Polygamist sect children in foster care

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Kept in a west Texas coliseum for two weeks, the first of more than 400 children taken from a polygamist compound boarded buses Tuesday bound for group homes and other faraway foster care facilities.

As the buses rolled out and the children eagerly waved and smiled at television cameras, adult members of the sect filed through an unmarked building on a courthouse square in nearby Eldorado for the second day of DNA testing meant to map the tangled family trees that authorities came across while investigating a teenage girl's allegation of abuse by her much older husband.

Roger Bergendorff and his lawyer, Paul Riddle, did not appear when U.S. District Court Magistrate Peggy Leen unsealed the indictment and scheduled Bergendorff for an arraignment and plea May 2, federal prosecutor Gregory Damm said.

Clinton takes Pennsylvania

By DAVID ESPO & BETH FOUHY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Hillary Rodham Clinton ground out a gritty victory in the Pennsylvania primary Tuesday night, defeating Barack Obama and staving off elimination in their historic race for the Democratic presidential nomination.

"Some counted me out and said to drop out," the former first lady told supporters cheering her triumph in a state where she was outspent by more than two-to-one. "But the American people don't quit. And they deserve a president who doesn't quit, either."

"Because of you, the tide is turning."

Her victory, while comfortable, set up another critical test in two weeks time in Indiana. North Carolina votes the same night, with Obama already the clear favorite in a state with a large black population.

In Pennsylvania, Clinton was winning 54 percent of the vote to 46 percent for her rival with 75 percent counted, and she hoped for significant inroads into Obama's overall lead in the competition for delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

An early tabulation showed her gaining at least 28 delegates in Pennsylvania, with 130 more still to be awarded.

Clinton scored her victory by winning the votes of blue-collar workers, women and white men in an election where the economy was the dominant concern. Obama was favored by blacks, the affluent and voters who recently switched to the Democratic Party, a group that comprised about one in ten Pennsylvania voters, according to the surveys conducted by The Associated Press and the TV networks.

The remaining Democratic contests are primaries in North Carolina, Indiana, Oregon, Kentucky, West Virginia, Montana, South Dakota and Puerto Rico, and caucuses in Guam.

Tech School of Law inaugurates new addition

THE RIBBON IS cut at the Grand Opening Celebration of the Mark and Becky Lanier Professional Development Center Tuesday afternoon.

By HANNAH BOEN

The Texas Tech School of Law introduced the completion of the Mark and Becky Lanier Professional Development Center with a visit from the Texas Supreme Court Tuesday.

The 34,560-square-foot center, named for Mark and Becky Lanier, who donated $6 million for the building, features an auditorium and a courtroom for students to practice advocacy skills, according to a Tech news release.

Texas Supreme Court justices were present at the opening ceremony and inaugurated the new courtroom with the hearing of two court cases. The nine Supreme Court justices heard the cases in front of Lubbock residents, Tech students and faculty, as well as families involved in the trials.

The cases — Gilbert Kerlin v. Conception Saucedo and Benny Phillips, M.D. v. Dale Bramlett — drew attention from a broad audience who filled the 150 seats in the Donald Hunt Courtroom a half hour prior to the hearings. The courtroom is named for an advocacy coach in the School of Law, known to his students as "Coach Hunt," who is retiring this year after more than three decades of teaching.

Overflow attendees were allowed to sit in the 300-seat auditorium and view the cases by video. Chief Justice Wallace B. Jefferson, who began the inauguration of the courtroom, said the court was very pleased to be in the new facility.

Walter Huffman, dean of the School of Law, said he believes the presence of the Supreme Court justices was very significant

University recognizes faculty at convocation

By MATT MCGOWAN

Texas Tech officially recognized its faculty Tuesday afternoon at the 2008 Faculty Honors Convocation in room 169 of the Human Sciences Building.

In his opening remarks, Tech's Chancellor Kent Hance told faculty members they were the "lifeblood" of the university. Despite misconceptions arising from a March report delivered to Tech's Board of Regents addressing cost effectiveness, the chancellor said he has no desire to reduce faculty research and in fact, intends to increase it along with faculty salaries.

"One of the things that I wanted to talk about: There has been some discussion of whether we should be a teaching university or we should be a research university," Hance said. "Those are not exclusive. I feel that we should be both. That's a priority for me, that we do both."

He continued to say he wanted to encourage faculty members to actively recruit prospective students, because "if a young person gets a call from a professor, they are impressed. They are impressed." The university needs to seek the best students it can as it increases enrollment.

World Food Program warns of 'silent tsunami' of hunger

By DAVID STRINGER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON (AP) — Ration cards. Genetically modified crops. The end of pile-it-high, sell-it-cheap supermarkets.

These possible solutions to the first global food crisis since World War II — which the World Food Program says already threatens 20 million of the poorest children — are complex and controversial. And they may not even solve the problem as demand continues to soar.

A "silent tsunami" of hunger is sweeping the world's most desperate nations, said Josette Sheeran, the WFP's executive director, speaking Tuesday at a London summit on the crisis.

The skyrocketing cost of food staples, stoked by rising fuel prices, unpredictable weather and demand from India and China, has already sparked sometimes violent protests across the Caribbean, Africa and Asia.

The price of rice has more than doubled in the last five weeks, she said. The World Bank estimates food prices have risen by 83 percent in three years.

"What we are seeing now is affecting more people on every continent," Sheeran told a news conference.

Hosting talks with Sheeran, lawmakers and experts, British Prime Gordon Brown said the spiraling prices threaten to plunge millions back into poverty and reverse progress on alleviating misery in the developing world.

"Tackling hunger is a moral challenge to each of us and it is also a threat to the political and economic stability of nations," Brown said.

Malaysia's embattled prime minister is already under pressure over the price increases and has launched a major rice-growing project. Indonesia's government needed to revise its annual budget to respond.

Unrest over the food crisis has led to deaths in Cameroon and Haiti, cost Haitian Prime Minister Jacques Edouard Alexis his job, and caused hungry textile workers to clash with police in Bangladesh.

Bush says US should not walk away from NAFTA

By DEB RIECHMANN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — President Bush chastised lawmakers on Tuesday for letting international trade deals falter in Congress and criticized Democratic presidential contenders for wanting to scrap or amend the vast North American free-trade zone.

At the close of a two-day summit, Bush, along with Mexican President Felipe Calderon and Canadian Prime Minister Stephen Harper, stood solidly behind the North American Free Trade Agreement. Under NAFTA, trade between the U.S., Canada and Mexico has swelled from roughly $290 billion in 1994 to an estimated $1 trillion by the end of this year.

