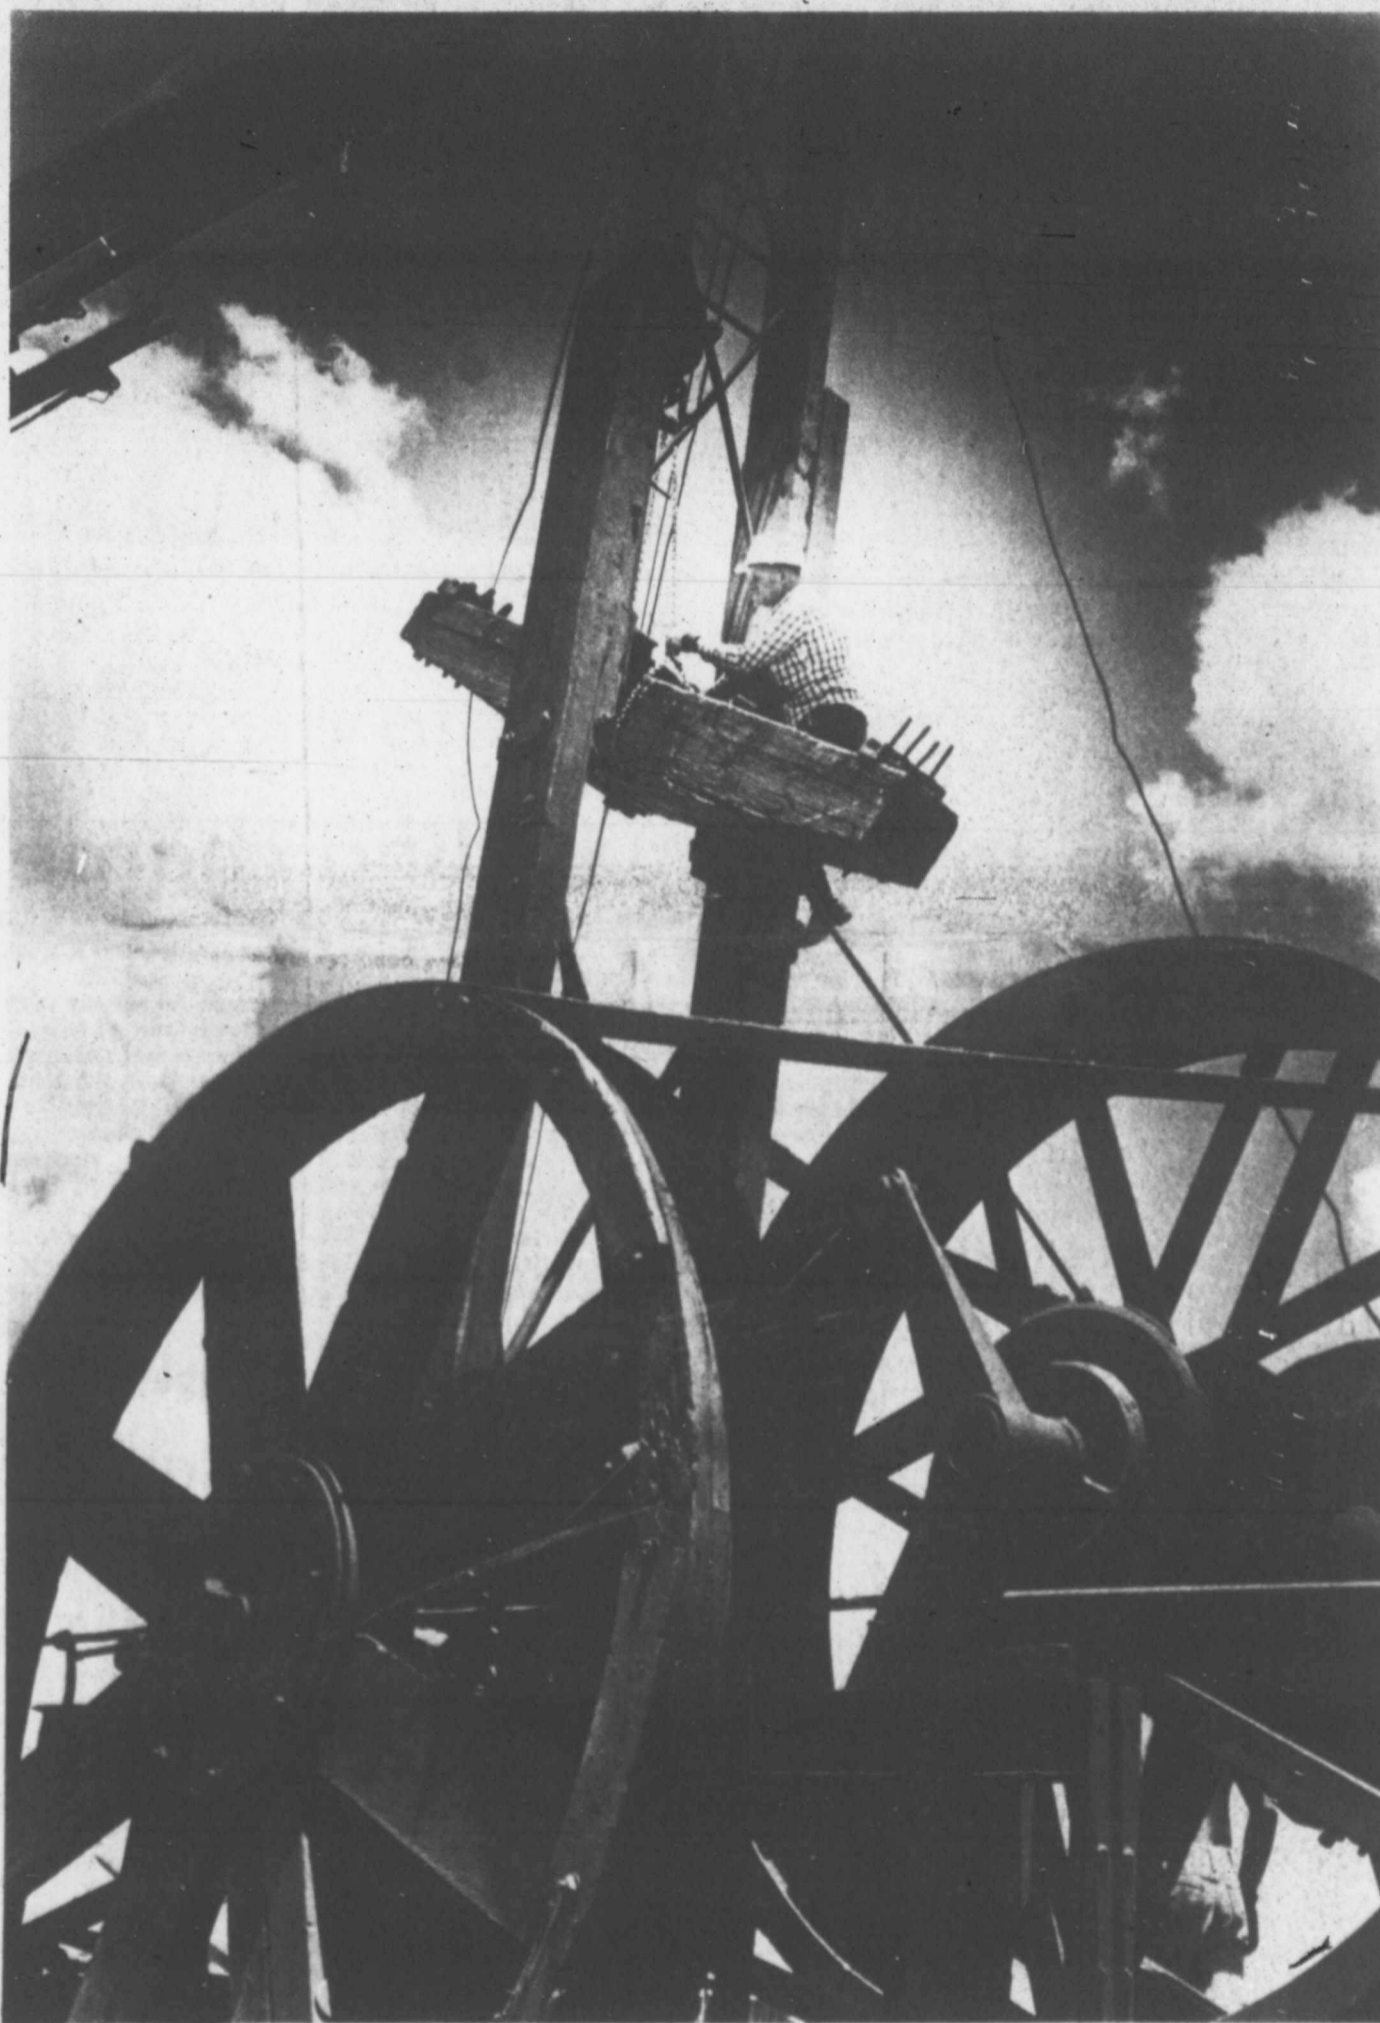

The Carter administration had been urging Somoza to quit for weeks, but the State Department had no immediate comment on his resignation.

