Tony Miller's horse trailer mishap...

...caused a few harrowing minutes...

Just trailing along...

They didn't end up singing "Happy Trails to You," but the Tony Miller family of Ridgecrest, Calif., was glad their horse story ended on a cheerful note.

Miller, his wife and four children were traveling west on I-20, approaching the FM 715 overpass Monday about 3 p.m. in their station wagon when misfortune struck.

17-year-old Laura Miller was at the wheel when the large horse trailer being pulled behind the wagon began swaying back and forth.

"It just started fish-tailing," said Miller. "I guess the hitch or torsion bars just gave out."

The Millers, moving back to their California home after a stay in New Lime, Conn., were uninjured, but their car was damaged and their trailer turned over on one side.

The trailer was packed with mattresses and suitcases, but also held a more valuable cargo.

"There's an Appaloosa and two P.O.A.'s (Ponies of America) in there," said Miller as he surveyed the trailer, which ended up in the Interstate median. "I don't think the horses

Australia's cooperation assured

By KINGSBURY SMITH

CANBERRA, Australia — Australia's cooperation with the United States in patrolling the Indian Ocean to deter any Soviet aggression in the area will be "absolute."

This assurance was given by Prime Minister J. Malcolm Fraser in an exclusive interview with William Randolph Hearst Jr., editor-in-chief of The Hearst Newspapers, and the writer.

One of the most pro-American leaders of the countries with whom the United States is allied in the Pacific and Europe, the tall, resolute, serious-minded prime minister said Australian naval and air forces in the Indian Ocean already maintain close liaison with U.S. Naval forces there, exchanging surveillance information. An Australian communications base at Northwest Cape in western Australia relays VHF signals to American nuclear submarines in the Indian Ocean.

In response to questions, the prime minister said it would be "correct" to assume that the most important contribution Australia makes to the defense of the United States and itself is the top secret, closely guarded, chiefly American-manned satellite communications base in the Pine Gap area of central Australia.

CALLED THE JOINT Defense Space Research Facility, this base has the world's largest radar installation for tracking and receiving information from America's "spy" satellites that maintain constant surveillance of the Soviet Union. These highly sophisticated camera and electronically-equipped satellites watch Soviet missile firing tests, all activities around the silos containing the nuclear ICBMs targeted at the United States, and the movement of military forces within the Soviet Union. The JDSRF also picks up the Soviet telemetry signals which direct the Russian missiles in flight, and would, in a nuclear war, target its multiple warheads.

This base could receive the first indication of a Soviet ICBM nuclear missile attack on the United States.

Located in the heart of the desolate, waterless, barren mountain and vast red desert "outback" interior of Australia, the base consists of a cluster of white antenna-sheltering "radomes" and oblong buildings housing the computer system. The base is operated mainly by about 225 Americans, including the largest concentration of Central Intelligence Agency experts outside CIA headquarters in Langley, Va. It also includes a few National Security Agency and U.S. Air Force specialists.

The area is a forbidden security zone to unauthorized persons, including reporters. While its whereabouts and purpose is known to the Soviets,

Iranian official held for links to 'spies'

By The Associated Press

Iran's navy commander has been arrested for alleged close links with the "U.S. spies" at the occupied American Embassy in Tehran, the Iranian government newspaper reported today.

The arrest of Adm. Mahmoud Alavi, first reported Monday without explanation, was based on documents found in the embassy, the Islamic Republic newspaper said. It was the third time since the embassy takeover that documents found by the militants holding U.S. Embassy have led to the arrest of an Iranian official.

Today was the 115th day of captivity for the 50 or so American hostages at the embassy. There were no new developments reported that would indicate the hostages would be freed any earlier than April, the time mentioned by revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

On Monday, the U.N. investigating panel on Iran heard testimony from Iranian jurists about the shah's alleged misdeeds, and President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr appeared atop the U.S. Embassy wall to demonstrate solidarity with the young militants holding the American hostages.

The Islamic Republic, quoting unnamed reliable sources, said the navy commander was arrested for his "close links and friendly relations with the U.S. spies held in the U.S. Embassy."

"Some documents have been found about Admiral Alavi in the U.S. spy nest," the newspaper said. The Iranian revolutionaries condemn the U.S. Embassy as a "spy nest."

It said Alavi had been in contact with agents of the previous government of the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and had helped many of them escape. There was no further detail on the allegations against Alavi.

Spokesmen for the embassy militants declined to comment on the case.

Twice before the militants have publicized documents purporting to link government officials with the United States or the shah. In November, they engineered the arrest of a former spokesman for the revolutionary government, Amir Abbas Entezam, for alleged CIA connections. Three weeks ago, the national information minister, Nasser Minachi, was arrested on the basis of embassy documents purportedly showing CIA links.

Bani-Sadr reacted angrily to Minachi's arrest, denouncing the young radicals at the embassy as "dictators" and ordering the minister's release. At that time, the militants were ordered by Iran's Revolutionary Council to deliver any further incriminating documents to the authorities for review.

Alavi, who holds a degree from Harvard University, was named navy commander Jan. 30 to replace Adm. Ahmed Madani, who resigned to run in the presidential election.

Alavi had attained the rank of vice admiral in 1975, under the shah's regime, but retired because of differences with his superiors in the former government.

The five-man U.N. commission began hearing testimony Monday. A source close to the panel said examination of the allegations will continue "for the next couple of days." He said the commission's program is open, and the investigations will be planned from day to day. No other details were given.

County Commissioners approve boost in salary

By SUSAN TOTH
Staff Writer

Midland County Commissioners Monday agreed to add $100 a month to the salary of three justices on the Court of Civil Appeals and heard a report on needs for the Midland County Jail at their regular meeting.

The salary supplement for the justices is allowed under a state statute which permits a total of $8,000 a year per justice to be paid by counties within the district the justices serve.

The justices serving the 12 counties in the Western District are based in El Paso, but hold periodic court sessions in Odessa.

The Odessa sessions help local people who appeal cases because it cuts distance, time and costs for both witnesses and litigants, according to Tom Scott, president of the Midland County Bar Association. He presented the request to the county officials.

Scott requested a flat $4,000 per year be given to be divided by the three justices. But commissioners reduced that to $3,600 to make the payment $100 per month instead of $111.11 per justice.

Commissioners also heard a lengthy report from Sheriff Dallas Smith on 29 items listed for improvement in a January inspection of the Midland County Jail by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

The jail is scheduled to be inspected again in March.

Most of the items were minor problems which already had been corrected or which could be overlooked because the jail was built before the TCJS standards were written, Smith said. Others, such as removing 11 bunks from cells in the women's tank, could be accomplished without losing either security or needed space, he added.

A few of the areas discovered in the January inspection, however, will need special variances granted by the state agency or "lots of money" to change them.

The most serious of those, Smith said, is the requirement that the jail have two exits. Currently, only one staircase leads from the jail to the ground floor. Elevators don't count as an emergency exit in case of fire.

One answer to the problem, Smith said, would be to cut through a wall and open a door from the jail into one of the main courthouse stairwells going from the ceiling to the basement.

That plan could present security problems, he pointed out, since the emergency exit door would have to be placed within one of the jail cells, and the main stairs have doors opening onto each floor.

"It seems to me we'd be spending more money and lowering security," Smith said, in explaining he would ask the commission for permission

New Hampshire residents test political waters; Turnout mixed

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — New Hampshire voters rendered their verdict today in a presidential primary that determined whether there really is a Republican front-runner, and tested the shaken challenge of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy to President Carter's renomination.

Ronald Reagan, the pre-season favorite, and George Bush, twice a winner, were the leading contestants in a seven-way Republican contest.

Voter turnout was mixed when the polls opened at 7 a.m. EST in cool, sunny weather. The early turnout in Nashua's two largest wards was described as "pretty heavy," but polling was light elsewhere in the city. A heavy turnout was reported in Lebanon, but voters were light in Portsmouth.

Kennedy, greeting early bird voters at two polling places here, told reporters he was "upbeat, hopeful — we might have some surprise." Then he flew to Vermont and Massachusetts for a day of campaigning.

Balloting was continuing until as late as 8 p.m. In tiny Dixville Notch, far to the north, all 23 voters met after midnight to cast their ballots over coffee, close the books and announce the first returns of the day.

Republicans in the hamlet handed Reagan and Bush five votes each, followed by Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. with four. John Connally, Rep. Philip M. Crane and Rep. John B. Anderson got one each. The six Democrats gave Carter three votes, Kennedy two and California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. one.

Baker toured polling places in four cities and predicted a heavy voter turnout, which he said would be "good for me (and) very helpful to the future prospects of the Republican Party."

At stake in New Hampshire: 22 votes for the Republican presidential nomination; 19 for the Democratic nomination, all committed in line with candidate shares of the popular vote.

In Minnesota, precinct caucuses tonight begin the process of selecting 75 Democratic nominating delegates and 34 Republicans. The caucuses there are not binding, but a Democratic straw vote tested the strength of the Carter ticket in Vice President Walter F. Mondale's home state, where the president loomed a heavy favorite.

Kennedy once was the favorite in New Hampshire, next door to his Massachusetts home, but not any more. The last pre-primary public opinion poll, conducted for the Boston Globe, said Carter was preferred by 55 percent of New Hampshire Democrats to Kennedy's 30 percent.

The senator from Massachusetts said his situation was like that of the U.S. Olympic hockey team, the underdog that won a gold medal.

"I'm glad to be an underdog," Kennedy said in Nashua Monday. "They were underdogs and they pulled it out, and we're going to do it."

But Kennedy said that whatever the outcome, he will stay in the race. He once said that New Hampshire and Maine were must-win states for his campaign, then changed his mind. Carter defeated Kennedy in the Maine caucuses Feb. 10, with an edge of little more than 3 percent in the popular vote.

Cubans hijack another boat

MIAMI (AP) — The 26 Cubans looked like any other group on a boat tour of Havana Harbor — that is until two of them whipped out pistols and demanded that the bewildered crew take them to the United States.

"Being in the U.S. is very well for me," said 30-year-old Wilfredo Apes-teguia after the refugees stepped ashore on the Florida Keys Monday.

It was the third such boat hijacking this month. Seventy-five refugees involved in two previous escapes have already been granted political asylum.

Carter sending jets, tanks to Egypt

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, in a move that could make Egypt a U.S. military surrogate in the Middle East, proposes to arm the Arab nation with 40 top-notch jet fighters and 250 tanks.

Democratic Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia warned Israel's supporters not to try to block an arms deal for Egypt. Israeli officials, on recent visits here, have expressed deep reservations about supplying Egypt with sophisticated arms.

Answer Line

The auto traffic has increased considerably on West Cuthbert and Andrews Highway.

There are a number of people without transportation living in apartments just south of Cuthbert and Andrews Highway.

Shopping possibilities and eating places are increasing as you look north from Cuthbert and Andrews Highway.

Because of the lack of traffic signals, stop signs, etc., it is almost impossible for a pedestrian to cross from the Gibson area or Andrews Highway without being hit by an auto, because the only traffic signal is on Midkiff and Cuthbert or at the intersection Andrews Highway and Cuthbert, which is four-way traffic and a pedestrian cannot get across even following the right signal.

And, what about bicycle lanes? Can you help the pedestrian? — M.T.R.

ANSWER: The information in your letter to Answer Line has been referred to the Traffic Division of the city of Midland and a study of the situation will be made, according to Doug Vanover.

If I will my property to my married daughter, will it be her separate property, or will it be owned jointly by her and her husband? — J.T.

ANSWER: Under Texas law, so says the State Bar of Texas, if your daughter survives you it would become her separate property, and her husband would have no right to it as long as she is alive.

However, when your daughter dies, unless she leaves a will that provides otherwise, her surviving husband and children would share your property.

If your daughter had no children or other close relatives, her surviving husband may have a claim to some part of your property.

I have a ringing in my ears. Do you know what this might be? — Mrs. R.T.

ANSWER: The Health Insurance Institute says this could be tinnitus. The phenomenon known as tinnitus is a "ringing in the ears or head noises for which there is no external source of the perceived sound," says Dr. Jack Vernon, University of Oregon, Department of Otolaryngology. Tinnitus can be associated with a number of maladies, such as hearing loss, ear infection, wax in the ear, high blood pressure and diabetes. However, it often stems from exposure to loud noises. According to Dr. Vernon, there is no cure for tinnitus.

'Gloves have...slipped off,' Bush says of GOP campaign

HOUSTON (AP) — George Bush, on the eve of the New Hampshire primary, said the "gloves have apparently been slipped off...and the campaign is clearly getting rougher."

The Republican presidential hopeful said he had never predicted a victory in New Hampshire and "I have never felt I was the front runner. I want to do good there."

The Houston oilman called a news conference to explain his side of a controversy that flared Saturday night in a scheduled one-on-one debate with Ronald Reagan.

At Reagan's invitation, four other GOP candidates appeared for the TV debate but they were not permitted to participate.

Afterwards, all of them blamed Bush for refusing to let them join in the program.

Bush insisted Monday that he had been willing to debate all of the candidates or just Reagan but felt the decision rested with the Nashua, N.H., Telegraph, the newspaper that sponsored the event.

Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., accused Bush of being uncivil and ungracious.

Rep. John Anderson, Ill., said Bush "shot himself in the leg." And Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas said of his opponent, "He treated us like dirt under his feet."

Bush said apparently the other candidates "didn't know I had agreed to debate them. I sent them hand-delivered letters today (Monday) expressing my regret about the misunderstanding. But I kept my word all the way."

Asked if he thought the widely publicized incident would hurt his chances in New Hampshire, Bush answered, "I don't know how all this will play. The people are beginning to realize that I was always agreeable to a forum that included all of the candidates, or to a one-on-one with Ronald Reagan."

"I am encouraged that they are learning about Saturday night, and they are calling in and coming in to our headquarters to express their support."

Bush, who won the recent Puerto Rico primary and surprised Reagan in the Iowa caucuses, said of the debate, "I did what I said I was going to do, but there were four others (GOP candidates) out there filing me."

Asked if he had violated the 11th Commandment of the GOP — never to attack another Republican — Bush said, "No, I have not."

He said that he had been under constant attack during the New Hampshire campaign and would not retract an earlier statement that he had been "sandbagged" by the other candidates.

Bush said the TV incident was in no way responsible for his return to Houston shortly before the voting date.

"We have had this scheduled for some time. I will leave tomorrow (Tuesday) for New Hampshire and I already have spent much, much more time there than has Ronald Reagan."

Questioned about the bitter cross-fire between the GOP candidates and its effect on party unity, Bush said, "Passions will cool."

Carter, governors reach truce on revenue sharing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration and the nation's governors have reached a truce in their disagreement over strings the White House wants to attach to the federal revenue sharing program.

