Carter move may stop flow of refugees

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a move that could stop the flow of Cuban refugees to the United States, President Carter says that henceforth only those screened in advance by U.S. authorities in Cuba will be accepted.

If Cuban President Fidel Castro accepts those terms, Carter said Wednesday, the United States will send boats and planes to ferry the refugees safely out of the island country.

No longer, Carter declared, will the United States allow itself to be used as a "dumping ground" for Cuban criminals and mental patients.

A few hours after the president appeared before reporters at the White House to reveal the new policy, a jetliner chartered by the U.S. government removed 17 officials and their dependents from the U.S. Interests Section in Havana, at least temporarily.

It was not clear how many were left behind, although the State Department, which accused Cuba of a "virulent and continuing anti-American campaign," said some essential employees would remain in Havana.

With no formal diplomatic relations between the two countries, the Interests Section is what passes for a U.S. Embassy in Cuba.

There was no immediate indication what, if any, direct connection the decision to remove most U.S. diplomatic personnel from Havana had with Carter's new policy on accepting refugees. However, Carter noted in his announcement of the policy that he did not know how it would be received by Castro. He said the Cuban leader "has so far refused to cooperate with us."

And the official Cuban communist newspaper Granma indicated today that there would not be cooperation. The refugee boatlift can continue as long as boat captains are willing to take people to Florida, the newspaper said in an editorial broadcast by Havana radio. "Carter governs in Florida, but in Mariel, Cuba governs," the broadcast added.

At the White House, it was unclear how Carter would actually stop the tide of refugees, and officials there indicated that those arriving in the United States, despite the new policy, would not be turned back immediately.

Deputy House Majority Whip Bill Alexander, D-Ark., today quoted Carter as telling congressional leaders Wednesday "he does not expect cooperation from Castro."

"He would be pleasantly surprised if he got it," House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, added.

Under the former policy of accepting any Cuban who could make it to a U.S. port, an estimated 42,000 have poured into the United States in the last three weeks via an illegal, ragtag armada of small craft, often operating under unsafe conditions.

Carter said Castro has "refused to permit a safe and orderly" exit of refugees, and reported that seven deaths have resulted. "Responsibility for those deaths rests on the shoulders of Fidel Castro," the president asserted.

Many Cuban exiles and refugees already in Florida expressed support for Carter's new policy. But they warned of uncertainty as to how it will be received by Castro.

"In Cuba, you never even know what time of day it is," said refugee Juan Hernandez, 50, as he arrived late Wednesday in Key West. "One day, Castro thinks one thing, one day another."

Exile Alexias Muni of Miami, waiting at the government dock in Key West in hopes his 80-year-old mother would come in, said he didn't think Castro would agree to Carter's conditions.

"I just came in yesterday (Tuesday) ... and they are doing everything possible to squeeze the dollars out of the Americans," Muni said of Cuban authorities. "I doubt very much if Castro is going to give up that fountain of dollars for a quick solution."

The Coast Guard, meanwhile, ordered all Americans in the Cuban port of Mariel, where refugees have been loaded during the boatlift, to return immediately to the United States — without refugees.

But a crewman on the 65-foot Greyhound IV, which brought 164 refugees into Key West late Wednesday, said an immediate return may be impossible for the estimated 1,000 to 2,000 boats still at Mariel.

"We were basically prisoners here for 21 days," said John Cochran. "They can call us back all they want, but there are three big gunboats in that harbor. I'm not going to run a blockade of machine guns."

Victor Palmieri, the U.S. coordinator for refugee affairs, said today he thinks Castro has permitted the flood of refugees because the Cuban leader is "in very big trouble" with his people.

For the first time since Castro took power in 1959, Palmieri said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning, America" show, his "regime is shaky" and he hopes to focus attention on the United States and thus draw it from his problems.

Palmieri predicted that the private boat owners sailing between Mariel and Florida will comply with the new policy. He called the flotilla "unsafe, disorderly."

Area residents welcome rain

Heavy deluge plagues early-morning motorists

Residents of Midland and other Permian Basin communities awoke this morning to the pitter-patter of raindrops, a welcome relief from the dryness of this arid region.

Rain began falling shortly before midnight in Midland and continued throughout the early morning hours, accompanied by large hail in some parts of the city. At 8 a.m. the National Weather Service office at Midland Regional Airport was still reporting only .27 inch of the wet stuff, but the weatherman noted that much more rain had fallen since midnight.

That fact was illustrated by the rain-swollen streets and intersections that plagued early-morning motorists in the Tall City. Midland Police Department reported that numerous vehicles drowned out during the rush to work, but there were relatively few traffic accidents reported.

Around the city, the rain appeared to fall heaviest in the south and east areas and lighter in the north and west. Midland Farmers' Coop reported receiving .70 inch of rain and a small amount of hail this morning. Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, located on the south end of the city off I-20, reported an inch of rain and large, mushy hail.

On the city's north side, however, Midland College reported receiving only .35 inch and an apartment dweller on the far north end of the city recorded .50 inch.

Ten miles east of Midland, the community of Greenwood reported .60 inch of rain and some hail. The Warfield community, southwest of Midland, reported receiving .35 inch of rain. An area to the northeast of Stanton reportedly received 1.5 inches.

South of Midland, the Midkiff community reportedly received about .25 inch of rain.

Other Permian Basin communities also reported rain this morning. Andrews reported .50 inch in intermittent showers. Stanton reported an inch of rain and Crane, Odessa, Rankin, Big Lake and Lamesa all reported small rainfall amounts from overnight. Heaviest rainfall appeared to center around Big Spring where two inches of rain fell. In Luther, near Big Spring, four inches of rain was reported. High water was present in some areas on I-20, some of it floorboard deep.

Area farmers said the rain would help to prepare the soil for planting, but some said not enough rain has fallen yet. One farmer said at least an inch of rain is needed to give the ground the moisture it needs.

The ground just might get some more of the wet stuff tonight. The forecast issued this morning by the weather service was calling for thunderstorms through tonight. Friday is expected to be partly cloudy.

This afternoon's 90 percent rainfall probability is expected to decrease to 30 percent tonight.

Low temperature tonight is expected to be in the middle 50s and the high on Friday should reach only the upper 70s.

Winds tonight will blow out of the north at 15-20 mph, the weatherman said. High temperature Wednesday in Midland was 66 degrees, mild compared to the record 100-degree reading for that date, set in 1960. Low this morning was 59. Record low for today's date is 40 degrees, set in 1967.

Thunderstorms rampaged across much of Texas today, packing hail, heavy rain and gusty winds. Minor flooding was widespread and there were some evacuations.

West Texas took the brunt of the mid-morning storms, with Snyder in Scurry County getting four to seven inches of rain. The deluge caused Deep Creek, which meanders through town, to overrun its banks. Police reported removing people from several homes and from stalled cars.

Nearby Rotan reported heavy hail an unofficial five inches of rain this morning, with some businesses reporting water in their buildings.

In Baird, east of Abilene, lightning struck a transformer and knocked out power in most of the city.

Midlander among women seeking Miss USA crown

BILLOXI, Miss. (AP) — A new Miss USA will be crowned tonight and the reigning Miss USA, Mary Therese Friel, says her successor will have to get used to having less freedom.

"I've been around the world and to half the states in the country," said Miss Friel, 21, of Rochester, N.Y. "It was a loss of freedom that I wasn't used to, but I became a public figure and they had to keep track of me."

The two-hour finale of the two-week pageant will be broadcast live on CBS and will feature Bob Barker as master of ceremonies and Helen O'Connell as anchorwoman. There are 51 contestants — from the 50 states and Washington, D.C.

Midlander Barbara Buckley is representing the state of Texas in the competition.

Singer Donny Osmond will provide entertainment. Among the judges will be Bob Kane, creator of the "Batman" comic strip; Adam West, who played the character on television; and Gerald Fitzgerald, editor of Opera News Magazine.

No dime-a-gallon fee—yet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Motorists won't see that dime-a-gallon increase at the gas pumps today after all. But President Carter and Congress appear at odds on how long the reprieve will last.

As the administration pursued its appeal of a judge's order blocking the president's gasoline fee, legislation to block it completely appeared gaining strength in Congress and Carter lashed out at congressional leaders for succumbing to political pressure against the levy.

"When the congressional leaders came to see me in the Cabinet Room early in March they asked me to impose an oil conservation fee amounting to 10 cents a gallon on gasoline," the president told a group of small-business leaders today. "Now, pressures on them are tending to reverse that action."

The president, noting that oil imports were down 12 percent so far in 1980, said "the pressures to discontinue this progress are tremendous. It does require political courage in the Congress and executive branch."

He said failure to impose the fee "would undoubtedly result in a much higher level of OPEC oil prices during the coming months and it will tend to make our allies and other major consuming nations reverse, perhaps, or stop their additional commitment to intense conservation measures."

"It's a small price to pay," he said. "I took the action unilaterally. No congressional action was necessary. Now there are pressures in the Congress to take legal action to stop the imposition of this conservation fee."

At the same time, Carter said political pressures of an election year were "working counter" to steps he and Congress agreed upon to reduce inflation.

"We jointly committed ourselves to a balanced budget," he said. "That was a clear public commitment by the Congress, both Democrats and Republicans, and myself to the American people."

"In recent days we have seen disturbing signs in the Congress that this commitment to a balanced budget might be in danger," he said.

Both the Senate Finance Committee and a House Ways and Means subcommittee already have given wide support to a measure banning imposition of the dime-a-gallon fee.

However, on the strength of parliamentary maneuvering, the administration won a week's delay in action by the full Ways and Means Committee, which had been expected to approve the blocking legislation today.

As the panel met, Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., a vocal supporter of the oil-import fee, protested that the session violated committee rules.

Since the committee's trade subcommittee had approved the import-fee repeal bill only Wednesday, today's meeting violated a rule requiring 48 hours between a subcommittee vote on a bill and full committee consideration,

Man arrested in stabbing, rape of Angelo woman

SAN ANGELO — A 22-year-old Carlsbad, Texas, man, arrested Wednesday evening, was formally charged and arraigned this morning in connection with the reported rape and multiple stabbing of a 20-year-old San Angelo woman.

Tom Green County Peace Justice Ruth Nicholson set bond this morning at $75,000 for Kenneth Steven Powell, charged with aggravated rape with serious bodily injury.

The woman, who originally was from Tahoka and who had only been in San Angelo since Friday, was listed in poor condition early this morning in the intensive care unit of Shannon Memorial Hospital here. She had received 10 stab wounds to the back, one to the chest and a partially cut throat.

According to a bulletin issued by the San Angelo Department of Public Safety, the woman was kidnapped around 6 p.m. Tuesday.

A spokesman for the Tom Green County Sheriff's Office said the woman told deputies a man forced her into his car at knife-point. She reportedly had been doing some cleaning work for a blind man on the north side of San Angelo and didn't have cab fare, so she began walking back to her downtown-area home around 8:30 p.m. Tuesday.

At that time, a man in a white Chevrolet with black interior and a broken windshield stopped and forced her into the car, she said. He then took her 12 miles north of San Angelo near Carlsbad where he allegedly raped her and then stabbed her and cut her throat.

He then reportedly released her somewhere south of the San Angelo Center at Carlsbad.

The woman managed, with the help of a large stick she had found, to walk and crawl approximately a mile through heavy brush and over a four-foot-high fence to the side of U.S. Highway 87, in front of San Angelo Center, a home for the handicapped, the sheriff's spokesman said.

Carol Davis, a registered nurse at the center, saw the woman around 8:44 a.m. Wednesday and summoned help. The woman was taken by ambulance to Shannon Memorial.

Around 2 p.m. Wednesday, Tom Green County Sheriff's deputies spotted a car in the Carlsbad area matching the description given by the woman.

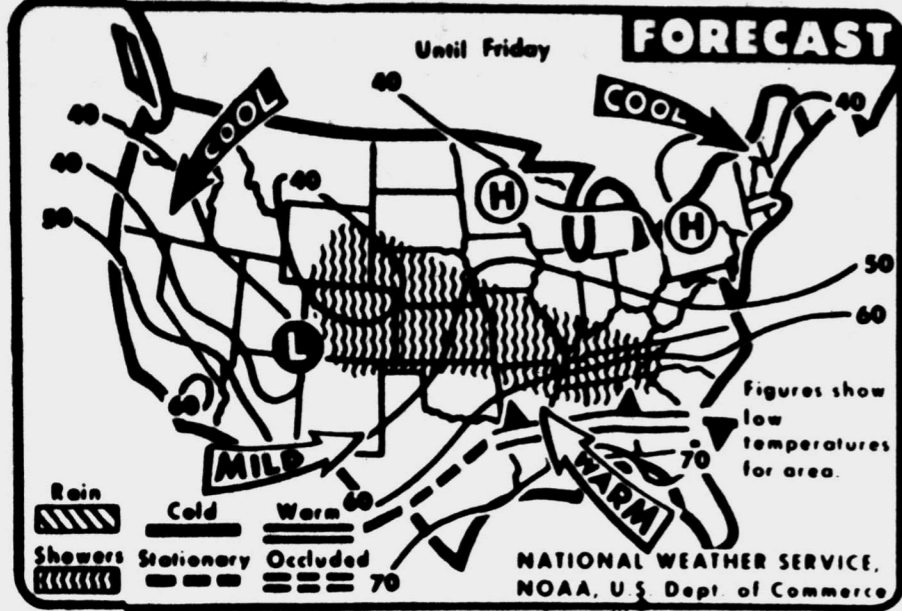

The vehicle was placed under surveillance, and a man was later arrested in the car. The sheriff's department spokesman said there was blood inside the car and other evidence, including a blood-stained knife believed to be the one used in the attack, was taken into custody.

Foot and tire prints were found close to where the woman was left, and law enforcement officials believe it to be close to where the crime was committed.

A picture of the man arrested, along with pictures of several other men, were shown to the woman at the hospital late Wednesday night, and she identified the man arrested as her attacker, the spokesman said.

He also said the man had signed a formal confession.

Jury indicts 29

Twenty-nine people, including a man and a woman who allegedly committed aggravated robbery of a Midland general contractor Wednesday morning and supposedly fired off four pistol rounds as the contractor fled, were indicted that day on charges including rape, theft, delivery (sale) of controlled substances, robbery, burglary and subsequent offense of driving while intoxicated. Still at large is the pair who robbed Gary Eptling, a 23-year-old general contractor, of approximately $500 in $20 bills near Resthaven Memorial Park, as Eptling and the two, including his business partner and brother-in-law, and a 19-year-old woman who worked for Eptling were going to a worksite.

Light rain and slick pavement resulted in a rear-end, chain-reaction collision involving three cars on Big Spring near Story Street about 4:30 p.m. Wednesday. Reacting to the crash, which involved no injuries and minor damage, is D'Nese Kennedy, 3212 W. Wadley Ave. (Staff Photo by Edward McCain)

Iran says U.S. saboteurs flown in Khomeini calls for purge of Iranian radio-television

By The Associated Press Revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini called today for a purge of Iranian radio and television. He said radio-TV contained "deviantist groups which had ties with the former regime (of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi) or were in its service and those which are corrupt and cause corruption." Tehran Radio reported. In a meeting with Taqi Farahani, the new managing director of Iranian radio and television, Khomeini said, "It is both your religious and legal duty to purge radio and television" of these elements, the broadcast reported. Extreme care should be taken, Tehran Radio quoted Khomeini as saying, to avoid imitating the East or the West "because imitating the East or West is not in harmony with an Islamic radio and television service."

Sheriff, police chief feuding in Crane

CRANE — The jailhouse dispute that is waging between the sheriff and police may be resolved if and when the Crane City Council and the Crane County Commissioners' Court draw up a contract on the county jailhouse, which is currently being controlled by the sheriff. "Oh, this is kind of a political deal right now," Mayor Glenn Grissom told The Reporter-Telegram this morning. "The jail is not locked up" to use by the city. Police Chief Bill Lee contends that longtime Crane County Sheriff Raymond Weatherly has barred city use of the jail by changing the lock on the jailhouse door. "That's the third time — it's happened twice before in 20 years — that the (county) jail has been closed to the city," said Lee. However, Weatherly, sheriff here for more than 20 years, said that he did change the lock on the jail on May 5 but re-installed the old lock that very day at the request of the mayor. The police chief has keys to the jail, for the city is without a jail or holding tank of its own. Lee contends that part of the differences between him and the sheriff arose when his assistant, Police Capt. Hal Dew, ran against Weatherly for sheriff. Dew lost his bid to oust Weatherly 1,052 to 754 votes. "He (Weatherly) don't think anybody ought to run for sheriff as long as he has it," maintained Lee. Lee also said the sheriff wants him and Dew off of the police force. "He (Weatherly) sent word by the mayor that if they (city council) don't fire the two officers (Lee and Dew), that the jail would be off limits to the (city) police," Lee said. Weatherly said he would use his discretion in allowing city prisoners to be confined in his jail. "I'm responsible for every one that goes in that jail, and I can be sued and not the city if a prisoner hangs himself or something," Weatherly said. Grissom said the conflict can be resolved. "There has never been a contract between the city and county for jail facilities," the mayor said. "A few have tried to make a big issue out of it... and the City Council and the Commissioners' Court get along real good. The sheriff and the chief, I think, can resolve their differences."

Blind students honored

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Education Shirley M. Hufstедler today honored three blind students who are graduating near the top of their college classes. In a ceremony in her office, she presented each with a plaque and a $1,000 scholarship from Recording for the Blind, a voluntary organization that tapes textbooks for blind students and chose the winners. Mrs. Hufstедler said she hoped their example would "help us inspire all the young men and women who have some kind of disability." She said that in meeting students with handicaps, she often finds they "turn out to be the least handicapped among us. Each has overcome some kind of disability and found within themselves a spirit which is the envy of most people who are not handicapped."

House burgled

A total of $961 in household items was reported stolen Wednesday from a residence at 3302 Alford Ave. Flossie Proctor told officers that she left for work around 8:45 a.m. Wednesday. When she returned at approximately 1:45 p.m., she found an A.M.F.M. eight-track stereo; two black and white televisions; eight eight-track tapes; six record albums; a B-B gun; .22-caliber rifle; $22 in cash and a bottle full of change missing. Entry apparently was gained by prying the screen off a front window next to the door. Exit was through a door on the north side of the house.

West Germany votes to boycott Olympics

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (AP) — The West German Olympic Committee voted today not to send a team to the Moscow Games, giving the U.S.-led effort to organize an international boycott of the 1980 Olympics its biggest push to date. There are now more than 40 countries that have decided for one reason or another to stay away from the Games, which are considered important by the Russians because of the favorable international exposure they expected to receive. President Carter launched the boycott effort in February after the Soviets ignored a deadline he set for removing their troops from Afghanistan. Today's 50-40 vote by the West German Olympic Committee was the most important endorsement to date from another country and brought to five the number of European nations boycotting the Games. The decision to accept the boycott "under current political conditions" was expected to have wide repercussions in encouraging other teams to boycott. It came two days after the French Olympic Committee decided it would go. In Washington, Carter said the West German Olympic Committee made "a courageous decision." He said, "The committee, the West German government, and the people of West Germany deserve the admiration of all those throughout the world who believe in peace and freedom and who recognize that the achievement of these goals sometimes requires painful sacrifices." Carter said in a statement released by the White House. The German vote came after an emotional four-hour debate in a hotel ballroom in this Rhineland city and climaxed months of controversy in West Germany over the U.S. proposal. Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and the West German parliament last month recommended that the Olympic committee boycott because of the Soviet action in Afghanistan that they said violated International Olympic Committee rules on conduct by Olympic host nations. Shortly after the vote was taken, the Moscow Olympic Organizing Committee announced that the Games would go on as scheduled. "The administration of the United States of America had its effect on the German government," a Soviet official said. But the German decision is expected to have even more effect on the Games. So far the European nations of Albania, Monaco, Liechtenstein and Norway have decided not to go to Moscow. Countries that have indicated they will not send teams to the 1980 Moscow Olympic Games include, Argentina, Albania, Antigua, Bahrain, Bermuda, Bolivia, Canada, Central Africa, Chad, China, Chile, Egypt, Fiji, Gambia, Haiti, Honduras, Indonesia, Iran, Kenya, Liberia, Liechtenstein, Malawi, Malaysia, Mauritius, Monaco, Nicaragua, Norway, Pakistan, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Philippines, Qatar, United States, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, Somalia, Sudan, Taiwan, Uganda, West Germany, Virgin Islands and Zaire. Countries waiting to see what action the Germans took included Japan, the Netherlands and Portugal. In Colorado Springs, Colo., F. Don Miller, executive director of the U.S. Olympic Committee, said the West German decision could force other countries to reconsider earlier decisions to go. Miller said the German vote to boycott was not surprising, but said it could still "serve as a catalyst to bring along some of the others not to send their teams to the Games. And also some of those who already voted to go may reconsider."

By Franchelle Moore

P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702

My neighbor who lives diagonally across the street from me insists on parking his vehicles in front of my property, while leaving the street in front of his house clear.

I have been living in my house since it was new and am the only owner. I paid for the paving, curb and sidewalk in front of my home, and I feel like I have at least some rights as to who can park there.

Can you please tell me just what my position, legally, is in this matter? Also, their kids and others in the neighborhood use air rifles to shoot birds in my yard.

Is it legal for them to fire these weapons inside the city limits?

These kids also are "hit and run" door bell ringers at night and have even been known to window peep. — J.N.

ANSWER: The Midland Police Department says that nothing can be done about the parking of your neighbor's vehicles in front of your property, regardless of the situation, because the streets "belong to the city of Midland," and can be used by all persons.