Commissioners work out own county salary policy

By BILL MODISETT
Staff Writer

A change in Midland County's policy concerning pay raises and salaries for county employees and elected officials may be forthcoming, but it won't be the change envisioned by the Midland County Salary Evaluation Committee.

County commissioners met Monday in a budget study that encompassed a discussion of the committee's salary recommendations and virtually rewrote the committee's plans.

What commissioners did was restructure the county's policy on pay raises with an eye toward upgrading salaries and keeping qualified county employees. But most of the committee's recommendations fell by the wayside.

The committee, headed by Midland attorney Ted Kerr, criticized the county's salaries as top low and made sweeping recommendations for upgrading salaries to prevent turnover of qualified county employees.

The committee also recommended salaries of elected officials be raised.

Specifically, the committee suggested that an amount representing 6.26 percent of the total employee payroll be budgeted for individual salary adjustment in 1980, that salaries of elected officials be raised to 1971 levels of buying power and that a full-time personnel director-purchasing agent be employed by the county.

While no action was finalized Monday, commissioners essentially disagreed with those recommendations.

Another suggestion from the committee — to provide salary increases more frequently for county employees — was viewed more favorably by the county fathers.

First item to go down the drain was employment of a purchasing agent-personnel director.

County Judge Bill Ahders seemed to favor the recommendation, saying, "We've had some qualified people consider this and I think we should give some serious thought to their recommendations."

But Commissioner Charlie Welch argued that he felt a personnel director would be of little benefit.

Commissioner Durward Wright expressed concern over finding office space for a personnel director and

Carter makes appeal for bipartisan support

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter appealed today for bipartisan congressional support for his energy proposals, and said he wants enactment of his proposed "windfall profits" tax before Congress begins its August recess.

Carter's comments were reported by Democratic and Republican congressional leaders who attended a White House breakfast meeting with the president.

House Democratic Whip John Brademas of Indiana said there appeared to be "significant bipartisan support" for the president's energy proposals. Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia was quoted as telling Carter the mood of Congress and the country was for action.

But Brademas said some Republicans were less than enthusiastic about parts of the president's program, including the windfall profits tax and a proposed Energy Security Corporation to spur the search for new energy sources.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said he was unhappy that Carter had "left the private sector out too much" from his energy plans.

Brademas, however, predicted approval of oil taxes and a standby gasoline rationing plan before Congress recesses Aug. 4.

Assistant Senate Republican Leader Ted Stevens of Alaska said Carter wants Congress to give him "the broadest possible" authority to ration gasoline in the event of a national emergency, without provision for a congressional veto — a condition not likely to sit well with many legislators.

The House already has approved the windfall profits tax Carter wants on the oil industry, but it is not clear how swiftly the Senate is prepared to act.

The House is expected to vote before the recess on gasoline rationing, which the Senate approved earlier this year. The original Carter rationing plan was defeated by the House in May.

The president also was reportedly planning to hold high-level talks on personnel changes that could find long-time aide Hamilton Jordan with more authority over the White House staff. The Washington Star today quoted White House sources as predicting domestic adviser Stuart Eizenstat and press secretary Jody Powell also would be given more power in the expected staff shake-up.

The president's Sunday speech was forceful, clear and

"I guarantee if you join me we will have the greatest nation on earth, like we always have."

eloquent, Sen. Alan Cranston of California, the second-ranking Senate Democrat, said Monday.

But Republican Sen. S.I. Hayakawa of California said Carter's address, "like most Sunday sermons," would be forgotten in a day's time.

In a question-and-answer session with union members in Detroit Monday, Carter acknowledged he has lost close touch with ordinary citizens.

"I've learned my lesson," he told the annual convention of the Communications Workers of America.

He declared he would spend more time listening to Americans everywhere and said that in the 1976 campaign, "I had to do that or I wouldn't have been elected."

And he exhorted his audience to work with him in meeting his energy goals and promoting national unity. "I guarantee if you join me we will have the greatest nation on earth, like we always have."

Earlier, before the National Association of Counties in Kansas City, Mo., he declared, "We can and will regroup."

And, inviting questions in Detroit, he promised to "open the government process so that the fresh air of America can blow through Washington."

Auto insurance may go up 15%

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Insurance Board is expected to receive a staff report Wednesday recommending a statewide average car insurance increase of between 10 percent and 15 percent.

But board member Lyndon Olson said Monday the board will closely examine the assumptions made by the rating formula before making a final decision.

The result could be a smaller increase than staff actuaries arrived at with their usual rating methods.

The staff recommendations will be presented at a conference Wednesday to set the ground rules for the Aug. 1 statewide car insurance hearing.

Rate proposals from the insurance industry are expected to be in the range of 20 percent to 25 percent.

The board raised rates 3.2 percent last November, the first statewide increase in two years.

Olson said he and the board's new chairman, William Daves, "are taking a really hard look at the way we set insurance rates."

"We want to know what that formula says. ... If we use investment income, we want to know how we use it. If not, we want to know if we should," Olson said.

For about a decade, the board has formally recognized that insurance company earnings consist not only of policyholders' premiums but also of income from investing those premiums.

But the board has generally applied investment income merely to "test the adequacy of" the rates, which allow about 2.5 cents of the premium dollar for after-taxes profit.

The board also held a hearing during the spring on whether insurance companies' actual Texas expenses should be substituted in the rating formula for the nationwide expense estimates now used.

No action followed that hearing, but Olson said he and Daves also wanted to consider changing the expense allowance in the formula. A reduced, expense allowance would have a tendency to cut rates.

Clint Dare, manager of the Texas office of the Insurance Information Institute, said he expected this year's rate recommendations by board actuaries to parallel the inflation rate.

The insurance industry's figures traditionally are higher because they make greater allowance for inflation.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's mother had been a widow for a long time. About two years ago she married a nice-looking, quiet man none of us knew. They live only a few miles from us but we never visit them, and neither do any of her other four children who live in this area. The reason is one you will probably not believe: Mom's husband smells like he hasn't had a bath in 50 years! I am not kidding. Their house is an absolute pigsty; every piece of furniture in the place smells to high heaven. Nobody cares to eat or drink in their house because the smell spoils their appetite.

Mom was in the hospital for three weeks recently, and every day we'd take her husband to the hospital with us (it's a 25-mile drive). He smelled so bad we had to keep all the car windows open.

My husband even told him flat out that people were complaining, and to please clean himself up, but he got mad and refused to do anything about it.

Study outlines cancer risk

NEW YORK (AP) — A new study says women who use estrogen after menopause run almost no increased risk of getting cancer of the uterus if they use the drug for two years or less.

The study is the first to examine in detail the relation between cancer risk and how the drug was used.

It supported earlier findings that the long-term use of estrogen to replace declining levels of female hormone after menopause seems to make women more likely to get the cancer, which strikes 37,000 American women a year.

But it said that women who used the hormone less than two years seemed to have very little or no increased risk of cancer.

Drs. Noel S. Weiss, Daniel Szekely and Dallas English of the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center in Seattle and Dr. Abraham Schweid of the Group Health Cooperative of Puget Sound published the study in this week's Journal of the American Medical Association.

They compared 322 Seattle-area women who had cancer of the uterus to 289 who did not.

Weiss said the findings suggest that women can use estrogen with relative safety for a year or two to combat the "hot flashes" and other temporary discomforts of menopause.

Victims of A-bomb's fallout taking government to court

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Thirty-four years after the explosion of an atomic bomb, hundreds of angry cancer victims in the path of fallout from dozens of nuclear tests are taking the government to court. Many of the victims believe the Atomic Energy Commission lied to them when it said during the 1950s that dirty clouds of fallout drifting eastward from Nevada would do them no harm. Former Interior Secretary Stewart L. Udall, representing nearly 700 cancer victims or their heirs in Utah, Nevada and Arizona, said he plans to file federal court suits in the three states, possibly by the end of the month. The lawsuits will seek federal compensation for residents downwind who allege radiation from atmospheric bomb tests between 1951 and 1962 caused their cancer. "There's no doubt in my mind that the best strategy is to pursue this aggressively in the courts at the same time members of Congress are pressing for action in Congress," Udall said.

