Carter turns screws on still-defiant Iran; Allies' support grows

By The Associated Press

Defiant Iranian leaders declared today their country can resist mounting U.S. economic pressure. But the sanctions campaign was picking up steam among American allies, with Australia and Denmark signaling they are ready to close ranks with President Carter.

Carter on Thursday tightened a few more economic screws on Iran and promised military action if the 50 U.S. Embassy hostages are not freed. Iranian President Abolhasan Bani Sadr said in an interview with Iran's official Pars news agency today that he is clear to us. Carter will do all he can to force the Iranians to release the American captives.

But we shall provide the means of our assistance," he said. Bani Sadr has said repeatedly Iran has prepared for months for such U.S. pressure, even a naval blockade.

Another leading revolutionary, Ayatollah Sadegh Khalkhali, told the Muslim Sabbath prayer meeting at Tehran Tuesday that we cannot have any negotiation and mediation with the United States.

Carter is trying to enlist the help of U.S. allies in squeezing Iran economically, and at a meeting early next week the foreign ministers of the nine European Common Market nations are expected to take some anti-Iranian steps. But Portugal has already ordered a trade ban with Iran, and Denmark and Australia today appeared ready to join in the sanctions.

After government meetings today in Copenhagen, Danish Prime Minister Anker Joergensen announced his government is ready to do everything to support U.S. efforts. He indicated Denmark would not order trade restrictions without first coordinating actions with its eight Common Market partners next week.

In Canberra officials said the Australian government would probably decide Monday to order at least partial bans on machinery, iron and steel exports to Iran.

Representatives of the Common Market nations in the European Parliament urged the nine governments Thursday to consider breaking diplomatic relations with Iran, as Carter did April 7.

On Thursday, Carter banned U.S. exports from Iran, ordered the freezing for U.S. use or sale of impounded military equipment purchased by Iran, said he would seek congressional authority to pay reparations to the hostages and their families out of more than $8 billion in Iranian assets he froze in November, barred financial transactions with anyone in Iran, except those involved in journalism, and prohibited Americans other than journalists from traveling to Iran without U.S. government permission.

He told a news conference in Washington he was considering banning shipments of U.S. food and medicine to Iran and blocking its use of IntelSat, the international communications satellite. And he warned that if non-military action did not result in the freeing of the 53 American hostages held in Tehran, then the only next step available that I can see would be some sort of military action which is the prerogative and the right of the United States under these circumstances.

Aerial mining of Iran's ports at the head of the Persian Gulf appeared to be the most likely military action. U.S. naval warfare specialists said A-6 attack planes like the ones that mined North Vietnam's ports could easily do the job from the two U.S. aircraft carriers now in the Arabian Sea.

The main objective would be to close the oil export terminal at Kharg Island, where tankers load up for Western Europe and Japan.

Iranian revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh scoffed at Carter and the U.S. allies. They said Iran would counter any sanctions or naval blockade. Khomeini urged the Iranian people to be ready to defend the country if attacked.

Iran should not be beset by fears because they want to besiege it economically or militarily. We are not afraid of an economic blockade," the Shia Muslim patriarch told "popular mobilization committees." Radio Tehran reported.

Carter's main concern is to be president for another four years in order to commit crimes for another four years.

Nuts to you, Iran, you know where you can put your pistachios

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The United States is well on its way to saying "nuts" to Iran, its chief supplier of pistachio nuts, industry experts say.

America, in fact, has enough pistachio nuts to last out the year, they say, despite the cutoff of substantial imports from Iran.

We will approach independence by 1981, depending on our consumption habits," Morris Mahlmann, special products manager for Tennessee West, said Thursday. Tennessee is a major processor of the popular nut. Iran has provided about two-thirds of the 30 million pounds of pistachio nuts eaten annually by Americans, Mahlmann said.

Administration sending help to housing industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is coming to the aid of a crippled housing industry, but it's not enough help to please homebuilders and realtors who are calling for additional emergency action.

The administration announced Thursday that it is supporting legislation to extend mortgage interest subsidies to more low- and middle-income homebuyers than currently qualify. The move could prompt an additional 100,000 housing starts this year, President Carter said.

Moreover, the Department of Housing and Urban Development will help builders obtain lower-cost loans to finance houses built, but not sold, because people can't afford sky high interest rates on mortgages. The help for builders will entail no real government spending, while the mortgage program involves an outlay in fiscal 1981 of $75 million.

Builders have been calling for $5 billion to $10 billion in emergency aid to subsidize low interest mortgages through a different program that proved highly successful during the last housing downturn in 1974-75.

This kind of large-scale program, however, has been termed inflationary and budget-busting by Carter aides and officials of the Federal Reserve Board.

The administration's more modest actions came a day after the Commerce Department reported a 22 percent plunge in housing starts in March to an annual rate of 1.04 million units — the lowest level since the 1974-75 recession.

The housing market is suffering the effects of anti-inflationary policies by the Federal Reserve Board and Carter, which have pushed mortgage rates to record levels ranging from 15 percent to 17 percent.

Those rates have effectively killed off demand for housing. Moreover, builders must pay 20 percent to 22 percent interest on construction loans.

The National Association of Home Builders said the administration's moves Thursday were a "step in the right direction."

Poor census showing, may be costly to West Texans

SAN ANGELO (AP) — West Texans could lose congressional representation government services and millions of dollars in federal funding because of a poor showing in the 1980 census, according to a West Texas Chamber of Commerce panel.

Panel members told the organization's convention in San Angelo Thursday that while Texas as a whole is booming, West Texas is growing at a slower rate.

A poor showing in the census could result in higher taxes and fewer services for West Texans, panel members said. Panel member Joe Collins of San Angelo said such vital West Texas issues as water could be hurt by redistricting resulting from a low census count.

You've got to have water around to help the population grow and if you lose representation there is less of a chance you'll get water," Collins said. West Texas "will show up as a cold spot" on the census map. The "hot spot" will be Houston and Dallas. Those are the focal points of political and economic power," said Richard Brown, Texas Municipal League's executive director.

Rhodesia now Zimbabwe

Grenade, jailbreak mar celebrations

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (AP) — Rhodesia became independent Zimbabwe today in celebrations marred by a grenade explosion that killed two persons and injured 27 and a jailbreak by some 60 prisoners from Salisbury's central prison.

The grenade was thrown into a group of black youths in Mufakose Township, six miles west of the city.

I can't give you any further details about this because we're too busy chasing bloody escaped prisoners," said police spokesman Seamus Power.

The prisoners, some of them considered highly dangerous, broke out shortly after the arrival of independent at midnight Thursday for the second time in 15 years. Some of the prisoners were recaptured quickly, and police scoured the city and suburbs throughout the day while a spotter plane flew overhead.

The official celebration went off smoothly, marked by dancing African tribeswomen, British pomp and a plea for reconciliation.

Prime Minister Robert Mugabe, who led the largest black guerrilla faction in seven years of bloody civil war for majority rule, broadcast an appeal for unity to the white minority, saying, "If yesterday I fought you as an enemy, today you have become a friend and ally with the same national interest, loyalty, rights and duties as myself. If yesterday you hated me, today you cannot avoid the love that binds me to you."

At midnight, a British army sergeant lowered the Union Jack on Britain's last African colony. A wild cheer erupted from the 40,000 spectators, mostly black, crowded into Rufaro soccer stadium to hall the formal end of nine decades of white domination. Prince Charles, the heir to the British throne, handed over power to President Canaan Banana, who swore in Mugabe as prime minister.

Replacing the British flag, a former guerrilla raised Zimbabwe's five-color banner — black for the nation's 6 million blacks, white for the 250,000 whites, green for the earth, yellow for minerals and red for the 20,000 who died in the civil war. U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, attending the ceremonies, sent Mugabe a letter anticipating that Zimbabwe would join the world organization and offering U.N. assistance to overcome the ravages of the civil war.

Other foreign dignitaries included four presidents, seven prime ministers and envoys from nearly 100 countries. Representing the United States at the ceremonies were elder statesman Averell Harriman, 88, former U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young and Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson.

Black youths sang liberation songs in downtown Salisbury, four miles north of the stadium.

New post office branch scheduled for Midland

Midland is on the books for a new Post Office to replace the overcrowded facility at 2309 W. Louisiana Ave. The U.S. Postal Service has announced it is looking for a site to construct a new Village Station Post Office, according to David Holster, postmaster.

A site is needed in an area bounded by West Golf Course Road, North Big Spring Street, West Wall Street and Powell Street. Necessary for the structure is a site 130,000 square feet or a lot with a minimum dimension of 250 by 300 feet, said Holster.

Property owners should submit their site offerings by May 16 to Robert J. Blaes, realty management and acquisition specialist, Field Real Estate and Buildings Office, U.S. Postal Service, P.O. Drawer 239, Dallas, 75221, or telephone 214-767-5492.

Holster explained the Village Station was built in 1952 and the character of the city in that section has changed. "The location is good and it (the station) has more than served its purpose," he said.

However, it has become too small for that section of Midland and parking has become inadequate. The new site will be three to four times larger than the location on Louisiana.

The area under consideration is large, he admitted, but the new Postal Station has to be there and the area already is built up.

Final decision on the site will be made by the Dallas real estate office, and will be based upon location, accessibility, price and suitability. "The land must lend itself to construction of a post office," said Holster. "For example, a triangular piece of land won't work."

He expects the final decision within 30 days of May 16. The U.S. Postal Service will pay the owner for the land with the price based upon the current market price per square foot in that area, said Holster. "We will try to get the best buy," he added.

The postmaster said he hopes the new building will be completed within two years, but coupled that thought with "We (Postal Service) don't move as quickly as we would like to."

Village Station currently is being leased and the contract should expire in a year or two. At that time it will go back to the owner, said Holster.

Begin refuses to yield on issues

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin, just returned from a Washington summit, said today Israel refused to yield on three major issues blocking autonomy talks — Jerusalem, security in the West Bank of the Jordan River and the powers of an autonomy council for 1.2 million Palestinian Arabs.

autonomy council would be limited "so it cannot turn into some kind of parliament" leading to a Palestinian state. Begin and President Carter agreed on a marathon autonomy talks due to start April 27 in Israel to strive for settlement of key issues on a form of self-government for Arabs under Israeli rule.

On the question of West Bank security, Begin said Israel would only discuss security arrangements on condition that Egypt accept the principle that Israel remains responsible for West Bank security. He said to take security out of Israel's hands would lead to "a bloodbath... not only people would be killed but peace would be murdered."

Women, Blacks sue Dallas bank for jobs

DALLAS (AP) — In the battle against sex and racial discrimination on the job, it has been the workers on the assembly lines, the workers in the factories, the workers in the typing pool who have led the way.

Until now. In Dallas, two black women — one who was refused a job, one who was fired after marrying a white man — have taken on the South's largest bank in a class-action suit aimed at top level management positions.

The suit charges that women and blacks have been denied an equal chance to rise into such white-collar jobs at the bank, jobs they claim are reserved almost exclusively for white males.

The target is Republic National Bank, the nation's 21st largest. The bank is faced with a demand to reinstate or give back pay to 15,000 women and blacks who worked, or applied for jobs, at Republic in the last 10 years.

An adverse ruling could cost the bank more than $50 million. A decision in the six-year case, which was tried last fall, is expected by the end of May.

Legal experts say the suit is unusual because it involves white-collar jobs, in which judgments on promotions and hiring are much more subjective than those involving blue-collar workers.

The two women filed their suit in 1973, seeking reinstatement and back pay. Ellen Johnson said she was turned down for the bank's management trainee program because she was a black woman; Joan Rance Vuyanch, a clerical worker, said she was fired because she married a white man.

Republic denied their charges, but bank officials admit they did not take the lawsuit seriously enough at first and lost some early rounds in the lengthy court fight.

One big round was lost in 1978, when U.S. District Judge Patrick Higginbotham allowed the case to become a class action suit. His ruling said the plaintiffs had shown the bank's "personnel practices have been infested to the core by racial and sex discrimination."

The decision referred to Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the section guaranteeing equal employment opportunities regardless of race or sex.

"There is bitter irony in the circumstances that after over 12 years under Title VII only three blacks have managed to meet the 'standards' for filling one of the 514 officer positions of the largest bank in the South ...," Higginbotham wrote. "To accept this 'statistic' with aplomb renders Title VII a cruel hoax."

In the five-week non-jury trial last fall, the bank admitted its officers are mostly white men. But attorney Wayne Bishop said in an interview then that there were not enough qualified women and blacks in the community for the jobs the bank had to offer.

"The bank has hired blacks and women in proportion to their availability in the labor market and has promoted and compensated them without regard to any consideration of race or sex," he said.

But Linda Coffee, one of three lawyers representing the plaintiffs, argued that statistics prove the case against Republic.

Referring to a local television advertisement that proclaims "Republic Bank IS Dallas," Ms. Coffee told a Dallas newspaper that if that is the case, "what the bank's lawyers have to prove is that Dallas is a city composed almost exclusively of white males."

Legal experts say a decision in the case could set significant precedents for future class action discrimination suits involving white-collar occupations.

"Most of the cases have been in lower-level jobs," said Southern Methodist University law school professor Neil Cogan, a civil rights specialist. "The courts are still working their way through the problems of this level of job. It's still relatively new ..."

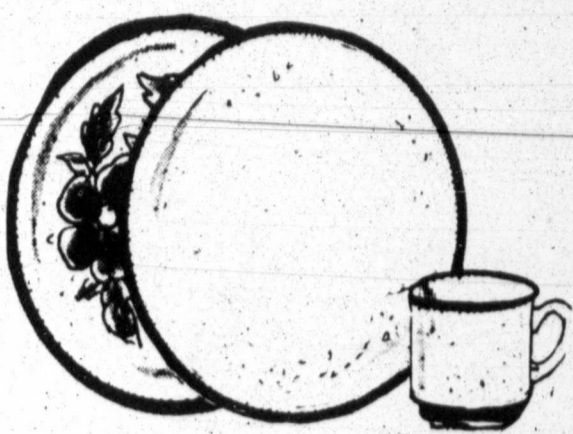

"You are not getting opinions which tell very clearly how an employer should treat persons at these upper-level jobs," he said. "We're still working on exactly how employers should make those decisions (who gets promoted) without systematically excluding some protected class."

Bank attorneys introduced statistics during the trial that they said showed Republic has as large a percentage of women and blacks in various upper level job categories as can be found in those jobs nationally.

But Bob Jones, attorney for the Dallas office of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, protested that argument.

Language proved fatal to Belgium government

Nick Thimmesch

BRUSSELS — As Belgium prepared to celebrate its 150th birthday and solidarity, its government fell last week (April 9) and national unity seemed to be in poor repair. What brought down the government for the second time in 16 months wasn't the economy, a juicy scandal or an international crisis, but a simple, age-old dispute over language.

The argument between the Dutch-speaking Flemings and the French-speaking Walloons has intensified in recent years, and amounts to ironic commentary on the notion that there can ever be a unified Europe. Indeed, Belgium is not the only nation to feel the strain of neo-nationalism: France, Spain and England also have lingual or ethnic groups demanding instant recognition and even independence.

In Belgium, neither the majority of Flemings nor Walloons seek independence. The question here is how to decentralize the government to the satisfaction of both factions. Since the revolution by the Flemings and Walloons against the ruling Dutch in 1830, Belgium has been a two-language nation ruled by a king of German blood but originally donated by the British.

Anyway, until the 1950s Belgium's government was in a centralized French framework, and the French-speaking Walloons dominated the country culturally and economically. Brussels, the capital, while surrounded by Flemish people, is itself 80 percent French-speaking.

But in the past generation, Flanders has prospered through a diversified industry and access to the sea, while Wallonia's once rich steel, coal and textile industry has sunk. Moreover, Flemings now outnumber Walloons, six million to four million. The Flemish now have the muscle.

Though the prime minister, Wilfried Martens, was one of their own, the Flemings in the senate rejected his plan to resolve the dispute over decentralization and how to give voice to the Flemish minority in Brussels.

King Baudouin, who may be the last true Belgian, flew home from his holiday in Spain to consult during the crisis and the formation of a new government. He is scheduled to leave next week for a rare visit to the United States to inaugurate the Belgian 150th anniversary celebration set for Washington, New York and the San Francisco Bay area.

The "Belgium Today" celebration is rather large scale for a small nation, with the help of funding by the U.S. and Belgian governments and the Bank of America Foundation. Never will so many Americans be exposed to so much about Belgium and its 10 million inhabitants.

Despite its ordeal over language, Belgium is a sound, productive nation, and a great friend of the United States. It exports 50 percent of its GNP, thus making it the world's highest per capita exporter. Its best-selling products are metals, textiles, petrochemicals, rugs and automobiles (Fords).

Due to access to seaports, principally Antwerp, cheaper land, and towns more receptive to new industry, Flanders boomed in the past 30 years. The steel of Wallonia has declined with all European steel, and the charming Walloonian town of Liege saw its last coal mine close recently. The challenge to Belgium is a national effort to develop new technologies and industries which will find a home in Wallonia. Unhappily, there are signs that the division over language is even affecting the thinking of Belgian industrialists and businessmen who more and more put their region first and Belgium second.