Here is some good news. The Police Department says it is illegal for anyone to fire an air rifle within the city limits. Just notify the department about the use of air rifles, and also register a complaint about the door bell ringing and window peeping.

There is a vacant lot at 716 W. Nobles St. which is overgrown with weeds, covered with debris, etc. Some effort has been made to clean the lot, but it still needs more work done on it. What can be done? — V.B.

ANSWER: The interested individual or individuals should contact the Inspection Department of the city of Midland. That number is 683-4281.

An investigator will check the lot again, if this has not already been done. If it is determined the condition of the lot is in violation of city ordinances, the lot owner will be given notice to clean the property. If the owner does not comply, the city can clean the lot and assess costs to the owner.

Under my mother's will, I am to receive her home and adjoining lot. When she dies, will I be required to pay inheritance taxes on this property? — N.K.

ANSWER: On death, both the State of Texas and the federal government levy a death tax, the State Bar of Texas states.

In 1979, no federal estate taxes were payable if an estate did not exceed $147,000; in 1980, the amount is $161,000.

On the same estate, Texas levies no inheritance tax if the children of the deceased take no more than $100,000.

Therefore, the answer depends upon the value of the home and lot and the value of the other assets in your mother's estate.

Residents remain opposed to prison

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Although a deadline set by the owners has expired and Starr County residents still say they don't want a prison in their community, the Prison Approval Board will meet here May 22 to again consider buying La Casita Farm.

The State Board of Corrections voted April 22 to spend $7.8 million for the 5,293-acre farm. The farm would be the site of a maximum security prison for the overcrowded prison system.

Minutes after the board decided to buy the farm, the three-member Approval Board voted for a 30-day delay in the purchase. The Approval Board was confronted by Starr County officials against the prison.

Gov. Bill Clements and Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong said area residents were entitled to more information on the prison.

Starr County Judge Blas Chapa, who appeared before the Approval Board in April, said Wednesday his opinion has not changed.

"I don't think they are going to change the peoples' minds here. We want to change (the board's mind), but they won't change ours," said Chapa, who owns a homesite overlooking La Casita.

The Corrections Board heard more complaints Monday when it met in McAllen. Chapa said he gave the board a long list of questions he wants answered.

Last week W.J. Estelle, TDC director, apologized at a civics club meeting in Rio Grande City for the secrecy surrounding plans to buy the land.

On Wednesday, a TDC plane took eight Starr County residents, including Chapa's son, to Huntsville for a tour of the prison system.

Last week Clements said public hearings about the prison would be convened in Starr County. No such hearings have been held.

The owners of La Casita set an April 23 deadline for the sale and have said the deadline was firm, but Armstrong and Board of Corrections Chairman James Windham said Wednesday they think the farm is still available.

"If it was available then, barring some dramatic change, it will be available now," Armstrong said.

"We have every indication that it will be" available, Windham said.

Armstrong said the Board of Corrections, which will meet a half-hour before the Approval Board on May 22, will be asked again to present its side of the argument.

"The governor has been pushing the board to make their case a little better to us," said Armstrong.

He said Starr County residents now are more "fully informed" about the prison.

"I think some may have changed and will be supportive, but for others it may have reinforced their opposition," he said.

Teen-ager held hostage on plane

MIAMI (AP) — An armed man forced a teen-age hostage aboard a seaplane on an island in Biscayne Bay this morning and demanded to be flown to either the West Indies or to Africa, Miami police said.

The gunman, armed with either a shotgun or rifle and a revolver, forced a 17-year-old, part-time cleanup worker at Chalk's International Airline to get on the aircraft at 5:45 a.m., said Angelo Bitsis, Miami police spokesman.

The plane was still on the ground more than four hours later. Authorities said there was no pilot on board.

"The maintenance guy was working on the airplane when it all started," Bitsis said. "They guy approached him and forced him on the airplane."

Bitsis said police received a written demand from the man and that the FBI was called in to handle the negotiations. FBI spokesman Welton Merry said the man was responding to the name of James Thomas Wright.

Bitsis said the name was obtained when police ran a computer check on a battered, blue 1967 Oldsmobile the man is believed to have driven to the island, located on a causeway between Miami and Miami Beach.

"He's 34, but we don't know where he's from," Bitsis said.

The white, red-striped twin-engine Grumman Goose, an aging propeller-driven plane with a range of about 1,000 miles, was parked on a ramp at Chalk's Watson Island base just across from downtown Miami. The plane's tail was only a few feet from the bay.

Miami radio station WVCG said the aircraft was loaded with fuel after the gunman went aboard, apparently, in partial response to the man's demands.

Bitsis said police were summoned by other Chalk's workers who saw the young man being taken hostage. He said the man handed out a written demand after police arrived.

"We don't know why he wants to go," said Bitsis. "I don't think he's said."

Chalk's, which advertises itself as the world's oldest regularly scheduled airline, flies seaplane routes through the Bahama Islands. It does not have any aircraft capable of flying to Africa, which Bitsis said seemed to be the gunman's primary demand.

Merry said negotiations of this type are difficult, at best.

"This is an involved process," he said. "A lot of chit-chat is used to get the man talking."

B-1 bomber, MX missile funds pass House vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — When it came to cutting spending or beefing up the U.S. military, the House opted for military spending.

The House voted down an effort Wednesday to shelve the new MX missile system and later decided to resurrect a revamped, but slower, version of the B-1 bomber that was shot down three years ago.

Development of the MX missile system, which would replace the aging Minuteman missile with a system of mobile missiles mounted on moving trucks in an effort to confuse enemy targeters, is contained in a $53.1 billion weapons authorization bill.

The authorization for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1 includes $36.3 billion for military hardware procurement, $16.7 billion for research and development and $167 million for civil defense.

The authorization is $6.2 billion more than the president sought. The House Armed Services Committee added the extra money primarily to buy more ships and planes.

Rep. Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., moved Wednesday to carve the $1.6 billion for the MX out of the bill, but the House, with little debate, voted Dellums down, 319-82.

The bill also survived an attempt to knock out $200 million to develop a version of the B-1 that could be used to launch cruise missiles, another new missile system that is considered a key to future U.S.

Rep. Jack Edwards, R-Ala., proposed to kill the B-1 money, but he was voted down 297-119.

The resurrected B-1 would be slower than the supersonic bomber that President Carter killed three years ago.

Edwards claimed that the B-1 would be too costly and might not even be what is wanted by Air Force planners. He said it's not needed "at this time."

But Rep. Robert Dornan, D-Calif., led the opposition to Edwards. Noting the Russian Bafire bomber, Dornan said, "The Soviets are building a B-1 and developing a B-2 and a B-3, while we're castrating this fine plane."

Lions learn martial arts

Demonstrations of karate techniques and background information on the martial arts highlighted the program at the Wednesday noon meeting of the Downtown Lions Club in Midland Center.

The program, arranged and introduced by Jim Chapman, was presented by Jenice Miller, head instructor of the Midland Karate Academy. Ms. Miller holds a fifth degree black belt in karate plus 268 international and national titles.

She and six other students and representatives of the academy demonstrated various techniques used in karate.

Assisting Ms. Miller in the demonstrations were Cliff, Shawna and Kirk Goddard, Brad Miller and Kurt Kelley and Rusty Petree.

Ms. Miller, in her opening remarks, said that karate fast is becoming a popular sport, with interest and participation increasing nationwide. She said plans are under way to gain its acceptance as an Olympic sport. Ms. Miller added that there is a great deal of interest in karate in Midland.

'Signals' kept Carter from paying his respects

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — There has been a lot of criticism about President Carter's failure to go to Marshal Tito's funeral. The White House has reacted strongly to the criticism and various spokesmen in the Administration have been ordered to go out and defend the President's decision.

"It all boils down to a question of signals," the Administration spokesman, in charge of leaking to columnists, said. "President Carter was terribly saddened by the marshal's death, but if he went to Tito's funeral, he would be sending the wrong signal to Moscow."

"How's that?" I said.

"If Carter had appeared in Belgrade, he would have had to say hello to Leonid Brezhnev, and if he had said hello to him, Brezhnev would have gotten the message that the United States was not as upset about the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan as we really are."

"Why didn't Carter go to Belgrade and not speak to Brezhnev? This would have been a stronger signal as to how we felt about the aggression."

"Yes, but our allies would have been very upset if Carter didn't speak to Brezhnev at the funeral, because it would have been a signal that Carter wanted to rekindle the cold war."

I said, "Carter wouldn't have had to discuss Afghanistan with Brezhnev. He could have kept the conversation light by talking about Cuba."

"Believe me," the spokesman said, "this decision was given a great deal of thought. At first we believed the President should go, if for no other reason that this would be a signal that the U.S. would not tolerate any Soviet interference in Yugoslavian affairs. But we felt we could send the same signal by shipping over Vice President Mondale and Miz Lillian."

"Apparently, the Yugoslavs didn't get the signal," I said. "They thought Carter stayed home for political reasons and didn't care if Tito had died or not."

"If they got that out of it, then there was a mixup of signals. The President was very heartbroken by Tito's death, and if it hadn't been for Brezhnev deciding to go to Belgrade, Mr. Carter would have been one of the chief mourners. The other consideration was that the President can't be photographed looking sad at this time as this would be a signal to everyone that things are worse than most people think they are."

"I guess your problem in the White House now is to send another signal to the Yugoslavs asking them to disregard the previous signal concerning the President's absence, so they won't send a signal to Moscow saying they want to be friends."

"We're working on that now," the spokesman admitted. "The President is going to Italy next month, and probably will visit Belgrade to make up for his failure to say goodbye to Tito last week. He'll lay a wreath on Tito's grave, which is a pretty strong signal to the Soviets to keep their cotton-pickin' hands off Yugoslavia."

"Do you think the Yugoslavs will get over their hurt that Carter never came to the funeral?"

"Yes," he said, "as long as we explain to them that Tito would have wanted it that way."

Another tax story

Learn to play by the rules and they'll change the rules on you every time.

Take, for instance, the speculation by Philip Verleger, formerly the Treasury Department's chief energy economist.

Verleger has speculated that the Congress overestimated the amount of money to be raised by the so-called "windfall profits tax." Instead of the anticipated $227 billion the tax was expected to raise, Verleger figures only $100 billion-plus will be raised.

Oil producers may get more heavily involved in tertiary oil — oil recovered by means of special techniques from older reservoirs — because of the tax break, if you can call it that.

What it boils down to is that primary oil production is taxed at a 70 percent rate while tertiary oil is taxed only at 30 percent. That, in the federal government's eyes, is a tax break.

Of course, the sad part of this whole story is the simple fact that the federal government is so concerned about this nation's energy future that it wants to hamstring the oil industry as much as possible.

Doubtless, there will be no letting a dead dog lie this time around. As soon as some federal bureaucrat discovers the "loop-hole" in the oil tax you'll see a scramble in Washington to put an end to any visibility of profitability in the oil industry.

We'll hear talk of a rip-off once again as congressmen traipse around claiming they want to protect the public by bleeding oil men.

The windfall profits tax never was intended to be, is not and never will be in the interest of the American public. The tax is nothing more than another money-making scheme concocted by bureaucrats to feed the insatiable appetite of an overly large and unwelcome government.

The tax is not needed and will only serve to further the growth of the federal bureaucracy, a result that, sadly, could lead to the expedited deterioration of this nation's economy.

Perhaps the tax would be a little easier to stomach if the bureaucrats were simply more honest about it. If they'd just admit that the tax measure is a money-raising scheme to finance an expanded bureaucracy we'd understand. We wouldn't like it, but we'd understand.

Simple fact of the matter is we haven't heard that type of honest, plain talk coming out of Washington in several years.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

FBI reminded about its Tip O'Neill plan

WASHINGTON — The FBI always seems to have trouble uncovering scandals that involve its own wrongdoing. I reported eight years ago, for example, that the G-men were spying on prominent movie stars, athletes, civil rights leaders and writers. The FBI denied it, so I was happy to help. I told the FBI where its secret files were stashed and published the file numbers.

Jack Anderson

Now the bureau is denying my story that House Speaker Tip O'Neill was a target of the ABSCAM caper. Apparently they need more help from this quarter, so here it is:

If the FBI will question one of their ABSCAM go-betweens, a New Jersey contractor named Joseph Silvestri, he can remind them how they pressured him repeatedly to bring O'Neill into their phony Arab influence-buying scam. He can refresh their memory about how the G-men offered $50,000 for netting the Speaker, and how they later upped this to $75,000.

As I reported, O'Neill never became involved in the ABSCAM operation, because Silvestri didn't really know him, and was unable to find anyone who'd introduce him to the Speaker.

If the FBI needs corroboration of Silvestri's testimony, agents can speak to his attorney, Alfred DeCotis. After he read my column and the FBI's denial that O'Neill was ever an ABSCAM target, the attorney told my associate Gary Cohn:

"I have studied the Jack Anderson column and reviewed the matter with my client, Mr. Silvestri, and I have no reason to take issue with any of the factual assertions in that article."

Here are some more details that may be helpful:

- Silvestri, trying to ingratiate himself with the FBI's undercover operatives, whom he believed to be Arab influence-seekers, made his offer to produce O'Neill at a meeting in the Plaza Hotel in New York last October with operatives Tony DeVito and Mel Weinberg. (Weinberg is a convicted con artist who agreed to work with the FBI and actually designed much of the ABSCAM strategy.)

As evidence that he knew O'Neill, Silvestri showed the undercover men a photo of his wife with the Speaker and Rep. James Howard, D-N.J. The photo was taken at a Howard fundraiser, and proved nothing.

At a meeting in the Hilton Hotel in Mt. Laurel, N.J., last November, Weinberg told Silvestri that his "Arab" clients would pay $75,000 for O'Neill. The increased ante was apparently put up after the ABSCAM team checked with higher-ups at the Justice Department in Washington.

When Silvestri came to Washington that same month, the agents pressed him to arrange a meeting with the Speaker. Hoping to stall the ABSCAM agents until he had figured out some way of actually meeting O'Neill, Silvestri assured them he'd set up a meeting in Boston at a later date.

Meanwhile, Silvestri tried to appease the agents by offering to introduce them to other influential politicians. One of them was North Carolina's Lt. Gov. James Green, a member of Jimmy Carter's re-election campaign team. The ABSCAM agents told Silvestri they weren't interested in Green, but wanted O'Neill.

If the FBI needs more leads, I'll try to oblige.

Footnote: A spokesman acknowledged that the FBI's original statement denying that O'Neill's name had never been mentioned during the ABSCAM investigation was wrong. But the spokesman still insisted that O'Neill had not been "a target" of the investigation.

CASUAL CHICAGO: A typical Mafia initiation ceremony has been described by insiders as something of an elegant Old World ceremony. Members of the Mob family sit around a table and join hands. They discuss the "goodness" of La Cosa Nostra, the rules the proposed member must abide by, and his professional qualifications — say, the number of murders he has participated in.

The applicant then has his finger pricked, and the blood is smeared on a mass card with a picture of a saint holding a child. The card is then set on fire and the fledgling mafioso passes it from hand to hand while he recites an oath of allegiance and expresses the hope that he will burn like the card if he betrays his oath.

But in Chicago, the initiation ceremony is as breezy as the lake front. According to insiders, the Mob simply throws a big banquet to welcome the new member of the crime family.

GIMME A BREAK! The tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee is accustomed to petitions from citizens and special interests seeking a break on income taxes. But some of the requests are really off the wall.

A Long Island lawyer, for example, asked for a tax credit on $1,700 worth of tickets to the Summer Olympics in Moscow, arguing that President Carter's boycott will prevent him from using them and he probably won't be able to get a refund from the Russians.

WATCH ON WASTE: As Art Buchwald shrewdly noted many years ago, the true status symbol in Washington is a free, reserved parking place. Since Jimmy Carter initiated the practice of charging Executive Branch employees for their reserved parking spots, Congress is the last bastion of the free-parking perk — and the legislators are guarding their privilege jealously.

Each congressman is assigned no less than six free parking spaces for himself and his office staff — four indoor stalls and two outdoor spaces. Senators can get as many as 15, depending on the size of their state. Similar parking spots on the open market would cost the lawmakers as much as $1,000 each.

The taxpayers, of course, foot the bill — to the tune of nearly $1.4 billion a year.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, May 15, the 136th day of 1980. There are 230 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On May 15, 1602, Cape Cod was discovered by the English navigator, Bartholomew Gosnold.

On this date: In 1536, Anne Boleyn and her brother, Lord Rochford, were found guilty of adultery and incest in England.

In 1918, the first regular air mail service began between New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

In 1924, Congress passed a bill setting quotas — by nationality — on the number of immigrants allowed into America.

In 1940, the Netherlands surrendered to Nazi Germany in World War II.

Ten years ago, the Army named the first women generals in its history: Elizabeth Holsington and Mae Hays.

Five years ago, President Ford announced the rescue of the merchant ship "Mayaguez" and its 29 crew members from Cambodian captors. The cost was to come out later: 38 Americans dead, three missing and 50 wounded.

Last year, a searing heat wave entered its third week in northern India, with the death toll, mostly from sunstroke, rising to almost 120.

Today's birthdays: Actor James Mason is 71. Photographer Richard Avedon is 57.

Thought for today: It is absurd to divide people into good and bad. People are either charming or tedious. — Oscar Wilde (1854-1900)

WASHINGTON JOURNAL:

Bilingual education aimed at 'language-minority Americans'

By BENJAMIN SHORE
Copley News Service

Benjamin Shore

WASHINGTON — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has begun a program at its massive headquarters here to help some of its low-paid black employees learn to speak and write "standard" English. HEW officials have concluded that these otherwise qualified persons never will advance up the job ladder as high as they should as long as they speak black street slang.

Yet this same federal agency is spending millions of dollars helping foreign-born and other "language minorities" get a public school education without first having to learn enough English to function in a classroom.

Many school districts, under pressure from language minorities led by the Spanish-speaking, have eagerly accepted money from HEW for bilingual education programs.

In the case of HEW's black employees, the motivation for voluntary participation in the course to learn standard English is job advancement. These workers have families to provide for.

In the case of students who do not speak English well enough to learn in a regular classroom, it is argued by advocates of bilingual education that without the special program, many, if not most, of these students simply would quit out of frustration. Yet in most school districts in the United States where Vietnamese refugees have settled, there simply aren't enough qualified persons in the community who could be hired to teach reading, writing and arithmetic in Vietnamese.

So the Vietnamese are doing what waves of immigrants before them have done: struggling through classroom lessons in English while taking day and night courses offered for foreigners to learn the language.

HEW's own program for blacks carries a clear message: Standard English is this country's basic language, and those who master it will do better in all basic social functions than those who don't.

One HEW official was asked if the agency's in-house program might not contradict the principles underlying the bilingual education program.

"On the face of it, yes," he said. "But while our efforts to help some blacks improve their economic standing was our own idea, bilingual education was something that Congress, obviously under some political pressure and sincerely believing it was a good idea, added to HEW's catalog" of programs.

This official, who played a role in launching HEW's program for its black employees, believes there is great merit in federal support of English classes for the foreign-born and Americans, especially Hispanics, who grew up in a foreign-language environment.

But he believes that bilingual education may be counterproductive.

"For many students, even those taking special English classes at the same time, the pressure to learn English, to really master it, is stripped away."

"They are being fooled into believing that American society will accommodate their inability to speak English well, if at all. And the minute they step out into the real world, they're at a disadvantage. Very few employers, if any, are doing for black workers what we're doing, for example."

HEW's "students," who are learning the difference between "you is" and "you are," "he be" and "he is," for example, were destined to be locked into low-paying clerical jobs, tolerated in many cases only because the government is committed to hiring minorities who could not have been hired if test scores, job experience and interviews had been the criteria.

Inmates free six hostages

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Sheriff Charles Leavitt says a three-hour hostage incident at the city jail was prompted by overcrowding and says he wasn't surprised it happened.

A dozen inmates armed with makeshift knives and clubs took over one floor of the jail Wednesday and demanded $100,000 and a helicopter. They held five guards and a medical assistant hostage.

The hostages were released unharmed about three hours later when Leavitt read a statement to the inmates saying, "I will not yield to your demands, and you will not be allowed to leave the jail under any circumstances."

Leavitt also warned the inmates that premeditated killing of guards is punishable by death.

Leavitt said a show of force by a police Emergency Response Team also influenced the inmates to surrender. Members of the unit entered the visitors' area on the seventh floor wearing bullet-proof vests, brandishing shot-guns, and carrying tear-gas canisters and gas masks.

The seizure occurred while inmates were receiving medical checks and preparing for court appearances and recreation.

ation, Leavitt said.

He said the incident was "not at all surprising" because of a "tense jail situation."

The jail is designed to accommodate 347 prisoners. There were 433 inmates there Wednesday morning, Leavitt said.

He said the blame for the takeover "rests with our city and state officials who are placed in office to take care of these problems, but have failed to do so."

Man indicted by jury in poison pickles case

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A 62-year-old man has been indicted by a federal grand jury on a charge of trying to extort $250,000 from the Fred Meyer Inc., food chain by putting traces of cyanide in a jar of pickles.

Paul R. Bailleux, of Corvallis, was indicted Wednesday after being arrested three weeks ago.

He was accused of poisoning a jar of pickles at a Fred Meyer store in Beaverton on March 22 in an attempt to get diamonds worth $250,000.

The FBI and Beaverton police said no firm link had been established between the Beaverton plot and several poisoning-extortion incidents that occurred in southern California at about the same time.

No trial date was set for Bailleux, who also was charged with impersonating an FBI agent. The FBI said Bailleux has a criminal record with convictions for burglary, robbery and forgery.

Police found the poisoned pickles in the store after getting a call from an extortionist requesting the diamonds be delivered by carrier pigeon.