Many of his clients are terminal patients, Udall said. "That to us is a very compelling argument that the government should not make us go to court for five years." A bill introduced last week by Rep. Gunn McKay, D-Utah, seeks to open the way for government compensation to alleged fallout victims by admitting government liability in certain kinds of cancer in the fallout area. It would permit compensation to be set by the federal courts. McKay said he hopes the House Judiciary Committee will hold hearings on the bill this fall. Those persons represented by Udall and two other attorneys have filed claims with the Department of Energy seeking hundreds of millions of dollars in damages. The agency has six months in which to respond before lawsuits can be filed. Udall said White House attorneys told him in June it would be several months before the matter could be adequately studied and presented to President Carter for a decision.

Ugandans starving travelers report

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — More than 300 people have starved to death in northeast Uganda in recent months and tens of thousands are suffering from malnutrition, travelers arriving from there reported today.

The sources said hungry Karamojong tribesmen are using hundreds of machine guns, bazookas and grenades looted from the army barracks at Moroto to raid herds of neighboring tribes. The Karamojong are the dominant cattle-raising tribe along the borders of Sudan and Kenya.

Max Choudry, a cabinet member before Idi Amin overthrew President Milton Obote in 1971, estimated after touring the region that Amin's soldiers had reduced the Karamojong herds to about 500,000 head, or about half their normal size, by taking the cattle and selling them elsewhere in the country.

Choudry said the food shortage was aggravated by three years of drought in the normally semi-arid region and years of neglect during Amin's time in power, when programs to control cattle disease were halted and water holes were allowed to silt up.

Red Cross officials said many Karamojong have moved south and west to seek water. They said the Red Cross expected to be sending relief supplies within a few days. The government was reported providing limited amounts of corn meal.

Mobster buried in simple service

NEW YORK (AP) — Mob leader Carmine Galante was buried with a simple seven-minute graveside prayer service after Roman Catholic Church officials refused to allow a requiem Mass.

But the Rev. Felician Napoli, a priest at St. Anthony's Church in Little Italy, said he conducted the prayer service Monday with the church's permission as an act of charity.

"Bless this grave and send your angels to watch over it. Forgive the sins of our brother whose body we bury here," Napoli intoned to the 60 mourners gathered in muggy summer heat at St. John's Cemetery in Queens.

Several distraught female mourners, including Galante's daughter, Nina, had to be supported to prevent their collapse.

Galante — who reputedly led one crime organization and was trying to take over the territory of other crime families — was gunned down last Thursday.

New rules would put halt to hogging

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The State Board of Control wants to discourage state employees from hogging on-street parking spots while leaving vacant their $3-a-month reserved spaces.

New rules proposed by the board also would move car pools to the head of the list for assignment of automobiles to reserved parking places.

Unless something changes its mind, the board will overbook part of the parking spaces under its control and rent them on a non-reserved basis for $6. An employee who wants a reserved spot will pay $12. Three or more state workers can car pool and get a parking space for a total of $16 a month.

Richard Allen and his 12-year-old son, Russell, take it easy on a hot afternoon under the shade of their rustic Apache Trading Post just outside of Alpine. (Staff Photo by Ed Todd)

Alpine trading post fulfills man's dreams

ALPINE — Back in the 1950s, Richard Allen passed through Alpine on a family tour of Big Bend National Park.

He was a kid from Houston. The mountains, serenity, scarcity of people, comfortable climate and the freedom afforded by the spaciousness made him breathe easily and feel good; he was impressed.

"I fell in love with this area right quick," Allen, now 37, said in the comfort of his spacious log cabin on the outskirts of Alpine, near the foothills of Twin-Peaks Mountain. "The whole family just fell in love with it."

And so, about 20 years later, Allen gave up a successful printing business and clown act in Houston, designed and built a log cabin-trading post with the help of the bank, family and others, and settled down in Alpine.

That was about a year ago. "WE FIGURED we'd retire in this place," Allen said of the 4,400-square-foot log cabin, which he has dubbed "Apache Trading Post." The post represents his livelihood here. "So, we decided to do it right."

He got beetle-kill spruce logs from Colorado to make the building's walls 5 1/2 inches thick, covered the roof with cedar and sheet metal and ended up with a three-bedroom rustic, Western-styled house, replete with living room, kitchen, baths, work room, office and a 1,600-square-foot showroom for his wares: turquoise and silver Indian jewelry, leather goods, paintings and pottery, tanned skins, etchings and sculptures, Black Hills gold jewelry, branding irons, spurs, scrimshaw, rocks and fossils, aeronautical charts and relief maps and souvenirs for "everyone."

It's commercial, naturally, and is designed with the tourist in mind. The showroom boasts a 16-foot high ceiling, old-fashioned ceiling fans and a definite Old West aura. It's just part of the home place.

IN HOUSTON, the 6-foot-4 Allen did some clowning for McDonald's Restaurants.

"I'm a retired Ronald," he said. Before he sold his Houston printing business, Allen figured on making friendly inroads in Alpine by way of his father, Duncan G. Allen, a real estate appraiser, who already had settled down in Alpine.

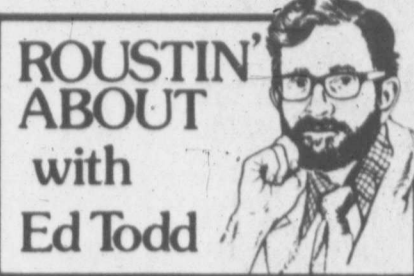

His father started dropping around the name "Apache Trading Post" and opened a little shop just "to get the name established" and to get a reputation for fair dealings.

Coming down with Allen were his artist-wife, Peggy, and their children, Tami, 16, and Russell, 12.

With Allen's father more or less acting as the vanguard, Richard Allen found he had an "easier acceptance" in this town of 6,000 people.

"People in a small town sometimes have a tendency to watch and wait and see what kind of person you are going to be."

He got accepted by the townfolks, it seems, and was well received by the "establishment," as evidenced in his being named co-chairman of the Al-

Mrs. Allen said with a touch of wry. In addition to building a new business and molding a new life, Allen has built back-ups into his well-planned life. Aside from the trading post, Allen has partnership in a disco place for teen-agers and others in the former Papa Joe's Trading Post. He sells real estate on the side and keeps his printing press and other equipment in an outhouse.

"My printing press and my knowledge of real estate are my insurance."

INITIALLY, his wife was somewhat reluctant to leave Houston and the Gulf Coast to relocate in remote Alpine, which Allen tabs the "The Heart of the Big Bend Country" and the gateway to "Texas' Last Frontier."

"I don't adjust to changes as quickly as he does," she allowed. Now, she is firmly planted in Big Bend Country.

"We hope we prove it right," Allen said of the move from Texas' biggest city to the countryside across the state. "To break the umbilical cord of the city, a person just has to make the decision and do it."

Though the Apache Trading Post has an appealing rustic flair, it's got the conveniences, including a sun roof, water well and wood-burning fireplaces of "uptown" urban living. "I don't think we're roughing it,"

AND ALPINE is his haven. "I've always had an affinity for Alpine," he affectionately said of this remote Southwestern town, which some people view as the "back woods" — the end of the world.

"That's the way some people look at it." The appeal of this Big Bend Country is in its relative wilderness and in its largely unpolluted, undeveloped, unpeopled aspects.

"It will change," Allen speculated, as more people move here to escape the metropolitan life — the hustles and hassles of urban living — and as tourism increases.

"I want to preserve...it. And if we enjoy what God has given us to enjoy, we've got to use it in moderation, so that it's not used up. It's great here — the scenery and the good vibrations..."

Skylab museum asked

PERTH, Australia (AP) — A group of Australians sent a message to President Carter today proposing a Skylab museum be set up in Kalgoorlie, where much of the space junk landed, and that the museum be named after Carter.

The message described the Kalgoorlie gold-mining region as "Skylab country — the point of touchdown of Skylab" and was sent through the U.S. Consulate in Perth. It invited Carter to visit the area and proposed the museum be a joint Australian-U.S. venture.

John Bell, the regional administrator for the Kalgoorlie area, said the committee was formed to marshal resources and act as a collection point for the recovery of Skylab components.

The committee also invited astronauts involved in the Skylab project to visit Kalgoorlie and the Esperance region where the doomed spacecraft crashed late last week.

More than 40 pieces of Skylab already have been found and more are being discovered daily, Bell said.

City pushes peddle power

By JEANNIE ESAJIAN

DAVIS, Calif. (AP) — With the help of peddle power, solar power and the power of positive thinking, this city has bucked the national trend by sharply cutting energy consumption.

