Vote tally unchanged

Partial recheck completed

Results in the mayor's election are still the same so far. G. Thane Akins leads Martin Allday after the rechecking of 23 voting machines Tuesday by Midland City Council.

The recheck showed Allday to have 4,586 votes while Akins received 4,624. These figures don't reflect the absentee paper ballots that will be counted at 10 a. m. Thursday.

Including the absentee ballots, the Saturday figures showed Akins to have 4,639 votes while Allday captured 4,631.

In charge of counting the paper ballots will be a committee consisting of Darrell Smith, Bill Shaner and Elizabeth Adam. The ballots have been locked up by Police Chief Wayne Gordon. The recount will take place in a conference room at the Public Safety Building.

Members of the City Council, County Judge Bill Ahders, District Judge Barbara Culver and the media gathered in the County Barn at 11:30 a. m. Tuesday for the recheck. Appearing along with Allday was Harrell Feldt. The machines had been locked in the barn and guarded by Midland police officers since the results of the election Saturday.

As the numbers on each machine were read, they were checked with numbers on the vote tally sheets turned in by each voting poll clerk.

Only once did the listeners' ears perk up as Councilman Gordon Marcum II read out a number. He called 183 for Allday while the sheet showed 183. But it was Marcum who read it wrong on the machine.

Of 10,000 votes cast, the eight votes represent a difference of 1/10,000th of 1 percent, noted Allday.

At the conclusion of the rechecking, Allday commented, "I didn't expect an error to be made, but this was something I felt should be done. Those involved with the race will be more comfortable."

Results of Tuesday's rechecking and Thursday's recounting will be canvassed by the City Council during a special session at 9 a. m. Friday in City Hall Council chambers.

City delays annexation

of plot north of Midland

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

An ordinance for annexing 6.5 acres north of the current city limits was postponed Tuesday by Midland City Council until a special session Friday.

The council tentatively approved the annexation pending work on the details of the Green Tree Country Club golf course which will be excluded from annexation. The housing development will fall within city boundaries, however, if the ordinance makes it past two readings.

The special session will be at 9 a. m. Friday in City Hall Council Chambers.

The city panel decided to move ahead with condemnation proceedings on a parcel of land needed for Loop 250 if the owner doesn't accept the city's offer for right of way.

City Attorney Joe Nuessle said the land was appraised at $9,150 which works out to be 47.5 cents per square foot. The owner wanted 75 cents per square foot. Nuessle said the owner compromised at 52 cents, but recently changed his mind and upped the figure about another 10 cents.

"This has been going on for 18 months," Nuessle said of the problem the city is up against in trying to purchase rights of way for Loop 250. Landowners have been raising their asking price on the land, despite what appraisers have said, and the city is running out of money.

The south half of Ohio Avenue between N. and Garfield streets will be closed. The council approved the action and will make the north half of that street one way going west. The south half is being purchased by Midland Memorial Hospital to make room for parking at the Allison Periman Basin Cancer Therapy Center.

The request from Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church for street closings and a beer license for the family fair was approved only after more police officers were required by the council.

Despite an unfavorable recommendation from the Planning and Zoning Commission, the council approved on first reading a zone change to local retail district on Lamesa Road between Cuthbert Avenue and Cherry Lane.

Eddie Garza said his client, Joe Hernandez, planned to put in a small restaurant in the location. But the planning body denied the request on the basis spot zoning for retail wouldn't fit in the area.

Garza pointed out the land in that area has been vacant for many years and home builders wouldn't want such a location.

The council authorized Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc. to design two open air hangars at a cost of $11,400. Col. Wilson Banks, director of aviation, noted there is a need for more hangars. One will go at Midland Air Park, the other at Midland Regional Air Terminal, and each will hold 25 planes.

In other action the council approved closing an alley on the Hill property on West Illinois Avenue upon request of Midland Independent School District.

An agreement between American Sign and Indicator Co. and the city for a baggage area sign at Midland Regional Airport.

Continuing issuing free parking passes for conventions and meetings.

Militants threaten

if U.S. acts militarily

By The Associated Press

The Moslem militants occupying the U.S. Embassy in Tehran today threatened to kill their 50 American hostages — "burn them into ashes" — if the Carter administration takes any military action against Iran.

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, meanwhile, declared Iran has "decided to overthrow" the regime in neighboring Iraq.

The militants' grim threat came as U.S. officials were hinting at a naval blockade or mining of Iran's ports if President Carter's new economic and diplomatic sanctions fail to free the hostages, who were in their 158th day in captivity today.

"In the name of God the avenger we plainly warn the criminal government of the United States that if it undertakes even the smallest military intervention in Iran we will kill all the spies hostages together and we emphatically warn the respected U.S. nation that the criminals of the U.S. administration will be directly responsible for such an event," said by Tehran Radio.

A Western reporter who called the embassy for clarification of what was meant by "spies hostages" was told the militants meant all the hostages would be killed, and that they were not making any distinction between alleged spies and the other captives.

In the early days of the crisis the militants said they would kill the hostages if the United States made a military attempt to rescue them. They said they had rigged the embassy compound with explosives.

Later today, Iran's official news agency Pars carried another militant statement declaring, "We will burn into ashes the spy hostages and the building they are living in if we see any suspicious military move or the least military attack by the U.S. against the territory of Iran."

Ghotbzadeh, interviewed by American television networks this morning, said he doubted that the Iranian government could stop the embassy militants if they decided to carry out their threat, "but I hope we never go to that end."

In Washington, Carter administration officials declined to make immediate comment on the threat. In the past, Carter has warned of severe retaliation if any hostages are harmed.

Ghotbzadeh's announcement on Iraq was carried by Tehran Radio, which quoted him as saying, "We have decided to overthrow the Baathist regime of Iraq." There were no further details.

Hostility between Iran and the pro-Moscow government of the socialist Baathist Party in neighboring Iraq has been growing in recent days.

Tehran Radio reported an artillery exchange across the border Monday night and Tuesday and said the Iraqi positions were "smashed." Iran, which withdrew its diplomats from Baghdad on Monday, announced that it closed the offices of the Iraqi diplomatic representative in Tehran and the Iraqi news agency.

In another development today, the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi left a Cairo military hospital and moved to the Kubbeh Palace in the Egyptian capital. He reportedly will stay there for a few days.

His doctors said the exiled Pahlavi, whose cancerous spleen was removed in surgery two weeks ago, was recuperating well. He is suffering from cancer of the lymph system and of the liver, which the doctors say will be treated with drugs.

Carter has appealed to America's European allies to join the United States in cutting off exports to Iran, but so far none has showed any signs of giving more than vocal support to the reprisals.

The foreign ministers of the nine European Common Market nations are to meet in Lisbon, Portugal, tonight to begin consultations on the Iran crisis.

Iran ships 550,000 barrels of oil a day to Japan, 250,000 to Britain and 400,000 to other Western European nations. The Tehran regime has threatened to deny its oil to any who join the United States in cutting off shipments of food or other necessities.

Ghotbzadeh said European support of American economic sanctions would not have a serious impact on Iran. He also said the Algerian Embassy in Washington would handle Iran's affairs now that Carter has broken diplomatic relations with Tehran. U.S. interests in Iran will be handled by the Swiss.

Oil may be cut,

U.S. warns allies

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Iran's diplomats ushered out of the United States amid cries they were treated like hostages themselves, the Carter administration is warning U.S. allies that it, too, can shut off the Iranian oil tap.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance asked about two dozen ambassadors to come to the State Department this afternoon to hear what this nation wants their governments to do in support of U.S. economic sanctions against Iran.

The administration reportedly is considering a naval blockade of Iran's sea routes or the mining of its oil ports, which would block Iranian exports and cut off the oil revenues that sustain the Perstan Gulf country.

White House spokesman Mark Henderson refused to comment immediately on the militants' threat. He said he did not know which options Carter might be considering for what he called a "show of force."

Iranian diplomats in the United States hurriedly packed their bags and left the country Tuesday night on flights from Washington, New York and Los Angeles. FBI spokesman Roger Young said only one of the 35 diplomats affected by the expulsion order was known to have stayed behind, and he was expected to leave after being released from a suburban Washington hospital where he was admitted after complaining of chest pains.

A State Department official identified the ailing diplomat as Abdol Azim Biabani, financial affairs director for the Iranian Embassy. The official said Biabani "has no plans to seek asylum here, and if he did, none would be granted."

FBI spokesman Young said an Iranian caretaker was left behind to look after the embassy until another country agrees to assume responsibility for the building and other Iranian interests in the United States.

"I was like a hostage in our embassy for 156 days," Ali Agah, the Iranian charge d'affaires, told reporters. "I'm glad I'm going home."

An embassy secretary, who identified herself as Mrs. Mehrmah Hodai, complained of the short notice given the Iranians to get out of the country — less than 48 hours — and the FBI surveillance placed on them to make sure they left. "They deal with us worse than hostages," she said.

U.S. officials showed no sympathy. They rejected last-minute appeals by at least six Iranian officials who asked to stay in the country for humanitarian reasons. One Iranian reportedly sought political asylum, but that, too, was turned down.

It was the first time the United States severed diplomatic relations since cutting ties with Cuba after Fidel Castro installed a communist regime in 1961.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said Tuesday that Carter has run out of patience with Iran and will take additional action unless the 53 American hostages in Tehran are released.

He refused to specify what action is contemplated, saying to do so would not be productive. But he emphasized that whatever Carter decides would not have to have unanimous support of U.S. allies, who have resisted cooperating with trade sanctions first imposed against Iran months ago.

"To the extent that they support us in these efforts, the crisis is more likely to be resolved without the necessity of additional actions which could involve additional risks for all concerned," Powell said.

He said the reference to additional action was "a clear statement of policy" and advised European and Japanese allies heavily dependent on Iranian oil to consider carefully what the next move might be.

In addition to ending diplomatic relations, actions announced by Carter Monday included trade sanctions, allowing claims against Iran's frozen assets in the United States and invalidating visas for future entry into the country by Iranians.

Hijacked jetliner slated ### to make D-FW fuel stop

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — A hijacker armed with an automatic pistol seized an American Airlines jetliner with only its seven crew members aboard Wednesday morning, forcing the plane to take off for Cuba, authorities said. A refueling stop was scheduled in Texas.

The incident was the second skyjacking to Cuba this year. There have been more than 150 hijackings of U.S. planes since 1961.

Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Dick Hallen said the Boeing 727 was taken over at Ontario International Airport at 7:58 a. m. It had been scheduled to depart at 8:15 a. m. for Chicago's O'Hare International Airport, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration in Washington said.

The plane took off from this Southern California city 35 miles east of Los Angeles at 8:37 a. m. The FAA said it was scheduled to make a refueling stop at the Dallas Fort Worth International Airport in Grapevine, Texas, on the way to Cuba.

"It's an American Airlines Boeing

727. There's only the crew aboard plus the hijacker. He's demanding to go to Cuba," Hallen said. "They're presently taxing out, and I'm sure they'll attempt to comply with any of his demands."

Airport spokesman Dennis Watson said the unidentified hijacker was armed with a .45 caliber automatic pistol.

The FBI is handling the investigation, Watson said.

Fred Farrar, the FAA spokesman in Washington, said preliminary reports indicated the man posed as an airport employee and boarded the plane before the crew. It was reported the man had gained access to the jet, which was parked next to the airport terminal, by scaling a fence bordering the runways.

Farrar said there were three flight crew members and four flight attendants aboard the plane. They were not immediately identified.

The Chicago bound passengers were waiting to board the plane when the takeover occurred, said Ontario airport spokesman Billie Bickmore.

Iran says it will

'overthrow' Iraq

By The Associated Press

Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said today "we have decided to overthrow the Baathist regime of Iraq."

The statement, carried by Tehran Radio, quoted Ghotbzadeh as saying Iran would defend itself against Iraqi military attacks and sabotage.

Ghotbzadeh accused Iraqi President Saddam Hussein of being "America's agent," adding "Any country supporting America in practice must face action similar to that (which) Iran has taken against America," the radio quoted Ghotbzadeh as saying. Hussein's pro-Moscow government generally is considered one of the most anti-American in the Middle East.

Avatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, spiritual leader and power behind Iran's revolution, declared in another London monitored broadcast that Moslems of Iran and Iraq would remove the "evil Baathist leaders" of Iraq's ruling Arab socialist party and "consign them to the dustbin of history."

Neither broadcast made clear how Iran expected to overthrow the government of its neighbor.

Diplomats in Beirut, Lebanon said that Khomeini, leader of the Shiite Moslem sect, could easily arouse Iraq's Shiite majority against Hussein. But they said the Iraqi army is firmly behind the mostly Sunni Moslem leaders in Baghdad.

Hostility between Iran and Iraq has been growing, and Tehran Radio said fighting broke out today in the Qasr-e-Shirin area of Iran's southwestern Kermanshah Province on the Iraqi border. According to the report, Iraqi forces attacked with light and heavy weapons, but an Iraqi border post was destroyed.

GOP's Bush criticizes Reagan's 'wishy-washy stance' on boycott

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer

Ronald Reagan's flip-flopping on whether the United States should boycott the Moscow Olympics has earned him a score of zero on George Bush's scale of political sportsmanship.

"I'm appalled," said Bush, "that my principal opponent for the Republican presidential nomination, Gov. Ronald Reagan, has taken a wishy-washy position on this issue."

Reagan, who espouses a generally hard line on foreign policy, including stronger threats against Iran and sending U.S. arms to Afghan rebels, said Tuesday that American athletes should be free to go to Moscow if they choose that course.

Bush, campaigning in Pennsylvania, told the World Affairs Council in Philadelphia that he fully supports President Carter's call for a total boycott of the Summer Games and "I find it outrageous that this nation has not rallied behind our president."

"Today," said Bush, "I am urging the president not only to stand firm but to take additional action that will ensure the finality of his decision and put an end to the public debate over the participation of our athletes."

Reagan, who has changed his mind several times on the issue, told the American Society of Newspaper Editors in Washington that "I would rather see the athletes and, of course, the Olympics Committee — they're prudent men — I would rather see them persuaded and make a decision themselves not to go."

"But I can't bring myself, I must confess, to say we're going to be the only country absent, that the president should be able to say to a group of Americans... that you can't leave the country."

Carter has appealed to the athletes and their parent organizations to boycott the games but has stopped short of declaring a flat prohibition on travel to Moscow.

Reagan first supported a boycott, then withdrew his backing on ground that few other countries would join

Early this month, he endorsed the boycott again. He said also that the Olympic Games should be moved back to their original home in Greece, but he dropped that position in his latest statement.

Elsewhere Tuesday, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy acknowledged in Pennsylvania that he trails President Carter for that state's critical primary on April 22, but he insisted "It's still a long road. We're in it until the end. I'm not in it to lose, and I'm very hopeful we'll gain the nomination."

Kennedy denied a report in the Washington Post that he and Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., last month discussed, and then rejected, the idea of having Udall supplant Kennedy as Carter's principal challenger. Kennedy said the report "has no basis in fact whatsoever."

In California, Rep. John B. Anderson, R-Ill., called for "dramatic new means" to solve the Iranian hostage crisis by enlisting the support of Japan and Western Europe in the exercise of economic sanctions

Reagan reveals his support for Olympics boycott

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan, dogged by questions about whether he supports boycotting the Moscow Olympics, stands accused by Republican rival George Bush of taking a "wishy-washy position."

Reagan, who in fact has changed his mind several times about a boycott, said Tuesday he supports staying away from the games to protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

But he said U.S. athletes should be free to go to Moscow if they choose.

Bush, on the other hand, urged Carter to stand firm and take steps "that will ensure the finality of his decision and put an end to the public debate over the participation of our athletes."

"I find it outrageous that this nation has not rallied behind our president," Bush said in Philadelphia. "I'm appalled that my principal opponent for the Republican presidential nomination has taken a wishy-washy position on this issue."

"President Carter," said Bush, "made the right decision in calling for a boycott of the Olympics. When the president makes a firm commitment, he is entitled to the support of the nation. The only way the Russian people will learn of the tragedy in Afghanistan is if we stay with the president's decision."

Reagan, questioned at a meeting here of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, said "I would rather see the athletes and, of course, the Olympic Committee — they're prudent men — I would rather see them persuaded and make a decision themselves not to go."

"But I can't bring myself, I must confess, to say we're going to be the only country absent, that the president should be able to say to a group of Americans... to set that precedent, that you can't leave the country," Reagan said.

Carter is appealing to the athletes and Olympic Committee to boycott the games but has not said he would forbid contestants from leaving the United States.

Reagan first supported a boycott, but then withdrew his backing on grounds that few other countries would join the United States in staying away.

Early this month, Reagan endorsed the boycott again but said it would be wrong for Carter to use coercive means to block athletes from going to Moscow.

Bush barnstorms in Pennsylvania

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Locked in a struggle for survival, Republican presidential candidate George Bush launched a 10-day barnstorming sweep through delegate-rich Pennsylvania by saying "we can turn it around here."

The former U.N. ambassador and CIA director, sorely needing a victory to blunt front-runner Ronald Reagan, told a state legislative gathering Tuesday night that it's premature to write him off.

"I believe in the adage of Washington's famous basketball coach (Dick Motta) that 'the opera's not over 'till the fat lady sings.' And believe me, the Pennsylvania primary is the key to this nomination," said Bush.

"It's frustrating when you have to sit and listen to your obituary when you haven't stopped breathing. I haven't even begun to fight yet. I just got to Pennsylvania and we can turn it around here," he added.

Bush spoke at the World Affairs Council in Philadelphia before coming to the state capital in his bid to woo support for the state's 83 delegates, the fourth largest bloc at the Republican nominating convention.

Today's schedule included a visit to Allentown, a steel mill in Bethlehem and an appearance in Pittsburgh.

In Philadelphia and again at a $100-a-plate fundraiser for Republican state Senate candidates here, Bush staunchly backed President Carter's call for an Olympic boycott to protest the Russian invasion of Afghanistan.

"At some point, when the president makes a firm commitment, he is entitled to the support of the nation. And I hope he makes it stick," Bush said.

"The only way the Russian people will learn of their own government's brutality is through cancellation of the Games. We are not going to turn our back on naked, brutal aggression," he added.

Kennedy summarizes campaigns

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ask Sen. Edward M. Kennedy about the race for the Republican presidential nomination and he says "it would be extremely difficult" for anyone to catch Ronald Reagan.

But ask him about his own race, against a front-running President Carter, and the answer is different.

"I think Mr. Carter's got a lead in the delegates, and we've got an uphill battle," he said Tuesday as he wrapped up a two-day campaign tour of Pennsylvania.

Kennedy concluded his swing through Pennsylvania conceding that he still trails the president in the state with the Democratic primary less than two weeks away.

The Massachusetts senator arranged to spend part of today at home in suburban Washington before making an afternoon campaign trip to Baltimore.

Nationally, Kennedy trails the president in Democratic convention delegates, 892.3 to 439.1, with 1,666 delegates needed to nominate.

By contrast, Reagan is farther ahead of his rivals, but not as close to the GOP nomination as the president is to the Democratic prize.

Reagan has 372 delegates, compared with 72 for George Bush and 57 for Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill. It takes 906 delegates to nominate.

At one point on Tuesday, Kennedy seemed to say he could win the nomination even if the president goes to the convention holding enough delegates for victory.

Girl allegedly sold to sex offender

"I'm so excited I can't think straight," said her mother, Angela, as the child was reunited with her family on Tuesday. Miss Cahail was rescued by police in Red Bluff, 450 miles to the north, earlier in the day after she was found asleep in a camper parked behind a restaurant.

A 41-year-old convicted sex offender, John William Dickey of Riverside, was arrested and charged with kidnapping in a San Bernardino County Municipal Court warrant.

Also in custody for investigation of kidnapping was the girl's 16-year-old cousin and his 15-year-old girlfriend, said Sgt. Gary Eisenbeisz.

Dickey, who pleaded guilty in 1976 to lewd and lascivious acts with a child, was placed on three years probation in March 1979 after treatment as a mentally disordered sex offender.

Initial reports indicated no apparent injury or trauma to the child, authorities said.

Miss Cahail was taken from her bed Saturday at the San Bernardino County home her family shared with Gene and Helen Raymond, who were known to the girl as "grandma and grandpa" although they are unrelated, according to Eisenbeisz. The couple often cared for the girl when her mother was not home, authorities said.

Assistant Sheriff Floyd Tidwell said Dickey "wanted the young girl to live with him."

"Your assumption is the same as ours," he added. "He told the cousin he wanted to teach the young girl things."

Sheriff Frank Bland said Dickey and the cousin settled on $230 for the girl, adding that the 16-year-old told police he'd spent $150 playing pinball machines.

Officials alleged the cousin and his girlfriend took the girl a few blocks to where Dickey's pickup truck was parked. Authorities said Dickey then picked up his son at a nearby foster home, telling the foster parents he would return Monday but telling the cousin he was heading for Oregon.

Dickey and his 9-year-old son also were found asleep inside the camper, officials said.

"Daddy, Daddy," Miss Cahail yelled as she was reunited with her family. Her father, Lee Cahail, talked to his daughter about the new T-shirt and pants she was wearing before turning to reporters.

"I know what I want to say," said Cahail. "I'm very proud of all the help I got from everyone. If I can do anything to repay anyone, don't even call, just come on over."

Central Texas town closed for two hours

HOLLAND, Texas (AP) — Highway leading into this Central Texas town were barricaded for two hours Monday night after a hose transferring anhydrous ammonia from a railroad tank car ruptured.

Several families were evacuated, but no one was injured, Bell County sheriff's deputies said.

Fertilizer plant employees were transferring the toxic liquid when the hose broke about 7:30 p.m., said Sgt. Jackie Howell.

He said high winds blew the fumes away from town.

Scouts ready annual Roundup

Buffalo Trail Council of Boy Scouts of America announced Tuesday plans for the Third Annual Roundup to be held Saturday and Sunday in Chaparral Center on the Midland College campus.

Essentially an art show and sale, the Roundup is being held to raise funds for operating the Buffalo Trail Boy Scout Ranch in the Davis Mountains.

Featured will be Southwestern art, according to Carol Swain who has worked on organizing the artists for the event. Artists — not counting those from Texas — are coming from states such as California, Arizona, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

Among the 50 featured artists will be Stefan Kramar, Pat Durgin, Sue Lynn, Andy Claire, F. Delaney Ward, Lorenzo Castaneda, Tod Richardson and Bill Craig. "Hundreds of paintings are coming" in for the show and sale, said Mrs. Swain. Also included will be bronze artists.

The Roundup will be from 1 to 8 p.m. Saturday and 1 to 6 p.m. Sunday. Admission is $1 per person.

For the past two years, the Roundups were held on area ranches. The change to Chaparral Center was made this year to attract a majority of the people and to allow them to attend at their convenience, said Mrs. Swain.

Last year, 500 area persons showed up for the event on a local ranch. This year, she hopes to get 10,000 people in to the Roundup.

Buffalo Trail Scout Ranch is located on 6,300 acres and provides summer camping for Boy Scouts from this area and other parts of the country. Included is wilderness ranching, four week summer camps, horseback treks and a mountain man trek.

The Roundup helps to keep costs for each participant down to about $50 for each week at camp.

TVA stops spending on Tellico Dam project

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — After spending money that had not yet been appropriated, the Tennessee Valley Authority has halted all but essential outlays on Tellico Dam to await money from Congress.

The setback is the latest for the often-stalled Tellico project, delayed for a decade by court battles over the protection of the snail darter fish.

TVA spokesman Louis Gwin said Tuesday that the utility has already spent on Tellico about $2 million of a $20.7 million supplemental appropriation it believed Congress was about to approve.

Congressional subcommittees assured TVA in February that the money to complete the dam was on the way, he said.

TVA board members spoke last week with congressional staff members about the Tellico funding, Gwin said, but he added there was no indication when Congress might approve the outlay.

TVA's three board members said on Tuesday that if Congress doesn't provide the money, TVA may have to cover its Tellico spending with money earmarked for its Columbia Dam project.

"If we do not get the supplemental appropriation, Tellico will be in the position of borrowing from Columbia. But that is something that we just do not want to do," said board chairman S. David Freeman.

Gwin said no money is in TVA's 1980 budget for Tellico because its future was uncertain when TVA requested budget appropriations. The utility has already spent $120 million on the Little Tennessee River project, southwest of Knoxville.

Earlier Tuesday, Freeman said in a speech that TVA's commitment to keeping nuclear power generation safe means customers can expect annual electric rate increases.

"Low risk nuclear power is quite expensive, as compared to today's rates," Freeman told a joint meeting of the American Nuclear Society and European Nuclear Society in Knoxville. "Anybody who favors safe nuclear power must favor rate increases. The two are Siamese twins, and anyone who says otherwise is either uninformed or deliberately misleading the public."

He said TVA's nuclear expansion program, the nation's largest, makes increases inevitable. The utility, which now operates the Browns Ferry nuclear plant near Athens, Ala., hopes to get its Sequoyah plant near Chattanooga operating at full power this summer. It is building five other atomic generating plants.

Andrews to have child welfare

ANDREWS — A child welfare department will be set up by Andrews County, county commissioners decided Monday.

The commissioners approved a lease agreement with Jack Kantor, county health physician, for operating space at Permian General Hospital.

In other business, the commissioners approved payment for aggregate surface of county roads and city streets with Rose Gravel Co. The payment came to more than $37,000.