According to an affidavit filed in federal court, Portland pigeon trainer James Rennick said he gave two of his pigeons to a man claiming to be from the FBI.

Rennick said the man took the cage with two pigeons and returned with the empty cage. The man left and the birds arrived soon after with nothing attached to their legs, Rennick said.

Two persons who found the caged pigeons along a road and left to call police returned to find the birds had gone.

Three commandos buried together

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three airmen killed in the aborted raid to try to free the American hostages in Iran have been buried, sharing a single coffin among the thousands of war dead at Arlington National Cemetery.

The burial ceremony Wednesday was held with full military honors as the casket was taken to the grave on a black caisson drawn by six black horses.

The three were among eight U.S. servicemen killed when two aircraft collided as members of the aborted mission retreated from the Iranian desert. The mission was cut short because three of the eight helicopters failed.

The Pentagon said the three bodies were so badly burned that individual identifications were impossible, so it was decided the three would share a common casket and a common grave.

The tombstone will bear the names of all three: Tech. Sgt. Joel C. Mayo, 34, of Bonifay, Fla.; Capt. Harold L. Lewis Jr., 35, of Mansfield, Conn., and Capt. Richard L. Bakke, of Long Beach, Calif., who would have been 34 Tuesday.

Hometown funerals were planned or have been held for the other five men.

The grave of the three men is near a marble amphitheater, not far from the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Kidnap trial moved

UKIAH, Calif. (AP) — The kidnaping trial of Kenneth Parnell, accused of abducting a 5-year-old Ukiah boy, will be moved out of Mendocino County.

Citing pretrial publicity and "local involvement," Judge Roy McFarland granted Parnell's change of venue motion on Wednesday.

Parnell is accused of kidnaping Timmy White on Valentine's Day on a Ukiah street.

He also is accused of kidnaping Steven Stayner, now 15, seven years ago in Merced. Led by Stayner, the two boys left Parnell's remote cabin on March 1 and hitchhiked to freedom.

The judge said he would consider a new site for the trial in the White kidnaping charges at a hearing May 20. Lawyers say the trial could last two to three weeks.

Parnell's lawyer, Scott Le Strange, presented newspaper and broadcast reports about the case at Wednesday's hearing, calling them "highly inflammatory" and prejudicial.

He said Timmy White was a "household word" in Ukiah and the rest of Mendocino County.

Deputy District Attorney George McClure argued that Parnell could receive a fair trial in Mendocino County.

No trial date has yet been set in Merced on the Stayner kidnaping charges.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON
Causes varied

Dear Dr. Solomon: Whenever a man suffers from sexual impotence, it seems fashionable to attribute the condition to psychological problems — in other words, "it's all in his head." I used to find this expression humorous until I began having sexual problems of my own. At the age of 35, and with what both my wife and I consider a good marriage, I find I am having increasing difficulty in performing sexually. I have not as yet discussed this with my doctor since I have the feeling he would only refer me to a psychiatrist. Any advice you may have to offer would be appreciated. — Mr. D.B.

Dear Mr. B.: I suggest you make an appointment with your doctor for a complete physical examination. While some cases of impotence undoubtedly are associated with emotional problems, other cases just as certainly are not. In the patients I see, it is not unusual for their sexual function to be affected by a variety of physical ills, and I don't understand why you assume your physician would not be sensitive to this possibility in your case.

In fact, a husband-and-wife team of sexologists, Drs. Sallie J. Schumacher and Charles W. Lloyd, of the marital-health clinic at Bowman Gray School of Medicine in Winston-Salem, N.C., report they have found some type of organic disorder in almost three-quarters of the impotent men evaluated by them. Among the physical problems uncovered were hypertension, diabetes and arteriosclerosis.

Although some physicians may maintain that the three-quarters figure cited by Drs. Schumacher and Lloyd is somewhat high, no one will deny that organic disorders can cause impotence. Moreover, where a man does show evidence of psychological problems, they are as likely to be the result of the impotence as the cause.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I recently heard a speaker refer to pneumonia as a friend of older people, and I wondered what he meant. Was he being sarcastic? — Mr. F.L.

Dear Mr. L.: In 1901, Sir William Osler wrote that "pneumonia may be called the friend of the aged." What he meant was that elderly people who contracted the disease often died within a relatively short time and without experiencing any great pain.

Since the 1940s, however, penicillin has enabled many older people to survive several bouts of pneumonia. However, they then become vulnerable to serious chronic conditions which may last for years. Ironically, these extended periods of illness, which people dread, are the result of such medical successes as the conquest of pneumonia.

Dear Dr. Solomon: To what extent is marijuana used in the United States? — Gil

Dear Gil: More than 40 million Americans, or about 30 percent of the adult population, are believed to have tried marijuana at least once. Sixteen million use it regularly and, of these, four million are under the age of 17.

Woman robbed while in hospital

PETOSKEY, Mich. (AP) — A woman who mistrusted banks because she lost money in the Depression was robbed at a hospital of thousands of dollars stuffed in pouches in her bra, authorities say.

Grace Gish was admitted for a lung ailment on April 27 to a branch of Northern Michigan Hospitals Inc., and her money was taken within two days, hospital president John Rasmussen said. He said Mrs. Gish declined nurses' suggestions to store cash in the hospital safe.

The 76-year-old Upper Peninsula resident of Newberry lost between $9,000 and $12,000, a granddaughter estimated.

"We've talked to her and she said she had tens, twenties and other denominations up to $500 bills, so we're estimating it based on that," said Grace Sheppard. The victim's son, George Gish, was not aware of his mother's fear of putting her money in banks.

"I just never knew until I talked to her in the hospital," said Gish. "She said she started (placing money in her bra) in 1928 because she lost her money and a lot of friends did too. So she made two pouches out of old nylon stockings and a second pair she crocheted. She told me she did so she'd never starve."

Police Chief Ernest Kraus said the police inquiry was "at a standstill."

"We've got a big hospital here. Employees, visitors, all kinds of people walking around all the time. We can't even assume it was a hospital employee. It could have been almost anybody."

Mrs. Gish was not penniless when she returned home Monday.

"Whoever it was didn't get it all," said another granddaughter, Jan Somers. "One pouch, containing about $1,000 was still pinned inside her bra."

Borg's bride picks gown

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — When Mariana Simonescu weds tennis champ Bjorn Borg in the bride's native Romania July 24, she'll wear a $7,000 gown.

Designed by septuagenarian Ted Tinling, whose tennis outfits have been worn by 16 Wimbledon women's single champions, the wedding dress is made of white silk damask from Italy and is embroidered with rhinestones and pearls.

With a tightly fitted bodice, slightly puffed sleeves and plunging neck, the dress will have its wide hoop skirt adorned with wild flowers and the bride will wear strands of pearls in her hair and a full-length veil.

Tinling, who designed Chris Evert's wedding gown, says he always asks brides whether they want to look like a Madonna or a ballet figure such as the Sugar Plum Fairy.

Clemency not likely this year

By JAN CARROLL

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—The judge who sent her to prison thinks she should be set free. Actress Valerie Harper wants to make a movie about her life. But clemency is unlikely this year for Joyce DeVillez, a battered wife who put out a contract on her husband and is paying the price at the Indiana Women's Prison. For the fourth year, Mrs. DeVillez, 44, has gone before the state Clemency Commission seeking early release from the 15- to 25-year prison term she received after pleading guilty to second-degree murder. She had been charged with first-degree murder after a hired killer shot her husband of 23 years in 1974.

While her case is pending before the five-member commission — a report is expected this month — Gov. Otis Bowen has declined to discuss the matter. The governor has final say on clemency, and he has not been sympathetic in the past, writing a state senator of the case in 1978: "Killing someone except in the most dire circumstances of preservation of one's own life is not justified..." And said Bowen aide James T. Smith: "We have fairly standard rules that clemency, unless they are extremely unique cases, is not considered until 10 years of the sentence has been served."

The Bowen administration, he said, does not consider the DeVillez case unique. Others, however, do. Her son, Kevin, for instance, wrote the commission in 1977. After describing an early childhood filled with violence, Kevin, now 24, wrote: "When I was around 17, my father pushed me into the bathtub and tried to drown me by holding me under the water. He stopped after I promised to stay out of his business. His business was that of beating my mother. He always threatened to kill me when he was exceptionally angry."

Or retired Judge Morton Newman, who sentenced Mrs. DeVillez. In a letter written for last year's appeal, he said: "Were it in my power to order her release at this time... I would do so... The provocation to which she was subjected was of such magnitude as to invite retaliatory action on her part... I have heard evidence both from her and from each of her children concerning the inhuman cruelty that the deceased husband exercised toward them. While society under no circumstances can condone murder as a solution to such problems, it nevertheless should have an influence on the amount of punishment which should be meted out."

Bernard DeVillez, a six-footer, and Joyce, a pregnant, 4-foot-11-inch 15-year-old, were married in 1951, and spent most of their married life in the southwestern Indiana community of Evansville. They had three children, first Roxann, now 28, then Kevin, then Kirk, now 21. The boys were beaten, the girl sexually molested by their father, Mrs. DeVillez says. She endured constant abuse from her husband, she says, and was kept in the house without a telephone.

In 1974, she hired a 17-year-old to kill her husband. Triggerman Terry Walker was sentenced to life in prison. The case drew national attention in late 1979 when CBS-TV featured Mrs. DeVillez on "60 Minutes." Sen. Birch Bayh and other legislators have written Bowen about Mrs. DeVillez, who will be eligible for parole in 1982.

The Clemency Commission, which met with Mrs. DeVillez and held a hearing in April, posed these questions: Why didn't Mrs. DeVillez kill her husband herself? Why didn't she take her children and flee? Relatives said Mrs. DeVillez, a petite woman of less than 100 pounds, was no match for her husband, and leaving was no answer.

"There was no way she could leave him. There was no way she could do it herself," said Barbara Drake of Philadelphia, a cousin who has made the clemency effort almost a crusade.

"Obviously, she thought this was the only solution to her problem," said Claire Wilson, a psychologist who has talked to Mrs. DeVillez. "She thought either she would kill him or be killed."

Kirk DeVillez also urges clemency, saying his mother could not have escaped: "He was the type of guy who would devote his life to searching, finding us, then killing us."

During the hearing, commission member Glenn Douthitt, asked: "The thing that bugs me personally is that all the way through those 23 years, surely to God somebody, somewhere, someplace could have recognized that there were problems. I just wonder where the family was all this time, why they didn't do more than they did?"

But Marion Clark, Mrs. DeVillez' cousin, replied: "We didn't know she was living like this." And other relatives agreed.

His mother tried to get help, son Kevin wrote: "She had talked to the welfare department and school psychologists. They could offer no help. She could not go to the police because my dad would have killed all of us if he had found out..."

"She was being killed slowly by my father. He was destroying all of us. He committed the crime. She acted in self-defense..." Ms. Harper, star of the former TV series "Rhoda," says the movie she hopes to make would focus on "...people being together. It's about family. It's a humanist, not a feminist point of view."

Bernard DeVillez will be carefully portrayed, she said, adding: "There are no monsters, really. He has a sad, sad story to have lived the way he did."

Congress preparing final touches for emergency food stamp bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is ready to put the finishing touches on emergency legislation to keep 21 million Americans from doing without food stamps next month. Unless that action comes by the end of today, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland says, the aid will stop June 1.

Working late into the night Wednesday, the Senate voted 69-18 to approve a $3 billion appropriation to keep the food subsidy program going through the Sept. 30 end of the fiscal year.

The House had voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to approve $2.56 billion for the same purpose despite warnings that the smaller amount probably would not cover the program for the rest of fiscal 1980.

A Senate-House conference committee was meeting today to reconcile the two versions. Congressional leaders said beforehand they expected the group to complete its work in time for both houses to approve a final figure by day's end.

The Senate also gave Bergland a pointed warning Wednesday that he can expect no further help from Congress for the rest of the fiscal year — even if the money runs out. That was intended as an alert to the administration that benefit levels should be cut if necessary to make the appropriation last.

Some senators argued against that warning, citing a deepening recession and rising unemployment. With one in 10 Americans already receiving food stamps, they said, Congress might have to again rescue the program if the economy performs below expectations this summer.

But Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., who sponsored the warning amendment, said it was time to impose "discipline" on the Agriculture Department.

"There might be some minor disruption" for food stamp recipients if there is a cutback in benefits, he said. "But it wouldn't be unduly painful for any recipient. We have been quite generous. We've got to get some discipline."

But that measure, approved by the Senate on Wednesday, only outlines how the program is to be operated and sets spending ceilings. It does not actually provide any money.

Congressional food stamp critics say the administration has deliberately tried to stampede action on extending the program to prevent a more deliberate review that could reduce cheating and overspending.

Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, argued that Congress was not responsible if government bureaucrats were unable to prevent fraud and Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., described the increasingly expensive subsidies as "a runaway."

But "no one wants a foodless June," said Sen. Roger W. Jepsen, R-N.C., adding that he feels administration critics are not insensitive to the needs of the poor. He said the Agriculture Department should have reduced food stamp payments earlier this year, when it became apparent that available money would not last through the fiscal year.

The program's cost will continue to spiral, according to the Congressional Budget Office, which estimated the cost would rise to $10.4 billion in the next fiscal year if unemployment reaches 8 percent, as some economists have predicted.

New telephone directories for Midland arrived Wednesday and Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. will begin distributing the books during the next three days. It is estimated that some 67,000 directories will be delivered in the Midland area. (Staff Photo by Brian Hendershot)

Howard County officials await reimbursement

BIG SPRING — Three Howard County officials, including County Judge Bill Tune, are still waiting on more than $1,200 to reimburse expenses they incurred in a three-day trip to New Orleans, La., to attend a Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals hearing on a sex discrimination suit filed by two women employees in the sheriff's department.

The Howard County Commissioners on Monday did not approve the reimbursement, for they lacked receipts of $444 in meals.

The three officials, County Auditor Jackie Olsen, County Attorney Harvey Hooser Jr. and Tune, were in New Orleans to attend the appellate hearing but reportedly did not testify.

The women suing the county claim that they should be paid the same salary as the men deputies, for they carry out similar duties. The men are paid about $300 more than the women.

The officials were advised to attend the hearing by the county's legal representative, said Commissioner Bill Crooker, who noted that the expenses seemed "high for three people."

Expenses include $444 in meals, $360 in airplane tickets, $363 in lodging at the $60-per-night Hyatt-Regency, and taxi and parking fees.

So far, the litigation has cost the county more than $7,000 in attorney fees.

Clayton: Opponents counting votes too soon

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton says candidates to succeed him as leader of the Texas House are counting their votes too soon.

"The magic number doesn't come until January when you see it on the board or in the ballot box (when the Legislature meets in January)," Clayton said Wednesday at an impromptu news conference.

He said he sticks by his statement that he will seek an unprecedented fourth term as speaker unless he is indicted in the FBI's Brilab (bribery and labor) investigation and not vindicated by around Labor Day.

Clayton said he set the Labor Day deadline because "if you get through by then, then it doesn't carry over into the fall elections."

"I was pleased it didn't carry over into the primaries and hope it doesn't affect the general election," he said.

A federal grand jury in Houston is studying evidence gathered by the FBI and reportedly will take some action in early June.

Campaigners for Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, who is running against Clayton, claim he has the votes to win. Rep. Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, says he can beat Bryant if Clayton is not running.

Clayton said he was disappointed that conservative Rep. Lynn Nabers, D-Brownwood, chairman of the House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee, dropped out of the race to succeed him. He said it was healthy to have numerous candidates.

Nabers endorsed Bryant on Wednesday, but only if Clayton is out of the race.

Asked what he thought of the endorsement of Bryant by Rep. W.S. Heatly, D-Paducah, a longtime Clayton supporter, the speaker said, "Makes you wonder what the commitment was."

Clayton said he was convinced Bryant's votes include "quite a few" who actually endorse Bryant as a second choice if Clayton drops out.

What if he is defeated for the speakership?

"I'd play the role of a member," Clayton said.

Reps. Bill Presnal, D-Bryan, and Tom Uher, D-Bay City, announced later Wednesday that they would support Lewis if Clayton is not a candidate.

Presnal and Uher are committee chairman, and Uher previously indicated he might become a candidate for Speaker.

"While I pledge my support for the 67th session, I am not closing the door on my own candidacy for Speaker in 1983," Uher said in a joint release with Presnal.

Presnal said it is important for "someone as honest and practical as Lewis to be ready to assume the role of Speaker in the event a change is dictated."

Sears requests return of 46,000 night lights

CHICAGO (AP) — Sears, Roebuck and Co. has asked customers to return some 46,000 "Winnie-the-Pooh" plastic night lights because the front cover may detach and expose internal electrical wiring that could cause a shock.

The appeal by the nation's largest retailer Wednesday was the third public announcement in 30 days concerning the product. The Consumer Product Safety Commission first announced the recall April 17, and Sears at the same time mailed a news release about it.

The products are being recalled by their importer, Danara International, of South Hackensack, N.J.

No injuries have been reported in connection with the night lights, according to Sears.

About 9,000 of the lights were sold by other retailers and may have been among those manufactured with insufficient glue, so that the front cover detaches from the light assembly, the company said.

Midlander hospitalized

Leon Penny, 34, of 4201 N. Garfield St., was listed in satisfactory condition this morning in Midland Memorial Hospital with first- and second-degree burns to his left hand, arm and body.

Penny was injured around 3 p.m. Wednesday in an industrial accident at the new Midland Park Mall.

He apparently was standing on a tar truck, which was heating tar for the roof, when the truck exploded and caught fire.

Cleanup, inquiry continue in Tampa

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — As divers worked to clear tons of sunken debris beneath the collapsed Sunshine Skyway Bridge, a Marine Board of Inquiry struggled with the translated testimony of a Chinese shipmate describing the accident that claimed 35 lives.

The hearing Wednesday was adjourned until today while the Coast Guard recruited another interpreter more familiar with nautical terms to translate the account from Chan Chin Yee, chief mate on the Summit Venture.

Eight vehicles, including a Greyhound bus, plunged into Tampa Bay Friday morning when the 608-foot freighter rammed the bridge during a heavy rain.

A 1,400-foot section supporting the southbound lanes of the bridge ripped loose, hurling the vehicles and their occupants 150 feet into the bay. The bridge connects St. Petersburg and Bradenton on Florida's Gulf coast.

The five member marine board, composed of three Coast Guard officers and two members of the National Transportation Safety Board, went to the bay to inspect the freighter, at anchor three miles west of the bridge.

The only person to survive was a man who swam to the surface after his pickup truck fell off the bridge, bounced off the freighter and sank.

Divers recovered the 35th victim Wednesday, a man believed to be Robert Smith of Pennsville, N.J. Police said Smith was thought to be in a compact car with his wife, Delores, 49, whose body was recovered shortly after the accident.

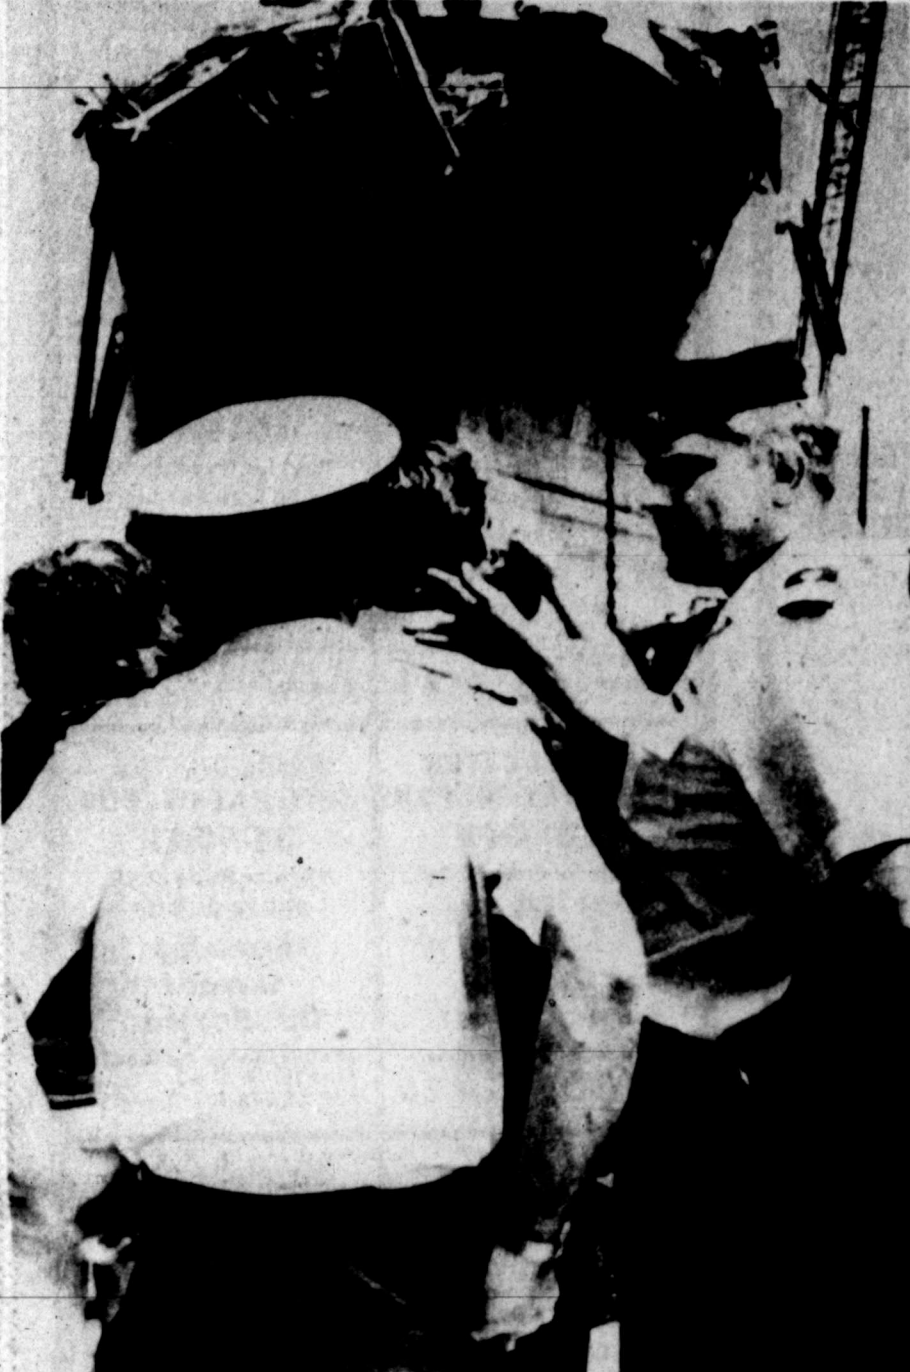

Authorities now believe the Greyhound bus carried 26 persons, not 23 as previously reported, Hillsborough County sheriff's spokesman Paul Marino said. That conclusion was reached by tentatively identifying the recovered bodies and matching them to vehicles recovered from the bay, he said.