"Now is not the time to renegotiate NAFTA or walk away from NAFTA," Bush said. "Now is the time to make it work better for all our people. And now is the time to reduce trade barriers worldwide."

The summit was overshadowed by Tuesday's Pennsylvania Democratic presidential primary race between Sens. Hillary Rodham Clinton and Barack Obama, who have threatened to pull the U.S. out of NAFTA or renegotiate it to push for more protections for workers and the environment.

With fears about job security already being fanned by downturns in the economy, trade has become a key issue of the presidential election. Bush argued that NAFTA has fostered prosperity in all three countries and that Clinton and Obama are wrongly using anti-trade messages to lure working class voters.

Suicide car bomber kills 2 US Marines in Iraq

BAGHDAD (AP) — A bomb-rigged truck exploded at a checkpoint Tuesday near the western city of Ramadi, killing two U.S. Marines and wounding three others in an apparent strike by al-Qaida in Iraq in one of its former strongholds.

At least one civilian also died and two dozen were injured in the blast, the latest in a string of recent strikes in areas where local Sunnis have joined U.S. forces to battle al-Qaida.

Ramadi is the capital of Anbar province, which was once held by insurgents. But it has been relatively peaceful since local Sunni tribal leaders joined forces with the U.S. military against the terror movement.

Iraqi police said the suicide attacker drove a small water tanker packed with explosives to the checkpoint and detonated them when he reached the guards. The U.S. military said two Marines were killed and three injured.

In Diyala province, north of Baghdad, a woman detonated an explosive vest at the entrance to an Iraqi police station in Jalawla, killing eight policemen and a Kurdish security guard, police said. Ten other people were wounded.

It was the second suicide attack by a woman in as many days in Diyala, which has been a flashpoint in the battle against al-Qaida. A young woman blew herself up Monday at the headquarters of a group of U.S.-allied Sunni fighters, killing three people and wounding three others, the U.S. military said.

Al-Qaida has been regrouping after suffering a devastating blow last year when thousands of Sunni tribesmen turned against them. Last weekend, al-Qaida announced a one-month offensive against U.S. troops and Sunnis who have joined forces with Americans.

Osama bin Laden's deputy, Ayman al-Zawahiri, said in an audiotape posted Tuesday on the Internet that al-Qaida-led insurgents in Iraq were the "primary force" in battling the Americans and "challenging Iranian ambitions" in this country.

The renewed activity by al-Qaida has occurred while attention has focused on the Iraqi government crackdown against Shiite militias, chiefly the Mahdi Army of anti-American cleric Muqtada al-Sadr.

Last month, Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki, a Shiite, launched an offensive against Shiite militias in the southern city of Basra. The fighting quickly spread to Sadr City, the Mahdi Army's Baghdad stronghold, where militants fired rockets at the U.S.-protected Green Zone.

In the latest fighting, two Shiite extremists were killed in Sadr City, the U.S. military said.

At least eight civilians also were killed and 15 wounded in the district in a rocket strike, Iraqi police said. The U.S. military said an American helicopter fired a missile at extremists transporting rockets at the same hour but insisted no civilians were in the area.

Also Tuesday, the U.S. command announced that an American Marine was killed and another wounded the day before when a roadside bomb struck a U.S. convoy in Basra.

U.S. and British forces have been assisting Iraqi forces in Basra since their offensive bogged down due to poor planning, widespread desertions and fierce resistance by the militias.

The Iraqi army command in Basra declared the city and the surrounding province under government control Tuesday and gave top Mahdi commanders in the area 24 hours to surrender.

Also in Basra, a senior aide to Iraq's top Shiite cleric Grand Ayatollah Ali al-Sistani died Tuesday, a week after being seriously wounded in an assassination attempt. Two other al-Sistani representatives were injured in separate ambushes.

The attacks came days after a top aide of al-Sadr was killed in Najaf — part of the ongoing Shiite power struggle.

to Tech and the law school.

Wendy Humphrey, a legal practice professor, said she required her students to attend the hearings.

"A lot of students want to come, not only to see the new facility," she said, "but because it's such an honor to have the Supreme Court justices here."

Because of Humphrey's requirement, law students lined the front row of the auditorium. Humphrey said the hearings gave her students a feel for the real world, something the law school desires for all students to obtain before graduation.

Mark Lanier, who Humphrey said she considers to be a "successful" alumnus, contributed almost half of the funds needed for the building project. A 1984 Tech law school graduate, Mark Lanier is the founder of Lanier Law Firm, which has offices in Los Angeles, Houston, New York and Palo Alto, Calif.

According to the Lanier Law Firm Web site, www.lanierlawfirm.com, Mark Lanier continues to serve the university as a member on the law school's Foundation Board.

Huffman said it had been 34 years since a significant addition was made to the law school. Immediately following the hearings, the law school hosted a ribbon cutting ceremony to introduce the new addition. In attendance were Mark and Becky Lanier, several other law school alumni and Texas senators and state representatives.

Although the opening of the facility featured Texas Supreme Court hearings, the courtroom will be used in the future for students of the law school to practice advocacy skills, according to a Tech news release. The Facilities Planning and Construction System of the university designed the project to be a space capable of accommodating law classes as well as continuing education conferences.

Tech is the only university in Texas that combines a medical school, law school and major university all on the same campus, Huffman said, which is why he believes the Lanier addition will be "very special to both students and faculty."

Faculty

To assist the university in recruiting quality students, Tech's faculty should actively make telephone calls to top-notch, prospective students and encourage them to visit the university, Hance said.

"If we can fly football and basketball players here to recruit," he said, "we can fly in National Merit Scholars."

Also, Hance told faculty members to work closely with him and not to hesitate to contact his office if they needed anything.

"In closing, I would say that, look, there has been controversy, and some people have said, 'What's he doing?'" he said. "You know, 'Does he know what he's doing?' I know what I'm doing with y'all's help. I do, but I need your input. I want to hear from you."

Also vital to Tech's efforts, Hance said, is student satisfaction. If students are unsatisfied with their university, they'll "vote with their feet" and leave.

"I think it was a great address," said Tech Provost William Marcy after the ceremony. "I think he touched on really important issues to the faculty. These faculty are the opinion leaders of the university, so making an address to these faculty really is informing the faculty who are going to be most influential at the university."