Promise of autonomy for Palestinians remembered as Carter toasts Sadat

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has publicly reminded Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin of his Camp David pledge to grant "full autonomy" to the more than 1 million Palestinians living in Israeli-occupied territories. "It would be inconceivable that we would let this promise (of the Camp David accords) slip through our grasp," Carter said in toasting President Anwar Sadat of Egypt at a White House dinner Tuesday night after the first of two days of talks between the two leaders. Carter and Sadat were to resume their discussions today. Sadat also planned to meet with various administration officials and congressional leaders and have a brief evening session with former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. Sadat responded to Carter's toast Tuesday evening with effusive praise for the U.S. president and a firm commitment "to pursue our mission until a comprehensive settlement is achieved." While never mentioning the official May 26 target date for conclusion of the stalled negotiations between Israel and Egypt over the Palestinian question, Sadat insisted: "A real transfer of authority must take place, and a new era of reconciliation should begin." About 1.2 million Palestinian Arabs live on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in Gaza under Israeli control. Begin, due here next week for talks with Carter, has offered to relinquish control over some day-to-day affairs but would maintain Israel's hold on the territories, won from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Six Day War. Carter, however, in what he called "a toast to peace," recalled that the Camp David accords of September 1978 call for "the organization of a self-governing authority in the West Bank and Gaza derived through free elections held by the people who live in those two troubled areas." Israel, Carter said, "has agreed to withdraw the military government and civilian administration associated with it and then to withdraw all her troops from the occupied territories (with) the remainder of those troops to be located in specified security locations."

Survival Training Course this weekend

ODESSA — A Survival Training Course for pilots and non-pilots will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday in the Founders Building at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin in Odessa. Field training will take place on grounds near the classroom site on UTPB's South Campus. Water survival training will be demonstrated in UTPB's Olympic Pool. Teaching the course will be Kenneth W. Burton, veterans affairs counselor for the University of West Florida and an expert training instructor for the Aircraft

Owners & Pilots Association (AOPA) Air Safety Foundation, a national safety organization. Burton, who has been an aviation physiology and survival specialist for the U.S. Air Force for more than 20 years, said that survival training is a "must" for anyone who spends anytime in the out-of-doors. Burton said that the course is "aimed at providing a pilot or non-pilot with a resource of knowledge to build a level of confidence that won't leave a feeling of helplessness in a real emergency." "The course is geared for anyone who might be stranded in an emergency-survival situation outdoors," said Karl Preitsch, director of flight training for AOPA's Air Safety Foundation in Washington, D.C. "Although many of our courses are geared for pilots, the survival-training course would be beneficial to any sports enthusiast, campers, skiers, hikers, backpackers, mountain climbers, as well as aviators — anyone who might be stranded in the wilderness or any isolated area," he said. Pre-enrollment registration is recommended. However, those wishing to take the course may register at 6:30 p.m. Friday in the UTPB Founders Building. The course begins at 7:30 p.m. Friday with a slide presentation on emergency off-field landings and with a discussion on priorities of life. Saturday's session, from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., will incorporate survival kits, techniques of first-aid, shelter construction, food-and-water procurement, signaling devices, water-survival equipment and aircraft survival utilization, and airport familiarization. Sunday's session, from 7 a.m. to noon, will include practical field exercise and techniques of search and rescue. Registration fee is $50. The course is being promoted by the High Sky Chapter of The Ninety-Nines Inc., an international organization of women pilots. Those interested in enrollment in the weekend course may call 367-2146 or 366-7233 in Odessa or write to the High Sky Chapter of Ninety-Nines Inc., P.O. Box 6393 ATS, Midland, Texas 79701.

Soviets launch two cosmonauts in orbit

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union launched a seven crews since it was launched Sept. 29, 1977, rookie cosmonaut and a record space adventurer today for linkup with the orbiting Salyut 6 space station, the official Tass news agency reported. The launch of the Salyut 35 craft followed a record 175-day manned mission aboard the Salyut 6 last year, and there was speculation the cosmonauts would still be aloft to send greetings to the Moscow summer Olympic games starting July 19. Tass said the two cosmonauts were feeling good and all systems were functioning normally. The agency said their mission was to carry out maintenance and repair work on Salyut 6 and to conduct scientific and technical experiments. Tass said the spaceship was manned by Lt. Col. Leonid Popov, 34, the commander, and Valery Rymyn, 40, the pilot and flight engineer. Popov was making his first space flight. Tass said he was a fighter pilot in the Soviet air force before joining the space program in 1970. Rymyn made space trips in 1977 and last year. He shares the world record for time spent in space. He and Col. Vladimir Lyakhov spent 175 days and 36 minutes in orbit in the Soviet Union's last previous space flight, returning to earth Aug. 19, 1979. The manned craft was launched a 4:38 P.M. (8:38 A.M. EST) from the Baikonur launch site in Central Asia, Tass said. The launch was shown three hours later on Soviet television. The Salyut 6 space station has been visited by

2-year-old boy dies in house fire

ODESSA — A 2-year-old child, who would have been 3 this Friday, died as the result of burns and smoke inhalation suffered in a Tuesday morning house fire here. The house, at 2008 W. County Road in Ector County, was occupied by Pete and Rosa Trevino and their son, David Anthony. According to Ector County fire officials, Rosa Trevino said she was in the bathroom when she heard a fire. She left the bathroom and went outside, walking past the child on her way through the house, officials said. David Anthony was found by firemen in the middle of the bed in the combination living room-bedroom. The fire apparently started near the front door to the living room and bedroom, and the house was heavily damaged. Firemen spent approximately an hour and a half battling the blaze, finally extinguishing it with 1,250 gallons of water. It was the second tragedy in the last year for the Trevinos. Their 4-month-old child died a year ago of apparent crib death.

Cuba's stark lesson

For some months now we've been hearing reports that Cuba's economic position was deteriorating. In light of the most recent news event, those reports would appear to be on target.

According to the Peruvian government, more than 10,000 Cubans overwhelmed that country's embassy in Havana, Cuba, seeking to escape the communist rule of Fidel Castro.

The thousands of Cubans reportedly began pouring into the Peruvian embassy compound on Friday after the Cuban government removed its police guard outside the embassy.

Cuban officials said they removed the guards because one of them was killed in a gunfight last week when six Cubans rammed a bus through the embassy gate to seek asylum.

The flood of Cubans into the Peruvian embassy is a testimonial to the horrors of a communist state. A government which has to restrain its people from leaving surely cannot be pleasant and productive.

Fidel Castro has for years maintained his repressive regime in his island state just 90 miles from the tip of Florida. All the while he has maintained close ties to the Soviet Union and made a nuisance of himself throughout the world.

Cuban troops, if you recall, have been involved in the Soviet Union's "proxy wars" in Africa and elsewhere. And Soviet combat troops, it has been reported, are present even now in Cuba.

But things apparently are not as rosy in Havana as Castro would have us believe. Castro accused Peru of giving refuge to "common criminals and anti-social elements" after two dozen Cubans had sought refuge in the Peruvian embassy.

What's Castro's response now? Does he call the 10,000 Cubans who flooded the Peruvian embassy "common criminals and anti-social elements"?

The incident truly is a human tragedy. Those thousands of Cubans apparently represent only the tip of the iceberg of the human suffering in Cuba.

Here in the United States, too often we take our freedom all too lightly, too much for granted.

When we witness an outpouring of human grief and despair like that reported in Cuba, we are reminded that our freedom and our democratic form of government is a rarity among nations. We must forever strive to keep it safe because there are far too many nations that would end our way of life if our guard ever drops.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, April 9, the 100th day of 1980. There are 267 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On April 9, 1968, thousands attended funeral services for slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King, Jr., in Atlanta.

On this date: In 1865, Confederate Gen. Robert E. Lee surrendered to Union Gen. Ulysses Grant to end the Civil War. In 1682, the French Explorer La Salle reached the Gulf of Mexico after traveling down the Mississippi River.

In 1939, 75,000 people crowded around the Lincoln Memorial to hear black singer Marian Anderson after she had been barred from Constitution Hall.

In 1940, German forces invaded Norway and Denmark in World War II.

Ten years ago, a gas explosion and fire at a subway construction site in Osaka, Japan killed 73 people.

Five years ago, the White House said President Nixon had given South Vietnam private assurances in 1973 that the United States would react vigorously to any communist violation of the Vietnam peace treaty.

Last year, making his first public appearance since cancer surgery three months earlier, John Wayne presented the "best picture" Oscar at the Academy Awards.

Invasion of Arab oil fields would doom Israeli state

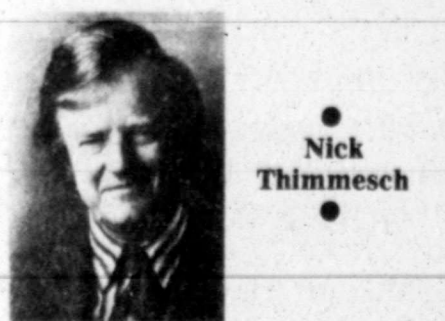

WASHINGTON — Israel is never dull. Equipped with a perpetually boiling political pot. And always mindful of menacing neighbors, Israel is easily agitated. Lately, despite the peace process, there have been signs that a sense of dangerous desperation may be welling in this volatile nation.

Recently, Dial Torgerson of the Los Angeles Times recounted a dialogue in a Jerusalem cafe in which a U.S. official, his Israeli counterpart, and some journalists, got into it hot and heavy over the possibility of Israel invading Arab oil nations.

The Israeli official argued that the U.S. and European nations were pushing Israel around just to please the Arabs, particularly the Saudis. He claimed that it was Israel who lets Saudi oil flow and who could shut it off, thus turning the U.S. and Europe "into a pastoral society if we wanted to."

When the American objected, the Israeli reminded him that while Samson died in the process, he pulled down the temple, killing all inside. "Let the world remember that," the Israeli warned. "No one should think that we who went through the holocaust would see ourselves sold out for Europe's oil."

The bottom line in the dialogue was the Israeli's assurance that all would go well, presumably for the U.S. and the West, if Israel took over the oil fields, and ran them as they did Egypt's fields in the Sinai for years. I would have regarded Torgerson's piece as just a nicely crafted vignette, were it not for an intense conversation I had a while back with Moshe Arens, Chairman of the Knesset's Committee on Defense and Foreign Relations. Arens, a right-winger, and a strong figure in the Israeli government, startled me that day by declaring that the U.S. would come to realize that it must join Israel in an invasion of Arab oilfields in order to save the West.

I reminded Arens that the oil belonged to those Arab nations, that to invade them would only bring great discredit to Israel and the U.S., and that Israel needed more trouble like a hole in the head. But Arens shook his head, and said that the U.S. would one day see the wisdom in such a military action.

The CBS correspondent also at the table must have felt as incredulous as I, for neither of us reported the conversation in the media. Perhaps we concluded that at that moment Israeli hawks were resentful with Carter Administration talk — and actions — concerning the use of Egypt and other Arab nations for bases to protect U.S. interests in the region.

It is sad, but instructive, to realize that certain influential Israelis feel so desperate that they think war and not peace.

Certainly they do not represent the consensus thinking of Israeli leadership, political or intellectual. Certainly U.S. officials would reject any scenario involving a joint Israeli-U.S. military action against Arab nations.

But oil flows now, and despite the price, bourgeoisie Americans burn it liberally in furnaces and automobile engines, and the Republic goes on. If there was an oil doomsday, however, with no oil flowing from the Arabian Gulf, there would be panic in the U.S. and Arens' plan might sound feasible to anxious U.S. officials.

Such anxiety would not show the better sides of the American and Israeli character. Nor does the statement by one Israeli in Torgerson's dialogue who pointed out that Prime Minister Begin was "outrageous" for putting Jews in the Arab town of Hebron, knowing that "the Americans can't do anything to him because Carter is running for election."

There are rueful conclusions. One is that Carter has lost the confidence of some Israeli officials and Jewish leaders in the U.S., therefore, the surfacing of dangerous scenarios. Another is that the $10 billion U.S. has given Israel in recent years allows them certain bravado. How brave would Israel be without these billions?

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Carter's inflation strategy hasn't worked

WASHINGTON — For three years, President Carter has fought inflation with more inflation. All that has been produced, unfortunately, has been more inflation.

Repeatedly, he has readjusted his economic sights. At first, he sought an economic slowdown so gradual that it would avert a recession. Then he was willing to accept a mild recession. Now he would settle for a commonplace, down-at-the-heel slump. But some of his economic experts fear that the fall from the dizzying, inflationary heights could now cause a severe recession.

The president, meanwhile, has pushed up interest rates and encouraged higher gasoline prices, hoping this would cause people to spend less money and force prices back down. The strategy unfortunately hasn't worked, because most of the leading American industries are price-proof.

Prices are set by a few giant corporations, which dominate each industry. The lesser companies quickly fall into step. They have learned to communicate with one another like rare tropical birds — with imperceptible movements and signals.

The antitrust laws, therefore, no longer are an effective deterrent; the corporate giants are able to set prices without any overt acts that the Justice Department would need to make a case against them.

Under the circumstances, these corporations aren't inclined to slash prices and reduce profits just because their customers are cutting back purchases. Instead, the companies curtail production, close plants and lay off workers. All the while, prices continue to move irresistibly upward. It would take a major recession, some economists fear, to convince the corporate leaders to reduce prices.

So Carter's whole anti-inflation program has been based on wrong assumptions. Instead of lowering prices, his moves have merely created ed unemployment.

By late 1978, prices were rocketing up at an alarming rate. Yet as late as Nov. 20, 1978, secret White House minutes reveal that Carter's goal was totally unrealistic — "to reduce the inflation rate to 6 and one-half percent or lower."

He hoped to talk prices down, relying on jawboning and voluntary guidelines. State the minutes: "The President observed that we have a long way to go but that he is satisfied we are putting a balanced anti-inflation program in place."

He pressed for higher interest rates and gas prices, thus pouring more inflation upon the fire. On Dec. 11, 1978, he vowed behind closed doors that "the fight against inflation is, and will remain, the top priority for the administration."

He continued to whip up the inflationary spiral that he was trying to halt. At the Jan. 15, 1979, Cabinet meeting, the president was still whistling in the dark. The secret minutes report: "The President indicated that the relatively poor inflation statistics over the coming months would not be indicative of failure of the anti-inflation program."

But the financial whiz who was then his secretary of the Treasury, Michael Blumenthal, was more realistic. He bluntly warned, according to the minutes, that "steady nerves will be required as the economy experiences (1) a rise in unemployment; (2)

ART BUCHWALD

'All-American' students are only cracking heads

LOS ANGELES — There is a lot of scandal going on in college athletic programs these days. The Pacific Athletic Conference, composed of the major West Coast schools, is under fire because evidence is building up that certain athletes were given credit for courses they never took, and also non-athletes took tests for college players who, for one reason or another, were unable to study for them.

I believe the schools are taking a bad rap. Every college coach I've talked to has assured me that each student on his team has a faculty adviser, who counsels the athlete on his education and makes sure he keeps up his grades.

I was even permitted to attend a session with an All-American running back and his adviser at Unbeaten State of Southern California.

The adviser said, "Lightning, I've been studying your transcripts and you're doing quite well."

"I should hope so. I run over 1,000 yards last season."

"I just received your grade for your debating class. You got a B minus."

"A B minus! Who the heck took that course for me?"

were hoping he'd do better, but apparently he's having girl trouble and has developed a stutter."

"I don't know why I should take a B minus because some dope has personal problems. This could bring down my whole grade average. I was counting on at least a B plus in debating. It was one of my best subjects."

"Don't worry, Lightning. You got an A in Advanced Economics. We had a Rhodes scholar take the final for you."

"Now you're talking. I ain't going to bust my butt out there on the gridiron every Saturday if I can't get a good grade in economics."

"You had quite a bit of a problem this year with Shakespeare 1-B."

"I did?"

"Yes. Apparently the student we assigned to take the course for you was more interested in her own grades than she was in yours. I called her in at midterm and warned her that if she didn't shape up, you might be declared ineligible for next year. But she said she hates Shakespeare. You wound up with a D."

"Can't we protest to the professor?"

"He said it was too late. He didn't know the girl was taking the course for you."

"Well, you better do something about it. I ain't taking no D. The coach promised, when he recruited me, that I'd graduate summa cum laude, and ride away in a new yellow Cadillac."

"You will, Lightning, even if I have to take your nuclear physics exam myself."

Asbestos paper sales to be banned for home

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government began legal steps today to ban the sale of asbestos paper for use in the home after tests showed the product can release cancer-causing fibers.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission told its staff to draw up a ban on sale of the product both to do-it-yourself homeowners and to heating and plumbing contractors who install it. The paper is wrapped around pipes for insulation, installed behind stoves to protect walls from heat damage and used in other ways.

Tests conducted for the commission showed that when the paper is handled by an installer it can emit microscopic asbestos fibers which can be breathed into the lungs. The fibers are recognized causes of cancer and other diseases. "Asbestos is one of the most widely documented hazards," Commissioner R. David Pittle said.

The findings by the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health were more definite on hazards to do-it-yourselfers than to residents in homes where the installation was done by contractors. However, the commission began the banning process — which includes drafting of legal documents and inviting public comment — on both situations.

The commission took no action on industrial use of asbestos paper, which is outside its jurisdiction.

Safety experts have advised homeowners not to try to remove asbestos paper until there is more information about the hazards, saying removal could cause heavy release of the fibers.

Kiwanis hear city Objectives

Guy McCrary, executive director of the Objectives for Midland — The Eighties program, presented details of the Objectives program Monday to members of the Midland Downtown Kiwanis Club.

McCrary reviewed early work done by the Objectives group that first met in 1967 to set goals and objectives for Midland. Some of the goals then included developing the County Courthouse and Jail, building an oil museum, expanding the scope of Midland Community Theatre, attracting new and diversified industry to our area, developing a public transportation system and developing a medical complex.

Most of these goals were just dreams then, but have turned out to be realities.

Another group of civic-oriented individuals met recently in San Antonio to finalize Midland's Objectives for the Eighties. The goals were categorized into nine areas — Design of the City, Culture, Recreation and Entertainment, Education, Local Government, Health and Welfare, Economy, Spiritual Life and Housing.

A series of neighborhood meetings have been scheduled over the next few weeks so that all Midlanders may discuss the proposals and offer ideas for inclusion in the program. The meetings are scheduled as follows: April 14, Fannin Elementary School; April 15, Jane Long Elementary School; April 17, South Elementary School; April 21, Crockett Elementary School; and April 22, Sam Houston Elementary School.

All of the meetings are scheduled for 7 p.m. in the school cafeteriums. The public is encouraged to attend and offer ideas, criticism and suggestions.

Neighbors aid city with no water

GRAFORD, Texas (AP) — Although the town's water supply has dried up, assistance from other communities has begun to pour in abundantly for the 577 residents of this small Palo Pinto County community.

The town began pumping water from a creek below the dam after a small reservoir that supplies the community's drinking water dried up two weeks ago.

Then the creek dried up, it hadn't rained since February, and the town was in its fourth day without water Tuesday when other people responded to reports of the community's desperation.

The Coca-Cola Co. donated 3,400 one-gallon jugs of water "to the elderly and other people who don't have a way to get water," said Arlene Howard, city secretary.

The Southland Corp. of Dallas planned delivery today of 4,000 10-pound sacks of ice for residents to put in their freezers and melt as needed.

Two trucks, donated by Don Breedlove of Dallas, with two trailers donated by the Associated Milk Producers, Inc., were hauling water to the town by late Tuesday.

A Mineral Wells company, Centron, donated enough pipe to lay an emergency line to a nearby water supply. Grafard was hoping to tie into the Mineral Wells water supply 12 miles away, but Mineral Wells "did not have proper connections and delivery," Mrs. Howard said.

The next step was to try to connect into a water supply used by Palo Pinto, about 15 miles from Grafard, "but we haven't asked them yet," she said.

"The public and the people in Dallas, everybody, has been most generous," Mrs. Howard said. "We were in terrible circumstances and couldn't have gotten out by ourselves."

Grafard still has problems, but they no longer are quite as critical. Town officials have a Thursday appointment with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development in Dallas.

Officials have estimated it would take 16 months to put a new water system in operation from the time Earlier Tuesday, Mrs. Howard and other Grafard officials had a gloomy outlook.

"Without water, our sewer system will be stopped up. We'll have a health hazard because people can't flush their commodes. If we have a fire, we don't have water to fight it," said Mrs. Howard.

City officials thought school would have to close Tuesday, but they managed to hook up a well on the school grounds.

Although the people of Grafard have had water rationing almost every summer, they had never run completely out of water before.

It usually rains in the winter, but this winter, it didn't. We had no measurable rainfall in March. I'd say we're 12 to 15 inches short for the winter," Mrs. Howard said.

Two weeks ago, the town imposed rationing when its small reservoir dried up. The town began pumping water from Keechi Creek below the dam until it went dry Saturday.

On Sunday, residents borrowed farmers' milk trucks to haul water 12 miles from Mineral Wells.

Monday, however, the milk trucks had to return to the milk business, and the town decided it could not afford $500 a day for the imported water.

The 43-year-old water system constantly breaks down, Mrs. Howard added.

"We're not even breaking even now on water and sewer revenues," Mrs. Howard said. "We're going in the hole every month with repairs, inflation and this, that and the other."

The town applied for a federal grant and loan to improve its water system but was turned down, she said.

Afghan rebels kill 120 Soviets

KUWAIT (AP) — An Afghan rebel organization based in Iran claimed its forces killed 120 Soviet troops in a battle near the town of Herat close to the Iranian border, Tehran radio reported today.

The radio, monitored here, said the announcement by the Afghan Islamic organization, based in Mashad in northeastern Iran, admitted that the rebel forces lost two killed in the same battle.

There was no independent confirmation of the rebel claims.

Guerrillas kill one, wound three in Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — In a spectacular machine gun ambush, guerrillas killed a policeman and wounded three others today in the North Irish capital.

The "Belfast Brigade" of the Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility for the killing and said it used a big M-60 American machine gun.

Police said they thought at least three machine guns were used in the carefully planned trap. The killers took over a house overlooking a library in West Belfast and held a woman and child captive overnight, officers said. In the morning they lured police to the scene by reporting a break-in at the library.

The armor-plated police Land Rover that arrived to check the report was riddled with gunfire from a window of the house about 50 yards away.

One policeman died at the side of the vehicle, and another was reported very seriously injured. A third officer with leg wounds, and a woman constable, with hand injuries, were taken with him to hospital but were reported not seriously hurt. The woman radioed for help despite her injuries.

Ousted diplomat sees no change for hostages

LONDON (AP) — The top Iranian diplomat expelled from the United States said today President Carter's ouster of all Iranian diplomats will not change the situation involving the American hostages held at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Charge d'affaires Ali A. Agah, arriving here on his way to Iran after being ordered out of the United States, told reporters at Heathrow Airport, "We do not fear even tougher measures by the United States. We do not fear anything but our Creator."

Agah, 41, who headed the Iranian mission for one year, added: "We were given only 36 hours to leave and our people are very excited about going home because most of them have missed the wonderful experience of the Iranian revolution. We are not bitter about it at all."

Travelers on the scheduled British Airways jumbo jet with the Iranian party said the mood on board was almost festive.

Agah said his party consisted of 40 persons — nine diplomats and 31 dependents. He said they included Washington and Chicago consulate officials. Diplomats from San Francisco, New York and Houston were on separate planes.

Only Agah was allowed out of a special transit section at Heathrow. The other Iranians were kept away from reporters.

Before the expelled diplomats boarded an Iran Air flight to Tehran, 30 Iranians living in Britain appeared outside the terminal. Some waved pictures of Iranian ruler Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, others carried placards denouncing the United States.

The ousted diplomats, from an enclosed walkway, watched as the demonstrators shouted "Down with Carter," "Long live Khomeini!" and "No East, No West, Islam is the best."

Agah, led by British Airports Authority officials to a special conference room, was asked if he thought the 50 American hostages might be harmed or put on trial. He said: "I am sure they will not be harmed but I don't know anything about a possible trial. That will be decided by the Islamic assembly in Tehran."

Asked why Iran had maintained diplomatic relations with the United States until now, Agah said: "There are nearly 300,000 Iranians in the United States and $60 billion worth of wealth and materials there. We have to look after those."

Agah said he had warned the State Department 10 times before the U.S. Embassy takeover last Nov. 4 that Iran would react severely if the deposed shah, Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, was brought to a special trial. "Although I never knew specifically that their embassy would be taken over. But I do think that the State Department considered the possibility of the embassy being taken over and were prepared for it."

Agah said "more than half" the telephone calls received at the Iranian embassy in Washington on Tuesday, the day after Carter announced the expulsion, were from Americans offering help to any Iranians in financial difficulty or stranded in America because of the closing of the consulates.

"In the past five months we have received nearly two million letters, most protesting against us. We answered 270,000 and more than 70 percent of the people we wrote to, wrote back saying they had changed their attitude to us. They complained they did not know what was happening in our country when the shah was in power."

"We used to visit American schools to tell the children about the shah's rule, and the State Department told us to stop doing it."

Agah said: "I accept that the American people are upset at the holding of the hostages, especially when they have not been properly informed about the relationship."

Consular officials 'glad to leave' U.S.

HOUSTON (AP) — With about 150 curious passengers looking on, nine Iranians strolled down a boarding ramp into a waiting jet, thus ending formal diplomatic relations between the United States and Iran.

"We are glad to leave," consular head Dr. Mohammed Hezarhaki, said Tuesday through glass doors that separated the Iranians from the rest of the passengers and reporters.

Hezarhaki later held up a hand-written sign bearing the same sentiments, along with a framed picture of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and a bouquet of red carnations given to the departing workers by Iranian students.

Prior to their departure at 6 p.m. Tuesday, the Iranians — four men, three women, a teen-aged girl and a small boy — had arrived at Houston Intercontinental Airport escorted by Department of Public Safety troopers, airport security personnel and FBI agents.

"Extraordinary" security measures were taken in searching the British Caledonia DC-10 prior to takeoff, according to a Pan Am spokesman.