Several administration officials, including Stuart Eizenstat, the president's domestic affairs adviser, met through the day Monday with members of the National Governors' Association, here for their winter meeting.

Emerging from a session with Eizenstat and several other governors, Lamar Alexander of Tennessee said he thinks "the president's objectives and the governors' are the same, but there are some technical disputes."

Alexander, a Republican and co-chairman of the governors' revenue sharing task force, said state governments "don't like the federal government mandating ideas and we let Mr. Eizenstat know that the whole principle of revenue sharing was to avoid that."

Eizenstat said the administration was willing to hear the complaints and would try to be responsive, but "there were no commitments made on any points on behalf of the administration."

The subject of revenue sharing and the governors' reaction to the administration's plan are so touchy the White House canceled plans to send its proposal to Congress last week after administration and Carter campaign officials warned of a potentially serious political rift shortly before today's New Hampshire primary.

Revenue sharing, the governors' favorite source of federal aid, is due to expire in September, but Carter has agreed to seek its renewal, including retention of the states' share, a provision he once opposed.

But the new package would mandate commissions to study state-federal fiscal relations. While the governors agree with this idea, they object to the formula for creating the commissions.

Local governments would have a majority on the commissions as proposed, but governors would have the responsibility for filing some 20 reports on the panels' work.

Because delays in the panels' work could mean a cutoff of the states' revenue sharing money, the governors fear deliberate foot-dragging could be used against them on programs unrelated to revenue sharing.

"We discussed their problems in detail," Eizenstat said. "We'll try to be as sensitive as we can within the context of what we're trying to accomplish."

Carter, meanwhile, was attacked by the nation's Republican governors for pursuing an energy program they termed a "national disgrace."

As an alternative, they offered a program calling for greatly increased oil and gas exploration, relaxation of environmental barriers to the mining and burning of coal and a $32 billion federal program to convert the nation's industries to coal-fired boilers.

They criticized as inadequate Carter's $12 billion program to switch about 200 utilities from oil to coal by 1990. Instead, they proposed $2 billion in federal incentives to convert 3,000 utility and industry boilers to coal by 1985.

The GOP plan drew immediate criticism, however, from Democrats at the conference. Gov. John D. Rockefeller IV of West Virginia called the proposals "tremendous, sweeping generalities" that could never be implemented.

UT professor discourages resolution against students

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A University of Texas professor who asked whether "gendarmes" might be listening has persuaded the Faculty Senate to back off a bit on its resolution involving arrested Arab and Iranian students.

Government professor Thomas Philpott said Monday he had been told university police had arrested the students without consulting with school administrators.

He questioned whether plain-clothes "gendarmes" might be taking note of his views, and Chairman James Daniel of the Faculty Senate assured Philpott no police were present.

The Faculty Senate went on record, 22-2, as "affirming the freedom of invited speakers and dissenters alike to express their views."

Twenty-three Arabs and Iranians, mostly university students, were charged with disturbing a public meeting after disrupting a Jan. 31 speech by Fereydoun Hoveyada, United Nations representative under the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Three of the defendants made bond, and the others were released Friday, with their trial set for March 13. Each could receive six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Philpott's resolution said dorns "should meet with the students, and with their sympathizers as well, on a give-and-take, free-exchange, good-faith basis, in the interests of reaching mutual understanding and common accord."

The Faculty Senate, however, rejected, 20-7, the portion of Philpott's resolution that urged the university to "implore the county attorney to suspend prosecution of the 23 arrested students and sympathizers."

Psychology professor Ira Iscoe said, "howling down speakers was a principal tactic of the Nazis."

Carter's futile plus

President Jimmy Carter apparently is on the verge of scoring a major victory which could translate into more clout at the ballot box with Democratic voters.

That victory would be the negotiated release of the some 50 Americans held hostage in Iran since Nov. 4.

But if that release comes soon, which it appears may be the case, chances are that "political plus" will evaporate before the November general election — provided Carter can win the Democratic nomination this time around.

So far the president has proven surprisingly strong in Democratic primaries, stunning Sen. Edward Kennedy at almost every turn.

But Kennedy has not proven to be the attractive candidate many had thought he might be. The Kennedy name has not been the magic for him that it was for either of his brothers, the late President John F. Kennedy or Sen. Robert Kennedy.

Neither has California Gov. Jerry Brown been able to muster a strong challenge to Carter's renomination bid this year, at least in the early primaries.

But winning release of the hostages in Iran could add even more fire to Carter's renomination bid.

The hostage situation has been a unifying force for the American public. In recent months, opinion polls have reflected that Americans tend to feel the president is handling the situation pretty well and that he is doing all anyone could do to win their release.

Currently, a five-member U.N. investigating commission is expected to be sent to Tehran in the near future to begin an inquiry into the alleged crimes there of the former Shah and allegations against the United States. Many believe that commission's investigation may lead to release of the American hostages in the near future.

Without question, that would prove to be a political victory here at home for Carter. Many analysts believe Carter will be judged by voters this year largely on his handling of the hostage situation and the Soviet intervention into Afghanistan.

If that release comes soon, which it could from all indications, Carter would reap a harvest from it at the polls in the next few primaries, including the one here in Texas.

But voters forge quickly. While gaining the release of the hostages might push Carter further ahead of Sen. Kennedy, his closest challenger at this point, and lead to him winning the Democratic renomination, voters likely will have lost the emotional zest a release would bring by time the general election rolls around in November.

Politicians, of course, should not be concerned with using events such as the Iranian situation to further their political futures and no one would forgive a politician who manipulated such an event toward his political advantage.

But the timing of the current crisis certainly has worked to Jimmy Carter's political advantage.

It could help him win renomination. But if it comes soon and if Carter wins the renomination, that political edge may be gone when November arrives.

Then Carter will have to stand on his performance record in other areas and, up until now anyway, that record isn't too impressive.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Feb. 26, the 57th day of 1980. There are 309 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Feb. 26, 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte escaped from exile on the island of Elba to begin his second conquest of France.

On this date: In 1802, one of the great figures of French literature — Victor Hugo — was born.

In 1952, Winston Churchill announced that Britain had produced her own atomic bomb.

In 1957, the United Nations General

Assembly called for a peaceful solution to the Turkish-Greek clash in Cyprus.

In 1978, the Israeli cabinet decided to continue a policy of establishing Israeli settlements in occupied Arab territory.

Ten years ago, riot police, using tear gas, broke up an anti-American demonstration in front of the U.S. Embassy in the Philippine capital of Manila.

Five years ago, the British Parliament approved a $900,000 increase in Queen Elizabeth's budget to run Buckingham Palace and Windsor Castle.

INSIDE REPORT:

Economic calamity crowding unknowing Jimmy Carter

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The cold satisfaction instead of sympathy with which former business colleagues greeted Treasury Secretary G. William Miller's embarrassment in the Textron affair is a hot clue that economic calamity is crowding an unknowing Jimmy Carter.

Nobody in the corporate or financial communities really cares whether as chairman of Textron, Inc., Miller could have been all that ignorant of the giant conglomerate's overseas bribery. But many corporate magnates are pleased with his discomfort for the reason stated by one famed Wall Street barracuda: "He's been a turncoat to the things that a businessman believes in." For different reasons, Capitol Hill also enjoys seeing the aloof Miller in trouble.

Yet, no Cabinet member has a higher standing with President Carter and his inner circle. What endears Miller at the White House is precisely what alienates him with Wall Street, Capitol Hill and Treasury Department professionals: At the Treasury now, as earlier at the Federal Reserve Board, Bill Miller is unabashedly the president's man.

More is involved here than academic discussion of the secretary's proper role. Those who feel he should represent a business constituency while also serving the president believe that dual role performs an economic early warning function. As Carter's loyal servant, Miller does not alert him to unpleasant truths. "He is nothing more than an establishment version of Ham Jordan," a financier with impeccable Democratic credentials told us.

Early warning is badly needed, in the opinion of the business world. While Carter, Jordan and Co. bask in the glow of rising political polls, businessmen see an economy wildly out of control and markets frighteningly unstable. Making matters worse is a Treasury secretary too quick on the trigger with his judgments and a Treasury Department in disarray.

Miller's predecessor, W. Michael Blumenthal, was purged in last year's Cabinet shake-up for what Carter aides called "going into business for himself" — that is, publicly offering independent judgments. That sin ultimately made Blumenthal a hero to businessmen who were at first suspicious of him. He not only belittled pet administration schemes like hospital cost containment but made no secret of it.

There would be no such "going into business for himself" by Bill Miller.

As Federal Reserve Board chairman (a post independent of the administration), he shocked the financial world by declaring on July 30, 1978, that "we're going to see interest rates peak" before year's end. That might have been good mid-term, election-year politics, but it was deplorable economic forecasting.

Worse was Treasury Secretary Miller's statement to newsmen last Sept. 14 that the nation was "halfway through" a recession. Again, that fit White House happy-talk at the low point of Carter's popularity, but it was hooted at by serious economists. Miller backed away a month later.

At that point, in mid-October, Miller embarked on a course affecting the Chrysler Corp. loan guaranty that has been widely labeled as a "disgrace" in Wall Street. After first declaring he would support a tightly-policed loan of no more than $750 million, Miller ended up backing twice that amount with no visible strings attached. All this pales, however, by comparison to Miller's Jan. 15 statement that "it doesn't seem to us an appropriate time to sell our gold..." That no-sell statement stunned American financiers and sent gold racing upward $50 an ounce in one dizzying half-hour.

This tendency by an extremely bright man to speak before he thinks, a common failing in Washington, might be forgiven. So might a personality variously described in Congress as "cautious," "aloof" and "arrogant." So might a disposition that enshrines neatness, both personal and for his ever-clean desk, and abhors tobacco smoke to the point that ashtrays are not permitted in his office.

What is not forgiven is the perception that has now spread to the central banks of Europe that Miller is so much the political front man for the electioneering president that he shrugs off economic reality. The problem is compounded by the increasingly demoralized Treasury by the Feb. 28 departure of the widely-respected Anthony Solomon as under secretary for monetary affairs.

"The one thing that doesn't pay any attention to the political polls are the markets, and they are the only indicator of reality," one worried Wall Streeter told us. But the president pays no attention to the haywire markets, and his secretary of the Treasury does not signal the danger. To apprehensive businessmen, that is a far more serious misdeed than failure to control his conglomerate's bribes.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Is Russia eyeing Cuba's runways?

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — While world outrage is focused on Afghanistan, the troublemakers in the Kremlin are stirring up a new crisis in Cuba.

Intelligence reports warn that the Soviets not only have doubled their combat force in Cuba, but they are lengthening and widening the runways at the Cienfuegos airport. It looks as if the runways are being modified to accommodate the Backfire bomber.

This supersonic Soviet bomber could strike any point in the United States from Cuban bases. By aiming at the nation's underbelly, the Backfire would also encounter little effective air defense.

Russian fighter pilots, meanwhile, have been operating out of Cuban bases for years. Disturbingly, they don't appear to be in Cuba merely to train Cuban pilots. In a report classified "Secret Spike," the Defense Intelligence Agency has noted: "There has been very little interplay between the Soviet and Cuban pilots, and the Soviet flight activity appears to be independent of Cuban operations."

Intelligence sources told my associate Sally Denton that 5,000 Russian combat troops are now based in Cuba — double the number that precipitated an international tempest last September and October. President Carter announced that the presence of a Soviet combat brigade 90 miles from our shores was "unacceptable."

"The thing that concerns us," he declared, "is that it is a combat unit. The Soviets deny it has combat status. But it is a combat unit." He threatened sternly to "take appropriate action."

But the Soviets called his bluff, and Carter backed down. "The brigade issue is certainly no reason for a retreat to the cold war," he said lamely.

His capitulation apparently helped to cause rather than prevent a cold war. Intelligence sources claim the Kremlin decision to invade Afghanistan was made in late October after Carter had conceded that the "unacceptable" combat brigade was now acceptable in Cuba.

As the intelligence experts understand what happened inside the Kremlin, the Politburo concluded that if Carter wouldn't challenge them in Cuba, he would not interfere with them in Afghanistan. The resulting events have brought a sudden chill to Soviet-American relations.

Meanwhile, the number of Soviet infantrymen not only has multiplied but military activity has increased alarmingly in Cuba. One ominous report claims that nuclear construction has started near Cienfuegos and that the Russian troops in Cuba previously had protected nuclear installations in East Germany.

Another secret "Intelligence Appraisal" suggests that Soviet forces may have been sent to Cuba to release Cubans for duty as Soviet surrogates in Africa or "to signal the U.S. that the U.S.S.R. is an in-place Cuban ally should Washington decide to lean on Havana."

But one thing is certain; the Soviets have made a mockery of the Monroe Doctrine.

CHARLEY REESE

Bush isn't conservative although flying colors

The Florida Conservative Union has joined the effort of smoking out George Bush, branding him "... a Trojan horse of David Rockefeller and the discredited liberal Republican establishment."

I had pointed out in an earlier column that the former CIA Director who is campaigning as a conservative Republican is really flying false colors. If he is a conservative, he is the only conservative ever invited by David Rockefeller to be a member of the Trilateral Commission.

Bush, of course, shed his membership in the Commission and in the Council on Foreign Relations in preparation for his campaign. There is a simple fact of life in the Republican Party. There are actually two Republican Parties, a small but rich and influential liberal Republican Party and a larger, conservative Republican Party.

Not since 1964 has it been possible for a liberal Republican to run as a liberal and win the nomination. Sen. Barry Goldwater, the father of modern conservatives, lost the election in 1964, but his nomination battle put control of the nominating process into the hands of conservatives.

Since then, the Rockefeller wing has been forced to co-opt the conservative-sounding nominee. This it did with Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford. This year, Bush is the Trojan Horse. Goldwater in his newly published book, "With No Apologies," warns that David Rockefeller's Council on Foreign Relations and Trilateral Commission are promoting their goals by seizing control of political power in both parties, centralizing power in Washington, and de-emphasizing nationhood to reach their ultimate goal of a "new world order."

FCU Chairman Mike Thompson has pointed out that 20 per cent of the Trilateral Commission's U.S. membership shows up as contributors to Bush's campaign. Also, David Rockefeller, Edwin S. Rockefeller, Godfrey A. Rockefeller, Helen G. Rockefeller, Laurence S. Rockefeller, Mary F. Rockefeller and Rodman Rockefeller.

In addition, there are contributions from George Champion of Chase Manhattan Bank; Peter Crisp of Rockefeller Family & Associates and Alton G. Marshall of Rockefeller Center, Inc.