After Hance's speech, Jon Whitmore, Tech's president, offered his own words of encouragement to faculty members, commending them for all of their research and for the positive attention they bring to Tech.

"Great universities are about discovery, about invention, about research and scholarship," he said, "and then turning what we learn into classroom presentations for the learning of our students."

Throughout the ceremony Marcy explained each set of awards — such as 13 President's Excellence in Teaching Awards, three President's Academic Achievement Awards and seven Outstanding Researcher Awards — and offered brief explanations for why many of the individual recipients were chosen.

Approximately 70 faculty members received awards, honors or distinctions, many of which accompanied monetary gifts ranging between $500 and $10,000.

The largest sum, $25,000, however, did not go to an individual professor, but to a department. For this year's Teaching Academy Departmental Excellence in Teaching Award, Tech's Department of Classical and Modern Languages earned the honor and the prize.

Also, approximately 24 professors were given emeritus status for their service to the university. Professors earn the emeritus designation, an honorary title, through length of service, faithful service or through distinctive service.

For many of the awards, Marcy said student assessments played a significant part as panels and administrators went through the process of selecting the prize.

RACQUET ATTACK

Dollar slumps to new record low

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — The euro roared to another record high Tuesday, crossing $1.60 in late afternoon trading in Europe after a pair of ECB governors said high inflation may cause the bank to raise interest rates.

The euro rose as high as $1.6018, more than a penny above the $1.5916 it bought in New York late Monday. The euro has risen 20 cents against the dollar in just five months and 10 cents in just two months.

The 15-nation currency hit its last record of $1.5982 last Thursday. It dropped back on Friday after a Wall Street rally generated optimism that the worst of the U.S. credit crunch may be over, but rose again on Monday when Bank of America's first-quarter earnings fell short of expectations.

The dollar's slump is a boon for U.S. companies that rely heavily on exports, but it's the bane of travelers as worldwide inflation rises, air fares climb and prices rise in dollar terms for everything from beer in Munich to fine wine in Paris to gondola rides in Venice.

Tuesday's remarks by Yves Mersch in the Financial Times Deutschland and comments made by Christian Noyer to France's RTL radio showed the governing council of the ECB is committed get euro zone inflation back around 2 percent, below the current 3.6 percent it is at now.

It effectively threw water on any hopes of a rate cut by the bank, which has kept its benchmark rate unchanged at 4 percent since June even as the U.S. Federal Reserve, Bank of England and Bank of Canada have consistently lowered their own rates.

On Tuesday, the Bank of Canada slashed its interest rate by half a percentage point to 3 percent. It also hinted another cut may be coming as it feels the effects of a slumping economy at its largest trading partner.

The dollar has been weighed down by a combination of gloomy U.S. economic data and high European inflation — fueling expectations that the Fed will cut interest rates yet again, while the European Central Bank will leave rates unchanged.

Lower interest rates can weigh on a nation's currency as traders transfer funds to countries where they can earn better returns, while higher rates are used to curb inflation.

The British pound had been hit by a cautious reception for Monday's announcement by the Bank of England of a 50 billion-pound ($100 billion) plan to allow banks to swap mortgage-backed securities for Treasury bills but it reversed its declines on Tuesday, rising to $1.9994 from $1.9798. The dollar was down against the Japanese currency, dropping to 102.70 yen from 104.17 yen.

Al-Qaida No. 2 says 9/11 theory propogated by Iran

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Osama bin Laden's chief deputy in an audiotape Tuesday accused Shiite Iran of trying to discredit the Sunni al-Qaida terror network by spreading the conspiracy theory that Israel was behind the Sept. 11 attacks.

The comments reflected al-Qaida's No. 2 leader Ayman al-Zawahri's increasing criticism of Iran. Al-Zawahri has accused Iran in recent messages of seeking to extend its power in the Middle East, particularly in Iraq and through its Hezbollah allies in Lebanon.

The authenticity of the two-hour audio recording posted on an Islamic Web site could not be independently confirmed. But the voice sounded like past audiotapes from the terror leader, and the posting where it was found bore the logo of Al-Sahab, al-Qaida's official media arm.

It was the second of two messages answering questions that were posted to Islamic militant Web sites earlier this year.

One of the questioners asked about the theory that has circulated in the Middle East and elsewhere that Israel was behind the 2001 attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

Al-Zawahri accused Hezbollah's Al-Manar television of starting the rumor.

"The purpose of this lie is clear — (to suggest) that there are no heroes among the Sunnis who can hurt America as no else did in history. Iranian media snapped up this lie and repeated it," he said.

"Iran's aim here is also clear — to cover up its involvement with America in invading the homes of Muslims in Afghanistan and Iraq," he said.

Butt-sketch artists to visit Tech, draw conclusions

By MATT MCGOWAN
STAFF WRITER

Don't look now, but somebody soon may be checking out your rear end; there are no ifs, ands or "butts" about it.

The Tech Activities Board will host a butt-sketch artist between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. today near the information desk in the Student Union Building.

The butt artist will take approximately two-and-a-half minutes for each butt sketch and actually will draw more than just students' butts, said Jana Vise, assistant director for Student Union and Activities. The sketches will be done from the top of the head to "about the knees."

After seeing a butt-sketching event in Florida, Vise said she and other members of the board "loved it," and wanted to bring the event to Tech.

"It's going to be a lot of fun," she said, "because it's something different — we haven't done it before."

The concept of the formal butt-sketch experience began in 1988 in Dallas, said Scott Talarico, president of Neon Entertainment, the Buffalo, N.Y., company that represents the still-Dallas-based butt sketchers.

"It's probably one of the events that gets booked the most on our roster," he said. "It's definitely very popular."

Butts, he said, will be sketched with charcoal.

Vise said many students seem very intrigued with the concept of butts being sketched and "are just really curious as to what exactly it really is."

Zimbabwe's neighbors unite to block arms shipment

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Zimbabwe's regime got a taste of the international isolation critics say it deserves, with its neighbors uniting to block a shipment of Chinese arms to prevent them from being used against Robert Mugabe's opponents.

Union, church and human rights leaders across southern Africa rallied against allowing the Chinese freighter An Yue Jiang to dock at ports in any of landlocked Zimbabwe's neighbors, and they were bolstered by behind-the-scenes pressure from the United States.

In the end, governments usually unwilling to criticize Mugabe barred the ship at a time when Zimbabwe's government is being accused of cracking down on dissenters.

On Tuesday, church leaders in Zimbabwe said people were being tortured, abducted and murdered in a campaign of retribution against opposition supporters following the March 29 election, and urged international intervention.