Pan Am owns the terminal used by British Caledonia.

Alan Stronech, vice president of British Caledonia operations in Houston, declined to specify what special precautions had been taken.

"Basically, we just made the aircraft as clean as possible," he said. Stronech said there were no special seating arrangements for the Iranians, adding "they're just normal passengers."

Seemingly unconcerned that they had been ordered from the country after President Carter Monday severed diplomatic ties with Iran, the small contingent chatted with well-wishers and friends and took snapshots of one another before boarding the plane.

They were moved from a spot on the ground near the aircraft to a glass-enclosed walkway that led to the boarding ramp about 30 minutes before the plane left on its eight and one-half hour flight to London.

The Iranians spent their last minutes in the United States chatting with each other, shaking hands with their FBI escorts and flashing handwritten signs to reporters on the other side of the glass wall.

Two of the Iranian men knelt in prayer toward the setting sun while they were waiting.

Other passengers stood quietly in line as the Iranians boarded the aircraft.

"Governments are governments. They are playing poker," said Charles Coulter, 55, a Brown & Root welding engineer who was taking the flight en route to Libya.

"They (Iran) deal one hand, the United States deals another," he said, when asked about the president's latest efforts to break the five-month-old hostage deadlock.

As the Iranians left, their friends shouted "God bless you" and "good luck."

"I'm glad that's over," said an Englishwoman who had been waiting to board the aircraft. "Now, maybe we can get this show on the road."

Hostage's father says Carter '150 days late'

BALCH SPRINGS, Texas (AP) — The father of an American hostage in Iran says President Carter should blockade Iran to force the release of his son — Marine Sgt. Johnny McKeel Jr.

Johnny McKeel said President Carter was "150 days too late" in breaking diplomatic relations with Iran.

"I don't think it will do any good," said McKeel.

The Iranians "could care less about diplomatic relations. The only way to break this thing is to isolate (Iran)," said McKeel, who advocates a total blockade that would tell the Iranians, "You turn us loose and we'll turn you loose."

McKeel said Monday he is not concerned about actions that might upset U.S. allies because, "We don't have any (allies) who are backing us up."

The hostages will be released only when the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini "gets ready to turn them loose," said McKeel.

He said he last heard from his son in February, in a letter brought by a group of Brown Berets who visited Iran. He said his son indicated he was all right, but talked of mental stress and weight loss.

Germany to hold back on Iran action

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The West German government said today it was delaying any decision on economic or political sanctions against Iran until it had time to consult with other industrial nations.

Government spokesman Armin Gruenewald also told reporters following a Cabinet meeting that West Germany was not considering severing diplomatic ties with Iran, a step President Carter took Monday.

Gruenewald said the West German government was deeply concerned over the "critical situation" resulting from the continued holding of 50 Americans hostage at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

He claimed the Bonn government was actively working on behalf of the hostages but declined to elaborate.

Gruenewald said Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher would join foreign ministers of the eight other European Common Market nations in Lisbon late today to begin consultations on the Iran crisis.

But the spokesman repeatedly refused to speculate how long consultations on a joint response to the crisis might take. He also indicated West Germany would consult with perhaps a dozen other countries, presumably including Japan, before reaching a decision on sanctions.

State Supreme Court to hear Iranian pleas

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The state Supreme Court has agreed to hear arguments on the legality of the arrest of 48 Iranian college students during a demonstration last month at Northeast Louisiana University in Monroe.

The students contend their constitutional right to free speech was violated when they were arrested after they shouted down a former Iranian diplomat during a speech March 6.

The high court said Tuesday it would hear the appeal, but set no date for the hearing.

The students interrupted a talk by Fereydoon Hoveyda, an ambassador under the shah's regime, with cries of "murderer" and "killer."

Charges of trespassing and resisting arrest were filed against the students.

The students spent nearly a week in jail, where they protested their arrest by refusing to eat. Freed on bail, they failed to appear for their trial March 14 at Monroe City Court.

Beside citing violation of free speech in the appeal to the high court, the group's lawyers, contend that heavy security at the City Court was intimidating and that all students were entitled to a public trial.

Hearing set

AUSTIN (AP) — A hearing on public school curriculum will be held Wednesday under the direction of Joe Kelly Butler, chairman of the State Board of Education, and Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Allice, a member of the House Education Committee.

Saving oil saves cash

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conserving oil — and money — often can be accomplished at no cost to the homeowner.

Simple measures, such as turning back the thermostat, making sure the windows are tightly shut, and securely closing the chimney flue all can help bring down each month's heating bill, according to the National Oil Jobbers Council.

The association for the country's heating-oil dealers and distributors says that, for example, lowering the thermostat just 10 degrees over an eight-hour period each day can save a minimum of 8 percent on the fuel bill.

She's positive she was negative

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Send $1 plus a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to ABBY, Letters Booklet, in care of this newspaper.

DEAR ABBY: My very first "Dear Abby" letter is inspired by ALL TORN UP, whose blood tests repeatedly came back "positive" for syphilis when she knew it couldn't be true. The same thing happened to me 40 years ago.

I took a blood test to obtain a marriage license and was shocked beyond words when it came back positive! I went from one doctor to another, and finally found one who knew that it was possible to have a "false positive," which was true in my case.

I'm glad you encouraged ALL TORN UP not to panic, but to insist that her doctor investigate further.

V. in L. A. DEAR ABBY: I, too, show a false positive on a Wassermann. Apparently, this is not unusual, yet, in my experience, physicians never consider this a possibility when a syphilis test comes back positive.

As part of my physical when applying for a civil service job, I was sent to the county VD clinic to wait in line with assorted hookers. This was both humiliating and demeaning. Now whenever I have a blood test, I let them know up-front that I'm a false positive. — CLEAN IN S. F.

DEAR ABBY: Was I ever glad to see that letter in your column about ALL TORN UP. The same thing happened to me—only I was married. (Try to explain THAT to your husband!) My positive Wassermann turned out to be lupus. (It's a disease in the same family as rheumatoid arthritis.) There is a National Lupus Society with support branches all over the U.S. They were enormously helpful. — VICTIM IN BALTIMORE.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding ALL TORN UP: It is absolutely appalling how ignorant some doctors and others in the health field are! There are countless reasons why a person would have a false positive test for syphilis, and that poor girl should have been set straight immediately. Those who have had malaria, TB, scarlet fever, infectious mononucleosis, lupus erythematosus (and many other diseases) are apt to have false positives.

Please pass the word, Abby.—R. M. M., Rock Island, Ill.

DEAR ABBY: About the woman whose blood test came back positive and she swore there had to be a mistake: Fifteen years ago my son, who was to be married in two weeks, took a blood test and was informed that he had syphilis!

His fiancée's father gave me the news and told me what a rotten son I had. He asked what they were going to do about the $5,000 deposit they had paid the caterer, etc.

My soon took more blood tests, and finally the N.Y. State Health Department advised us that some other factor in his blood caused the "false positive." Wouldn't you think most doctors would be familiar with this? Well, they weren't.—F. in NYC.

DEAR ABBY: What a wonderful service your column provided when you ran that letter from the young woman whose blood test indicated that she had syphilis when she didn't.

When I was 19, I had the same experience and nobody believed me, so I was actually treated for syphilis! The humiliation I was subjected to was unbelievable. (Lucky for that doctor malpractice suits weren't in vogue then.)

Thanks, Abby, your letter made my day. GOOD MEMORY.

22-month-old boy home from hospital for first time

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Doctors, nurses, therapists and hospital roommates called it a going-away party, but Johnny Todd was just headed home—for the first time in the 22 months he's been alive.

Johnny, who suffers from respiratory problems, left the University of Illinois Hospital on Tuesday after spending all of his young life there breathing with the aid of a ventilator.

In addition, a tracheotomy was performed and other surgery was undertaken to relieve pressure caused by cranial bleeding. The child was born three months premature.

But doctors say Johnny was a trooper through it all. "He's been a model patient," said Robert Einhorn, one of his physicians.

Recently, Johnny's condition improved enough that doctors decided he could leave the hospital if life-sustaining equipment was purchased for his home. The boy still requires a respirator, but doctors are hopeful that one day he'll be able to function on his own. He also must spend a few weeks at a New Orleans hospital for observation before finally going home.

At Tuesday's party, hospital staff and roommates said their farewells while the guest-of-honor looked a bit bewildered and sampled a bit of his goodbye cake.

"I think he's totally overwhelmed by everyone," said the child's mother, Patricia Todd, 30.

But Tuesday marked the day for which the Todds had been waiting. "Sometimes I thought it wouldn't come," Mrs. Todd said. "I got very discouraged, but I wouldn't say I gave up."

She believes the new setting will make her son "a whole different little boy."

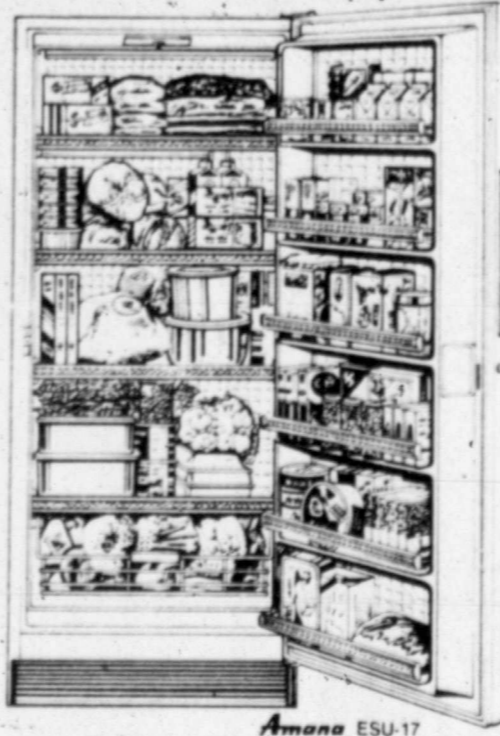

"Just seeing birds, trees, grass, helping mama with the dishes and being with the family sitting at the dinner table—all of these things are going to help him." Johnny also will be reunited with his father, who has been living with the couple's other child, 8-year-old, Erin, in New Orleans since August. John Todd, 30, moved to his native New Orleans so he could finish college and possibly go on to law school.

Mrs. Todd, a licensed practical nurse, stayed on in Chicago and worked at a hospital nights, visiting her son during the day.

(The Todds also are facing some financial difficulties. Hundreds of Chicago residents contributed $22,400 to a special trust fund and insurance covers most of $375,000 hospital bill. Still, the Todds must complete payment of their bill and pay for a nurse to help out at home.)

This Amana Energy Saving Upright Freezer can save you MONEY in operating costs compared to our previous comparable models.

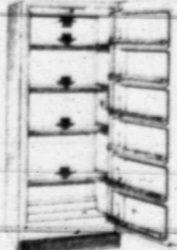

To achieve these dramatic savings, Amana put up to 2½ inches of foam wall insulation around the entire freezer to maintain safe, zero-degree temperatures and reduce freezer running time. Typical freezers have about 1¼ inches of foam wall insulation. In addition, the door is filled with a combination of superior slab foam and fiberglass insulation.

Amana then lined the interior with an easy-to-clean, one-piece insuliner that adds better insulation protection than metal or porcelain-coated steel liners.

Finally, Amana included a Magna-seal door gasket that grips the cabinet for an airtight seal, and a radiant shell condenser, eliminating the need for an energy-consuming condenser fan motor.

Amana Energy Saving Upright Freezers have built-in quality along with built-in energy efficiency.

Amana-matic Contact Freezing helps keep foods at safe, zero-degree storage temperatures. Each solid aluminum shell is a prime freezing surface with coils attached to the bottom. There are even coils at the top of the insuliner. All foods are on or directly below a prime freezing surface.

All foods are on or directly below a prime freezing surface.

- Shelves in Stor-Mor Door are deep enough to hold standard packages upright. Flip-up retainer bars let you store a variety of package sizes. Makes shelves easy to clean, too.
- Large glide-out basket keeps odd-shaped, hard to store packages for easy access. Model ESU-13 has a removable tray.
- Large size capacity in a space-saving cabinet that's only 28" wide.

VD cases penicillin-resistant

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas health officials have reported five cases of penicillin-resistant gonorrhea in the first three months of 1980 — the first in the city since 1976.

New book line

NEW YORK (AP) — The establishment of a new line of quality trade paperbacks, called "Owl Books," has been announced by Holt, Rinehart and Winston.

Holt says the line will publish both original fiction and non-fiction as well as reprints.

Slightly fewer than 600 cases of the strain, penicillinase producing Neisseria gonorrhoeae (PPNG), have been reported nationwide. It is resistant to penicillin, the common treatment of gonorrhea, and only one other drug is known to be effective against the venereal disease.

The Dallas-Fort Worth area faces an "epidemic" of venereal disease, with a rate twice the national average, a report by the Texas Area 5 Health Systems Agency has said.

Call Poison Center in emergency

GALVESTON — The majority of home poisoning emergencies can be handled at home, according to Michael Ellis, director of the Texas State Poison Center, located on the campus of The University of Texas Medical Branch here.

A rushed trip to an emergency room is usually unnecessary and "not the most efficient way to handle this type of emergency," he said.

"Should an accidental poisoning occur, the first thing to do is call the Poison Center. The staff can tell how serious the situation is and what should be done about it. Most of the time the emergency can be taken care of in the home," Ellis pointed out.

"Most poisonings occur because adults store their medicines, cleaning agents, polishing agents and other household products in haphazard fashion," said Ellis. "Under the kitchen sink is a convenient place to store these household agents but that also puts them essentially on the floor where the small child lives."

He went on to describe a typical incident of home poisoning. A mother finds her 22-month-old daughter coughing and choking under the kitchen sink. She determines that the child has swallowed an undetermined amount of liquid furniture polish. "This is a real emergency. With liquid furniture polishes, and all petroleum distillates (oil-based products) for that matter, as little as one sip is potentially fatal, if it gets into the lungs.

"And these products get into the lungs all too often primarily because small children get choked easily on almost everything they drink. As little as a teaspoonful in the lungs of an adult is fatal, so it takes only a tiny amount for a small child."

The immediate inclination of most people is to rush the child to an emergency room, he said. But as much as "85 percent of the time a poisoning emergency can be handled at home if the parent knows whom to call immediately. That's what the Poison Center is there for.

"Frequently ingestion is not serious. But if it is, we will send the patient to his family physician or an emergency room. The center then calls ahead and lets the medical facility know that the poisoning case is coming and what type of treatment is indicated," he explained.

But there are measures that can be taken at home during a poisoning emergency, he noted. "Every home where a child lives or visits, even if only occasionally, needs to keep a bottle of syrup of ipecac on hand. This nauseating substance is the only way safely and effectively to induce vomiting in a poisoning victim. A one-ounce bottle is readily available at any pharmacy without a prescription."

"Such home remedies as administering salt water or dry mustard and water or inserting a finger down the back of the throat may be ineffective and potentially harmful, Ellis said.

"The use of salt water to cause vomiting is extremely dangerous, since as little as two level tablespoons of salt have proven fatal in a three year old. A large amount of salt given at one time, particularly to a small child, produces a tremendous upset in his fluid and electrolyte balance. The extreme salt load can cause the child's death."

Poisonings occur every day; one estimate of the number of 1979 Texas poisonings is 120,000. In the same year, Texas State Poison Center received approximately 18,000 calls regarding poisoning emergencies and poison prevention.

To report a possible poisoning incident or to request more information, call the Texas State Poison Center, 1-713-765-3332.

Donkey shoes to be seen at game

Ever wonder what kind of shoes a donkey dons to play basketball?

The Midland Jaycees are sponsoring a donkey basketball game at 8 p.m. April 18 at Chaparral Center. Proceeds will go to the Midland Jaycees general fund for their civic work and the Texas Jaycee Campus of Victoria College at Gonzales.

Texas Jaycee Campus is a junior college for the severely handicapped.

Junior Achievement is helping the Jaycees and Jaycee-ettes to sell tickets. JA will receive a portion of the proceeds.

The Texas Jaycee Campus is limited to a capacity of 35 persons at the present time, with a waiting list of 100.

The statewide goal for donation to the Texas Jaycee Campus is $100,000. Funds are raised primarily through direct solicitation or by the basketball games.

According to a spokesman, any Jaycee or Jaycee-ette "will be glad to take donations from an individual or a corporation."

Gary Petersen is executive director of Junior Achievement. Jaycees Alan Barrett, Larry Neahusan and Jay Doss are chairmen for the donkey basketball game. Jaycee-ette Dalila Walker is program manager for the Texas Jaycee Campus.

Tickets for the event are a $3 donation. By the way, you'll have to go to the basketball game to find out how the donkey hoofs it on the basketball court.

Scholar is a frightening woman

Copley News Service

When scholar, writer and lecturer Mary Daly arises to speak, she often finds herself standing in the midst of a paradox.

She teaches at the Jesuit-run Boston College, and on her speaking tours, the lecture hall frequently turns out to be a church. The pulpit is the last place one might expect to find Mary Daly. The fact that she finds herself in this situation says something about the turmoil within the American church today.

Mary Daly, radical feminist and holder of seven degrees including three doctorates, may be the most frightening woman in America today.

She causes anxiety in her Jesuit colleagues at Boston University because she renounces everything they teach and calls for a new order of religion for women.

She frightens women because Daly digs deeper into culture, history, language, religion and philosophy than most feminist scholars, and she upends a rock that squirms with the most terrifying collection of worms and bugs imaginable.

Daly is the author of three books. All of them did well in popular sales and all are used as textbooks at universities. Her first book, "The Church and the Second Sex," set her on her odyssey of radicalism, and put her at odds with the Catholic church and the traditional academic world.

After a long siege of harassment, during which she lost her teaching position and then was reinstated at the insistence of the primarily male student body, Daly abandoned many of the ideas expressed in her first book. She came to feel that women seeking reformation of the church are "like blacks trying to reform the Ku Klux Klan."

Her second book, "Beyond God the Father: Toward a Philosophy of Women's Liberation," firmly established her revolutionary stance and led to her third book, "Gyn-Ecology: The Metaethics of Radical Feminism." This book was published by Beacon Press of Boston in 1978 and is now available in paperback.

Like any good preacher, Mary stands in the pulpit to speak, giving few clues as to how deeply she intends to shake her audience. She stands there, smiling and amicable. Then she begins to talk softly about her work, in general terms.

She tells of the adaptation and trivialization of women's culture that has transpired over the centuries. Then she drives deeper and describes Gyn-Ecology, which takes the form of a journey through three passages.

Woman jailed for sexual harassment

BONN, West Germany (AP) — In a bizarre case of sexual harassment in the U.S. Army, a woman private has been jailed for indecently assaulting a male soldier in West Germany, the Army disclosed today.

A special one-judge court martial in Nuremberg convicted Pvt. Cheryl Taylor, 20, of Kansas City, Mo., of having committed assault and battery against Spec. 4 Kevin Knox, 19, of Rock Hill, S.C., in a unit supply room at their artillery battery in Regensburg, a military spokesman said.

Pvt. Taylor, convicted March 31, was sentenced to 30 days at hard labor and fined $298.

"I am not aware of another case of this type in Europe," Army spokesman Maj. David Russell said.

He said the Army began a crackdown on sexual harassment in the 200,000-strong European command last month by court-martialing two male soldiers for verbally abusing a female enlisted woman at their unit in Nuremberg.

In the latest incident, which occurred Jan. 29, the woman soldier was found guilty of "wrongly committing an indecent, lewd and lascivious act" against Knox by placing her hand in his groin area and squeezing, Russell said.

Knox had entered the unit supply room where Taylor was working as a clerk, and she abused him with indecent language, Army sources said.

After Knox reported her to the unit commander, Taylor approached him and put her hand on his groin, the sources said.

The sources said Taylor had previously been given non-judicial punishment for similar behavior involving other male soldiers at the same unit, Battery B, 3rd Battalion, 60th Air Defense Artillery.

A military source who spoke with the jailed woman by telephone today said she angrily denied having touched Knox indecently, and she accused him of being a military police informer.

She is currently being held in the Army stockade in Mannheim but will be transferred to the U.S. military prison at Fort Riley, Kan., Russell said.

After serving a 30-day sentence at hard labor, the woman soldier would be assigned to a new basic training program in the United States after which officers will decide whether she can remain in the Army or be discharged.

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the four gilt bronze horses from the facade of the Basilica di San Marco in Venice is being displayed at the Metropolitan Museum of Art through June 1.

The museum says it serves "as the focal point of the exhibition, 'The Horses of San Marco,' designed to explore the history of these famous classical horses and their influence on subsequent artistic movements, particularly in the Italian Renaissance."

Brownies help Midland Police Department

First grade Brownie Troop 10 has purchased a property identification marker and presented it to the Midland Police Department.

During a recent bicycle identification project in which several members of Troop 10 participated, one of the markers used by the MPD burned out. Because of this, the troop decided the donation of a new marker would be a worthwhile service project that would benefit all Midlanders.

Police Chief Wayne Gideon accepted the donation recently at the Girl Scout Program Center.

As chairman of the Crime Prevention Commission of Midland, Guy McCrary has expressed appreciation for the donation on behalf of all commission members.

The Crime Prevention Commission recommends that all Midlanders take advantage of the property identification program offered by the MPD. Any citizen can check out the markers and mark all their household valuables with their drivers license number.

The leader of Troop 10 is LaNette Baker, assisted by Charlotte Young. Troop members are Michelle Baker, Shelley Bolen, Ashley Caffrey, Kelly Culbert, Michelle Hardin, Laura Hunter, Kathy Kendall, Sheila Lancaster, Destiny Law, Moyda Granday, Amy Robbins, Angela Saltzman, Latisha Thomas, Carla Van Cleave, Christi Young and Jenny Zielisko.

Yucca gardeners journey to Odessa

The home of Mrs. Buddy Ice of Odessa was the setting for the Midland Yucca Garden Club's program, arranged by Mrs. Robert O. Burkett of Midland. Mrs. Ice was assisted by her houseguest, Reiko Yamamoto of Japan.

Before going to Odessa, the club met at Lancaster Garden Center for a business session. Hostesses were Mrs. Burkett, Mrs. J.D. Guidry and Mrs. A.J. Tisdale.

The president greeted members and two guests, Mrs. J.L. Relphs and Mrs. C.A. Semple.

When the various committees gave reports, plants and seeds chairman, Mrs. Charles Neuhardt, suggested that the seven Indian Hawthorne bushes originally given to the Lancaster Garden Center be moved to and given to the Girl Scout Program Center.

Hospitality chairman, Mrs. Billie Gilbert, and membership chairman, Mrs. Fred McMann, volunteered to be responsible for the centerpiece for the April birthday party at Trinity Towers.

While in Odessa, the group toured the bonsai garden at the Ice home. Afterwards, club members had luncheon at a cafeteria.

Yucca's May 1 meeting will be at Midland Woman's Club for installation of officers.

Philadelphia mayor straddles political fence — and how!

By DAVID ESPO

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Mayor William Green is in a tough spot.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, his good friend and longtime political benefactor, is running for president.

In ordinary times, Green almost certainly would endorse him, and still might.

But he might not, because Philadelphia, like all big cities, needs every dollar of federal aid it can get these days. And a Green endorsement of Kennedy almost certainly would anger the Carter administration.

As of now, the mayor is firmly on the fence with just under two weeks to go until the Pennsylvania primary

April 22.

It is said that neither contender for the Democratic presidential nomination has asked the mayor directly for an endorsement, although Kennedy and Green have spoken several times in recent months.

The mayor isn't talking.

"He hasn't said anything new on it," says his press secretary, Kathy Gosliner. "He hasn't granted any interviews... and I don't think there will be any."

Candidate Kennedy, of course, isn't so reticent.

"I have enormous respect for him, and he'll be making his judgment, I'm sure," the Massachusetts senator said at a news conference in Philadelphia during a recent campaign trip. "It is always valuable to have the support of a man who has had the record of public service like the mayor."

The Carter administration has expressed itself in a different, but no less convincing fashion.

Only last week, for instance, the Commerce Department awarded Philadelphia a $2 million research center for the U.S. footwear industry. Also in contention for the award was Lynn, a shoe manufacturing city in Kennedy's own state.

"President Carter has gone over the line in terms of exploiting the incumbency," complained a Kennedy campaign aide, James Flug.

Whether Flug was right or not, it's that kind of leverage to spread federal money around that must worry Green and the people around him.

"I think there are a lot of other things to look at besides friendship with the senator," said one aide to the mayor.

There were times, when Green himself was running for political office, that Kennedy was very helpful to him.

In 1971, when Green ran an unsuccessful campaign for mayor, Kennedy campaigned for him.

In 1976, when Green ran an unsuccessful campaign for the Senate, Kennedy campaigned for him.

In 1979, shortly before he launched his presidential campaign, Kennedy stumped once again for "my good friend, Billy Green," who went on to win election as mayor.

The two men also are personal friends. So close, in fact, that they once vacationed together, taking a trip down the Colorado River with their sons.

Some of Kennedy's aides express bitterness that Green has failed to endorse the senator.

Others, in what could pass for an example of sour grapes, say an endorsement really isn't worth much.

They point out that Kennedy lost the Illinois primary, even though he had the support of Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne, and Carter lost the New York primary, even though he had the support of New York Mayor Ed Koch.

But if endorsements don't mean much, Kennedy is running an odd campaign in Pennsylvania.

His first campaign act during a trip last week was to call a news conference to receive the endorsement of Philadelphia District Attorney Edward Rendell.

Two days later, he called another news conference in the city to receive the endorsement of a local member of the Pennsylvania Legislature, John White.

Presumably, neither man has as much clout in Philadelphia as the mayor. But then again, neither man had as much to lose.