Salvage divers were working to clear a twisted mass of girders and roadbed material in the murky waters, 50-feet deep, Marino said.

"There's one strip of roadway about 200 feet long that is almost intact. It's under the water. There's broken and twisted steel down there. They have to work around and under it."

Divers said they would have to use explosives to break up the hunks of debris so the wreckage could be lifted from the channel by a crane.

In Tallahassee, Gov. Bob Graham declared a state of emergency in three counties as a result of the collapse. The declaration is a prelude to requesting federal funds to reconstruct the bridge between Pinellas and Manatee counties over a portion of Tampa Bay in Hillsborough County.

Editors believe court upheld rights of public in appeal

DALLAS (AP) — Jubilant newspaper editors say Texas' highest criminal appeals court upheld freedom of the press and the public's right to know by requiring open courtrooms in all criminal proceedings.

"We think this is a very great decision in the spirit of the First Amendment as it was intended," said Tom Simmons, executive editor of the Dallas Morning News.

However, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals said it considered no constitutional issues when it ruled Wednesday that a state district judge in Houston acted illegally when he issued an order April 28 closing a habeas corpus hearing requested by a Death Row inmate.

Last year the U.S. Supreme Court outraged journalists by ruling that some pre-trial criminal hearings may be closed to the press and public.

Editors and media lawyers hailed the Texas decision as a victory for freedom of the press and the public's right to know.

"The court has affirmed what it considers to be the law: that the public and the press have an absolute right to observe law in action and that judges can't close legal proceedings to deny that right," said W. Robert Brown, legal counsel for the Houston Chronicle.

Judge Sam Houston Clinton wrote in his opinion that the court was not faced with a constitutional issue involving "tensions between freedom of the press, the public right to know and right of an accused to a fair public trial."

Clinton said the Texas Code of Criminal Procedure "plainly and unequivocally" requires that "the proceedings and trials in all courts shall be public."

Vernon McManus wanted State District Judge I.D. McMaster to set aside his kill-for-hire conviction in a 1976 slaying. The hearing has not been held.

McManus contended he was poorly defended because his attorney was having an affair with, and later married his wife. He also said a prosecutor instigated perjury by a female witness with whom the prosecutor was having an affair.

McMaster said he ordered the hearing closed because of "the lewd, lascivious and sexual nature of the allegations" to be considered and the damage they might do to the reputations of the people involved.

However, the appeals court said there was a pressing public need to know.

"McManus is protesting that the criminal justice system failed him through like frailties of two of its principal participants.... If the system failed McManus, it at once surely deserved the public. In demonstrating that failure... McManus will provide the public with some information on which to base adjustment or reform in the criminal justice system," the opinion said.

"The decision is a huge step forward, (it's) getting back to sanity on these decisions," said Dick Tarpley, executive editor of the Abilene Reporter-News. "It's the way we've contended all along it should be."

"I think Clinton's ruling is in the best interests of newspapers in Texas, but more importantly in the interest of the public," said Beaumont Enterprise-Journal editor Cleve Hamm.

"We were delighted with the decision. It may mean we have momentum away from the creeping tendency toward secrecy," said Ray Mariotti, editor of the Austin American-Statesman.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled last year in a New York case, Gannett vs. DePasquale, that the Constitution permits a judge to close pre-trial suppression of evidence hearings. Media representatives have protested applying the rule to trials and other kinds of hearings.

Charles Babcock, a Dallas media-law specialist, said lawyers in Texas "always have felt that we had a better argument here for keeping proceedings open because our Texas Constitution and Texas Code of Criminal Proceedings are different from the U.S. Constitution and the New York statutory procedures."

Babcock said the Texas Constitution provides that all trials shall be open, while the U.S. Constitution says the defendant shall have a right to an open trial.

"Our interpretation of this has been that in Texas the public has a right rather than just the defendant a right," Babcock said.

He said there was no conflict between the Texas decision and the Supreme Court, because "this was a situation where the Supreme Court doesn't require (an open trial), but neither does it prohibit."

AT WIT'S END

Talents remain dormant

By ERMA BOMBECK

I finally figured out why I have never become a success in this world.

Most of the things taught me in my childhood guaranteeing me a place in history have become obsolete.

Take the sheep shank knot. When I was trying to move up from a Tenderfoot Girl Scout to first class status, I was led to believe the sheep shank knot was my ticket out of the ghetto and into the big time. Everyone could tie it except me. Every Tuesday at 3:15 I had a "knot tutor" who would take me aside and coach me. After six weeks of dedication, I finally succeeded in tying it.

Not once in all these years has anyone asked me to shorten anything with my sheep shank knot.

Diagramming a sentence is another piece of intellectual dead weight that I've carried around for years. I spent nearly two years making funny little diagonal lines and labelling parts of speech. I'll be honest with you, if I don't start diagramming a sentence pretty soon, my predicates will be too pooped to perform.

This won't choke you up, but I can recite all the books in the Old Testament in order. This feat seemed quite critical to a Sunday School teacher I had in the fourth grade, yet not once have I been able to dazzle anyone with my recitation. You'd think a game show or Hollywood Squares would think it was worth 15 points, but no.

And what about Miss Schneble's "rope climbing" skill? Miss Schneble was a physical education teacher I had in the fifth grade who invented fear. There were four ropes that hung from the ceiling of the gym to the floor and it was Miss Schneble who told me that climbing those ropes to the top and coming down again would prepare me for life. (My choice would have been death.)

I climbed those ropes one terrifying morning in 1948. Since then, I have looked for "rope climbing" in every competition in every physical fitness program offered. Maybe when jogging and roller skating fads pass, we'll get into "rope climbing."

So many of my talents have remained dormant. One of the specialties I had in high school was hanging my head out of a car window and making a noise like a siren. You cannot imagine how many cars I pulled over in the name of humor, and how much attention it got me. Can you believe that today there are no calls for it?

It makes you wonder if your entire childhood was a waste of time, doesn't it?

Why can't I send for more than one refund?

By MARTIN SLOANE
"Why can't I send for more than one refund on a product I use often?" Many refunders ask this question when confronted by refund forms stipulating "one refund per family or address."

The answer is simple: Manufacturers who make refund offers have a right to set the rules that you must follow to obtain your refund. If you don't care to follow the rules, don't send for the refund.

One-per-household rules are usually designed to enable a manufacturer to reach as many people as possible for the money it has budgeted for the offer.

An important secret of successful refunding is to follow refund instructions carefully.

If you obtain additional proofs of purchase for a refund you have already requested, you can trade them with friends who have not yet taken advantage of the offer. Or you can add the proofs to your collection and wait for another offer requiring the same ones.

Refunders who ignore one-per-household rules often discover to their regret that this is one of the few times when a manufacturer will discard their proofs of purchase.

Refunders are also asking for trouble if they try making multiple refund requests using variations of their names and addresses.

How much trouble? For the answer to that question, I contacted U.S. Postal Inspector S.N. McKusick, who coordinates investigations of all types of coupon and refund fraud. Here is what he had to say:

"Some consumers have been known to submit multiple requests for refunds. In order to conceal the fact that they are submitting more requests than allowed by the terms of the offer, they resort to various types of concealment.

"They may use various names other than their own or use their own names but change the normal spelling. Their own name may be used but the address may be altered slightly. They may enlist the aid of friends or relatives and submit the refund requests using those names and addresses.

"All of these subterfuges and concealments may constitute fraud depending on the terms of the particular refund offer.

"Your readers should be aware that the use of the United States mails for the purpose of fraud violates Title 18,

U.S. Code, Section 1341, Mail Fraud. In addition, anyone who violates this section, using a fictitious, false or assumed name or address, may also be in violation of Section 1342.

"On conviction of violations of either of these sections, the individual can be sentenced to a prison term of up to five years, a $1,000 fine or both.

"While we certainly do not want to frighten the vast majority of consumers who use refund certificates in the proper manner, it should be made known to those who may be requesting refunds illegally that they could subject themselves to unwanted problems.

Fancy combs easy to make, solve problems

By ELLEN APPEL
Copley News Service

Nowadays, beautiful hair combs are available at accessory counters everywhere. They're covered in seashells, silk flowers, rhinestones and other exotic trims. Today, in fact, hair combs are so charming, feminine and fashionable that you don't need hair products to wear them.

They're also easy to make, as you'll see from the instructions that follow. To make hair combs with seashell "flowers," for example, just read on.

MATERIALS: Plain, inexpensive hair combs from the dime store, white glue, plastic wrap, masking tape, tweezers, absorbent cotton, tiny seashells. Include five or six scallop, clam or other "cup" shells for each flower.

SEASHELL FLOWERS - PREPARATION: 1. Cover work surface with plastic wrap. 2. Drop some white glue on plastic. 3. Saturate a tiny bit of cotton with glue. 4. Place cotton on plastic.

ASSEMBLING FLOWERS: 1. Using tweezers, arrange cup shells over cotton, in a circle. 2. Glue a shell over the center of the circle (a). 3. Let glue dry thoroughly. 4. cut away excess plastic.

FINISHING: 1. Arrange shells and shell flowers on top edge of comb. 2. Glue shells and flowers to comb one at a time. 3. If shells do not stand as desired, tape shell in place until glue sets. 4. Let glue dry thoroughly. 5. Remove masking tape, if any.

For directions for making lilies, daisies and asters, also suitable for hair combs, send 50 cents, plus a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ellen Appel, Copley News Service, in care of your newspaper.

When tired, walk

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Donna Hill, program director of the Carondelet Branch of the YWCA, may have the simplest advice of all for joggers.

"Don't push yourself! When you get tired, walk," she says.

Home Furnishing News

By Peggy Hodges

Perhaps we are "too close to the woods to see the tree". It is somehow easier for most of us to recognize the shortcomings of the furniture and furnishings in someone else's home than in our own.

In many cases, the addition of one single item in a room can change it from something dull to a thing of beauty.

Take a good, long, objective look at your furnishings and ask yourself, "What can I do to add beauty to my everyday living?"

Make believe that you are a military officer inspecting his troops. Take a memo book and pencil, make a slow and careful inspection of the rooms you live in and write down all the possible improvements you could make to beautify your surroundings.

You may suddenly discover that a pretty new sofa or pair of lamps will transform your living room, or that some vivid color is needed to bring a sweep of new life to your rooms.

Llama Bean likes kids

AUSTIN (AP) — Dennis Haber is offering for sale a snobbish, six-foot-tall backyard pet who loves children. The pet — Llama Bean. The price — $1,500 or best offer.

Haber said he bought the llama a year ago for $550 from a petting zoo, after he learned that llama wool sells for $3.50 an ounce. But now Haber and his wife are divorced, and Haber is moving and wants to get rid of his pet.

The llama will eat anything except red meat, Haber said. "He loves chicken and dog food. ... He doesn't spit or kick" and is fond of children.

Current apparel influences furniture

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

It has been said so often that the design of furniture is influenced by the apparel industry that there must be at least some truth in the statement.

Certainly it is a fact that at the recent national furniture market in North Carolina, upholstered sofas and chairs sported many of the same dressmaker details found in women's clothing.

Flounces, pleats, shirring and ruffles were seen on many a seating piece introduced by manufacturers to retailers at the semiannual market. And the luscious fabrics in soft pastel colors such as dusty rose, pale green and white would be equally appropriate clothing a woman's body.

These dressmaker details helped to create some of the prettiest and most graceful upholstered furniture seen in years.

Consumers will have a chance to judge for themselves this fall when most of the new offerings will appear on retail sales floors.

As usual in a large market serving the entire spectrum of the furniture industry, anything anyone could imagine in the way of seating was on view at one or another of the more than 1,000 showrooms. However, continuing a trend at prior markets, modular seating and dual-purpose sofas seemed to be on the increase.

"The No. 1 demand of customers is flexibility," explained Ed Bohling, marketing director for Sherwood Corp., a maker of flip-out foam sofas and modular seating that converts into beds by flipping or otherwise rearranging the foam components.

"Flip-out furniture, a product that is only four years old at Sherwood, now accounts for 75 percent of our business," said Bohling.

"The consumer continues to lead us where we ought to be going," he added, describing the success of an unusual group of modular components covered in bright red, green blue, orange, yellow or black nylon packcloth that had seemed a bit too daring before its introduction and initial acceptance by customers.

Bruce Shelton, president of Spherical Corp., whose unusual, rounded foam sofas and chairs that flip out into beds have looked less outlandish each year, noted that over the seven years he has shown the furniture in North Carolina, acceptance has grown steadily.

Besides flexibility, the other major theme struck by new upholstered furniture is comfort. There was a strong emphasis on recliners and other comfort-promoting easy chairs.

At Thayer Coggin, for example, a new, flexible acrylic and fiberglass material that allows a chair to sway and rock a bit to provide an added sense of comfort was a feature on a chaise and several easy chairs.

Fully upholstered dining chairs were seen in several showrooms. Such chairs, with enough upright support for dining plus the comfort to make lounging in them after dinner pleasant, were offered by a number of manufacturers including Swaim, Directional, Thayer Coggin and Charlton.

Among fabrics that appeared to cut across style and design lines were textured, jacquard fabrics combining white and beige, chintz and canvas-duck.

Although a color known variously as dusty rose, raspberry sherbet and mauve appeared to be the most widely distributed new color, white was also on display in many different types of upholstered furniture showrooms. Deep tones — emerald green, garnet red, navy blue — were also seen widely.

But, as one color consultant noted, virtually all colors are to be seen in the marketplace. "With fabric, you can find the future and the past in the present," said Yale Forman, color consultant to Hercules, Inc.

DEAR ABBY

She's nice, but smelly

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I don't know exactly how to start this, but I've just got to get help with this problem.

I am a young working mother with two preschool children who need to be watched while I'm at work.

I refuse to leave them with just anybody, so I was thrilled when I finally found a woman who can come to my home early every morning and stay through supper.

She is wonderful with the children. They love her and she adores them, and I couldn't ask for a more reliable woman. But there is one thing about her that is very hard to take. She smells!

When I come home from work I can hardly stay in the house, it smells so bad. I open the windows and spray air freshener all over, but the smell stays on the furniture. What should I do? I don't think I can tell her she smells, and I could never find anyone else with her qualifications to look after my children. Any suggestions? — SUFFOCATED

DEAR SUFFOCATED: You must tell her! But do it with kindness. Let her know that the children love her, and you need her. Then tell her that it is essential that she bathe and change ALL her clothes daily. (P.S. If she is bodily clean, and her clothes are clean, she should see a doctor. A strong body odor can be a symptom of serious disease.)

DEAR ABBY: My husband, while playing cards at the home of a friend, tapped the bowl of his pipe against the rim of a crystal ashtray and it cracked immediately. It was an old and lovely ashtray and would be very costly to replace today. My husband offered his sincere apology — but said nothing about replacing it.

On another occasion, at a party in our home, a guest accidentally knocked over a cordial glass and broke it. (It belonged to a set.) She offered her apologies for the shattered glass.

I feel that if someone breaks something in the home of another, restitution is in order. My husband says that hosts are aware that accidents can happen; therefore, they should not use anything that is either impossible or exceedingly costly to replace. Neither should the host expect restitution for damage or breakage.

What is your view? — READER

DEAR READER: If a guest chips, breaks, burns or soils something in the home of another, he should make every effort to replace it. Furthermore, irreplaceable antiques, belong in a china cabinet.

DEAR ABBY: My 18-year-old daughter had a baby. The father did not want to accept any of the responsibility, so my daughter decided to give her baby up for adoption in order to provide it with a loving mother and father. It was a very difficult decision, but that's the way she wanted it, and we, her parents went along with it.

My question: When I am asked how many grandchildren I have, do I include this child in the count even though she was adopted? — LOVING GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: Only if you'd feel comfortable answering the questions concerning this grandchild that would naturally follow.

(Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. For a personal reply, write to Abby in care of this newspaper. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Feast with French accent on soups and sauces

By MARJORIE RICE Copley News Service

In his first book, "Paul Bocuse's French Cooking," the three-star chef describes how he first served his Truffle Soup.

"M. and Mme. Valery Giscard d'Estaing enjoyed this truffle soup, created for them, during that marvelous lunch that gathered the finest cooks in France at a superb reception, the day when the president of the French Republic awarded me the Cross of the Legion d'honneur as Ambassador of French Cooking on February 25, 1975."

Bocuse would probably faint at the notion, but it's a delicious, easy soup without the truffles. Be sure to use a flavorful stock.

The other recipes that follow can be prepared by any cook with a modicum of experience.

Beef Richelieu is a classic treatment for beef tenderloin, not inexpensive but a good choice for a celebratory meal. Many basic cookbooks have detailed instructions for larding, piercing the beef with strips of fat.

Sauce Ravigote is a deceptively simple sauce to go over poached fish (in this case, trout). The Ravigote and poached fish would make an excellent main course for a light meal, particularly as warmer weather approaches.

The beef and sauce are also Bocuse's recipes.

TRUFFLE SOUP ELYSEE

One-half cup matignon 6 ozs. fresh raw truffles 3 ozs. fresh foie gras 4 cups strong chicken consomme or veal broth 8 ozs. puff pastry dough 2 egg yolks, beaten Into four individual ovenproof soup bowls, put two tablespoons of the matignon, and one-fourth of the truffles (cut into irregular slices), the foie gras (also cut into irregular slices) and the simmering consomme or stock.

Roll the pastry into four circles that will completely cover the tops of the bowls and lap over about one-half inch. Brush the edges of the pastry with the egg yolk and cover each bowl with pastry, sealing the edges well.

Bake the soup in a 425-degree oven. The pastry will expand in the heat and take on a golden color. (In some cases, the pastry may sag. If it comes into contact with the broth, it won't rise and puff as nicely, but it's still fine to serve.)

Use the soup spoon to break the flaky pastry which should fall into the soup.

Note: Matignon is a mixture of diced vegetables, stewed together in unsalted butter. Use equal parts of carrots, onion, celery and mushrooms. If you don't have fresh foie gras available, substitute canned.

SAUCE RAVIGOTE

One-half tbsp. salt Pinch fresh ground pepper 2 tbsps. capers 1 tsp. chopped parsley 1 tsp. chopped tarragon 1 tsp. mustard 1 onion, finely chopped 2 tbsps. vinegar 5 tbsps. oil

In a bowl, combine the salt, pepper, slightly crushed capers, parsley, tarragon, mustard and onion. While beating the mixture vigorously with a whisk, beat in, a little at a time, the vinegar and the oil.

The recipe makes about one cup of sauce. Serve it over poached fish, such as trout or salmon, which may be served at cool room temperature.

FILET OF BEEF RICHELIEU

Boneless beef tenderloin

Fresh pork fat 1 medium carrot 1 large onion Salt Unsalted butter 1 cup veal stock Remove the fat and tendons from the tenderloin, trimming it by removing the sinewy fibers along the sides.

Using a larding needle, lard the filet with pieces of pork fat one and three-fourths inches long and about as thick as a long match. The object is to add moisture to a very lean cut of meat by piercing the meat with the pieces of fat.

Tie the meat every two and one-half inches with string. In the bottom of a roasting pan, place the carrot and onion, both thinly sliced. Place the filet on top and season it with salt. Moisten the surface with melted butter. Roast the filet at 425 degrees, figuring 12 to 15 minutes per pound.

Baste the meat frequently with the cooking liquids and watch carefully so the vegetables don't overbrown.

Remove the meat from the pan and keep it warm. Pour the stock into the roasting pan. Simmer the liquid for five minutes. Strain the liquid through a fine sieve and keep it warm.

The garniture consists of braised lettuce stuffed with mushroom puree, stuffed mushrooms, potatoes cooked in butter, so each guest has four vegetables.

To serve, surround the filet on a platter with the vegetables. Mix any juices that have collected while the filet is resting out of the oven.

She's spent 50 years in fur

RUSSELL, Kan. (AP) — For nearly 50 years, Mildred Hupfer has been a coon-skinner, "but I've never owned a fur coat because I never had any place to wear it."

A 67-year-old widow, Mrs. Hupfer has been in the fur and hide business nearly all her adult life. She says she doesn't have any plans to retire because "sitting around just bugs me."

But since her husband, Clarence, died in 1961, she's had some lean years. The fur business in the 1960s seesawed with popular tastes, the ecology and conservation movement, and the fluctuating economy.

Only in the past five or six years has the fur market rebounded with a boom. Prices now are high, partly because of the demand for "fun furs" such as raccoon and coyote, and more affluent customers are buying fine furs as an investment and hedge against inflation.