President Carter praised Davis Monday in his energy speech in Kansas City, Mo., saying the city "has done a tremendous job and slashed total energy use more than 35 percent below what it used to be."

Davis, with many of its 35,000 residents associated with the local branch of the University of California, has a long tradition of innovation in agriculture and mechanics.

Since 1973, this city in California's Central Valley has encouraged bicycling, used zoning laws to reduce automobile traffic and encouraged the use of solar energy during the hot summers and mild winters.

The city's director of community development, Gloria McGregor, said the effort has resulted in an 18 percent drop in household electricity consumption and a 37 percent drop in gas consumption.

Davis claims to have been the first city to write regulations for installing solar energy equipment. Ms. McGregor said some solar techniques have been mandated, but others have been widely adopted merely because a public relations campaign made citizens aware of them.

The city has also encouraged bicycling by building a large number of bike paths that often get travelers closer to their destinations than streets, especially on the university campus.

Ms. McGregor said about 25 percent of the residents travel around town on bicycles, which saves gasoline — something Carter praised.

First lady Rosalynn Carter toured the city partly by bicycle in March. In an interview Monday, Mayor Tom Tomasi recalled that Mrs. Carter "was quite impressed." And he said Davis residents are getting used to the attention the city draws.

Chlorine tank capped by paper mill workers

SYLACAUGA, Ala. (AP) — Two chemical workers from a nearby paper mill capped a leaking chlorine gas tank car, several hours after three trainmen were injured by the toxic fumes.

Residents were evacuated Monday night from a three-block area around the leaking Southern Railway tanker in this central Alabama town of 12,000.

The tankers of chlorine were on their way to the Kimberly-Clark mill at nearby Childersburg when the leak was discovered. The trainmen were treated for inhalation of the fumes and released from Sylacauga Hospital.

The men from the mill, Paul Gillespie and Larry Barnett, climbed atop the spewing tanker and reduced the flow of gas to a slow leak.

Tomasi said he was pleased to hear Carter say that 20 percent of the country's energy should be solar by year 2000.

"Solar can do more than people have suggested it can," he added.

The mandatory solar programs affect one-sixth of the city's homes. They include specifications for insulation, number of windows, and positioning of homes. About 90 percent of the new homes face northwest to avoid the direct rays of the scorching Central Valley sun.

Ms. McGregor said that early in the 1970s, the city's development plan was redesigned to lead to concentric growth. This keeps the city dense and compact, and reduces auto usage. "We don't have leapfrog development," she said.

Also, shopping centers are so located that no resident has to go more than half a mile to buy food and other essentials.

Merely allowing homes to be used as principal places of business — except for retailers — brings savings two ways, Ms. McGregor said.

"They don't have to heat and cool two buildings, and they don't have the transportation costs back and forth from home to work," she said.

First tornado hits Cheyenne

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Stunned by Cheyenne's first tornado in history, residents today resume searching the rubble of more than 200 homes in affluent sections of the city.

The twister injured 37 persons, five of whom were hospitalized. A 14-month-old boy, David McKinnon, died of head injuries when his family's mobile home was torn apart, authorities said.

"No one ever thought we would ever have a tornado in Cheyenne, Wyoming," Mayor Don Erickson said, "but we had one."

The twister bounced across Cheyenne about 3:40 p.m. Monday, departing the city about half an hour later and leaving what Erickson estimated to be more than 200 damaged homes. The mayor said his estimate of the damage was "a very wild estimate. It's not scientific in any regard."

He said the funnel cut across a two-block wide area for four to five miles within the city limits. "It hit more than once," he said. "It might have hit half a dozen times."

As the twister came close, Norma McClelland urged her two teen-age children to get in the car and outrun it, but her son disagreed. The family took shelter in their basement, and when the sound ended, came upstairs to find their home destroyed.

Nearby, three children alone in their home took the same action.

"The Lord was good to us," said their mother, Diana Coles.

About a mile east of the McClelland and Coles homes, Joe Griego was searching through the rubble of his home. His wife was crawling across the debris. "I've got to go get my diamond earrings," she said. "They're the only thing I have left."

Gov. Ed Herschler asked President Carter to declare the ravaged blocks disaster areas, qualifying residents for emergency federal relief, Erickson said.

About 300 National Guard troops were assigned to the area to help provide relief and prevent looting. Earlier, Capt. Merv Mydland of the Wyoming Disaster and Civil Defense Agency said 150 houses in the expensive Buffalo Ridge area were heavily damaged and 45 to 50 were destroyed. He said the Buffalo Ridge Grade School was "almost gone," but no children were there.

At the Cheyenne trailer court only debris could be seen. In several blocks of Buffalo Ridge and the nearby Nimmo Addition, some homes were leveled and the walls of others stood shakily. Remnants of the neighborhood were strewn across the prairie north of Cheyenne.

Erickson said he had no damage estimate. "It's going to be very, very expensive," he said.

The tornado also struck the National Guard Armory at the northern end of the city airport and narrowly missed the governor's mansion.

Dallas police comply by resetting thermostat

DALLAS (AP) — Perhaps it's only fitting, but the Dallas Police Headquarters Building might have been the only public place that complied Monday with President Carter's directive that thermostats be set at 78 degrees.

A spot check showed settings in the building at the proper mark, even though actual thermometer readings generally registered 73 to 74 degrees.

At City Hall, readings were around 75 degrees, but cold air blowing from air conditioning outlets was measured at 66 degrees.

Several retail store operators said they would eventually comply with Carter's directive, aimed at saving energy.

"It doesn't make that much difference," said David Gore, manager of the Old Spaghetti Warehouse restaurant. "Especially if you have fans."

Some firms begin complying with Carter's thermostat order

By The Associated Press

Two dozen electric fans whirred at New York's popular theatrical watering hole, others.

Sardi's, as across the nation people began turning down their air conditioning systems — some more quickly than others.

Temperatures set records in the 100s in Oregon on Monday and it was a muggy 87 in New York City on the first day of President Carter's directive that thermostats be set at 78 degrees to save energy — perhaps 200,000 to 400,000 barrels of oil a day.

In Dallas, a spot check at police headquarters showed settings at the proper mark, but at City Hall, cold air blowing from air conditioning outlets was measured at 66 degrees.

Several Dallas retail store operators said they would eventually comply with the directive.

"It doesn't make that much difference," said restaurant manager David Gore. "Especially if you have fans."

Fans are one way of getting some comfort despite the rule, which applies to 5 million offices and non-residential buildings.

As mid-summer's dog days set in, some firms worried they might lose customers and worker productivity due to the warmer temperatures.

Tower views SALT II

U.S. Sen. John Tower of Texas hasn't been the least bit bashful in making known his opposition to the SALT II treaty as presently written...

Since initially making known his opposition, the senator has written for publication an article providing a candid assessment of the treaty, which now is being debated in the Senate.

In his article, Tower said the Vienna Summit of June 1979 brought forth a new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty...

"Hailed amidst the now-acustomed pomp and ceremony as ushering in a new era of peace and stability," Tower continued, "SALT II is purported to have been carefully drawn over several years to meet, in every critical respect, the national security interests of the United States..."

He said that although the treaty was only officially submitted to the Senate after Vienna, ample Administration revelation of its terms in advance of the signing produced significant opportunity for the study of its contents...

Tower went on to say, "SALT II is seriously flawed. It is unequal in its levels of strategic capabilities; it does not constrain major Soviet programs; and it is unverifiable in many respects..."

The treaty expressly permits encryption of telemetry data from Soviet missile test flights, and although it bans deliberate denial of information which impedes verification, the Soviets are, unfortunately, permitted to make the sole determination of what specific data would impede the verification process...

The senator also points out other ironies "couched in the vague language of this so-called balanced accord." He said, for instance, that the treaty does not limit missiles, only "launchers," but it fails to define what a "launcher" is.