An analysis

Nancy campaigns on another stump

By LINDA DEUTSCH

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nancy Davis Reagan, former actress, now a politician's wife and aspiring first lady, was home from the campaign trail but out on another stump — the author's promotion tour.

"It was really a coincidence," she says of the timing which brought her new autobiography, "Nancy," to bookstores during her husband's bid for the Republican presidential nomination.

But it is no coincidence that the book, written with Bill Libby, is a sugar-coated memoir of life with Ronald Reagan, devoid of marital crises or conflicts with children.

It is not that life was perfect, Nancy Reagan concedes. It's just that she is not one to let it all hang out.

"I think that's my private business," Mrs. Reagan says of matters glossed over in the book. "I believe you can lead a public life and still have a private life, which I have done."

"For me to do otherwise would have really been out of character," she says. "Anybody reading it would have wondered what in the world had happened to me."

In the preface to "Nancy," co-author Libby writes: "This is Nancy Reagan's book, not Ronald Reagan's..."

But Mrs. Reagan makes it clear her husband's life and ideas have shaped hers.

"I've often said," she writes, "my life really began with Ronnie and I think to a great extent it did. What I really wanted out of life was to be a wife to the man I loved and mother to our children. It seemed that everything else had just been a prelude to this."

Now, 28 years after her marriage, ask Nancy Reagan the most important thing in her life, and she answers quickly: "My husband."

Does she long to be first lady of America?

"I want to be Ronald Reagan's first lady," she says with a smile. "With the state we're in right now, which is frightening and disturbing, I do think he's the only man for the job."

She sees little conflict between her lifestyle and the new feminist age. "I've never thought of myself as an appendage to my husband," she says. "On the other hand, I did give up the career. I'm happy that I did. My life really became fulfilled for me at that time."

She pauses. Her unmarried daughter, Patti, 27, sits nearby, listening.

"We're all different," Mrs. Reagan continues, "and we all have to make up our own minds about what makes us happy. What makes me happy is having my husband, my children and my home. That doesn't mean you shouldn't have your own interests. Otherwise you become pretty uninteresting."

Her outside interests, she says, have been hospital work, a program for unwed mothers and a "foster grandparents program" she launched while Reagan was governor of California.

Almost everyone notes that Nancy Reagan looks younger than her 56 years. She is exquisitely turned out this day in a red and black suit with a bright red blouse softly bowed at the neck. Not a hair is out of place.

"If I ever took time to sit down for five minutes, I'd realize how tired I am," she says, half-joking.

"Campaigning is a unique and wondrous experience," she says. "I wish everybody could have that experience..."

"I've always felt politicians underestimated people — their brightness, their strength, their basic good sense," she says. "When you're out there with them, meeting them and talking to them, you find out you're right and you renew your faith in the strength that's in this country. ... They're very strong. All they want is someone to level with them and tell the truth."

A show business background has helped in the campaign arena, she says.

"You're used to meeting people and having interviews and having your picture taken."

"It must be hard for people who've never had a public life to be suddenly thrown into it. And all the ego satisfaction that's involved — that's not really a part of it for us. We've had that."

Japanese welcome kick in California-made sake

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — The Japanese are toasting a California brewer's sake that they say has more kick to it than their own brew of the traditional alcoholic rice drink.

Japanese authorities gave a "special" (highest) class rating to their first samples of the Numano Sake Co.'s concoction, which brews 250,000 gallons annually.

The secret is a return to an ancient recipe Japanese brewers abandoned when rice supplies ran low during World War II, said Curtis M. Rocca Jr., plant manager and Numano vice president.

Post-war brewers in Japan continued to use less rice for fermentation and added alcohol later, he said.

But Numano follows the traditional method — fermenting the rice for three or four weeks, pumping the raw sake to settling tanks, then filtering and pasteurizing it before aging — resulting in an alcoholic content about 17 percent higher than most Japanese sake.

Rocca is the son of the president of Pacific Rice Mills Inc., of San Francisco, whose storage and milling plant at Woodland is reportedly the largest in California.

Interest rates decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — After two straight weeks of decline, the interest rates on short-term treasury bills have dropped to the lowest level since Feb. 25.

The Treasury Department reported Monday that the interest rate on 26-week bills fell to 14.226 percent from last week's 14.804 percent while the rate on 13-week bills dropped to 14.424 percent from last week's 15.037 percent. The rates hit record levels on March 24, when 26-week bills carried 15.7 percent interest and 13-week bills carried 16.532 percent interest.

Bank employee suspended after discrepancies found

WINDOM, Texas (AP) — One Fannin Bank employee has been suspended pending an investigation into account discrepancies that the county attorney estimated at between $50,000 and $100,000. Auditors began examining income and expense records at the bank in this Northeast Texas town Tuesday after bank officers reported discovering discrepancies, said Fannin Bank President Mike Bethel. He said auditors, state bank examiners and FBI agents will inspect the bank's records for the past six years. "No individual accounts appear to be affected or involved in the discrepancies at this time," Bethel said. "The bank is fully insured, fully bonded and neither the bank nor any individual depositor is in a position to lose money. The bank's capital structure is as strong as it has been in many years." He said he did not know how much money was involved, but Fannin County Attorney Gene Gandy estimated the losses at between $50,000 and $100,000.

Vance pleads case for boycott

Olympic committee votes on boycott of Moscow games Saturday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance was the star attraction in the administration's latest effort to convince the U.S. Olympic Committee to heed President Carter's call for a boycott of the Moscow Olympics.

A number of committee members who couldn't attend a similar meeting last week, and several of the athletes themselves, met with Vance and other senior officials Tuesday at the State Department.

The 300-member USOC House of Delegates is expected to decide Saturday whether to send a team to Moscow, support the boycott or vote to delay a decision until the May 24 entry deadline.

There is some feeling the delegates will indicate support for the boycott, but wait until mid-May before formally rejecting the invitation to send a team, a decision acceptable to the administration.

Tuesday's 2 1/2-hour meeting was the second in a week in which the Carter administration brought out senior officials to lobby the athletic officials.

Last Thursday, Secretary of Defense Harold Brown was the ranking administration official and the president himself met with several athletes last month at the White House.

Vance said he told the USOC members Tuesday: "I could think of no single peaceful action which could so fully and forcefully indicate the importance that we attach to this matter than their support of their government's position on the Olympic boycott."

Carter sent a personal message to USOC President Robert J. Kane and each member of the House of Delegates requesting that they vote quickly to support his demand for a boycott.

He said the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan jeopardizes the security of the Persian Gulf area and threatens world peace and stability. In these circumstances, a USOC decision to send a team to Moscow would be against our national interest and would damage our national security.

Despite pressure put on the delegates to support the boycott, some members remained unconvinced. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Fisher of High Point, N.C., both members of the USOC, said they will vote to attend the Moscow Games. "When you consider all the evidence, I think the athletes should go," said Fisher, a former president of the Amateur Athletic Union. "I think the Russian people will learn more about what their country has done in Afghanistan if Americans carry the message to them."

Anita DeFrantz of Princeton, N.J., a rower who is a member of the USOC's Athletes Advisory Council, said she also is unconvinced a boycott is the best way. "I asked a couple of questions," she said. "I when will we know when we reach it. They said they didn't know."

Robert J. Surkein, chairman of the AAU's boxing division, said, "This whole thing has already killed us. Five of our fellows have turned pro."

Meanwhile, the executive director of the USOC said Tuesday the administration has raised the possibility the Olympic Committee could lose its tax-exempt status unless it goes along with the boycott.

In an interview with The Washington Post, F. Don Miller said congressional sources told him the administration raised the possibility of lifting the tax exemption last week in a meeting with congressional leaders. Miller declined to name his source, but said he takes the matter seriously.

White House officials have noted on several occasions that there are a number of legal steps the government could take to encourage the athletic community to go along with a boycott. But they have said they don't anticipate such action being necessary.

The Post quoted one unnamed White House official as acknowledging that removing the tax exempt status of the Olympic committee could be "one of those things." But the official said such a step is not being proposed.

Another potential pressure point is a proposed $4.2 million appropriation for the committee now pending before Congress. Both the House and the Senate are on record as firmly backing Carter's call for a boycott.

Toxic gas shows effects in liver tests

SOMERVILLE, Mass. (AP) — Nearly 20 percent of the persons treated for exposure to a cloud of toxic gas from a rail yard chemical spill show abnormal results in liver tests, Somerville Hospital officials say.

The leak of some 6,000 gallons of phosphorous trichloride from a tank car after a collision last Thursday at the city's freight yard forced thousands of people to evacuate an industrial neighborhood.

Hospital officials said Tuesday they had treated 457 persons who inhaled the irritating gas, and 20 percent showed abnormal results in liver enzyme tests. But those results could stem from various causes, including alcohol ingestion, viral conditions and asymptomatic mild hepatitis, said Carl Zack, a hospital vice president. Meanwhile, the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering said the most recent air samples taken at the spill site show no "significant" lingering fumes. The agency also plans to order test wells drilled to check for possible contamination of soil and ground water.

Sears calls off satellite TV plans

CHICAGO (AP) — Sears, Roebuck and Co. says it has broken off talks with Comsat General Corp. on a joint venture proposal to establish a nationwide satellite-to-home television subscription service. A Sears spokesman declined to discuss the reasons for the move, made at a directors' meeting Tuesday. The spokesman said

Sears "regards the service as consumer attractive and is interested in participating in a sales, installation and service capacity in this promising business." But the giant retailer is not interested in making the large capital investment necessary to start such an enterprise, the spokesman said. Sears and Comsat began discussions on the idea in January, according to the spokesman. The companies had said they would compete with cable operators and conventional television stations by providing roof-top receivers to tune in signals from Comsat's existing satellites. Comsat said it can obtain receiving equipment for $200-$300 from Japanese manufacturers and then lease the devices for a monthly fee of $15 or $20. Comsat could provide two to six channels of television programming, according to its officials. "We remain very much interested in the early establishment of a satellite-to-home subscription television service," a Comsat spokesman said.

While hospital officials awaited results of further tests, railroad officials met behind closed doors in nearby Tewksbury at a formal investigation into the tank car locomotive collision. Management, union officials, laborers and city officials had no comment on Tuesday's hearing. Somerville Mayor Eugene Brune was pressing for federal help.

Law gives farmers right to work land

PILESGROVE, N.J. (AP) — Local officials in this rural township have adopted a right-to-farm law designed to head off complaints when farmers work their land.

The law tells newcomers — mostly people escaping Philadelphia 20 miles northeast of here — that they must put up with the smell of pigs, early-morning sounds of irrigation pumps, mid-summer dust raised by tractors and other inconveniences.

"The right to farm all land is hereby recognized to exist ... everywhere in the township of Pilesgrove," says the ordinance that was passed Tuesday.

It allows the use of farming equipment "on holidays, Sundays, and weekdays, at night and in the day."

Township officials say the ordinance should forestall lawsuits, such as the one that maintained a farmer should have plowed under pig manure in what the plaintiff thought was a reasonable time.

"This ordinance states that the farmers were here first," says Ed Filcraft, president of the planning board.

The only restrictions in the ordinance are against commercial livestock or fowl production without planning board approval.

Any nuisance from farming is "more than offset by the benefits from farming to the neighborhood and community and to society in general," the ordinance says.

The township has a population of 2,950.

Government buys more wheat

But only half of grain offered is purchased

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has bought an additional 43.9 million bushels of wheat for $160.5 million to help bolster farmers' grain prices.

But the Agriculture Department said Tuesday the purchases represented only about 54 percent of the grain actually offered for sale.

AGRICULTURE

Thousands of bids were rejected because asking prices were too high.

The purchase was the first of the two the government has made. In the previous purchase two weeks ago, USDA bought 16.6 million bushels at a cost of $66.1 million.

Officials said the price paid averaged $3.89 a bushel, compared to $3.99 for the wheat bought previously. However, prices varied greatly because of location and kinds of wheat.

A total of 5,610,715 bushels were purchased from Texas growers at prices from $3.64 to $4.38 per bushel and purchases from New Mexico totaled 88,100 bushels at prices from $3.95 to $4.02 1/2.

The department also said it began making offers to buy wheat from farmers at prices posted in county offices of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

The direct buying was undertaken because, as Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland has said, not enough wheat was being offered by grain companies, including country elevators, at reasonable prices.

But the bid system, under which elevators offer to sell wheat to the government, will continue along with the new direct-purchase program, officials said.

Bergland says the wheat buying will continue until about 4 million metric tons — 146.8 million bushels — are removed from the market. That represents the amount of wheat left over when President Carter canceled further shipments to the Soviet Union Jan. 4, in response to the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan.

The wheat bought thus far totals about 60.5 million bushels or nearly 1.65 million metric tons. That is roughly 41 percent of the total wheat Bergland says will be bought.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat.

According to figures released by the department's commodity office in Kansas City, Mo., there were 5,824 bids to sell wheat this time, a total of nearly 81 million bushels.

Land surveys may cost New Mexico farm families

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The Bureau of Land Management is attempting to untangle hundreds of land titles along the Rio Grande where generations of New Mexicans have lived on what may be public land.

Upwards of 1,000 families may wind up paying from $1.25 an acre up to fair market value for land they thought was theirs, depending on improvements and length of occupation.

In two cases, BLM officials say an Albuquerque park and part of a school campus are on public lands.

However, Ray Armenta, coordinator for the program in the Albuquerque district, said the BLM takes the position that any land in question belongs to the people until proven otherwise.

"Our purpose is to try and resolve these cases," said Yolanda Vega, a BLM realty technician. "We don't want to take these people off their land."

Reasons for the apparent foulups vary from the changing course of the meandering Rio Grande to incorrect surveys at the time of purchase. This spring, one family in the mountain town of Questa in northern New Mexico, will formally purchase a 3.38-acre plot from the BLM for $4.25 under the agency's Rio Grande occupancy resolution program.

The lands in question range from the mountains north of Albuquerque to the marshes near the Rio Grande.

Alex and Felix Gonzales — the first household the BLM has identified as being part of the program — will be buying property they thought was theirs. They have lived and paid taxes on it since 1931.

"The bureau cannot effectively manage small parcels of this nature in most instances, and these people have been living there in good faith all these years," said BLM Albuquerque District Manager Paul Applegate. "It just makes good sense to turn the land over to them."

The BLM has been surveying and researching land ownership along the Rio Grande since late 1976. The program began in the southern district first, then expanded into the north. Survey crews now are working in Albuquerque's South Valley, an incorporated suburb.

Armenta said a number of South Valley homes, a park and part of the campus of Harrison Junior High apparently lie on public lands.

The BLM, in a letter to landholders in the area, said the bureau is making "a fervent effort" to contact everyone and explain their rights under the Color-of-Title Acts of 1928 and 1932 and the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976.

In general, the Color-of-Title Act of 1928 gives the BLM authority to dispose of public lands where individuals, groups or organizations have held them for 20 years or more in good faith and "peaceful adverse possession" — honestly thinking the land was legally and rightfully theirs.

If the claimants qualify under the Color-of-Title Acts, expenses are limited to $1.25 an acre. Otherwise, three alternatives are available under the Federal Land Policy and Management Act. The BLM can:

— Sell the land to a person living on it at fair market value in cases in which the landholder showed good faith in his holding but could not produce enough evidence for Color-of-Title claim.

— Sell the land at a public sale to the highest bidder in cases of vacant land or where an individual bought the property knowing it was public land.

— Lease the land to individuals where the BLM has deemed it is desirable to retain it in public ownership and the person cannot substantiate any kind of claim.

Wild horses, burro available for sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — People who want to legally own a wild horse or burro that has been roaming on public land supervised by the U.S. Forest Service can now do so.

R. Max Peterson, chief of the Agriculture Department agency, said Tuesday the new regulations allow an individual to gain ownership of up to four of the animals a year.

A stipulation in the regulations, however, is that a prospective owner must "treat the adopted horses and burros humanely during a one-year trial period" before legal title can be obtained.

Congress amended the law in 1978 to provide for legal title to the animals.

Australia faces drought

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Farmers and ranchers around Australia are anxiously scanning the skies for signs of rain that would break what threatens to be the continent's worst drought since the turn of the century.

"This drought has all the portents of being a widespread disaster," said Jack Hallam, Minister for Agriculture for the state of New South Wales in southeastern Australia. The state, the nation's most populous and economically important, is also the worst hit by the dry spell.

"It's different from other droughts because it covers such huge areas," Hallam said today after inspecting hard-hit areas.

'King of Sting' Memphis police secret weapon

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Standing 6-foot-1, weighing 240 pounds and speaking in a born-in-Memphis drawl, police Lt. John Talley is anything but obscure.

Yet Talley's specialty is undercover work — he is, indeed, the "King of Sting."

"He's almost our secret weapon," Police Director E. Winslow Chapman said. "I say almost because it's kind of hard to keep him a secret — you can look at him and see why."

Since 1972, Talley has traveled on loan to the U.S. Justice Department as a consultant to 98 communities. He teaches law enforcement officers the techniques of undercover operations and helps them set up organized-crime strike units.

Back home, Talley is operations officer of the Memphis undercover unit — 15 unorthodox male and female police officers. Jeans, flannel shirts, wool caps, long hair, beards, mustaches and afros are the norm. Their offices are adorned with posters of rock groups and their relationships are close.

In the eight years since the strike force was established, Talley and his band have run about a dozen storefront or sting operations, where they masquerade as criminals buying stolen property.

Their "covers" have included a jewelry store, a lamp shop, a nightclub in Mississippi, a grocery store in Arkansas, a wig shop in midtown Memphis. Recovery figures vary between $10 million and $15 million in merchandise, most of which is returned to the owners.

"The Justice Department has had surveys run through private corporations that show for every dollar spent on these operations, we get a $19 return," Talley said.

Talley's expertise has helped bring close to $1 million in federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration grants to Memphis. The unit currently is operating on an 18-month grant of $350,000 to $400,000.

But such grants may disappear if President Carter's proposed budget cuts are approved later this year. The administration proposal would virtually eliminate the 12-year-old LEAA and such LEAA-funded sting investigations as Talley's.

"Because of him, we've made a real impact in the flow of stolen goods and overall fencing operations in this community," Chapman said. "His operation and expertise have given this police department a national leadership role. We've developed techniques here that have been used all over the country."

Talley's boss at the Justice Department is Jim Golden, director of the Criminal Conspiracy Division in the LEAA.

"Depending on the year you look at, from 91 to 94 percent of the crime problem is property crime," Golden said in a telephone interview from Washington. "Talley is doing something about something everybody can relate to."

Golden noted Talley's good ol' boy appearance.

"You can't let looks deceive you if you're looking at John Talley," he said. "Behind that country boy exterior is a very, very smart police officer. In fact, he's practically a national resource."

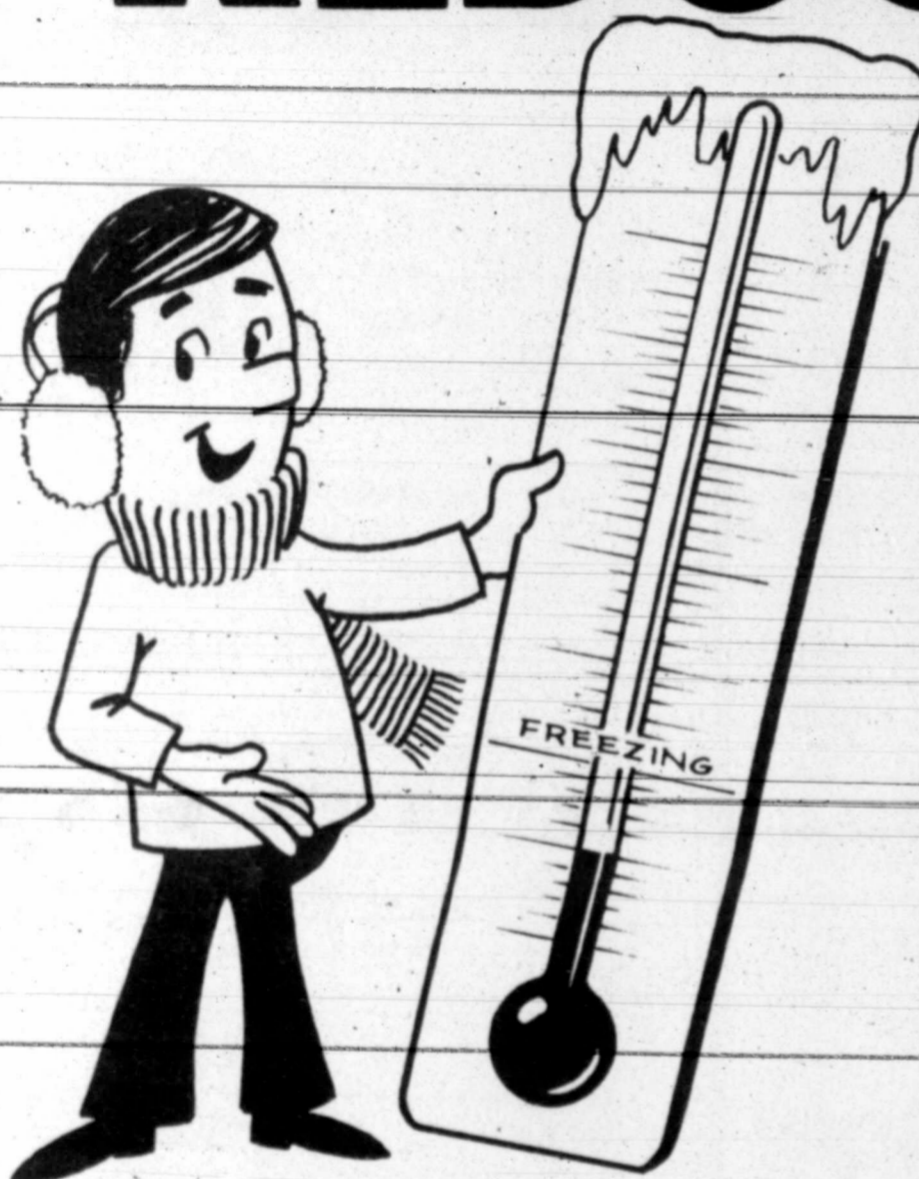

Talley's professional philosophy keeps him steady under pressure.

"You have to separate your job from your emotions," he said.

No happy ending

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Memories of a blissful week in 1923, haunted Quintinn Roberts until she decided it wasn't too late to find the young, handsome man with whom she had fallen in love.

The 86-year-old woman launched a search from her Long Beach, Calif., home, for the man she knew as Floyd Patrick Chambers. The search took a Baptist minister friend, the Rev. Dave Sisson, to Kansas City last week to check records in an effort to learn Chambers' whereabouts.

But on Saturday, Miss Roberts learned that her memories and an old photograph on her bureau will be the only souvenir of their week-long romance in 1923. A sister of Chambers said he died in 1963.

"Well, it's nice to have something settled in my mind about what happened to Pat," Miss Roberts said by telephone, adding that "all she has now is 'memories, four letters and a beautiful picture I say good-night to every night.'"

Kremlin puts legal seal on invasion

By STEVEN R. HURST
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union appears to have put a new legal seal on the presence of its troops in Afghanistan with a treaty that could parallel a 1968 accord on the status of Soviet forces in Czechoslovakia.

The Soviet parliamentary leadership has formally ratified the new treaty, covering "the terms of the temporary stay of a limited contingent of Soviet troops" in Afghanistan. The ratification was announced last Friday, and Radio Kabul said Afghanistan had also approved the document.

Western and Asian diplomats here had speculated that such a treaty was signed in mid-March during a visit to Moscow by the Afghan foreign minister, Shah Mohammad Dost. But there was no confirmation until the two official announcements.

Western analysts here said it was odd that the government-controlled Soviet news media would report the existence of the treaty without an immediate explanation of its meaning.

"They must have a real interest in playing it down because it still might backfire. But at the same time, they obviously wanted to have it on the record," one diplomat said.

Several diplomats said the treaty could further legitimize the presence of Soviet troops in Afghanistan. An Asian diplomat added: "It's clear indication of one fact: they will be staying on there."

They said similarity in descriptions of the Soviet-Afghan and Soviet-Czechoslovak treaties could mean that Afghanistan is being given quasi-membership in the Soviet military alliance. Likewise, they said, it could show that Soviet diplomatic practice has not changed significantly in the past 12 years.

The text of the treaty was not published in Moscow although it could still appear in a future issue of the Soviet parliamentary gazette. It presumably covers legal and administrative aspects of the troops' presence.

A brief report on the new treaty by Tass, the Soviet news agency, recalled wording used in describing the treaty signed after the 1968 Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, April 10, 1980
YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Those born on this date usually have great romantic and physical appeal—which may help account for the success of actor Omar Sharif, who shares your birthday. Love in the year ahead is more exhilarating than you can remember, and could lead to a dramatic year-end event. Some aspects of your employment situation may irritate you from time to time, but a pleasant and positive manner does much to bring about those changes you would like. New business, career opportunities abound during second half of year.
ARIES (March 21-April 19): Some fortunate trends are accelerated now. Someone is likely to speak up on your behalf. Overcome urge to spend more than you can afford. Let new romance develop slowly, naturally.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Adopt more responsible attitude about health or employment matters. Avoid indulging any appetite to an extreme. Surprising change in fortunes could affect your home life favorably.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Those with careers now find superiors in mood to listen. Be sure you have not only done your homework, but also checked it twice! This could be your big chance to move up the ladder several rungs at one time.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good day to expend energies on artistic endeavors. You have more talent than you realize! Do not allow rapidly growing social life to make inroads on time you should spend with family members.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Routine chores are apt to occupy major portion of your work hours. In afternoon, give some thought to project that requires imagination. Be patient with family member who wants to advise you how to conduct business.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Influential person is likely to be obstinate now and ask many questions. You come up with quick but satisfactory answers. Depend more upon your own resources in future.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Check to see that all business, financial papers are in good order. Keep pace with new developments in your field of expertise or interest. A novel idea, advanced by friend, may supply the diversion you seek during leisure hours.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Aggressive determination can pay off now. Ability to carry out difficult task without complaint will inspire associate and impress superior. Be generous with any knowledge you have that others may need.

was a good play by East—if West had underled the ace, he would realize that East's encouragement was probably based on possession of the queen.
Declarer realized that if the defense did not slip, he was doomed to defeat. Unless he could sneak through a spade trick, he could not come to more than eight tricks. And once he surrendered the lead, he was wide open in hearts.
Should declarer try to steal the spade trick through West or through East? It was a pure guess, and South was on the right track when he entered his hand with the jack of clubs and led a low spade toward the jack.