Thompson points out that in addition to direct contributions from 15 Trilateral Commissioners and five Council on Foreign Relations directors, others have contributed indirectly. Employees and their spouses of Brown Brothers, Harriman & Co., whose partner, Robert V. Roosa is a Trilateralist, have contributed a total of $9,000 to Bush.

Bush's issues director, Stefan Halper, is former assistant to Sen. William Roth, a Trilateral Commissioner; Peter Tealey, press secretary, worked for William Brock, GOP National Chairman and a former Trilateralist as well as Sen. Jacob Javits, an old Rockefeller ally. Susan Morrison, Bush's deputy press secretary, used to work for the Democratic National Committee and in 1972 was a staffer for George McGovern's campaign.

There is only one point to all of this. George Bush, whatever he is, is not conservative and is most definitely the Rockefeller anointed candidate on the Republican side.

It's no skin off my nose if you want to vote for him, but if you are tired of Jimmy Carter's foreign policy, I would suggest you don't. You see, in 1976, Carter was the Democrat candidate David Rockefeller chose to bamboozle the boobs in the boondocks. Carter installed nearly 20 Trilateral Commission people in his administration, starting with himself and Vice President Walter Mondale. Carter's policies are Trilateral policies.

Rockefeller's game is to put horses in both races. That way, no matter who loses, he wins. I just wish he had better taste in horses.

Variety Show

Gary Coleman (left) and Steve Allen are co-hosts of the special two-hour premiere of NBC's dazzling variety series, "The Big Show," to be colorcast Tuesday, Feb. 26.

Gary Coleman is the pint-size favorite who gained stardom on NBC's "Diff'rent Strokes." He started his career doing fashion shows for a Chicago department store. A talent scout for Norman Lear hired him to act in the pilot for a revival of "The Little Rascals." It was not successful, but Lear saw the tape and is quoted as saying, "We have gold in that kid."

Sculptor suggests real training

By FLORENCE SICOLI

ROME (AP) — Young artists should shun art school and learn their craft by working as carpenters or cement mixers, says Giacomo Manzu, one of Italy's greatest living sculptors.

Turning 71 and still working daily, Manzu advised budding artists to join the working class.

The sculptor of the bronze Doors of Death at St. Peter's Basilica recalled in an interview that his own career started at age 10 as a carpenter, engraver, gilder, polisher and stucco worker.

"Young artists have to go to work like everybody else," said Manzu, enjoying good health at his rambling, hilltop villa in Ardea, 25 miles from Rome.

"If they want to learn how to create with stone and marble or wood, why don't they construct sidewalks or do carpentry and engraving," he said.

"I am absolutely against art schools. They cannot produce either sculptors or painters," said Manzu, who taught in art schools in Milan and Turin but never received formal art lessons himself.

"Art schools don't really know anything about the materials of art," added the sculptor, who created many busts of Pope John XXIII.

An avowed atheist, Manzu bears a striking resemblance to the gentle and unassuming Pope John with whom he shared a strong friendship, despite their differences in beliefs.

Born Dec. 22, 1908, one of 12 children of an impoverished Bergamo shoemaker, Manzu launched his sculpting career at 20, working with construction materials and discarded marble in a toolshed loaned to him by a local architect.

The sculptor's works — bronze bas-reliefs and statues of cardinals, crucifixions, dancers, lovers and adolescents — are on display in leading museums around the world.

Despite his advancing years, Manzu says he continues to work daily "because it's my responsibility."

"Many think an artist lives a special life. Instead, I go to work every day like everyone else.

"I believe all men's activities are equally important even though my work may be more cerebral than that of a street cleaner," said the sculptor, who claims to have no interest in politics but describes himself as "a man of the left."

The fame brought on by seven decades of his art and unorthodox views has done little to raise the sense of poverty he knew well as a child.

toward art. "When I start working in my studio I don't tell myself I'm an inspired artist. I don't believe in inspiration. I work and that's it."

"I am a very arrogant man in the sense that I think always of trying to be in some way helpful to other men, of doing something that might be useful," Manzu said.

And despite his material success, he continues to praise the sense of poverty he knew well as a child.

"I love poverty of means to live and work. It creates less harmful consequences than wealth," he said, sitting in a leather armchair in his living room, surrounded with drawings by Matisse, Picasso, Morandi and Modigliani.

"I can have armchairs instead of chairs, excuse me. It's my right after so many years of working. But I content myself with few material comforts. I believe that poverty is the only wealth that a man can have."

Seniors spend awarding weekend

Hey, Rebs. Our very own "Gary's Gang" (all seniors) started Thursday night off "Drinkin' and Drivin'" all the way to the Holiday where the Senior Dinner began the "Weekend." First Origin moved everyone into the disco groove with their "Boogie Woogie" words of wisdom. As the people shouted "Do It One More Time" (and they weren't talking about the meal), the program progressed and the awards were given out. As names were called, people blushed and were flushed, as most slid down their chairs into a little hole beneath them. But the crowd agreed that our fantastic senior class officers couldn't have made better choices on who received which awards. But then as the dinner ended, the evening began. We started out "Cruisin'" the night, but the night seemed like it would never end as everyone "Dream(ed) Police" as the "Memories" of the past. Nevertheless, they all remember them as "The Happiest Days of Our Lives." And above all, they knew it wasn't the end — there is still more to come.

Although our guy and gal roundballers suffered frustrating losses this week, they still played good games. No matter what, remember "we're backing you all the way, and we love you."

Senior girls on your way to Padre, be sure and stop by the YC at 7 a.m. Tuesday and pick up your passports. Get set Rebs, 'cause our remarkable Rebel baseball players are comin' up swingin'. With the supervision of our one and only Coach Johnson, we've already got a head start. So get ready for a fabulous season 'cause we're gonna have one. Good luck, guys!

The superb Rebel swim team will travel to Lubbock this weekend as it competes for the regional title. Everybody knows who is best, so they just need to show up and fulfill our expectations. Good luck!

Our famous JETS finally had a car wash last Saturday and the weather agreed with members as they put their A&M spirits to work. A great big thanks goes to all of our hardworking members and teachers. Without you all, we never would have made it. As the day grew longer, the people grew wetter, but nevertheless it was a big success. Congratulations!

Never fear, it's time again for a Rebel cheer as we approach another holiday. So, get ready to get all the "kinks" out, but you had better beware, 'cause the police will be there.

Until next week, Karen, Gina and Leigh Anne sayin' "Have fun!" Postscripts: Hey, Lee Lee, did you ever get dried out?

By the way, Travis and Terry, you look a little different under water! Also, a big thanks to a helpful Midland High inventor (Jim).

Carson City 'cartwheels' selling more like hotcakes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has been swamped with orders for the Carson City silver dollars offered for sale to the public and is pleading for patience on the part of would-be buyers.

"In the first 10 days we have received over 350,000 pieces of mail," reported Debbie Swann of the General Services Administration, which is handling the sale.

Although nearly a million of the "cartwheel" dollars were offered, most of the orders are for several coins and Ms. Swann said the sale has already been vastly oversubscribed.

Originally plans were to limit the sale to 500 coins per order, but she said that to serve more buyers that limit has been drastically reduced.

At any rate, Ms. Swann said, the agency is able to process about 7,000 orders a day and because of the volume of mail it will be several weeks before buyers learn whether they will receive all or part of their order.

"We're just buried under mail. We hope people will please be very patient," she pleaded.

Because of the large volume of orders, the maximum individual sale is now set at 10 1883 coins, 20 1884 coins and five coins from the mixed years collection.

The 1883 coins sell for $65 each, the 1884s for $60 and the mixed years for $45 apiece. The sale is expected to bring in $50 million to the treasury.

The dollars, made of 90 percent silver, were struck between 1878 and 1893 at Carson City, Nev. They feature the head of Miss Liberty on one side and an eagle and wreath on the other.

More than two million similar coins were sold by the government in earlier auctions, but those were discontinued in 1974 because of declining interest.

However, rising silver prices spurred renewed interest in the government's stock of silver coins and the decision was made to sell off those on hand.

Only about 55,000 silver dollars remain in general services stocks now, and those will be auctioned off later this spring. Those coins are considered more rare than the ones being sold currently, and minimum bid prices are expected to be $100 or more.

The boys know what's going on

ROUSTIN' ABOUT with Ed Todd

GOLDSMITH — The boys know, even if some of the others don't know, what's really happening in Goldsmith.

"I don't know what goes on around here," said 20-year-old Cindy Trotter, as she clerked from behind the counter and listened to blaring radio music at the Town & Country Grocery Store.

She's too busy working and getting her schooling at Odessa College to pay that much attention to the goings-on in her hometown of 550 or so folks. But the schoolboys playing street baseball and otherwise messing around in front of the old movie house, since converted to a Scout Hut, seemingly know what's going on, or, at least, know what's going on that's important to them.

It's mostly oil field and related work for the men folk, housework for the women, school and chores for the girls, and more schooling, baseball and soccer for the boys, and visions of what they're going to be when they grow up. What else could there be in a small town that was born in 1935 as an oil boom town and has since shed its original name, Ector City.

"It's nice," said 11-year-old Shaun Watson, as he and his chum, Manuel Mendoza, were idly throwing an oil field pump jack ball bearing at the base of the old movie house's threshold. "We've got plenty of oil field men here. This is what this place is half-way made of."

Seemingly from out of nowhere there emerged Buddy Averitt, 9, decked in his baseball catcher's uniform, and his pitcher, Stephen Carson, 9.

"I was all-star pitcher this year," confident Stephen said forthrightly. "Everybody just seemed to back up from the plate" when he was winding up to throw. "Sometimes it (the ball) don't go over the plate, and one time I broke this fellow's arm. We beat them (Gardendale) 36 to zip."

Goldsmith's young baseballers are "majors" among the minors, to hear these young-fellows talk. This year, they'll be playing Little League Baseball; last season, they were in the Minor League.

"All they (opponents) have are little shrimp," volunteered Shaun. And Buddy said that the West Odessa baseballers fudge on the field.

"They cheat. They have signals." In addition to playing catcher, Buddy plays second base, shortstop, left field and right field. Shaun plays center field and right field.

Stephen, aside from being a fearsome pitcher, also is versatile; he plays shortstop, first base and left field.

Manuel opts to play European soccer rather than the all-American baseball.

"He's the best player of all," Buddy bragged on Manuel.

Presently, there came along the makings of Goldsmith's best jogger: a girl who broke up the all-boy "bull" session.

"I'm a jogger," said Brandy Carson, Stephen's 5-year-old sister. She picked up and played around with the boys' bat. The guys didn't object.

When Brandy grows up, she wants to go to Hawaii, though she has been there before with her parents and big brother.

Stephen wants to be a cowboy. Shaun, like his father, plans on being a mechanic. Buddy has aspirations of being a major league baseball player. "I don't know," said Manuel.

The boys and the girl milled around the main street, Scharbauer, and ran into fellow denizens such as Herbie Taylor, 13, and Charlie Samson, 9, and wandered on home when the sun began to set.

Brandy Carson, 5, stands out among the "old boys" in this picturesque pose in front of the old movie house in Goldsmith, an oil-boom shack town in the mid-1930s and 1940s. The fellows, from left, are Buddy Averitt, Stephen Carson, Manuel Mendoza and Shaun Watson. (Staff Photo by Ed Todd)

SMU paper rejects Playboy ad

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist and Harvard universities have something in common now that SMU's student newspaper has refused to publish an advertisement for Playboy Magazine.

Playboy photographer David Chan, soliciting female students to pose for a planned pictorial feature called "Girls of the Southwest Conference," was told Monday the SMU Daily Campus would not accept the ad.

Director of Student Publications Frank Ragulsky told the newspaper Feb. 8 that the proposed ad was "not consistent with existing policy regarding modeling advertising."

In the same issue, the student yearbook advertised for "tons of beautiful girls" to pose for photographs, saying the models would be charged a $12.50 sitting fee.

Chan angrily accused the newspaper of "a double standard."

"I don't understand," he told Melanie Marshall, director of advertising. "You're exploiting these women by not paying them. Playboy at least pays for services rendered."

"We have decided not to be involved with any advertising dealing directly or indirectly with nudity," Ms. Marshall replied.

Chan told reporters the ad has run in 33 campus newspapers the last four years, during various magazine features. He said the only other student newspaper to reject the ad was the Harvard Crimson.

Ragulsky said the newspaper's editorial pages are controlled by students, but the administration controls advertising policy.

Chan told reporters models would be fully clothed in the initial sessions.

Superintendent's suspension angers blacks

MIAMI (AP) — Dade County school administrators, shaken by the indictment and suspension of Superintendent Johnny L. Jones in the "Gold Plumbing Caper," are struggling to regroup in the face of outrage from the black community.

"It's like a big earthquake hit. A disaster has hit the black community," said Robert Simms, Dade Community Relation Board director.

Doris Tolen, switchboard operator at school headquarters, said Monday she was besieged by callers angry about the suspension of Jones, one of the most prominent leaders in South Florida's black community.

"Two teachers have called me to tell me they think the school system's employees are being polarized," county school board member Ben Sheppard said.

"Disheartened" was the word acting Superintendent Leonard M. Britton used to describe the mood of administrators of the nation's fifth-largest school system.

Jones and suspended MacArthur High School Principal Solomon Barnes are charged with second-degree theft in connection with the order of $9,000 worth of deluxe plumbing equipment for a non-existent class. Joyce Knox, the only black on the school board, voted for the suspension of Barnes at an emergency meeting Sunday. But she urged the board to be lenient with Jones because of his outstanding performance since taking over the system in 1977 and because of racial tension in the community.

In the past year, a black businessman died of injuries allegedly inflicted by police officers, a black school-teacher was beaten by investigators who entered his house by mistake on a drug raid and a black youth was shot to death by a Hialeah police officer.

Jones and Barnes were indicted by a Dade County grand jury Saturday and were released after appearances at the county jail.

FUBAR?...Man? Robot? Cosmic Comedian? It matters little. Take note of the name now for it may someday soon belong to the most famous being on Earth.

FUBAR epitomizes the American way. Hailing from humble beginnings, his mother was a washing machine and his father a thirteen speed blender. FUBAR has parlayed a punning personality with a heart of pure uranium to pull himself up to prominence.

The versatile robot has done promotions for shopping malls, industry and even a Japanese restaurant from whom he prepared a table side meal that literally tasted out of the world. At malls the fun escalates when "earthlings" try to corner the mobile know-it-all with profound questions. Only, he's too cagey to be caged. He flirts, jokes and philosophizes his way to freedom, simultaneously entertaining and bewildering spectators during four one hour performances a day. Inevitably, curious souls approach the charmer in armor to inquire, "what makes you work?" He rarely admits it, but it's obvious love, life and the joy of Earthlings. Earthlings of all ages can enjoy FUBAR.