Another challenge is familiar to Americans — Belgium's immediate need to cut government spending and taxes, and to reform the welfare program which is out of control. Many of the 8 percent unemployed know they are better off staying home than working. Pensions can run to 75 percent of salary. It was only two years ago that Belgium's large and well-funded university system began charging tuition, and then only about $400 a year for Belgians.

Still, Belgium has one stunning economic statistic: Inflation was 5 percent in 1979, and will be under 7 percent in 1980.

There is much which is charming. Members of Belgium's parliament usually drive to their hometowns every night because the farthest city from Brussels is only two hours away. Splendid art, collected for 2,000 years, enriches museums in a half-dozen towns. Liege's French culture makes that city deserve a visit, and the medieval atmosphere in Brugge, Ghent and Antwerp, recommend those Flemish centers to visitors.

But no matter who a visitor sees or where he goes, the language question eventually surfaces. I was reminded of this after going to a screening of "An Evening of Belgian Television," scheduled to be broadcast on two-score PBS stations in the United States. The program opened on a virtual Flemish-Walloon split screen with the narrator from the French-speaking side bearing the Flemish name "Van de Moortel." Okay, Toots Thielemans' great music was worth it. And so it went, 50-50, Flemish and Walloon.

When it was over, my host saw that the brochure he supplied me was titled in Dutch only. "Please wait," he said, somewhat embarrassed. In a few minutes, he produced a piece of paper on which the title had been typed in French. My, oh, my.

BIBLE VERSE

I am not come to call the righteous but sinners to repentance. Luke 5:32

The Duke's lesson

It's pretty obvious that President Jimmy Carter doesn't watch old westerns, particularly those featuring the Duke, the late John Wayne.

Oh, he may have seen one or two. But to truly gain full benefit of the Duke's philosophy, you've got to watch — and study — numerous John Wayne movies.

There's a common thread running through most of those pictures. It brings the message that through clean, honest living you can succeed.

But it can be carried further than that. At the heart of the Duke were the virtues we all admired, the all-American man who was forthright and unyielding when he had to be; soft and loving when it counted.

When he told a bad guy, "If you wrong me, I'll get you...and that's all that counts," you knew he meant it. Deep in your heart you — and the bad guy — knew he'd follow the black hat man to the ends of the earth to ensure a just conclusion to the saga.

And he did just that in movie after movie.

That follow-through is essential. Without it the bad guys might come to believe they can actually put something over the Duke.

By assuring them of what the consequences of their actions would be — and letting them know he was not afraid nor hesitant to back up his promise — the Duke let the villains know exactly where they stood.

We all saw the results on the silver screen. And because of that image, John Wayne enjoyed tremendous respect among the people of this nation and the world.

But when Jimmy Carter tries to do the same thing, he comes off sounding like Don Knotts.

It's the lack of faith in Carter's resolve that has undermined his credibility. That's why he's stymied in his dealings with the Soviet Union and Iran's maniacal Ayatollah Khomeini.

When he tells the Soviet Union to get its troops out of Afghanistan by sundown or the ayatollah to let our people go, or else, they don't seem to worry about the OR ELSE. They know that Jimmy Carter wants to avoid military conflict at all costs and, thus, that he won't back up his tough talk.

President Carter wants to avoid a military action as much as the rest of the American people. But, perhaps, he's misreading the people he's supposed to be leading in this nation.

Given the choice between the Duke and the bumbling, half-hearted characters that Don Knotts often portrays, we believe the American people would gladly choose the Duke.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Iran crackdown won't lead to conflict

WASHINGTON — Despite dark hints of military reprisals, President Carter's crackdown on Iran won't lead to armed conflict if he adheres to his past pattern.

This is the assessment of military advisers who have dealt with the White House throughout the Iranian crisis. The introspective, indecisive Carter has held back from military measures at every turn in the emergency. Repeatedly he has approached a military confrontation but has always backed away at the last minute. Here is the confrontation record:

— When the shah began to lose his grip on Iran, the Joint Chiefs urged Carter to send a nuclear task force into the Persian Gulf as a show of support. They argued that the U.S. had to demonstrate its willingness to defend its oil sources. The president agreed to dispatch a naval force, led by the carrier Constellation, from the Philippines to the Persian Gulf. Then he decided the move was too provocative and canceled the order.

— After the Iranian militants overran the U.S. Embassy and seized the American hostages, Carter broadcast reassurances that the U.S. would not be provoked into a military response. Not until his advisers pleaded that it would be better to keep the Iranians guessing, did he speak of possible military reprisals and rush naval reinforcements into the area. But he continued to make so many conflicting statements that even his own Joint Chiefs were unsure of his policy.

— The president gave advisers the impression last December that he was ready to order a precision strike against the Iranian island of Kharg. This is Iran's great oil port in the Persian Gulf. The strangling of Iranian oil exports, the analysts calculated, would hurt Iran more than the West. They estimated that Ayatollah

Jack Anderson

Khomeini had to ship between 2.5 million and 3.5 million barrels of crude a day to avert an economic collapse. But Carter couldn't bring himself to sign the order.

— The president has moved 30 warships and 1,800 Marines into the crisis zone. The original intention was also to deploy at least one carrier task force right in the Persian Gulf. The move was scheduled last December, but he decided at the last minute to keep the ships at a safer, less provocative distance.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown, meanwhile, pressed for a larger military buildup in the troubled area. In a secret memo to the president, Brown reported: "By combining Marine Corps amphibious units normally afloat in the Mediterranean and the western Pacific, we could rapidly assemble and deploy a small Marine Amphibious Brigade. This would provide some limited near-term presence and combat capability ashore... Deployments above (this) level could be sustained for only a few weeks without causing severe personnel rotation and equipment maintenance problems." Carter has hesitated to make this extra commitment.

— Brown has asked the president for enough logistical support, according to a secret estimate, to maintain "approximately 10,000 Marines for approximately 15 days." But Carter has held up his approval.

— He is considering a naval blockade as his next move to tighten the screws on Iran. Intelligence reports warn that the Soviet Union has offered to help break the blockade if it is imposed. The president's inclination, military advisers say, is to back away from a military confrontation with the Soviets. But lately Carter has been under intense political pressure to end the Iranian stalemate. The same advisers who have privately deplored his hesitancy to take firm measures against Iran in the past, are now concerned that he might go too far and do something precipitous. Amateurs in the world power game, like Carter, sometimes tend to overreact; the professionals say.

THE ODDS COUPLE: Faced with apparent locks on their respective party nominations by Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan, Jimmy the Greek has been reduced to working out the odds on a vice presidential choice. And since Carter is unlikely to dump his vice president, that means the Republican running mate.

No one is an odds-on favorite as Reagan's choice, but Sens. Howard Baker of Tennessee and Richard Schweiker of Pennsylvania have an edge over the field with odds of 5 to 2. George Bush and Delaware Rep. Tom Evans come in next in Jimmy's book at 4 to 1, with Sens. John Danforth of Missouri and Paul Laxalt of Nevada coming in at 10 to 1.

If you insist on short odds, Jimmy says it's 4 to 5 that Reagan will choose one of the above.

Moving along into longshot territory, Jimmy quotes 15-to-1 odds on Jack Kemp, Bill Brock and Richard Lugar, 20-to-1 on Bob Dole and Jesse Helms and 30-to-1 on Phil Crane, William Simon and John Connally. People who bet on the color of a candidate's necktie might want John Anderson, at 500-to-1.

Jimmy won't put a price on former President Jerry Ford, though he figures it would be a dream ticket. His feeling that Betty Ford and Nancy Reagan don't get along makes a Reagan-Ford ticket too chancey to call.

WATCH ON WASTE: To reap, perchance, the perquisites of Congress — aye, there's the rubdown! The House squeezes more than $30,000 out of the taxpayers so congressmen can be given free massages — when they tire of the House gym's swimming pool, steam room, whirlpool baths and paddleball courts. The House masseur is paid $15,454 a year; oddly enough, the House masseuse gets $17,513.

— Evidently doubtful that the nation's mayors can do their jobs properly without advice from Washington, the Department of Housing and Urban Development recently spent some $170,000 for educational seminars on "how to be a better mayor," as a HUD official described the program. The mayors were given such hints as refusing phone calls during part of their day and setting aside a few hours for paperwork. HUD will also publish a book titled "The Role of the Mayor."

INSIDE REPORT:

Carter's 'pork and retribution' tactics faltering

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

PHILADELPHIA — Mayor William Green of Philadelphia is all but certain to endorse Sen. Edward M. Kennedy for president sometime this week, a potentially far-reaching event that points up defects in President Carter's unique re-election campaign.

That Bill Green should wait so long to endorse old pal and family friend Teddy Kennedy is partially attributable to the darker side of the Carter method: the implied threat of retribution against cities whose mayors oppose the president. But that same method's studied snubs of this city's new mayor have forced him to end up as an enemy.

A Green endorsement could be the added edge enabling Kennedy to win the Pennsylvania Democratic primary April 22, where Carter could drive a final stake through the Kennedy campaign's heart. Green backing Kennedy firms up an apparently substantial lead in Philadelphia (about 20 percent of the state Democratic vote) and also builds Kennedy's prestige elsewhere in the state.

The prospect of Kennedy's challenge being prolonged nationally by Philadelphia can be traced to the Carter method. It is light on lofty poetry and heavy on pedestrian elbow grease: meticulous attention to petty details such as ballot placement of delegates, social amenities and minor government largesse from Washington, surprise presidential telephone calls to political hacks. Its darker side is shrouded in vindictiveness and coercion.

That darker side is seen in Carter's attitude toward Philadelphia, a city 119 miles from Washington he has never visited as president. The overt reason for his absence was the embarrassing presence until January of Frank Rizzo as a maverick right-wing Democratic mayor. But Democratic politicians here believe Carter neither forgave nor forgot that Philadelphia voted against him in his climactic 1976 Pennsylvania primary triumph.

Replacement of Rizzo by the incomparably more congenial Green did not help. Green's personal ties with Kennedy led the White House inner circle to dismiss his professions of neutrality. That ignored this truth: Green, sobered by harsh realities of municipal finance, is appalled by Kennedy's open-handed economic liberalism.

Consequently, a little presidential romancing might have secured Green's neutrality. Instead, there was a cold shoulder, and not because of presidential preoccupation with Iran. "Invitations for tea at the White House came to everybody and his brother, but not to Bill," a Green insider told us. Carter has been busy telephoning low-level politicians such as city Registrar of Wills Ron Donatucci, Democratic leader of the 26th ward in South Philadelphia where the president needs help. No calls went to the mayor.

What Green has received from Washington is a little carrot and a little stick. The carrot: Secretary of Commerce Philip Klutznick came here to reveal that Philadelphia had won over Lynn, Mass., for a $2.2 million shoe research facility (Pennsylvania no longer manufactures shoes, but Massachusetts voted for Kennedy). The stick: Although legal impediments had been cleared, urban development grants for Philadelphia remained stalled in Washington.

That stall suggested a broader threat that this city would suffer cruelly if its mayor opposed the president. "I would rather that Bill kept neutral," one local Kennedy leader confided. "We need the federal money more than Kennedy needs Green."

The mayor has been playing it both ways. While he maintains public neutrality, his fund-raisers have raised money for Kennedy. David Glancy, Green's new hand-picked city chairman, has been officially neutral but privately pro-Kennedy.

Apart from future blockages in the federal money pipeline, the president's present budget cutbacks prompted quick retaliation. District attorney Edward Rendell, a dynamic new political presence here, reacted quickly to Carter's cut of law enforcement grants by breaking his self-imposed restriction on political endorsements and coming out for Kennedy. Simultaneously, there were signs of black votes turning away from Carter.

So, Green and his inner circle asked themselves just how real is the president's power to hurt or help Philadelphia. What had Mayor Richard Caliguiri's early endorsement of the president won for Pittsburgh? "A lot of invitations to the White House," replies a close associate of Caliguiri.

At this writing, Green appeared ready to join the Kennedy trend in a city where unemployment always has eclipsed moralizing as a political issue, and, says a friend, "make himself feel better by getting right with Teddy." That ultimately may not detract Carter's majestic path to a second term. But if it does, it will call into question the politics of pork, threats and retribution as practiced by the president's men.

Miss Rixon is the subject of a legal fight Penthouse Magazine is having with the Eastman Kodak Company over the Kodak Company's refusal to return some 524 of 3,500 slides Penthouse sent to the film giant for processing. The allegedly lewd photographs are of Miss Rixon, the magazine's "Pet of the Year." (AP Laserphoto)

Penthouse denied 'lewd' photos

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — Penthouse magazine called Eastman Kodak Co. "the high priests of morality," and the photography firm labeled the slides of Penthouse's "Pet of the Year" lewd.

But a Superior Court judge, who agreed the dispute raised legal issues with "novel implications," refused on Thursday to issue a preliminary order forcing Kodak to return the slides — and Penthouse promised to pursue the case.

Judge Sherwin D. Lester, who is holding the controversial color slides in his chambers, said Penthouse International Ltd. would not suffer immediate damage if the slides of "Pet of the Year" Cheryl Rixon were withheld until the suit is resolved.

The magazine has published photographs of Ms. Rixon that the company returned, but Penthouse attorney Roy Grutman argued that one of the remaining slides might have the "evanescent, magical" quality needed for a future issue.

The case began last year when Eastman Kodak refused to return 524 of about 3,500 slides submitted by Penthouse to its Fair Lawn processing plant in July and August, according to the judge.

The company contended the slides showed "lewd exhibition of female genitals" and said it was worried about its liability in the event of an obscenity prosecution.

Grutman, during the hearing Thursday, called Eastman Kodak "high priests of morality and blue stockings." He criticized it as a "supercensor," that used an untrained senior laboratory worker "to make it the sanctimonious guardian of public morality."

He argued the adult magazine, taken as a whole, is a publication with redeeming social value and is not "some sleazy photographer taking ... shots for his own amusement."

"Many of these photographs are erotic, and there is nothing wrong with erotic photographs, as with erotic paintings," Grutman said.

William J. Dill, Jr., representing Eastman Kodak, labeled Grutman's arguments "rhetoric." The key question, he argued, was whether the company could be criminally prosecuted for processing the disputed Penthouse photographs.

"Kodak's concern is that it be relieved of prosecution in the transportation, in commerce, of pictures which are abhorrent, which are obscene at the least," Dill said.

He said the company's contract with Penthouse allowed it to withhold photographs in violation of state and federal obscenity laws.

Lester acknowledged the danger Eastman Kodak could face in possible violation of antitrust laws if it made a concession for selected customers or barred them from a processing service Penthouse acknowledged as "the best."

He said Penthouse described its adversary as "a cog in the editorial process," raising a question of whether Eastman Kodak had control over the publication by determining which photographs would be processed.

The judge said the case also could have ramifications for individual photographers who send film to Eastman Kodak for processing.

"We're not talking about the pile of films," Lester said, resting his hand on a brown envelope containing the slides. "We're talking about rights."

Kennedy nomination: How it could happen

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — It is August. Inflation is raging at an annual rate of 22 percent or 23 percent. The American hostages remain imprisoned in Iran.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy still trails President Carter in delegates to the Democratic National Convention, but has run up a big string of wins in the later primaries. And Carter looks like he would be a certain loser to Republican nominee Ronald Reagan in the November election.

Under this scenario, constructed by Kennedy's aides, the Democratic National Convention turns its back on Jimmy Carter, whether he arrives at the party meeting with the 1,666 delegates he needs for the nomination or not.

"This is not some subterfuge," Richard Stearns, a Kennedy delegate hunter said Thursday. "This is not some parliamentary trick. The pressure would have to come from Carter's supporters at the convention" who would approve a rules change to make it all work.

As it stands now, most of Carter's delegates — and he is far ahead in the numbers — are committed to stand by the president on the first ballot, some to stand with him as long as he is a candidate.

But a rules change, which would need the approval by the convention itself, would free all 3,331 delegates to vote for either Carter, Kennedy or even a third candidate.

While Stearns and other Kennedy aides insist such a turn of events would merely reflect a "set of political circumstances," Carter partisans view it otherwise.

Democratic National Committee Chairman John White called on Kennedy Wednesday to renounce use of such a strategy. "This is the most crudely unethical, public move I've seen in politics," White said.

Kennedy is badly trailing Carter in delegates to the Democratic National Convention, 925.3 to 470.1, with 1,666 required for the nomination. And the Massachusetts senator faces the formidable task of having to win 62 percent of the delegates still to be picked if he is to arrive at the New York convention with enough support to claim the nomination outright.

Kennedy's aides continue to insist that a clean-cut victory remains a possibility, despite the president's huge delegate lead.

And Kennedy said the same thing as he campaigned Thursday in Pennsylvania, where 185 delegates are at stake in next week's primary. "I realize that we're the underdogs in the course of this campaign," he told an audience of steelworkers in Homestead before returning home to Washington at night for a day and a half of rest at home.