"I kept the business going because Clarence asked me to," said the white-haired grandmother. "If he hadn't, I probably wouldn't have continued. It's just too bad Clarence isn't with us. He worked so hard for so little, and with the price of furs today he could have done so well."

During the Depression, coyotes were so plentiful some Kansas counties paid a $1 bounty for a coyote's ears. Twenty years ago, coyote pelts brought $10 to $20 each. Last year a good coyote hide brought Mrs. Hupfer $70.

With spring, Mrs. Hupfer's skinning season is finished. But the November-through-February peak period for pelts was a poor one this year.

"There weren't many minks or muskrats and the coyotes weren't any good at all," said the veteran who judges quality with her eyes, fingertips and years of instinct. "They were the worst ones I've ever seen. It wasn't cold enough for good pelts, and last year's hard winter decreased the population."

Kansas Fish and Game Commission biologist Neil Johnson agreed with Mrs. Hupfer's assessment. He said initial statistics indicate the state's coyote population hasn't been so low since 1972.

He estimated about 20,000 people in Kansas hunt and trap fur-bearing animals, and in 1978 Kansas pelts were worth $8.9 million to the people who sold them.

Among trappers and hunters within a 100-mile radius of this central Kansas town, Mrs. Hupfer is considered one of the most knowledgeable buyers in the business.

"I get more than I can handle," said the mother of five children. "It used to be they'd come to the farm with the carcasses, but since we moved to town in 1960, the trappers just come right up to the door here, sometimes in the middle of the night. I pay them and since it's real cold I put the animals in the garage until the next day. I do all my skinning and stretching out at the farm, though."

Mrs. Hupfer said she isn't as active as she used to be. She remembers one season 40 years ago when she and her husband skinned thousands of jackrabbits. She's also, in one season, skinned a thousand raccoons and nearly as many coyotes, as well as hundreds of beaver, muskrat, mink, bobcat and lynx.

"The secret is a good knife," said the little lady with 22 grandchildren. "It takes me 20 minutes to skin a raccoon, and I can do even the biggest beaver in the same time. Then I take out the burrs, wash them up, sew the holes with regular thread and comb them with a steel comb I got from the lady at the beauty shop."

She sells to buyers in Missouri, Colorado, Iowa and Ohio, who in turn sell to New York dealers. The finest furs wind up in Europe, said Mrs. Hupfer, while the flawed pelts are made into "fun furs" popular in the United States.

For a jewel of a dad, try gift of jewelry

NEW YORK (AP) — Father's Day gifts are no longer limited to shirts, ties, handkerchiefs and socks.

It's a whole new ballgame for the head of the family in handsome jewelry accessories that make ideal gifts for Dad's special day, says Kae McCulloch, Jewelry Industry Council fashion director.

"Greater imagination in men's dress and casual attire has sparked a strong emphasis on men's jewelry," she reports. Turtleneck sweaters and open-throat sports shirts have made pendants, chains and bracelets popular.

"Men are learning to accessorize their apparel just as women have done, using jewelry to highlight necklines and sleeves or emphasize textures and colors," she points out.

The Council reports that male favorites still include gold and silver chains, tie clips and cuff links, but that men now look for more detailing in their jewelry.

Gold and silver, for example, can be shiny and lustrous, textured or matte finish. Many accessory items for men include a diamond highlight, such as a bracelet with an identification plate sparked with a diamond, or gold rings in geometric shapes that include a diamond as part of the design.

"It's high time men have the chance to wear jewelry that is attractive as well as utilitarian," Ms. McCulloch says. "Cuff links should do more than just hold shirt cuffs together, and watches can do more than just tell time."

Some men's watches today are fashion pieces, made to set off apparel. The watchband can be a handsome bracelet in itself, and the watch wafer thin. Chain watchbands can be as flexible as the most expensive leather.

There's a wealth of jewelry accessories to choose from for dads this year, including handsome pocket jewelry — key rings, money clips, pens and pencils, to name a few.

And fashionable doesn't mean feminine, Ms. McCulloch adds. One masculine bracelet is a copy of French gendarme handcuffs. Pendants include sports motifs showing joggers, discus throwers and jockeys on horseback, as well as the more familiar zodiac signs and geometric patterns.

For those who still haven't an inspiration for a Father's Day gift, one he's sure to treasure is a birthstone ring, suggests the Council.

Over-the-counter exchange with customers helps everyone

By MERLE ELLIS

One of the most satisfying aspects of working, as I do, in an old-fashioned meat market is the opportunity it affords to exchange thoughts over-the-counter with customers. I get some of my best recipes and ideas that way.

Your cards and letters have made writing this column satisfying for the same reasons. Keep them coming. I enjoy hearing from you.

Many of you have asked about things that seem to be of concern to all — so today, let's talk about some of the questions I am most often asked.

Q: — Please! Write something about pork chop cookery sometime. Often as not, I end up with dry pork chops. There must be a way!

A: — There is! The most common mistake made when it comes to cooking pork is overcooking it. Most recipe books from back in the days when grandma was a girl told you to cook pork to an internal temperature of 185 degrees. That's much more well done than today's pork needs to be. More recent data, compiled by Dr. Frances Carlin at Iowa State University, has shown grandma to be lower temperatures would be safe, but for best flavor and juiciness, go for 170. In cooking chops, that means "Well" or "Medium Well" done with a grey but still juicy center. Keep the heat moderate rather than high so the outside won't overcook before the center reaches the proper temperature. When you cook pork, take your time, don't try to hurry it and don't overcook it.

Q: — Why is the hamburger I grind myself at home less tasty and appealing in texture than the store-bought mixture? Should some fat be left on the meat when you grind your own hamburger?

A: — Home-ground hamburger should not lack taste or texture, but it is possible that you are trimming too much fat away before grinding. Fat is what gives meat its flavor, so leave a bit on when you grind. As far as texture is concerned, you can probably improve on that if you make sure the meat is very cold when you grind it. I usually put meat to be ground in the freezer for half an hour or so before grinding so it doesn't get mushy.

Q: — Sometimes when I unwrap meat or poultry at home, I find it partially frozen. This suggests that it was partially frozen and then thawed for sale. I have always understood that once thawed, food should never be refrozen. Is there any point in taking a chance on buying quantities for freezing in order to economize?

A: — Just because your purchase is partially frozen when you get it home does not necessarily mean that the product was originally frozen. Often "fresh" meat display cases reach such a low temperature that meat on the bottom may get rather frosty. So the meat that's worrying you could be on its way toward freezing rather than partially thawed. In either case, there is probably no problem with freezing it. "Meat should never be refrozen" is a fallacy. As long as the meat is still very cold, it is unlikely that bacteria have begun to develop and the most you will lose by refreezing is, perhaps, a little moisture.

If you have any questions, consumer tips, or good money-saving ideas you'd like to share over-the-counter, drop me a line: The Butcher, Merle Ellis, in care of this newspaper. In this high cost world, we can use all the help we can give each other.

wrong. Pork, according to Dr. Carlin, develops optimum flavor when cooked to an internal temperature of 170 degrees. Actually, even Book helps many cooks know how to identify, harvest and cook wild foods

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Many cooks are aware that the outdoors, during warm weather, offers wild foods free for the picking. But they have been unsure of how to identify, harvest and cook such bounty safely and well. If you're one of these cooks, you may want to look into "Wild Foods," with text and photographs by Laurence Pringle plus drawings by Paul Breden.

"Wild Foods" is so clearly and charmingly written and illustrated that it is enticing. With it in hand, you, your family and friends, may start having the fun of foraging for wild foods. The author's background is impressive: He studied wildlife conservation at Cornell University and the University of Massachusetts. For more than half a dozen years he was an editor of a children's science magazine published at New York's American Museum of Natural History. Seventeen of his books were chosen as outstanding science trade books for children by the National Science Teachers Association.

But not all writers on the subject of picking and cooking wild foods are as fortunate as Laurence Pringle. He had the help of Lois Murphy — a "gourmet" cooking teacher — in working out the book's recipes. And his own children helped as recipe-testers and in posing for the book's photographs.

I can vouch for the recipes because Pringle was kind enough to send me a sampling — a Wild Foods Luncheon. Prepared by Lois Murphy from recipes in the book, it was delicious. The menu: Cream of Sorrel Soup; Wild Green Salad (waterress, purslane, plantain and dailly tubers); Lamb's Quarter Quiche; Whole-wheat Crackers with Wild Mint Jelly; Blueberry Crisp Pudding.

"Wild Foods" is a beginner's guide — one suitable for prospective back-to-nature enthusiasts of any age.

LAMB'S QUARTER QUICHE

1 homemade or store-bought 9-inch pie crust
2 tbsps. butter or margarine
4 cups lamb's-quarter

leaves, rinsed and chopped
¼ cup chopped onion
1 tsp. flour
½ tsp. salt
3 eggs
1½ cups milk
2 cups grated Swiss cheese (8 ounces)

Partially bake the pie crust in a 450-degree oven for about 5 minutes, until it is lightly browned. Take it out of the oven and reduce the heat to 325-degrees. Melt the butter in a saucepan, add the lamb's-quarters and onion, and cook for about 5 minutes, until the leaves are limp and the onion is tender. Mix in the flour and salt. In a large bowl, beat together the eggs and milk. Add the cooked onion and lamb's-quarters. Sprinkle the grated cheese on the bottom of the pie crust, then pour in the egg-vegetable mixture. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven for 40-45 minutes. The filling should be firm and custardlike by then. To test, stick a knife into the center of the quiche; if it comes out clean, the quiche is done. Let it cool for 10 minutes before serving. Yield: 6 servings.

Italian-styled stuffed zucchini good vegetarian dish

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Of all the "charity" cookbooks that have come our way recently, we give the prize for the most delightful cover and illustrations to "Specialties of the House," assembled by parents interested in Our Lady of Grace Montessori School, Manhasset, Long Island, N.Y.

The compilers were fortunate to have among their number a professional designer and illustrator, Judy McGuggart, who did this artwork.

The book's recipes are just as attractive as the illustrations. There are over 600 recipes ranging from appetizers to desserts. There's also a chapter on dishes particularly appealing to children; and one on international specialties both interesting and practical. In addition, two dozen or so Long Island restaurants contributed recipes for some of their specialties.

As a sampler, we tested an Italian-style stuffed zucchini dish and found it perfect to serve as part of a vegetarian meal or as an accompaniment to broiled or baked chicken or fish. You may want to add it to your permanent recipe file. I know I do.

KATHY SORICE'S STUFFED ZUCCHINI

1½ lbs. (4 small) zucchini, ends cut off
2¼ tps. salt
1½ cups fresh bread crumbs
¾ cup grated Parmesan cheese
¼ cup minced onion
2 tbsps. parsley, chopped
¼ tsp. pepper
2 eggs, beaten
2 tbsps. of butter or margarine

Scrub zucchini. Stir 1 teaspoon of the salt into 1 inch of boiling water in a medium-size pot; add whole zucchini. Cover and cook 5 to 7 minutes or until tender. Cut zucchini in halves lengthwise. With tip of spoon carefully remove flesh from shells. Chop flesh into small pieces, then combine with bread crumbs, ½ cup of the cheese, the onion, parsley, remaining ¼ teaspoons salt, pepper and eggs. Pile mixture lightly into zucchini shells; dot with butter. Sprinkle with remaining ¼ cup cheese. Arrange filled shells in a large baking pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven, uncovered, for 30 minutes or until brown on top. Serves 4. This dish can be prepared the day before and baked before serving.

Dream became profitable

Copley News Service

When Bill Mabry was a senior in high school, he and some friends decided to make their own wine. It's easy, they thought — just go out and buy some grape concentrate, add yeast and watch it ferment. When the fermentation is over, poof, you have wine.

"So that's what we did," says Mabry, "and we made some of the most god-awful white wine you ever tasted... cloudy, full of junk."

But the bug had hit him, and before long, he had made his way to the University of California-Davis, taking courses in enology and viticulture. Weekends he and his girlfriend, Michelle, would drive to Sonoma to plant vines and generally get fairly filthy in the soil of 11 acres in Sonoma County.

"On Monday, the guys at Davis would tell me how great the parties were, and how much I'd missed," he says, "but it was worth it."

It was worth it because today, at age 27, Bill and Michelle Mabry have been in operation as wine makers for nearly eight years, and within the next year the name of their winery may become a landmark in California wine making.

In fact, it's already a landmark, the name they use to market a line of clean, well-priced wines.

Scientist urges young people to get enthusiasm

By BOB KUESTERMAN

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — The first man to reserve a corner in the planned Space Shuttle, F. Gilbert Moore has been known to drive after a tornado, and will fly a thousand miles to see an eclipse. And the 52-year-old chief of a space-research facility is bringing up new generations of space scientists to feel equally enthusiastic.

"I consider it very important to me to find a bunch of young people and have them get degrees in P.E. — Permanent Enthusiasm," said Moore, who is encouraging students throughout the country to get their experiments aboard the shuttle during the 1980s.

While attending college in New Mexico in the late 1940s, Moore worked part-time at the White Sands Missile Range, assisting the pioneers of American rocketry and coming into contact with some of the greats in astronomy, such as Werner Von Braun, James Van Allen, Fred Whipple and Harlow Shapley.

Moore was assigned to attach X-ray cassettes to the tail fins of V-2 rockets, and, "The thrill of seeing 'my' bird go roaring into 'outer space' has never faded."

Moore says his work is his hobby. "I would pay good money to do what I'm paid good money to do."

What he does is head Thiokol Corp.'s Astro-Met plant. Astro-Met is short for astro-meteorology, which deals with the relationship between solar storms and the earth's weather. A major part of the plant's operation involves experiments in which trace amounts of chemicals are released in the upper atmosphere, creating artificial auroras. The plant also monitors ozone at high altitudes.

Moore's wife, Phyllis, and children share his enthusiasm, and have had a part in his ideas for experiments. During last year's solar eclipse he and his wife chartered two jets, for which seats were sold, and flew up to the Northwest to view the total eclipse.

A patent is being sought for an idea by Moore and his sons, Bruce and Walt, for blowing large bubbles in space.

Tons of liquid plastic could be taken into space, perhaps aboard the space shuttle, and used to blow bubbles with thin walls but immense size, or smaller bubbles with thicker walls able to support structures and people.

The space bubbles could be used to make 1,000-meter reflector telescopes, and for two devices previously proposed using thin plastic sheets.

One is the solar sail, a vehicle that would be propelled by sunlight striking a reflecting surface. The other is giant reflecting surfaces that would collect and focus sunlight to run a generator and beam power to earth as microwaves.

Moore involves not only his own children but other young people. He has helped young experimenters get their projects aboard rockets — both Thiokol's and others.

Moore was speaking on such efforts to an astronomical meeting in California in 1976 when John Yardley, associate administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, announced that the shuttle would orbit small experimental packages for the agency's "messing-around" cost of about $10,000.

"I lay there all night and could not sleep. That was all the money I had in savings," he said.

The next day he told a NASA official at the convention that he wanted to buy the first "getaway special." They used a demonstration satellite-hookup at the convention to wire NASA in Washington and "I made the first reservation."

"I called Phyllis and she said, 'What are you going to do with it?' I said now we could do something (in space) with the kids, and she said, 'Oh, wow!'"

The family decided they needed only half the 5 cubic feet (about the size of a garbage can), so they donated the rest to Utah State University, where Moore is adjunct professor of physics.

The school has set up a scholarship program in which three students in each class are involved in designing experiments for the shuttle.

Since then he has brought shuttle experiments to other colleges and even to high schools.

Moore said though the experiments should not be frivolous, the main benefit is in giving the researchers of tomorrow a feeling today for working in space and thinking in space.

Proposed experiments include an X-ray detector, growing crystals in zero gravity, alloying in zero gravity and bacteria growth and a molding for artificial organs.

Otter becomes juvenile delinquent

SEATTLE (AP) — Tichuk, the teen-age Alaskan sea otter, is becoming a juvenile delinquent and his keepers at the Seattle Aquarium are trying to keep him from a life of crime.

Tichuk has removed a drain from the bottom of his tank and filled it with 10 pounds of rocks. He's pulled loose underwater lights and cables. He's even figured out how to remove nuts and bolts from the window frames in his pen.

"He keeps disabling the device for keeping the water level stable in the pool," says John Nightingale, general curator for the aquarium. "He keeps threatening to flood us out."

Not only is Tichuk a devil, he's also something of a pig.

He weighs 55 pounds, but eats about 16 pounds a day of clams, crab, squid and rockfish filets. That's normal for sea otters, who consume 30 percent of their body weight at five daily meals.

"It's the equivalent of one of us eating 180 Big Macs a day," Nightingale said.

Nightingale is quite ready to give Tichuk a second chance and more.

Tichuk — the name means "sea otter" in the language of the Nootka Indians — is the first sea otter born in captivity to live more than a few weeks, Nightingale said.

On Friday, Tichuk will be 1 year old, which is the equivalent in human development of 13½ years, Nightingale said. When full grown, he'll weigh about 100 pounds.

He's become so rambunctious in the past two to three weeks that the aquarium staff spends much of its time repairing the damage he inflicts on the 74,000-gallon outdoor tank he shares with his mother and father and other otters.

"This isn't any kind of a malicious problem," says Nightingale. "It's just curiosity and energy, like any 13½-year-old."

The cost of the damage is not great yet. But, Nightingale said, "It's a very big staff problem because we have to drain down and go in there and patch all the concrete he's broken, put back all the wires he pulls out."

Tichuk is adept at bringing up 35-pound rocks from the bottom of the 13-foot-deep pool and using them as drills to bore into the tank's concrete ledges.

"He'll often go down and stick a rock on his stomach to hold him down while he pulls on the light cords," says Nightingale.

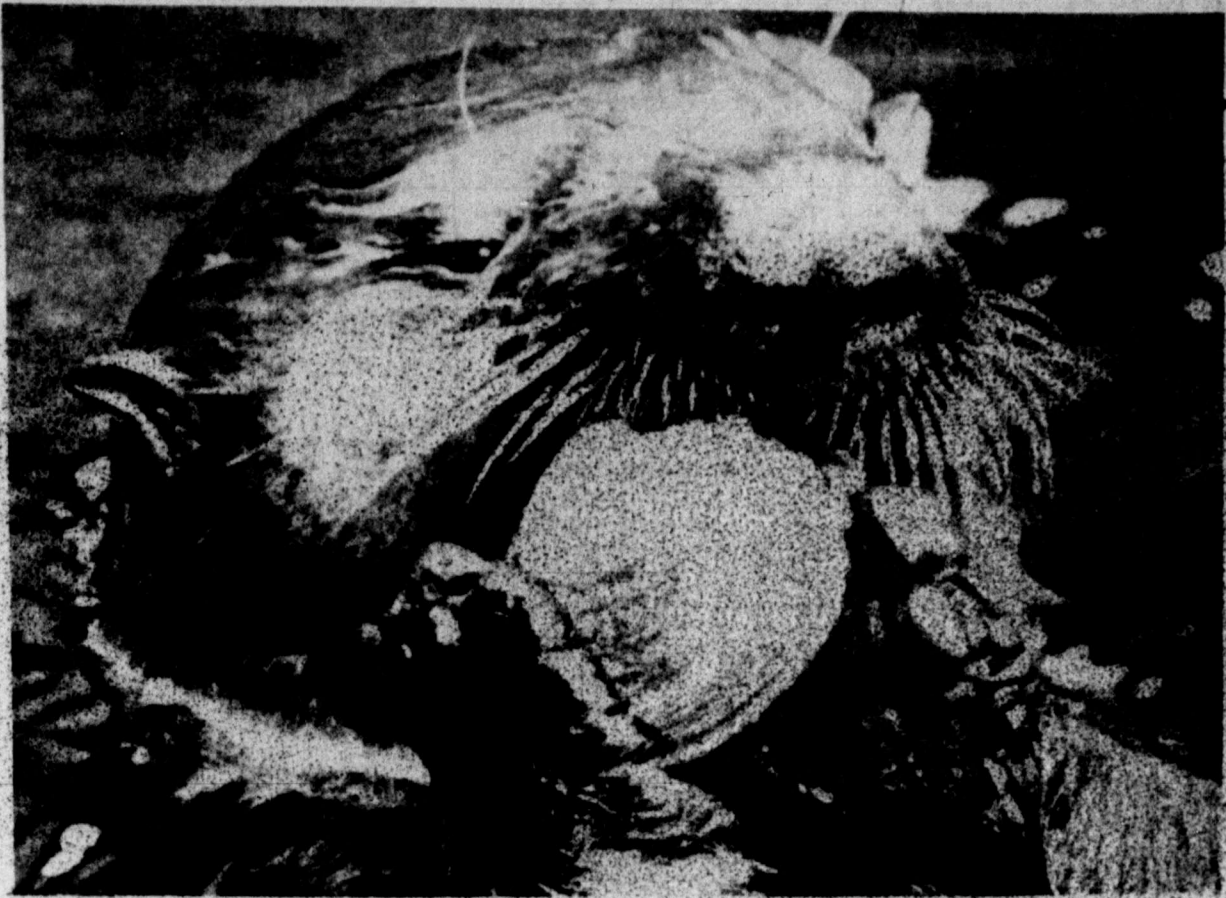

The aquarium staff is considering diversionary tactics to slow Tichuk's vandalism.

They may put live fish in his tank for him to watch and give him new toys and supervised play periods.

At his birthday party, scheduled Friday, the Seattle Sounders soccer team is dropping by with a soccer ball for him, Nightingale said.

But there are no plans for corporal punishment.

"We wouldn't want to do that," said Nightingale. "He's just doing it for fun. We don't train any of our animals on purpose."