Had West thoughtlessly played second-hand low, the theft would have succeeded. But West had been doing some counting. He had worked out that declarer had six club tricks and two diamonds, and thus he needed only one more trick for his game. Unless declarer was being devious and attacking a suit in which he held no high cards, the only hope lay in the heart suit. So West shot up with the ace of spades and shifted to a heart. This involved no risk whatsoever, for if declarer held the ace of hearts, he always had nine tricks. But West's fine defense enabled his side to rattle off four heart tricks for a one-trick set.

Opening lead: Six of ♠.

By far the most maligned card in the pack is the king. The three points assigned to it by the point count are, if anything, a slight undervaluation. Yet popular superstition has almost converted possession of a king from an asset into a liability. Many consider a lead away from a king as anathema, and many a contract has been handed to declarer because of strict adherence to that guide. If, at some point, it becomes evident that there is only one suit in which your side can take tricks and you have to collect them in a hurry, then you should lead that suit, regardless of whether it is away from an ace, a king or a joker!

South became declarer at a contract of three no trump, reached on a somewhat optimistic though excusable auction. West led the six of diamonds, taken with the king as East followed with the seven. Technically, this

Grasso keeps busy

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — She may be in the hospital, but Connecticut Gov. Ella Grasso is taking care of the state's business.

The 60-year-old governor, who is recuperating from a hysterectomy last week, Tuesday signed into law a dozen measures, including a supplemental budget to add $47 million to this year's state budget.

Mrs. Grasso was reported in "excellent condition and spirits" at Hartford Hospital.

Results of some tests conducted as a follow-up to Thursday's removal of her uterus still are awaited. Officials have said no further treatment is planned at this time, but that they will review the test results.

NEW YORK (AP) — A transit strike didn't keep celebrities from hoofing it to a birthday party in honor of Ann Miller — whose own legs currently are dazzling audiences at the hit Broadway musical "Sugar Babies."

"I love being 57," Miss Miller said at the Tuesday birthday bash at Bruno's.

Among the guests were Ethel Merman, Carol Channing and Rock Hudson, who told reporters the strike by bus and subway workers had turned New York into a pedestrian mall.

"I normally walk everywhere I can, down from the 80s to my midtown health club," said the actor. "Today, I walked through Central Park. It was great."

KENNEWICK, Wash. (AP) — Except for the white scarf draped over his shoulder, he could have been any Montana cowboy. But then, Peter Fonda is a Montana cowboy.

Fonda, Indian actor Will Sampson and Native American filmmaker Phil Lucas are visiting tribes in the Northwest this week to raise money and promote interest in the filming of the book "Bury My Heart at Wounded Knee." Nearly 200 Sioux men, women and children were shot in the 1890 battle with U.S. troops at Wounded Knee, S.D.

The Evergreen Foundation, a Seattle company, owns rights to the book and intends to produce a mini-series following the same format at "Roots," Fonda said.

He hopes to land a role in the production, but for now he is helping raise money, he said, adding he refused to take an American history test in high school "because I consider the way they teach it to be a lie."

Drinking water safety questioned

Radioactive leaks unlikely despite reports, officials say

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — In the unlikely event Three Mile Island's contaminated reactor building is leaking radioactive water, there's no danger of it showing up in public water supplies, officials say.

Local, state and federal officials stressed Tuesday there is no danger to drinking water in nearby communities, despite the previous day's report that radiation was found in test wells around TMI's huge reactor containment building.

"At this point I don't think there's any reason to be concerned," said Mayor Arthur Morris of Lancaster, which draws about half its water from the Susquehanna River downstream from the nuclear power plant that was crippled in March 1978.

Eight test wells were drilled earlier this year to check for any leakage of severely radioactive water flooding the basement of the huge containment building.

Metropolitan Edison Co., operator the plant, said tiny amounts of radiation found in three of the wells probably came from an outside storage tank holding 400,000 gallons of mildly contaminated water. But the company could not rule out a leak from the containment building.

On Tuesday, Morris and other Lancaster city officials said they would simply stop using the Susquehanna if radiation is found there, and instead take all their water from the Conestoga River, a tributary.

State and federal officials, meanwhile, said the containment building water can be moved to other storage areas if a leak is verified.

John Collins, chief of operations at the plant for the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission, said such a plan exists, but added that the radiation levels are so low "it's not even worth talking about."

Margaret Reilly, head of the state Division of Environmental Radiation, agreed the containment building water could be moved in the event of leaks. But she said such a step would require a sharp acceleration in the plant's cleanup plans, stalled by bureaucratic delays and furious public opposition to proposals for venting some radioactive krypton gas.

Part of Metropolitan Edison's $400 million cleanup plan calls for venting the krypton into the atmosphere so workers can finally get inside the structure and proceed with the cleanup.

The company and the NRC say the krypton venting would be harmless, and Ms. Reilly said the containment building water is a vastly more serious threat.

Krypton does not combine with other elements and therefore does not accumulate in the body, unlike cesium 137, which is the most prevalent isotope in the containment building water.

Also, there is far more cesium 137 in the water than there is krypton to be vented.

'More serious implications' reported in Florida mishap

NEW YORK (AP) — The recent accident at Florida's Crystal River nuclear power plant had "more serious implications for reactor safety" than the Three Mile Island accident, says a physicist and expert on nuclear power.

Dr. Harold W. Lewis of the University of California at Santa Barbara said the publicity surrounding the Three Mile Island accident has exaggerated its importance in pointing out flaws in reactor design.

Lewis, a member of the Advisory Committee on Reactor Safeguards of the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission, made his comments Tuesday to a New York Academy of Sciences conference on the March 1979 accident at Harrisburg, Pa.

About 200 persons attended the first day of the three-day conference, which deals with public policy implications of the accident, the worst in U.S. commercial nuclear history.

Lewis said the Feb. 26 accident at Crystal River in Red Level, Fla., showed more attention must be paid to what happens when a reactor's sensors go dead.

In that accident, an electrical short circuit led to loss of power to some of the sensors that monitor conditions inside the reactor. An inappropriate response by an automatic safety system led to the spilling of 43,700 gallons of contaminated water inside the reactor building, although no radioactivity was released outside the plant.

"The implication is that failure of a sensor can lead an automatic control system to do dumb things — and that is to my mind an extremely important incident," Lewis said.

"If you were listening to your heart and your stethoscope went dead, you wouldn't want to start giving yourself cardiac massage," he said.

"Everybody's so sensitized now to the failure of that valve that sometimes I think they don't think about anything else," he said.

He noted that in the aviation industry, the National Transportation Safety Board investigates accidents while the Federal Aviation Administration establishes policy. A similar split might work in the nuclear industry, where both duties now fall to the NRC, Lewis said.

Utilities file a report each time an incident occurs at a nuclear plant, Lewis said, "But there is no systematic procedure for translating the lessons learned in these things into preparations for greater safety."

Reactor-powered Soviet generator goes 'on line'

MOSCOW (AP) — A 600,000-kilowatt generator powered by a fast-neutron reactor went into operation Tuesday at the Beloyarsk atomic power plant near Sverdlovsk in the Ural Mountains, the official Tass news agency reported.

It described the generator as the largest of its kind in the world and said it has tripled the capacity of the Beloyarsk installation.

Tass said the reactor was equipped "for reliable radiation safety of the personnel and the environment."

"A specially equipped service of the Ural Scientific Center of the Soviet Academy of Sciences conducts a thorough ecological control of the locality."

Purple Pack ends drought with win over Lee

Lee pitcher Alan Koonce to first baseman Clay Bateman (6). Bolger got back safely, but was wiped out on a double play later in the second inning. MHS won, 5-2, to end a 14-game winning streak by Lee. (Staff Photo by Bruce Partain).

Rebs lose first half hopes

By BOB DILLON
Sports Writer

The drought is finally over for the Midland High Bulldogs. Coach Tim Whalen's crew took a 5-2 victory over Midland Lee to knock Coach Ernie Johnson's Rebels out of the first half championship of the District 5-4A baseball race Tuesday at the Lee diamond.

The victory ends a 14-game winning streak by the Rebels and it comes in Whalen's maiden season as head coach for the Pack.

JOHNSON PLAYED the game under protest after a controversy in the sixth inning when Midland scored four runs. The veteran Lee coach planned to voice his protest to the 5-4A rules committee late Tuesday night to try and get a ruling.

The ruling probably won't be determined until sometime today, according to Johnson.

While Lee was losing to Midland High, Abilene Cooper downed Abilene High, 8-4, to nail down the first half title.

Righthander Mark Hewitt pitched superb ball for five innings in silencing the Rebel bats on no hits. Left-fielder Robert Perez singled after Clay Bateman worked Hewitt for a walk in the bottom of the sixth to ruin the no-hit bid.

SIX ERRORS were the downfall for the Rebels as the Bulldogs scored four unearned runs, thanks to the miscues, but a solid defense by MHS, made the difference in the long run.

"We finally showed somebody that we could play ball," exclaimed an excited Whalen afterwards. "Everybody did a great job and I am tickled to death over the results."

Whalen had made the statement before the game. "Playing Ernie's team is like shooting marbles with your own father for keeps." (Whalen was assistant under Johnson for four years at Lee).

Midland took a 1-0 lead off Koonce in the top of the first inning. Eddie Portillo was safe on an error by first baseman Clay Bateman and later scored as Bobby Stovall doubled past first, but a double play got Koonce off the hook later in the inning.

Hewitt retired the first six Rebel batters and MHS was turned away in the second and third innings on double plays by the Lee infield, despite two more errors by the leaky Rebel defense.

Midland also pulled off a double play in the bottom of the third to turn the Rebels away and then came the fatal fifth for Lee.

PAUL COX started things off with a base hit and he was sacrificed to second by Russell Wickman. Hewitt singled into right where Scott Collins made a throwing error, trying to nab pinch-runner Robert Nash at the plate. Portillo and Stovall then reached safely on fielder's choices and Tracy Gann singled in a run to make it 3-0.

Then came the controversy. Jerry Zachery hit a ball sharply to Randy Velarde at short where he gloved the ball and tagged the base for the apparent force on Gann, but the umpire ruled Gann safe. Koonce then dropped Perry Bolger's popup in front of the mound, to enable the fourth run to score, giving the Pack a 5-0 lead.

This is where Johnson protested, saying that the runner was out at second, even though he tagged the bag with his glove.

Lee finally came to life in the sixth inning. Bateman walked and Perez broke up Hewitt's no-bitter with a single. Wade Cartwright grounded out to third, but Barry Corley singled in pinch-runner Ricky Wright to make it 5-1. Doug McLean came in to relieve Hewitt and was greeted by a triple off the bat of Koonce, scoring Perez to make it 5-2, but McLean got Billy Gilliland to ground out to shortstop to end the uprising.

THE REBELS went down in order harmlessly in the bottom of the seventh to seal their own fate.

Portillo made the defensive play of the game for the Purple Pack in the bottom of the fourth when he made a diving catch of a liner off the bat of Cartwright an even though Corley walked and stole second, Koonce skied out to Gann in center and Jeff Hicks grounded out to Cox at first to halt the Rebels.

Lee takes an 8-9 record into today's non-district game with Dallas Thomas Jefferson at the Lee diamond. First pitch is set for 4 p.m.

Midland, meanwhile, is now 7-8 and faces Permian in Odessa Saturday in the opener of the second half of the 5-4A race. Lee is at home Saturday against OHS.

Workout will greet Cubs to Midland

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Manager Randy Hundley will send what may be the youngest Midland Cubs team in terms of Class AA experience through a get-acquainted-with-Cubs-Stadium workout at 6:30 p.m. today, a final tuneup before Thursday's 7:30 p.m. Texas League opener against the San Antonio Dodgers.

For 16 of the 21 Cubs, it will be their first look at the carpet-smooth facility in Hogan Park. However, four of the holdovers are pitchers who had a combined record of 40-26 with Midland last year, which is a solid foundation from which to start.

The only every-day player returning is all-purpose infielder Javier Fierro while the rest are Texas League rookies up from A ball with one exception, catcher Mike O'Berry, who, except for three weeks at Pawtucket, International, spent the season with the Boston Red Sox.

Outfielder Dave Stockstill did join the Cubs for the West Division playoffs last year, but spent the season at Wausau, Midwest, where he batted .283, hit 27 homers and knocked in 101 runs.

The pitching staff Hundley brought from Mesa, Ariz., Tuesday is headed by the veterans, Herman Segelke, 13-8; Bill Earley, 13-6; Henry Mack, 10-4; and Jon Perlman, 4-8. Segelke and Mack both pitched in spring exhibitions for Chicago.

The new staff members are Bob Blyth, 8-2 at Geneva; Tom Spino, 9-9 at Quad City; Steve Viskas, 14-6 at Quad City, and Mike Wright, 8-7, at Quad City. Also on the staff is Kent Hunziker, who pitched in the Padres and White Sox farm systems before being acquired by the Cubs.

Backing up O'Berry behind the plate will be Mike Shepston, 219 in 72 games at Quad City.

The infield is composed of first baseman Joe Hicks, second baseman Scott Fletcher, shortstop Dave Owen, third baseman J.W. Mitchell and infielder Todd Winterfeldt.

In the outfield, where Midland had three returnees a year ago, are Tom Grant, Mel Hall, Randy Lavigne and Stockstill. Lavigne hit .313, Hall .315, and Grant .304, all at Geneva.

Mitchell was .288 at Geneva, Owen .304 at Sarasota and .104 at Quad City while Winterfeldt was a .262 hitter at Wausau.

It's a team that has some big shoes to fill. For example, first baseman Jim Tracy was the TL batting champion at .355, shortstop Jesus Alfaro batted .352 before breaking an ankle, second baseman Dan Rohm hit .307 and third baseman Mike Turgeon was a .297 hitter. In the outfield, Brian Rosinski hit .331, Jared Martin .310, Eric Grandy .304 and Carlos Lezcano rode a .326 season to a berth with the Chicago Cubs this spring.

BRUIN BREWINS—Bill Hayes, .300 with the M-Cubs last season, will be the Wichita catcher this season. Chicago released Mike Gordon, who was picked up by Pittsburgh and assigned to Portland, while Greg Keatley was optioned to a Montreal farm club. Infielder Kurt Seibert, released by the Chicago over the weekend, has been signed by Minnesota and assigned to Toledo, International. Randy Clark, 16-5 at Quad Cities, and Joe McClain, who saw brief service with Midland last year, have been optioned by Midland to Sarasota, where it is hoped they can work out their arm problems.

Weather may again plague Seaver

CINCINNATI (AP) — Tom Seaver was hoping to win his first opening day game in three tries today for the Cincinnati Reds but the Atlanta Braves' Phil Niekro and the National Weather Service might not cooperate.

The Reds and Braves were to get the National League's 96th season under way this afternoon in the traditional Cincinnati opener but the weatherman predicted a 40 percent chance of rain with temperatures in the low 50s by the 2 p.m. EST, game time.

Icy weather on opening day last year played havoc with Seaver and the Reds committed five errors in losing to the San Francisco Giants 11-5. In the 1978 opener, rain delays robbed Seaver of his rhythm.

The two contests were "crazy games," said the three-time Cy Young Award winner. "I had one in New York, too. It snowed at Shea Stadium." He won six openers for the Mets when he pitched there.

"There's always the excitement of another season getting under way, but really the opening game is just one of 162," said knuckleballer Niekro, a 41-year-old veteran.

The American League also gets under way with a game in Seattle, where the weather won't make any difference and where the hometown Mariners will entertain the Toronto Blue Jays in a Kingdom battle of 4-year-old expansion teams. Nine more openers are on tap Thursday, five in the American League.

The Reds didn't make any major trades or sign any free agents over the winter and are hoping to repeat as National League West champions.

The Braves roster includes two new front-line players — first baseman Chris Chambliss and shortstop Luis Gomez. The team also signed relief pitcher Al Hrabosky as a free agent and traded for Doyle Alexander, who has moved into the starting rotation.

"We're almost a completely different ballclub. All the front-office people feel we're much better," said Manager Bobby Cox. "We have a good chance of winning. To a man, our entire ballclub thinks so."

Reds' Manager John McNamara refuses to make predictions. "The only thing that counts is what you do over the full season," he said.

Baseball is opening under a cloud, but there will be at least six weeks of the national pastime before the next confrontation. The Major League Players' Association has scheduled a strike if a new Basic Agreement is not signed with the owners by May 22.

"In reality, you worry about a strike on the morning of the 23rd, not now," Seaver said.

Right-handers Mike Parrott of Seattle and Dave Lemanczyk of Toronto will be the starting pitchers when the American League begins its 80th season before an expected crowd of 20,000. The Mariners will be going head-to-head with the defending National Basketball Association champion Seattle SuperSonics, who host the Milwaukee Bucks in a playoff game at the Seattle Coliseum.

With 109 defeats last season, Toronto had the worst record in baseball. Seattle posted its best record ever last season but still finished 28 games under .500 at 67-95.

The Blue Jays will make their debut under 64-year-old Bobby Mattick, oldest rookie manager in major league history.

Last year's World Series foes get under way Thursday, both on the road. The world champion Pittsburgh Pirates meet the Cardinals in St. Louis while elsewhere in the National League, the New York Mets entertain the Chicago Cubs, the Los Angeles Dodgers visit the Houston Astros and the San Diego Padres host the San Francisco Giants.

The American League champion Baltimore Orioles are at Chicago, with Boston at Milwaukee, New York at Texas, Detroit at Kansas City and Minnesota at Oakland.

But the most important confrontation of all Thursday may take place in New York, where representatives of the players' association and the clubowners meet in the second of a series of seven over the next three weeks to try and iron out their differences and come up with a new Basic Agreement.

Federal mediator Kenneth Moffett described Tuesday's 4½-hour meeting as "cordial and constructive," but he was quick to add, "I would not suggest a tremendous amount of progress was made."

Cougs win first half title

Abilene Cooper walked off with the first half of the District 5-4A baseball race, thanks to Midland High's Bulldogs, who polished off Midland Lee, 5-2, Tuesday.

Cooper disposed of Abilene High, 8-4, while in other 5-4A contests, Big Spring and Odessa Permian captured 8-6 victories over San Angelo Central and Odessa High, respectively.

Neither Cooper or Abilene looked like world beaters as both the Cougars and Eagles committed five errors each and Cooper only out-hit Abilene, 6-5.

The victory, however, for the defending district champion Cougs, gives them a 6-1 reading at the end of the first half while Lee finishes second with a 5-2 mark. Next comes Abilene, Midland and Odessa Permian with 4-3 records.

Kyle Stuard was the winning hurler for Cooper, which is now 12-4 on the year, while Eddie Lock was the loser for Abilene. Bobby Oles and Freddie Johnson hit doubles for the losers.

Mike Fowler's three-run homer for Permian, ignited a six-run outburst for Mojo in the top of the fifth inning.

Kevin Williams, now 5-2, was the winning pitcher while Leo Baeza was the loser for OHS.

Big Spring pounded out 11 hits to down San Angelo with Wayne Shipman the winning pitcher.

The second half of the 5-4A race opens Saturday with OHS at Lee; Midland at Permian; Cooper at San Angelo and Big Spring at Abilene.

Johnson & Johnson proves rougher than baby powder

By The Associated Press

If what Los Angeles' Earvin Johnson did to the Phoenix Suns was magic, then what Seattle's Dennis Johnson did to the Milwaukee Bucks was downright legerdemain.

Johnson & Johnson teamed up on different ends of the West Coast Tuesday to get their respective teams, the Los Angeles Lakers and the Seattle SuperSonics, off on the right foot in the opener of their best-of-seven National Basketball Association conference semifinal series.

In Los Angeles, Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 13 points, 16 assists and 12 rebounds to lead the Lakers to a 119-110 victory over the Suns. While the Magic Show was doing its tricks, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar contributed 30 points, Norm Nixon 26 and Jamaal Wilkes 19.

Up the coast in Seattle, Dennis Johnson's three-point basket from about 26 feet with one second to play in overtime lifted the defending NBA champion SuperSonics to a 114-113 now you've won it-now you haven't triumph over the Milwaukee Bucks.

The Bucks had taken the lead with six seconds to play on Marques Johnson's breakaway stuff. Dennis Johnson then dribbled the ball from backcourt until he let fly from outside the three-point line, hitting nothing but net.

Both Western Conference semifinals resume tonight in Los Angeles and Seattle. In the East, the Boston Celtics entertain the Houston Rockets in their best-of-seven opener while the Philadelphia 76ers, leading Atlanta 1-0, are at home against the Hawks.

Until this year, of course, Dennis Johnson's desperation shot would have been good for only two points and a tie.

"I wasn't looking for the three-point shot," he said. "I shot over Sidney Moncrief with maybe two or three seconds, and it went."

"You don't get beat by a lucky shot many times, and that was a lucky shot," said Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson. "But there is a certain amount of luck in any game. Maybe somewhere along in the series we'll get a break like that ourselves."

The difference was at the foul line, where the Sonics sank 31 of 39 compared with the Bucks' 15 of 23. And Milwaukee's Brian Winters and Junior Bridgeman, who combined for 34 points a game during the regular season, managed only 14 ... together.

The Bucks sent the game into overtime when Dave Meyers sank two free throws with one second remaining in regulation to tie it at 103. Seattle's Gus Williams led all scorers with 30 points and Dennis Johnson added 24. Bob Lanier topped Milwaukee with 27.

Lakers 119, Suns 110

The Lakers led by as many as 22 points with 4:20 remaining but Phoenix closed the gap in the closing minutes with a series of three-point baskets by Mike Bratz, who finished with five of them and a career-high 25 points. Walter Davis added 24 and Alvan Adams 21.

The Lakers led 70-66 midway in the third quarter but scored 13 of the next 15 points to break the game open.

"After such a long layoff (nine days), I thought we were sharp and alert," said Los Angeles Coach Paul Westhead. "We got our running game going early and we kept it going all night. I thought Nixon triggered our fast breaks with important baskets."

Nixon and Mike Cooper alternated guarding Paul Westphal, the Suns' leading scorer during the regular season who finished with just 14 points.

When the Celtics step on the court tonight against Houston, they will be seeing their first action in 11 days. Two Celtics think the layoff will help the team against the Rockets, who had to go the full three games to beat San Antonio in their opening-round series, which ended Sunday.

"The layoff was really good," said M.L. Carr. "We're ready to play and we want to play. We saw those games on TV and we saw the excitement. Now we want to be part of it."

"Everyone is ready to get going," added Rick Robey. "This layoff has been good for us. We've worked hard, but getting away from it all has been good mentally for us."

It's also been a physical bonus. Larry Bird's bruised thigh, Cedric Maxwell's swollen ankle and Dave Cowens' injured toe all had more time to heal.

The Celtics bring the NBA's best record (61-21) into the playoffs, including a 6-0 mark against the Rockets.

Army-Navy duel may switch site

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — West Point and Annapolis have reached an agreement in principle with the city to shift the 81st Army-Navy football game this fall from John F. Kennedy Stadium to the new Veterans Stadium across the street.
According to Joe Chase of the city representative's office, City Recreation Commissioner Bob Crawford said he would be meeting with Army and Navy officials later this week. "I think they're coming up just to put the final touches and make the announcement," Chase said Monday.
Declining attendance at the game and the aging condition of JFK Stadium, which is not used for any other major athletic event, have provoked rumors of a move in the past — even to another city.

Wacker waits for SWC light

By The Associated Press
Southwest Conference coaches were able to officially ink high school basketball players to letters of intent today, but one of the most highly sought recruits indicated he will wait until Thursday to sign.
Mike Wacker, San Marcos' 6-8 center, has narrowed his choices to Iowa, Texas, Baylor, Texas Tech and Texas A&M.
Several players from Western Junior College of Snyder, which went undefeated in winning the national championship, have been widely sought but indicated they would follow their coach, who has been hired at Tulsa.
Several other top players indicated early where they would play. SMU had an oral commitment from 6-7 forward Kirk Lundblade of Plano, who scored 30 points in the Class AAAA finals and was named by the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce as Texas' top schoolboy basketball player.

New SMU coach Dave Bliss also landed 6-7 forward John Briggs of Highland Park and Dave Gadis, a 6-0 point guard from Indianpolis.
Wacker's father, Southwest Texas State football coach Jim Wacker, said he had no idea where his son will go. He said his son listened Monday to final pitches from Texas Tech and Texas and was to visit with a Baylor coach Tuesday night.
"Mike told me he wanted to hear one last shot from everyone, and then he would isolate himself Wednesday and make his decision. I honestly don't know what he's going to do. Iowa was here Sunday night, and the Southwest Conference schools are coming in. Alabama is the only school Mike visited that is probably out of the picture."

Briggs, who averaged 18 points and 12 rebounds, had also considered Arkansas. Lundblade, who averaged 20.6 points, narrowed his choices to SMU, Baylor and Arkansas before making his decision.
A 6-6 junior college player from California, announced he would go to Baylor, while Texas had commitments from a guard and a forward, both from out of state. A 6-6, 215-pound power forward from Pittsburgh announced for TCU.