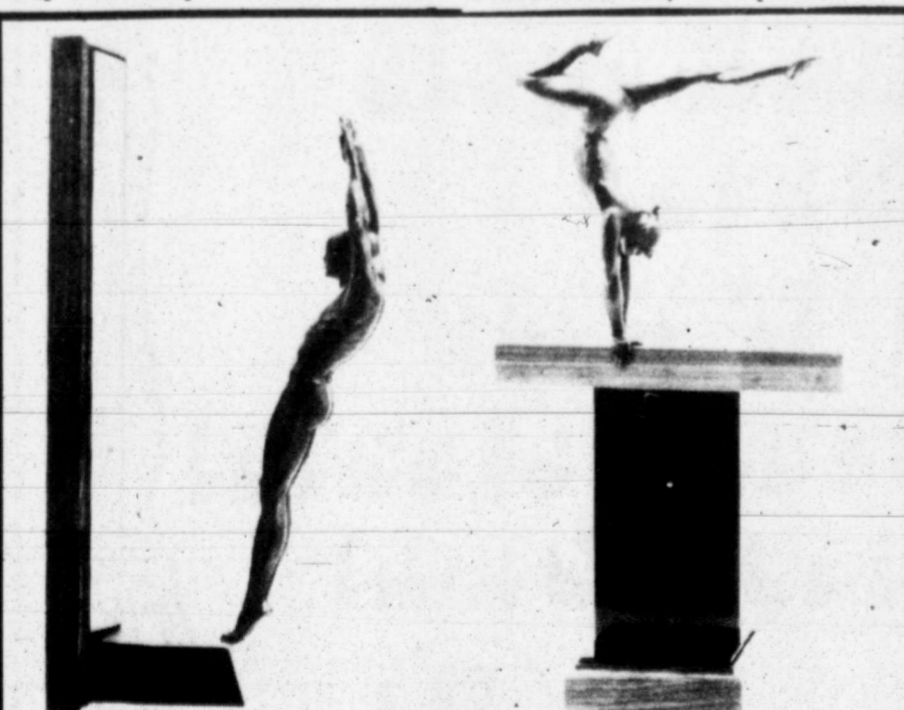

"I know that there are voters who say the mathematics won't work, even if you do well in Pennsylvania you just can't add it up all the way. I reject that."

Kennedy also listened, grinning, as he sat in a Philadelphia elementary school class Thursday and heard students recite the fable of how the steady, never-say-die tortoise finally passed by the fast but erratic hare.

Steven Rannels, 6, spoke the final lines: "To come in first you cannot stop, you must go on, and on, and on."

Kennedy just smiled when the teacher asked him if he agreed with that moral.

He said it another way when asked about his intentions in an interview on KDKA-TV in Pittsburgh. "I didn't get in the race to lose," he replied.

Reagan leaves 'em satisfied

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) - At almost every campaign stop, Ronald Reagan is introduced as the next president of the United States. It prompts him to make an aw shucks face and say he will get his speech over with fast so he can take questions.

"I don't want to take too much time," is how he puts it. "I'm going to say a few words and then I'm going to get into a dialogue because if I'm going to ask for your vote, you've got the right to ask me what you want to know."

The ask-anything invitation goes over big and Reagan gets a wide variety of questions. The former actor handles the give-and-take with ease.

He sends audiences away with the feeling he's answered the questions. And he's able to make questioners feel he agrees with them, even when Reagan doesn't.

The Republican front-runner, who campaigned today at the Alamo, gave a typical performance Thursday, standing in bright sunshine at the Beaumont, Texas airport after a reception that included cheers led by high school pom-pom girls, a band rendition of "This Is My Country," and the losing of a plume of red, white and blue balloons.

After an opening joke about the Democrats, Reagan talks about one of the standard themes: Carter's "inept" handling of inflation; Carter's "foreign policy bordering on appeasement"; energy; a defense "strengthened to the point where no other nation on earth can raise a hand against us."

At some point, Reagan lists America's major troubles and say, "I submit that an administration that can do all that in three years deserves to be thrown out."

During the Q-and-A period, there always are one or two of a parochial nature. At Beaumont, it concerns illegal aliens. At a fund-raising dinner in Houston later, it is a question from a motorcyclist about safety gear requirements.

Here is a sampler of typical audience questions and Reagan answers:

-Iran: "There's nothing wrong with what he (Carter) did, except it could have been done five months ago."

-Excessive regulation: "It's time to tell the government of the United States it is neither teacher nor clergyman nor a mom and pop. It is the public servant."

-Government spending: "There is enough fat in the federal government that if we rendered it and made soap out of it, we could wash the world."

-Energy: "He (Carter) led us to believe we are an energy-poor country. There is more oil and gas yet to be found in the United States than we have so far used. Get the government out of the energy industry."

And always Reagan has a big finish: "We've betrayed friends and allies. They no longer feel they can trust us. ... the president tells us we've got to ratify the SALT II treaty because no one will like us; the president tells us we've got to give away the Panama Canal because no-one will like us if we don't; I think it is time for us to tell him we don't care whether they like us or not, we want to be respected."

Carter predicts 'mild, short' recession

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter says Americans face "pain and ... disruptions" from the economic recession that is apparently underway. But he also says there's some encouraging news on inflation.

And he predicted the recession will be "mild and short," a view that contradicts a number of economists and government officials, who say the downturn could be severe.

Following Carter's remarks at a nationally televised news conference Thursday, the government was providing fresh information on the economy with today's report on the gross national product for the year's first three months.

The GNP, which measures the total output of goods and services, expanded at an annual rate of 2 percent in the fourth quarter of last year, well above recession levels.

Today's figures, however, were expected to show that economic growth had slowed sharply. A recession is traditionally defined as two consecutive quarters of declining output.

In recent days, several prominent economists, including Nancy Teeters, a member of the Federal Reserve Board, have said they believe a recession started in late March or early April. A sharp decline in housing starts in March and auto industry layoffs that now approach 250,000 persons back them up.

Carter agreed. "Recent economic statistics suggest our economy has slowed down and has probably entered a period of recession," Carter told his news conference.

He said he is "deeply concerned" over the impact of the downturn on individual Americans. "I know the pain and I know the disruptions and the heartache that lie below cold statistics," he added.

The administration is predicting a decline in economic output of 0.4 percent this year with unemployment rising to 7.2 percent from the current 6.2 percent. However, a top government official has said he thinks the GNP will decline by about 1.5 percent with a rise in joblessness to 8 percent.

But Carter said the pain of a recession is necessary to curb inflation and declared that his anti-inflation program, which stresses high interest rates and reduced government spending, already is helping ease pressure on prices.

"If we maintain self-discipline, all of us, this program will work to cut inflation, reduce interest rates and to restore conditions for healthy growth of both jobs and economic output," he said.

He said the current 18 percent inflation rate could be reduced to 10 percent, or even below, within a few months if oil prices do not increase sharply again and if mortgage interest rates fall 2 percentage points to 14 percent.

"We anticipate a substantial reduction in the inflation rate in the next few months," the president said, although not claiming that his program would be largely responsible for such a drop. Most economists predict inflation will ease somewhat in the second half of the year even without Carter's program.

Carter also said the government will provide support to build an additional 100,000 subsidized housing units for low- and middle-income people to help ease the effect of high interest rates on the housing industry.

There were these other economic developments Thursday:

-The Federal Reserve Board said it will make as much as $3 billion available to banks for lending at preferential interest rates to farmers and small businessmen hard-pressed by high interest rates.

-The Department of Housing and Urban Development announced it will help builders obtain loans on unsold houses and extend subsidies for low-income buyers at a cost of about $160 million.

-The Commerce Department said Americans' personal income increased by $15.6 billion in March, or 0.8 percent.

Estes, Neill join hospital directors

Pat Estes and Martin Neill were sworn in during Thursday's meeting of the Midland County Hospital District Board of Directors. Conducting the 10-minute ceremony was District Judge Barbara Culver. Mrs. Estes was re-elected to her position and Neill assumed the position vacated by Frank Cowden Jr., who chose not to run for another term. Neither person was challenged for the positions during the April 5 election. In a special tribute to Cowden, Edwin Magruder Jr., president of the board, presented a plaque to Cowden recognizing the contributions he has made to the Midland County Hospital District. Directors re-elected Magruder as president of the board, Dr. Henri Mast as vice president and Mrs. Estes as secretary. Robert Abernathy, MMH assistant administrator for finance, reported on actions taken by hospital trustees in their Wednesday meeting. Included in his report was the hospital's $27,771 deficit for March 21; the purchase of a blood counting machine, the salary base adjustment of hospital clerical staff from $600 to $700 and the use of Wyatt and Company to study hospital insurance needs. There would be no transfer of funds from the district to the hospi-

Steelworkers on top

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The United Steelworkers union says its new three-year pact with the nation's biggest steelmakers will keep mill workers "at the top of the economic ladder."

And while the financially strapped industry won't say how much the settlement is going to cost, its chief bargainer admits it's "expensive." Union Vice President Joseph Odoorich and chief industry negotiator J. Bruce Johnston of U.S. Steel Corp. officially signed the new agreement at a press conference Thursday, two days after the union's ratifying committee voted 333-42 to accept it.

Johnston declined to say what the contract will cost the nine signatory companies who employ 286,000 workers. About 200 smaller companies employing 170,000 workers will pattern their contracts after the master agreement.

"That's almost impossible to assess," said Johnston, who also wouldn't speculate on the contract's effect on steel prices. Pricing decisions, he said, are up to individual companies.

Johnston estimated wage increases including cost-of-living provisions could range from 30 percent to 37 percent, depending on the rate of inflation.

Under provisions of the Carter administration's anti-inflation standards, the wage increases will amount to about 22 percent during the three-year period, or "well within guidelines," Johnston said. The percentage figures differ because of what Johnston called "guideline math," which exempts some cost-of-living provisions.

"This is a very competitive settlement ... It is an expensive agreement, but I have not seen any agreement in our inflationary society that has not been expensive in major industries," he said.

Johnston called a published figure of a $5 billion cost to steelmakers "pure speculation." But a union source who asked to remain anonymous said he believes the figure is conservative.

"We have a good agreement. It is a responsible agreement," said Odoorich, who replaced Lloyd McBride when the union president was hospitalized earlier this month.

The talks were held under the Experimental Negotiating Agreement (ENA), which banned a nationwide strike in favor of binding arbitration of unresolved issues.

But in return for the no-strike pledge, the companies guaranteed the USW a 3 percent wage increase before the talks even began, continued cost-of-living protection and a $150 bonus to each covered worker.

ENA was established in 1973, but some steel companies are unhappy with it because inflation has made it so expensive. Talks on the future of the ENA will reconvene shortly, Johnston said.

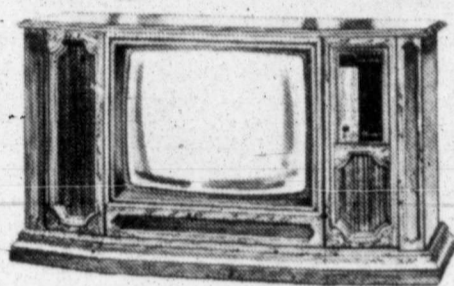

The contract provides 60 cents an hour in wage increases and about 24 cents an hour in pay differentials. The average steelworker now earns about $11 an hour.

The cost-of-living formula, which provides 1-cent-an-hour-for-each 0.3-point rise in the consumer price index, is expected to yield another $2.60 an hour assuming an annual inflation rate of 11 percent, the union said. Since 1977, the formula has added $1.86 an hour to steelworker wages.

Automakers' layoffs decline

DETROIT (AP) — Layoffs among U.S. auto production workers will take a small dip next week, as the industry braces for large cutbacks announced earlier in the week by the two biggest companies.

Layoffs among the five major U.S. companies will fall from more than 205,000 to more than 192,000, the companies said Thursday. It is the second week of decline in a row.

In the totals, the number of workers on open-ended layoff will rise from 163,250 to 169,550. Recalls in plants on week or two-week shutdowns will bring the number on temporary furlough down from 41,900 to 22,850.

On Tuesday, Ford Motor Co. announced it would let go about 15,000 workers, 6,100 of them from the white collar ranks, and close three plants. General Motors Corp. followed a day later with an announcement that it was dropping 12,000 production workers.

Ford's actions extend into August and GM's extend into next month.

GM disclosed Thursday that it had laid off 2,100 white-collar workers for an indefinite period recently, almost all of them idled in connection with assembly plant cutbacks. GM has idled three plants until the new model year and has dropped shifts from 21 plants since July.

Temporary production layoffs announced by the No. 1 producer totaled 10,000 in three plants next week compared with 16,950 this week. GM said its indefinite layoffs had risen from 80,000 to 82,000.

Ford said its short-term layoffs would fall from 19,150 from eight plants to 7,650 in three, but its indefinite furloughs had risen from 41,000 to 43,200.

Chrysler Corp. will idle 1,700 briefly, down from 5,800. Chrysler's open-ended layoffs rose from 39,900 to 42,000.

American Motors Corp. had no change in its 2,350 indefinite layoffs but said it would shut a plant for a week, idling 3,500.

Volkswagen of America had no layoffs. Here are the plants affected and their layoffs:

Ford
Wayne, Mich., cars, 3,600; Wixom, Mich., cars, 2,100; Norfolk, Va., light trucks, 1,950, an extension of this week's closing. The Wayne closing is for two weeks.

GM
Janesville, Wis., cars, 3,500; Linden, N.J., cars, 5,000, both extensions of current closings; Flint, Mich., light trucks, 1,500.

AMC
Toledo, Ohio, Jeeps, 3,500.

Navy plane rams hotel killing nine

PAGO PAGO, American Samoa (AP) — Six U.S. Navy airmen and three civilians were killed when a U.S. Navy plane taking part in a Flag Day celebration crashed and burned the old wing of the Rainmaker Hotel, where Somerset Maugham stayed before writing his famous story about the preacher and the prostitute, Miss Sadie Thompson.

The names of the airmen killed in the crash Thursday morning were withheld pending notification of relatives, and the nationalities of the civilians were not immediately available. Another civilian, a Japanese tourist, was critically burned in the accident and flown to Tripler Air Force Base in Honolulu, along with the dead.

Gov. Peter Coleman of American Samoa, a U.S. territory in the South Pacific, declared three days of mourning beginning today with an assembly in Pago Pago's main square of all high school students, members of the legislature and the territory's high chiefs.

Witnesses said the Navy plane dropped six members of a U.S. Army parachute team over the main square shortly after 10 a.m. Thursday, that three of the jumpers were blown off target, that the plane turned to follow their descent but snagged on a cable of the tramway that crosses Pago Pago's bay.

They said the plane, a four-engine P-3 Orion turbo-prop, narrowly missed the square, jammed with an estimated 30,000 natives and tourists, and crashed on the Pago Pago waterfront just outside the practically empty hotel. Its exploding fuel tanks set fire to the old wing of the building.

"It was chaos," a witness said. "Thousands ran toward the scene of the crash, then ran the other way when the plane's fuel tanks exploded. All you could here were shouts of 'Melaie! Melaie!' — Danger, Danger." The crash knocked out power lines and forced cancellation of the two-day ceremony.

Closing arguments heard in trial of six drownings

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Two men charged with six counts of first-degree murder in the drownings of a Haitian woman and her young children were going to court today to hear closing arguments in the trial, which stemmed from an alleged refugee smuggling operation.

Defense and prosecution attorneys rested their cases Thursday after Jeffrey Hastings, 30, of Hypoxia, Fla., took the stand on his own behalf. Prosecutors charge that Hastings and James Knowles, 19, a Bahamian deckhand, saw police spotlights during a smuggling expedition and forced 17 Haitians overboard.

Citrus board holds action to lower standard

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — The Florida Citrus Commission has put off a decision on whether to take a little of the orange out of Florida orange juice.

By a 7-5 vote Thursday, commissioners deferred action on a proposal that would lower the requirement for natural sugar solids — brix — in Florida orange concentrate.

The change, tentatively approved March 19, would have meant a reduction of approximately one orange and its nutritional equivalent in each six-ounce can of concentrate made in Florida.

Processors had wanted to lower the Florida standard to the minimum federal requirement. But the growers wanted it to remain at a higher level established in 1964.

The commission postponed any action until the U.S. Food and Drug Administration decides on a request to raise federal brix requirements to natural orange juice levels.

Commissioner David Hamrick said that could take three to four years.

"I don't want to see the industry go down the drain because of some political move here," Hamrick said.

"I'm real proud and I thank the commission," said Marvin Kahn, a Sebring grower who led opposition to the change.

Big Spring not allowed to combine voting boxes

BIG SPRING — The U.S. Department of Justice apparently will not grant the city of Big Spring permission to consolidate five voting boxes into one for the April 28 unopposed runoff election for a city councilman's post.

The city wanted to consolidate the polls in a move to cut election costs.

In that runoff is Hal Boyd, who is running alone after opponents Jack Watkins and Fred Maddux dropped from the race earlier in April. Boyd had received 49.3 percent of the votes in the original election but failed to get a majority, as required by the city ordinance, to win a city election. And after the runoff election was called, Boyd's two challengers fell out of the running.

"It's kind of unusual," City Attorney Elliott Mitchell said today. "I don't know if this kind of thing has happened before (anywhere)."

Clements urges leaders to boost Mexico relations

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says businessmen and local government leaders in Texas border cities should help forge a "strong and lasting new relationship with Mexico."

Clements has met recently with Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo and governors of Mexican border states and has been criticized for invading federal policy making territory.