Dillard's latest store to open in Odessa's new Permian Mall

ODESSA — The opening of Dillard's Department Store in Permian Mall here Wednesday is the latest chapter in the story of a rapidly-expanding department store chain.

William T. Dillard, chairman of the board, opened his first store in 1938 in Nashville, Ark. A second store opened 10 years later in Texarkana. That launched the expansion program. Today, 47 Dillard's stores can be found in seven states.

Dillard said his stores are operated on three basic principles.

"First, we present to the customer the best merchandise available in a famous name, nationally-advertised products. Second, all Dillard stores offer outstanding values at a pleasing price because of our cost-control techniques and volume buying," he said.

And, Dillard added, "We believe in the principle of truth in advertising. This code of ethics has allowed our stores to continue to grow with the great Southwest."

A major part of Dillard's marketing philosophy is based on what he terms sound selling methods, keen attention to day-to-day organizational details, alert selection of personnel and hard work.

Dillard has a bachelor's degree from the University of Arkansas and a master's degree in retailing from Columbia University. His five children also are involved in the business.

Denise Dillard, a recent graduate of Southern Methodist University, is an assistant buyer of ladies ready-to-wear in the Central Division. William Dillard is a graduate of the University of Arkansas and has a master's degree from the Harvard School of Business Administration. He is president of the parent firm and is chief operating officer.

Alex Dillard is a graduate of the University of Arkansas and holds a law degree from The University of Texas at Austin. He is executive vice president and a member of the board of directors of Dillard's.

Mike Dillard, who holds a master's degree in business from Washington University in St. Louis, Mo., is general merchandise manager of the Little Rock Division, a vice president and member of the board of directors.

Drue Dillard is a graduate of The University of Texas. She is corporate merchandising manager of the children's fashion division.

Dillard to oversee opening of store in morning ceremony

ODESSA — Dillard Department Stores, Inc., one of the faster growing chains of department stores in the nation, will open a 100,000-square-foot store Wednesday in Permian Mall here.

Another Dillard's will open this fall in Midland Park Mall.

More than $9,000 in prizes will be given away during the grand opening. William T. Dillard, chairman of the board, will oversee ribbon-cutting ceremonies at 9:30 a.m. Dan Bower, store manager, also will participate.

Dillard started the chain of stores in 1938 when he invested $8,000 in a small store in Nashville, Ark. An expansion program has led to 47 stores spanning seven states.

The Odessa store is designed with subdued, natural lighting and a mirror application to create a chandelier effect. The color scheme is natural woods and warm tones.

Charles Franzke, president of the Texas Division of Dillard's, said the Odessa store will provide shoppers with a complete selection of quality national brands.

Government issues new list of waste disposal regulations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government, vowing to prevent the occurrence of another Love Canal disaster, today issued regulations aimed at insuring the safe disposal of 57 million tons of hazardous wastes generated by American companies each year.

Douglas Costle, head of the Environmental Protection Agency, said in announcing the new rules that 90 percent of chemical wastes are now disposed of improperly.

"The size of the problem is staggering," Costle said. "The eventual solution... will require a transformation in the way that American industry handles its wastes."

The new rules require all firms that produce hazardous wastes, transport them or operate dump sites to notify the EPA of their existence by July. Officials estimate there are 750,000 firms generating wastes, and 10,000 trucking companies hauling it to 30,000 active dump sites.

Costle said the inventory would give the agency a "national roadmap of where waste is and where it is going."

Beginning in October the firms producing the wastes will have to keep inventories of all hazardous chemicals leaving their plants. A manifest for each shipment will have to be signed by the dump operator and returned to the chemical plant, which will be required to notify the EPA if the completed form is not received within 35 days.

EPA officials said the manifests were designed to eliminate the problem of "midnight dumpers" who haul chemicals from plants and then dump the wastes in streams or sewers.

"The system prevents illicit disposal because responsibility is fixed and evasion requires extensive collusion," Costle said.

The regulations announced today by Costle were the first issued to implement a law passed by Congress in 1976 to police hazardous wastes. The EPA has come under heavy congressional criticism for a three-year delay in implementing the law.

Hazardous wastes became a national issue in 1978, when more than 200 families were forced to abandon their homes in the Love Canal area of New York because of chemicals leaking from a dump site. Since then, other problems have surfaced in a variety of states and officials have warned that chemicals seeping into underground water supplies posed a serious threat to drinking water in many areas of the country.

"For decades, we dumped out the back door and into any vacant lot or inadequate landfill assuming that the wastes could be forgotten," Costle said. "Unfortunately these wastes did not just go away."

Costle said the EPA will issue in April a list of the chemicals it considers hazardous and set up the operating standards that chemical dump sites will have to follow. The agency also will issue the guidelines states must meet to implement the federal program.

If a state does not choose to meet the federal standards, then the EPA will run the hazardous waste program there.

Costle said dump sites, which must apply for their operating permits by October, will be able to obtain interim licensing until the final permits can be processed.

Flu outbreak sparks fear of disease; Schools closed

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP) — More than 12,000 students in the Battle Creek area were staying away from classes today as a flu outbreak raised fears of Reye's Syndrome, a mysterious and often fatal disease that sometimes follows viral infection.

The Union City school board voted 4-3 on Monday to close their schools for the rest of the week because of the flu. Five other districts planned to reopen Wednesday.

Two children from Sherwood Elementary School in the Union City district have died from Reye's Syndrome since the school year began. Some worried parents there have urged that schools be closed for the rest of the year, and hospital officials say they have been swamped with calls.

Officials closed all elementary and junior high schools in the Battle Creek, Springfield, Harper Creek, Lakeview, and Pennfield districts.

Meanwhile, the state Department of Public Health said it would intensify its studies of Reye's and its possible links to food, medicine and pesticides.

The disease usually affects young children, causing liver failure, brain swelling, relentless vomiting and behavioral changes. There is no universally accepted therapy, according to the Merck Manual of Diagnosis and Therapy.

Experts say the disease is not contagious, but cases seem to occur in clusters. Michigan health officials say the state has had 25 cases and four deaths since the end of November.

"People here are sure starting to panic," said Penny Simmons, a 22-year-old Union City mother. "A lot of people are saying that these health people know more than they're telling us; that maybe Reye's Syndrome is contagious, but they don't want to tell us."

After absenteeism ranging from 11 percent to 32 percent last Friday, school and health officials in the Battle Creek area said they began calling the homes of absent students to determine if fear of Reye's

Syndrome was contributing to low attendance.

Bruce Parsons, Calhoun County health department administrator, said that 75 percent to 90 percent of the children who were absent were suffering from a flu-like illness.

"The purpose of the two-day closure is to give the students an extended convalescent period," Parsons said. "But it is only going to be effective if children are kept at home."

About 100 cases of Reye's have been reported this flu season in Ohio, eight in Minnesota and five in New York City. The mortality rate from Reye's is high but declining, apparently because parents are bringing their children to hospitals sooner, said Dr. Cornelia Davis of the national Center for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Scientist wants to test shroud

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. (AP) — A scientist hopes to get permission this year to conduct a test that would show whether the venerated Shroud of Turin is from the first century — the time in which Jesus Christ lived.

Robert Dinegar, a scientist at Los Alamos Scientific Laboratories, said determining the age of the shroud is a vital aspect of the investigation of the piece of cloth believed by some to be the burial wrapping of Christ.

He said tests conducted by a group of 40 scientists in October 1978 produced evidence consistent with the history and origin of cloth... in times and places traditionally associated with it" and that "no evidence has yet been uncovered that indicates the Shroud of Turin is a hoax."

The proposed test, he said, would involve use of sensitive carbon-14 dating techniques which, until recently, couldn't be performed without damaging the material being studied.

If the carbon-14 tests show the shroud is from the right century, then "we have a piece of cloth that could have been used as a burial shroud," he said. The cloth has an image on it that some believe is an outline of Christ's body created when he rose from the dead.

Dinegar said, however, that positive results would not mean it was Christ's burial shroud. "We will never be able to prove it was used to bury Jesus of Nazareth," he said.

The history of the shroud has been traced to 1353 when a man named Geoffrey de Charney built a church to hold it in Lirey, France. It is now kept in a silver box in Turin.

Dinegar said the Pontifical Academy of Sciences in Rome is considering the request. He said the Archbishop of Turin, who has custody of the relic, was inclined to grant permission, but the request was turned over to the academy because the archbishop wanted it to go to a higher authority.

"We have every reason to believe permission is forthcoming," said Dinegar. "There's no one standing in the way of the test."

In the February issue of an Episcopal magazine, "The Living Church," Dinegar, an Episcopal priest, wrote that new developments in the carbon-14 test enable researchers to use a smaller piece of the material than previously required while getting a more accurate date. Sufficient material already is available, he said, in the form of threads and two small swatches removed during repairs in 1973.

Dinegar said the test involves counting carbon atoms with a mass spectrometer. The date is estimated by comparing the number of radioactive carbon-14 atoms, which decay in time, with non-radioactive carbon-12 atoms.

Mrs. Gacy's testimony tells of abusive father

CHICAGO (AP) — John W. Gacy Jr. had an unaffectionate and mean father who drank so much at times that he took on a different personality. Gacy's mother has testified.

Marian Gacy wept as she told jurors in her son's trial on charges of 33 sex-related slayings about her husband's habit of coming home from work, heading to the basement and drinking excessively.

When he went to the basement, the 72-year-old woman testified Monday, it was like "Jekyll and Hyde ... There would be two voices ... He'd be talking to himself."

Mrs. Gacy testified her husband, John Gacy Sr., who died in 1969, "was always on John for something."

"The father never showed affection for the children," Mrs. Gacy, who also had two daughters, testified. "But all the children loved him anyway and I loved him."

"He was the best person in the world," she said. "But when he drank, he was very mean."

Mrs. Gacy was called as a witness for the defense, which is trying to prove that the 37-year-old remodeling contractor is innocent by reason of insanity. The prosecution has asked the death penalty.

Mrs. Gacy also testified her son struck his head several times as a youth. One time, she said, he slipped and fell three flights of stairs.

Bundy lawyer wants new trial

LAKE CITY, Fla. (AP) — A lawyer for convicted triple murderer Theodore R. Bundy filed a motion for a new trial Monday, claiming the jury that found Bundy guilty of killing a schoolgirl failed to presume him innocent as required by law.

Attorney Victor Africano filed the motion here before Circuit Judge Wallace Jopling, who sentenced Bundy to death in Orlando Feb. 9 for the kidnap-murder of 12-year-old Kimberly Diane Leach of Lake City.

In a 49-point motion, Africano argued the jury failed to follow Jopling's instructions that the defendant be presumed innocent and that the burden of proof rested with the prosecution. The lawyer said it was apparent the panel shifted the burden of proof to the defendant.

The 33-year-old Bundy was already on Death Row for the January 1978 slayings of two Florida State University sisters in Tallahassee.

and a daughter, Sara. The family has requested memorials be directed to the Arthritis Foundation.

West Virginia has doctoring dilemma

By BRYNA BRENNAN

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Thousands of rural West Virginians lack proper health care because of a shortage of doctors, health officials say, but spaces in the state's three medical schools are going begging.

"It's a 'Catch-22,'" said Ben Morton, chancellor of the state Board of Regents, which runs the schools.

There aren't enough qualified West Virginians to fill the medical school classes. Morton says the schools could fill the vacancies with out-of-state students — who are banging down medical school doors elsewhere — but legislators balk at spending money on outsiders.

"Medical education is very expensive, and there is a feeling it should be for our own taxpayers," said Morton.

Out of a total state budget of about $1 billion, the state spent $22.7 million on medical education in 1978-79.

In addition, Morton said, many legislators believe West Virginia is too small a state to support three medical schools and an urging that at least part of the curriculum be consolidated at one school, West Virginia University.

Much of the problem lies in attracting young doctors to rural West Virginia. "It's for social reasons," said Dr. John Jones, dean of the WVU medical center. "Mental and physical stimulation" is lacking in small-town West Virginia, he said.

The gap in rural care has been filled, to an extent, by foreign physicians. Of 2,231 practicing doctors in the state, 700 are foreign-born, according to state Health Department figures.

But the doctor shortage is a serious problem in many areas. Residents of rural Milton in Cabell County were so disturbed that they might lose their doctor that they marched on the state Capitol, even though the physician in question — Dr. Donald Klinestiver — had been convicted on a federal drug charge and was facing disciplinary action before the state Medical Licensing Board.

Medical education boomed here in the past decade. The state took over a private osteopathic school in Lewisburg and created a medical school at Marshall University in Huntington. Marshall enrolled its first class in 1978, the same year the osteopathic school graduated its first class.

But while the expansion meant a blossoming of opportunities for pre-medical students, admissions officers were fated with accepting some unqualified applicants to try to fill classes, Morton said.

Some of the accepted students had C academic averages and below-par scores on the standard medical school admission test, he added.

"I have a serious question that we have enough qualified students to fill the places," he said.

Medical school, Jones said, "is a long hard struggle and many people are not qualified and won't improve."

West Virginians scored below the national average last year on all six areas of the national admissions tests administered by the American College Testing Program of Iowa City, Iowa.

Nationally, 46 percent of applicants were accepted to medical schools, according to the Association of Medical Colleges, based in Washington, D.C. But West Virginia's medical schools accepted 63 percent of their applicants.

Last year, 295 people applied for 184 openings. Fifteen out-of-state students were admitted.

Jones said all students admitted to WVU's medical school last year scored above average on the admission test. But he added, the school has been ordered to expand — it admitted just 88 students last year.

Dr. Robert Coon, dean of the Marshall medical school, said five or six students have been admitted with academic averages below B.

"Grades are not the only factors taken into account," Coon said. "The medical tests tend to be for upper middle-class suburban students rather than rural West Virginians. We're interested in personal recommendations and each applicant is interviewed."

Solutions to the problems of finances and admissions have been offered. George Pickett, director of the state Department of Health, said the schools should seek students with strong West Virginia ties.

"If you deliberately set out to increase the number of people taken from rural areas then they'll go back there," he said.

Legislators have complained that the schools are too costly, and a legislative subcommittee has recommended the three schools consolidate their first two years of training at WVU.

Gov. Jay Rockefeller offered a partial solution to the money problems in his 1980-81 budget proposal. He suggested the osteopathic school eliminate clinical training, thus reducing on-campus work from four years to two. The last two years would be spent in out-of-state osteopathic hospitals under contract with the state.

"There has been this feeling that if you train enough doctors they will spill out and fill up" the state, Morton said. "I doubt if it will work."