Tichuk, the first captive-born sea otter ever to live more than a few weeks, is giving his keepers fits at the Seattle Aquarium. Shown eating a clam, the Alaskan sea otter pup has become so rambunctious in the past several weeks that the aquarium staff spends much of its time repairing the damage he inflicts on the 74,000-gallon tank he lives in with the aquarium's other sea otters. Racist undaunted by verdict

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Undaunted by his conviction and 10-year prison sentence for the bombing of a black people's church 22 years ago, J.B. Stoner vows to continue his crusade for white supremacy and his campaign for U.S. Senate.

Church, a focal point of civil rights activity. "I was prosecuted and tried for my racial, political and religious beliefs," said Stoner. "This confirms my conviction that this is a Jew-dominated country with no freedom for white Christians."

The jury deliberated for only 90 minutes before handing down the minimum sentence to the 56-year-old Marietta, Ga., lawyer. Released on a $20,000 appeal bond, Stoner planned to continue campaigning for the U.S. Senate seat now held by Democrat Herman Talmadge. Stoner could have been sentenced to a maximum penalty of life in prison. No one was injured in the early Sunday morning blast that shattered windowpanes at the Bethel Baptist Church and nearby homes when dynamite sticks packed in a five-gallon paint can exploded in the street.

In his closing argument, Assistant State Attorney General John Yung described Stoner as a "professional hater, cold-blooded bomber and bald-faced liar" who devoted his life to spread-

Clouds hiding volcano

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Clouds have frustrated attempts to measure the expanding bulge on Mount St. Helens' north flank, but geologists say activity at the volcano is continuing at a steady pace. Instruments measuring the bulge that has been expanding three to six feet a day remained out of reach to scientists who could not land planes Wednesday.

U.S. Geological Survey scientists reported steam and ash eruptions continued throughout the day and a small rock slide near Goat Rock. Scientists said a recently discovered steam vent in the ice at the head of Shoestring Glacier has enlarged somewhat and visible steam emissions from the pit have increased. Shoestring Glacier is located on the east-southeast side of the 9,677-foot peak. Meanwhile, scientists continue debating a theory suggested by a University of Puget Sound geologist — that gravitational pull of the sun and moon could upset the delicate balance between pushing magma within the mountain and the resisting rock. The minimum tidal pull on the earth is set for between May 21 and May 24, said Al Eggers of the University of Puget Sound.

Scientists said a recently discovered steam vent in the ice at the head of Shoestring Glacier has enlarged

"It (an eruption) could take place during this tidal minimum, or the next one, or perhaps not even during a tidal minimum at all," Eggers said. Don Mullineux, a volcano hazards specialist with the USGS, did not discount the gravitational theory, but he said a similar time occurred in early April without noticeable effect on Mount St. Helens.

No theft charge for phony driver

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ambrose Smith, the man who impersonated a city bus driver and says he worked four months for free, is not being charged with stealing the buses he drove after all, just with joyriding in them. Smith, 23, was arrested Tuesday on felony theft charges and spent a day in jail. He was released Wednesday on his promise to appear in court Friday and authorities reduced the theft charges to misdemeanor joy riding. Smith said he had wanted to be a bus driver ever since he was 4 years old. He was unable to obtain a job with Municipal Railway, which runs the city's transit system, because it has a minimum age of 24 for trainees. So he took matters into his own hands, learning the system's procedures while hanging around the Muni yard and talking with drivers. Smith also reported for a training class, saying he had been sent by the head office. He then started taking buses on routes and posed as a bus driver. He said he made more than 100 trips. Muni officials said he was a good driver who knew the routes well and always returned buses in good shape. He wasn't paid because he wasn't listed on the company's rolls. He was discovered when an inspector noted a bus off its regular route April 27 and recognized Smith as the driver. Smith heard about the incident and took a "vacation." He was arrested Tuesday by Muni police who saw him walking downtown. Transit Investigators, who say Smith apparently left all the money he collected in fare boxes when returning buses, can only verify four runs made by Smith. "We're not denying there are more, but we don't think he's driven as many as he says he has," said Muni spokesman Jim Leonard. Smith says he still wants to become a bona fide driver. "I don't think they should prosecute me," he said. "They trained me, and I'm a good driver." Jim Fry, transit supervisor for Muni agreed. "He knew the lingo, the routes and apparently was dependable," Fry said. "He ought to be put in for Muni Man of the Month."

'Land rush' spurred by low interest rate

HOUSTON (AP) — Savings and loan officials say $175 million in "cheap" money has started a land rush among prospective homebuyers who want to take advantage of a 9.75 percent interest rate. "Undoubtedly, the busiest day this year," Cliff Crabtree, a mortgage company office manager said Wednesday after the mortgage revenue bonds became available. "I'd expect a lot more to come in tomorrow (Thursday) due to the tremendous number of calls we've been getting," said Perry McVay, another mortgage company officer who added his firm had signed 21 loan applications Wednesday. McVay said his firm normally handles only about 18 applications a week and indicated that he expected even more applicants after homebuyers had been in touch with sellers. The money is being made available through a non-profit city housing finance corporation. Funds from the mortgage payments will be used to help rebuild the inner city, said Houston mayor Jim McConn. The mayor told a Board of Realtors meeting Wednesday that "many Houstonians who have been priced out of the housing market can now be housed" because of the unique lending program. Borrowers who meet specific income requirements may get up to $67,500 for a new home. Officials think most of the loans will go for homes costing about $50,000. "It's a brilliant idea and makes more sense than anything I've heard of," said Pam Flaisted, a sales representative as she paid preliminary fees for a $41,000 condominium. "I never thought I'd be able to afford to own a place at 13 or 14 percent interest. It's the first time in my life I've been happy my income was low enough to qualify for something." Fifty percent of the $175 million will be available to persons with a combined household income of no more than $33,000, with the rest going to persons making less than $22,500. Ernie Fitzpatrick, a real estate officer, said he "wouldn't be surprised if the city sold out in 30 days and what we're wondering is whether the city will reissue more money." About 50 lending institutions are taking part in the program, officials said.

Panel to delay restrictions on mortgages until next year

By JIM LUTHER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee is sending a message aimed at spurring the depressed housing industry: Any new restrictions on mortgage bonds will be delayed until next year. At the urging of its chairman, Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., the committee, voted unanimously Wednesday to serve notice that House-passed restrictions on using tax-free bonds for home mortgages would not go into effect before January. Although the resolution is officially nothing more than a statement of the panel's sentiment, it is highly improbable the changes approved by the House could become law this year over the committee's objections. Long told the committee that the measure passed by the House "is keeping people from owning homes — keeping states and counties from coming to the aid of their citizens. That bill has got at least a million people out of work in the country right now." The committee's vote was an effort to remove a cloud that has hung over the housing industry since a bill was introduced in the House April 25, 1979, to restrict use of tax-exempt bonds for single-home mortgages. Even though that bill has never been passed, its introduction by senior House members put the housing industry and financial markets on notice that restrictions were in the offing. The bill actually passed by the House March 26 is less restrictive than the measure originally proposed by Reps. Al Ullman, D-Ore., and Barber Conable, R-N.Y., chairman and senior Republican, respectively, of the House Ways and Means Committee. Bernard Shapiro, director of the Joint Committee on Taxation, said there is no way to tell whether the Finance Committee's vote will be a strong enough signal to revitalize the housing-bond market. But he predicted such a result could be assured if Ullman and Conable publicly endorse the Finance Committee vote. There was no immediate indication whether the two House members would back the Senate panel's action. Donald Lubick, an assistant secretary of the treasury, said the delay favored by the committee would double to $20 billion the value of tax-exempt housing bonds expected to be issued this year. That increase would cost the treasury $250 million in lost taxes in the next budget year, he said. Lubick said guaranteed tax-free treatment for the rest of the year would prompt 33,000 new housing starts, at a tax loss to the treasury of more than $7,500 per home. The Finance Committee has not yet decided what changes to make in the taxation of housing bonds, although there is agreement among members that such bonds have been abused. It was in response to such abuses that the House voted the crackdown. In recent years state and local governments have issued large amounts of tax-exempt development bonds to finance the purchase of owner-occupied homes. Typically, the government agency will issue the bonds and lend the money to private institutions, which, in turn, make loans for individuals to buy homes. The legislation passed by the House generally would allow tax-exempt bonds to be used for single-family, owner-occupied homes only if the money is for the borrower's principal home; the borrower has not been a homeowner for the past three years; the borrower's income generally does not exceed 115 percent of the median family income of an area; and the price of the home is no more than 80 percent of the average in the area. The bill also limits the total amount of housing bonds that may be issued in each state.

Auto sales at low level

DETROIT (AP) — The daily automobile selling rate has hit its lowest level in 22 years, and a new factor in the sharp decline is that the businesses that use cars aren't doing business. The five U.S. producers reported Wednesday their sales for early May were 142,652 cars, 42 percent below the 245,124 delivered in the same period last year. The daily selling rate, 15,850, was the worst for the first 10 days of May since 1958, when it was 13,705. Last year's rate was 27,236. Analysts had been expecting a drop of 30 percent to 35 percent. One analyst who asked not to be named said much of the extra decline resulted from slowing fleet sales — purchases by businesses that use cars in their business.

Interest rates fall at sharp rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on government-backed mortgages are falling by the sharpest amount ever, 1.5 percent, amid hints the Federal Reserve Board may soon dismantle credit controls it imposed in March.

The government announced Wednesday that Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration mortgage rates for single-family homes will drop from 13 percent to 11.5 percent, effective today.

Meanwhile, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker said monetary and credit conditions have improved so much of late that the board can begin to consider eliminating some of the controls imposed in March.

"Money and credit growth have slowed appreciably. Indeed, there is now considerable room for growth consistent with the targets we set for ourselves for all of this year," Volcker said in a speech to the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, meeting in Lake Buena Vista, Fla.

The economy has slowed considerably, leading many analysts to predict a recession as bad, if not worse, than the 1974-75 downturn.

Nobel Prize economist Milton Friedman, in an interview Wednesday, said, "It would be a miracle if, with this kind of start, the recession ended up less severe than the (1974-75) one."

He sharply criticized the credit controls Volcker said may be dismantled. In recent weeks, the money supply has declined sharply, while the government has reported a rapid rise in unemployment and the smallest increase in wholesale prices in 11 months.

Meanwhile, short-term interest rates have plunged and conventional mortgage rates have slid from as high as 18 percent to as low as 12 percent in some places.

The government's decision to lower the FHA-VA rate on single-family homes is a direct response to the slowdown. It was the second decline in three weeks, after nearly four years of steady increases in the federal rates, which stood at 14 percent in late April.

Although the government moved to lower the rate on single-family home mortgages, it took no action to lower record-high rates on multi-family houses, which have stood at 13 percent since Feb. 28.

However, loan rates will be reduced effective Monday on mobile homes, property improvements and combination mobile home and lot loans, the government announced.

Housing and Urban Development Secretary Moon Landrieu said the drastic reduction in single-family rates will enable many more households to qualify for mortgages.

"At 13 percent, many potential homeowners are still priced out of homeownership," Landrieu said. But at 11.5 percent, about 3.5 million more homebuyers will qualify for a $60,000 FHA-VA mortgage, he said.

At 13 percent, a homebuyer with a $60,000 mortgage must spend $683.72 a month for principal and interest payments for a 30-year mortgage. At 11.5 percent, the monthly cost drops to $594.17.

"The rate reduction is very good news. It will loosen up the market, which has been virtually dead at 13 percent," said Thomas Parliament, an economist with the U.S. League of Savings Associations.

But he added that, with a recession developing rapidly, many people still may be reluctant to commit themselves to a large mortgage. Although FHA and VA loans are guaranteed by the government, they are issued by private lenders. To cover the profit gap between what lenders can make with conventional loans at higher interest rates and the lower FHA or VA loans, the lenders require payment of "points" — a one-time cash surcharge — as a consideration for making the loan.

Midland CETA office sets daylong workshop

The Midland CETA Manpower office is sponsoring a workshop on "Putting Yourself to Work" for all CETA participants from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday in Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church Education Building, 1204 E. Cherry Lane.

Purpose of the workshop is to teach CETA participants how to find employment in the private sector. The Comprehensive Employment and Training Act is a division of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission.

Speakers will include Walt Piliski, counselor for the Texas Employment Commission; Wayne Dismukes with the Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health-Mental Retardation; and Herb Hall of the Monroe Calculator Company and president of the Private Sector Initiative program; the Midland CETA staff and W.C. Wilson Jr.

Topics will include how to look for a job, filling out applications, basic pointers for successful interviews and interest and skill evaluations. A major area of discussion will center on how to keep a job and various behaviors expected by employers.

By law, such points must be paid by the seller. While that requirement effectively reduces the net profit an owner might realize from a sale, it also enhances the owner's chances of finding a buyer who can qualify for a loan. Early last week, the Federal Reserve Board lifted a special discount rate surcharge it had established to discourage borrowing by large member banks from the central bank. The credit controls still in effect include: — A voluntary target of 6 percent to 9 percent for the growth of institutional loans from banks and finance companies. — An increase in several mandatory reserve requirements on certain bank holdings and the setting of special reserve requirements on increases in money market funds. — A requirement that credit card companies and other consumer lenders set up non-interest-bearing reserve accounts on a portion of new credit card accounts, thus making consumer borrowing more expensive. Some economists, including Friedman, have argued that the March controls came after the nation had entered a recession. "They should never have been imposed," said Friedman. "It was locking the door after the horse was stolen."

Two American oilmen charged as spies in Libya

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two American oil company representatives who were detained in Libya two months ago have been charged with engaging in spy activities, according to reports reaching the State Department.

Department officials identified them today as Roger Price and Michael Frey. They were arrested on March 19 but U.S. consular officers have not been allowed access to them, the officials said. Their hometowns were not given.

The United States has had no official representation in Libya for the past two weeks. American officials learned of the spy charges from U.S. businessmen in Libya and from the Libyan news media.

On Tuesday, State Department spokesman David Nail said the two were being held in a prison in Tripoli reserved for political prisoners.

The charges were placed after Libya expelled 25 other Americans earlier this week. Official Libyan accounts said these Americans were involved in spying and had connections with terrorist organizations.

Last Friday, under State Department pressure, Libya recalled four members of its diplomatic mission in Washington. The department claimed the four had participated in a campaign of intimidation against opponents of Libyan leader Muammar Quaddafi.

Before declaring the four unacceptable, the United States withdrew its only two diplomats from the Libyan capital of Tripoli as a precautionary measure.

Greek president sworn in today

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Former Prime Minister Constantine Caramanlis was sworn in today as president of Greece, ensuring the veteran politician's continued presence in the political arena.

Caramanlis, 73, left the premiership earlier this month when he was elected by parliament to succeed President Constantine Tsatsos. George Rallis, the foreign minister under Caramanlis and head of New Democracy, the moderately right of center party he founded in 1974 after the collapse of the seven-year military dictatorship, was elected premier.

Caramanlis is not expected to sit back and observe politics during his five-year term. As head of state, he is expected to use the vaguely defined powers of the presidency to check the executive branch, especially if Rallis loses the next general election to an anti-Western slate.

Funeral services held for late Episcopal head

BOSTON (AP) — Funeral services for the Rt. Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill, retired presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church of the United States and former president of the World Council of Churches, were held Wednesday in the midtown Boston church where he began his clerical career.

The Rt. Rev. John Allin, presiding bishop of the Protestant-Episcopal Church in the United States, presided over the services at Trinity Church where Sherrill served from 1914 to 1917 as assistant rector following his graduation from the Episcopal Theological Seminary in Cambridge, Mass.

Other participants were Bishop John Coburn of the Massachusetts church and the Rev. Thom Blair, rector of Trinity Church. Among the mourners were Cardinal Humberto Medeiros, Roman Catholic archbishop of Boston.

Sherrill, who died Sunday in his home on Boxford, Mass., at 89, returned in 1930 to become Trinity Church rector.

He served as the first president of the National Council of Churches, from the founding of the interdenominational organization of Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations in 1950 until 1952. He was president of the World Council of Churches from 1954 to 1961.

Sherrill headed the 3-million-member Episcopal Church for 11 years from 1947 until his retirement in 1958.

As an early champion of cooperation among Christians of different denominations, his broadcast Lenten appeal in 1948 raised $1.5 million for aid to the needy. The appeal launched what became the "One Great Hour of Sharing" program in which 17 denominations now participate.

Sherrill, a native of Brooklyn, served as chaplain in World War I with American forces in France.

In World War II, he headed the church's Army-Navy Commission and the General Commission of Army-Navy Chaplains, traveling in that role throughout the war zones. For his wartime work he received the U.S. Medal of Merit, highest award given to a civilian.

Former editor sentenced

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — The former managing editor of a banned magazine was sentenced to five years in prison today on charges of publishing communist propaganda, the Taiwan garrison command reported.

Li Ching-yung, 53, originally of Kwangtung in South China, was managing editor of "The Voice of the Wealthy Castle." He was sentenced to five years in prison on charges of spreading Communist propaganda and writing articles in favor of peaceful unification of China and Taiwan, the security organization said.

In his trial, military prosecutors contended that Li's stories proved he was a communist sympathizer. Li, arrested in March, denied the charges during his trial.

Military prosecutors said Li worked for Hung Chih-liang, 33, a Taiwanese eel dealer sentenced to five years in prison for attempting to overthrow the government of Taiwan and collaborating with Communists in Japan and on the Chinese mainland.

It was not immediately known whether Li would appeal. He was not available for comment.

Buses driven into police line in Seoul

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Anti-government demonstrators drove at least three commandeered city buses into police lines today, injuring at least seven officers, as an estimated 50,000-100,000 students battled security forces on the approaches to the capitol building in Seoul.

The demonstrators in the hijacked buses slowly pushed back barricades, as their colleagues hurled torn-up blocks of sidewalk at riot police who responded with tear gas and clubs. Army reinforcements with fixed bayonets and at least 20 armored personnel carriers rushed in to help the police.

Some 10,000 students also protested in Kwangju, 150 miles south of Seoul, injuring seven policemen. And protests involving 20,000 students erupted in the four southern cities of Taegu, Chonju, Suwon and Incheon. The protesters in Seoul began their march from the main railway station where they had massed for a sit-down demonstration after riot police fired tear gas to rout 5,000 other protesters who tried marching on the capitol building from the YMCA, a mile away.

The students chanted slogans demanding the lifting of martial law and the resignation of military strongman and Korean CIA chief Lt. Gen. Chun Doo-hwan. More than 2,000 riot police with helmets, shields, tear gas guns and clubs were deployed around the city.

On Wednesday, 30,000 students in Seoul and an estimated 20,000 in five other cities clashed with police. In Taegu, the third largest city 140 miles south of Seoul, 500 students reportedly attacked police stations and set fire to a police bus and wrecked three police vehicles.

More than 850 persons, almost all students, have been arrested in the last three days of street demonstrations which followed nearly two weeks of on-campus rallies.

Many of those arrested have been released, but police said they would charge leaders involved in violent clashes with police.

Police said 258 policemen and 27 civilians were injured Tuesday and Wednesday. Thirty-nine were hospitalized.

Political sources said President Choi Kyu-hah is expected to speed up the timetable for South Korea's return to democracy in response to the huge student demonstrations.

Choi, who took power after Park Chung-hee was assassinated last October, is scheduled to return home Saturday from his state visits to Saudi Arabia and Kuwait. Sources said he may decide to return sooner because of the unrest here.

The president is likely to call for a new constitution, elections and the installation of a new president by the end of the year, the sources said.

The government has promised to prepare a new constitution this year and hold elections next spring, but opponents complain the timetable for reform has been vague.

Demonstrators contend that Chun, who heads both the Korean Central Intelligence Agency and the Defense

Security Command, has been trying to grab power by prolonging the martial law rule and by delaying a new constitution.

The government has said martial law, which was declared after Park's assassination last year, will only be lifted when the country returns to political stability.

Warsaw nations end session today

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev and leaders of six other Warsaw Pact nations today concluded their two-day meeting with the signing of documents, the Polish news agency PAP reported.

No details of the documents' contents were revealed immediately, but texts were expected to be released later.

Brezhnev and the others began their meeting Wednesday as the consultative council of the Warsaw pact, the Communist military alliance.

Media of the Eastern bloc have said the talks would make "significant contributions" to reviving détente. That has led to speculation the Soviets might make some move toward relaxing tensions before Friday's meeting in Vienna between Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and U.S. Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie.

Congress was not notified about engine sale to Iraq

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration has admitted that it made a mistake when it failed to tell Congress before it licensed the sale of ship engines to Iraq.

But Assistant Secretary of State Deane Hinton denied Wednesday that the administration had violated a law which requires that Congress be notified before the executive branch licenses U.S. sales to nations which the secretary of state says support terrorism. Iraq is on that list.

On Jan. 23, the administration approved the sale of eight engines for four frigates being built by Italy for the Iraqi navy.

The engines weren't on a list of items the Carter administration had banned for sales to certain nations. Hinton told the House Mideast subcommittee the engines shouldn't have been sold, but he denied there was any violation of law.

Lakers top 76ers

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar injures ankle

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers need just one more victory to wrap up the National Basketball Association championship, but if Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's hurting, they may be, too.

The Lakers won 106-103 Wednesday night to take a three games to two edge over the Philadelphia 76ers in the best-of-seven championship series, but Abdul-Jabbar suffered a sprained left ankle which may limit his playing time — or efficiency.

Answers to Abdul-Jabbar's availability for Friday night's sixth game in Philadelphia — and to a possible seventh in Los Angeles Sunday — are expected Friday morning. Team physician Dr. Robert Kerlan said that an evaluation would be made then to judge "what the pain and discomfort is."