"We well know that our role is not to determine foreign policy for the United States and that is not what we are trying to do," Clements told a symposium Thursday on U.S.-Mexican business ventures.

"But we do think that we can contribute to the development of a strong and lasting new relationship with Mexico."

Clements' remarks to South Texas businessmen came at the end of a two-day visit to border cities.

"This new stance (of equality) toward Mexico is one that must be assumed by all Americans — not just the federal government and foreign policy experts, but by state and local governments and the private sector as well," Clements told the gathering at Pan American University.

Clements also addressed 300 businessmen at a luncheon. Several persons in the audience later asked him for help convincing the Mexican government to allow American contractors to do work across the border.

The governor said he would discuss it in June at a meeting with American and Mexican governors in El Paso.

Idaho wilderness area gets congressional OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — A huge tract of Idaho mountains and rivers, the largest roadless area in the 48 contiguous states, is expected to win federal protection soon as the River of No Return Wilderness Area.

The House voted 301-93 Wednesday to create the 2.2 million-acre wilderness area. The measure now returns to the Senate, which passed it 69-18 last November, for consideration of a change made by the House Interior Committee to open one section of the area to cobalt mining.

President Carter, during a raft trip through the area on the Salmon River as part an August 1978 vacation, called the stream "probably one of the most undisturbed rivers in the nation." He said he supported efforts to designate the region a wilderness area.

Wilderness designation is the government's strictest land preservation tool. It prohibits all types of development, as well as motorized travel by visitors.

The River of No Return Wilderness, which is about the size of nearby Yellowstone National Park, would be the nation's largest wilderness area outside Alaska.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. called the bill the most important piece of wilderness legislation to come before the 96th Congress. But it was passed over the bitter opposition of Idaho's two congressmen.

Approval means almost 20 percent of Idaho's land now is, or soon will be, in federally protected enclaves. They charged that will severely damage Idaho's ability to build a strong state economy.

"I don't know why we have so many people from other states that are trying to manage the affairs of the state of Idaho and take jobs away from its people," complained Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho.

Rep. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, who led efforts to change the bill, has complained that the House Interior Committee ignored the social impacts of the proposal, such as lost jobs.

But Rep. James M. Jeffords, R-Vt., said the West should try to learn from the mistakes of the East.

"We used to have salmon runs in Vermont, too," he said. "Then civilization came, and we lost those great fisheries."

And Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., chairman of the House Interior Committee, said even the most ambitious wilderness programs coming before the Congress ultimately will release 97 percent of the nation's timber land to commercial use.

Miss Tatsch and Richards received first place for outstanding orations on the subject "Our Challenge of the '80s."

The judges were Andrea Jackson, Becky Smith and Joel Jackson, with Raymond Painter as timekeeper.

Workers celebrate 'Big Business Day'

By the Associated Press

California activists handed out pig-shaped awards, union advocates stormed a Seattle bank meeting and 10,000 hard-hatted workers marched in Boston as critics of corporate America turned out for "Big Business Day."

But business boosters fought back with interviews, newspaper advertisements and endorsements, and when the day was over, the chairman of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce pronounced the activist effort a failure.

"It appears the effort to get a lot of free media attention apparently has just fallen apart," Jay Van Andel said Thursday.

Labor groups, senior citizens' organizations and consumer activists, with Ralph Nader at the helm, attacked alleged business abuses with elections to a "Corporate Hall of Shame" and a series of marches, rallies and speeches.

"They (businesses) are telling you, 'we know what is best for you,'" said civil rights activist James Farmer, one of the sponsors of Big Business Day. "But if you've ever been injured on the job, or discriminated against by an employer, or had your taxes raised because company taxes were lowered or lost your job because of a plant shutdown ... then you know corporations don't know what's best for you."

Police estimated 10,000 construction trade workers, some carrying signs blaming business for taking "food from your table," turned out for a march in midtown Boston. Labor officials said the rally was the biggest for labor in nearly 20 years, and the marchers included the unemployed as well as workers released from their jobs for the occasion.

Meanwhile, corporate supporters responded with "Growth Day" events. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce draped a 70-foot banner across its Washington headquarters proclaiming, "It's Your Business, America," and the Heritage Foundation, a conservative public policy think-tank, sponsored a breakfast forum for response to the attacks.

"Ralph Nader and the other critics who have been so busy recently would have us believe that crime, greed and social arrogance are pandemic in the nation's executive suites," said Alexander B. Towbridge, president of the National Association of Manufacturers.

"This kind of verbal overkill may be good for whipping up emotions, but it simply doesn't square with reality."

He suggested action to stimulate worker productivity, tighten federal spending and draft "enlightened" environmental policies.

Nader said critics were only asking business "to stop polluting the environment so much, to stop corrupting the government so much ... and to make decisions that are not always based on the almighty dollar."

Efforts to improve Mexico relations haunt U.S. officials

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — A history of poor relations continues to haunt U.S. officials trying to forge a new understanding with Mexico, says U.S. Ambassador at Large Bob Krueger.

The ambassador told the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention in San Angelo Thursday that the United States is its own worst enemy in efforts to improve relations with Mexico.

"America looks forward, focuses on the future while Mexico looks to the past, remembers it very vividly," said Krueger.

Mexican officials, he said, remain unconvinced that poor relations are a thing of the past.

Krueger cited two recent Mexican newspaper articles that quoted high-level Mexican officials warning the United States might takeover Mexican oil fields by force.

"I know that is absurd, but the Mexican officials obviously were not convinced," said Krueger.

Krueger told the gathering that West Texans have a "tremendous opportunity" to build relations with Mexico and develop it as a foreign market.

Kenneth T. Derr, president of Chevron U.S.A., also spoke at the convention, lashing out at government policies that have fostered dependence on foreign oil.

"Seven years after the Arab oil embargo our nation's dependence on foreign oil has increased from 35 percent to more than 40 percent," Derr said. "And that level will approach 50 percent before the decade ends regardless of our best conservation efforts and good words about alternative energy sources."

The oil company executive called for positive new policies to reverse the trend towards more foreign oil and for a new national energy mix leading to a true multi-energy economy by 1990.

He said the alternatives will be more expensive, but the nation must move aggressively toward development of such domestic alternatives as nuclear power, massive coal reserves, oil shale and solar energy.

Bandits take $300 in lounge robbery

BIG SPRING — Three armed men robbed the Paper Moon Lounge near Big Spring Thursday night of about $300.

The three, armed with shotguns, entered the lounge in Howard County about 11:05 p.m. Thursday, according to Howard County Sheriff A.N. Standard, and demanded the money from the cash register.

No one was injured in the incident, and the three white male suspects were still being sought early today.

Howard County may get new development board

BIG SPRING — A county development board for Howard County may be in the offing if the county commissioners approve the program for funding an industrial development board.

The Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce is asking the county to fund the program.

Change of venue sought

BIG SPRING — A hearing for a change of venue for Rolgello Monje, charged with manslaughter in the 1978 pistol-slaying of Joe Garcia, was to be held today in Stanton.

Defense attorney Bob Moore said he requested the motion due to excess pre-trial publicity in Stanton, where the case had been set.

Prosecuting the case will be Midland County District Attorney Vern Martin.

Coping with inflation a topic at April 26 Family Life seminar

EDITOR'S NOTE: In conjunction with Family Life Week, Family Services of Midland and Midland College are co-sponsoring a "Family Day" April 26 at Midland College.

This is the last in a five-part series which will examine all facets of the family relationship. Authors are members of the Family Services staff and other professionals. The following is by Kathy Atkin, who is currently directing a course on financial management for women at Commercial Bank & Trust Co. She will present a workshop on coping with inflation.

By KATHY ATKIN

Considering that the cost of living has doubled in the 10 years from 1968 to 1978, and that our economic forecast is somewhat unpredictable, it is understandable why men and women today are seeking practical financial education for the eighties.

Regardless of their financial status, people can no longer afford not to be well-educated money managers. The concept of managing money simply means taking control of your financial life in order to make intelligent use of your money and protect your future.

Developing good money management habits is the first step to economic survival. The workshop on "Coping With Inflation" will offer practical, realistic guidelines and techniques for becoming money managers. This workshop will actually be a mini-version of the popular "Money, Money, Money" course on financial management offered by Commercial Bank & Trust Co.

The first step to becoming a wise financial manager is to understand your financial personality. And each person's pattern of living will determine to a large degree how he allocates his spendable income.

The workshop is designed to help the participants become aware of their spending habits in order that they can know for sure where they are financially and where they are going.

After determining both their fixed and flexible expenses, they will be in a position to establish a workable budget. And the prime goal of a budget is to generate more discretionary cash at the end of each month.

Workshop participants will also be offered ideas on how to make this "discretionary cash" work for them. To be discussed will be ways to invest and understand inflation-beating and tax-saving opportunities that could keep reserve funds continuously working toward financial security.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Recently to celebrate a 70th birthday (mine), a group of couples went to a very fine restaurant. Our middle-aged waitress was wearing a tight black skirt slit up to her waist. Each time she came down the short stairway she showed a very shapely leg. We all remarked about it during dinner.

Upon leaving—meaning to compliment her—I said, quietly, "That's a pretty DECENT exposure," whereupon she shouted so all could hear, "Why, you dirty old man!"

My wife, coming up behind me, demanded, "Did you pinch her?" Everyone in our party and most of the people in the restaurant had a good laugh—at my expense.

I quickly went back and pocketed the generous tip I had left for her. Abby, if they flaunt it, shouldn't they be complimented? And was I wrong to have pocketed the tip?—TIPPED OFF IN TACOMA

DEAR TIPPED: When they flaunt it, even if you enjoy it, ignore it. You shouldn't have pocketed the tip. If the waitress served your party well, she earned it—even if she does have a big mouth.

DEAR ABBY: When my mother-in-law handed me my Christmas gift last year she said, "You don't seem like the type who would like this, so if you don't want it, please give it back to me because I love it!"

Abby, I was in a no-win situation. As I unwrapped it, I was hurt to think that she would give me a gift she knew I wouldn't like. Well, she was right. It was a gaudily decorated trinket box, in terrible taste and about as useless as anything could be. It was obvious that she wanted me to give it back to her. Well, I'm not in the habit of telling people I don't like their gifts, so I told her I thought it was "interesting" and kept it. She seemed surprised and disappointed.

As time went by, every time I look at that ugly useless box I became angry, so I donated it to a charity for a white elephant sale just to get it out of my sight.

What should I say if one day my mother-in-law asks to see that box?—GAVE UP ON FORGIVING

DEAR GAVE UP: Tell her the truth. She had it coming. (The truth, not the box.)

DEAR ABBY: This is for VIRGO, who couldn't decide whether to marry the "mature, responsible, hard-working man" because he didn't have a college degree (she did).

Someone should tell this snob that college definitely does not make the person. My husband makes a very good living, but he didn't even finish high school. I am certainly not against higher education; however, a degree doesn't automatically ensure that a person is mature and well-rounded. I know some college graduates who don't have sense enough to come in out of the rain.

This country was founded by people who were not afraid of hard, honest work and not ashamed to get their hands dirty in the process.

I can only hope that this man who is "mature, responsible, hard-working and earns $35,000 a year at only a job—not a profession" finds himself a woman more deserving of him.—SCORPIO

CONFIDENTIAL TO G. T. IN TUCSON, ARIZ.: Experience is indeed a good teacher, but Ford (Henry, not Jerry) said: "The trouble with the school of experience is that the course is so long that the graduates are too old to go to work."

AT WIT'S END
Would anyone care for a cup of tea?
By ERMA BOMBECK

Somehow I never figured tea drinkers as potential militants. They always seem sort of proper. I've never seen tea drinkers pour their tea into a saucer and blow on it. And I cannot imagine a tea drinker sitting around a campfire gulping a mouthful of tea from a tin cup, gargling it and then throwing the dregs from the cup into a fire.

But if my mail is to be believed (and there's a first for everything), tea drinkers are cuing up for a revolution. A tea sipper in Salisbury, Md., writes, "I'm sick of being discriminated against. We're never offered a second cup of tea like coffee drinkers, and on airplanes the tea drinkers are served LAST!"

"And even in homes, the hostess serves coffee and when you ask for tea, I can see it written all over her face. She's hoping you'll say, 'Oh, don't bother.'"

From Santa Barbara, Calif., another tea tippler writes, "People have no consideration for us whatsoever. They never have lemon, yet they have cream and sugar for coffee drinkers. I've even been to meetings where they say, 'If you drink tea, bring your own tea bag.'"

Cooking expert James Beard has long carried the banner for tea drinkers. He calls them the downtrodden minority in this country and points out that while coffee drinkers enjoy their steaming cup in restaurants, the tea drinker must face the pitiful sight of a pot of lukewarm water and a solitary teabag by the side. Or even worse, the dejected bag floating in a cup of tepid water.

Perhaps the most debilitating plight of the tea drinker is called the soggy tea bag experience. What do you do with the bag when it has strained itself into your cup?

I think we must take tea drinkers seriously. With the way things have been going in this country lately, I wouldn't be surprised if there is a decline in mixed marriages (coffee vs. tea drinkers). Look for "Thank You For Not Dunking" signs in restaurants. Look for signs in department and specialty stores: "Tea Spoken Here." I am predicting classes at the Schick Center for people who want to get off coffee and into tea and warnings on coffee cans that say, "Coffee may stain your dentures permanently. Drink tea."

All I know is if Mrs. Olsen pitches to a born-again tea drinker, I wouldn't want to be responsible for her safety.

Hole poked in pocket of prosperity

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Phillip Jason left a $22,500 annual salary in New Jersey 18 months ago to bring his wife and six kids to an economic pearl in a country of dull pebbles.

Wichita was a city of opportunity. A national magazine called it a "pocket of prosperity." Today Jason has a rented home full of empty stomachs, $2.24 in the pocket of his faded blue jeans and no job. His ambition: "To get things back together and book my way out of here and back to Jersey."

A 20 percent prime lending rate and 18 percent annual inflation rate have poked a hole in the pocket of prosperity.

THE CHANGES IN WICHITA have been sudden — and surprising. Six months ago, this city of 270,000, largest in Kansas, boasted a 2.6 percent unemployment rate and local aircraft builders were scouring the country for more workers.

Today, unemployment stands at more than 4 percent and is growing. Jason, 33, and his wife, Mary, were sheet metal mechanics at Cessna Aircraft Co., the world's largest builder of small planes. They were pulling down $6 an hour each by helping churn out twin-engine planes costing up to $2 million. "Things were looking up," said Jason.

But declining small planes sales, blamed on high interest rates and tight credit, caused massive cutbacks at Cessna in the past two months. More than 3,700 workers have been laid off — including Phillip and Mary Jason.

The Jason family was comfortable and happy in Woodbury, N.J., just two years ago. Phillip was a junior engineer at Du Pont. Mary worked part-time as a waitress.

But Jason had spent his boyhood in Wichita, and he remembered it as "a nice, quiet and inexpensive place to live where you could really raise kids good." He asked the Wichita Area Chamber of Commerce about the job situation.

"They sent me a whole lot of stuff," he remembers. "Follow the yellow-brick road to gold land," it said. And I'm not exaggerating."

THE COUPLE SAVED $2,000 and set out on that road in 1978. At first, Jason, a trained pipe-fitter and mechanic, could only find work in plumbing and construction. He made $8,000 his first year.

Last fall, he and his wife got jobs at Cessna. But today, Phillip is laid off permanently and Mary is on a temporary furlough.

This Midwest city, nestled at the juncture of the Arkansas and Little Arkansas rivers, still has some jobs for skilled workers and more are expected. But there are nearly 10,000 persons out of work.

The Chamber of Commerce has shelved a year-old national recruitment program; the $60,000 earmarked for it this year will be used to help create new jobs.

Dick Upton, chamber director, says Wichita's economy "still remains very strong. But there's no point in bringing people from outside when we've got people in our own community looking for jobs."

The slump in small plane sales has rippled through the area economy where one out of every six workers makes aircraft or aircraft parts.

CESSNA HAS TRIMMED its work force from 20,000 to 15,000 through attrition and layoffs since January. Smaller layoffs followed at support companies, construction companies and beef packing plants.

Beech Aircraft Corp. laid off 50 workers at one of its small-plane plants. And officials of both Cessna and Beech say further layoffs depend entirely on the economic conditions.

"The federal government has waited too long and done too little to help the economy," Cessna Chairman Russ Meyer said recently. He described President Carter's budget-tightening moves as "a purely cosmetic program (that) reflects either a lack of understanding or leadership or perhaps both."

About 1,500 of those laid off at Cessna are expected to be called back later this spring. They had been idled when the company shut down its twin-engine assembly lines because of excess inventory.

"At current interest rates, we cannot afford to carry an inventory that amounts to $200 million," or twice what it was a year ago, Meyer said.

The continued strong demand for larger airplanes, used primarily for business transportation, is a bright spot in the local economy. Both Cessna and Gates Learjet Corp. report record order backlogs for such planes, and Learjet plans to hire 400 more workers here.

BOEING MILITARY AIRPLANE CO. has become Wichita's biggest employer thanks to increased military contract work. It has added 3,400 workers in the past year, bringing its total labor force to 15,500. Another 1,000 workers are expected to be hired this year.