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Aspirin may be best medicine

Dear Dr. Solomon: My doctor has recommended aspirin for my arthritis. With so many new wonder drugs on the market, isn't there anything better than aspirin for this condition? The extra few dollars it might cost would not be a problem for me. Would you be able to recommend a drug useful for treating arthritis? — Sue

Dear Sue: I would like to make two points as forcefully as I can: First, medication cannot be prescribed from a distance; a thorough examination of the patient is a prerequisite to any recommendation for treatment. And secondly, aspirin is a wonder drug, despite its easy availability and modest price.

Although there are a number of newer prescription medicines on the market, aspirin is the drug of choice in treating the inflammation of arthritis. Not only is it effective, but it can be taken by most patients for extended periods of time, without causing any serious adverse side effects.

You will probably do best by following your doctor's advice. The fact that aspirin is relatively inexpensive only adds to its attractiveness as a true "wonder" drug.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I joined the ranks of joggers eight months ago, and I was doing rather well until recently. Since increasing my distance from two to three miles daily, I have begun to feel pain in my ankles. A friend says that I probably have jogger's ankle. Is there such a condition and, if so, what should I do about it? — Tom

Dear Tom: First, let me suggest that you see a physician for a definitive diagnosis and treatment. Obviously, your body is trying to tell you something, and you should not ignore the symptoms.

The condition known as jogger's ankle is a nonspecific term that, indeed, applies to any feeling of pain in that area. It can involve any of the structures of the ankle, including bone or soft tissue. The condition can result from overuse, and possibly a three-mile run at this point is too much for you.

The best way to deal with any such problem, of course, is to prevent it. A good pair of well-fitted running shoes and proper training methods are essential. In addition, you should warm up adequately with stretching exercises before starting out, select a good running surface and remember not to push yourself beyond your limits.

Exercise should help build you up, not tear you down. Whenever there is discomfort, it may be necessary to limit the distance or the number of times a week that you run; or you may have to give up running completely or a while until the soreness disappears.

But first see your doctor so that treatment may be formulated that is appropriate to the specific condition that is causing your pain.

(If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Chevron energy report:

We made a nickel— We'll be investing a dime.

Chevron's 1980 U.S. energy expenditures will be more than twice the size of our '79 U.S. profit.

In 1979, Chevron's expenditures for domestic energy development were nearly $1.4 billion, and in 1980 they will be even greater.

Looking at this in another way, in 1980 Chevron plans to invest over 10¢ per dollar of 1979 U.S. petroleum sales. By comparison, Chevron made about 5¢ on a dollar of U.S. sales last year — though, on the average, people thought we made ten times that much.*

We believe that increasing our spending on energy development right here at home is the best way to help move America toward energy independence.

Meanwhile, it's equally important that we all continue to conserve as much energy as possible.

Thank you for listening.

*An August, 1979 survey by Opinion Research Corporation found that, on the average, people believe that oil company profits are about 57¢ on each dollar of sales.

WORLD BRIEFS

Coup leaders swear moderation, junta

PARAMARIBO, Surinam (AP) — Army sergeants who took over the government of Surinam the day before their leaders were to appear in court for sentencing promised a civilian junta, respect for human rights, the honoring of all treaties and protection for foreign investments.

About 15 persons were reported killed in the coup Monday in the former colony of Dutch Guiana, the world's fourth largest producer of bauxite, on the northeast coast of South America. It was Latin America's fourth coup within a year.

"As soon as possible, a civilian junta will be presented to take care of the business of government," the sergeants announced in a telecast.

They also promised respect for Surinam's democratic principles, but nothing was said about elections for a new Parliament, which had been scheduled for March 27.

The fate of Prime Minister Henck Arron was not known, nor were the whereabouts of most of the ministers in his National Party cabinet. An unconfirmed report said Arron fled toward Paramaribo, 20 miles south of the capital.

Atty. Gen. Maurice de Miranda was reported shot in the side when he resisted arrest. A broadcast announcement said those arrested included the army commander-in-chief, Col. Y. Elstak, and Justice and Police Minister S. Bardisingh.

The 800-man army includes about 100 officers and 200 to 300 sergeants and sergeants-major. For years the noncoms complained of low pay, poor chances for promotion and bad relations with the officer corps. A year ago, they formed a union, the National Military Council, but Arron said soldiers should not be unionized and refused to bargain.

Several weeks ago the sergeants went on strike. Three of their leaders were arrested and convicted of mutiny. They were to have been sentenced today, and the attorney general recommended they be given 10 months in prison.

Before dawn Monday, the noncoms shot their way into the military headquarters in the sleeping tropical capital of 150,000 people and shelled the police station from a gunboat, setting it afire.

Then they quelled resistance from police and some army officers in an eight-hour battle. Looting broke out as the battle subsided, and the soldiers turned to clearing the streets to restore order. A dusk-to-dawn curfew was imposed and all local news broadcasts over the nation's four radio stations were subjected to military censorship.

Murtada presents credentials

JERUSALEM (AP) — Egyptian Ambassador Saad Murtada presented his credentials today, marking the official opening of full diplomatic relations between Egypt and the Jewish state.

Palestinians in the West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip closed their shops and offices in protest, but merchants in Gaza said that Israeli troops ordered them to reopen.

Murtada presented his credentials at the residence of Israel's president, Yitzhak Navon. An Israeli military honor guard was present and an Israeli band played Egypt's national anthem.

He stressed that Egypt would continue to carry out its obligations under the peace treaty and that its goal was the establishment of peace and good neighborly relations and to realize the "legitimate rights" of the Palestinians.

Navon asserted that Israel would continue its quest for peace with its other Arab neighbors.

11 Soviets resign since January

MOSCOW (AP) — Eleven of the 35 Soviet employees working for the Canadian Embassy in Moscow have resigned since the beginning of this year, an embassy spokesman said today.

He said the embassy has applied for replacements through the state-run Administration for Service to the Diplomatic Corps but that the agency has not yet provided the new Soviet personnel.

The spokesman declined to speculate on whether the spate of resignations was linked to Canada's expulsion of three Soviet personnel on spying charges. The three were expelled from Ottawa on Jan. 21.

Early this month the Kremlin retaliated by expelling Col. Harold Gold, the top defense attache at the Canadian Embassy in Moscow.

Subsequently, Canadian authorities ordered the Soviet Embassy in Ottawa to reduce its staff ceiling by one more person.

Four Gandhi supporters win

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's supporters won easy victories in four of five special parliamentary elections, according to final returns issued today.

The candidates from Mrs. Gandhi's Indira Congress Party won in one constituency in southern India and three in the north but lost in the fifth to a Marxist Communist.

The special elections Sunday were the first major test of Mrs. Gandhi's popular support since the Jan. 3-6 election which returned her to office in a landslide win after 34 months out of power.

The victories boosted her party's strength in the lower house of Parliament to 351 of the 528 elected members, a majority of 174.

Reps try to tie up Nicaragua aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — House opponents of President Carter's request for $75 million in U.S. aid to Nicaragua are trying to attach strings to the grant in an effort to guarantee democratic rule in that country.

They had amendments ready today to make the U.S. aid contingent on free democratic elections in Nicaragua and observance of human rights.

Rhodesia prepares to elect parliament

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Wooden ballot boxes were distributed to hundreds of polling stations today as black Rhodesians prepared to elect their 80 representatives to the 100-member independence parliament.

British Commonwealth monitoring forces, meanwhile, were reported ready to pull out of guerrilla camps before the election results are announced, apparently because they fear violence from the losing faction.

With the ballot boxes, seals and six million ballot papers went teams of Rhodesian polling officers and police, British supervisors under orders to watch the election from British Gov. Lord Soames, and observers from 20 countries.

Nine rival political parties are contesting the election Wednesday through Friday for the 80 seats in the National Assembly to represent Rhodesia's 7 million blacks.

However, three men — Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo, former co-leaders of the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance, and former Prime Minister Bishop Abel Muzorewa, are considered the frontrunners, with Mugabe believed most popular.

Whites voted Feb. 14 for their 20 assembly seats to represent Rhodesia's 225,000 whites.

Commonwealth military sources said the 550-member peacekeeping force monitoring some 22,000 armed guerrillas through the Rhodesian cease-fire would withdraw from their camps to Salisbury on Monday, the day before election results are announced.

The sources, who declined to be identified, said the forces hope they will be replaced by Rhodesian security troops. It has not yet been decided when the entire 1,300 monitors will fly home, the sources said.

In another development, some Rhodesian soldiers and police were reported integrated in camps with guerrillas — whom they fought for seven years before a cease-fire began Jan. 4.

"We have high hopes this will be the pattern throughout," one well-placed Commonwealth military source said of the merger of some 40 Rhodesian soldiers and police with some 2,800 guerrillas in four camps.

"We probably won't do much at first," a young white lieutenant said before driving into one camp. "We will just sit around and talk to them and get to know them."

The integration of forces is the start of the full merger of the guerrillas with the government forces to dissolve mutual mistrust and keep the cease-fire intact, the Commonwealth sources said.

The whites were granted their 20 assembly seats at the peace talks held last fall in London between Muzorewa and Patriotic Front co-leaders Nkomo and Mugabe.

Their agreement ended seven years of war which cost 20,000 lives, restored British rule for the first time since the previous white minority government rebelled against the crown in 1965 and promised a recognized independence after British-supervised elections.

Mugabe, an avowed Marxist, is believed to be ahead in popularity. But he is not expected to win an outright majority and will probably be forced to seek an alliance with other parties.

Neck-and-neck behind him are Nkomo, the former labor leader and founder of the black nationalist movement in the 1950s, and Muzorewa, a pro-Western, American-trained United Methodist Church bishop.

Panama Supreme Court backs attorney general in decision to order $5.7 million repaid to sect

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Panama's Supreme Court has upheld a decision ordering the restitution of $5.7 million to the bank account of the Pro-San Pedro Religious Association, a corporation set up by the People's Temple religious sect of the Rev. Jim Jones, officials said.

The court Monday upheld an earlier decision by the attorney general that the corporation's constitution stated the money could only be used for the sect's activities and could not be deposited into private accounts.

The money was withdrawn and deposited into the accounts of Esther Lillian Mueller and Annie Jane McGowan, two followers of Jones. Jones and his 900 followers committed suicide Nov. 18, 1978. A judicial source said both women died in the mass suicide, which followed the assassination of California Congressman Leo J. Ryan and four others in Jonestown, Guyana.

The money is deposited in the Union Bank of Switzerland in Panama, where an official source said it would remain until a civil court decides who will be the proprietor.

DEAR ABBY

That's saying a mouthful

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My friends and I had an argument the other day about the word "antidistestablishmentarianism."

We have looked in the dictionaries at school and we can't find it. We've also asked all our English teachers, and we still don't have the answer, so we're asking you.

Is a person who practices antidistestablishmentarianism an antidistestablishmentarian, or an antidistestablishmentarianist?

Also, is there any rule in the English language that says that if a word ends in "ism," the name for one who practices that belief must end in "ist?" Thanks. — CINDY PERKO

DEAR CINDY: Will you accept the word of Dr. Bill Rivers, professor of communications at Stanford University?

He says you can't find "antidistestablishmentarianism" in the dictionary because it's not ONE word; it's a COMBINATION of words. However, you can find "disestablishment" in almost any dictionary.

Adding the prefix "anti" means that the person is against disestablishing the right to deprive the status of being, or becoming established. (The reason some people are so fascinated with the word is because it is so complex. The word ESTABLISH is understood. Then DISESTABLISH is against establishing. Then adding ANTI will give you another word opposite DISESTABLISH. You see how it becomes complex?)

You may use either "antiestablishmentarian" or "antidistestablishmentarianist." They mean the same thing.

DEAR ABBY: Greetings from another "I never thought I'd be writing-to-you" Abby fan.

I am a 35-year-old professional woman, happily married with children, ages 14, 12 and a little one, 3 months old.

I am amazed at the number of people—some I hardly know—who ask me if my last baby was an "accident."

I have given answers that I thought were good-humored, but evasive. How can I tell people that I consider such a question rude, improper, and insulting without being rude, improper and insulting, too? — BURNING IN 'BAMA.

DEAR BURNING: Respond with a question of your own: "Why do you want to know?" It stops 'em cold every time.

DEAR ABBY: STUMPED IN CHICAGO just might get "Wendy" to see a psychiatrist by using the same strategy I used to get my husband to a marriage counselor.

Through the years he had always blamed me for our marital problems.

After one particularly violent quarrel, I simply said, "OK, our problems are all MY fault. How about going with me to a marriage counselor so that I can get some help?"

That was six years ago and our marriage has improved 99 and 44-100ths percent since then.

No, our problems were NOT of my making, but if I had tried to put the blame on HIM, we'd still be battling.

Sign me... — STRATEGIST IN MARYLAND.

DEAR ABBY: You told of the "Orr Maneuver" in which a Mr. Orr taped-recorded the annoying barking of a neighbor's dog, amplified it, and played it back at the dog. The pooch was quickly silenced.

Well, that maneuver has even a better use: My friend, "Tiny," a Phoenix insurance executive who needed his sleep, lived about 10 feet from a house of heartless klutzes who played their stereo at a high-decibel volume until well after midnight every evening.

Polite protests to the neighbor got him nowhere, so one evening Tiny recorded THEIR music, set a loud speaker just inside his fence facing their bedroom window. He turned the volume on high and played their own concert back to them at 3 o'clock in the morning!

Once was enough. Problem solved. — OREN A. IN LAGUNA HILLS
DEAR OREN: Thank you friend, "Tiny," for the free sleep-insurance policy. I'll underwrite it.

and federal laws applying to estate taxes were covered, and many questions from the members were answered.

Final plans were discussed by Mrs. Donald Thompson, chairman of the annual Sonata-Sonatina-Concerto Contest held Saturday at Midland College.

The Student Affiliate Chairman Mrs. C. J. George, gave a report on the state theory tests that were given to Midland students earlier this month. Mrs. Laura Ellis was co-hostess.

Exercise best method to keep slender body

By NATALIE BEST
Copley News Service

NEW YORK — So you want to look younger, walk more gracefully and maintain a slender torso for the fashionable '80s? Try exercise.

The lady who throws all fad diets, rough gymnastics and calisthenics and other energy-depleting methods of physical improvements to the four winds says 90 percent of the nation's women are going about self-improvement incorrectly.

Manya Kahn, the New York ballerina who left dancing to help women regain face and figure rejuvenation through proper exercise and diet, says female beauty should be every woman's goal.

Deploping the current fashion desire for unisex, with women jogging, exercising like men in strenuous gymnastics and calisthenics Kahn reminds the weaker sex that they are creating more tension and fatigue than beauty. "To achieve real feminine beauty... lovely to look at, more desirable... regardless of age, women must adopt a natural, healthful system of exercise, geared for their bodies," says Kahn.