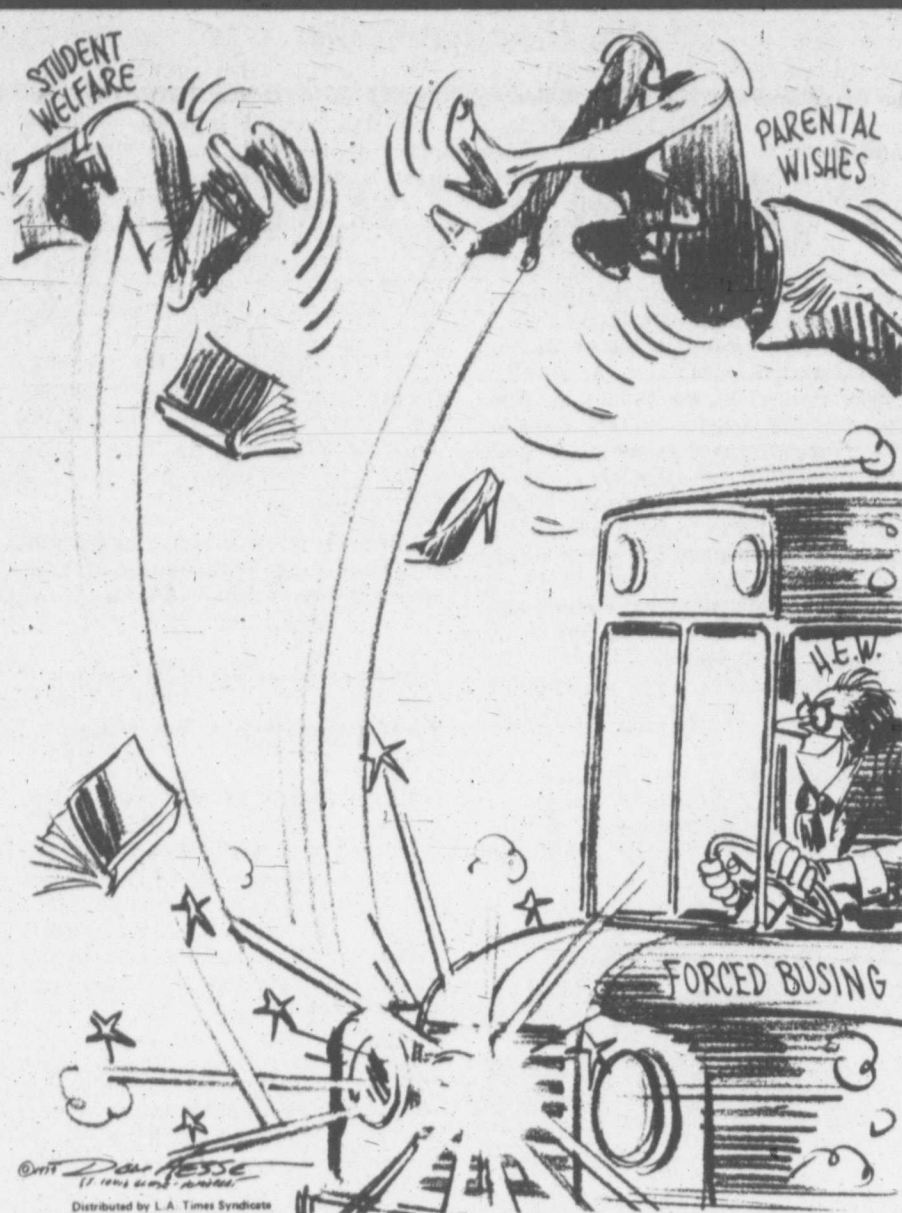

"Perhaps of gravest concern to U.S. strategic planners," he wrote, "is the growing vulnerability of our land-based Minuteman III ICBM force. Yet, under SALT II the Soviet Union is allowed to retain all 308 of its superheavy SS-18 ICBMs with as many as 10 warheads each..."

"Qualitative improvements allowed by the treaty, will soon endow in that one group of heavy missiles (SS-18s) the capability to destroy virtually all of our Minuteman force, as well as most of our B-52s on the ground and many of our ballistic missile submarines in port..."

Tower said there are other serious problems in the proposed SALT II treaty which will result in significant theater disparities of great concern to America's NATO allies. He concludes by saying that "All Americans want real arms limitation, control and reduction, not a dangerous and destabilizing facade..."

Meanwhile, the Senate debate continues.

INSIDE REPORT: Washington confidence drain felt in Moslem Mideast

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

ANKARA, Turkey — Turkey's feeling for the Soviet Union has switched from cold to warm during five years of fumbling American foreign policy, a sweetening up that is sour news for the West.

The change is particularly disturbing because it coincides with growing hostility for the U.S. throughout the Moslem Middle East. It also underlines once again the lack of confidence in the U.S. that has shaken its allies everywhere.

Evans: The switch was documented in an exclusive interview with Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit that was bluntly frank. The left-leaning head of government credited the "continuity and stability" of Soviet policy, not the punitive anti-Turkish measures of the U.S., for what he called the "different attitude" of Turkish public opinion toward the Soviet superpower along Turkey's 500-mile northern border.

anti-aircraft guns — there are no Hawks, Red Eyes or Vulcans here. For defense against attacking tanks, the wire-guided TOW anti-tank missile, which the U.S. gave to Israel over six years ago, has not been seen in Turkey. The air force here still flies the F-86 and F-100, the backbone of its navy is still the Fletcher-class destroyer, retired from the U.S. Navy many years ago.

Modernizing this force at huge but belated cost is a top priority of the U.S. embassy, but the Turkish government is losing confidence in President Carter's political follow through, both with Congress and his own bureaucracy.

has become Turkey's major economic supporter. The new Soviet way is calculated to build a record of reliability. An article in Pravda two weeks ago, widely read here, praised Turkey for its shift away from an all-out U.S. embrace. The Kremlin's campaign to soften up Turkey with sweet talk and rubles is a demonstration that it does not always deal, as in Ethiopia, Afghanistan or South Yemen, from brute strength.

But the Russians could never pull it off if the Americans were able to run the foreign policy ball without repeated, embarrassing and costly fumbles. What is clearly called for is not to subvert the clever Soviet campaign but to stop the drain of confidence in Washington. That would more than take care of the Russians.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON Delaying hazardous

Dear Dr. Solomon: When I was married 35 years ago, most women I knew had their children while still in their twenties or early thirties. Among the young people today — my own children included — there appears to be a trend towards waiting longer before starting families. Isn't it hazardous for woman to delay having a child? — Mrs. E.W.

Dear Mrs. W.: The National Center for Health Statistics confirms your observation that many women are starting families later these days. According to their figures for 1976, the latest available, the birth rate for women 30 to 34 years of age who had their first child rose 21.9 percent over the 1973 rate; for women 35 to 39 years old having their first child, the birth rate rose 11.7 percent during the same period. By "birth rate," I'm referring to the number of live births per 1,000 women of a certain child-bearing age group.

Postponing pregnancy does have certain hazards. Prolonged use of birth control measures, for one thing, may mask a fertility problem. In addition, when the cervix has not been dilated by pregnancy, the menstrual flow can sometimes back up. This, in turn, may result in adhesions and blocking of the fallopian tubes. The condition generally can be corrected surgically or with drugs.

Other potential complications of late pregnancy include toxemia, high blood pressure, and kidney disorders. Moreover, for the baby there is the added risk of Down's syndrome (mongolism), which increases from one in 1,500 children born to women in their twenties, to one in 300 children for women 35 to 39 years of age. The figure jumps to one in 50 children for women who give birth after 40. Down's syndrome can now be detected during pregnancy by means of amniocentesis, a process in which fluid is drawn from the womb and tested, and therapeutic abortion is possible if abnormalities are detected.

Women in increasing numbers apparently are deciding that the delay in starting families, which gives them time to establish themselves career-wise and helps them function more maturely as parents, is worth the risk.

5,000 participate in nation's largest transportation pool

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Kay Martin lives 17 miles from work, but she can make the trip for less than 75 cents because her employer, the Tennessee Valley Authority, was a pioneer in organizing transportation pools.

Mrs. Martin, a secretary in the TVA's community development office, is one of 5,000 employees who ride buses and vans in the nation's largest transportation pool.

She said the 22 round-trips between her office in Knoxville and her home in Strawberry Plains costs her $32.50 a month.

"If I drove to work and had to park my car, I probably would spend that much a week," she says. "I've got a Cougar and it costs me $27 just to fill it up."

As the price of gas rises — and lines grow longer — more and more workers are opting for van pooling. So are employers.

"We've got a tremendous demand for more vans," said Stan Stokely, who administers the TVA program. "We've got 60 more ordered but the factories have a large backlog because everybody wants them now."

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — The first popularly elected European Parliament opened its inaugural session today with Simone Veil, a French advocate of liberal abortion laws, favored for election as president of the 410-member, nine-nation assembly.

Mrs. Veil, a 52-year-old member of President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's center-right Republican Party, was challenged by Italian Socialist Mario Zagari. But her election appeared assured when a caucus of the 108 Christian Democrats in the assembly endorsed her Monday night despite the objections of some Italian and Irish Catholics because of her sponsorship of the liberal French abortion law adopted when she was health minister.

Hundreds of demonstrators, mostly from Italy, gathered outside the Parliament today to protest Mrs. Veil's pro-abortion stand.