But the overall outlook in Wichita remains clouded. Six months ago, there were too many jobs and too few people to fill them. The number of open jobs was growing faster than the number of new workers.

"The difference between Wichita now and six months ago is a failure of national economic policy," says Gerald McDougai, a Wichita state University urban economist. "If inflation had been muted then, perhaps we would not have seen the decline in general aviation we see now." The Jasons, then, are casualties of that decline. "I had to go to school to learn sheet metal work just to get a job in this town that paid decent," Jason said. "And now I'm laid off. I just don't understand it."

Group insurance

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Unions, associations of retired persons and other organizations can obtain group auto insurance for members 55 and older starting June 1 — if they can find anybody to sell it to them.

The State Insurance Board approved rules and rates Wednesday that cleared the way for the sale of group auto coverage, authorized by the 1979 Legislature.

Don O'Brien, the board's director of auto insurance, said only American Fidelity of Oklahoma City, has shown interest in selling group auto coverage.

"I am going to be agreeably surprised if any companies are willing to write it," said David Irons, attorney for the Texas Automobile Insurance Service Office.

The board set premium rates at an amount equal to the lowest rate currently established until accident data from the groups start coming in.

Under the 1979 law, an organization can qualify for group auto coverage only if it has existed longer than six months and was created for a purpose other than getting insurance.

A significant rule says a company writing a group's auto coverage must cover everybody in the group who wants a policy — no matter how bad his or her driving record might be.

The spouse and dependent children of a group member also would be covered without any increase in premium — a significant saving to anyone with teenage drivers.

Board member Lyndon Olson Jr. said teenage drivers in the household of a person 55 or older would "probably be the exception rather than the rule."

"I'm going to be 55 this year, and I have a minor child," said board Chairman Bill Daves.

Advantages of group coverage would be especially great for a person who has trouble getting a policy because of age or driving record.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON Arrhythmia irregularity

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father has been told by his doctor that he has an "arrhythmia." I don't know whether this is a cause for alarm, and I would appreciate information about what this means and its significance. — Bill

Dear Bill: An arrhythmia is an irregularity in the rhythm of the heartbeat. Since your father's physician is aware of the condition, he must be taking appropriate measures to deal with it. Possibly he has prescribed some medication to correct the irregularity.

It is important that your father be reassured that the palpitations he may occasionally feel are not heart attacks and do not damage the heart.

Dear Dr. Solomon: For the past couple of weeks I've become conscious of dark spots moving in front of my eyes — almost like black wisps of smoke rising from a fire. What are these and what can be done about them? — Lucy

Dear Lucy: From your description, you seem to be seeing floaters or "spots" caused by changes in the liquid within the eyes. Although they are not treatable and may last for years, they have little significance and generally are not a cause for concern.

Should the number you see suddenly increase, however, particularly if they are accompanied by flashes of light, you should see your ophthalmologist without delay. These symptoms may indicate a detached retina for which early treatment is extremely important.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband had been tapering off from a rather heavy drinking habit until he read that liquor prevents heart disease. That's all he needed. Now he is almost back to where he was a year ago with his drinking. What's the sense in trying to prevent a heart attack if heavy drinking will kill you anyway? — Mrs. T.K.

Dear Mrs. K.: Your husband's return to drinking may be more a rationalization than a logical decision based on available medical evidence. The dangers associated with the excessive use of alcohol outweigh any of its theoretical beneficial effects on the heart.

One of the studies that have evoked so much public interest in the subject did suggest that moderate consumption of beer, wine, or liquor seemed to be associated with a decreased rate of death from coronary heart disease; however the same study also showed that there is no such beneficial effect when a person consumes a large amount of alcohol. Additional research conducted at the Northwestern University Medical School in Chicago indicated that heavy drinking increased the likelihood of sudden death, death from coronary heart disease, and death from all causes combined over a 15-year period.

If your husband is unable to differentiate between moderate use of alcohol and alcoholism, he has a serious problem that calls for professional intervention.

Campaign to save species endangered

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) — Earl Lippoldt says his five-year efforts to save the Atlantic Ridley sea turtle are as endangered as the species he wants to help because of governmental interference.

"We sold our home to carry on the project. I'm broke," he said of his sacrifices for a volunteer beach patrol program to protect Ridley nests.

The retired Kansas farmer learned Monday that the federal government considers it illegal for him to move eggs to safe places, keep 24-hour watch until they hatch and guard the baby turtles until they're strong enough to go to sea.

Lippoldt, 55, received publicity last August when he tried to save baby Ridelys from swimming into the Mexico oil spill that blackened South Texas beaches.

"I spent five years and probably $100,000 of my own money on this and the government copied our project and now they're coming down here and saying we can't do it," said Lippoldt. "I don't understand it."

In 1976, Lippoldt's federal permit allowed him to move eggs from predators, humans, high tides and other dangers.

However, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service received unfavorable comments about his operation and later dropped the "egg moving" from his list of authorized activities, said Bob Batky, federal permit officer.

Congressmen facing new, painful test

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, known for its friendly habit of boosting spending in an election year, is facing a new and painful political test: how to meet voter demand for a balanced budget while overcoming an army of special interests.

The test has put new strains on the five-year-old congressional budget process and led to unprecedented proposals for enforcing spending restraint.

Some observers believe the challenge facing Congress this year could lead to more than a balanced 1981 budget: It could shape the way Congress handles government spending for years to come.

Rep. Timothy E. Wirth, D-Colo., a House Budget Committee member, said the issue comes down to one question: "Can we impose our will over that of a thousand special interests?"

At the heart of the controversial budget-balancing drive is "reconciliation," a previously unused budget tool that would force congressional committees to make specific amounts of spending cuts.

The House and Senate budget committees both approved reconciliation orders in their proposed 1981 balanced budgets, but the recommendations have drawn stiff opposition from chairmen of other committees.

The chairmen charge that the proposed order would undermine the congressional committee system and give the budget committees power far beyond what Congress intended when it launched the new budget process in 1975.

In a letter to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., 16 of 19 House committee chairmen argued that their panels should be allowed to decide where to cut and claimed reconciliation "is not required in achieving a balanced budget."

However, the chairmen of the two budget committees, Rep. Robert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, claim reconciliation is vital to balancing the federal budget — an accomplishment not achieved in 12 years.

In a response to the chairmen's letter to O'Neill, Giaimo wrote: "It is no secret that these committees will be under intense pressure from well-intentioned special interests to resist any reform or modification of existing programs. ...

"The Congress itself, then, must direct its own committees to take the appropriate action."

Traditionally, vested interests have established toeholds in key congressional committees and thus have been able to resist attempts by Congress to cut programs important to those interests.

Giaimo's strategy would address that problem by using reconciliation as a way to achieve congressional passage of cost-cutting bills that otherwise would stand little chance of enactment.

The reconciliation proposals would force House and Senate committees to approve legislation to cut spending by a total of about $9 billion. The bills then would be put into a single package and sent to the floor.

That would confront the House and Senate with a choice: either approve the package or reject the savings needed to balance the budget.

Military court convicts eight magazine execs

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — A military court today convicted eight executives of a former opposition magazine and sentenced them to prison terms ranging from 12 years to life for sedition and plotting to overthrow the Nationalist Chinese regime.

During their trial last month the defendants admitted seeking to replace Taiwan's one party rule with a multi-party system, but denied plotting to forcibly overthrow the Kuomintang, which has ruled Taiwan since communists took over the mainland in 1949.

They were arrested when a demonstration sponsored by their Formosa magazine in the southern city of Kaohsiung on Dec. 10, 1979, turned into a riot which injured 183 police and soldiers.

Dissident leader Huang Hsin-Chieh, whose immunity as a member of parliament was revoked after his arrest, was sentenced to 14 years in prison, the military command announced. It said the five judge military tribunal sentenced another key figure in the case, Shih Ming-Teh, to life in prison.

The judges gave 12 year sentences to six others: Yao Chia-Wen, Lin Yi-Hsiung, Chang Chun-Hung, Lin Hsing-Hsuan, Miss Lu Hsiu-Lien and Miss Chen Chu.

A civilian court today ended three days of questioning of 20 other people involved in the December riot. Security forces arrested 152 people at the time of the demonstration, including the eight sentenced today. The court did not indicate whether further trials would be held.

Cuba authorizes 10 refugee flights

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Fidel Castro's government authorized 10 refugee flights from Havana to Costa Rica over the next five days but Costa Rica hopes to double the number to speed the evacuation of nearly 10,000 anti-communist Cubans from the Peruvian Embassy in Havana, a Foreign Ministry official said.

The official, Carlos Aguilar, said only one plane, a DC-8, left San Jose for Havana Thursday night and that it was likely it would be the only one returning to San Jose today. But he said the Cubans have agreed to two flights daily through Tuesday and he hoped they would raise the number to four.

He said another Costa Rican airliner flew to Lima, Peru, Thursday night carrying 97 refugees, part of the 1,000 Peru agreed to take. The United States has agreed to take 3,500 and Costa Rica 300.

Aguilar said 50 other Cubans left Havana on a scheduled Iberia Airlines flight directly for Spain on Thursday and that it was possible the Spanish government would send a chartered plane to Havana today to pick up 250 more. Brazil also offered Thursday to take an unspecified number of refugees.

The Cubans jammed the 20-acre Peruvian Embassy compound in Havana two weeks ago. Costa Rica agreed to be the staging point for the evacuation, which began Wednesday with a flight of 236 Cubans and continued Thursday with 254 more.

Some of those arriving in San Jose said supporters of Castro, Cuba's revolutionary leader and president, insulted them and took their personal belongings before allowing them to board their "freedom flight" from Havana's Jose Marti Airport.

"They took away all our suitcases. They even took away our wristwatches. This is not just 10,000 people in the Peruvian Embassy, but all the Cuban people angry at Castro," said one of the refugees, 30-year-old Gilberto Puig.

Carlos Dominguez, a 37-year-old accountant, said more than 40,000 people would have gone into the Peruvian Embassy in Havana if police had not cordoned off the area. "People have lost their fear of Castro," he said.

Other refugees said increasing economic hardship and visits by relatives and friends living in the United States spread dissatisfaction with Castro's communist rule. "We were blind, but the visits opened the eyes of a lot of people," said Dario Cura.

"For years, the government told us that Cubans in the United States were living in poverty and were unemployed," said Carlos Martinez Baldez, 38, a painter. But he said the visitors were "fat, happy, with money and a look in their faces full of satisfaction. We could see the government had been telling us lies and feeding us propaganda."

Some 9,500 Cubans still await flights out of Havana, and the Cuban government said Thursday more than 8,000 have received their safe conduct passes and passports.

However, it angrily denied a statement made Wednesday by Peru's foreign minister, Arturo Garcia y Garcia, that only 4,400 had their documents, and claimed Peru had not granted visas to Cubans inside the embassy who want to travel to Peru.

The Cuban Foreign Ministry said it "refutes with all its energy the mendacious assertions" of Garcia "when he manifested, in declarations made in Lima, that the Cuban government had suspended the granting of documents to persons inside the Peruvian Embassy in Havana. At no time has the expedition of passports been suspended to persons who have left the embassy and have solicited them."

However, the Peruvian Foreign Ministry condemned what it called "offensive references to the Peruvian-foreign minister" and repeated its accusation that Cuba had announced by loudspeaker on April 15 that it would limit safe conduct passes to women and children in the Peruvian Embassy in Havana.

The Peruvian Foreign Ministry also denied the charge that it had not granted visas to the Cubans. The ministry said a list of 500 persons who had been given visas was presented to the Cuban Foreign Ministry on April 13. "The Cuban Foreign Ministry did not accept this procedure and submitted a list of 600 persons... who had received their travel documents," the Peruvian Foreign Ministry said. "This impasse has not yet been overcome."

Officials to consider prison site

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State officials will meet in emergency session here Tuesday to consider buying a 5,292-acre Lower Rio Grande Valley farm for a prison. Starr County officials, however, say they will fight having the new prison in their county.

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong confirmed Thursday the three-member Approval Board which must OK purchases of land for a prison will meet Tuesday at 3:30 p.m. — hours before the April 23 deadline set by owners of the La Casita Farm.

THE APPROVAL BOARD — Armstrong, Gov. Bill Clements and State Board of Corrections Chairman James Windham — will meet a half-hour after the prison board considers the purchase.

Armstrong said the General Land Office appraised the property at $7.5 million, including $550,000 in farm equipment. He said two outside appraisals were done at Clements' insistence.

Windham said the prison board is considering other sites, but Armstrong said his office was asked to appraise only the La Casita site.

THE STARR COUNTY farm was also the only one visited by two Texas A&M agricultural economists, who gave it high marks.

Armstrong said his appraisal and the two independent appraisals were within $300,000 of each other.

"There are no red flags," he said, after discussing problems which killed a 1978 deal to buy a farm in the Edinburg area, about 30 miles away from La Casita Farm.

"I checked and Meyer Lansky's name does not appear," Armstrong joked. The land considered in 1978 was traced back to a man who had connections to Lansky, a purported organized crime leader.

"This is a certified, producing farm," said Armstrong.

NOTICE OF THE Approval Board meeting specifically named the La Casita site. The prison board meeting notice, however, did not name the site; saying only "the property will not be available after April 23."

Starr County Judge Blas Chapa said Thursday he was upset he had not been told about the negotiations to buy the farm in his county. He said he is organizing local officials who don't want the border prison.

Chapa said La Casita is one of the county's largest taxpayers. Starr County records show the farm, whose president lives in Opelousas, La., paid $6,652 in taxes last year.

IF PURCHASED by the state the land would be taken off the tax rolls.

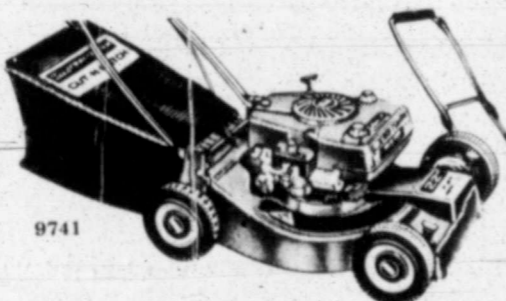

The judge also said the impoverished county would miss the jobs at La Casita, especially during harvest season.

Stock market rallies

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market managed a slight upswing today, aided by some new reductions in the bank prime lending rate.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, down more than 22 points in the last four sessions, showed a .25 gain at 769.11 by noon today.

Gainers held a 7-4 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Several large banks lowered their prime rates today to 19 1/2 percent, two days after Chase Manhattan of New York cut its basic charge on blue-chip loans to 19 1/2.

The reductions gave new impetus to hopes that interest rates might have reached a turning point after their long climb over the past three years.

But analysts said traders still seemed eyed over the prospective impact of the business slowdown that is expected to accompany any substantial drop in rates.

Auto stocks remained under pressure. Ford Motor dropped 1 1/2 to 24 and General Motors 1 1/2 to 41, both in active trading.

Sony led the active list, up 1/4 at 7 1/2. A 232,900-share block traded at that price on the Philadelphia Stock Exchange.

The NYSE's composite index rose .09 to 57.54. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.02 at 236.21.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 12.81 million shares at noon.

Fantasies out of Fantasy Land

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Something weird, something wonderful has happened to this TV set. I don't know whether to kick it or pinch myself.

As best I can describe it, a benign spook has taken up residence in the picture tube and the speaker system has gone out of sync and suddenly begun to spout some sense.

I keep hearing things like: "Because nothing violent, depressing, unsavory, nasty or inflationary happened anywhere in the world today, no mass murders, no hijackings, no hostages taken, there will be no 7 o'clock news tonight."

"The president's news conference, scheduled for this hour, has been pre-empted to bring you an important Laurel and Hardy Film Festival which will be shown without commercial interruption."

"Frankly I can't see any difference between these two detergents. Both of them did a pretty gritty job on my husband's longhairs."

"Tell us Muhammad, at your age and all too obvious flabby condition, can you still consider yourself The Greatest?"

"Actually, Howard, I never considered myself the greatest. That was all media hype. North hits harder. Tate picks punches better. Holmes has the quicker jab. Frasier had more firepower in either glove. I've just been lucky, I guess."

"Some people may find the upcoming show objectionable. It contains no foul language, no nudity, no violence or vulgarity and may be suitable for family viewing."

"The following commercials have been edited for television..."

"Our network computer has just given us a print-out saying it will not forecast a winner in tonight's Wyoming primary but will wait until all the votes have been counted."

"Because of a disagreement with the FCC over commercialization of a certain brand of swimwear, the contestants in tonight's Miss Cosmos Contest will appear without their bathing suits."

"No way did the better college emerge victorious here tonight at the arena. If that illiterate pack of goons whom Coach Lobo is trying to foist off as students spent as much as one hour in a classroom or knew at which end of the campus the library is located, I'll eat my entire squad's SAT scores."

"Our radar scanner and weather satellite picture show no storm clouds anywhere east of the Rockies. Our telephone operators are standing by ready to receive your calls on why the hell it's been raining buckets all day long."

"In protest against the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, radical students chanting 'God Bless America' surrounded the U.S. Embassy in Belgrade today."

"Instead of the inane, witless, imbecilic game show usually seen at this hour, we are substituting a selection of old Army training films."