Her wonder-working, shape-up plan takes 10 days at the onset but is designed for lifelong use. Basically, it is a series of more than 60 exercises based on a stretch, breathe-and-relax technique. "My program draws upon the body's own resources and re-creates powers to develop and maintain the youthful vitality and glowing good health that should belong to all of us," she says.

A key to Kahn's body rhythms program is the importance of developing the spinal column — the lifeline of the body structure — to correct the inherent weakness of the back and to banish forever the common affliction we are heir to — the bad back syndrome. She blames inactive muscles for the figure faults in most women, stating that unused muscles in the diaphragm, abdomen, waist hips and thighs express their uselessness and strain by collapsing.

"Energy and spirits tend to sag along with the slowdown and deterioration of the flesh," she says. "Inactive muscles also slow up the circulation of the blood, causing fatigue and general lassitude."

"On the other hand, good muscle tone gives firmness and slender lines to the body and is the basis for good health and good posture. The most effective way to stimulate circulation and build muscle tone is proper exercise starting with a SLOW stretch-breathe-relax technique with each exercise. And this is for all ages. We're never too old to start."

Part of the Kahn method includes lying on a slantboard with the lower part of the body touching the board, knees straight, arms at sides, hands grasping the board, toes pointed. From this position, flex both feet, bringing the toes toward you, pushing the heels out to straighten the knees. Breathe in while you stretch both arms out sideways, then back, stretching elbows and fingers at the same time. Hold for one second. Breathe out while returning slowly to starting position. Relax. For back ailments remember, says Kahn, to use double legs only. Single leg movements stretch the spine and can cause further pain and injury. To counteract the tension created by very high heels, Kahn suggests bending the body forward from the hips while barefoot at a standing position. This action adds flexibility to the back of the knees and strengthens the lumbar region, the all-important lower part of the back.

For the most part Kahn's program is a commonsense combination of good diet, good exercise and good rest — on a daily basis.

And at an advanced age in life yet still looking 20 to 30 years younger, Kahn is a charming example of the Kahn method to health and beauty. She continues to operate her salon for women and write books on body rhythms a new approach to exercise for women.

to advance career. Work must take top priority now. Others will understand this, if you explain it calmly.

AT WIT'S END

In the beginning...

By ERMA BOMBECK

In the beginning was a bridge club. Two tables of women would gather on the first Thursday of every month to play bridge. Around ten o'clock, Phyllis, the hostess, would set out a few nuts, make a pot of coffee, and plan to meet next month at Marge's house. Marge loved bridge, but she wasn't into "nuts." They lodged behind her fake tooth and were high in cholesterol. When it was her turn to hostess, she made a small un-iced spice cake which she served from the pan with coffee. They made plans to meet at Phoebe's house. The spice cake had kept Phoebe awake all night. Besides, as long as you were going to bake something it might as well look festive. While eating the strawberry shortcake, piled high with fresh strawberries and a glob of whipped cream on it, they made plans to meet next month at Bobbie's house.

Sadie Hawkins strikes again

Parents Without Partners, Tall City Chapter No. 32, will sponsor a Sadie Hawkins Day Dance Friday from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. at the Affordable Inn.

Music for the event will be presented by Shade Country. Admission is a $5 donation to the Aid to Adoption of Special Kids (AASK).

This is part of 'Have a Heart' month activities. "Donations for AASK will be accepted at any time, especially since the White House Conference on Families during 1980 brings us to the International Year of the Family," said Fran Waldrop, Parents Without Partners (PWP) president.

"Both PWP and AASK are dedicated to the establishment and maintenance of a stable, loving family unit," said Ms. Waldrop. "This unit can, and often does, cross traditional lines, be they racial, social or cultural ones. And just as PWP believes that the single parent can be a fully capable one, so does AASK."

One-third of the "special kids" (those who are physically, mentally or emotionally handicapped; or from racial minorities, who are older children or victims of abuse) are placed with single parents.

AASK was founded in 1973 to help the "unadopted" become "adopted." AASK's referral program works out of Oakland, Ca., with 400 agencies located throughout the United States.

Adoption of these "unadoptable" children prevents their neglect, abuse and exploitation, establishes a family life, prevents inappropriate institutionalization, leads to their economic self-support, preserves and builds their self-respect, and adds a 'sparkle' to their eyes that says 'somebody loves me,' according to Ms. Waldrop.

Lunch Bunch programs entertaining

The Tuesday noon series of programs known as the Lunch Bunch, held at the old American Legion Hall at 11:45 a.m., continues to provide Midlanders with a variety of speakers and informative sessions.

The program is sponsored by the Friends of the Library, with Mrs. David Leaverton serving as general chairman.

The program held last Tuesday was given by Jim Salners, who presented a history of the Summer Mummies and showed one of the Mummies films.

Summer Mummies is beginning its 32nd season in Midland, and it has now become a "Midland tradition." The project was originally conceived to serve a dual purpose: to provide income for the Midland Community Theatre, and to provide an opportunity for summertime fun for both actors and audience. The first year, four performances of "The Drunkard" were held and approximately 600 attended. By 1979, the Summer Mummies were giving 30 performances and playing to 8,400 people. Original scripts have been used for some 15-20 years, and in 1968, the first film was added to the production.

Approximately 170 people are involved in the production, said Salners.

Prosecutors will ask for Bolles murder decision rehearing

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Prosecutors say they will ask for a rehearing on a state Supreme Court decision that overturned the convictions of Max Dunlap and James Robison for the 1976 bomb murder of investigative reporter Don Bolles.

In a unanimous decision, the five-member court ruled Monday that the defendants' constitutional right to confront a witness testifying against them was denied.

Dunlap, 49, a Phoenix contractor, and Robison, 58, a plumber from suburban Chandler, have been on Death Row at the Arizona State Prison since their four-month trial in 1977.

The high court ruled their rights were violated when John Harvey Adamson, their chief accuser, took the Fifth Amendment and refused to answer certain questions saying he could be incriminated.

Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Howard Thompson, who presided over the trial, erred when he denied a defense motion to strike all of Adamson's testimony after he invoked the Fifth, the court said.

The chief prosecutor in the case, Assistant Attorney General William Schaefer III, said the state would seek a rehearing. If that fails, he will seek a new trial in Superior Court.

There was no immediate comment from either Dunlap or Robison, who will remain prisoners until the case is resolved.

Before his death 11 days after the bombing, Bolles said Adamson lured him to the site of the explosion — a hotel parking lot — with a promise to disclose information about political corruption.

Adamson admitted placing the bomb under Bolles' car and said Robison detonated it with a remote control device. Adamson pleaded guilty to second-degree murder and was sentenced to 20 years in prison under an agreement that he testify against accomplices.

He testified he had $8,000 when he discussed legal fees for his defense in the bomb attack on the Arizona Republic reporter. He said $6,000 of it came from Dunlap as a payoff for the murder.

"Had defense counsel been able to delve into the sources of the $2,000, he might have uncovered ties with individuals who the defense claimed were responsible for the murder," the court said.

Dunlap admitted delivering $6,000 to Adamson but said he was doing it as a favor to Neal Roberts, a Phoenix lawyer, and denied any involvement in the killing.

Dunlap's defense asserted that Roberts, who was never charged in the slaying, had Bolles killed on behalf of Emprise Corp., a major sports conglomerate once connected in a court decision to organized crime figures. Bolles had written a number of stories about Emprise.

Adamson said Dunlap hired him to kill Bolles as a favor to millionaire liquor wholesaler Kemper Marley Sr., whose efforts to gain a seat on the Arizona Racing Commission were hampered by articles Bolles wrote.

After Bolles' death, Investigative Reporters and Editors, a group from newspapers around the nation, sent a team of reporters into Arizona to investigate organized crime.

Their months-long investigation culminated in a 23-part series on crime in the state, published by many newspapers in March 1977.

Hillin tells Downtown Kiwanis 'Longhorn LR-01' race car will be finished this week

The Longhorn Racing Team's new "ground effects car" known as Longhorn LR-01, will be completed this week and ready for a shakedown race March 17 in Phoenix, Ariz., according to Bobby Hillin.

Hillin was guest speaker Monday at the Downtown Kiwanis Club. The car will debut in Phoenix in a season opener on April 6, Hillin said. On April 13 it will be entered in a race in Ontario, Canada. Three-time Indianapolis 500 winner Al Unser will be driving each time.

Hillin started the Longhorn Racing Team in 1974 and qualified two cars for the Indianapolis 500 in 1977. In 1979 they finished ninth in the Indy 500. During that year, the team also entered 13 other races, finishing in the top 10 in all of them.

The racing team owner said he sent a consultant to Europe to interview various builders and designers with the goal of constructing a car of his own design. An agreement was made with Frank Williams' Formula One team in Didcot, Oxfordshire, England. That group said it would provide the technology, and Ed Zink of Knoxville, Tenn., was selected to modify the design to fit U.S. racing standards.

This new car, the LR-01, will feature a "ground effects" design to increase downthrust on the vehicle, which Hillin said is a desired feature to allow increased speed, especially on turns.

The vehicle has four V-8 turbo-charged racing engines which use methanol as the fuel. The fuel for racing cars is limited to 1.8 miles per gallon, Hillin said.

He reviewed the policy between USAC and CART racing groups. The latter, of which Hillin is a member, is concerned primarily with control of rules and regulations and with financial obligations. Hillin said CART encourages higher purses for owners to finance their vehicles.

Hillin told the Kiwanis group that he plans to enter numerous races this year with Unser driving and his team of eight specialists.

Stafford attorneys attempt to complete jury selection

PURCELL, Okla. (AP) — Attorneys were trying to complete jury selection today in the triple-murder trial of Roger Dale Stafford, already convicted of six slayings.

Stafford — who's appealing the six death sentences he received in October for the murders of six Oklahoma City steakhouse workers — went on trial in Purcell Monday on charges of murdering Melvin Lorenz, 38, his wife, Linda, 31, and son Richard, 13, of San Antonio, Texas.

The Lorenz family members were shot dead in a robbery along Interstate 35 near this quiet central Oklahoma town on June 22, 1978 as they were driving to Jamestown, N.D., to attend the funeral of Lorenz's mother. The triple-murder took place 24 days before the steakhouse mass murder.

In a surprise development Monday, Defense attorney J. Malone Brewer claimed he rejected a plea bargain in which Stafford would have pleaded guilty to the Lorenz murder charges in return for a prosecution recommendation of two consecutive life prison sentences.

Kay Huff, who is seeking three death sentences against Stafford, refused to confirm or deny Brewer's plea bargain claim.

Testing for census takers to be conducted March 5

GARDEN CITY — Testing for enumerators and crew leaders to conduct the census in Glasscock, Sterling and Coke counties will be at 8 p.m. March 5 in the county judge's office in Garden City.

Henry Fernandez of Del Rio, field operations superintendent for the Census Bureau, said applicants will be tested at one time. He is needing 15 persons for the three-county area.

Enumerators will get paid on a piece-rate system, receiving $1.75 for every short form completed. For every long form they will be paid $3.85, said Fernandez.

He also is needing supervisory people called crew leaders. They work on an hourly basis at $4.50 an hour. All workers will get 18.5 cents per mile for use of their car, he added.

Fernandez termed the positions fulltime temporary jobs. Those hired must work at least 40 hours a week, but the positions are only for three to five weeks.

However, when the workers are finished with the regular enumeration, the Census Bureau is planning a follow-up. The best workers will be reassigned for a couple of weeks for this extra work, Fernandez said.

Midland man hospitalized after bar quarrel shooting

A 21-year-old Midland man was listed in serious condition this morning in Midland Memorial Hospital following a Monday night shooting.

Tommy Joe Ricky, 21, of Pecan Grove Trailer Park was admitted Monday night with a gunshot wound to the stomach.

According to witnesses, the shooting was the result of an argument between a man and Ricky's cousin, Robert Tisdale, at a bar. Tisdale reportedly left the bar to avoid the argument and when he did, the man struck Ricky and then pulled a pistol, officers were told.

A.B. Price, wife plead not guilty to '73, '74 tax evasion charges

A.B. and Mary L. Price of Odessa Monday entered pleas of not guilty to two counts of income tax evasion for the years 1973 and 1974.

They were arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Michael Cunningham in Midland.

Price, 53, and his wife, 51, are former owners of the Branding Iron restaurant in Odessa.

The Prices were indicted by the federal grand jury in Midland Jan. 23. The indictment charged additional income tax due for the two years of $23,343.30.

The maximum penalty for each count is five years imprisonment and/or a fine of $10,000 together with the costs of prosecution.

The case was investigated by special agents of the Criminal Investigation Division of the Internal Revenue Service based in Lubbock, directed by the District Director of Internal Revenue in Dallas.

An Amazing New Diet Idea!

HOW TO BURN OFF BODY FAT, HOUR-BY-HOUR!

MEDICAL DOCTOR'S NEW DISCOVERY
BURNS AWAY MORE FAT AND FLUID
THAN IF YOU RAN 98 MILES PER WEEK!

Dear Friend,

My name is Don Schwerdtfeger. I am an M.D. and have been practicing medicine here in San Diego for 14 years.

I am reproducing my business card at the bottom of this page and I am writing to ask the people of America a personal favor.

If any of you will do this favor for me you will be helping me with my research and I will gladly pay you for your help.

Here is what it is all about: I am a psychiatrist and in addition to my other patients I have been helping people with alcohol and drug addictions. So far, I have treated more than 2500 various types of drug addicts.

But strangely enough, over the years, my practice has taught me that over eating is even more difficult to deal with than many hard-core drug addictions.

Some time ago I began to realize that any person who is overweight needs much more than just a diet. I now know that every overweight person needs an anti-fat weapon that is both safe and very powerful!

Finally, after years of research, I feel I have developed just such a weapon. What it consists of is a new diet product and a system that actually burns off body fat, hour-by-hour!

Believe it or not, my new diet system burns away more fat and fluid than if you ran 98 miles per week.

Many of the people who have tested my program have lost as much as 2 pounds of fat and fluid every day for the first week. Actually, many people have reported a 6 pound weight loss in just the first 48 hours! After the first week, many people continue to lose as much as 9 pounds every two weeks thereafter. Some people (who were very obese) have used my method to lose 50, 60 and even 100 pounds and more.

When you begin to use this program, you can expect to be able to measure the difference in your waistline in just 24 to 48 hours. You will probably lose more inches each week than even if you faithfully did hundreds of situps every day. You may very well lose as much as 3 to 5 inches off your waistline in the first month. If you are a woman you can lose as much as a full dress size in only 7 days.

Apparently, what happens is that my diet system allows your body to break down your excess body fat and flush it out of your system quite rapidly.