In Washington, the State Department said it had urged countries in southern Africa — notably South Africa, Mozambique, Angola and Namibia — not to allow the ship to dock or unload. It also asked the Chinese government to recall the vessel and not to make further weapons shipments to Zimbabwe until the postelection crisis is resolved.

"China insisted the shipment of mortar grenades, ammunition and other weapons was part of "normal military product trade between the two countries," Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Jiang Yu said.

"As far as I know, the carrier is now considering carrying back the cargo," she added.

Patrick Craven, spokesman for a South African trade union federation, which helped lead the campaign, called it a "historic victory" that he hoped would encourage Zimbabweans and lead to more grass-roots campaigns against Mugabe.

"So far the governments have clearly been lagging behind the people," Craven said. "We're hoping now they will wake up."

A spokesman for Zimbabwean opposition leader Morgan Tsvangirai welcomed the development. "It would be pleasing to the people of Zimbabwe to note that there has been solidarity on the continent to stop the arming of the (Mugabe) regime at the expense of the people," said the aide, Nelson Chamisa.

When the ship arrived in South Africa last week, the government said there was no legal reason to stop its cargo from being unloaded and shipped on to Zimbabwe. There is no international arms embargo against Zimbabwe.

“So far the governments have clearly been lagging behind the people. We’re hoping now they will wake up.”

Compassion forum or against 'em

Last week, CNN hosted a question-and-answer session at Messiah College, in Grantham, Pa. Barack Obama and Hillary Clinton, the two remaining candidates in this increasingly wearying race for the Democratic presidential nomination, were there. John McCain declined his invite. Good move. CNN called the event, a bit pompously, the "Compassion Forum." I prefer to call it a witch trial.

This was not a debate — each candidate was interviewed separately, by the likes of moderators Campbell Brown and Jon Meacham, the editor of "Newsweek" and someone who writes often about religion. The questions went like this: "Mrs. Clinton (...), you have actually felt the presence of the Holy Spirit on many occasions. Share some of those occasions with us," and "Senator (Obama), do you believe that God intervenes in history and rewards or punishes people or nations in real time for their behavior?"

At first, these questions, though silly, seem innocuous enough. Personal feelings toward the supernatural can't have much of an impact on how a president does his or her job, can they?

But then you consider our current president, and you realize that it can. Just knowing that George W. Bush has met often with John Hagee, the Christian Zionist minister, should be enough to make me feel queasy. Christian Zionists hope most of all to speed up the march to Armageddon, so they can be sucked up into heaven faster, leaving us heathens to be eaten by demons and everything. Policymakers should not be interested in ending the world.

However, the questions the moderators asked rarely touched on religion from that angle — asking outright whether they think Bush's religious beliefs have harmed America, say

Eric Braden

— but instead remained in the realm of the inane and supernatural. Here's another excerpt:

Meacham: "Senator, do you believe personally that life begins at conception?"

Clinton: "I believe that the potential for life begins at conception. I am a Methodist, as you know. My church has struggled with this issue. In fact, you can look at the Methodist Book of Discipline and see the contradiction and the challenge of trying to sort that very profound question out."

Such a question, of course, besides having nothing to do with reality, is impossible to answer constructively. Meacham may as well have asked, "Senator, if a tree falls in a forest and there's no one there to hear it, does it still make a sound?"

There was a nicely eclectic arrangement of religious leaders on hand to ask questions of their own. The whole gang was there, from the president of the National Hispanic Christian Leadership Conference to the director of the Jewish Council for Public Affairs.

It was like those plastic kids that used to come in Burger King kids' meals — the whole range of diversity was represented. Except atheists, even though there are more atheists in America than religious Jews.

The bizarre thing is, almost none of the religious leaders' questions even remotely dealt with religion. Their questions were mostly really astute, in fact. Here's The Rev. William Shaw, president of the National Baptist Convention, addressing Clinton: "How would you shape the policies of your administration to ensure that the poor would have access to and could secure the drugs that they need to improve the quality of their lives, of their families and even the future of their country?"

Perhaps the religious leaders, aware of the damage neo-con crazies have done to the reputation of religion lately, consciously kept it moderate, even secular. Or perhaps they really believe, as I do, that one's religion should be personal, not political.

It was clear that everyone involved saw the forum as it was: an inquisition. "Compassion," in this case, meant "religion." Brown might as well have asked, "Are you now, or have you ever been, a non-Christian?" It's no wonder Obama recently said enough with debates, already. But it's not just the media; a quarter of Democrats who don't like Obama also think he's a Muslim.

"Personal feelings toward the supernatural can't have much of an impact on how a president does his or her job, can they?"

It is alarming to realize that we live in a society in which being religious — and we're talking about one religion in particular here — has become a requirement for anyone running for office. Contrary to popular belief, we aren't a Christian nation.

Many of the founding fathers weren't Christians at all. John Adams, James Madison, Thomas Jefferson and George Washington all were critical of Christianity and, indeed, religion in general. Said Jefferson: "Christianity is the most perverted system that ever shone on man."

Can you imagine an American president saying that today? Even the Christian founding fathers would be horrified to see their faith so forcefully manipulated in the name of politics.

Barry Goldwater agreed. Here's what the senator, who ran for president in 1964, said in 1981: "I'm frankly sick and tired of the political preachers across this country telling me as a citizen that if I want to be a moral person, I must believe in A, B, C and D. Just who do they think they are? (...) I am warning them today: I will fight them every step of the way if they try to dictate their moral convictions to all Americans in the name of conservatism."

Unfortunately, this has happened. I'm also dubious about the journalistic ethical standing of providing a forum on compassion that only gives a voice to religious leaders — as if religious leaders held the lease on compassion. I would much rather see a forum in which only mothers of U.S. soldiers were allowed to question the candidates.

Or perhaps we should have a forum about compassion for the Earth. It would certainly mark a change. The League of Conservation Voters has kept a tally of the questions being asked of presidential candidates since January 2007. Of 3,201 questions asked, only eight of them mentioned global warming.

If I were a praying man, I'd be on my knees about now.

STRIVE FOR HONOR Discussion on Ethics

Part One — Ethical Dilemma

'SERVICE LEARNING'

Colleen is an exercise and sport sciences major enrolled in an elementary physical education methods course (PED 3405). The course includes lectures, discussions and activities that prepare students for future professional careers in teaching elementary physical education. In addition to the lectures, discussions and activities, this particular section of PED 3405 also includes a service-learning component.