"Test drive the new El Bombo Grande. If you don't think this chromium-plated gas guzzler is the biggest lemon you've ever been stuck with, we'll pay the towing charges. Our participating dealers stand behind every car, ready to help push them off the lot."

"In the interests of picking up a couple of stray votes somewhere, Sen. Homer Blugh has canceled tonight's paid political broadcast and a first run movie, paid for by his party, will be shown instead."

"Let's go down to the field now for some closeup shots of those unbelievably stacked cheerleaders and not waste any more time on this dull one-sided game."

"Since this is my all-time favorite movie coming up and only this afternoon the station let me know my contract wasn't being renewed, I'm gonna skip all the commercials and show it without a break."

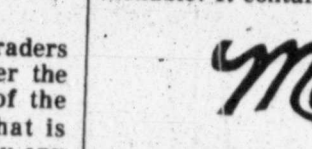

"Coming on a talk show like this gives an actor a chance to level with his audience. I can honestly say my latest movie is the biggest turkey my agent stuck me with in my 23 years in Hollywood."

"Don't bother standing by for these announcements. You have four minutes before our feature film resumes to get yourself a cold beer and a sandwich."

"Due to conditions beyond our control, tonight's live energy crisis debate between Dr. Howe T. Deeyus and Sen. Gordian Knott will be broadcast at a date later to be announced. The senator has withdrawn because his briefcase containing his adlibs and idiot cards was lost in the taxicab he was poured into at the airport."

"No, Johnnie, I can't say I'm vulnerable or an intensely caring, very private person. Actually, I'm as tough as a bale of barbed wire and would stomp my stiletto heels into the eyeballs of any pretty-faced ingenue who got in the way of my career."

"For those of you who don't give a hoot about the mating cycle of giant sea turtles in the Galapagos, there's a pretty good western starting on Channel 6 right now."

Elite class of officials emerging in Communist Cambodia

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — An elite class of government officials and bureaucrats is emerging again in Communist Cambodia, enjoying a privileged existence in sharp contrast to the wretched poverty of the rural majority.

The 15-month-old administration of President Heng Samrin is still a weak patchwork of grizzled veterans of revolution and surviving members of the pre-1975 intelligentsia. One of its top priorities is to forge an effective, unified regime of communists with a pro-Vietnamese, pro-Soviet bent. The new regime argues that to rebuild the shattered country, it must first build a strong government.

Propaganda and political re-education are being employed to make believers out of the uncertain and the unwilling. They are also being wooed with privileges.

Government employees, especially those in the central government in Phnom Penh, the capital, receive substantial rations of rice and other foodstuffs and occasional food bonuses. Although not lavish, their diet is of four-star quality compared with the hand-to-mouth existence of most Cambodians.

Special hospitals or wards are reserved for government employees in most provinces. The Calmette Hospital in Phnom Penh, for employees of the government ministries only, is by far the city's cleanest, best staffed and best equipped.

Even junior officials have been assigned villas in the capital, which was a ghost town when the invading Vietnamese army drove Premier Pol Pot and his Khmer Rouge government out and installed Hanoi's Cambodian communist proteges.

There are frequent parties and receptions. "Public" concerts are held, with the tickets distributed among government employees. Government vehicles can be used at times for personal matters.

The substantial international aid sent to Cambodia for the general population passes through Phnom Penh, and a considerable amount apparently stays here.

One foreign aid official recently found sewing machines that had been sent for orphanages and health institutions in a government ministry turning out clothes for members of its staff.

Much or all of the output of a pig and poultry farm subsidized by one international organization ends up on the tables of government staff members.

"We are very worried about the difference in living standards between Phnom Penh and the countryside," said one foreign official who asked not to be quoted by name. "There is a growing urban elitism which is showing no particular concern for the rural poor."

Seaborne Israeli forces raid base, kill six

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Seaborne Israeli forces raided a Palestinian base on Lebanon's southern coast early today and killed six Palestinians, the military command announced today.

The attack, first of its kind in eight months, was in retaliation for the Palestinian raid April 7 on the Misgav Am border kibbutz in which the five raiders and three Israelis were killed.

The Israelis moved at dark, apparently surprising the Palestinians at Ras El-Sheikh, a base 12 miles north of the Lebanese port of Tyre and about 25 miles north of the Israeli border.

Two Israeli soldiers were wounded, the command said, and the raiders blew up two buildings before pulling out. Ras El-Sheikh, near the town of Sarafand, reportedly serves as a base for three groups in the Palestine Liberation Organization, including PLO leader Yasser Arafat's Al Fatah faction.

"We consider this a very successful operation," said an Israeli officer.

The command claimed the base was used as a supply center and staging base for terrorist raids against Israel.

After the attack on Misgav Am, Israel sent some 300 troops into southeast Lebanon and said their mission was to block infiltration routes used by the Palestinians. But the government announced their withdrawal several days later.

The retaliatory raid apparently was delayed until Prime Minister Menachem Begin completed three days of talks with President Carter on the deadlocked Egyptian-Israeli negotiations to work out an autonomy plan for the 1.2 million Palestinian Arabs living on the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip, occupied by Israel in the 1967 Arab-Israeli War.

Begin returned home today. He, Carter and President Anwar Sadat of Egypt agreed to step up the frequency of the negotiations, but there was little or no expectation that they would reach agreement by May 26, the target date set by the Camp David accords.

Begin returned to a domestic political crisis caused by Defense Minister Ezer Weizman's call during his absence for early elections "to reach a new public and ideological framework and to pull the country out of a certain quagmire into which it has sunk."

Weizman's challenge to Begin's leadership brought demands from several other Cabinet members for his resignation. The defense minister on Wednesday hinted which Begin's Likud coalition defeated in 1976. The Likud has been losing ground recently.

Jurors locked in combat

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you think the prosecution and the defense slugged it out, you should have seen the jurors in a deadlocked armed robbery case.

District of Columbia Superior Court Judge George H. Revercomb declared a mistrial Wednesday after two women jurors arguing the merits of the case started fighting in the jury room.

The jury had deliberated for two days in the trial of three men charged with the armed robbery of three Georgetown University students when squeals and sounds of a scuffle were heard.

Witnesses said jury foreman Anne Wiltse and juror Marian White began quarreling after Ms. White contended the government had not proved its case. Some jurors accused Ms. White of sleeping through part of the testimony.

"I understand that one of them had been slapped and bitten," said U.S. Marshal Jerome Bullock. A courtroom clerk and a deputy marshal separated the women, but fighting broke out again and two more deputy marshals were called to watch them while Revercomb summoned lawyers back to the courtroom and declared the mistrial.

THE NEWSPAPER BIBLE

I'm not blind anymore!

Then they took the man to the Pharisees. Now as it happened, this all occurred on a Sabbath. Then the Pharisees asked him all about it. So he told them how Jesus had smoothed the mud over his eyes, and when it was washed away, he could see!

Some of them said, "Then this fellow Jesus is not from God, because he is working on the Sabbath."

Others said, "But how could an ordinary sinner do such miracles?" So there was a deep division of opinion among them.

Then the Pharisees turned on the man who had been blind and demanded, "This man who opened your eyes—who do you say he is?"

"I think He must be a prophet sent from God," the man replied.

The Jewish leaders wouldn't believe he had been blind, until they called in his parents.

And asked them, "Is this your son? Was he born blind? If so, how can he see?"

His parents replied, "We know this is our son and that he was born blind, but we don't know what happened to make him see, or who did it. He is old enough to speak for himself. Ask him."

They said this in fear of the Jewish leaders who had announced that anyone saying Jesus was the Messiah would be excommunicated.

No early end for housing slump

WASHINGTON (AP) — The housing industry is deteriorating at a rate reminiscent of the nation's last recession in 1974, and even a drop in interest rates won't relieve builders or homebuyers anytime soon, says the chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Jay Janis said Wednesday that actual new home construction in 1980 could fall below the 1.04 million projected annual rate registered in March. Moreover, the shipment of low-cost mobile homes will decline by about 20 percent this year, he predicted.

The March new home construction figure was down 22 percent from February's annualized rate and was barely half the actual 2 million new home units started in 1978.

"The outlook for housing in 1980 has deteriorated in the face of anti-inflationary policies" that has led to 15 percent to 17 percent mortgage rates, Janis told the Joint Economic Committee.

"The financial environment has been unfavorable for housing at least since Oct. 6 and has deteriorated further in recent months," he said.

"We presently expect that housing starts will average between 1 million and 1.1 million units, or even lower, compared with 1.75 million units during 1979, Janis testified.

His gloomy outlook came the same day Treasury Secretary G. William Miller told a Senate finance subcommittee he expects interest rates to decline in the next several months as the economy cools. In that same vein, Chase Manhattan Bank lowered its prime interest rate one-quarter point to 19.75 percent Wednesday.

However, Janis cautioned that "any significant decline in interest rates will probably come too late to bolster savings flows and mortgage credit availability this year" by any sizeable amount.

And even a major drop in mortgage rates will leave homebuyers saddled with sky-high rates that few can afford, he said.

That fact was brought home by Jack Carlson, chief economist of the National Association of Realtors, who predicted that mortgage rates will be in the 13.7 percent range more than a year from now.

Today's unprecedented interest rates have pushed the cost of buying a house beyond the grasp of all but about 5 percent of potential homebuyers.

For those who can find the money, monthly payments for a home today generally eat up 26 percent of disposable income. That's seven percentage points higher than it was a year ago, says Carlson.

Just how much do high rates affect an average homebuyer? At 16 percent interest, the payment on a 30-year, $60,000 mortgage is $807 a month, says the National Association of Homebuilders. That includes only interest and payment; not utility bills or property taxes.

Great white shark caught off Catalina

SAN PEDRO, Calif. (AP) — A 16½-foot great white shark was caught three miles offshore of Santa Catalina Island by a 23-year-old boat owner on his first commercial fishing trip, marine authorities say.

The man-eating shark was trapped in a fishing net and shot to death as it tried to bite through the boat's metal stern roller early Wednesday, said Robbie Barker, owner of the 57-foot Pacific Fin.

Marine biologists who examined the huge fish Barker and his crew hauled back to San Pedro said it appeared to be one of the largest great white sharks ever caught off the West Coast.

"In the darkness we thought at first it was a whale," Barker recalled. "When we saw those teeth flashing, we backed off fast."

Great white sharks terrorized movie audiences in "Jaws" and "Jaws II" as lifelike mechanical replicas devoured their way through the cast of characters.

But Cabrillo Marine Museum aquarist Robert R. Johnson said research done in the South Pacific showed the great white sharks usually swim clear of populated areas.

Idaho congressman says profits tax makes government OPEC partner

A U.S. congressman from Idaho Thursday night charged that the recently voted "windfall profits" legislation makes the U.S. government a partner in OPEC and "guarantees we will become more dependent on the good will of OPEC for energy supplies."

Steven D. Symms of Idaho's first 1st Congressional District, speaking at the annual banquet of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association at the Midland Country Club, said the "windfall profits" tax is simply and excise tax and only applies to domestic oil production.

"This new legislation is really nothing more than a new tax designed to increase revenues to the federal government, disguised as punishment for the oil companies," the congressman said. "The oil industry is being used as a scapegoat to greatly expand the revenue base since any increase in the income tax rates on an already overtaxed American people would be politically intolerable."

Symms said the American people have been tricked into believing the windfall profits tax is a tax on the oil companies "when it really is a tax on themselves. Over the next 10 years, the federal government will exact an additional $227 billion from its citizens (because of the "windfall profits" tax).

SYMMS SAID THE thinking behind the "windfall profits tax" chicanery has succeeded — at least for the moment. "The no-growth advocates oppose oil and gas deregulation on the grounds that consumers would be hurt by higher prices; yet higher consumer costs are perfectly acceptable as long as they result from excise taxes on oil production and flow to the government."

The congressman said the real issue has become not burdening the consumer with higher energy costs, but preventing increased capitalization by the private energy industry, such as independent oil and gas producers, that would lead to increased production. "If the free market mechanism were put to work, the reasons for the Department of Energy and the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission would cease to exist, resulting in a loss of central government control."

"Personally, I'm a little tired of being told by those government bureaucrats opposing deregulation and increased production that we must accept a lower standard of living — that less is better. We are not running out of resources — we are running out of the freedom of innovation that made America great." Symms said the nation badly needs price freedom. "In a free market system, prices are a result, not a cause; supply and demand fluctuations will set prices far better than bureaucracies can."

"I emphatically reject the assumption of no-growth advocates that human ingenuity and resourcefulness have limits. You, the front-line of the free market solution, should not suffer the burden of government regulations and taxes. Rather, the government should get out of the way so your skill and drive can be put to work to discover, develop and distribute present and new sources of energy."

KENT HANCE OF Lubbock, U.S. Representative from the 19th Congressional District, introduced Symms to the BPPA audience.

A president's reception, honoring Al Dillard, the outgoing president who served two years as head of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, was held at the country club prior to the annual banquet.

The annual meeting Thursday included a luncheon at the Midland Hilton which was followed by a the annual business session.

James C. Watt, an aggressive advocate of free market principles, was the featured speaker at the luncheon. He is president and chief legal officer of the Mountain States Legal Foundation, a public interest legal group committed to championing private enterprise concepts.

Watt pointed to what he called a new political force — a small group of extremist environmentalists "who don't concern themselves with a balanced perspective or a concern about improving the quality of life for mankind" as the number one stumbling block for the development of resources in the Western states.

"The environmentalist is a zealot for his cause. He has created activist groups such as the Natural Resources Defense Council, the Environmental Defense Fund, the Sierra Club, and Friends of the Earth.

WATT SAID thousands of people give millions of dollars to these groups because they want to protect the environment and provide for a healthy wildcat habitat.

"Unfortunately, those supporting members are often manipulated through emotional appeals with attractive pictures of wildlife and scenery. They are not given a voice in setting policy or directing the course of these organizations which have been dominated by a handful of extremists. He added that he believed the motive of most of the financial supporters is good, but the motive of those who dictate the policies of these groups is "suspect."

Watt, a former vice chairman of the Federal Power Commission, said the energy resources of the west are and will be the cornerstone of "our future energy needs." "There is no other major domestic energy resource base for the nation. They will be developed. The only question remaining is when?"

HE SAID THAT his thesis "is that because of the action being taken by extremists to delay or stop the orderly development of energy resources such as nuclear power, the mining and burning of coal, and the exploring and drilling for oil and gas the nation is likely to suffer energy shortages and thus severe economic hardship.

"Hundreds of thousands of jobs, if not millions, will be in jeopardy. When this happens, whether triggered by an Arab oil boycott, or slowly through time, the politicians in Washington will seize on the crisis and take whatever action is needed to extract energy from the Western States in order to light and heat the East and to maintain jobs in the Midwest and on the east coast, Watt said.

C. John Miller of Allegan, Mich., president of the Independent Petroleum Association of American was one of the speakers at the annual business meeting.

He said he felt a change in the thinking of the country toward the energy industry. "There are more and more editorials against windfall profits, even though the legislation has passed, appearing in more and more responsible news media.

MILLER CALLED FOR more involvement by all the citizens of the U.S., particularly those in energy producing areas.

"If you would be willing to be as involved as our antagonists, we would be in the position we are in today. We can turn things around if we are willing to pay for it.

"A punch press operator contributes more money than individual oilmen to their various organizations and to political action committees.

Joe B. McShane of Monahans, president of the National Stripper Well Association also appeared on the annual business meeting program.

He cited facts and figures on stripper well production.

Family moves into 'slime house' garage

RIO GRANDE, N.J. (AP) — The neighborhood kids call it "the slime house." But the Buonocores call it home.

Eugene and Ona Buonocores moved back into the garage of their $62,000 "dream house" in Cape May County this week as the oily slime began to spread throughout their neighborhood.

A king-size bed, some chairs, a table, a refrigerator, a television, a telephone and carpeting have been added to the Eugene and Ona Buonocores' freshly-painted garage, which for eight years housed only a car and a truck.

Bottles of fresh drinking water stand in a corner. The Buonocores have been warned not to drink water from their well.

The couple moved back into their home from a Wildwood Crest motel this week, saying they could not meet their mortgage and other bills in a motel as state and county officials complete their investigation into the mysterious goo.

The Buonocores' problem began three years ago when they first noticed dark, oil spots on their walls. During the winter, the problem intensified to the point that everything, including furniture and the family dog, became coated with a greasy residue.

The couple moved out of the house in February after officials declared it uninhabitable, in part because the ooze gave out a strong odor that caused headaches.

Geologists from the state Department of Environmental Protection discovered a large quantity of refined oil underneath the Buonocores' property. But they cannot determine its source or why the house is acting like a wick pulling it from the ground.

This week, the streaks suddenly appeared in nearby homes owned by Harrison Roach and Robert Mollenkof. Both homes are directly west of the Buonocores' rancher.

William Keene, who lives next door to Mollenkof, is afraid he may be next.

"I've looked on the rafters," Keene said. "They've turned sort of black, but it might be mildew. But I check it every night. I just don't know if I'm next."

All of the houses on the street have electric heat and were built in the 1970s.