"We are here to protest against abortion, and against the candidacy of Mrs. Veil, whose name is linked to abortion in the opinion of many Europeans," said Piero Pirovano of Milan, a member of the Movement for Life anti-abortion league.

New gas rules too much, not enough say two factions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer group says new federal allocation and pricing rules grant windfall profits to gasoline dealers, but an organization of 60,000 service stations claims the regulations don't help enough.

The Energy Department, meanwhile, says more motorists will benefit than suffer from the changes, which set a uniform ceiling on dealer profit margins of 15.4 cents per gallon, effective Monday.

Whatever the future price of gasoline, its supply appeared to be improving Monday.

Even in the hard-hit Northeast, where block-long lines at gasoline stations were common in

Other groups, also from Italy, clustered behind police barricades demanding a pan-European currency and more authority for the near-powerless assembly.

The Parliament has a total of 210 center-right members, including Christian Democrats, Conservatives and Liberals, plus 21 rightist European Progressive Democrats. On the left, there are 111 Socialists and 44 Communists. There are also 24 independents ranging all the way across the political spectrum, from ultraright to ultra-left.

The European Parliament grew out of the parliamentary Assembly of the six-nation European Coal and Steel Community established in 1952, the forerunner of the 1958 European Economic Community or Common Market and European Atomic Energy Community.

When the Coal-Steel, Economic and Atomic communities united in 1967 to form the European Communities, the Assembly became the European Parliament, with its members chosen by the parliaments of the member nations.

In 1976, a summit meeting of the member nations agreed to direct recent weeks, drivers were facing little or no wait.

Missouri Energy Program Director J.W. Abbott said, "W probably are in as good a position as we've been in the past 60 days. We think people have realized things aren't as bad as they thought. They're finding out they can operate just as well on the bottom half of their tanks as the top."

In Pennsylvania and Delaware, independent dealers began pumping fuel again after many closed during the weekend to protest the outgoing federal fuel allocation and pricing rules.

While the Energy Department said the new rules would "provide new protection for consumers," the Center for Auto Safety, a private consumer group, said it will file suit this week to overturn the regulations. "No dealer deserves more than an 11-cent to 12-cent profit margin," said its director Clarence Ditlow.

"The bottom line is: consumers will be paying more and many dealers who don't need relief will be getting windfall profits," said Ditlow. He also charged that the Energy Department moved so rapidly to help dealers it failed to give motorists time to speak out against the new rules.

The department said current profit margins range from 14 cents to 16 cents a gallon, so the new ceiling will not raise prices significantly, and in some instances, it will force rollbacks.

But the National Congress of Petroleum Retailers puts the current average profit margin closer to 12.5 cents per gallon, which means many motorists could be paying about 3 cents more at the pump.

Gasoline prices in the Midwest and South should rise the most, with little change in the East, the retailers' group said. Western motorists may see prices fall, it added.

Yet, the dealers' group voiced unhappiness with the rules. "It lets dealers hang on, but it doesn't enable them to rebuild profits they have lost due to inflation," said Risque Harper, spokesman for the retailers.

Under the new rules, the 15.4 cent ceiling can be raised every six months, beginning in De-ection of the Parliament members. After a year's delay, the first election was held in June. About 60 percent of the 180 million voters in Britain, France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg, Denmark and Ireland participated, a low percentage by European standards.

Advocates of European unity consider the new Parliament a momentous step toward the peaceful realization of the centuries-old dream brought closest to fulfillment heretofore by the conquests of Charlemagne in the 8th century and Adolf Hitler in the 20th. They expect it to be a major moral voice. But its powers are extremely limited.

It has authority over the Common Market's $21-billion budget and can dismiss the commission that administers Common Market policy and directs the bureaucracy. But it has no power over national governments.

The Parliament is also a reflection of the diversity of the nine nations of the European Communities. It has six official languages, with simultaneous translation of all proceedings.

17 hurt in rock, gun fight

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Airport police opened fire on rock-throwing airline employees at Islamabad Airport, leaving 17 persons injured, nearly $1 million in damage, sending passengers diving for cover and shutting down the field for five hours, officials said.

The clash erupted Monday night when the security force insisted on examining the passes of Pakistan International Airline employees, even though the airline employees are exempt from checks.

The force was created by Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, the executed former prime minister, and consists mainly of supporters of his Pakistan People's Party.

The force has been sent to its barracks and regular police have taken over security at Islamabad airport for the time being.

SHEINWOLD ON BRIDGE
Better Than No Hope
By Alfred Sheinwold

If you bid aggressively and get to a sick contract remember that even an absurd hope is better than none at all.

When today's hand was played in the Canadian National Tournament a few months ago, South expected to lose a spade, a trump and two diamonds even with the favorable opening lead. How could he limit the loss to three tricks?

East took the ace of diamonds and continued with a diamond to the king. Declarer blantly led the jack of clubs from dummy.

DISCARDS DIAMOND
When East played low, South pitched his losing diamond. West had to take the ace of clubs, and South was home.

East could defeat the contract by playing the queen of clubs on dummy's jack, but it isn't the clearest of plays. In a national tournament, a respectable East did play low.

A friend later asked South: "What were you going to do if East played the queen?" South had a simple answer: "Go down. That's what I was going to do. I was going to go down."

WORLD NEWS

Refugee mother, son doing well

TORONTO (AP) — A Vietnamese refugee gave birth to a 5-pound, 4-ounce boy less than 24 hours after she arrived in Toronto from Malaysia. Kim Chi Tran was brought to St. Michael Hospital Monday by her new Canadian landlord, and both she and her first child were reported doing well. Mrs. Tran and her husband, Tam Lam, arrived Sunday with six other refugees.

Zambia gets eyes for blind

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — Sri Lanka will provide Zambian clinics with human eyes for transplants to blind Zambians. The Ministry of Health said the University Teaching Hospital in Lusaka will begin corneal transplants in August using eyes from dead donors in Sri Lanka.

New leader takes over Iraq

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — President Ahmed Hassan al-Bakr resigned because of ill health and was replaced by Saddam Hussein, vice chairman of the Revolutionary Command Council, the government said. Bakr, who is 67 and has heart trouble, announced his resignation Monday in a nationwide address marking the 12th anniversary of the coup by the Baath Socialist Party. Hussein, 42, has been considered the strong man of the government in recent years.

Lebanese cabinet half and half

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Prime Minister Salim el Hoss has assembled a new 12-man Cabinet to try to stabilize the battered nation. Seven members of Parliament and five technocrats were selected, with six of them Christians and six Moslems. It is the second cabinet headed by Hoss, 49, a Moslem. His previous cabinet had been in office since the Syrian army intervened and ended Lebanon's 19-month civil war in 1976. It resigned May 16.

Influence becoming a threat

GAETA, Italy (AP) — The American commander of NATO forces in southern Europe says the Soviet Union's growing influence in Africa and the Middle East poses a serious threat to the West's oil supplies. Speaking aboard the cruiser Albany, the flagship of the U.S. 6th Fleet, Adm. Harold E. Shear said: "Should Soviet successes continue, the future conflict we all are striving to deter may well be won without a shot being fired as NATO and its lifeblood oil and resources are effectively separated by Soviet strategies."

African summit should be routine

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — President Anwar Sadat and other African chiefs of state arrived in the Liberian capital for a semi-annual summit meeting that is expected to break no new ground. They flew in Monday for the 16th summit of the Organization of African Unity that begins today and ends Thursday. Sadat was preceded by three Egyptian air force planes and a jetliner filled with security men.

President William R. Tolbert of Liberia, who is presiding at the meeting, welcomed them at the airport, along with an honor guard and thousands of cheering schoolchildren waving paper flags. Libya and Algeria led an unsuccessful effort to bar Sadat from the summit during a 10-day foreign ministers' meeting preceding the meeting. They also tried to bring a denunciation of Sadat's peace treaty with Israel, calling the agreement "an obstacle to peace in the Middle East."

Moderate African delegates said they intend to reject any attempt to condemn the peace treaty during the summit, although the final communique probably will include a swipe at the pact's failure to guarantee "national rights" for the Palestinians. Egyptian Minister of State Butros Ghali told the pre-summit meeting, "The eloquence of the Algerian delegation appears to be proportional to Algeria's distance from the fighting front in the Middle East."

Egypt has borne the brunt of the fighting with Israel in the past three decades, with the Algerians and other so-called hardliners doing nothing more than providing verbal artillery. There are three main power blocs in the OAU, and the failure of the ministers to resolve any of Africa's most divisive problems during the 10-day pre-summit session underlined the sharpening confrontations.

One bloc is made up of countries that get much of their arms, aid and ideological backing from the Soviet bloc. They include Libya, Algeria, Ethiopia, Madagascar, Angola and Mozambique. Another consists of states tied culturally, economically and militarily to former colonial masters. They include Morocco, Kenya, Senegal, Ivory Coast and most of the other former French colonies.