Mosley enters Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Veteran Mike Mosley, who finished third in the Indianapolis 500 last year, will drive a new Dan Gurney Eagle, one of the latest entries received by the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.
Mosley was one of five entries Tuesday, pushing to 59 the number submitted to the Speedway. Officials expect about 25 more before the April 15 deadline. The track opens May 3 for practice for the May 25 race.
Mosley, who has driven in 42 previous Indy races, recorded the fastest lap during last year's race when he was clocked at 193.216 mph on his 184th circuit around the 2½-mile oval.
The new Gurney racer is powered by a Chevrolet-type stock block engine.
Joe Saldana, who finished 16th last year, will drive a 1979 Penske-Cosworth, one of two cars entered Tuesday by Hoffman Racing Team of Milford, Ohio. The other car, a 1977 Spyder-Offenhauser, had no driver listed.
Rookie John Wood, Randallstown, Md., will pilot a 1972 Eagle-Offenhauser entered by Mergerd's 20th Century Enterprises of Cincinnati.
The fifth entry Tuesday was a 1978 Lightening-Cosworth as a backup car for veteran Spike Gehlhausen.

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

Over 160 Green Tree Country Club members and special guests got to test the "reward-punishment" concept of the club's new golf course Tuesday as the course received its first test from golfers.

At least, that is the way Jerry Mobley, Green Tree general manager, likes to describe the course. "The course doesn't play that long, but it will certainly test the golfer's shot making skills. Most of the holes are designed as a reward-punishment idea. It rewards the golfer who takes a chance and makes a good shot while it deals out a great deal of punishment to the golfer who doesn't make his shot," Mobley stated.

Denver and Pittsburgh, just to name a few.

One of the holes which is already drawing rave reviews is No. 16. It's a par three, 190-yard hole, which will test the nerves on any golfer. A lake separates the tee box and the green and it is one of the most beautiful holes on the course.

The Green Tree course also offers golf course living. There are seven homes on the course now with room for 228. Sixty per cent of the lots are now taken. There will also be room for 403 homes on the Green Tree property. The course, however, is unique in that there are no streets crossing the course and there are 175-feet more yardage between home and course than recommended for this type course.

Mark Felton will serve as the head golf professional. He comes from Artesia, N.M., and attended Howard College. He has been a Class A member of the PGA since 1977. His assistant is Bryan Hargrove, who comes to Midland from Snyder and Western Texas College. He also attended Lamar University at Beaumont. While at WTC he was the conference's medalist with a 70.1 average, and MVP in 1976.

Scott Robbins is the golf course superintendent. He is a native of Salem, Ill., and is also a WTC graduate, where he helped in the construction of a nine-hole course for the college. Jimmy Walker is the landscaping consultant and has been a Midlander since 1925. He operated Walker Nursery and Garden Center for 30 years. Bud Wilson is the maintenance engineer and has been in Midland since 1945.

Mobley, Felton, Walker and Wilson all previously worked at Ranchland Hills Country Club. Robbins was once assistant golf course superintendent at Andrews.

The board of directors for Midwest Corp., the parent company building Green Tree, includes Jack Allen, Samuel Conner, James Eastup, W.C. Osborne, Edmond Rigatti, Michael Richardson, John Wood Jr., Aldredge Estes Jr., Jerry Mobley and L. Frank Mullins.

The Green Tree Country Club board of directors is made up of Russell Ramsland, George Eng, George Locker, Ted Ferguson, Walter Locker Jr., John Gould Jr., Lawrence Fuller and John Wood Jr.

THE COURSE opening comes after two years of eager anticipation. Course planning began in August of 1978. Mobley says the course should reach a mature stage within a year, but even now, the course can serve as a model for other such endeavors.

The course is not for the timid golfer with water surrounding 11 of the 18 holes. The course features 13 acres of lakes, ranging in depth from 10 to 22 feet and stocked with fish. The course will play for men at 6,717 yards at the longest while the women will play at 6,312 yards.

The course has several advantages. There is no true rough since the entire course is watered by a computerized system, one of only three in the world to do so. The system features over 800 sprinklers which can be controlled by a computer to the course's specific needs. "The only rough we will have is the way we mow it," Mobley says.

The greens are huge by West Texas standards, with an average green in excess of 11,000 square feet. Hitting the green may not be that tough, but it could still be a long way to the hole for a poor putter.

THE STARTING and finishing holes run north and south so the golfer will never start or finish while facing the sun. The practice driving range is situated where golfers can practice driving into the wind, another feature golfers prefer.

"Our membership was full before the course opened, and we have a waiting list," Mobley stated. "I don't know of another newly opened course that can say that. If you give Midlanders a good product, they will know it. A lot of people said it couldn't be done, but I knew better. I think we have given them a course that will be talked about all over the country. We have members from Houston, Dallas,

Jim Hall has racing impact

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

The sound you hear coming from the Ontario Motor Speedway this week is the quiet coo of the dove of peace mixed with the throaty roar of championship car engines.

After a year and a half of angry words and bitter feelings, the U.S. Auto Club and the Championship Auto Racing Teams are back together with an eye to the future.

While the struggle for the autonomy of USAC's championship division was being waged, there were warnings from people close to the scene of the demise of Indianapolis-style racing if peace did not come soon.

AT THE same time, there were forecasts that the championship division could become truly the glamour division of auto racing if a suitable peace could be negotiated.

Ironically, in the midst of the fighting, the future apparently bleak with the prospect of continuing inflation and an energy crisis, the people who build cars for the championship division were busy plying their trade.

As many as 27 new championship cars are expected to be unveiled at the Ontario Motor Speedway this weekend for the Twin 200, at Texas International Raceway on April 27 for the USAC 200, and at Indianapolis Motor Speedway next month Indianapolis for the rich Indianapolis 500. Almost all of them will be set up with some version of the ground effects styling that has set championship racing and Formula One racing agog.

THE GROUND effects styling, which makes the already low-slung cars look a bit like giant vacuum sweepers, first made an impact on the racing world a decade ago when Texan Jim Hall brought a strange-looking car with a built-in fan to the Can-Am circuit.

Mario Andretti, a former Indianapolis 500 champion, driving for Colin Chapman's Lotus team, then won the Formula One world championship in 1978 in a prototype ground effects car. By the 1979 season, everyone on the Grand Prix circuit was campaigning some form of ground effects.

The Formula One people, who admit they don't completely understand it, call ground effects "black magic." But the car builders in championship racing say the principle is actually simple.

Through the use of skirts, which hang from the bottom of the chassis to within a fraction of an inch of the track, and new configurations on the bottoms of the exotic machines, the ground effects channel air under the car to create a partial vacuum or suction force between the car and the surface of the track.

That, in effect, glues the racer to the surface and allows the cars to roar through the tightest turn faster than ever before.

HALL, THE boss of Chaparral Racing, introduced a sleek ground effects car at Indianapolis last year. Al Unser qualified it third for the race, although a broken transmission seal caused a disappointing race debut.

Meanwhile, Roger Penske entered a car with some ground effects styling and got plenty of reaction as Rick Mears won the pole position and the race without a hitch.

That signalled the rest of the big boys in the champ car division that ground effects was the way to go.

Even the German-based factory Porsche team is working on a ground effects car for a venture onto the Indy circuit this year or next.

There are still some problems to be ironed out by the combined forces of USAC and CART. Among them is the decision whether or not to allow the controversial skirts to be used.

Without them, the advantages of ground effects are modified and the cars are slower.

There are some, both in Indy-car racing and on the Formula One circuit, who champion that idea in the interests of safety. The eventual decision will shape at least the immediate future of racing.

Negotiators take day off

NEW YORK (AP) — Today's start of the major league baseball season was nothing more than a day off for the negotiators in the labor dispute that threatens to halt the season just before the Memorial Day weekend.

Talks resume Thursday between the two teams of negotiators headed by Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players' Association, and Ray Grebey, representing management.

Kenneth Moffett, a deputy director of the Federal Mediation Service, took a positive view of Tuesday's 4 1/2 hours of negotiations, the second of seven scheduled meetings over the next three weeks.

"The feeling was cordial between the parties," he said. "I'd say it was constructive. I would not suggest a tremendous amount of progress was made."

That seemed to concur with Miller's view. The union chief said the session was concerned with management's first tentative responses to altered player proposals which were placed on the negotiating table March 18.

Those altered proposals included a new ceiling on minimum salaries, dropping the players' demand from one-third of the average salary to a lower figure, and a five-year waiting period for a player becoming a free agent down from the current six-year wait but up from the originally-proposed four years.

"Their response was 'Do you have any lower figures we might consider,'" Miller said. "Well, we made the counter proposals. It was their responsibility to reply to them, to make a counter offer to them."

Miller seemed annoyed at the slow pace of the negotiations.

"I'm not discouraged, though this kind of pace is not my preference," he said. "I don't think you should pussyfoot around. But it's their approach."

There has still been no discussion of compensation for teams losing free agents. That issue is considered the major stumbling block in the talks.

"It's essential that you talk out an issue before you can agree on it," Miller explained. "Maybe you don't agree today, but maybe you moved closer to that agreement in discussions. But these are not normal negotiations. I find us going over and over the same ground again and again."

Grebeby refused to talk with newsmen, referring all questions to the mediator.

Moffett called the climate between the two sides good. "And I think it will continue to stay that way for the next couple of meetings," he added.

Six weeks remain before the May 22 deadline for a contract set by the players at the April 1 meeting in Dallas. Moffett said he thought that might be the reason for the somewhat leisurely pace of the talks so far.

"The big issues have not been discussed but there's a lot of time and that is a significant factor," Moffett said. "We'll just keep plugging."

Astros load baggage

COCOA, Fla. (AP) — Pitchers Joe Niekro, Ken Forsch and Nolan Ryan became baggage boys for a time Tuesday as the Houston Astros were leaving their spring training camp to open the season in the Astrodome.

A truck carrying team equipment broke down just 15 miles after starting a 50-mile trip to the Orlando Airport.

Ryan climbed onto the truck and used his million-dollar arm in helping transfer the baggage from the truck to the team bus. Others joining in included Niekro, Forsch and field manager Bill Virdon.

On reboarding the bus, Niekro had a message for Deacon Jones, the batting coach.

"We didn't have enough room so we left the bats," Niekro said.

Three overtime matchups highlight NHL playoff openers

By The Associated Press

Take a streak-ending triumph, add two other overtime games for seasoning, then blend in Pittsburgh's stirring upset of the Boston Bruins. You'll have the recipe for opening-night excitement in the National Hockey League playoffs.

For the Chicago Black Hawks, the main ingredient was Doug Lecuyer's goal at 12:34 of overtime. It gave Chicago a 3-2 triumph over the St. Louis Blues and ended a record 16-game losing streak.

"I'm glad the 16-game streak is over," said Black Hawks goalie Tony Esposito. "But remember, in that streak, we lost about six or seven games in overtime."

This time Chicago came out ahead, with Lecuyer sending the rebound of a Ted Bulley shot past St. Louis goalie Mike Liut in one of three overtime games Tuesday night. In the others, as the best-of-five preliminary round got underway, Steve Vickers connected after just 33 seconds of overtime to give the New York Rangers a 2-1 victory over the Atlanta Flames and Bobby Clarke scored at 8:06 of extra play to give the Philadelphia Flyers a 4-3 triumph over the Edmonton Oilers.

The Penguins added a 4-2 surprise upset of the Bruins while elsewhere, it was Montreal 6, Hartford 1, Minnesota 6, Toronto 3, Buffalo 2, Vancouver 1 and the New York Islanders 8, Los Angeles 1.

"We totally dominated the overtime," said Ed Johnston, the first Chicago coach in more than four seasons able to say such a thing. "The most important thing is we won the first game. It's a short series and now, all we have to do is play .500 to win."

There were six other teams thinking exactly that entering tonight's second set of first-round games (Boston-Pittsburgh resumes Thursday). All eight series shift venues for Games 3 and, if needed, 4.

Vickers got some good news about his infant son early Tuesday and celebrated with both New York goals as the Rangers snapped some streaks of their own by beating Atlanta.

Before the game, Vickers learned his son (born more than a month premature) had been released from the hospital.

"I try to block out problems like this one has been," said Vickers, "but I felt real good with the news today."

His good news turned into bad news for the Flames, who had their nine-game unbeaten string at Madison Square Garden snapped and now have won only one of 14 lifetime playoff games. The defeat was the ninth in as many playoff starts for Atlanta goalie Dan Bouchard, who had been unbeaten his last seven starts against New York.

"To lose like that, 33 seconds, is disheartening," said Flames defenseman Brad Marsh. "To play with them for 60 minutes like we did and get beaten like that is, well, tough."

It also was tough for Edmonton, which earned the 16th and last playoff berth but held its own against the regular-season champions.

The Flyers outshot the Oilers 51-17, but it took a Rick MacL-cish goal to tie the score with 1:19 left in regulation before Clarke's overtime tally.

Penguins 4, Bruins 2

Mark Johnson, who scored five goals for the United States team during its gold medal performance at the Olympics in February, scored twice to pace Pittsburgh's upset of Boston.

"It's an extreme thrill for me to do both so close together in my life," he said. "I was nervous, for sure."

His play didn't indicate as such, nor did that of goalie Greg Millen, whose Penguins were outshot 38-22.

Islanders 8, Kings 1

Bryan Trottier scored three goals, two while his team was shorthanded in the second period, to pace New York's rout of Los Angeles.

The two shorthanded tallies in one period set a record. He scored the first at 4:30, while teammate Denis Potvin was in the penalty box, and got the other at 19:20 while Stefan Persson was off.

The three goals raised Trottier's playoff production to eight scores in 43 games. April has not been the center's finest month.

"I wasn't trying to prove anything," said Trottier. "I only go out to win games — not star for people."

None of the Kings starred, as evidenced by the score.

"It was just a farce, the way we played," said Kings Coach Bob Berry.

Canadiens 6, Whalers 1

Two goals by Yvon Lambert were all Montreal needed to defeat Hartford, one of two expansion teams (Edmonton is the other) to qualify for postseason play. Brian Enblom, Rick Chartraw, Doug Jarvis and Steve Shutt had the others for the Canadiens while Mark Howe ruined Denis Herron's shutout bid with 4:59 left in the game.

North Stars 6, Maple Leafs 3

Steve Payne had two goals and Bobby Smith added three assists to pace a 61-shot Minnesota attack on Toronto goalie Jiri Crha. Crha was superb, especially in the second period, when the North Stars were awarded five consecutive power plays and outshot the Maple Leafs 30-5.

"We could have won the game but those penalties took too much out of us," said Maple Leafs Coach Joe Crozier.

Sabres 2, Canucks 1

Goals by Derek Smith and Don Luce lifted Buffalo over Vancouver in the first playoff game ever between the two teams that were added to the NHL in 1970.

Smith converted the rebound of a Gil Perreault shot in the first period and Luce scored on a breakaway.

The Canucks finally got their goal, from Brent Ashton, with 3:18 remaining.

"We seemed to be very nervous," said Canucks Coach Harry Neale.

"When we did get a (scoring) chance, we missed the net entirely. We're not a good scoring team. When we get a chance, we've got to put the puck in."

Harleton girl wins title with grace over power

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — As gamblers hooted and whistled from the audience, a statuesque Texan with powerful shoulders who credited her "combination of muscularity and femininity" was named the nation's best woman body builder.

"I try to show my body to its best advantage," said Rachel McLish, 24, of Harleton, after she defeated 29 other women Tuesday to win the United States Women's Body Building Championship.

"You just have to go out there and show your body and just let everybody know you're proud of it."

In a dramatic final "pose down," the sleek Mrs. McLish out-muscled a powerful Californian and a tanned Florida woman with a graceful series of poses.

The experts said the 5-foot-6 and 117-pound Mrs. McLish scored a clear victory for grace over power in the young sport, a recent offshoot of male body-building.

Laura Coombes of Odessa, Fla., a body builder known for her powerful chest and shoulder muscles, did not finish high in the competition. Clearly disappointed, she and other "power" women in the contest said the judges "obviously wanted something small."

The judges said they were looking for muscle definition, posing ability, proportion and charisma.

"It was my combination of muscularity and femininity, combined with grace, that did it for me," said Mrs. McLish.

About 600 spectators jammed a Boardwalk casino hotel to watch the finals as the bikini-clad women showed several poses during a two-minute routine to jazz music. Their flexes accented bulging arm, shoulder, chest, stomach and leg muscles.

BOWLING BEAT

Delk rolls 746 to pace bowlers

By RANDY ISENBERG

Jerry Delk was the top scorer on the lanes recently after rolling a 746 series in the Exxon Mixed League. His games were 224, 269 and 253.

Delk paced his team, which includes his wife Debbie, sister-in-law Leslie Pinkston and Brian Gillette, to an 840 scratch team game, a 210-pin per person average, and a 2321 three-game scratch total for a 194 clip.

Doris Olgin paced the women in the Bluebonnet Ladies League by rolling out games of 257 and 219 for a 627 series. Her 257 game was 110 pins over her 147 average. Marjorie Thames, who rolled a 247 game in the Tuesday Morning Ladies, was another entry in the 100 pins over average game.

Charlie Lacy had a 279 game and 700 series in the Oil Star League while Ellie Shelton rolled a four game set of 811 with a 226 and 222.

The ladies city tournament will be held the weekends of April 12-13 and April 19-20. Team event will be held at Super Bowl on Saturdays while doubles and singles will be held at Air Park Lanes on Sundays.

The National Family Tournament is being held when lanes are available on weekends at Air Park Lanes. The tourney is open to youth bowlers and parents who bowl in leagues. Qualifiers will advance to the state tournament in Waco later this year. The state finalist advance with an all-expense paid trip to Washington D.C. For more information, call me at 683-4683.

We are pleased to announce the opening of another bowling center in Dellwood Mall Shopping Center in July or August. The center will consist of 30 lanes, a sports pro shop, a supervised playroom and food and beverage service.

Austin says title 'miracle'

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Tracy Austin says her new title as the world's No. 1 women's tennis player is a "miracle" — and she intends to hold on to it.

The 17-year-old Austin walked off center court Tuesday after defeating Renee Richards in the second round of the $150,000 women's tournament, and was told by her mother she had moved ahead of Martina Navratilova in the computerized rankings of the Women's Tennis Association.

"I can't believe it," Austin exclaimed. "It's a miracle."

"I'm not going to let this ranking change my game," she added. "But now that I have the title, I want to hold on to it for awhile."

Austin's two recent defeats of former top-ranked Navratilova put her on top in WTA's computerized rankings.

Austin has a total of 16,347 points, just 0.94 more than Navratilova. Navratilova and Chris Evert are the only other women to hold the front ranking under the computer system, begun in 1975.

In their second-round action, No. 4 seed Kathy Jordan defeated JoAnne Russell 6-2, 7-5, and 14-year-old Andrea Jaeger defeated Raquel Giscrafra 6-1, 6-0.

MC downs FPC netters

The Midland College women and men posted victories over Frank Phillips College Tuesday at MC in a Western Junior College Athletic conference meet.

The Chap men won a 9-0 decision over FPC while the women took a 6-0 verdict. FPC did not have enough players to form a complete team and had to forfeit five matches.

MC will host South Plains in a conference match Tuesday at the Midland College courts.

Hanging putt cost Sneed

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — The memory of that hanging putt will never fade.

But Ed Sneed has dealt with it. The man who let the 43rd Masters title slip through his fingers had put things in their proper perspective as he prepared for this year's event which begins Thursday. He remembers, but he is not haunted.

"You'll never forget something like that," said Sneed, who had a 3-stroke lead with three holes to play last year and bogeyed in. A par-saving putt on the 72nd hole hung on the lip of the cup, one-quarter of the ball over the hole.

"It is tough to accept, but you have to," said Sneed, a thoughtful man whose speech still carries traces of the soft, lilting cadences of his native Virginia.

He is the prototype of what a Masters champion should be — tall, articulate, educated, an off-course conservative, with the bearing and demeanor of an aristocrat. He has everything but the title.

"I had it in the bag. It was my tournament to take and I didn't do it. You can never forget it. You can't erase it. It will always be there."

It was, quite simply, one of the great collapses in golf history. It ranks with Sam Snead taking an 8 on the final hole of a U.S. Open he should have won, Arnold Palmer blowing a seven-stroke lead with nine to play in the 1966 American national championship in San Francisco.

And it occurred before the disbelieving eyes of millions of national television viewers.

It is the sort of thing that has destroyed the careers of other men. But Sneed, at 35 a 12-year journeyman who has won three American titles, has handled it well.

He recovered from the Masters loss to record his best money-winning season ever last year, $123,000. He has played well at times this year, twice finishing a strong third and winning $42,000.

One of those performances was in his last start, at the Heritage Classic. He missed the title playoff by two shots, a definite indication his game is reaching a peak for the 44th edition of the Masters this week.

A victory in the 1980 Masters is not out of the question for Sneed.

"I know I can play the golf course," he said before a practice round over the Augusta National Golf Club course that exacted from him such an emotional toll. "I proved that I know how to play the golf course. If I am on my game, I am capable of winning."

Even a victory won't erase the memory of 1979, however.

"You'll never forget something like that. It was disappointing rather than discouraging. I think I got over it quicker than the people around me."

"When I went home from Augusta last year," he recalled, "my little girl ran up to me, threw her arms around my neck and said, 'Daddy, Daddy, you won!'"

"I knew then I hadn't lost anything I couldn't live without."

The prime candidate for the green jacket, however, is the other playoff loser from last year, Tom Watson.

Watson, twice a winner this year, and the outstanding player in golf for the past three seasons, was having his troubles on the eve of the 44th event.

"I'm not striking the ball as well as I'd like to and my confidence isn't quite so high as it should be," Watson said.

He listed other major contenders as "anybody who has been playing well recently."

That list, he said, includes Jerry Pate, Steve Ballesteros, Ray Floyd, Ben Crenshaw, defending champion Fuzzy Zoeller, and Craig Stadler.

"And, of course, you have to list (Jack) Nicklaus in there, too," Watson said. "He's been playing very well in his last few starts."

Boston offers Sampson contract

HARRISONBURG, Va. (AP) — Boston Celtics owner Harry Mangurian was optimistic today 7-foot-4 University of Virginia freshman Ralph Sampson will take the Celtics' offer and sign a pro basketball contract.

Mangurian and Celtics General Manager Red Auerbach came to this Shenandoah Valley city Tuesday night and talked with Sampson's parents, Ralph and Sarah Sampson.

Sampson, 19, however, wasn't here. He was 61 miles away, at the university in Charlottesville.

After more than two hours, Mr. and Mrs. Sampson, Mangurian and Auerbach summed it up, each saying, "It's up to Ralph now."

Talking to reporters standing in a heavy rain outside the Sampson house, Mangurian said, "I really do feel pretty optimistic. I really do. We had a very nice meeting and it's up to Ralph now. He'll talk it over with his folks and get back with us Friday."

Auerbach said almost the identical words, but amended it to, "In the next couple of days."

They refused to discuss how much they would pay to get Sampson. Mangurian said, "There's always a limit. I really don't want to talk money."

But money is the key the Celtics apparently are counting on to convince Sampson he should declare himself a financial hardship case, clearing the way for the Celtics to pick him in the National Basketball Association draft June 10.

The Celtics have the first pick, a choice they won in a coin-toss with the Utah Jazz.

Mrs. Sampson said Mangurian and Auerbach may be right about her son making a decision this week, but she knows it might not happen.

"I hope it's a couple of days for all concerned," she said, but if they think her son will do it on the Celtics' timetable "they just don't know Ralph Sampson."

Sampson, intimidating on defense and a double-figure offensive threat, led Virginia's Cavaliers to a 24-10 record and the National Invitation Tournament championship last month.

Yanks, Mets wage ad war

NEW YORK (AP) — The Yankees and Mets have been told by baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn to stop their crosstown sniping that came about as a result of an advertising campaign conducted by the Mets, The New York Daily News reported in Wednesday's editions.

However, even a request by the Mets that he remain mum on the matter didn't slow down ad man Jerry DellaFemina.

"The Mets' management has asked me not to say anything," DellaFemina said Tuesday ... and then promptly invited Yankees owner George Steinbrenner to be his guest at the Mets' opener on Thursday.

The Mets, who have finished last three years in a row but are under new ownership, are paying DellaFemina's agency a reported $400,000 for a newspaper promotion campaign. The theme is "The New Mets. The Magic is back."

However, DellaFemina went beyond the newspaper ads and made remarks about Yankee stars Reggie Jackson and Bucky Dent. He said New York "has had to settle" for Jackson as a hero and took a shot at Dent for making commercials for fur coats after his sensational playoffs and World Series in 1978.

Scientists study magma power

SEATTLE (AP) — With every rumble and puff of steam from Mount St. Helens, excited geothermal experts see visions of a new source of energy — magma power — that could tap heat from the molten rock within the volcano.

Scientists consider magma energy an extremely promising potential resource for producing electricity, with Mount St. Helens one of the best prospects, but they say years of research lie ahead before the Pacific Northwest could benefit from it.

The volcano is "considered one of the two highest potential (geothermal energy) areas in the state because of its recent volcanic activity," said Gordon Bloomquist, a geothermal specialist in the Washington state Energy Office.

The other area is Mount Baker, he said. "By recent activity, I mean that most of Mount St. Helens has formed within the last 2,000 years," he said.

Its most recent activity, the quakes and eruptions that began two weeks ago, may offer geothermal researchers a chance to run tests on heat transfer systems.