Abdul-Jabbar hurt the ankle when he came down on it awkwardly after a shot late in the third quarter. He left the game, but returned in the fourth quarter. Although limping, the 7-foot-2 center scored 14 of his 40 points in the final period and tallied a key three-point play that broke a 103-103 tie with 33 seconds left.

Before being whisked away to a nearby hospital for precautionary X-rays after the game, Abdul-Jabbar said, "It really hurts, but I felt I had to come back."

Playing his finest game of the series, Abdul-Jabbar hit 16 of 24 floor shots and eight of nine from the free throw line, and also had 15 rebounds and four blocked shots. Amazingly, he even dominated the game by his absence when he went out to have the ankle examined and taped.

The contest had been tight all the way, and Los Angeles was ahead 69-67 when Abdul-Jabbar hobbled off. The fired-up Lakers then ran off a 12-6 string to go into the fourth quarter with an 81-73 lead. The 76ers began closing the gap in the final five minutes of the contest, tying the game before Abdul-Jabbar's lay-in and free throw and Norm Nixon's two insurance free throws in the final seconds.

"The difference was our inability to control the game when Kareem went out," said Julius "Dr. J" Erving, who scored 36 points for the 76ers and sparked the late comeback. "They scrambled and gambled and put up a lead and then we had to play catch up."

"That lead we built up when Kareem was out was the big thing," said the Lakers Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who had 15 rebounds and 10 assists to go with his 14 points for Los Angeles. "They came back, but they couldn't come back enough."

"It was the wounded animal syndrome," said Laker Coach Paul Westhead, explaining the scoring spurt. "We played group basketball. We weren't going to let the absence of Kareem keep us down."

Guard Norm Nixon chipped in 20 points for the Lakers, and forward Jamaal Wilkes added 14.

Darryl Dawkins had 23 points for Philadelphia, and Lionel Hollins, with 10 points, was the only other 76er in double figures.

Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham, who criticized the officials for not calling Abdul-Jabbar "for playing a one-man zone," nevertheless said he hopes the Laker center is able to play the rest of the series.

"He's a great credit to the game and if we win it," Cunningham said, "we want to win it with Kareem on the court."

The Lakers' Nixon said that, since the 76ers are on the brink of losing the playoffs, he expects them to be especially determined to win Game Six.

"I'm sure Philadelphia isn't going to roll over and play dead," he said. "The fact that we went ahead 3-2 is sure to make it a tougher game back there."

Wilkes said: "I feel we can win back there. Of course it will be tougher for us if Kareem's not able to play, but we realize we'll have to play hard with him or without him."

Erving said Philadelphia would make no changes for Friday night's game, and added: "We hope to get a different result. We're still together. The series is not over...Nobody said it would be easy."

Mayes gathers up Gathercole Award

By TERRY WILLIAMSON Sports Writer

Carrie Mayes was presented the prestigious Terry Gathercole Award Wednesday night at the Ranchland Hills Country Club during the annual awards banquet of the City of Midland Swim Team.

The award, named after a former COM coach who created the idea before leaving for his homeland of Australia, annually goes to the top swimmer on the COM team.

Miss Mayes achieved two top 25 age group national time rankings during 1979 to earn the award. She ranked 25th in the nation in the 100-yard breaststroke with a 1:08.78 and 24th in the 200-yard breaststroke with a 2:28.01.

Miss Mayes also was a junior national qualifier in the 100-yard breaststroke, 200-yard breaststroke, 400-yard individual medley, 100-meter breaststroke and 200-meter breaststroke. She also competed in both the short and long course Senior Circuit meets in the past year as well as the long course TAGS competition.

The only other COM swimmer to earn a Top 25 ranking was Andrew Jordan, who ranked 25th in the 100-meter backstroke with a 1:12.98. Jordan was also a long course TAGS competitor.

Other long course Senior Circuit competitors in 1979 were Andrea Freeman, Lori Thompson, Gretchen Koch, Sid Glenn and Curt Buthman. Senior Circuit short course qualifiers in 1980 were Robin Franke, John Kimberly, Lori Thompson and Andrea Freeman.

Marsh signs with Cardinals

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Tight end Doug Marsh of Michigan, selected second in this month's National Football League draft, has become the first rookie to come to contract terms with the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I got a good deal," the 6-foot-3, 236-pound Marsh said Wednesday after signing a series of five one-year agreements for an amount not disclosed.

Other TAGS short course qualifiers were Laura Morse, Tracey Delany, Michaela Hasek, Carrie Kyle, Leslie Dunbar, Beth Murrah, Emily Murrah, Suzi Simpson, Sam Perry, Mike Seay, Pat Rhomey and Jon Franke.

COM coaches, John Jordan, Bill Smith and Rick Mann, also presented each team member with participation certificates.

John Seay, who served as president of COM during the last year, was also presented a special award for the work he did during his term.

Gary Schatz, former COM and Auburn University swimming standout who recently won the 50-meter freestyle title in the Spring Nationals, was the guest speaker.

Athletes political pawns

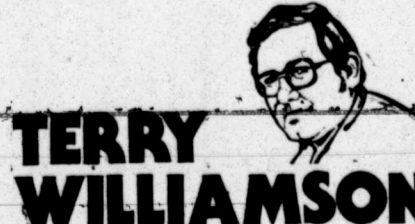

For most of us, or at least the polls tell us, the Olympic boycott movement was one of those necessary political moves to place the Russian invasion of Afghanistan in the world spotlight.

The thinking is that a boycott of the 1980 Olympics in Moscow would hit Russia where it would hurt most. Russia wants to make the Olympics a showcase. So politics entered the world of sports competition even though the Olympics is supposed to be separated from all political action. However, it never has been.

NO MATTER how you feel about the boycott movement by this country, it is easy to see that America's athletes have become political pawns. The Olympics has become the dream for which athletes strive for. Goals were set and sacrifices were made. Their dream has been shattered.

The boycott may be the right thing at the right time. Every person will have to decide that for themselves. But Midlanders should at least feel the plight of one of its own Olympic hopefuls because Gary Schatz has lost his chance to become an Olympian.

SCHATZ, A former City of Midland Swim Team member and state competitor for Midland High, was hoping to make the 1980 Olympic team in the 50-meter freestyle. Working toward that effort, he recently won the Spring Nationals in Austin with a 22.86, his first national title. He had a real shot at the Olympics.

Schatz took a leave of absence from his job with Exxon in Houston for a year of training. His wife, Susan, became the bread winner so he could have his chance. Schatz rejoined his college coach, Eddie Reese, in Austin to train. Reese had coached Gary through his college days at Auburn University, where Schatz won Auburn's Athlete of the Year, the first time the award ever went to a non-football athlete.

SCHATZ ONCE broke 20 seconds in the 50-yard freestyle which beat a world record, but finished second in that race. He also suffered a cracked vertebra, which could have made many swimmers quit the trade. But the Olympics was important, so he made a comeback.

"I really had my sights set on the Olympics, and I think I had a good chance at making the team," Schatz said.

Tatum positive Stabler will lead Houston to Super Bowl

HOUSTON (AP) — New Houston Oilers defensive back Jack Tatum says former Oakland quarterback Ken Stabler took the Raiders to the Super Bowl and he can do the same thing for the Oilers.

"I don't think he is going to win a Miss America contest," Tatum said of the bearded Stabler. "But there's nothing wrong with his head or his arm. He took us to the Super Bowl out there and he can do it again."

Stabler was traded to the Oilers on March 15 for Oiler quarterback Dan Pastorini. Tatum followed on April 29 in a deal that gave the Oilers a pair of draft picks and sent running back Kenny King to the Raiders.

Tatum said he didn't know where he would fit into the Oiler defense, which already contains a pair of top-flight safeties in Mike Reinfeldt and Vernon Perry.

"I don't expect to walk in and be handed a job," he said. "I expect to compete for a job. They can't sit one of them (Perry or Reinfeldt) down after the way they played last year."

Reinfeldt led the National Football League in interceptions and Perry picked off four passes in an upset victory over San Diego in the American Football Conference playoffs.

"My role will be a football player," Tatum said. "I'm willing to play anywhere I can help the team get to the Super Bowl."

Tatum's controversial book, "They Call Me Assassin," discussed his penchant for hard-tackling, but Tatum said he is not a dirty player.

"I hit people as hard as I can," he said. "I break up as many plays as I can. But I don't play dirty. I don't want to hurt people."

Tatum said he was looking forward to the competition against Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh.

"I'd be happy if we played the Steelers 16 times," he said. "Pittsburgh's the best. You only get better playing against the best."

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar injures ankle

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers need just one more victory to wrap up the National Basketball Association championship, but if Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's hurting, they may be, too.

The Lakers won 106-103 Wednesday night to take a three games to two edge over the Philadelphia 76ers in the best-of-seven championship series, but Abdul-Jabbar suffered a sprained left ankle which may limit his playing time — or efficiency.

Answers to Abdul-Jabbar's availability for Friday night's sixth game in Philadelphia — and to a possible seventh in Los Angeles Sunday — are expected Friday morning. Team physician Dr. Robert Kerlan said that an evaluation would be made then to judge "what the pain and discomfort is."

Abdul-Jabbar hurt the ankle when he came down on it awkwardly after a shot late in the third quarter. He left the game, but returned in the fourth quarter. Although limping, the 7-foot-2 center scored 14 of his 40 points in the final period and tallied a key three-point play that broke a 103-103 tie with 33 seconds left.

Before being whisked away to a nearby hospital for precautionary X-rays after the game, Abdul-Jabbar said, "It really hurts, but I felt I had to come back."

Playing his finest game of the series, Abdul-Jabbar hit 16 of 24 floor shots and eight of nine from the free throw line, and also had 15 rebounds and four blocked shots. Amazingly, he even dominated the game by his absence when he went out to have the ankle examined and taped.

The contest had been tight all the way, and Los Angeles was ahead 69-67 when Abdul-Jabbar hobbled off. The fired-up Lakers then ran off a 12-6 string to go into the fourth quarter with an 81-73 lead. The 76ers began closing the gap in the final five minutes of the contest, tying the game before Abdul-Jabbar's layin and free throw and Norm Nixon's two insurance free throws in the final seconds.

"The difference was our inability to control the game when Kareem went out," said Julius "Dr. J." Erving, who scored 36 points for the 76ers and sparked the late comeback. "They scrambled and gambled and put up a lead and then we had to play catch up."

"That lead we built up when Kareem was out was the big thing," said the Lakers Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who had 15 rebounds and 10 assists to go with his 14 points for Los Angeles. "They came back, but they couldn't come back enough."

"It was the wounded animal syndrome," said Laker Coach Paul Westhead, explaining the scoring spurt. "We played group basketball. We weren't going to let the absence of Kareem keep us down."

Guard Norm Nixon chipped in 20 points for the Lakers, and forward Jamaal Wilkes added 14.

Darryl Dawkins had 23 points for Philadelphia, and Lionel Hollins, with 10 points, was the only other 76er in double figures.

Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham, who criticized the officials for not calling Abdul-Jabbar "for playing a one-man zone," nevertheless said he hopes the Laker center is able to play the rest of the series.

"He's a great credit to the game and if we win it," Cunningham said, "we want to win it with Kareem on the court."

The Lakers' Nixon said that, since the 76ers are on the brink of losing the playoffs, he expects them to be especially determined to win Game Six.

"I'm sure Philadelphia isn't going to roll over and play dead," he said. "The fact that we went ahead 3-2 is sure to make it a tougher game back there."

Wilkes said: "I feel we can win back there. Of course it will be tougher for us if Kareem's not able to play, but we realize we'll have to play hard with him or without him."

Erving said Philadelphia would make no changes for Friday night's game, and added: "We hope to get a different result. We're still together. The series is not over... Nobody said it would be easy."

Mayes gathers up Gathercole Award

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

Carrie Mayes was presented the prestigious Terry Gathercole Award Wednesday night at the Ranchland Hills Country Club during the annual awards banquet of the City of Midland Swim Team.

The award, named after a former COM coach who created the idea before leaving for his homeland of Australia, annually goes to the top swimmer on the COM team.

Miss Mayes achieved two top 25 age group national time rankings during 1979 to earn the award. She ranked 25th in the nation in the 100-yard breaststroke with a 1:08.78 and 24th in the 200-yard breaststroke with a 2:28.01.

Miss Mayes also was a junior national qualifier in the 100-yard breaststroke, 200-yard breaststroke, 400-yard individual medley, 100-meter breaststroke and 200-meter breaststroke. She also competed in both the short and long course Senior Circuit meets in the past year as well as the long course TAGS competition.

The only other COM swimmer to earn a Top 25 ranking was Andrew Jordan, who ranked 25th in the 100-meter backstroke with a 1:12.98. Jordan was also a long course TAGS competitor.

Other long course Senior Circuit competitors in 1979 were Andrea Freeman, Lori Thompson, Gretchen Koch, Sid Glenn and Curt Buthman. Senior Circuit short course qualifiers in 1980 were Robin Franke, John Kimberly, Lori Thompson and Andrea Freeman.

Over 30 COM swimmers qualified for the long course TAGS competition. The others were Grady Gilliland, Karl Schmidt, Alan Reed, Sam Perry, Michaela Hasek, Tracey Delany, Suzi Simpson, Andrea Freeman, Leslie Dunbar, Caroline Reed, Emily Murrar, Pat Rhamey, Mike Seay, Clay Spears, Cleve Carrens, Brian Birdwell, Trent Holtkort, Al Reid, Jason Stone, Laura Morse, Becky Simpson, Lori Thompson, Gretchen Koch, Beth Murrar, Jana Housman, Alex LaForge, Andy Williams, Carey Carrens and Jon Franke.

Marsh signs with Cardinals

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Tight end Doug Marsh of Michigan, selected second in this month's National Football League draft, has become the first rookie to come to contract terms with the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I got a good deal," the 6-foot-3, 236-pound Marsh said Wednesday after signing a series of five one-year agreements for an amount not disclosed.

Other TAGS short course qualifiers were Laura Morse, Tracey Delany, Michaela Hasek, Carrie Kyle, Leslie Dunbar, Beth Murrar, Emily Murrar, Suzi Simpson, Sam Perry, Mike Seay, Pat Rhamey and Jon Franke.

COM coaches, John Jordan, Bill Smith and Rick Mann, also presented each team member with participation certificates.

John Seay, who served as president of COM during the last year, was also presented a special award for the work he did during his term.

Gary Schatz, former COM and Auburn University swimming standout who recently won the 50-meter freestyle title in the Spring Nationals, was the guest speaker.

Athletes political pawns

For most of us, or at least the polls tell us, the Olympic boycott movement was one of those necessary political moves to place the Russian invasion of Afghanistan in the world spotlight.

The thinking is that a boycott of the 1980 Olympics in Moscow would hit Russia where it would hurt most. Russia wants to make the Olympics a showcase. So politics entered the world of sports competition even though the Olympics is supposed to be separated from all political action. However, it never has been.

NO MATTER how you feel about the boycott movement by this country, it is easy to see that America's athletes have become political pawns. The Olympics has become the dream for which athletes strive for. Goals were set and sacrifices were made. Their dream has been shattered.

The boycott may be the right thing at the right time. Every person will have to decide that for themselves. But Midlanders should at least feel the plight of one of its own Olympic hopefuls because Gary Schatz has lost his chance to become an Olympian.

SCHATZ, A former City of Midland Swim Team member and state competitor for Midland High, was hoping to make the 1980 Olympic team in the 50-meter freestyle. Working toward that effort, he recently won the Spring Nationals in Austin with a 22.86, his first national title. He had a real shot at the Olympics.

Schatz took a leave of absence from his job with Exxon in Houston for a year of training. His wife, Susan, became the bread winner so he could have his chance. Schatz rejoined his college coach, Eddie Reese, in Austin to train. Reese had coached Gary through his college days at Auburn University, where Schatz won Auburn's Athlete of the Year, the first time the award ever went to a non-football athlete.

SCHATZ ONCE broke 20 seconds in the 50-yard freestyle which beat a world record, but finished second in that race. He also suffered a cracked vertebra, which could have made many swimmers quit the trade. But the Olympics was important, so he made a comeback.

"I really had my sights set on the Olympics, and I think I had a good chance at making the team," Schatz said. "The boycott thing was a real tough blow to absorb. I don't feel politics and sports should mix, but I could see that a display of displeasure with Russia was coming."

"IT'S SOMETHING I had to deal with and I have had to change my goals. I think the attitude among American swimmers now is to prepare for the Summer Nationals in California and beat all the times set in the Olympics. Our Nationals will be in late July, just after the swimming competition in Moscow."

Schatz learned of the proposed boycott in January. "I sure didn't like the idea at the time, but I was able to continue training. It was a real blow though. I think the top eight swimmers in the 50 free had a shot at making the Olympic team. I'm fifth in the event right now and would have to move up two spots to make the team. But that was in sight."

So what does the future hold for Schatz, whose training schedule adds up to 7,000 meters per practice and a strenuous weight program? "I guess I'll wrap up my swimming career after the Nationals and go back to work with Exxon in Houston. There is a chance that some of the top performers in the Nationals will be able to make a trip to either China or Europe and I would like to do that. But there is no more Olympic hope for me. This was my last shot."

Schatz just missed qualifying for the 1976 Olympics, held in Montreal. And now he is one of the pawns in a greater game. But Gary Schatz is a proven winner, and he always will be.

Fryman handcuffs Astros, 1-0

By The Associated Press
At the age of 40, when he very well might be retired to his tobacco farm in Ewing, Ky., Woodie Fryman is out there pitching.

And Montreal's "old man" is looking like a young man these days, helping to hold up the Expos' bullpen with his strong left arm.

Fryman has retired 17 straight batters in relief, including 12 Wednesday night when the Expos beat the Houston Astros 1-0.

"The last two or three times out I've been in that groove and that's been my secret," said Fryman. "I had good breaking stuff and a good fast-ball and I was hitting the spots. It's easy to look good when you've got that going for you."

Fryman preserved the victory for Scott Sanderson, 3-2, pitching the final four innings.

"The old man did one heck of a job tonight," Expos Manager Dick Williams said. "This was his longest work of the year, but it didn't seem to bother him, did it?"

In other National League action, the Chicago Cubs beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-2, the New York Mets edged the Cincinnati Reds 7-6 in 10 innings, the Pittsburgh Pirates stopped the San Francisco Giants 3-2, the Philadelphia Phillies whipped the Atlanta Braves 9-1 and the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the San Diego Padres 2-1.

Tony Bernazard's fifth-inning double scored the only run the Expos needed. Houston starter Ken Forsch walked Gary Carter to lead off the fifth. Carter went to second on Warren Cromartie's grounder and scored when Bernazard's hit rolled down the right field line just out of the reach of first baseman Denny Walling.

Sanderson held the Astros to four hits until the sixth inning when he was removed from the game with a muscle spasm in his lower back. Sanderson had walked Joe Morgan to start the sixth but Fryman retired the side to end the threat.

Cubs 5, Dodgers 2
Dave Kingman slammed his eighth home run and drove in three runs to lead Chicago over Los Angeles.

Lynn McGlothin, 2-0, earned the victory with relief help from three pitchers. Bullpen ace Bruce Sutter, the last of them, recorded his ninth save.

Burt Hooton, 3-3, took the loss.

Mets 7, Reds 6
Jerry Morales snapped an 0-for-23 slump with an RBI single in the 10th inning to lead New York over Cincinnati. John Stearns opened the 10th with a double and two outs later, Morales — who had come into the game as a defensive replacement — slapped a single to left.

Pinch-hitter Harry Spillman had tied the game for Cincinnati with a three-run homer in the bottom of the ninth. It was the second straight pinch homer for Spillman.

"He hit a good pitch," loser Tom Hume, 3-2, said of Morales' game-winning hit. "I threw a sinker and jammed him."

Pirates 3, Giants 2
Jim Bibby and Kent Tekulve combined on a five-hitter to lead Pittsburgh over San Francisco. Bibby, 5-0, left the game in favor of Tekulve after giving up a leadoff double to Bill North in the eighth inning. Tekulve gained his fourth save.

The Pirates ended a 19-inning scoring drought with unearned runs in the first two innings off Bob Knepper. Dave Parker's RBI single in the eighth provided the Pirates with their winning run.

"If we'd played A-B-C baseball, we'd have won," said Giants Manager Dave Bristol, whose team made three errors.

Phillies 9, Braves 1
Steve Carlton gave up only two hits in six innings and Pete Rose drove in four runs as Philadelphia routed Atlanta.

Carlton, 6-2, did not allow a run until Bob Horner led off the sixth with his first homer of the season. Carlton, who struck out four and walked three, now has yielded only five hits to the Braves in 15 innings this season.

Rose had an RBI double in the second, keyed a four-run third with a two-run single and doubled home another run in the fifth.

Cardinals 2, Padres 1
Keith Hernandez singled and scored two runs, the second on an error in the sixth, to give Roy Thomas his first victory of the season as St. Louis edged San Diego.

NFL rejects complaint on Cowboys

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Football League has rejected complaints by the Washington Redskins and the Philadelphia Eagles accusing the Dallas Cowboys of illegally working out athletes eligible for this spring's draft, according to a published report.

The Washington Post, in its Thursday edition, says that the Cowboys were accused of administering an illegal hand-eye reaction test to potential draftees who were in Dallas for physical examinations.

Under NFL rules, any type of workout must be conducted away from the team's city and without the use of league players.

The Redskins also alleged that Dallas scouts, not doctors, administered the test, according to the Post. The Cowboys were also accused of having possible draftees work out with Dallas players.