The amazing thing, of course, is the speed at which this system works. It is rather remarkable to throw off as much as 6 pounds of fat and fluid in the very first weekend. Just imagine how it must feel to drop up to 2 pounds a day and shrink your waistline up to 3 inches the first week.

My first concern when I developed this program was safety. Therefore, my anti-fat formula contains absolutely no drugs. It is made up entirely of 100% natural ingredients. I first tested it on myself and I now use it religiously every day. I have found that my program can even help people who have been hopelessly overweight all their lives, including those who need to lose 20 to 30 or 70 pounds or more.

My diet product does not necessarily produce a specific spot reduction, but if you are considerably overweight a significant overall loss of excess pounds could easily mean that you could lose:

- 6 inches off waistline
- 4 inches off stomach
- 4 inches off buttocks
- 3 inches off thighs
- 5 inches off hips

Remember — you don't have to wait weeks for results with my system. It starts instantly! You can actually see the results in just a few days.

The way you use this formula is simple. All you do is mix it with a glass of your favorite beverage and drink it every day the first thing in the morning.

Then, during the rest of the day, you eat a wide selection of tasty foods which are scientifically programmed to maintain a high level of fat burn-off.

That's all there is to it. This may be the most effective fat-burning method ever developed. It is not a drug. It is not a gimmick. It is a formula that I was only able to develop after years of research and, as I said before, I use it myself.

It works. And now I want to spread the word to other doctors so they can use my diet system to help all of their overweight patients. To make a long story short, what I want to do is write an article and have it published in the various medical journals as I sincerely felt this is the best way to convince other doctors of the value of my system.

But I need a lot of proof in order to get my article published and this is where you can help me. And, as I said before, I will be more than happy to repay you for your help.

"... Imagine how it must feel to drop up to 2 pounds a day and shrink your waistline up to 3 inches the first week..."

So therefore, here is what I would like for you to do: if you or any member of your family is overweight I would like for you to go ahead and order a supply of my crash-loss system and test it yourself. It is sold by Millburn Products, Incorporated. As soon as you receive this fantastic diet system — start the program and see if it works for you. Frankly, this or any other diet program will not work for everyone because a very small percentage of people have unusual problems. (By the way, naturally you should check with your doctor before you use this or any other diet plan.) However, Millburn Products is so positive about this diet system

"... The amazing thing, of course, is the speed at which this program works. It is rather remarkable to throw off as much as 6 pounds of fluid and fat in the very first weekend..."

ABOUT DOCTOR SCHWERDTFEGER

Don Schwerdtfeger, M.D., has been practicing medicine in San Diego for 14 years. During that time he has treated more than 2500 heroin addicts. Anyway, if I am right I want you to write me a letter. Don't send the letter to Millburn Products. Send it to me at the address on my business card. In the letter tell me how much weight you have lost and how you feel about my product, and how much of it you originally ordered.

In return for this favor (as soon as I get your letter) I will immediately send you another supply of my new diet product and I will send it to you absolutely free.

The amount that I will send you will be the same amount that you order now from Millburn Products. This will be my way of thanking you for helping me with my research. Also, in the long run, I honestly feel that with your help and the help of other nice people like yourself that I can do a lot to help people who have been struggling for years with a weight problem.

Sincerely,

Don Schwerdtfeger, M.D.

No. 18 at Riviera: One of golf's greatest tests

By JIM MURRAY
Los Angeles Times

The 18th at Riviera is the perfect finishing hole in the game of golf. It has picked more pockets than a London dip, sent more guys home in a barrel than a riverboat gambler with his own deck, and if there's anything it hates it's a golfer coming up to it needing par to win. It's 454 yards of heartbreak.

You wouldn't think to look at it some guys would remember it the way some people remember the Titanic. It's almost preternaturally green; the trees on the right are leafy and graceful and the elephant grass on the left is lush and thick like a Scottish moor. It's a great place for a picnic. It's also a great place for a bogey.

The job of a finishing hole is as clearly defined as the job of a dance-hall bouncer. It has to maintain order, clear out the amateurs, preserve the dignity of the game. You never play No. 18 at Riviera with a drive and a wedge. The most famous second shot in history played to it was a full 3-wood with a full turn and a loud grunt by Dave Stockton in 1974. If it were not for No. 18 at Riviera, a 61-year-old man would have won the L.A. Open that year. It's the job of an 18th hole to see those things don't happen.

Sometimes, of course, like any well-muscled goon guarding an estate or a hideout, No. 18 gets its signals crossed. It throws out the wrong people. In 1978, for example, poetic justice called for Jack Nicklaus to win the L.A. Open at Riviera. After all, Hogan, Snead, Demaret, Bolt, Mangrum and Nelson had. But 18 kept sucking up Jack's iron shots in the man-eating kikuyu grass that year and let some eye doctor from Tulsa win it. You had a mental image of the gods of golf groaning and saying, No, no, apeneck! How many times I got to tell you, the one with the blond hair and the square jaw! And the 18th would answer resentfully, But he flies his right elbow. How was I to know it was Jack Nicklaus?!

But, in this year's 54th L.A. Open, hosted by Glen Campbell, No. 18 did its job, got its priorities right. The situation was this: Coming up to 18, all tied, were Tom Watson, Bob Gilder and Don January. Tom Watson was on his way to becoming a legend of golf — two British Opens, one Masters,

The job of a finishing hole is as clearly defined as the job of a dance-hall bouncer. It has to maintain order, clear out the amateurs, preserve the dignity of the game. You never play No. 18 at Riviera with a drive and a wedge.

16 other tour victories. Any self-respecting tournament wants to be won by Tom Watson. Bob Gilder is a nice enough young man who plays the back nine at Riviera about as well as any young player, but who has won only one tournament, the 1976 Phoenix Open, which is not to be confused with the British, and Bob is resentful of the star system of golf generally, probably because he's not in it. I think people put too much emphasis on name players, he says reproachfully, a plaint which has been heard throughout the ages of Sarazen-Hogan-Hogan-Snead and Palmer-Nicklaus from the other golfers.

Don January is a premier player of the game. Only 32 golfers have won more tournaments than he has lifetime. But Don is 50 years old. Any way you look at it, it's an insult to a course to be beaten by a 50-year-old man — unless it's a senior tournament and he's the youngster in it.

So the duty of 18 was clear: Either Tom Watson was going to win his 20th tournament, Bob Gilder was going to win his second — or Don January probably his last.

Tom Watson didn't really win the 54th L.A. Open. The 18th hole at Riviera just kind of handed it to him. It's very unusual to win a tournament because both of your closest competitors bogeyed the final hole. It's like winning the World Series because somebody walks in the winning run, winning the heavyweight championship on the floor in a foul, or getting a number taken down in the Kentucky Derby.

But, as the late Lloyd Mangrum pointed out, golf is not a game of How? but How many? Watson won it because the 18th did its job. Like the Beefeater Guards at Buckingham Palace, it kept the commoners out.

The 18th at Pebble Beach gets more publicity. But that's a par 5, and only 100 yards longer. It needs help from the Pacific Ocean, which keeps it armed and dangerous. Riviera keeps the riffraff out with its bare hands.

The outcome demonstrates again a great golf course doesn't need to be, so to speak, booby trapped to produce a valid winner. The L.A. Open had a guy who shot a 65. But it also had a guy who couldn't break 90. For the second year in a row, and third out of the last four, the outcome was decided by the final putt on the 18th. That's the mark of a great golf course. The 18 holes are a great team. But the 18th is like the middle linebacker who makes you pay for every yard. And makes sure you have the credentials to stand where Hogan, Snead, and Nelson stood — and sink the putt.

Free-agency in football: Is it to player's benefit?

By JOE STEIN
Copley News Service

The National Football League free-agent list provides some clues as to teams with problems and players who might be available in trades, but that's where its value ends.

Unlike baseball's volatile market for athletes who have played out their options, the free-agent tag the NFL uses is a misnomer. The football players aren't free to negotiate in the same, free manner as their baseball brethren, and they have no one but their own NFL Players' Association to blame for their plight.

The association executive director, Ed Garvey, foolishly agreed to two clauses which have virtually paralyzed NFL players: with hopes of escaping unhappy situations.

Garvey's first mistake was to give NFL teams the right of first refusal. In other words, if San Diego's Russ Washington — who is on the free-agent list — happened to get an exceptional offer from the Denver Broncos, the Chargers would have the option of matching it. If they did, Washington would be obliged to take his raise and remain in San Diego.

However, very few NFL free agents even receive offers from other teams. That's because of another Garvey faux pas. The NFLPA agreed to a compensation arrangement, one which strips teams of high draft choices if it signs another club's property. This, more than anything else, makes it unrealistic for NFL owners to leap into bidding war.

Garvey argues that the owners are guilty of collusion in refusing to play the free-agent game and that the situation runs counter to the spirit of the agreement. Well, he may be right about the owners not living up to the spirit of things, but they don't have to indulge in collusion.

The New England Patriots have one of the largest lists of dissatisfied players, which might explain why that club is the NFL's most notorious underachiever. Among the nine Patriot free agents are two exceptional players, perhaps the most attractive on the NFL's entire list of 139.

My reference is to fullback Sam Cunningham and cornerback Mike Haynes, both of whom have been mentioned in trade rumors. If the two do part company with the Patriots, they undoubtedly will do it through trades rather than free agency.

Besides Cunningham and Haynes, the most highly regarded free agents probably would be Cincinnati's Isaac Curtis, Denver's Bill Thompson, Houston's Mike Barber and Art Stringer, Miami's Larry Gordon and Don Strock, Philadelphia's Harold Carmichael and Carl Hairston, St. Louis' Tom Banks, Roger Wehrli and Jim Hart, the Chargers' Washington and Bob Klein and Washington's Mari Moseley.

Trail Blazer demise linked to trades, injury

By ALEX SACCIARE
AP Sports Writer

Bill Walton, Maurice Lucas, Lionel Hollins — they were the nucleus of Portland's 1977 championship team, the men who made Blazersmania so much fun and who were to form the foundation of a pro basketball dynasty.

"They played the game the way I had always hoped to see it played," Blazers Coach Jack Ramsay wrote in his book, "The Coach's Art." "A great team playing within itself, playing with control and purpose, is beautiful to watch. Good play seems almost effortless. Five separate wills blended into a single whole, playing with one purpose — to win, yes, but by playing its own game, a game in which it believes."

Now they are gone, and instead of a dynasty the Portland Trail Blazers are a team looking up at the wrong side of .500.

What happened?

Injuries, that's what. A wave of sprains and strains, pulls, bruises and breaks, swept through the Portland squad, and no one on the roster escaped. All five starters from the title team — Walton at center, Lucas and Bobby Gross at forward and Hollins and Dave Twardzik at guard — were knocked out of action at various times over the next three seasons, as were top reserves Lloyd Neal and Larry Steele.

Even newcomers were hit. Mychal Thompson, the first player chosen in the 1978 draft, has missed all of the current campaign because of a broken leg.

"It's unbelievable the way a team can make plans and have them erased by injuries," said Twardzik.

For awhile, everything in Portland went as planned. After winning their first NBA title on a sunny day in June, 1977 — no, it doesn't always rain in Portland — the Blazers scorched the rest of the league for three-quarters of the 1977-78 season, compiling a remarkable 50-10 record. Walton was the do-everything center, Lucas the quintessential power forward and Hollins one of the best all-around guards in the game.

And then, on Feb. 28, 1978, in a game against Philadelphia, disaster struck. Walton sprained his left ankle, the start of a series of injuries which would keep him sidelined more than a year. There were off-court problems as well, Walton lashing out at the medical practices of the Portland team.

He finally became a free agent, and on May 13, 1979, signed a seven-year contract with the San Diego Clippers valued at upwards of $7 million. He was guaranteed a mind-boggling $700,000 a year even if injuries prevented him from ever playing a game again.

The after-effects of that signing paved the way for Lucas' departure as well. Part of the compensation Portland received, in an award issued by NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien, was Kermit Washington, a rugged, 6-foot-8 defensive-minded forward who made Lucas expendable. While Lucas sulked and sat with minor injuries, Washington developed into an all-star for the Blazers this season.

Injuries also played a part in Hollins' departure. He was hampered by knee and ankle problems all season, and in his absence rookie Ron Brewer got valuable playing time. This year Brewer has reached the point Hollins was at two years ago, showing strong signs of becoming one of the most complete players in the game.

So, on Feb. 8, the Blazers dealt Lucas and two first-round draft choices to New Jersey for rookie forward Calvin Natt, then dispatched Hollins to Philadelphia for a first-round pick and cash.

Those moves were not well received by the local media. Several writers criticized the Blazers for dumping the two veterans and said the only reason they were dealt away was because both players were seeking bigger contracts, and the club wanted to pinch pennies. As soon as he was dealt to Philadelphia, Hollins received a new contract at $300,000 a year, double his Portland salary, and Lucas is expected to renegotiate his contract with the Nets as well.

Dandy DePaul keeps top spot

By TOM CANAVAN
Associated Press Writer

After 38 years at DePaul, Coach Ray Meyer is just two games away from his first undefeated regular season. But there are some people in South Bend, Ind., who would like to spoil it.

And they will get their chance. DePaul, the unanimous choice for the top spot in The Associated Press college basketball for the sixth consecutive week Monday, will meet 14th-ranked Notre Dame at South Bend Wednesday night.

The Blue Demons, 25-0, were named on each of the 58 first-place ballots and received a perfect score of 1,160 in the voting by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

But its support will be less than unanimous when it plays Notre Dame at the Athletic and Convocation Center — a place where many an unbeaten team has fallen. The Center is where the Irish snapped UCLA's NCAA-record 88-game winning streak and handed an undefeated and top-ranked San Francisco team its first defeat in 1977.

The game may also mean a little more to Notre Dame. The Irish lost only one home game last season — to DePaul — and naturally they would like to avenge that loss.

DePaul closes its regular season Saturday against Illinois State.

Kentucky and Syracuse both moved up a notch and took over the No. 2 and 3 positions, respectively, as Louisville, ranked second last week, slipped to No. 4 following a loss to Iowa.

The Wildcats, who nipped fifth-ranked Louisiana State 76-74 in overtime Sunday, received 1,070 voting points. The Orangemen, who posted triumphs over Niagara and Boston College last week, got 1,019 points, while Louisville picked up 904.

 Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

The Caransa Philip Morris event was won by a team of Dutch internationalists. They outdistanced a star-studded field, which included four members of the Italian international squad that had recently been nosed out in the world team championships by the United States. Netherland's victory was no fluke, as this sparkling defensive effort illustrates.

The bidding needs a word of explanation. West's cuebid of two spades was the Michaels Convention, showing at least five cards in the other major and an undisclosed minor suit. In effect, this was a weak takeout double on a two-suited hand. If partner wanted to find out which minor suit the cue-bidder holds, he could have bid two no trump. Since South promised a five-card suit for his opening bid in a major, North felt that his hand was worth a raise to game.