Preliminary reports from consultants hired by the state and Atlantic Electric have ruled out leakage from two fuel tanks owned by the utility about 800 feet south of the Buonocores' home.

State officials are awaiting test results of oil samples to determine exactly what type of petroleum product has leaked into the water table.

A DEP geologist said recently the Buonocores could be victims of a leaking gasoline or home heating oil tank. He said leaking storage tanks are becoming a problem in the state as tanks age and deteriorate.

Juror wipes away tears during closing argument at Lance trial

ATLANTA (AP) — While a juror wiped away tears, the lawyer for former federal budget director Bert Lance said a conviction on bank fraud charges would ruin "the reputation, the life and the character of one of the South's finest men."

Defense attorney Nicholas Chilivis finished his closing argument in the 14-week trial on Thursday with an appeal for acquittal on all 12 counts against Lance, President Carter's longtime friend and first budget officer.

Attorneys for three co-defendants were presenting their final arguments today before prosecution rebuttal. U.S. District Judge Charles Moyer Jr. planned to charge the jurors, then send them home for the weekend. Deliberations are to begin Monday.

"You have within your power to restore some measure of honor and dignity" to Lance and his family, Chilivis said. "If you find Mr. Lance guilty of anything... you will have ruined the reputation, the life and the character of one of the South's finest men."

As the lawyer spoke, an elderly juror raised her glasses and wiped away tears. After a protest by prosecutor Edwin J. Tomko, Moyer said he would instruct jurors to disregard appeals to their sympathy.

Tomko's closing argument, which lasted four hours, attempted to tie together testimony and documents accumulated in the lengthy trial. He told the jury the evidence proved that Lance and his associates intended to commit fraud.

"You, the jury, will be justified in returning verdicts of guilty for each defendant on each count in which that defendant is charged," the Justice Department attorney said.

Lance is charged in two counts with submitting a false financial statement to the Atlanta-based Trust Company Bank and in 10 counts with misapplication of bank funds in loans to family and friends.

Co-defendants Richard Carr and Jack Mullins were the borrowers in seven of the loans. In those counts, they are charged as aiders and abettors. With Thomas Mitchell, they are each charged singly with making false statements to banks. In all, there are 19 counts for the jury to consider.

The alleged wrongdoing took place between 1974 and 1976. Lance became U.S. budget chief in January 1977, serving eight months before stepping down under pressure from revelations about his personal finances and practices as head of banks in Atlanta and Calhoun, Ga.

Tomko urged the jurors to look carefully at the thick folders of bank records that will go into the deliberations room with them.

"Look at the entire picture," he said. "Look at each and every document. Look at each and every transaction. Look at the bottom line."

Chilivis recalled Lance's testimony that his financial statements were accurate and the loans made in good faith.

"Mr. Lance has made hundreds of loans and he has a record he can be proud of, that can stand up to anyone," he said. "The government cannot prove that he lied or cheated or tried to hurt anybody, because he did not."

Carter, Reagan win out West

By The Associated Press

President Carter and Ronald Reagan scored more victories in party skirmishes in the West, but as politics goes, it also was a day with something for everyone. Well, almost.

Carter came out on top Thursday in the Idaho Democratic caucuses, and Reagan won at North Dakota's state Republican convention. That added to their large delegate leads over party rivals.

But Reagan's chief GOP rival, George Bush, also picked up some delegates in Arkansas.

And John Anderson's supporters got the go-ahead to put him on the ballot in Massachusetts as an independent, with the Illinois congressman clearly leaning more and more toward making a run outside the two-party system.

And Edward M. Kennedy? Well, President Carter's chief opponent got to hear the famous fable of how the tortoise, by dint of perseverance, finally passed by the rabbit who, perhaps grinning, took an early lead in the race but then pooped out.

Kennedy grinned himself as he sat cramped in a tiny desk listening to the moral of the story in a Philadelphia elementary school classroom. He later told an interviewer: "I didn't get into the race to lose."

Lose he did, however, in Idaho's district caucuses. Carter gained 48 percent of the vote to Kennedy's 30, with 22 percent uncommitted. That would give Carter eight of Idaho's 17 delegates to the Democratic National Convention, and Kennedy five. Four would go as uncommitted delegates.

Reagan picked up 12 delegates at the North Dakota state Republican convention, with one going to Bush and four uncommitted.

and Americans were still hostages in Iran.

Kennedy, busy campaigning in Pennsylvania, insisted again that he could still win enough delegates before the convention to defeat Carter for the nomination.

Carter, at the White House, drew attention Thursday by announcing new sanctions against Iran, including a ban on travel to the country by Americans and on financial dealings with the country by anyone in the United States.

Reagan responded that these steps were fine but should have been taken five months ago when the hostages were captured. Kennedy also said he couldn't disagree with the steps, but said they were "small indeed" and questioned whether they would be effective without the backing of European allies.

At the same time, Bush gained the support of six Arkansas delegates to the Republican National Convention who previously had been uncommitted or pledged to candidates no longer in the race. Their switch gave the former U.N. ambassador eight of that state's 19 delegates. Reagan has nine, and two still are uncommitted.

One of those who switched, incidentally, was Ada Mills, the so-called $11 million delegate. She was the one delegate former Texas Gov. John B. Connally won before he ended his costly quest for the presidency.

Another Republican hopeful, Rep. Philip Crane of Illinois, dropped out of the race Thursday, which will likely benefit fellow conservative Reagan. Crane said he would campaign for the former California governor as a "mainstream conservative candidate."

Reagan also picked up the endorsements of 36 more House Republicans, bringing his total of GOP members to 67. Sixteen senators previously had endorsed Reagan.

Both Reagan and Carter were far ahead in the races for their party's nomination's even before the delegate skirmishes.

Reagan had 372 of the 998 needed for nomination, to 72 for Bush and 57 for Anderson. Rep. Anderson told reporters, meanwhile, that while he hadn't made a final decision to drop out of the Republican race, he was "leaning strongly" toward an independent run for the presidency.

Carter had 925 of the 1,666 required to nominate a Democrat, and Kennedy 770. While Carter's numbers sound impressive, Kennedy delegate hunter Richard Stearns began talking Thursday about the possibility of a rules change at the convention that would free all delegates from commitments to any candidate.

This is envisioned in a scenario in which Carter would have the numbers on his side as the August convention nears, but would look like he had little chance to win in November if inflation still ran high

Ex-Midland Cubs pace Chicago to victory

By JOE MOOSHL
CHICAGO (AP)—Carlos Lezcano never dreamed his first major league hit would be a home run. In fact, he didn't even expect to be in the lineup Thursday for the Chicago Cubs' home opener against the New York Mets.

But manager Preston Gomez, working on the theory that "if we can't play him, we ship him out," had Lezcano's name in the starting lineup and Lezcano responded with a two-run homer in the fifth to put the Cubs ahead to stay in what turned out to be a 4-1 triumph.

"I never dreamed I'd hit a home run for my first hit, I just wanted to get a hit. It was a fast ball up and in," said Lezcano, a 24-year-old who is a second cousin to Sixto Lezcano, star outfielder of the Milwaukee Brewers. "I hit it good and I thought if it didn't go out, it would at least be a double."

The pitch, off loser Tom Hausman, landed on top of the railing in left field and bounded onto the catwalk.

The homer, coming after Barry Foote had singled, made a winner of Dennis Lamp, who is now 2-0 with both victories coming at the expense of the Mets.

"I owe this one to him," said Lamp, a former Midland Cub. "It made me a winner. If he doesn't hit the homer, I probably would have been out of there for a pinch hitter. It's a confidence builder for him. He'll never forget his first major league hit."

LEZCANO played AA ball at Midland last season and the Cubs figured he was still a year away from the major leagues.

"He did everything well in spring training," said Gomez. "He made the club. He's young, and we have to play him. We can't sit him on the bench."

Mets manager Joe Torre said he had no doubts that Lezcano's drive was going out.

"Knowing this ball park," said Torre, "anything hit in the air is going out until proven otherwise. Lamp was very good. He was around the plate. He gave you a little of this and a little of that. The tendency for a pitcher in this park is to do more than he should."

Torre added that Hausman's problem was "the same thing he's been guilty of. He was guiding the ball instead of popping it. He did it on an 0-2 pitch to Foote and again to Lezcano."

PROBABLY the most relieved person in the park was relief ace Bruce Sutter, ex-Midland Cubs pitcher, who earned his third save by pitching the ninth inning. Sutter, who won a $700,000 contract through arbitration, was fearful of how the fans might react in his first home appearance.

"I didn't know how it was going to go," said the Cy Young award winner. "It was nice to go out there with a three-run lead and only one inning to go. A good way to come in."

Joel Youngblood, who drove in the Mets' only run, greeted Sutter with an infield single, his third hit of the game, and advanced to second on a wild pitch. But Sutter retired the next three batters in order and the Cubs received a rousing ovation at game's end from the crowd of 33,062.

Chicago's other two runs came on a single by Dave Kingman, who scored on a double by Jerry Martin and a solo homer by Mike Tyson.

Ex-M-Cub Carlos Lezcano... breaks in with a bang.

ASU-gridders may be forced to attend class

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — A large number of Arizona State University's football players may have to attend summer school to remain eligible, Coach Darryl Rogers said.

Depending on second-semester grades, Rogers said anywhere from 15 to 40 players may have to remain in the classroom this summer.

"We knew we'd have some academic problems when we came here," said Rogers, who left Michigan State in January to take over the ASU post. "We just didn't realize there were going to be this many."

The 1980 squad totals 56 players, including incoming freshmen.

Bulldog rally rips Cats

Pack scores seven runs in seventh for 9-5 win

By BOB DILLON

ODESSA — Midland High likes to do things in a big way.

Coach Tim Whalen's Bulldogs came from a 5-2 deficit in the top of the seventh inning here Thursday to blister the Odessa Permian Panthers, 9-5 with an amazing seven-run explosion.

It was a makeup game in District 5-4A and the Purple Pack did themselves proud by coming from behind. Midland now shares first place in the second half of the race with the Midland Lee Rebels. Both Tall City teams are 2-0 going into action Saturday with Abilene and Abilene Cooper. Breathing down the necks of the Rebs and Bulldogs are the surprising Odessa High Bronchos with a 2-1 loop reading.

JERRY ZACHERY and Joel Castaneda provided the muscle for MHS Thursday. Zachery had three hits in four trips to knock in four runs while Castaneda unloaded a three-run homer over the fence in left during the seven-run uprising which left Mojo gasping.

Castaneda also had three hits, but the home run had to be the most satisfying for the junior third baseman.

"I am so darn proud of this group of youngsters and I like the way our two pinch-runners did on the bases," said Whalen afterwards. Robert Nash and Teddy Bartley both came in to run and stole a base each with Bartley also scoring a run.

Midland was without the services of the regular leftfielder, Bobby Stovall, who was in bed with the flu.

The Bulldogs outing Mojo 12-8 with Doug McLean coming in to pick up the victory in relief of starter Mark Hewitt. Steve Miller mopped up in the seventh to help preserve the victory which gives MHS a 9-8 season mark going into its game with the Abilene High Eagles Saturday at the Memorial Stadium diamond in the Tall City.

THE PACK took a 1-0 lead off starter Mike McCoy in the top of the first inning. Eddie Portillo legged out an infield hit, went to second when McCoy uncorked a wild pitch and scored on Zachery's single into right.

Permian answered with a run in the bottom of the second inning to tie the game, 1-1. After two were out, Hewitt seemed to be out of the inning when he struck out Ricky Reynolds swinging, but the ball got away from catcher Frank Garramone for an error. The swift Reynolds stole second and scored on a single by shortstop Jerry Hix.

In the top of the third, Midland went in front 2-1 when Wickman walked, Tracy Gann singled, but on the play, Wickman was thrown out at third by Reynolds. On the play, Gann went to second and scored on Zachery's second base hit of the game.

That's how how it stood until the bottom of the fifth when Permian scored twice to take a 3-2 lead. Hix walked and Mike Williams sacrificed him to second. Mike Fowler was safe on an infield hit and Richard Hanfeld grounded to third, but catcher Jimmy Sample singled into left to score both Hix and Fowler.

THINGS LOOKED dark indeed for MHS in the bottom of the sixth when Mojo pushed across two more runs for that 5-2 lead. Scott Wynne doubled, Rusty Inzer grounded out to the mound, but Mark Marin was safe when Wickman tried to get Wynne at third amid the throw was late with everybody safe. Reynolds laid down a perfect squeeze bunt for a base hit, scoring Wynne. McLean then came in to face Hix with a 0-2 count on him and got Hix to fly to center. Pinch-hitter Jimmy Morris followed with a base hit to score Marin for the 5-2 advantage.

Pinch-hitter Shawn Mowles got MHS off to a good start in the seventh inning when he was safe on an error by Hix. Miller, pinch-hitting for Hewitt, was awarded first base when Sample interfered with his swing and touched the bat with his glove and Portillo followed with a walk.

WICKMAN SINGLED in pinch-runner Bartley, but on the play, Miller was thrown out at third by Reynolds. Gann walked and Zachery's knocked in two more runs with a base hit. Garramone also singled in a run to set the stage for Castaneda's blast. Jay Doelling came in to strike out Perry Bolger for the final out, but the damage had already been done, leaving the Mojo backers in a state of shock.

Miller got Hanfeld out when Portillo made a diving grab of a hot shot and fired to first to barely get him. Sample followed with a single and Miller, facing his cousin in Wynne, struck out the senior. Inzer walked, but the game ended when LaRoque popped out to short.

With the loss, Mojo is 11-8 and 1-1 in 5-4A play going into its game with Big Spring Saturday.

JIM MURRAY

Lifelong dream comes true

BY JIM MURRAY
Los Angeles Times

Today a lifelong dream comes true for me. I am the opening day pitcher for the 1980 home season for the Dodgers. Of course, I refer to being the ceremonial first-ball pitcher, which is not exactly what my dreams had in mind. My dreams were made of loftier stuff. I can close my eyes right now and recall them clearly...

It is opening day. The Dodgers have come limping home from a road trip and are in deep trouble. Down in one corner of the dugout, old "Flame" Murray is oiling a glove and chewing tobacco placidly. The manager approaches him. "Flame," he asks, "you think you can hold these guys?"

(FLAME looks surprised. He spits a stream of tobacco across the dugout steps. "The Astros?!" he says, eyes wide. "The Houston Astros?! Who do you think you're talking to, Lasorda—some cunny-thumbed kid from Lodi? I've seen better teams in bloomers. I'm surprised the Humane Society lets me play them. I never saw a millionaire play any game that didn't have a tickertape. These guys are so rich I'm surprised they don't play the game on horseback. And in pith helmets. It's got to be easy to strike out a guy worried about the federal redisc-count rate.

"How's the arm? Fine. Just fine. If I can comb my hair with it, I can get it past these guys. Just see if you can get that infield of yours to pick up a ball while it's still rolling once in a while, will you, and I'll shut them out. The way your team's going it's the only way we can get a tie.

"Whaddaya mean, you're taking a chance on me? That pitching rotation of yours doesn't look like Koufax, Drysdale and Podres to me. Or even Spahn, Sain and rain. I've seen better arms on a Venus de Milo. Don't tell me about James Rodney Richard! When I unleash my hummer, he'll look like he's throwing a straight change. And you can tell the bullpen to go home. The outfield, too. To tell the truth, the way they're going, it's safer that way. Tell them it's OK to catch a ball on the fly once in a while in this league, will you? I'm not asking them to fall in the seats, but they ought to be able to catch something that will hit 'em on the head if they don't."

The bell rings. Old Flame strolls to the mound, pulling on his glove and shifting his chaw in his mouth. He stares in at the leadoff batter. He tries not to laugh as he calls his catcher to the mound. "What's this kid's name—Puh? Or is it Fuh? Never mind. He's wound up so tight I can strike him out on one pitch. I'll throw him the dancer and he'll think somebody just threw a whole bag of baseballs at him. He'll go around three times. He'll look like a guy who just walked into a swarm of bees. But, when Cedeo comes up, get ready for the heater. I'll start him off with the No. 3 fastball to get him overconfident, then the No. 2, then the ace. The Holocaust. I'll have his left leg in Pacoima the next time he comes up."

Old Flame pauses to savor the moment. He can just see the headlines now, "Ageless Wonder Subdues Astros, Old Flame Rekindles Dodger Spark." He pauses, contented, looks pityingly at Puhl, and the first pitch of the home season is on its way to the plate...

Crowder denies charity appeal

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — University of Colorado Athletic Director Eddie Crowder has denied informally asking some athletic department personnel to work without pay through the final month of the current fiscal year.

The Denver Post reported Thursday that a memo circulated by Crowder asked staffers if they would consider working without pay because of severe budget problems.

"We're dead broke — there's no other way to explain it," the Post quoted a long-time member of the department.

When asked about the work-without-pay proposal, Crowder replied, "That's totally out of the question. That's right out of the blue."

Crowder's memo did, however, make it clear the crunch is on until the fiscal year ends June 30.

Vikes trade MVP in world to Pats

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Chuck Foreman, described in 1976 by ex-quarterback Fran Tarkenton as "the most valuable football player in the world," was traded by the Minnesota Vikings Thursday to the New England Patriots for an undisclosed draft pick.

rookie Ted Brown last season. The 29-year old runner from Miami (Fla.) University holds virtually all of Minnesota's rushing-and scoring records.