The third is made up of so-called neutrals and is led by Nigeria, Tanzania and Zambia. Most neutrals sided with the pro-West group against the Libyan-Algerian effort to bar Sadat from the summit.

They also opposed the pro-Soviet group's insistence on recognition for the Patriotic Front guerrillas fighting the new black-led regime in Zimbabwe Rhodesia, and preferred the summit call on the Front to make a new effort to negotiate.

There was a similar division over supporting guerrilla war by the South-West African People's Organization against South Africa and calling for a new attempt to seek a negotiated settlement based on a Western-backed plan.

The pro-West group also objected to the pro-Soviet group's idea for creation of an "Inter-African Defense Force" to intervene in disputes and help liberate the white-dominated countries of southern Africa. The pro-West group said such a force could become an instrument of Soviet influence.

Astronaut won't make valve ads

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former astronaut Gordon Cooper has been showing up on television screens urging viewers to buy a gadget he says will dramatically increase their cars' gasoline mileage. But not any more.

"The GR Valve I am holding has been tested and retested by leading independent laboratories along with my own tests. And it's a fact, this GR Valve will increase your auto mileage up to 28 percent," Cooper says in the ads. But he now contends he never said it. It's certain he won't be saying it in future advertisements for the two-inch plastic valve. Cooper has agreed not to make any more endorsements claiming users of the valve can make major gasoline savings, Federal Trade Commission officials said Thursday.

Also signing an FTC order not to misrepresent tests for the valve or any other product were two companies that sold the GR Valve for about $15 each, a distributor and an advertising agency. The FTC alleged that the valve had no major effect on fuel use.

Cooper, in a telephone interview, said, "The ads were made illegally and without my approval" by American Consumer, a nationwide mail-order retailer named by the FTC.

"When the valve first came out I did a little bit of advertising for it. But American Consumer put out a great deal of verbiage that was not correct. The valve is a good little valve but it doesn't do what American Consumer said it would do," said Cooper, now in private business in Glendale, Calif.

American Consumer markets about 3,000 products through the mail, said FTC attorney Laurence Kahn.

Murder charge dismissed

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A U.S. Supreme Court decision on a defendant's right to secrecy prompted a judge to dismiss charges against four men accused of murdering a woman at a church bingo game. Prosecutors immediately filed new charges against them.

The defendants had been ordered to stand trial following a five-week Municipal Court hearing last spring. That hearing was conducted openly, despite defense requests that the public and news reporters be excluded.

On Friday, Alameda County Superior Court Judge Winton McKibben ruled that the Supreme Court decision July 2 in the Gannett Newspapers vs DePasquale case means a defendant is entitled to a secret preliminary hearing upon request. The judge said that ruling gave him no choice but to throw out the original charges. Before the men could be released from jail, identical charges were filed against them. A new preliminary hearing will exclude the public and news reporters.

Deputy District Attorney Michael Cardoza, who conducted the original hearing, estimated that it cost $100,000 and decided the need to repeat it because of what he called "a legal technicality."

"But it's a damned sight better for it to happen now than to get a conviction and then have to retry it," Cardoza said.

A 19th century California law, which had been little used until recently, requires a judge to close a preliminary hearing at the defendant's request to minimize pretrial publicity.

Auto sales low in July

DETROIT (AP) — Sales of the domestic auto producers for the first 10 days of July fell 19 percent from the corresponding period last year, according to company reports.

It was the lowest year-to-year decline in about three months, and analysts looked on it as a sign that the industry's sales nosedive might be bottoming out.

Small-car sales were off only 1.6 percent among the U.S.-owned producers. If Pennsylvania-built VWs, not available last year, were counted, small cars actually would be up 2.6 percent.

"If President Carter says something sensible Sunday night, we'll be steady from here on in," said one company analyst who never permits use of his name. "The market is out there. It's all psychology at this point."

"The need for transportation continues to be documented by the movement of buyers into the market," said Gordon B. MacKenzie, vice president for sales operations at Ford Motor Co.

"Early July sales are encouraging," said George B. Spaulding, sales general manager for the Pontiac Division of General Motors Corp. Demand for small cars was much better than for mid-size and larger models, as it has been for months.

NTSU fund-raiser quits

DENTON, Texas (AP) — North Texas State University has announced the resignation of the executive director of the school's fund-raising foundation, which is under investigation by a Texas House committee.

The resignation of James A. Reid as head of the NTSU Educational Foundation Inc. came in a brief statement released Friday by acting NTSU President John Carter.

No reason for the resignation was given. Reid is the second NTSU official to resign since the House General Investigating Committee began an investigation into the allegations of financial mismanagement at the school last April. C.C. Nolan resigned as president April 12 just before he was to testify before House investigators in Austin.

Reid also resigned his position as director of development, in which he solicited university donations from private sources. His resignations become effective Aug. 1, and Carter said Reid is on vacation until then.

Carter to propose new wage-price guidelines

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter says he will propose revised voluntary wage-price guidelines this fall that will be fairer to workers who have been losing ground to soaring inflation under the current 7 percent pay standard.

"I'll work...to make sure that future wage and price guidelines are fair," Carter told a convention of the Communication Workers of America in Detroit.

But the president also told the CWA delegates Monday that a fair wage guideline for workers must be balanced against the national need to combat inflation.

"I don't want to punish any working people obviously, but it must be remembered that everybody has to take the best interests of our nation at heart," he said.

Carter also said for the first time that he might consider a tax cut to head off a serious recession if unemployment rises above levels now anticipated.

Carter, who fielded questions from the union officials, did not go into detail about plans to revise his anti-inflation guidelines. But he indicated the wage standard would be raised to reflect sharp increases in consumer prices led by a near doubling of oil prices.

Carter's comments were in response to repeated questions from delegates asking if it was fair to hold wage increases to 7 percent a year while inflation is running at nearly twice that rate.

Carter's advisers currently are drafting revised guidelines designed to make the nine-month-old program fairer to workers and thereby address organized labor's main objection to the anti-inflation effort.

Although the Teamsters union freed the administration to stretch the current guidelines to allow wage settlements of more than 7 percent a year, most labor leaders have complained that the program is still too rigid. As a result, the more powerful unions have ignored the guidelines in bargaining.

The price guidelines originally called for smaller price hikes than during the previous two years, but exemptions have been allowed since the program was announced in October.

While the administration is still debating how to alter the guidelines, changes under discussion include raising the wage standard above 7 percent or adopting a floating pay figure that would rise or fall with the inflation rate.

A revised program is not expected to be completed until August at the earliest.

Carter told the delegates his aides have been consulting with labor and business "to try to set wage and price guidelines that will be fair and equitable."

He said the 7 percent wage guideline was "a reasonable figure" when first proposed last year. At that time, Carter was forecasting a 6 percent inflation rate for 1979. Now, the administration predicts inflation will be 10.6 percent this year and 8.3 percent in 1980.

"In the fall, with this new rise of inflation that's been brought about by a doubling, almost, of the price of oil, we'll have to accommodate some of the new circumstances," Carter said.

Stiffer restrictions proposed on basis of nuclear mishap

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, reacting strongly to last spring's atomic scare at Three Mile Island, is calling for new restrictions on the nation's troubled nuclear industry.

Senators voted Monday to shut down, as of June 1, 1980, all nuclear power plants for which a state has no emergency evacuation plan approved by the federal government. As many as 39 of the nation's 70 licensed plants could be affected.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., chairman of a key nuclear energy subcommittee, hailed the vote as "the first major reform resulting from the Three Mile Island (nuclear reactor) accident."

"The Senate would have failed in its constitutional duty to protect the public welfare if it had not adopted this measure and another major nuclear accident had occurred in a state which was not prepared to act," said Hart.

The next showdown in a continuing series of tests on nuclear energy was a Senate vote, arranged for today, on a proposal to declare a six-month moratorium on new construction permits for nuclear power plants.

"We cannot pretend the Three Mile Island accident never happened," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.,

sponsor of the moratorium proposal. "We must learn from it."

Pressure for stronger federal controls over the nuclear industry has been building in Congress since the March 28 accident at Three Mile Island near Harrisburg, Pa., raised the possibility of evacuation of tens of thousands of people.

Both houses of Congress, as well as the Carter administration, have begun investigations of the accident.

The House of Representatives earlier this year rejected restrictions similar to the ones approved by the Senate. But the matter is almost certain to reach the House floor again this year.

The Senate debated the new restrictions as President Carter declared Monday in a speech in Kansas City that nuclear power "must play an important role in the United States to insure our energy future."