Service-learning is a teaching strategy that enables students to connect information discussed in a class with real needs in the community. For example, in PED 3405, the undergraduate students in the course teach physical activity and sports to fourth- and fifth-grade children from low-income black and Hispanic families. This service-learning component enables Colleen to apply theories of learning and teaching strategies being discussed in her class to the real world. At the same time, the after-school program that was created through service-learning is enabling children from low-income families an opportunity they might not otherwise be given.

At first, when the professor told the class about the service-learning requirement, Colleen believed she would not enjoy working with the kids. Even though Colleen hopes to teach physical education and coach at a high school, she did not see the need to spend two hours each week teaching elementary children about flag football. She was not at all interested in young kids, and she certainly never would be coaching football in Texas. In addition, Colleen really never has been exposed to black or Hispanic children, adolescents or adults. In the small town where she grew up, most everyone looked just like her — Caucasian. Moreover, she heard that the school was located in the "bad" part of town, where there was a lot of crime and run-down houses.

Although Colleen initially was reluctant to participate in the service-learning program, she is really glad she gave it a try. Colleen enjoys teaching and coaching her kids. She cannot wait for Wednesday afternoons to visit with the boys and girls on her team. Colleen was surprised by how much the kids want to learn, have fun and be physically active. She is overwhelmed by the appreciation the children have shown and their politeness and respectfulness towards her.

Likewise, the Prairie Dogs — the team name the children picked — look forward to practicing their flag football skills with Colleen every Wednesday. Practices take place on the field outside the children's school. The first four practices focused on basic flag football skills — throwing, catching, running, and blocking. This week, the Prairie Dogs will work on a couple of offensive and defensive plays in preparation for their game next Wednesday.

As the practice starts, Colleen notices that Trevor is not participating in the warm-up exercises. Colleen continues observing and sees that Trevor does not join the children in the warm-up run. Trevor usually participates enthusiastically in all the activities — Colleen wonders why he is not participating today.

She decides to walk over to Trevor to ask him why he is not participating in the activities. As she approaches, she notices Trevor has a bruised eye and a scratch on his face. Trevor tells Colleen that he slipped and fell, hurting his leg, and therefore, he cannot exercise or run. When Trevor notices Colleen looking at his eye, he tells Colleen he hurt his eye when he fell.

Colleen does not want to jump to any conclusions or make rational judgments. At the same time, she cares for Trevor and feels that this situation needs to be investigated further. What should Colleen do?

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Professor Michael Borshuk raised a series of solid issues about the nature of free speech in his recent column entitled "Free Speech: say hello to my little friend." His incendiary column certainly raised opposition, but the nature of the letters opposing him failed to address any of the issues he raised.

Professor Borshuk consistently is assaulted for not being an American, but these attacks flow from the same vein that contends their illegal immigrant game was not about insulting foreigners. His article articulated a series of arguments about the nature of free speech in America, and none of the responses in the following day's paper came close to addressing any of these points.

The conservative rhetoric attacking Professor Borshuk fails to address the illegal immigrant game as well, which was the starting point of this entire discourse. They consistently point out that he is Canadian and therefore not American, but they seem to miss the point that decency and the progression of a civilized discourse were his motives for writing.

The illegal immigrant game promoted violence. It encouraged citizens to seize immigrants and detain them. The messages this game sends out are clear: illegal immigrants are innately dangerous, and they should be removed. When the recent petition circulated around campus, professors from other universities were amazed activities like this still go on in an age after the Civil Rights movement.

Immigrants, regardless of anything else, are people and deserve to be treated as such. In addition, assaulting others creates a pretense of fear on campus, which certainly appears to be contradictory to the university establishing a campus full of diversity.

So quote your movies, count your apples, bless America as many times as your lungs will allow, but wit and patriotism fail to address the issues in a civil matter or make a single point. In a serious discourse, insults reveal only a lack of understanding about the issues themselves.

When you attack an upstanding professor like Dr. Borshuk, you need to come at him with more than a movie quote and a birth certificate. These conservative attacks must stick to the issues themselves. Otherwise, they merely add to the white noise. I am an American, which means conservatives will have to work a little harder to discredit me and once again ignore the issues.

First, let me say that I do not agree with, nor am I associated with, The Daily Toreador at Texas Tech. Personally, I would say that I disagree with the strongest measure at what The DT typically publishes. I find their viewpoints to be significantly further left than my own and to be from a fairly narrow point of view. However, as a broadcast journalism major, I am called to defend my colleagues.

I find it extremely ironic that you claim The DT staff members are "hiding behind the First Amendment" when they questioned about their publication of the Iraq death toll, while it is the same First Amendment that is allowing you to state your opinion on their opinion. The goal of a newspaper is not to publish popular opinions, not to take the easy road, but instead to publish information and opinions that help to drive American society.

Without that information, popular or not, a democratic society begins to crumble. I applaud The DT for publishing information that isn't always popular or easy to find. It has sparked debate across the Tech campus and that is their goal.

Perhaps, Mr. Floyd, you should realize that the First Amendment that lets The Daily Toreador print content it deems newsworthy also lets the Young Conservatives of Texas play their little game. You can't have your cake and eat it, too.

Tech professor discusses climate change

BY LONDON CLARK
STAFF WRITER

Tuesday, a global-warming lecturer brought some students back to Earth. Katherine Hayhoe, a Nobel Prize winner and Texas Tech geosciences professor, spoke about the effects of environmental choices on global climate change.

Hayhoe said the world is warming because of the Greenhouse Effect. Without this effect, temperatures would be negative 20 degrees Fahrenheit.

"(The Greenhouse Effect) sustains life here on Earth," she said during the lecture in the Allen Theatre, "and is a naturally-occurring phenomenon."

However, the enhanced Greenhouse Effect, she said, is human-induced by increasing the amount of heat-trapping gases in the atmosphere.

"We are putting an extra blanket on the Earth, and it is heating up beyond," Hayhoe said.

The heat-trapping gases are coming from human sources, like emissions from cars and factories and chemicals used to heat and cool houses and buildings or improve agriculture, Hayhoe said. Major U.S. urban centers are responsible for a large proportion of these emissions over the last century.

"The U.S. has produced more than 25 percent of the total world emissions," she said.

As she showed comparative photographs of diminishing glaciers from different geographic regions, Hayhoe said glaciers are melting all over the world as a result of increased temperatures from gaseous emissions.