The idea of tapping magma energy is not new. Burlington Northern railroad, which owns the summit of the 9,677-foot peak, discussed the possibility with Portland General Electric Co. several years ago.

The railroad still is evaluating two geothermal sites at the base of Mount St. Helens.

Sandia Laboratories, a private facility in Albuquerque, N.M., has been conducting studies for five years for the federal Department of Energy on heat energy in the vast bodies of molten rock — magma — found a few miles down in the earth's crust. It sent scientists to the volcano last week to set up cameras on nearby mountains to record steam plume activity.

Harry C. Hardee, a supervisor of the geothermal energy division at Sandia, said Tuesday its studies indicate a vast reserve of clean heat energy that can be converted to electricity.

But significant problems remain, including locating the magma and learning how best to tap its heat. A lava eruption from Mount St. Helens could help solve that problem.

"If the magma works its way up the volcano, we could evaluate our geophysical techniques for locating (the magma in a volcano)," said Hardee.

"If we could get a lava flow, we could possibly run some heat transfer experiments in the flow," he said.

Hardee said the community of Heimae, on an island off the south of Iceland, uses steam piped from a slowly cooling lava flow just outside the town to heat a significant part of the town.

But he envisions "a closed-system heat exchanger in molten rock" that would eliminate combustion pollution of coal plants and the chemical pollution of other systems that bring sulfur-laden natural steam to the surface, he said.

Student pilot killed in crash on freeway

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A small plane apparently was trying to land on Interstate 35 about 12 miles north of Fort Worth when it hit power lines and crashed on the median Tuesday evening, witnesses said. One of the two student pilots aboard was killed, the other seriously injured.

"If they were trying to land on the highway, they would have made it if not for the power lines," said Brent Arrant, who witnessed the crash about 6 p.m.

"It looked like they had plenty of power," he said. The plane was flying very low but rose just before striking the lines, he added.

The injured man was identified as Nasradin Abou Kassem, about 22, who was reported in serious condition at Harris Hospital in Fort Worth.

Nuclear test site returned to natives

ENEWETAK ATOLL (AP) — In a simple ceremony under a blazing sun, the United States returned this mid-Pacific atoll to its native people, declaring that the three-year cleanup from nuclear tests here in the 1940s and '50s was completed.

Representatives of the U.S. government and military, the Enewetak people, the U.S. Trust Territory of the Pacific and the Marshall Islands government attended the main ceremony Tuesday on the island of Enewetak.

About 450 Enewetak natives — including a baby girl born here Monday and youths who had never seen their homeland — came for the celebration. "We rejoice that we have returned to our homeland," Troij (chief) Johannes Peter said.

Most of the 450 will return to the atoll Ujelang, where they were moved 33 years ago when the United States began its 10-year series of nuclear tests here. Those who want to settle here will come back in phases over the next two months.

Vice Adm. Robert R. Monroe, director of the Defense Nuclear Agency, said the 1948-1958 nuclear test program was of great importance and helped preserve security and prevent nuclear war.

"The price was paid by the people of Enewetak," he said. "For three years, the United States has been working to repay this great debt to the people of Enewetak."

Peter expressed thanks for the cleanup, and urged his people to "proceed with the development of the land and be open to invite visitors to help."

Some 90 islander men have been working here with the military during the $100 million, three-year operation to clean up after the 43 nuclear tests, including the world's first hydrogen bomb explosion in 1952.

Enewetak atoll is an oval-shaped ring of coral reef surrounding a lagoon about 25 miles across and made up of about 40 low, sandy islands.

The nuclear tests were conducted on the northern islands, including Runit, which has been the dumping ground for radioactive debris found in the cleanup operation. The contaminated materials were put in a huge crater, caused by a nuclear test, and were covered with a concrete dome. That island will remain quarantined indefinitely.

A group of Enewetak people called dri Enjebi cannot return to their northern island home, according to the proclamation signed by both American and island representatives.

But it said officials hope the dri Enjebi "will one day soon be able to return in safety to Enjebi island."

The level of residual contamination on the three large southern islands of the atoll, Enewetak, Medran and Japtan, is now generally lower than that of most locations in the United States, according to the Defense Nuclear Agency.

Inflation could taper off soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation's sizzling pace could be cut in half after mid-year, barring any new shocks to the economy, says Charles L. Schultze, President Carter's top economic adviser.

While inflation is likely to continue in the 17 percent to 18 percent range for the next several months, Schultze said, the rate could dip below 10 percent after mid-year if oil price rises moderate and mortgage interest rates stop climbing.

Schultze, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, said his optimistic scenario allows for a rate of increase in oil prices of 20 percent in the second half of the year, down from the 75 percent to 85 percent of recent months.

It also assumes mortgage interest rates will decline after mid-year by 2 percentage points, which he said is a "conservative" projection. But even if mortgage interest rates just stay at about their current level of approximately 16 percent, inflation still could dip below 10 percent, he indicated.

"There is a large potential after the next three months or so for a significant reduction in the rate of inflation," he said in a speech at the National Press Club.

The Carter administration is now forecasting an increase in consumer prices of 12.8 percent for the year as a whole, which assumes an easing in the rate of inflation after mid-year to offset the 18 percent rate in January and February.

Consumer prices increased 13.3 percent last year, double the administration's original forecast. The worsened rate last year was blamed on the unexpected increase in world oil prices. U.S. officials say that barring any new crisis, oil prices should remain relatively stable during the remainder of this year. Schultze said that after discounting special factors such as interest rates and energy costs, the nation's underlying inflation rate is now about 9 percent.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department reported that sales of new, single-family homes fell 9.5 percent in February to the lowest level since the 1974-75 recession.

Sales were at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 532,000 units in February, down from January's 588,000 and 26 percent below the 715,000 units of February 1979.

That made February sales the poorest since March 1975, when high interest rates and a shortage of mortgage money pushed sales down to an annual rate of 477,000.

And a department analyst who asked not to be named said, "I expect it to drop further in March" because of Federal Reserve action in February and again last month to make borrowing more expensive.

Alone by the telephone

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — A lumberjack was on the phone the other day from the state of Washington offering to carve me up into medium-sized briskets suitable for home freezing.

It seems the chap didn't cotton to what I wrote about the chainsaw being the macho maniac tool of the 1980s.

The next day, a bulldozer operator called in from Peoria or someplace out there where they wear baseball caps with the names of tractors on them. He was put out because in the same piece I had mentioned that "at least it takes brains to operate a stew at The Stew tend to hang the expense in their ardor to hang the columnist. Those distributing bouquets seem more budget conscious, as you'd expect of prudent, right thinking people with faultless taste in their newspaper reading habits. So, right off, you can forgive them for forgetting that when it's midnight in San Jose, Calif., it's 3 a.m. here in New England.

I mention San Jose because a bright young lady called in from there the other night — morning, really — to say how much she agreed with my putdown of that California sperm bank dedicated to mating the frozen assets of Nobel Prize winners with willing bright young women.

She reminded me of what George Bernard Shaw wrote to dancer Isadora Duncan, when she proposed that a merger of her body and his intellect might produce a super child: "But, my dear, what if it has your mind and my body?"

Then a fellow named Robert Tiedemann, who sews, designs and sells shirts in London, Ontario, called in to say how right I was in denouncing the new "average sleeve length" shirts that the big manufacturers are conspiring to foist on the public.

Most people's arms aren't even the same length, Mr. Tiedemann informed me, and can vary as much as a quarter-inch from left to right, depending on whether they're left or right handed. I forget which was longer, but I remember him saying that left-handed people usually have a lower right hip, which is one of those facts that you store away for future columns like this one.

I don't know what time they get up in the circulation area of the Bloomington, Ill., Pantagraph, but one morning at 7 a.m. — it had to be 6 out there — a fine lady named Ruth Beeley fished my number out of information and dialed direct to say some kind things about the column I'd written about the Wise Men coming from Iran, where they had seen that star in the East, so the country can't be all bad.

She said she just had to tell me or it would have bothered her the rest of the week.

The trouble with phone calls like that is they aren't suitable for framing, like the letter I got from Dr. R.L. Michel in Knoxville, Tenn., after I did a whimsical piece on a drunken street corner Santa Claus coming before a dyspeptic judge:

"Your 'How Santa Came to the Bar of Justice' deserves a place beside Dickens's 'A Christmas Carol' and O'Henry's 'Gift of the Magi' among the great Christmas stories of English literature."

When that phone-in logger with the chainsaw finally fulfills his promise, I've already seen to it in my will that folks writing perceptive letters like that and calling in with nice things to say get a first class relic from among the Stew remnants.

bulldozer, a little anyway." If I ever got within a county or two of his machine, he inferred, we'd be on a collision course.

I don't know what's become of this country, but of late people have been mistaking this column for one of those television phone-in shows that Jimmie Carter sometimes MCs. It used to be they'd write a persnickety letter to the editor of this paper or the president of The Associated Press telling him there was a dangerous lunatic at large in the newsroom. Maybe they'd even take a flyer at writing me direct with just Ridgefield, Conn., for an address, figuring a boob of that dimension could hardly escape the notice of the local postmaster.

Anyway, there was a kind of security or at least deferred malice in the anonymity of the mail box. You could always leave the letter unopened on your desk for a couple of days, getting up courage to read it if the handwriting in crayon looked on the surly side or if the envelope came right out and said: "That Idiot Columnist..."

But the instant approach by telephone can be unnerving, especially if you were expecting to hear from a neighbor or the travel agent, and, instead, there is old Charlie Chain Saw buzzing off at top volume with the sparks flying and the chips falling where they may — like around your feet.

He sounds close enough to cut through that receiver and nick off an ear right there and then. Hang up on him and Ma Bell's little toy might blow up in your hand, or the telephone pole outside the dining room window would come crashing down to old Charlie's cry of "T-I-m-b-e-r."

Happily, not all the calls are of a threatening, complaining nature.

Often the ones that come late at night, when prices are cheaper, may even be complimentary. Folks in a

Job stoppage ends at federal prison

MARION, Ill. (AP) — About 80 percent of the inmates at Marion federal prison reported for work Tuesday, prison officials said, apparently ending a work stoppage that began March 17.

Prison spokesman Ron Beal said a statement from Warden Harold Miller saying the job action ended when an estimated 80 percent of the 280 available inmates reported for their work assignments on Tuesday.

Beal said a major breakthrough came Monday when 50 percent of the inmates reported for work. He said the prison houses about 400 prisoners, but many are confined to control and segregation units and are not assigned jobs.

He credited continued contacts between staff and inmates with ending the job action, saying prison officials have circulated through the prison daily to talk to inmates about their complaints.

The work stoppage was the longest ever at the 17-year-old facility, which was opened in 1963 to replace Alcatraz as the federal prison system's most secure institution.

It was prompted by inmate grievances over food, telephone privileges and television viewing time. The prisoners also asked the warden to set up an inmate council to work with the administration.

Beal said there was no official response to the grievances.

A prisoners' rights group earlier released what they said was a March 26 memo from Miller to the inmates. It indicated the warden had rejected the inmates' requests.

Trapper Ivy Taylor, holding a fox skin, says Arizona "would be overrun with critters if we didn't keep 'em down." The 82-year-old Taylor has been running trap lines almost daily during the state's trapping season for the last 70 years. (L.A. Times Photo)

Arizona trapper Ivy Taylor real throwback to Old West

By CHARLES HILLINGER
The Los Angeles Times

CORDES JUNCTION, Ariz. — Ivy Taylor was running his trap line as he has practically every day, November through March, for the last 70 years.

He traps gray foxes, bobcats, raccoons and coyotes. "And sometimes skunk," he says.

What do you do with the skunks? the trapper was asked. "Skunk's good eatin'," he replies. "Better eatin' than rabbit. Hell, skunk's as good eatin' as chicken. But skunks bein' smelly critters scares everybody away. People don't know what they're missin', never eatin' skunk."

But he never eats skunk when his wife, Christine, is around: She objects.

"My wife has funny ideas about my trappin' too," Taylor says. "She hates me killin' the critters. But she doesn't mind me makin' the money doin' it."

Taylor was a bachelor until he was 57. Then he married Christine, the widow of an old friend.

"I just got tired of livin' alone," he said. Taylor says trappers play a role in ecology.

"I think trappin' is a wonderful thing. It keeps 'em down. In this part of Arizona, the place would be overrun with critters if we didn't keep 'em down."

"They'd be bitin' and killin' one another, bitin' and killin' dogs, cats and cows."

"Hell, we had so many squirrels here last spring, they near destroyed all the vegetable gardens in these parts."

It takes Taylor a couple of hours to drive his mufflerless pickup truck up and down the mountainside, running the trap line on his Spike E Ranch outside Cordes Junction.

He has 20 traps set. From his pickup he peers at ground scratchings near his buried traps and checks the tracks of wild animals passing through.

"Look out there," says Taylor as he stops his pickup. "See a place that looks like a trap?"

His traps are camouflaged so well, it is impossible to spot them. The stranger from the city tells Taylor no, he cannot see anything that looks like a trap.

"That's good," Taylor says. "If you could, a critter could, and would say 'The hell with you, big boy' and move along."

A good year for Taylor brings 100 to 150 skins. He dries the pelts and ships them to a furrier in South Dakota. This year gray foxes brought about $30, coyotes $40 to $60 and bobcats $50 to $200.

When Taylor isn't trapping he runs a few head of cattle and spends his time "javin' with the boys at the Junction."

Ivy Taylor is a throwback to the Old West. He says he will keep trapping until he can't move around.

WORLD BRIEFS

Pope to visit briefly in France

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II announced today he will visit the "beloved noble nation" of France for three days, beginning May 30. He said he will address the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in Paris on June 2.

It will be the first papal trip to France in modern times. "God willing, I will make a brief pastoral visit to France," the pontiff told some 10,000 faithful at his weekly general audience in St. Peter's Square.

It will be the pontiff's sixth trip outside of Italy since he was elected to the papacy in October 1978. He already has announced plans to visit six African nations May 2-12.

John Paul said he will visit France at the invitations of the French Episcopal Conference; the Archbishop of Paris, Cardinal Francois Marty; French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and UNESCO's director-general, Amadou Mahtar M'bow.

The pope said he will leave Rome in the afternoon of May 30 and return in the evening of June 2. Speaking under an umbrella held by an aide to ward off a drizzling rain, the pope said:

"It will be a quick trip during which I will have in my heart and the fullness of my soul the aspirations of all the inhabitants of the beloved and noble French nation as well as the high aims followed by the UNESCO in the educational, scientific and cultural fields.

"You, beloved brothers present at this audience, also should help me with your prayers so that this trip, which as all the others in the past, will be exclusively apostolic in nature, that is religious and pastoral, will bear desired rich fruits."

John Paul so far has visited the Dominican Republic and Mexico, Poland, Ireland and the United States, and Turkey. He is also scheduled to visit Brazil in July and the Philippines in November.

Israelis hit Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli troops in armored personnel carriers rolled across Lebanon's southern border today and set up positions within U.N.-controlled areas two days after Palestinian terrorists killed three Israelis in a raid on a border kibbutz.

The spokesman for the U.N. peacekeeping force Lebanon, Samir Sanbar, said five armored personnel carriers moved into the United Nations' Irish-patrolled area of operations at Beit Yahoun and Kounin, about four miles north of the Israeli border, at 9:15 a.m.

Diplomatic sources said the Israeli troops also established a military presence at a Ghani-held U.N. area about six miles east of positions established at the Irish area.

Sanbar declined to say why the Israelis moved in. But Western diplomatic sources with daily contact with the U.N. command said the Israeli move appeared to be part of new measures to combat Palestinian guerrilla cross-border raids.

The Israeli government of Prime Minister Menachem Begin has been seething since Monday when Palestinian guerrillas raided the Misgav Am kibbutz in upper Galilee, killing three Israelis, including a baby.

Israeli troops killed the five guerrilla raiders and the Tel Aviv command later announced the assailants infiltrated through U.N.-controlled areas in southern Lebanon.

Belgian Premier resigns

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The left-of-center coalition government of Belgian Premier Wilfried Martens today resigned after a year in office in a dispute between two of the nation's three linguistic groups.

Martens offered to resign last week after the Senate for the second time rejected his proposal for constitutional reform aimed at solving a standing feud between French-speaking Walloons and Dutch-speaking Flemings.

King Baudouin did not immediately accept the resignation, asking Martens to try again for Senate approval. The king accepted the resignation after the premier conferred in vain with majority and opposition leaders.

The king asked Martens to maintain a caretaker government while the monarch consults with other parliamentary leaders in an attempt to form a new government. However, most observers believed no government could be formed without new elections. The last general elections were held 16 months ago.

The coalition government, fragile since its formation a year ago, was fatally crippled by the defection last week of eight senators from Martens' own Flemish Christian Democrat Party, the largest political bloc in Belgium.

For the second time in a week, the eight senators voted against Martens' proposal to amend the constitution to grant autonomy to Flemings, Walloons and the area around the capital city of Brussels. The defection of the eight denied Martens the two-thirds majority needed to amend the constitution.

The constitution was amended in 1970 to establish regional assemblies for Belgium's three linguistic groups, French, Flemish and German.

China nearing membership into IMF

WASHINGTON (AP) — Membership in the International Monetary Fund, a potential source of major financial assistance, "could come fairly soon," says a top U.S. Treasury Department official.

C. Fred Bergsten, an assistant secretary of the treasury for international affairs, said in an interview, "China has indicated a desire to come in; it's likely they will come in."

He also said Tuesday that he thinks China will take a seat in the World Bank, the IMF's sister institution, and revealed that World Bank President Robert McNamara is scheduled to visit China next week.

A team of experts from the IMF traveled to China last month to discuss the membership question with Chinese leaders. The team has returned and is expected to report soon to the IMF's board of directors, which will make the decision on China's membership.

A source in the IMF, who did not want to be identified, said he was less certain than Bergsten that China's membership will be resolved soon.

"All kinds of wheels will be turning on this," he said. "This is a hell of a big country — one billion people. It will cause a very far-reaching structural change in both the IMF and World Bank."

China's participation in the two institutions would create the potential for China to borrow hundreds of millions of dollars, if not billions, in financial aid. Such assistance would not be a certainty, however.

For example, a total of nearly $1.5 billion in total loans and assistance was authorized by the World Bank for India last year, China, with a larger population, technically would be entitled to an equal amount.

Such financial help could be vital to China in helping strengthen its impoverished economy. Per capita income of China's 1 billion people in 1977 was $410, according to a very tentative estimate by the World Bank.

There are 140 members in the IMF and nearly the same in the World Bank. The United States is the single most influential member of both institutions and has contributed the largest share of the financing, although this share has been declining in recent years and now ranges between 20 percent and 30 percent.

Nearly all of the world's non-communist nations, as well as a handful of communist countries, are members of both institutions. The Soviet Union is not a member.

China actually has been a member of both institutions since they were established in 1944 to help in the rebuilding of the world's economy in the post-war period.

However, after the communists came to power in mainland China, the seat was occupied by the government on Taiwan, which still claims it. The United States and other nations have been reluctant to oust Taiwan to make room for China.

Bergsten said that while membership for mainland China may be near, he hopes Taiwan won't be left out entirely. "Our hope is that a way could be found to have some kind of association for Taiwan with the institutions," he said.

While membership for China in the World Bank, of which Taiwan also is a member, may take a little longer, the U.S. executive director to the bank, Colby King, said he thinks it will happen within a year.

Bergsten said China's membership in the bank could create a major strain on the bank's financial resources since it already is hard pressed to meet the financial needs of its current members.

The bank lends money to its members to finance development projects, such as irrigation, roads and energy. It's subsidiary, the International Development Association, makes interest-free loans to the world's poorest nations. It is assumed that China would qualify for IDA assistance, although this question apparently has not yet been resolved.

One of the first arrivals for the conference, Bolivian Foreign Minister Gaston Araoz, told a reporter his country "has an unalterable tradition regarding the right of asylum," but it would be "getting a little ahead of events" for him to commit his government to admitting any refugees.

Meanwhile, the Peruvian government sent three diplomats and two policemen to Havana to join the five members of its embassy staff who were almost overwhelmed by the rush into the embassy compound last weekend.

"We want to reinforce the personnel to make a list of the refugees to give them visas to Peru or any other country willing to receive them. But everything depends on the consent of the Cuban government," Peruvian Foreign Minister Arturo Garcia told a news conference Tuesday night.

The Castro regime has said it will allow virtually all of the dissidents to leave Cuba, terming them "vagrants and bums" that it would be glad to get rid of. In the meantime, it was providing them with food, medical care and sanitary facilities in addition to passes allowing them to go home and return.

Peru doubles Havana staff to evacuate 10,000 refugees

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Peru doubled its embassy staff in Havana today in preparation for the departure from Cuba of the estimated 10,000 anti-Castro Cubans crowding the gardens of its embassy. But so far no nation had offered asylum to any of the would-be exiles.

The foreign ministers of the Andean Pact alliance — Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Venezuela — were to meet in Lima this afternoon with representatives of the United Nations and the European Intergovernmental Committee on Migration to discuss finding havens for the Cubans.

The Latin-American governments hoped that the United States, the traditional refuge for persons fleeing President Fidel Castro's communist rule, would take them. But so far the State Department said only that it would consider applications for admission to the United States from all those who reached Lima.

The Peruvian government, which has its own grave economic problems, did not want the refugees unless it was sure their stay would be temporary. Nor did its Andean allies appear eager to take any.

Tenneco finals Culberson strike

Tenneco Oil Co. No. 1 TXL-Fee has been completed as an Atoka gas discovery in rank wildcat country of Culberson County, 27 miles east of Pine Springs. The operator reported a calculated absolute open flow potential of 1,800,000 cubic feet of dry gas per day. Completion was through perforations from 9,830 to 9,836 feet. The plugged back depth is 9,924 feet. The following tops were picked on ground elevation of 3,543 feet: Delaware 1,157 feet, Bone Springs 4,650 feet, Strawn 9,336 feet, Atoka 9,570 feet, Woodford shale 11,406 feet, Silurian 11,523 feet and the Ellenburger at 13,128 feet. The pay was topped at 9,289 feet. Well site is 660 feet from north and west lines of section 1, block 61, T-2, T&P survey. It is two and seven-eighths miles south of the Pokorny (Delaware oil) pool.

CONCHO STRIKE Leede Oil & Gas Inc. of Midland No. 3 J. R. Canning has been completed as a Goen oil discovery 10 miles southwest of Eden in Concho County. It finished for a daily flow potential of 95 barrels of oil and no water, through a 10 1/4-inch choke and perforations from 3,827 to 3,830 feet. The gravity and the gas-oil ratio were not reported. The strike, one location northeast of the one-well Canning (Strawn 3700) field, is bottomed at 4,032 feet, and 5.5-inch casing is set at 4,028 feet. Well site is 1,650 feet from south and west lines of section 61, block 8, H&TC survey.

FISHER DISCOVERY Bedford Oil & Gas Inc. of Hurst No. 1 Aiken has been finished as an Ellenburger discovery in Fisher County. The well, drilled in the Claytonville township, finished from open hole at 6,903 feet, where 4.5-inch casing is cemented, and total depth of 6,916 feet. On 24-hour potential test, the well pumped 105 barrels of 42-gravity oil and 380 barrels of water, with a gas-oil ratio of 233-1. The well is one mile northwest of 2,740-foot Canyon production in the Claytonville field and 1/4 mile east of the depleted Aiken (Ellenburger) pool. Location is 467 feet from north and 600 feet from east lines of section 214, block 3, H&TC survey. PECOS GASSER Rankin Oil Co. No. 3 J. O. Smith has been completed as the sixth well in the T.C.I. (Grayburg gas) pool of Pecos County, two miles northeast of Imperial. The operator reported a calculated absolute open flow potential of 1,100,000 cubic feet of dry gas per day. Completion was from open hole at 1,731 feet, where 9 5/8-inch casing is cemented, and total depth of 2,250 feet. The pay was acidized with 1,000 gallons and fractured with 10,206 gallons. The pay was topped at 2,180 feet on ground elevation of 2,383 feet. The well site is one location south of other Grayburg gas production and 330 feet from south and west lines of section 24, block 9, H&GN survey.

ANDREWS RE-ENTRY Texaco Inc. will re-enter and plug back to 4,300 feet from completion attempt in the Yates gas pay of the Emma, North multipay pool of Andrews County. A former Emma (Ellenburger) producer, it is 2,328 feet from south and 430 feet from west lines of section 42, block 9, University Lands survey. The Emma, North (Yates) pool produces at 2,857 feet.

GLASSCOCK PROJECTS Champlin Petroleum Co., operating from Midland, spotted a pair of projects in the four-well Conger, Southwest (Pennsylvanian oil) pool of Sterling County, 20 miles southwest of Sterling City. No. 4 I. W. Terry is one location north of production and 844 feet from north and 5,300 feet from east lines of section 1, GC&SF survey. Contract depth is 9,800 feet. It is 3/4 mile southeast of the depleted Aspermont Lake, West (Canyon) field and 1.5 miles west of the Aspermont Lake (Canyon reef and sand) pool.

Champlin No. 5 I. W. Terry will be drilled 1,000 feet from south and west lines of section 2, T. B. Wilson survey. Contract depth is 9,800 feet. The site is between two Pennsylvanian producers.

STERLING AREA Wagner & Brown of Midland spotted No. 1-17-B Bade as a 3/4-mile northeast stepout to the Sterling County portion of the Conger (Pennsylvanian oil and gas) field, 11 miles southwest of Sterling City. The project, scheduled on an 8,600-foot contract, is 6,749 feet from south and 2,035 feet from east lines of section 17, block 22, H&TC survey.