The new controls the Senate voted on the nuclear industry are contained in legislation authorizing $373 million for Nuclear Regulatory Commission programs for the next fiscal year.

The plan the Senate approved Monday on a vote of 63-20 would require states to draw up evacuation plans acceptable to the NRC for each of the country's 70 plants.

Until sentencing, Estes won't know status of his parole

DALLAS (AP) — Billie Sol Estes, convicted last week on fraud charges, may not know until after his Aug. 6 sentencing date if the U.S. Parole Commission will revoke his parole on an earlier, almost-identical conviction.

A commission hearing on Estes' case scheduled for today was indefinitely postponed at the request of Estes' attorney, G. Brockett Irwin.

William E. Amos, chief officer of the U.S. Parole Commission in Dallas, said the hearing would be rescheduled after U.S. District Judge Robert Hill sentences the con man Aug. 6.

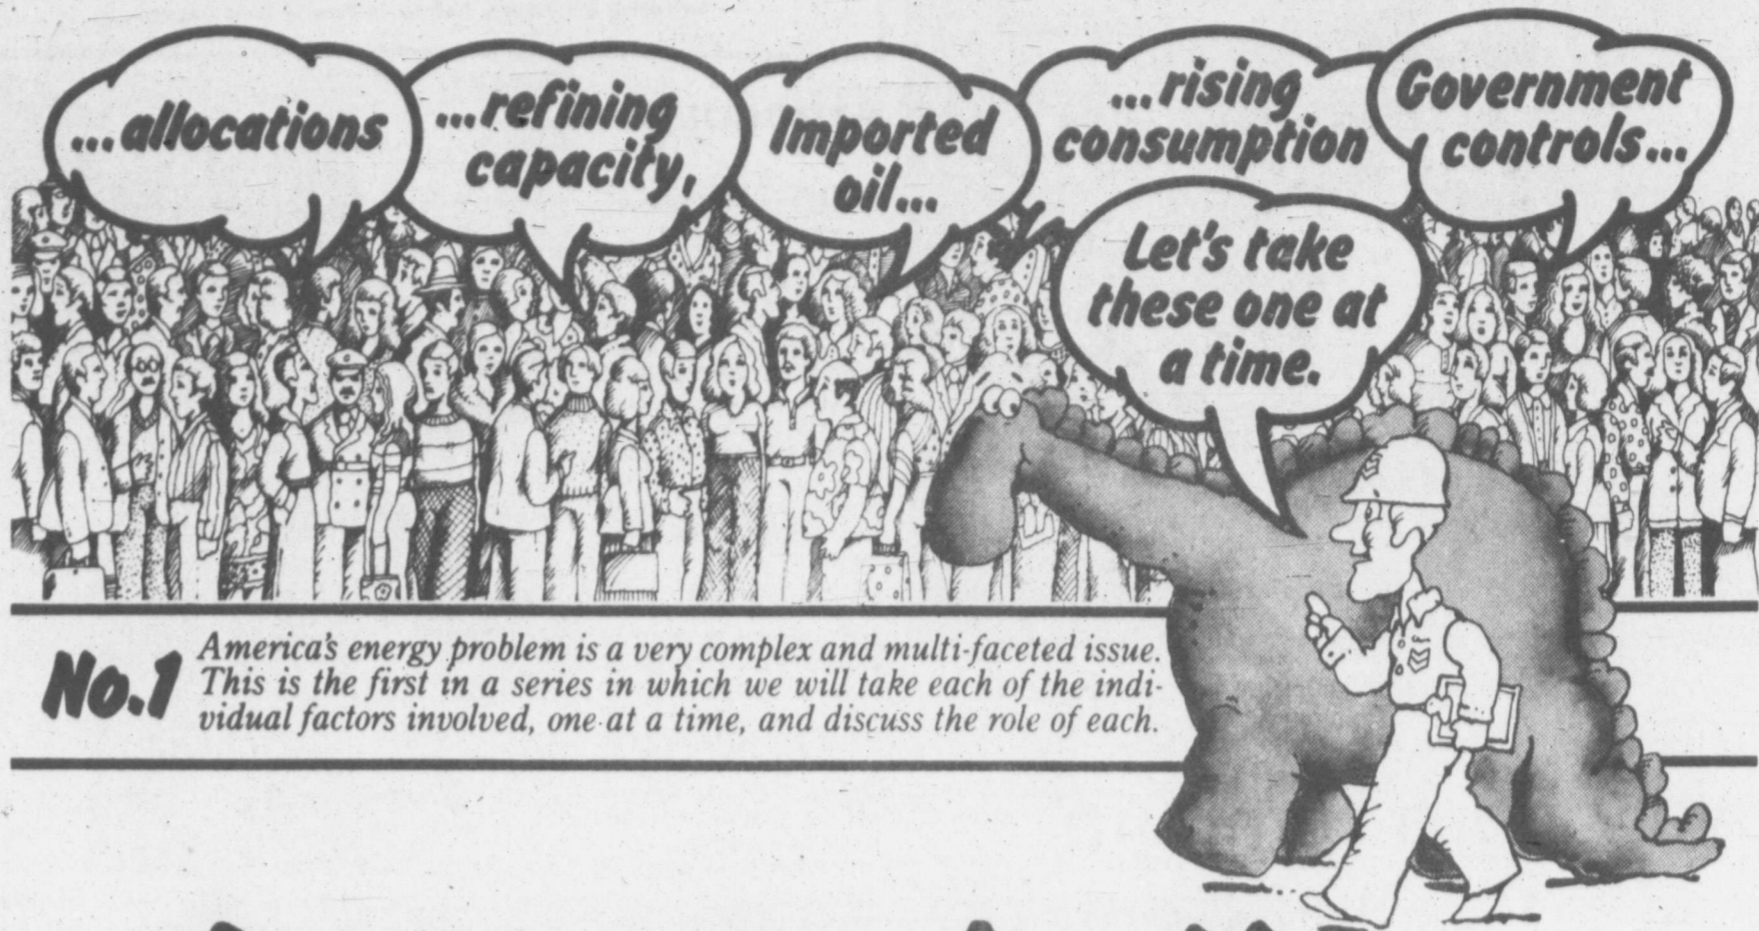

Estes was paroled in 1971 after serving six years of a 15-year sentence for fraud. Technically, the commission could find his conviction last week a violation of his parole, and send him back to prison to serve the remaining nine years.

But some sources indicated the parole commission may postpone any action until Estes' parole is up in January, when they would be powerless to act.

Estes was convicted Wednesday in federal court on two of five indictments charging he masterminded a scheme to defraud investors and conceal assets from the Internal Revenue Service to avoid paying $10 million in back taxes. The maximum sentence on those charges is 10 years in prison and a $20,000 fine.

In 1963, Estes was convicted of a similar deal that crumbled his multi-million dollar empire and rocked political and financial circles across the nation. His fortune, investigators discovered, was bedrocked on mortgages on anhydrous ammonia tanks that did not exist.

No.1 America's energy problem is a very complex and multi-faceted issue. This is the first in a series in which we will take each of the individual factors involved, one at a time, and discuss the role of each.

Imported oil — part of why we're coming up short.

In 1970, the U.S. imported less than 23% of its oil. Today, we depend on other countries for about 45% of our total supply. This heavy dependence on other countries means that even small interruptions in our imported supply can cause severe problems here at home.

"Sorry, no oil for a while, we're having a revolution."

The unexpected revolt in Iran cut the world's oil supply by about 5 million barrels daily. Almost immediately, a world-wide scramble for the limited supply of oil still available took place. In the months that followed, some oil exporting nations did boost production somewhat, but not enough to off-set the world-wide loss.

"And what about today?"

Though oil is once again coming out of Iran, they are exporting only about 3 million barrels daily, less than two-thirds the amount exported before the revolution. Making the current supply situation even more uncertain is the fact that, except for Saudi Arabia, most of the other OPEC countries are unable or unwilling to increase production to make up for the Iran shortfall.

Events in other countries are not the only reasons why the world is coming up short—and why Americans are experiencing shortages at the pumps. But these events are a significant part of the problem.

Factors like refining capacity, increased demand, government regulations, environmental restrictions, and different qualities of crude oil have all played a role and all will be discussed in future communications.

"... And what about tomorrow?"

The fact is, we are consuming energy at an alarming rate. U.S. oil consumption has jumped by over 16% during the last three years, while U.S. oil production, including Alaska, increased only 3%.

While we cannot control the availability of oil from foreign suppliers, we can and must begin developing more of our own domestic energy resources. We must, at the same time, do everything possible to conserve the energy we have now.

Thank you for listening.