"By 2030, Glacier National Park could be glacier-free," she said.

Glacier National Park is the United States' only glacier reservation, located in Montana at the edge of the Canadian border, according to the Web site www.nationalparkreservations.com.

Hayhoe said Alaska's Columbia glacier is melting faster than Greenland and the Arctic. She said, however, the Arctic is melting faster than predicted.

"Greenland is now melting two times faster than 10 years ago," she said.

Humans are not the only cause of the changing climate, she said, but they do have a large impact. Until 1960, models were unable to tell if the changes were natural or human.

"Over the last 30 years, there is no way to explain the temperature increases we have seen," she said, "without looking at human impact."

Mother believes someone watching over saved her child's life

By JORDAN EICHER
STAFF WRITER

As Taren Dutchover stared in horror, her daughter's limp body was pulled from the water.

"I've heard that your life can flash before your eyes — I think mine did right there," Dutchover, of Lubbock, said, hiding back tears.

"My children are my life," she said, "and to think I almost lost one of them, it's just a lot to swallow."

It was this past August when Dutchover and her family were taking their last couple days of summer vacation at a local water park. Jenica Dutchover, Taren Dutchover's 8-year-old daughter, had been swimming with some friends in the shallow end of the pool as Taren Dutchover and her husband watched.

"She's a good swimmer for her age. I had her in swimming lessons at 3 years old for that very reason," Taren Dutchover said. "She also knew to never dive in the shallow end of a pool. I guess she just didn't know how shallow it was."

After diving into the water, Jenica Dutchover suffered a blow to the head that knocked her unconscious at the bottom of the pool.

"I saw her dive in, but when she didn't come up, I moved closer to the pool," Taren Dutchover said. "I knew she couldn't hold her breath that long, so that's when I started screaming for help."

Jenica was pulled from the water by an off-duty life guard and, after CPR, the guard deemed that she was just unconscious, but that her heart was still beating and she was still breathing.

"She woke up with a disgusted look on her face as soon as they put the smelling salts under her nose," Taren Dutchover said. "She always was a hard sleeper."

Tyson Bollinger, a junior art history major from Temple, is a lifeguard at the Robert H. Ewalt Student Recreation Center's Aquatics Center and said that when he first became a lifeguard, it was nothing more than just a way to earn a little extra cash.

"It was just a summer job," he said, but since then, Bollinger has conducted many saves himself. "I figured that since

I have to work, I might as well be doing something that is helping people at the same time."

Bollinger said the time of the year most saves seem to be conducted is the summer, because that's when there tends to be more children at the pools.

"It's almost always kids," he said. "They don't realize they can't swim in water that deep, and then they panic."

Bollinger said his first save happened this summer for that very reason.

"There was a water slide and the kid didn't realize it led to the deep end," he said. "When she went in, she couldn't swim."

Bollinger said after jumping in, all he had to do was get the little girl to the side of the pool and deliver her to her parents, but in cases like the Jenica Dutchover's, had there not been a lifeguard nearby, things could have been devastatingly worse.

Taren Dutchover said she believes had that lifeguard not been watching over, her daughter would not be alive today.

"I'm just thankful, and I've been encouraging my 16-year-old to go through with his certification to become a lifeguard this summer, because I think it is something that everyone should know how to do," she said. "You never know when you could save a life."

Films said to be getting work guarantees from actors guild

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Screen Actors Guild has reached separate deals that will allow the completion of 95 independent movie productions if actors go on strike, a person with the union said Tuesday.

The disclosure came as formal contract negotiations continued between SAG and Hollywood studios.

The person, who was not authorized to speak publicly about the deals and requested anonymity, said representatives of the productions have signed guaranteed completion contracts with the guild that clear the way for film companies to raise financing and start work.

The Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers, which represents studios declined to comment on the deals.

Both sides have been tightlipped about their formal contract discussions, which began April 15. They are trying to avoid a replay of the 100-day strike by Hollywood writers.

"I think (the guild) has taken a very reasonable approach vis-a-vis the independents," said Bob Yari, a producer of the Oscar-winning film "Crash" who is applying for guarantees on two films. "They're not penalizing us by striking us, basically."

Yari said the guild told him work could continue as long as his productions did not have ties to major studios such as Paramount, Sony and Warner Bros.

His production company was set to start work on "Killing Pablo," a $40 million project about Colombian drug czar Pablo Escobar starring Christian Bale, and "Governess," a romantic comedy starring Jennifer Lopez. Filming for both is expected to begin in September.

The deals guarantee the companies would be able to keep actors working during a strike if they abide retroactively by the terms of the long-term contract eventually reached with the major studios.

Jonathan Handel, an entertainment attorney and former writers guild lawyer, called the independent production guarantees "ankle biters" that would not undermine the actors' negotiating power.

"The studios are independently and collectively the 800-pound gorillas in the business. Those independent pictures don't make that level of difference," he said.

Roaring Leo Productions also received a guarantee on its $1 million production, "Shifting the Canvas," a post-9/11 film about a group of Brooklyn artists, producer Robert Zimmer Jr. said.

Final spring practice ends with defense, Leach satisfied with scrimmage

By ALEX YBARRA
STAFF WRITER

When Texas Tech coach Mike Leach blasted his team and ordered another scrimmage after the Red-Black game Saturday, he knew what he was looking for, and he found it.

With referees, yard markers and everything else except 12,000 Red Raider fans, Monday's final practice hit another level of intensity on both sides of the ball.

"You could have been on the top row facing (away), and you could've heard that football was going on," Leach said. "There were great collisions. The intensity was excellent. The execution was not always perfect on either side. This might be one of the best defensive efforts since I've been here, but everybody flew around. If you can't see the difference between (Monday) and Saturday, you could hear the difference."

The one side of the ball that showed consistency all spring was the defense, which solidified the statement it made in a 29-23 win Saturday, when it recorded nine sacks and forced five turnovers.

In the spring game sequel, the defense had three interceptions, three sacks, numerous stops and was louder than a full Jones AT&T Stadium for the entire scrimmage.

"I have no doubt that we'll continue this through the off-season, to the summer, through two-a-days, through next season," Tech defensive coordinator Ruffin McNeill said. "These are the guys we have, that's their mentality as well, on both sides of the ball."

The first several drives simulated the beginning of the Red-Black game: a slow and off-balance start.

Quarterback Graham Harrell could not find a rhythm early on, resulting in two consecutive three-and-outs.

Things did not get any better for Harrell on the next drive, as safety Darcel McBeth made the first interception on the day.