Every card tells a story, and the Dutch defenders put that adage to good use. For his opening lead Carol van Oppen selected the jack of hearts. Even if the ten of hearts had not appeared in dummy, it would not have been difficult for East, Andre Mulder, to work out that his partner had made an unusual lead. What was he trying to do?

Obviously, West's minor suit was clubs — one glance at dummy was enough to convince anyone that it could not be diamonds. West's eccentric lead, therefore, had to be an urgent request that partner shift to some other suit. The king of clubs in dummy made it unlikely that he wanted a club returned.

East could count ten diamonds in his hand and dummy. Since West almost certainly had ten or eleven cards in hearts and clubs, it was quite possible that he was void in diamonds. So Mulder rose with the ace of hearts and shifted to a diamond. West ruffed gratefully, and the defenders still had two trump tricks coming for a one-trick set.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Many financial aids are available. The National Direct Student Loan, Basic Education Opportunity Grants, Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants, College Work-Study and Federal Insured Student Loan Programs are some of the sources of help.

The school of business enables a student to begin a career immediately after graduation with a good position, income and opportunity. The entire cost of an education at American Commercial College can be repaid by the extra earnings enjoyed during just the first few weeks of employment. The school qualifies for Veterans Training and Vocational Rehabilitation Training.

Twelve courses may be followed in preparation for jobs which are always available to the well-trained. Business Administration, Executive Accounting, Executive Secretarial, Legal Secretarial, Medical Secretarial, Senior Accounting, Stenographic, Office Machines and Complete General Drafting. Japanese plan chain of Viet refugee cafes

TOKYO (AP) — Five Japanese businessmen are helping Vietnamese refugees open restaurants in hopes of making Japan a more palatable place for refugees.

Their plan is to finance a chain of Vietnamese restaurants and hire refugees as managers, cooks and waitresses. Once the restaurants become established in business, they say, the Vietnamese will be encouraged to buy them.

The Tokyo businessmen say it's the best way for the penniless refugees to build new lives in this country where there is no large Vietnamese community to rely on.

Takayoshi Miyagawa, designated chairman of the proposed new company, "Vietnam," said the plan is for three to five such restaurants, with the first one slated for opening in the spring.

Miyagawa, president of the Center for Political

Public Relations, an election-analysis firm, said he and four friends, all corporate executives, had raised $83,000 to set up their company.

Miyagawa said he was optimistic about the general reception of Vietnamese cuisine in Japan, and added that some refugees were enthusiastic about the idea. Five persons have already applied for jobs, he said.

The first refugee restaurant, to be opened in Tokyo's plush Akasaka entertainment district, will be managed by Huynh Tai Chu, a 37-year-old refugee of Chinese origin.

Chu was visiting Japan in 1975 when Saigon fell to the Communists and remained here. His wife and four children joined him last August after reaching a camp in Malaysia.

Chu, one of the board members of the "Vietnam" company, said he was confident the restaurants would make Japan more attractive to refugees.

A spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees said he was aware of the refugees' restaurants plan and "it can be a pump-priming project for more refugees here."

He said Japan needed settlement programs like that because some refugees who asked to come to Japan changed their minds after arriving.

Japan's unpopularity with the refugees may stem in part from the highly competitive character of the society, a government official suggested.

Since the Communist takeover of Saigon (now Ho Chi Minh City), 3,209 Vietnamese refugees have arrived in Japan. Of that number, 1,909 have left for third countries.

The rest are housed in temporary camps across the country and are looked after by private charity organizations, since there is no government department directly responsible for them.

INFORM warns potential land buyers

By LOUISE COOK
Thousands of people looking for an investment that won't disappear with inflation have turned to the land. But dreams of valuable property can turn to dust if you're not careful.

Patricia Simko — author of a new guide on land sales, prepared by INFORM, a non-profit research group that studies the impact of U.S. corporations on the environment, employees and consumers — says Americans have spent billions of dollars buying property in recent years.

"The Insider's Guide to Owning Land in Subdivisions: How to Buy, Appraise and Get Rid of Your Lot," is based on a four-year investigation of the land sales and development business and the federal and state agencies which regulate it. The guide costs $2.50 and is available from INFORM, 25 Broad St., New York, N.Y., 10004.

Ms. Simko recommends that would-be buyers take several basic steps to protect themselves. Among the suggestions:
— Visit and inspect the lot you are considering. Do not be satisfied by a photograph or by a visit to a lot which the salesman says is "exactly" like the one you will get. Find out exactly how far your lot is from shopping areas, medical facilities, schools, etc.

— Ask for a federal or state property report. A property report includes information on finances, planned services, mortgages, liens and other factors involving the development. Read it carefully. If you can't understand it, get professional help. If you don't get such a report before you sign the contract, you can cancel and get a full refund at any time within the next two years. Requirements for state property reports vary from place to place. Ask the attorney general's office in your state for the details. However, the property report by itself is no guarantee you are getting a good deal.

— Be sure you know what you are getting before you sign an installment contract to buy land. The contract is not a deed. It does not give you ownership of the land and may not even give you the right to use the land. Check a developer's reputation with the Chamber of Commerce and the local Better Business Bureau. Talk to other people who have bought lots from the same company. Will your money be put in a separate escrow account to pay for the lot or will it be used to pay the developer's operating costs? What will happen to your contract if the developer sells the land or goes out of business? Can you get any of your money back if you default?

Census takers beginning Alaska count

BARROW, Alaska (AP) — The census takers are in northern Alaska already, beginning the 1980 federal head count in Point Hope, Barrow and 16 other villages where it's cold enough to freeze eyelashes and burn cheeks.

The census started earlier here than in other parts of the country. One reason is that the North Slope census area is the largest in the country — 80,000 square miles. Another is the logistical difficulty in reaching the natives.

"We have to get to the villages before the ice breaks up," said census crew leader Jim Wycoff of Juneau. "After break-up all the people will be scattered to their (summer) fishing camps. Then we'd really have a problem. Right now most of them are in town."

The count was to be completed Feb. 14, but there were problems with that deadline.

A U.S. Marine officer directs air support from atop a portable command post as a troop-carrying helicopter hovers nearby Monday at landing zone Robin in the Philippines. The Marine battalion, bound for the Arabian Sea, made a practice landing on a Philippine beach, but the possibility of Persian Gulf duty generated no urgency in their performance. (AP Laser-photo)

Filipinos co-operate in Marine mock landing

By WILLIAM C. MANN

BARRIO AGUSUHIN, Philippines (AP)—Toothless old Fausta Ballon ran from her hut to shoo children out of the path of the incoming U.S. Marine tanks, and the mock assault of Green Beach was under way.

"We asked Mama Ballon to keep everybody in their houses today, and she's done a good job, as usual," said the Marines' commander, Col. James R. van den Elzen, as a Cobra helicopter gunships roared by with their nonexistent bombloads.

That was the way it went Monday at this usually sleepy village across Subic Bay from the United States' main Southeast Asian Navy logistics base. Mama Ballon is the village leader, and she has cooperated with the Marines many times.

The landing was like hundreds of others on Green Beach since 1959, except that these Marines, comprising the 31st Marine Amphibious Unit, are to become the Pentagon's first landing force on U.S. ships in the troubled Arabian Sea area.

"I've read the Defense Department statement, but so far we are not asked to go anywhere after here," said van den Elzen. Other officers echoed the same response to the question repeated by three dozen reporters brought in to witness the exercise.

ONE NAVY information officer said the amphibious unit, about 1,800 Marines, had been planning to stay in Southeast Asia for a six-month period, as is usual for such groups. "Their whole program was changed when President Carter announced that they were going to the Indian Ocean," he said.

The officers insisted that Green Beach assault began last October, weeks before Iranian militants took American hostages in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and months before Soviet troops poured into Afghanistan.

There was a decided lack of urgency about the operation, which hardly appeared to be conducted under the pressure of men expecting to go to war.

Aboard the dock landing ship Alamo, which brought the reinforced battalion's five tanks, Marines at general quarters smoked and chatted as they awaited the signal to join their tanks, jeeps, trucks and other equipment on the landing craft.

ONE CARRIED his M-16 rifle slung on his shoulder and his camera looped about his neck on a red-and-blue checked cloth strip.

"There's nothing new or unique about the exercise," said Maj. Andy Finlayson, executive officer of Battalion Landing Team 33, who drew up the operational plans.

"There's no objective to be taken. It's just a landing exercise, to test our equipment and our men and our support."

Landing Zone Robin, about 1,100 yards from Green Beach, where CH-46 and CH-53 helicopters brought Marines from the landing platform Okinawa, is a streamlined, flat area surrounded on three sides by mountains.

Lt. Col. Ken Jordan, the landing team's commanding officer, guided the imaginary air strikes and the incoming tanks and personnel carriers from a camouflaged command post beside the landing zone.

HE SAID he realized the exercise area was relatively unrealistic as far as combat conditions were concerned, because gunners on the mountainsides could pick off his men at will.

Nevertheless, he said the Green Beach area, about 60 miles northwest place in the Philippines for such landing exercises.

He said reconnaissance teams were sent in, the area was secured, and 230 of the almost 1,000 Marines who were coming ashore were in place at Landing Zone Robin in three minutes.

"It's easy when no one's shooting at you," Jordan said.

'Jury still out,' VA official says of defoliant

WASHINGTON (AP)—The head of the Veterans Administration says "the jury is still out" on whether American servicemen in Vietnam suffered physical ailments because they were exposed to Agent Orange, a defoliant that contains a deadly toxin.

VA director Max Cleland, one of the servicemen exposed, told a congressional committee Monday that there's no scientific evidence to support the hundreds of claims.

Cleland said the only long-term disorder that can be linked to Agent Orange is chloracne, a severe skin disease.

Cleland said medical evidence available at this time doesn't back up allegations of serious illnesses caused by Agent Orange, which contains dioxin. But he said he wasn't discounting the possibility that some ailments might crop up in years to come.

"The jury is still out," Cleland told the Veterans Affairs Committee.

But Rep. Thomas A. Daschle, D-S.C., who becomes chairman of the Congressional Vietnam Caucus in two weeks, said he "could argue that it's not scientific evidence you're concerned about...but it's the legal culpability."

Between 1962 and 1971, 10 million gallons of Agent Orange, which takes its name from the bright orange drums in which it was stored, were sprayed from planes to strip away the Vietnamese jungle cover concealing communist troop positions.

The Air Force has said 1,200 men took part in the program and that 25,000 Marines may have been exposed to the defoliant, either from inhalation, contact with the skin, or in drinking water.

Some Vietnam veterans have blamed blackouts, impotence, headaches, nervousness, liver disorders, cancers, birth defects in their offspring and other ailments on their exposure to Agent Orange.

So far the government has ruled on the cases of 1,233 Vietnam veterans who have applied for disability benefits after claiming their health was harmed by Agent Orange. Only 21 were awarded benefits.

Cleland said veterans who are afraid they were exposed to Agent Orange are urged to go to VA hospitals for physical examinations.

In Westbury, N.Y., a group of Australian military veterans filed suit, alleging they and their children were damaged by exposure to Agent Orange.

The 650 veterans joined a 2-year-old class action suit on behalf of U.S. veterans exposed to the herbicide. The Australian veterans claim they suffered cancer and kidney and liver defects.

The Australians also allege the toxin caused cancer and various birth defects in their children.

Whimsical spaceship model symbolizes flight

By HOWARD BENEDICT

WASHINGTON (AP)—It whirrs and spins and sways and quivers, going nowhere, poking fun at technology.

At the controls of this mock spaceship is an unlikely astronaut, Dr. Leo Capricorn, accompanied by an astrocat and a green being from outer space who sips tea.

Their absolutely fascinating contraption is called Pussiewillow II, and soon will be on display with America's greatest flying machines: the Wright brothers Flyer, Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis, the X-15 and the Apollo 11 moonship among them.

Pussiewillow II is the latest whimsical creation of Rowland Emitt, a British inventor-sculptor-artist known worldwide for his intricate machines styled from metal, door handles, bicycle spokes, lamp shades and other odds and ends.

The Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum commissioned Emitt more than a year ago to put together one of his "things" to symbolize flight "in the air and in space." Emitt labored for 11 months to put together the thing, which will go on permanent display in the museum next week.

The machine stands 9 feet high, 12 feet wide and 18 feet long, and captures the imagination as its many parts swirl and turn to a harpsichord recording of an 18th century English tune.

The heart of the device is the station's control room, whose clamshell covering opens at intervals to reveal a Victorian drawing room with fireplace, lamps, a gramophone and chairs with velvet cushions.

Dr. Capricorn pedals a small Winchurst machine, a glass disc revolving between two magnets to create an old-fashioned energy-producing dynamo. "This work is effortless," Emitt said, "because of two helium-filled knee caps in the pilot's space suit."

The dynamo, aided by a pair of hidden motors, drives the main propulsion system, a great stern paddlewheel festooned with a dozen electronic butterflies attached to magnets. Emitt, as whimsical as his creations, said that if the pilot tires of pedaling, a solar transfuser can capture the sun's rays and feed them to the butterflies to provide power.

Another auxiliary power source is GEORGE, a bug-eyed creature perched in the bow, pulling on a pair of badminton paddles as if rowing a boat. GEORGE, which stands for Geometric Environmental Oar-rienced Row Gently Energizer, is perched above the prow, an unidentifiable bird whose wings flap to balance the spaceship.

In the control room with Dr. Capricorn are the astrocat, Cirro Cumulus II, and the green being, drinking tea as he toasts tea-cakes by the fire.

Emitt explained that the cat "can establish the direction of gravity by falling on its feet."

"Although slightly apprehensive about the possibility of beings from outer other places, the doctor is prepared to welcome them aboard, and utterly disarm them with tea and toasted tea-cakes," he added.

At the base of the control center is a gravity-defying Kashmir flying carpet, which, Emitt said, "is not allowed to roam the skies at random, but is firmly suspended within a large translucent Jupiter ring."

The undulating Jupiter ring is studded with the 12 signs of the Zodiac, "which, as they circle, spin up and die down in a state of controlled flux which ensures that the correct sign has a good chance of being activated and on hand for any trying situation which might arise," the inventor said.

Each sign is topped by a badminton shuttlecock. "What flies better than a shuttlecock?" he asked.

Emitt, 72, has been building such devices since 1951, when he developed his celebrated Far Tottering and Oyster Creek Railway for the Festival of Britain, and several of his creations are in museums around the world. He is most proud of Pussiewillow II, for which the Smithsonian is paying $56,000, all in privately-donated funds.