Da Vinci enters guilty plea

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The Da Vinci Company of Shawnee and its president, Sidney Clark III, pleaded guilty Tuesday to federal misdemeanor charges of overcharging for crude oil. The company also agreed to repay $500,000 in overcharges dating back seven years, even though the nine criminal counts it pleaded to Tuesday covered $12,738 in excess charges in 1975. Clark pleaded guilty to one count but does not face a jail term.

In the negotiations with federal prosecutors, Da Vinci officials also agreed to pay $50,000 in civil fines. The government charged Da Vinci with billing the Summi Gas Co. of Houston, Texas, for oil taken from stripper, or marginal wells, although the fuel was "old oil." The government allows higher prices for stripper oil than that taken from wells producing since 1973. Da Vinci admitted to charging Summi double the ceiling price for its oil.

Field area wells report potential tests

RK Petroleum Corp. of Midland recently completed its No. 1 Southland, former Devonian well, as a 1/2-mile southwest extender to the RK (Devonian) field of Martin County. Well site is 990 feet from south and west lines of section 13, block 49, T-8, T&P survey. It is one and three-quarter miles northwest of the closest other Pennsylvanian well. The well, two miles north of Tarzan, finished for a daily pumping potential of 40 barrels of 47-gravity oil and 25 barrels of water, through perforations from 11,856 to 11,861 feet after a 250-gallon acid treatment. The Gas-oil ratio is 750-1. Location is 660 feet from south and east lines of section 6, block 37, T-2-N, T&P survey.

cubic feet of gas per day, plus seven barrels of 44-gravity oil. Production was from open hole at 12,900-15,692 feet. Well site is 990 feet from south and west lines of section 13, block 49, T-8, T&P survey. It is one and three-quarter miles northwest of the closest other Pennsylvanian well.

DEVONIAN WELL Gulf Oil Corp. No. 2-D Ivy B. Weatherly has been completed in the Rojo Caballos, South (Devonian) pool of Pecos County, nine miles southeast of Cayanosa. It finished for a calculated absolute open flow potential of 3.5 million cubic feet of dry gas per day, through perforations from 17,900 to 18,223 feet. Total depth is 18,350 feet and the plugged back depth is 18,274 feet. Operator set 5.5-inch liner at 18,350 feet. Location is 990 feet from north and east lines of section 24, block 49, T-8, T&P survey. It is one mile northeast of other Devonian production.

BORDEN OILER The Just Right (Strawn) pool of Borden County gained its second Strawn producer with completion of V-F Petroleum, Inc., of Midland No. 1 Perryman. The well, nine miles northeast of Gall, finished for a daily pumping potential of 127 barrels of 41-gravity oil and no water, through perforations from 8,060 to 8,062 feet. The pay was acidized with 500 gallons, and the gas-oil ratio is 565-1. Total depth is 8,496 feet and 5.5-inch casing is set at 8,484 feet. The plugged back depth is 8,432 feet. Well site is 2,811 feet from north and 6,649 feet from east lines of James R. Robertson survey No. 33 and one location west of the multipay field's other Strawn producer.

Poerner says no RRC rubber stamps

From Wire and Staff Reports Texas has a credible voice in the energy policy debate because the Texas Railroad Commission has refused to "rubberstamp" natural gas well classifications, Commission Chairman John Poerner said here Tuesday. "The approach we have adopted of rubberstamping has gained us (the Railroad Commission) the position of accepting the responsibility on the part of the State of Texas and on the part of the producers to give advice to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. "And in the last 60 days, FERC has changed its attitude toward Texas, toward the producers, and I am convinced that we are going to have a better break in the future where at least the producing states will not be penalized as they have in the past. "This approach," Poerner, a candidate for re-election, told members of the Natural Gas Men of the Permian Basin, "has enabled the commission to gain important changes in the formation of proration units and the setting of allowables for the implementation of new onshore production wells drilled after Feb. 19, 1977. "Another area in which we have had some success and have other actions under way deals with the designation of tight gas formations under Section 107 of the Natural Gas Policy Act," Poerner said. He said the commission will conduct a hearing May 20 to consider the designation of Texas tight sand formations which would qualify for the incentive prices. "I believe, as a railroad commissioner, that natural gas is going to save this country—in the next 20 years, when this nation moves from total dependence on hydrofossil fuels, natural gas—if operators are given proper incentive—will supply this nation with fuel." During a question and answer session, Poerner told Natural Gas Men of the Permian Basin members that he foresees complete deregulation before 1985. "We're slowly moving into a free marketplace, and that is the only way it will ever work."

Cutoff would hit Japan hardest

By WILLIAM GLASGALL NEW YORK (AP) — Japan, which obtains 10 percent of its oil needs from Iran, would be hit hardest by a cutoff of Iranian oil shipments to U.S. allies, industry and government sources say. The sources said Tuesday that Western Europe, dependent on Iran for 5 percent of its oil needs, also would be affected if the flow of oil were stopped to allies joining in sanctions against the Mideast country. And one U.S. government source, who asked not to be quoted by name, said an Iranian cutoff could put "some upward pressure" on world oil prices at a time when the past year's price spiral appeared to be slowing. But even without a cutoff, said one industry observer, buyers may be thinking of reducing their purchases of Iranian oil because the country's prices are well above those charged by other exporters. And the New York Times reported today from London that bankers and oil industry experts said a cutoff could create serious problems for Iran. They said it would eliminate Iran's biggest customers — with no alternate consumers likely to be found — and might risk the freezing of Iranian assets in European banks. President Carter has already frozen Iranian assets in the United States. The oil cutoff was implied by Iranian Oil Minister Ali Akbar Moinefar, who said his country's answer to economic pressure from U.S. allies

"would be the same answer we gave the Americans." Last November, after Iranian militants seized American citizens at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, President Carter announced a ban on purchases of Iranian oil by U.S. companies. Iran said it had decided previously to end shipments of oil to the United States. Japan obtains 550,000 barrels of oil and Western European nations 600,000 barrels of oil a day from Iran, the government source said. The State Department has warned U.S. allies that their Iranian oil supplies could be placed in danger if they do not support the new sanctions, which include the breaking of diplomatic ties. Options for future action considered "open" by the administration include a naval blockade of Iran's sea routes or the mining of its oil ports. Tehran Radio, in a broadcast monitored in Cyprus, said Moinefar reported Iranian oil output had been boosted by 500,000 barrels a day in the past week to 3.5 million 42-gallon barrels daily. But the government source said Iran's daily oil production may be far lower. He estimated the country's production at about 2.5 million barrels, down from 5.2 million barrels a day in 1978 and 3.1 million barrels daily at the end of last year. Iran's daily oil exports total 1.5 million to 2 million barrels, he said, but a source in the oil industry said total exports may be closer to 1 million barrels a day because of buyer resistance. The effective cost of Iran's basic grade of crude oil, after surcharges and other contract terms are included, is nearly $38 a barrel, $4.50 above the country's "official" price, the industry publication Petroleum Intelligence Weekly has estimated. Saudi Arabia, whose oil output is 9.5 million barrels a day, charges $26 for a grade of oil nearly identical to Iran's. The newsletter's markets editor, Marshall Thomas, said some buyers simply may "not pick up" all the Iranian oil they are entitled to this spring because it is too costly. "People are expected to be leaving oil behind in the second quarter," Thomas said in an interview. World oil prices have doubled to an average of $30 a barrel since the seven-week shutdown of Iranian oil production in late 1978 and early 1979 during the revolution against Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Science fiction novelist interested in feelings

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor
 NEW YORK (AP) — How did the princess feel when she kissed the frog?
 "It may sound curious," says novelist Walter Tevis, "but I'd really like to know. Feelings interest me."
 This interest, the 52-year-old Tevis says, may be seen in his new novel, "Mockingbird."
 Although the book is a science-fiction tale on the surface, Tevis says he deliberately chose that literary form in order "to deal with spiritual growth. Much science fiction writing doesn't have any great interest in human beings, preferring ideas instead. But I try to deal with the emotional life, with the feelings of my characters and not have the ideas run away with the book."

 "Mockingbird" is set in the 25th century, but Tevis is quick to point out that "I'm not all that interested in the future. What I tried to do is write in a fairy-tale-kind-of-way about the present."
 The book deals with a society run by robots in which humans have nothing to do but enjoy themselves — primarily by sedating themselves heavily with drugs. Paul Bentley, the protagonist, however, rebels against this way of life and, says Tevis, "what I'm trying to do is show the hero waking up out of his stupor and realizing his own feelings, of becoming aware that there is a world out there."
 "When I first started Paul's story I thought about doing a novel about an alcoholic. That didn't work, so I thought about using the science-fiction form as my vehicle, and, as it turned out, that worked."

 "Mockingbird" is Tevis' third novel. The first two — both made into movies — were "The Hustler" and "The Man Who Fell To Earth."
 "The Hustler," says Tevis, was "straightforward, and I can still write that way, but I don't want to. I want to make up the world I write about."
 "That's why I use science fiction. I have a reformer's zeal toward science fiction. I feel it is a great potential medium that has never realized itself. When I read contemporary science fiction I so often find myself in the midst of sophomore writing. I find good ideas that tend to turn comic-book. I find characters who are stick figures. They have no feelings. I try to make my characters real. I'd like to see science fiction become a serious art form."

 Tevis currently lives in New York City and writes full time. But for many years he taught and wrote in his spare time.
 "I started teaching high school English in rural Kentucky when I was 21," he says, "and then I was a professor of English at Ohio University at Athens. I'm now on leave of absence. I had a full career as a teacher for some 30 years."
 "I like teaching and I miss it. I have verbal energy and I use it when I'm teaching. I love to talk and spin ideas with students. I suppose I spent a lot of my imagination in teaching, and I used it up that way instead of in writing."

 "But now I feel that it is more important for me to write. I feel very guilty when I'm not writing. Unfortunately, I have difficulty doing so. I do work at high speed when I'm at the typewriter. I really get it out when I'm hot, but I only get hot about every 20 days or so, and I hate to force it. I could write junk but I don't want to."
 "Like a lot of novelists, I'm a failed poet so it's painful to squeeze the emotions every day. Unfortunately, it's also painful not to write."
 Tevis, who says a book of his short stories, "Far From Home," will be published soon, currently is working on a new novel.

 "It's science fiction. It deals with a middle-aged tycoon whose life is so messed up that he buys a spaceship and goes off into space looking for uranium. I'm about halfway through, and I like it a lot. It's a more grown-up piece of work than 'Mockingbird.'"

Japan's birth rate drops as couples enjoy good life

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — The birth rate is plunging in Japan, an apparent victim of an intensified desire to enjoy the good life.

About 1.54 million Japanese will be brought into the world in 1980, a drop of more than 20 percent since the oil crisis year of 1973, when 2.09 million were born, according to a report by the government's Institute of Population Problems.

If the trend continues, births will drop by 1987 to below 1.3 million, it said.

Moreover, the Japanese woman, who on average bore 2.1 children through the early 1970s, now bears only 1.75 children, and the figure is still falling, the report says.

Declining birth rates are common to the industrialized West. Japan's 14 births per 1,000 population is only slightly below the United States and is still no match for the West Germans, whose rate is now down to 9 births per 1,000.

"But demographic experts never expected the birth rate to decline so rapidly," said Kiichi Yamaguchi, chief of the Institute's population policy section.

"Japan has one of the highest marriage rates in the world, and unlike in some European countries, Japanese women are still strongly motivated to have children," Yamaguchi said.

He pointed to a survey by the mass circulation daily Mainichi Shimbun last year which found that 39.5 percent of women would like to have three children if possible, against only 5.5 percent who wanted none or just one.

An additional 43.8 percent said they would be satisfied with two children.

"The problem is not that women won't have children, but that modern society puts obstacles in their way," he said.

The Institute's report notes that it is now normal for women to attend four-year universities and work several years before marriage. The average woman doesn't marry before age 25, and if the first child is put off because of economic or other reasons, there is a tendency to abandon plans for a second child, it said.

A hopelessly cramped housing situation, as more people crowd into urban areas, is another reason for limiting families, and the breakdown of the extended family has reduced the need for a stock of heirs, it said.

But the main reason for foregoing larger families is apparently economic — children are too much of a drain on hard-earned living standards now threatened by oil prices and inflation factors.

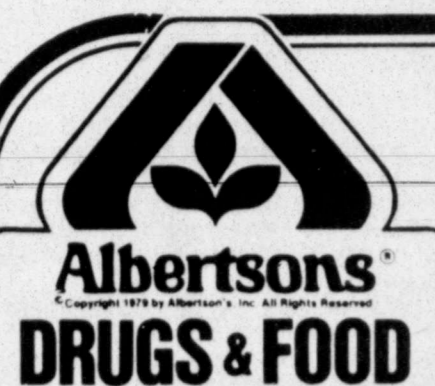

Public education is still cheap, but Japanese parents, pushing their children up the ladder of educational success, pay the equivalent of $120 a month for private kindergartens and up to $200 a month for private grade schools. Parents must now pay an average of $15,400 to put a son or daughter through a four-year private university. This is about $1,250 below the average annual income of a single household unit in Japan.

"There is a direct relationship between the rise in the living standard and the drop in the fertility rate," Yamaguchi said. "Having become accustomed to the amenities in life, many people, if given a choice between buying a car and having a baby, would pick the car."

Yamaguchi said that in 1976 the Institute projected that the population, now at 115 million, would climb to a peak of 140 million in the early 21st century. They now guess the population will peak at 130 million and then drop steadily, returning to present levels around the year 2020.

In a nation as crowded as Japan, a lower population would seem to be welcome, but it's not that simple, Yamaguchi said.

THE NEWSPAPER BIBLE

The man they couldn't arrest

The Jewish leaders were puzzled by this statement. "Where is he planning to go?" they asked.

What does he mean about our looking for him and not being able to find him, and, "You won't be able to come where I am?"

On the last day, the climax of the holidays, Jesus shouted to the crowds, "If anyone is thirsty, let him come to Me and drink."

For the Scriptures declare that rivers of living water shall flow from the inmost being of anyone who believes in Me.

(He was speaking of the Holy Spirit, who would be given to everyone believing in Him, but the Spirit had not yet been given, because Jesus had not yet returned to His glory in heaven.)

When the crowds heard Him say this, some of them declared, "This man surely is the prophet who will come just before the Messiah."

Others said, "He is the Messiah." Still others, "But he can't be! Will the Messiah come from Galilee? For the Scriptures clearly state that the Messiah will be born of the royal line of David, in Bethlehem, the village where David was born."

So the crowd was divided about Him. And some wanted Him arrested, but no one touched Him.

The Temple police who had been sent to arrest Him returned to the chief priests and Pharisees. "Why didn't you bring him in?" they demanded.

"He says such wonderful things!" they mumbled. "We've never heard anything like it."

"So you also have been led astray?" the Pharisees mocked.

"Is there a single one of us Jewish rulers or Pharisees who believes he is the Messiah?"

These stupid crowds do, yes; but what do they know about it? A came upon them anyway!"

Then Nicodemus spoke up. (Remember him? He was the Jewish leader who came secretly to interview Jesus.)

"Is it legal to convict a man before he is even tried?" he asked.

They replied, "Are you a wretched Galilean too? Search the Scriptures and see for yourself—no prophets will come from Galilee!"

'You're Invited' set at MC

James Bramlett, director of the Midland College Community Services Department, has announced the scheduling of a new two-evening short course to be held April 28 and May 5 in the MC Roadrunner Room.

Titled "You're Invited," the two sessions explain the art of entertaining small or large groups of people. Instruction will be by Lola Igou.

"We've looked forward to being able to offer this course," Bramlett said. "It will focus on the behind-the-scenes arrangements that are vital to preparing a successful party."

"Lola Igou's information will appeal to all age groups, young executives and their wives, single career people, anyone who has occasion to entertain."

During the first session Miss Igou will discuss the ways to prepare a guest list and time schedule, methods of selecting the proper menu, how to decide on the right combination of foods, formal and informal table settings and various buffet arrangements.

A demonstration of party tray decorations and hints about the little extras that enhance the overall party atmosphere will be given during the second session.

Classes will meet 7-9:30 p.m. both evenings and the course fee is $6.

Those interested in attending may pre-register now in room 156 of the Midland College Administration Building. The office will remain open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays, including the lunch hour.

More information may be obtained by calling 684-7851, extension 147 or 216.

Quit smoking, then talk diet

Dear Dr. Solomon: Although I have been smoking two to three packs of cigarettes a day for the past eight years, I am now at the point where I believe I can give them up without too much difficulty; however, I am concerned that this may cause me to gain weight. Do you have any suggestions about how to give up cigarettes without putting on unwanted, unhealthy and unattractive pounds? — Ms. M.F.

Dear Ms. F.: Let's take this one step at a time. If you have reached the point where you feel you can stop smoking—stop! The benefits you will realize will outweigh the disadvantages of any ordinary gain in weight. Moreover, through the years of my Baltimore practice in weight control and obesity, I have seen that initiating a program of weight control is a much simpler task than breaking a lengthy addiction to cigarettes.

While some people do show a tendency to gain weight after giving up cigarettes, this is not a universal phenomenon. Two University of Nebraska psychologists, James Fix and David M. Daughton, say it is the biological craving for cigarettes that accounts for an individual's addiction, and that increased eating and a consequent gain in weight are not inevitable consequences of stopping.

They suggest that people who maintain a given level of nicotine in the bloodstream do not have the urge to smoke; further, since acidic foods tend to reduce the supply of nicotine in the blood, they recommend that individuals who are trying to stop smoking should eat foods with a high alkaline content. In support of their theory, the two psychologists report on a study in which students were given sodium bicarbonate, which is highly alkaline. As expected, the desire to smoke decreased as acid levels were lowered.

While adding sodium bicarbonate to a diet may not be a practical solution to the problem, the consumption of highly alkaline foods certainly is. Many of these foods, such as vegetables, are not only low in calories but nutritious as well. Specific foods that may be included in a high-alkaline diet are raisins, lima beans, spinach, brussels sprouts and carrots. Other foods which are suitable for a person who is trying to stop smoking, but which are not as highly alkaline, include cucumbers, celery, potatoes, peaches, bananas, tomatoes, apples and milk.

Don't let your concern for a potential risk deter you from giving up a present risk. A gain in weight can be handled much more easily than the consequences of heavy cigarette smoking over a period of years.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is calcium present in any foods other than milk and milk products? — Jan.

Dear Jan: While milk and milk products are outstanding sources of calcium, significant amounts also are found in dark green leafy vegetables such as collards, kale, mustard greens and turnip greens. Calcium can also be obtained from canned salmon if the bones are consumed.

If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Census taker discovers to must answer, not ask

OLD LYME, Conn. (AP) — Instead of just asking the questions, door-to-door census taker Art Smith had to answer some the other day — at the police station. That'll teach him not to let his blue-and-white identification badge blow away in the wind again.

He was taken into custody last week after a woman, who didn't believe Smith's story about a lost badge and sent him packing, called state police.

The troopers released Smith, crew leader for a Groton-based federal Census Bureau work force operating in southeastern Connecticut, after checking his story.

But rumors about a census-taker impersonator dogged his path even after he got another badge.

Gifts to native village total $500,000

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Early each morning, 80-year-old Lucille Juric walks into the New Era, as she has for 42 years, and starts preparing food for patrons of her bar and restaurant.

While the first customers of the day file into the unpretentious eatery near an Akron tire factory, the midday sun beats down 5,000 miles away in the village of Krusevo, Yugoslavia, on a chiseled stone bust of a woman widely known there as "Teta Lucie" — Aunt Lucy.

The bust was erected in gratitude for the gifts Lucille Juric presented to the village where she was born — a new medical clinic and ambulance, a new elementary school, a scholarship fund, new pews for the monastery and repairs to St. George's Church.

It is not easy to link Mrs. Juric, a simple, self-effacing woman, with the woman who has donated upwards of $500,000 for projects in her native land. For more than a year, she refused to talk to reporters inquiring about stories of her good works.

"Oh, it's nothing, really," she would say, turning red and waving her strong hands in front of her face.

Finally, she was confronted with translations of stories from Yugoslavian newspapers. "Then there's nothing more for me to tell you," she said. "But please don't make it look like I'm bragging."

Since the mid-1940s, Mrs. Juric's gifts have made her a symbol of good will from the bustling streets of Belgrade to the mountainous regions of Dalmatia near the Adriatic Sea.

To encourage doctors, nurses and other needed professionals to stay in her native mountains, she put nearly $80,000 into a scholarship fund. Interest from the fund currently supports 10 students.

She has spent more than $15,000 in a continuing program to stock an English-language book collection at Belgrade University in memory of her late husband, Rade Juric.

Attorney Sam Goldman, who prepared the legal groundwork for her initial donations to build the clinic, said foreign gifts are not tax-deductible and Mrs. Jusic benefit is only the good feeling of "seeing joy in others."

"She has given everything away," he said. "She is not a wealthy woman." Some of her gifts were financed by selling real estate she owned in Akron.

New strain may cut cotton dust

HILTON HEAD, S.C. (AP) — Dust levels in textile mills may be reduced through the development of new strains of cotton, but genetics alone will not eliminate the textile industry's cotton-dust problem, a cotton researcher says.

Henry W. Webb, director of cotton-breeding research for Coker's Pedreed Seed Co. in Hartsville, S.C., said Tuesday that developing more varieties of cotton could aid in reducing cotton dust in the textile plants.

Webb said early season varieties of cotton with smaller plants and more fruit tend to cause less dust.

"Healthier plants with mature fibers that don't break are also better," Webb told 200 fiber buyers at the annual meeting of the fiberbuyers' division of the N.C. Textile Manufacturers Association.

He said work also is under way to develop cotton that will either shed bract, smaller leaves at the bottom of the plant, or make the boll more accessible to the picker.

Cotton dust and its impact on the health of mill workers is a major problem facing the textile industry. Some researchers have said that bract in cotton contains agents that cause brown lung, or byssinosis, in cotton-mill workers.

Webb said cotton breeders also are working to develop varieties that can withstand cleaning to remove dust fibers before being spun into yarn.

"Cotton breeding, as any genetic research, is a long-term proposition," Webb said. "It takes a minimum of 15 years to develop a new strain of cotton."

KID VALLEY, Wash. (AP) — It's lonely being a soldier, working the graveyard shift guarding a volcano miles away that you can't even see.

Between 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. you don't get many tourists at your roadblock on Washington 504.

The big attraction, Mount St. Helens, is 30 miles away.

It's dark and drizzly. Birds aren't even up and raptors keep to themselves in the surrounding woods.

Trying to keep warm in the dawn's early light, National Guard Sgt. Darryl Jones and Pfc. Jeffrey Newlin huddle near an aidier fire blazing in a 50-gallon drum. With them is State Patrol Trooper Owen Wilson.

The soldiers carry rifles and wear helmets and baggy khaki uniforms — all dressed up and nowhere to go, nothing to do.

Col. Val E. McCreary, chief of staff, Army Division of the Guard, said the National Guardsmen assigned to help with Mount St. Helens crowd control have been issued no ammunition, although it is available if needed.

"Last night we had maybe two tourists," said Wilson, comparing the quiet to the 2,500 cars turned away Easter Sunday by the daytime crew. He noted that the other evening — before he came on shift — there was a rush of excitement when two British Columbia men in a van wanted to head up to the volcano with hang gliders.

"They probably thought they could get an updraft," he said.

They were sent back.

How long will the roadblock last? "I'm sure it's up to the volcano," said Jones.

"Too long," said Barbara Brown, who runs the Kid Valley Restaurant about four miles inside the roadblock. The cozy place profited from a glut of tourists for about a week and a half, but then the roadblock was moved farther from the mountain, making the restaurant inaccessible except to a few loggers who are allowed in the area.

Mrs. Brown said last Friday morning she spent $1,000 for additional supplies for tourists. Last Friday afternoon the roadblock "annihilated us."

Wilson noted ironically that the best view of the volcano is below the roadblock anyway, at Silver Lake on Washington 504, not far from busy Interstate 5.

Three quakes jolt volcano

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Mount St. Helens was jolted early today by three earthquakes in just over an hour — the first time the volcano has been rocked by such strong tremors in such a short period since it began erupting in March.

The quakes registered 4.2 on the Richter scale at 1:02 a.m., 4.0 at 1:28 a.m. and 4.5 at 2:13 a.m., said Norm Anderson of the U.S. Forest Service.

The volcano on Tuesday spewed ice, ash and steam in the longest eruption in nearly two weeks as a glacier near the volcano's summit melted into its crater, renewing chances of mudslides.

While the mountain belched for almost 4 1/2 hours Tuesday, aerial observers reported "a good chunk" of the Wishbone Glacier near the summit had broken off into the volcano's crater, said Rich Scott, a U.S. Forest Service spokesman.

"If the crater keeps moving out (toward the glacier) it will certainly increase our alertness for a mudflow into the north fork of the Toutle River," said Donald Mullineux of the U.S. Geological Survey.

"This could be an event for which we have no warning."

The glacier is being melted by heat from magma inside the mountain.

The 4 1/2 hour eruption — with less than 15 minutes of quiet — occurred in the morning, and was followed by another blast of huge chunks of ice, probably glacial, in the afternoon, scientists said.

The peak quivered vigorously Tuesday, including overlapping earthquakes, but scientists say the volcano has stabilized and the current danger is from flooding or mudflows rather than a major eruption of molten rock.

"It's in a stable mode of eruption. It is still a minor eruption," Mullineux said of the 9,677-foot peak.

A double-event quake — two quakes that overlap — registered 4.5 on the Richter scale at 11:35 a.m., according to University of Washington seismologists.

Homeowners and workers were being allowed to return to the area Tuesday, but tourists were kept at a distance. The state will continue a 24-hour roadblock at the junction of State Routes 504 and 505 that lead to Spirit Lake on the northwest flank of the mountain.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude.