Receiver Detron Lewis jump started the next possession with a 16-yard reception, but Daniel Howard sacked Harrell on the next play, resulting in a seven-yard loss that killed the drive.

It took the offense three more tries to reach the red zone, but with quarterback Taylor Potts in, De'Shon Sanders grabbed another interception at the goal line.

Several collisions took place, adding to an intense practice, which was something Leach wanted to see.

"What we wanted to see today was bodies moving fast," Leach said. "We wanted to see collisions, and I really saw that defensively and offensively. I mean, people ran into stuff and hit it, they hit stuff and it all flew around."

Near the end of the scrimmage, Leach wanted to see more.

He set up an end-of-game situation, placing the ball on the defense's 40-yard line to give the offense one last chance to score.

On the second play, Harrell threw a deep pass to Michael Crabtree toward the goal line, but cornerback Jamar Wall picked it off. In celebration, Wall grabbed the football and punted it into the stands just before the entire defense stormed his way to congratulate him.

"The one thing about this defense, they play with lots of excitement," Harrell said. "They're excited to be out there, and that's what it's all about out there."

McNeill said with nearly 15 days of practice against each other, the offense and defense knew what to look for, but he said in the big picture, preparing for the opponent next season is the issue.

"Both sides know what both sides do," he said. "We don't try to hide anything. We don't play Texas Tech next year, we're not trying to fool Texas Tech, and Texas Tech is not trying to fool us, so we just try to go out there and get better at our fundamentals."

Since McNeill's interim tag was removed, the defense was one of the storylines of the spring, but McNeill used his experience to build the defense he wants to put on the field.

"I want people to say that our guys play very hard," he said. "I want people to say that our guys are very aggressive, that our guys bring great fundamentals and discipline. I want them to say our guys make and finish plays. If people watch our guys and make those comments, I'm very happy."

Tech baseball dominates New Mexico State 12-2 behind Jason Seefeld's bat

By BEN MAKI
SPORTS EDITOR

Once the runs start coming, they don't seem to stop for the Texas Tech baseball team.

The Red Raiders took the first game of the midweek series 12-2 against New Mexico State Tuesday at Dan Law Field after putting up 19 runs Sunday against Kansas State.

"There's nothing like winning,"

Tech coach Larry Hays said. "These guys, they've had a tough year being on the road, not anything has gone well for them. It's fun to see them have a little fun."

Jason Seefeld led the way for Tech (19-23) going 3-for-5 with a solo home run, a double and a single, finishing the night a triple shy of the cycle. Seefeld now has three of Tech's last four home runs.

Tech outfielder Chris Richburg also stood out, as he went 2-for-3 in the game with two RBIs.

With the score tied 1-1 in the third, Tech brought Richburg and Seefeld home on a grounder to the right side of the infield by Roger Kieschnick and a Tanner Rindels double to the right field corner, respectively.

"I give the guys a hard time, I say I hit it where the wind blows," Seefeld said. "The wind was blowing out to right today, so I just tried to stay behind the ball, and I got it up in the wind."

Two innings later, the Red Raiders added six more runs, two of which were earned. Tech had four hits, two walks and NMSU (18-25) had two errors helping contribute to the crooked number that appeared on the scoreboard.

"Once we kind of broke that streak of bad games there, we came out today and had some fun," Seefeld said. "The guys were relieved and we got after it and had a lot of fun today."

Tech put up another three spot in the eighth and the scoring was finished by NMSU pinch hitter Nick Cejka.

The scoring started in the second inning when the Aggies' Frankie Busani led off with a double and two batters later crossed home plate when catcher Joe Leghorn singled to left-center. Seefeld tied the game in the bottom of the inning, hitting his big fly just inside the right field foul pole on the second pitch of the at bat.

Russ Fornea got the start for Tech and he pitched four innings, allowing just one run on seven hits and a walk while striking out six. Robert Kilcrease (1-0) came for four innings of relief and picked up the win while giving no runs on two hits while walking four. Brian Cloud finished the game, pitching the ninth.

"If we're up that much, we're supposed to go in there and throw strikes, not walk people, not slow the game down," Kilcrease said. "Just try to get in get out and be done with it."

The Aggies' starter, Dillon Smith (1-3), did not fare as well; he went 4.2 innings, allowing nine runs – five earned – as he gave up eight walks and seven hits while fanning no batters.

Tech will finish the midweek series at 5 p.m. today at Coca-Cola Field in Roswell, N.M.

Tech softball splits doubleheader with UTA

By ALEX YBARRA
STAFF WRITER

Texas Tech's softball's home winning streak ended at eight games after UTA won the opening game of a double header in extra innings, 5-3, Tuesday at Rocky Johnson Field, but Tech went on to win the second game, 8-1.

Within one month, Tech (18-32) has played four home series against Southland Conference teams, which has helped the Red Raiders prepare for Big 12 Conference games, said Tech catcher Robyn Wike.

"They're good little teams; they take good hacks at the ball," she said. "Our pitchers get a lot of work with them. I mean every game is just as important as the next."

UTA's Cara Hulme (12-5) pitched all nine innings for her 11th complete game this season. She gave up five hits and three runs while striking out nine batters.

Tech's Ashly Jacobs (8-14) got the win in her last five appearances at Rocky Johnson Field, but she gave up a three-run home run to Samantha Chumchal in the top of the ninth inning that put UTA up 5-2.

"At one time, they had two runs and two hits," Tech coach Teresa Wilson said. "She missed with a couple pitches and they capitalized on it. We had that situation at Baylor where we missed with a pitch and it went for a home run."

Jacobs got the loss and finished with a total of six hits allowed and four walks in a complete game.

With the international tiebreaker being put to use early in the eighth inning—it normally starts in the 10th

—so the teams could get to the second game sooner, Tech added a run in the bottom of the ninth but three consecutive pop flies ended the game.

UTA's Amanda Swofford and Katie Jones each hit a solo home run to put the Mavericks up 2-1 after the third inning.

Tech's Jennifer Bowers smacked her third home run in as many games, a deep solo shot to straight-away center, tying the game at 2-2, where it would remain deadlocked until Chumchal's home run.

"I just decided to see the ball and hit the ball," Bowers said. "Honestly, that's what I've done. I really haven't changed anything. The swing is the same. I just try to get out of my head and hit the ball, pressure helps in those situations when you need a hit."

In the second game, five Tech players had two hits, and Corkin led the way with four RBIs, while Wike had two RBIs.