"There's no question that Chuck was the best all-around running back in football," said Coach Bud Grant. "Three or four years ago we could have gotten two No.1 draft picks for him from any team in football. We built our offense around him."

'Dallas' lovers hold season-end group therapy session

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There is something liberating in admitting that you watch "Dallas," the Texas soap opera on CBS. To confess that you like it, that you actually admire its sinuous lines and vulgar rhythms, is positively cathartic.

So, when a friend planned a "final Dallas" episode of the season party" a few weeks ago, my wife and I quickly accepted the invitation. It was as much a group therapy session as a party.

Surrounded by homemade "Dallas" memorabilia, including a replica of Dusty's neckerchief (Dusty, non-fans, is the late lover of Sue Ellen Ewing, a "Dallas" principal ... not to be confused with Pammy, played by Victoria Principal), the "Dallas" devotees took turns sharing "Dallas" stories.

Jim, one of several TV critics at the party (reconstructed "trash"-haters, all), offered a wonderfully bizarre bit of "Dallas" trivia. The character J.R.

Ewing, who, portrayed by Larry Hagman, is malevolence itself, first appeared in an obscure English movie at least two years before "Dallas" was born.

We were impressed, even though he couldn't name the movie.

My wife scored points for having seen the very first episodes of "Dallas," before its special charms were widely appreciated. She was able to clear up some clouded early-"Dallas" matters, such as the fact that young Lucy Ewing (Charlene Tilton) was once rather wanton and that Ray the ranch hand (Steve Kanaly), now a big-brother type, was in the beginning a bad guy.

After some ribs and ranch-style beans, the moment arrived. If you watch "Dallas," you know that events of the entire past season — the pregnancies, paternity suits, the illicit affairs and shady deals of J.R. Ewing — all anticipated this cataclysmic season-ending episode.

J.R. was shot. It was the perfect act of vengeance; at least, the most justifiable attempted murder in television history. Every character who had ever appeared in "Dallas" had reason to take a shot at J.R. The question is, who did?

Was it Jock, the Ewing patriarch, finally tired of the grief caused by his son? Or Mama Ewing, with the same motive? Or one of J.R.'s swindled business partners? Or his oft-defeated arch-rival, Cliff Barnes? Or his driven-to-distraction wife, Sue Ellen?

The producers of the show cleverly left that tiny matter to the imagination for the summer, offering as clues only the sound of high-heels walking through the darkened corridors of the Ewing Building and the sound of a pistol delivering its message.

The solutions came fast and easy, and were just as quickly shot down. "It's Mama Ewing," said Ira. "She's not needed in the story, anyway, and it explains the high-heels."

No, it was generally decided, Mama's gentle influence (provided by Barbara Bel Geddes) was needed on the show, and besides, dress cowboy boots make that same clicking sound. The suspect could be a man.

I have my own theory: There was no single shot fired at all, but two rounds, fired simultaneously by the two men who were the most abused of J.R.'s victims ... Fred Silverman, President of NBC, and Tony Thomopoulos, President of ABC Entertainment.

A.C. Nielsen could be called to the stand to provide motive.

Americans not touring Russia

MOSCOW (AP) — American tourism to Russia has plunged nearly a third since the massive Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan last December, Western and Soviet travel officials said today.

They said the 30 percent decline in the number of U.S. tourists here and a smaller slowdown in Western flights to and from Moscow is apparently tied to growing international tension and doubts by tourists and businessmen about whether they should come to Moscow. A smaller part of the drop, they said, may be natural slack before the Summer Olympics open here in July.

Valentin F. Lebedev, chairman of the Soviet travel monopoly Intourist, told a news conference today that about 3,500 American tourists visited the Soviet Union in the first three months of this year, compared to 5,000 in the same off-season period last year.

Most stage actors want to do movies

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Arts Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Some New York actors loudly vow never to go to Hollywood. Their life is the stage. Brooke Adams, a young, pretty Hollywood expatriate now acting here, is modestly amused by this.

"Yeah, they're all out there now," she observes. "It's a surprise, but most New York actors, whether they say it or not, want to do movies."

"I have more people say, 'Why do you want to do plays now?' These are the very same actors who say, 'I'll never do movies.'"

Since 1974, Miss Adams has done movies, six, from the remake of the 1956 classic, "Invasion of the Body Snatchers," to a robbery caper with Donald Sutherland, "A Man, a Woman and a Bank."

Big-bucks work. But she's now laboring for a pittance, appearing in an old, revised Michael Weller play at the new, tiny, 98-seat Second Stage Theater,

The show is "Split," an alternately sad and comic look at a young couple's breakup. She co-stars in this showcase work, which ends April 20, with another young Hollywood fugitive, John Heard.

She took the gig "for various reasons, but mainly because I want to do a play" and because she believes in the Second Stage goal of reviving good contemporary works that have been neglected.

Weller, author of last season's acclaimed "Loose Ends" on Broadway, talked her into doing "Split." She was bit nervous about it, as she'd been absent from the boards here for six years.

Her last theater effort was a showcase version of "The Petrified Forest," directed by Len "Sweeney Todd" Carlson

Moore

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
FOLKES tries to portray Roger Moore as a cat-loving misogynist, but don't be fooled. The role is a slightly more eccentric James Bond, a death-defying superman who takes on a band of oil rig hijackers in the North Sea in Her Majesty's service. Director Andrew McLaglen knows his way around an adventure movie, and he keeps the action moving and the characters larger than life but fairly plausible!

Bob Daly and CBS' drive for first place

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The toughest, tightest television ratings race in years ends Sunday with the networks battling up to the last commercial.

It climaxes a season that most people thought would be another rout for ABC but turned instead into a neck-and-neck race between last season's winner and CBS.

The results won't be known until Tuesday. ABC may squeak to a narrow victory on the strength of a final surge with the Academy Awards broadcast last Monday and a rerun of "The Sting" on the last day of the ratings season.

No matter. Even if ABC does win, it will be only a footnote on the pages of television history. CBS already is a winner, having broken ABC's three-year grip on the ratings title.

Madison Avenue already has awarded the crown to CBS on the fact the network is ahead with its regular series programming. It is CBS that will command top dollar from the ad agencies next year.

"CBS has already won," said Robert Daly, president of CBS Entertainment, whose quiet, conservative tactics pulled his network out of another certain defeat. "What happens between now and the end of the season is really academic."

CBS is this year's "Rocky." Against all odds and against the oddsmakers, the network pulled off a spectacular comeback. CBS had dominated network television for 20 years until ABC pulled its own upset three years ago and took over network leadership.

How did CBS do it? Virtually everything fell into place for the network. Its long-running series found new life, enough new series caught fire and its made-for-TV movies found audiences receptive.

At ABC, very little went according to plan, despite the success of the network's World Series and Olympics coverage. Its bold strategy to sew up the title by moving "Mork and Mindy," "Laverne and Shirley" and "Fantasy Island" backfired. Its TV movies took a nosedive, and the network had its first failure with a miniseries ("The French Atlantic Affair") during the crucial November sweeps. CBS won the sweeps, which help determine local advertising rates.

Daly said he doubts CBS will win a statistical victory next Tuesday.

"I still believe when the final week comes ABC will end up one-length, two-tenths ahead," he said. "And now with 'The Sting,' I think with great expense they've assured themselves of doing that."

"But we've already planned our victory party on Tuesday night.

It's done. It's over as far as we're concerned."

ABC's last-minute shift of "The Sting" to Sunday night will cost the network dearly. ABC paid big money for the movie and because of the draw during its first broadcast, it should summon premium advertising rates. But ABC's sudden scheduling move means the movie can't command those big rates.

"I think ABC has reached a point where they're getting nervous," Daly said. "It's going to be very close, so they've decided to put "The Sting" in on the last Sunday of the season. That's going to cost them a lot of money."

CBS got off to a rocky start in September. NBC won the first week with big movies, but quickly faded to third place. ABC moved into first.

An important advantage for CBS was that it was able to put together a solid Sunday night lineup.

"60 Minutes," which often lands in first place in the ratings, is a solid anchor for the comedy programs that follow.

Judith Krantz

Writer sells movie rights of novel for $3.2 million

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — If Judith Krantz were describing the scene it might go something like this:

"She stepped into the fabled half-light of the Polo Lounge, a small, blonde woman alert to the buzz that trailed her, swept along by whispers of her name and the heady thrill of admiring glances in a world built on vast acres of money."

But then, if Judith Krantz were really describing it, we also would know the color of the walls and carpets and tablecloths not to mention the designers of furs and jewels adorning luminaries at nearby tables.

JUDITH KRANTZ, author of "Scruples" and the current best seller, "Princess Daisy," reigning superstar of the literary marketplace, credits at least part of her staggering success to her carefully crafted word pictures of the golden boudoirs and executive suites of the upper crust.

"People feel they've been to the places my characters go," says Mrs. Krantz, whose fictional Jet-setters hop from Rodeo Drive and Fifth Avenue to Lausanne, Switzerland; Big Sur, London, Paris, Venice and the shores of Deauville.

"I get letters from people in such tiny small towns, someplace in Arkansas you never heard of. To them, it's a world they know exists but they'll never get to it," she says. "It gives them a glimpse, a taste."

THESE GLIMPSES coupled with stamina and a knack for fashioning updated fairytales steaming with sex have made Judith Krantz an instant millionaire.

In a now-famous auction, the paperback rights to "Princess Daisy" were scooped up by Bantam Books last fall for a mere $3.2 million — the highest price ever. A year before, "Scruples" fetched $500,000.

Sheep, goat producers want war against coyotes

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Texas sheep and goat industry spokesman called Thursday for Congress to take a hard line against coyotes.

"It doesn't matter to us how or what tools are used as long as a protective program is conducted that is as good as what we had before 1965," Martin Wardlaw, president of the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers' Association, testified before a House agriculture subcommittee.

"If it takes the National Guard, then fine. However, it is evident that to get the job done, 1080 will be required," he said.

The chemical compound 1080 was banned in 1972. Last fall, Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus called a halt to further research and experimental use programs designed to show whether the ban was justified.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, and several Texas congressmen have introduced bills that would legalize research and use of the powerful poison.

Wardlaw, of Del Rio, said compound 1080 was used successfully before the ban in poisoned bait stations that served to create a buffer zone around the West Texas sheep and goat country.

"One very important point that must be remembered is that a sheep and goat man cannot tolerate even one coyote in his pastures," he said. "We have enough predators to contend with... without coyotes."

A spokesman for an environmental coalition testified at the same hearing that the reintroduction of the banned chemical would be unlikely to help the sheep and goat industry's economic troubles.

John W. Grandy, executive vice president of Defenders of Wildlife, said 20 years of predator control programs have provided livestock producers only a false sense of security even while compound 1080 was still in use.

He said records of sheep and goat grazing on National Forest Service land show a steady decline since 1940.

Grandy said the level of losses to predators, given as a percentage of the total number grazed, declined sharply when 1080 was introduced but returned to its earlier level even before the chemical was banned.

"The economic problems, coupled with a lack of adequate labor to perform proper husbandry practices, have led directly to another phenomenon - the coyote has become both a scapegoat and a visible symbol of the distress of an economically troubled industry," he said.

The hearing is before the House agriculture subcommittee on oversight, investigations and research chaired by Rep. E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Texas.

Grandy said a federal program to help train shepherds and solve the labor shortage on the range would be more worthwhile than a predator control program based on lethal techniques.

De la Garza replied that much of a shepherd's skill derives from an inherited love for animals and the range.

"There ain't no more of those people, and I don't think you can train them in a Department of Labor training program," he said.

Grandy said efficient shepherds, the use of guard dogs and tase aversives that discourage coyotes from attacking livestock, and other non-lethal techniques have demonstrated positive results.

The coalition he represented included the Environmental Defense Fund, the Friends of Wildlife, the Sierra Club, the Friends of the Earth and the Animal Protection Institute.

Sheep and goat producers have pointed to increasingly severe losses from predators, particularly coyotes, as a major factor in their economic troubles.

L. Charles Howard, a rancher from Meridian, Texas, said his use of compound 1080 in a "toxic collar" testing program has reduced his loss of goats to predators.

"We have continued to have predation on this ranch at a very reduced rate to the point that we don't pen at night, except where we have a coyote killing from the side or rear," he said in his prepared statement.

Howard said the rate of "predatory incidents" is down from one or more per day to about two per month since he began the program.

Approval of registration expected

Panel clears the way for full House debate

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congressional leaders predict the House will approve draft registration of men, but a White House poll shows the outcome is not yet certain and that opponents have a slim chance of stopping the program.

The House Appropriations Committee voted 26-23 Thursday to approve spending $13.3 million to begin registering young men this summer.

That cleared the way for the matter to be debated in the full House next week, probably Tuesday.

"I would be surprised if it were defeated," said House Speaker

Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass. O'Neill revealed that a White House poll of House members found 206 representatives supporting registration, 86 opposed and the remainder of the 435 members undecided.

If that count is accurate, opponents would have to pick up almost all the undecided votes to prevail in the House.

In the view of many critics of registration, the best chance of killing it is in the Senate, where Republican Mark Hatfield of Oregon has vowed to wage a filibuster.

The vote by the full House committee overturned the decision of an Appropriations subcommittee seven weeks ago to approve funds only for a standby system in which registration would not start until the president ordered mobilization in an emergency.

Twice during its deliberations, the full committee shouted down proposals to register women along with men, as suggested by President Carter at one point.

But the committee's vote approving money for registration of men was a key victory for Carter, who has called his program a signal to the Soviet Union of U.S. strength and resolve to protect American interests.

On the other side of Capitol Hill, meanwhile, the Senate Armed Services manpower subcommittee voted in a closed-door session against authorizing registration of women.

Sources said the panel, for the second year in a row, also authorized registration of men, even though Carter already has legal authority to carry out a male-only registration program and only needs money from Congress to begin it.

In rejecting registration of women, the subcommittee approved a set of findings to justify their exclusion on grounds there is no military need to draft women and that women do not belong in combat.

In a related development, a Selective Service spokeswoman said 19- and 20-year-old men will begin registering during the last two weeks in June if the bill before Congress is sent to Carter for his signature.

Joan Lamb said young men born in 1960 and 1961 will be asked to report to their local post office to fill out registration forms giving their name, address, date of birth and Social Security number.

Should Congress authorize a draft, a lottery based on birthdays would be held to determine the order in which the young men would be drafted.

Then, Ms. Lamb said, the Selective Service would ask community leaders to suggest people to serve on local draft boards. These people would interview potential draftees and review requests for postponement.

For example, Ms. Lamb said, college students would be allowed to finish the semester; college seniors to finish the year. High school students would be allowed to finish high school up to the age of 20. Ministers and those studying for the ministry would be exempt from the draft, as would conscientious objectors, for whom alternative service programs would be devised.

Appeals court finds difference between luggage and paper bag

WASHINGTON (AP) - Police need a search warrant to pick through your luggage but not to peer inside your paper bag, the U.S. Court of Appeals says.

The panel ruled 2-1 Thursday that "society recognizes luggage as a personal sanctuary." Except for emergencies, a warrantless search of your suitcase would violate the Fourth Amendment protection against unreasonable searches, the court said.

Not so with a paper bag which "may be pressed into service as a repository of personal effects," but normally does not hold intimate belongings.

There's a lesser expectation of privacy in a bag's contents and therefore no warrant is needed, said the majority opinion by U.S. Circuit Judge Edward A. Tamm.

The explanation didn't satisfy dissenting Circuit Judge David L. Bazelon, who pointed out that "in some of our subcultures, paper bags are often used to carry intimate personal belongings."

"And, the sight of some of our less fortunate citizens carrying their belongings in brown paper bags is too familiar to permit such crass biases to diminish protection of privacy," Bazelon said.

The decision came two days after the Supreme Court, in a significant expansion of constitutional privacy rights, ruled that police may not enter a person's home to make an arrest without a warrant if it's not an emergency.

The appeals court decision issued Thursday focused strictly on search warrants.

The appellate panel overturned the conviction of Albert Ross Jr., who was arrested in Washington in 1978 after police legally stopped his car and searched through two items in his trunk: a leather pouch and a paper bag.

The panel said the search showed there was heroin in the bag and $3,200 cash in the pouch. The pouch should have been considered luggage and therefore the search - and the conviction - must be thrown out, the judges said, noting that the contents of both the pouch and the bag played a part in the conviction.

In setting a different standard for paper bags and luggage, the majority said: "Bags offer at best only minimal protection against accidental and deliberate intrusions. A paper bag can fall open or break very easily. Thus, it is doubtful that one realistically can expect a paper bag to remain closed or intact, its contents unrevealed, at least if it has left its owner's hands."

Bazelon said the majority opinion "constitutionalizes a distinction between a red leather pouch and a paper bag that is necessarily based at least in some part on economic and class differences and perceptions."

The dissenter chided his colleagues for believing a bag's vulnerability to breakage is "constitutionally significant."

"But surely, the applicability of the warrant requirement cannot turn on whether a person carries his belongings in a frayed cloth suitcase or new American Tourister," Bazelon said.