Devin Zaragoza drew a walk and Montana Patin followed with a single, and Jennifer Corkin brought them in with a two-run single to give the Red Raiders a 2-0 lead in the first inning.

Robyn Wike reached base in the second inning on a single, which extended her hitting streak to seven games. She would score on a double from Leah Legler, who also came home, courtesy of a Corkin single.

Tye Coats (7-12), who gave up one hit in five innings, pitched her way out of a bases loaded jam in the third inning, and was replaced by Alex Watkins later in the fifth.

A RBI double from UTA's Rebecca Collom cut Tech's lead to 4-1 in the top of the fifth, but Tech would answer with a RBI double from Coats, a two-run home run from Wike, increasing the lead to 7-1.

After walking the bases loaded, UTA's Laura Jones walked in Legler, who was hit by a pitch earlier in the inning. It was the 44th hit by pitch this season, a new Tech record.

Tech will finish up Big 12 Conference play at home, with a pair of series against Iowa State and Oklahoma State at Rocky Johnson Field leading into the Big 12 Tournament.

"If we can play like we did at Baylor, like we did with Nebraska," Wilson said of finishing off the Big 12 season strong, "with that kind of enthusiasm, that kind of aggressiveness, that kind of sense of urgency and excitement, we should do well. This team is very capable."

Tech track team remain consistent adding 26 NCAA marks

By ADAM COLEMAN
STAFF WRITER

As the Texas Tech track team continues to accumulate NCAA regional marks, it expects the competition only to get tougher as the season continues.

Last weekend, the Red Raiders were spread throughout the country at the Mt. Sac Relay in Walnut, Calif., the TCU Invitational in Fort Worth and the McDonnell Invitational in Fayetteville, Ark. Tech still managed to obtain 26 regional marks. The Red Raiders have kept the number of regional marks fairly high throughout the outdoor season, with the lowest total being 13 at the Red Raider Open April 13.

Some of the highlights of last weekend's meets include Sally Kipyego setting a new school record for the 5K event with a time of 15:11.88 seconds. The time earned her Big 12 Athlete of the Week Tuesday.

Michael Cast won the javelin event with a NCAA regional throw of 210 feet, 5 inches.

D'Andra Carter claimed a discus throw of 172'-04". Patience Knight and Ozie Okolie finished second and third with throws of 161'-05" and 157'-05", respectively.

"I think it was a real smart move on our part," Tech coach Wes Kitley said. "I think that everybody that went to wherever they went, got a really good experience."

This outdoor season, the Red Raiders have been consistent not only with a good showing at their only outdoor home meet of the season, but at the Texas Relays, Rice and UTEP.

Tech has four meets left in the outdoor season. At this point, some athletes may be anxious for the chance to compete against their conference foes and are ready to make a final push to finish the season.

"I think they're tired of the semester, and they're anxious about Big 12," Kitley said. "So I think I'm ready for school to finish' and then, that way, we'll still have about another week or so. I think that'll really help take the pressure off of them. Hopefully get focused for Big 12 and have a chance at it."

Whether anxious or facing tougher competition as the season winds down, the Red Raiders still are putting up many regional marks week in and week out.

"I'm really hoping that, that means we're maturing as a team," Kitley said. "These freshman and everybody are growing up. Our veterans, nothing affects them because they've been there before. That's what we've always had as a plan. By the time that we get to this time that everybody's grown up a little bit and have a chance to go into war. We've been battle-tested, so it's been a good experience."

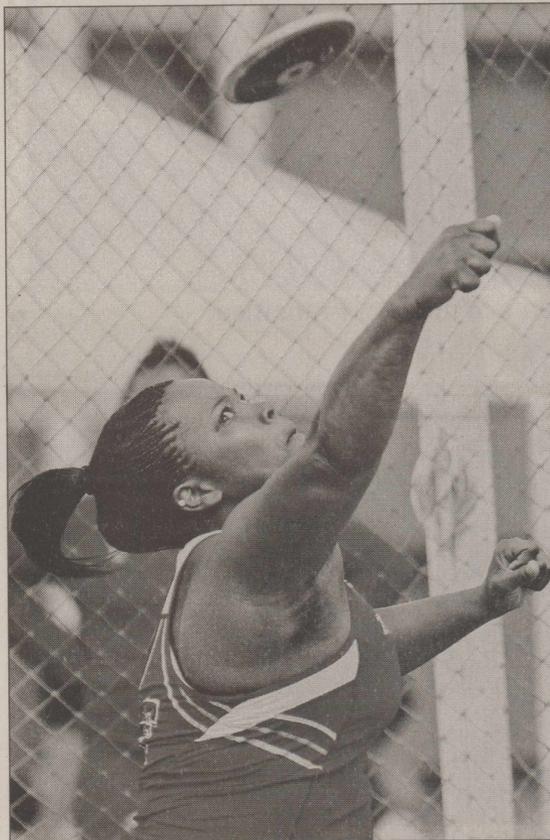

Knight said she believes there is still more work to be done as the Big 12 and Regional Championships arrive.

"Probably, we'll get on high alert," she said. "As long as we get these things fixed, I don't think it'll be too much of a problem. We'll just focus on certain things so we can throw far."

Late in the season, Cast said, athletes usually get better when they realize the competition that lies ahead.

"As the season progresses, your marks get better," he said. "Last year, my marks got better as well. This year, I'm consistently better than last year, which I'm glad. The javelin in the Big 12 this year is pretty stacked. There's about nine guys right now that are already qualified for regionals in the Big 12 alone. That makes our region one of the toughest in the nation as well. The competition's going to be there."

Jake Long signs with Dolphins

DAVIE, Fla. (AP) — Jake Long seemed at ease in his new role as the NFL's No. 1 draft pick, leaning into a news conference microphone to talk about his mean streak while his mother sat in the corner, nodding as she smiled.

The Miami Dolphins were grinning Tuesday, too. They signed the Michigan left tackle to a five-year contract with $30 million guaranteed, and they'll select him with the top pick in the draft Saturday.

The deal allows the Dolphins and Long to avoid a possible holdout.

"It's really important for us to know Jake is going to be on the field for us on time when training camp begins in July," coach Tony Sparano said. "That was critical."

Long's total contract package is for $57.75 million, said a person familiar with the negotiations who didn't want to be identified because the Dolphins declined to reveal terms. Last year's top pick, JaMarcus Russell, signed for $61 million with the Oakland Raiders but missed all of training camp before reaching a deal.