Ellenberger barred from seeing transcripts

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP)—Former University of New Mexico basketball Coach Norm Ellenberger is barred from seeing federal grand jury transcripts or a list of government witnesses before his trial on mail fraud charges, a federal judge ruled Wednesday.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP)—Ellenberger or John Whisenant, a former assistant basketball coach also charged with mail fraud, said U.S. District Judge Juan Burciaga. Ellenberger was fired and later indicted by a federal grand jury amidst allegations centering on the possible doctoring of grade transcripts for junior college transfers.

five counts of mail fraud, one count of interstate travel in aid of racketeering enterprises and one count of wire fraud. He has pleaded innocent to the charges. Their trials are scheduled next month. Burciaga also denied motions from the two to select a new jury and denied a motion from Ellenberger to exclude news media from court hearings in the case. The indictments stemmed from a grand jury investigation that began Dec. 13 after the FBI said in late November it was looking into possible mail fraud and bribery in connection with the preparation of junior college transcripts for the school's basketball players.

Horton finally gets 1st homer in Seattle win

By The Associated Press

While slugger Willie Horton has been struggling this season with a .181 average, he has been able to keep things in perspective because of 15-year-old Brad Hobbs, who was paralyzed playing baseball.

Wednesday night, Horton repaid the debt with three hits, including his first home run of the season.

"This kid has been helping me through the slump," Horton said. "I've been going to the hospital everyday to see him and it's been helping me keep faith because that's what life is.

"He slid into home and caught his head on (the catcher's) shinguard," Horton said. "I read about it in the newspaper and I've been dropping by to see him.

"I promised when I left (Seattle) Sunday that my first home run would be for him."

The Seattle designated hitter scored twice and drove in two runs in the Mariners' 7-0 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

"Kids are the future of our country and our world, and anytime you see a kid hurt like that accidentally, well I've been sitting up nights thinking about that and saying a prayer for him."

In other American League games Wednesday, Boston edged Minnesota 7-6, Texas stopped Baltimore 6-3, California crushed Cleveland 13-7, Detroit nipped Oakland 6-5, the New York Yankees clobbered Kansas City 16-3 and Milwaukee downed the Chicago White Sox 5-1.

Bill Stein also belted a two-run homer in the Mariners' victory to back the five-hit pitching of Glen Abbott.

The loss dropped Toronto out of the AL East lead.

Abbott, 3-2, struck out five and walked two in pitching his third complete game. The only hits he allowed were three singles by Roy Hall and

Angels 13, Indians 7
Catcher Dave Skaggs, obtained from Baltimore for his defensive skills, made his Angels debut by driving in five runs with a home run and two singles, leading California over Cleveland.

Skaggs was purchased from the Baltimore Orioles Tuesday.

Toby Harrah and Tom Verzyer homered for the Indians.

Cleveland's Mike Hargrove singled in the seventh inning to run his hitting streak to 22 games, tops in the major leagues this season.

Brewers 5, White Sox 1
Robin Yount doubled, tripled and singled, scoring three times, and Larry Hise knocked in three runs to lead Milwaukee over Chicago.

Chet Lemon homered for the White Sox leading off the sixth.

Red Sox 7, Twins 6
A bases-loaded walk to pinch-hitter Jim Dwyer forced home Butch Hobson with the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning, giving Boston its victory.

Minnesota rookie Doug Corbett retired nine batters in a row until Hobson singled in the ninth, Jerry Remy followed with an infield hit and Carl Yastrzemski walked, filling the bases. Dwyer then walked on five pitches.

Rangers 6, Orioles 3
Dave Roberts slammed a bases-loaded home run, and Mickey Rivers and Richie Zisk added solo blasts to power Texas past Baltimore.

"I knew I hit it hard enough but the wind was driving it down," Roberts said of the gusts which reached 25 mph during the game. "The ball must have hooked 30 feet." It bounced off the foul pole.

Tigers 6, A's 5
Alan Trammell's single to right field scored Rick Peters and Lance Parrish in the bottom of the ninth inning, boosting the Tigers past Oakland.

It was Trammell's fourth hit in four official at-bats in the game. The Detroit shortstop also walked and scored three times.

The A's had taken a 5-4 lead in the top of the inning on Rob Picciolo's two-out single.

Yankees 16, Royals 3
Bucky Dent, Graig Nettles and Rick Cerone slammed two-run homers in New York's rout of Kansas City.

Dent's homer was the first inside-the-park homer of his career.

Willie Randolph drove in three runs with a bases-loaded walk and a double, while Ruppert Jones and Bobby Brown had two RBI each as the Yankees scored their most runs in a game this year.

Kansas City's Willie Wilson ripped the first pitch of the game for an inside-the-park home run and Darrell Porter homered in the sixth for the Royals' second run.

Reggie Jackson predicts strike

NEW YORK (AP) — Reggie Jackson, the New York Yankees player representative, says he thinks a strike next week by the Major League Baseball Players Association is a strong possibility.

"I'm not pessimistic, but I think there's a good chance of there being a strike," Jackson said Wednesday night. "And if there is one, it will probably be a long one — a month or so."

Jackson, who has been sitting in on negotiations the past two days, called the compensation issue "the overwhelming problem. If there is a strike, it will be over compensation."

The owners made a new compensation proposal this week but Marvin Miller, executive director of the players' association, said it did not contain substantial changes from management's original position. The owners are demanding a replacement player from the organization of a team signing a prime free agent.

"There won't be any give-ins by the players," Jackson said. "We gave in on that a few years ago."

Although the players won clear-free agency several years ago, they agreed that a player must have six years of major league service before he can sell his services on the open market.

"There has been some improvement," Jackson said of the negotiations, "but not in the major areas."

Holmes-Ali fight to be in August

NEW YORK (AP) — The promoter of the Muhammad Ali-Larry Holmes World Boxing Council heavyweight title fight says the bout, which will mark Ali's return to the ring from retirement, will take place in this country sometime in August.

Murad Muhammad said Wednesday that the undefeated Holmes and Ali will meet in the United States in late summer rather than in Brazil on July 11. The 165,000 Maracana Stadium in Rio de Janeiro was to be the site but was ruled out because of several problems, one of which was complaints by the stadium executive that construction of the ring and seats would damage the grass at the height of the soccer season.

"We feel that the United States is the best place for the fight," Murad Muhammad said. "It was our investors' decision to bring it here, but the July 11th date was too soon."

"We are in negotiations with some major arenas and have one specifically in mind. An announcement on the site will come soon."

Murad Muhammad and Don King, who has arranged all of Holmes' title fights, are co-promoters of the title bout being bankrolled by Los Angeles-based Prime Sports. Ali is expected to receive about $8 million and Holmes $4 million of the total proceeds.

"The delay will help Ali, it will help Holmes and it will help the promotion," Murad Muhammad said.

The bout would be televised via closed circuit to arenas and theaters around the country, Murad Muhammad said.

Baseball talks enter critical stage today

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball contract talks swing into a critical stage today as two deadline dates face negotiators.

The players' association is threatening to strike if a new basic agreement is not in place by May 22, one week from today. And Marvin Miller, executive director of the union, has said preparations for such a work stoppage will prevent him from negotiating past Sunday.

"The clock is running down," Miller said. "There's a long way to go and a short time to get there."

But management negotiator Ray Grebey views the deadlines as artificial.

"As far as the 26 clubs are concerned, there's no deadline," he said. "Our parks will be open on May 23 and we can play ball and negotiate at the same time."

For the second time this week, the two sides met for only a half day Wednesday, using their afternoons to study counter proposals presented on Tuesday.

The union responded to some of management's new proposals Wednesday, with more reactions expected today. The representatives of the owners also were expected to answer new player offers today.

"They're not taking any time off," said Kenneth Moffett, deputy director of the Federal Mediation Service, who has been sitting in on the talks since March 31. "They're working on the proposals. These are the first comprehensive proposals in some time. Whether anything will come of them, well, that's something else again."

Today's agenda also called for a discussion of a new compensation proposal made by management. But Miller said the offer did not contain substantial changes from the original position of the owners, who are demanding a replacement player from the organization of a team signing a prime free agent.

"It's not a step forward," Miller said of the compensation clause proposal. "That's all I'm going to say."

"I saw the terms of it, and it's an improvement," said Seattle player representative Bruce Bochte. "That's about it. It's very complex. They've made a little progress, but not enough for us to respond to it."

"It's a revision," said Grebey, who refused to outline the offer because it still was being studied by Miller's negotiating team.

Reggie Jackson, player representative of the New York Yankees, called the compensation issue "the overwhelming problem. If there's a strike, it will be over compensation."

The owners' proposals, according to a report in Thursday's New York Times, made no major changes in their demand for compensation for free agents or in their offer of pension benefits. The owners did define more clearly what they consider a "premier" free agent, which would be a player selected by eight or more teams in the November re-entry draft. That player also would have to qualify statistically from his on-field performance for "premier" status.

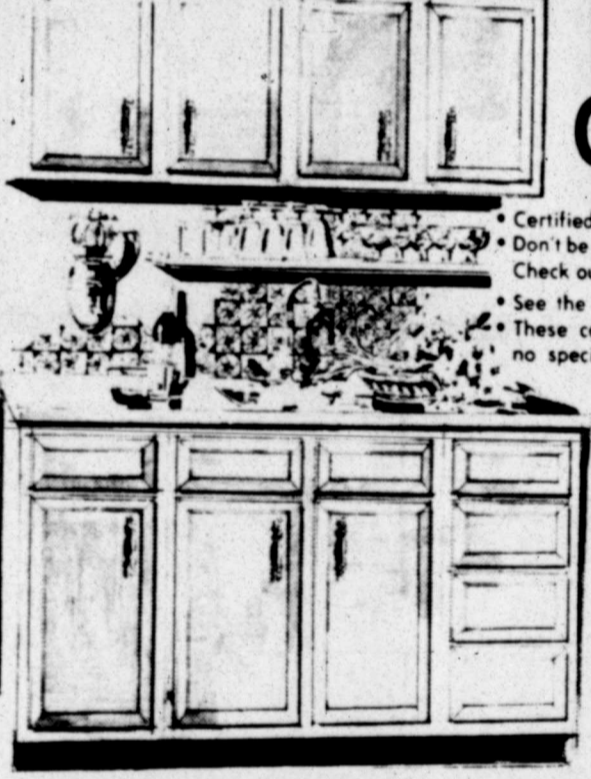

The Times said sources disclosed that the owners raised their minimum salary offer from $25,000 to $27,500 in the first year of a four-year agreement, with the salary climbing to $35,000 in the last year. The players are asking for $35,000 in the first year.

Fin & Feather

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission finally showed some sense, adopting a far-reaching regulation aimed at increasing the annual harvest of antlerless deer across most of the state's deer range.

Two regulations—a buck permit system and early 16-day antlerless only season—represent extensions of management programs in effect in some South Texas counties last season.

A NEW REGULATION establishes an either-sex white-tailed deer season for a wide Central Texas area, eliminating the antlerless deer permit system and allows the harvest of three deer of either sex, but no more than two bucks.

Persons hunting in these counties this fall should be aware that some county commissioners have the authority to approve or disapprove proposed regulations, which go into effect prior to the 1980-81 season.

Either-sex counties were selected by the following criteria: 1. less than 50 per cent of antlerless deer permits were utilized last season; 2. less than 20 per cent of the total deer is being harvested; 3. antlerless deer permits have been available for the past three years; 4. as determined by deer and hunter surveys, there are at least four deer per hunter.

COUNTIES SELECTED: Atascosa, Bandera, Bell, Bexar, Blanco, Burnet, Coke, Comal, Concho, Crockett, Edwards, Gillespie, Hays, Iron, Kendall, Kimble, Kinney, Lampasas, Llano, Mason, McCulloch, Medina, Menard, Mitchell, Mills, Nolan, Real, San Saba, Schleicher, Sterling, Sutton, Tom Green, Val Verde (east of the Pecos) and Williamson. The season is Nov. 15, 1980 through Jan. 4, 1981.

TPWD officials are confident the either-sex season will not adversely increase the number of antlerless deer taken during the hunting season, since, traditionally, less than half the allotted antlerless deer permits are utilized in these counties. The change is expected to cut red tape and expense for the TWPD and landowners since issuance rates are based on the theory that all permits will be utilized.

A similar either-sex whitetailed season (Nov. 29, 1980-Jan. 4, 1981) was adopted for Jeff Davis, Pecos, Terrell and Val Verde (west of the Pecos) with a limit of three deer either sex and no more than two bucks. Antlerless deer for the mule species will be legal only by permit.

A CHANGE affecting archery hunting for deer and turkey will start the season in all regulatory counties on the first Saturday in October (Oct. 4) for 30 consecutive days, rather than Oct. 1-31 as in the past for most counties. In general, archery regulations, such as season length and bag limit, have been no more liberal than the gun season regulations.

General season for whitetailed deer in most regulatory counties will be Nov. 15 through Jan. 4, 1981. Exceptions occur in many counties and hunters should contact local game wardens, department offices or the 1980-81 Guide to Texas Hunting, Fishing and Trapping regulations, to be published in August, for specific regulations. Additional information may be obtained by calling the department's toll-free number (1-800-252-9327).

Deer hunters also would be wise to secure secure hunting lease or land now. A lot of hunters are already making their plans on hunting next fall and winter. And with this new doe shooting business, there's a lot of interest in next season's deer hunting.

Islanders, Flyers to battle tonight

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — They are two players most fans love to hate, and it doesn't matter a bit to Ken Linseman or Bill Smith. They are agitators, disturbers, provocateurs. They are aggravating to play against, but wonderful — if they're on your team.

Before the National Hockey League playoff final is over, before Linseman's Philadelphia Flyers and Smith's New York Islanders have decided who wins the Stanley Cup this year, it's possible they will have turned this series into a battle of the ultra-villains.

"If the fans away from Philadelphia hate me, then I must be doing my job," Linseman said Wednesday as the Flyers — trailing 1-0 — prepared for tonight's second game in the best-of-seven series. "That makes sense, doesn't it? We're going to win, and if I'm doing the most possible to win, then I guess I'm going to be the most hated."

"The dirt — I mean, aggressiveness — whatever you call it, it's good, I guess," says the 21-year-old center. "If they hate me, I don't care. "As long as this team here likes what I'm doing and cares that I'm doing the right thing, that's all I care about," he added. "What we want to do is win, any way, any how."

At times, it seems Linseman takes that to mean slashing his opponents or perpetrating any offense to drive his foes to distraction. During the Flyers' semifinal triumph over Minnesota, a Linseman slash was blamed for injuring the hand of North Stars forward Kent-Erik Andersson. Linseman disregarded reports the injury resulted when he broke his stick on Andersson's arm.

"Perhaps we respected them a little too much last night," he said Wednesday, implying Philadelphia gave New York too much skating room and did not make intelligent use of its offense. "You can have all kinds of elaborate plans, but if you don't take advantage of what's there, you're not going to win," Quinn said. "We have confidence that our team can win. There's no reason we can't," added Flyers defenseman Behn Wilson. "You don't vote who wins the Stanley Cup; you want to prove who deserves it."

Coach Pat Quinn said he hoped his Flyers would change at least one thing: the outcome.

AU fans raise money for coaches

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — University of Arizona sports fans say they are raising money to pay travel expenses for which former coaches are alleged to have submitted false claims.

Head football coach Tony Mason resigned April 7 following the allegations and five assistant coaches were not rehired.

Lee Goodman, president of the Wildcat Club, said members are raising the funds outside the structure of the club.

The Arizona Daily Star reported last month that Assistant Coaches Tony Yelovich, Bob Davie, Bob Shaw, Tom Roggeman and Robert Valette submitted airline ticket receipts totaling $3,154 for recruiting trips they never took.

The Star also reported that Mason submitted false receipts.

Arizona Athletic Director David Strack said last month that Mason and the assistant coaches had agreed to make restitution.

Before his resignation, Mason said in a letter to Strack that the expense claims were used as reimbursement for expenses the coaches felt they otherwise could not be repaid for.

Davis wins rodeo event

BIG SPRING — Midlander Monty Davis, a sophomore at Howard College, took first place in the bull riding event at the new Mexico Junior College NIRA Rodeo recently in Hobbs, N.M.

Davis won the competition with a score of 76. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Davis of Midland.

"We were the best team in the league this season and that was the third playoff game (out of 15) we lost. After losing one game, if panicking is the best way out of it, then you have a lot of problems."

Quinn said he would not announce his goaltending plans until just before gametime, but there was no question who would be guarding the New York goal — Bill Smith, who is not the most popular man in town.

"I've played this way my whole career," he said. "I enjoy the rough stuff and the hassles. It doesn't bother me."

What does bother him is the handshake ceremony that traditionally concludes even the most hard-fought of playoff series. He refuses to take part — win or lose.

"We lose, they're taking money out of our pockets," he says. "How can you shake hands with guys who just took money out of your pockets?"

"We've come so far now, how do you shake hands when you've come and some of the guys you haven't liked all year long are kind of laughing at you?"

"I won't shake hands if we lose, so why be a hypocrite and shake if we win?" asked Smith.

Crash halts rookie during Indy trials

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The fastest driver all month at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway was "starting all over from day one" with a virtually new race car today as the final weekend of qualifications for the Indianapolis 500 neared.

"Essentially, we built a new car," said rookie driver Tim Richmond, who was a legitimate challenger for the pole position in last Saturday's qualifications before a still unexplained crash at more than 190 mph. Richmond, keeping some fast company for a 24-year-old first-year Indy driver, had outclassed the veterans in practice leading up to the start of qualifications. He was consistently over 190 mph, and he turned in the fastest lap of practice at 193.507 last Friday.

Saturday morning, an hour before qualifications began, he lost control of his Cosworth-powered Penske racer in the first turn, spun once, slid 600 feet and struck the wall. He wasn't injured, but the damage to the car was bad enough to keep it off the track until today.

"It definitely set us back a bit teamwise," Richmond said Wednesday. "The crew had to go after and put together an essentially brand new car. It's going to have the same engine for now, but we won't know for sure if it's all right until we start it up. It'll take three or four hours just to set the chassis."

The jarring crash, Richmond said, happened for no apparent reason, and that includes driver error.

Carner seeking win

CLIFTON, N.J. (AP) — JoAnne Carner started off the 1980 season playing the best golf of her lucrative 10-year career.

The first event at Deer Creek was her first victory. Three weeks later, she won No. 2. After sitting out a week, she scored consecutive victories to make it four wins in the first seven tour stops. "I didn't have any real hot rounds," she said Wednesday, "just an awful lot of good, steady rounds."

Carner, who has won $93,810 to rank second behind Donna Caponi Young on the money earnings lists, has cooled off considerably in recent weeks. Last week, she finished 25th after earlier missing the cut, finishing sixth, seventh and 10th. The magic that was in her swing during the opening weeks of the LPGA tour has left.

Americans increase broadcasts aimed at 40 million Soviet Moslems

WASHINGTON (AP) — American officials, attempting to hammer home the lessons of Afghanistan, are making arrangements to increase the reach, range and frequency of broadcasts aimed at the Soviet Union's 40 million Moslems.

The officials, asking not to be quoted by name, feel that even the Kremlin must respond to informed public opinion. They say Soviet Moslems will manage to make known their unhappiness with the Soviet invasion of the independent Moslem nation last December.

If plans go through, Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty soon will broadcast to the peoples of Soviet Central Asia in seven additional languages. The two government outlets now broadcast to the Soviet Union in 15 languages and to Eastern Europe in six.

And the Voice of America hopes before the end of the year to start broadcasting in Azeri, the language of Soviet Azerbaijan.

The officials said negotiations are under way with Egypt and Israel for permission to build new transmitters there for American broadcasts beamed to the Soviet Union or to use existing transmitters during idle hours.

The Israeli facilities would aim broadcasts at predominately Christian areas while the Egyptian facilities would be used to reach Moslem ones.

Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty now broadcast from West Germany, Spain and Portugal, but the signals that reach Central Asia are weak.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee, anticipating success in the negotiations with Israel and Egypt, last week voted to provide $12.7 million for these broadcasts — $3 million for this fiscal year and $9.7 million for the next one, which begins Oct. 1.

The money would be used to buy equipment, hire staff and develop Radio Liberty programming in the languages of Soviet Moslems.

One official noted that the enhanced effort to reach a part of the world until now largely ignored by Washington's shortwave voices was triggered by the Iranian seizure of American hostages in November as well as by Moscow's Afghan invasion.

"In fact, if all were quiet in that part of the world, we probably would be doing even less than we had been," said one official. "Broadcasts in such obscure languages as Uzbek might have been eliminated in the current budget-cutting atmosphere."

The Voice of America was created in 1942 to explain the United States to the world. Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty were established by the Central Intelligence Agency to tell Eastern Europeans and Russians what was going on in their own societies. The CIA link has been cut and they are openly-financed by Congress.

PBS gets sued for $20 billion damages

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two Moslem attorneys have filed a $20 billion suit against the Public Broadcasting Service, contending that a program about the execution of a Saudi Arabian princess was insulting to Moslems around the world.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court Wednesday on behalf of the world's Moslem population, asks that the $20 billion be put in a trust fund to spread Islam.

The action calls the film part of an "international conspiracy to insult, ridicule, discredit and abuse followers of Islam throughout the world."

The movie, shown Monday on more than 100 PBS stations around the United States, was about a princess and her lover, a commoner, who were executed for adultery.

The Saudi Arabian government has said the film was inaccurate.

After the program was shown in Britain last month, the Saudis expelled the British ambassador.

Before the show was aired in the United States, the Saudis protested to the State Department, which relayed the message to PBS. Requests in federal court in Atlanta and San Francisco to prevent the program from airing were denied.

Defendants in the suit included producers David Fanning and Antony Thomas, ATV of England, PBS President Lawrence Grossman, KQED-TV in San Francisco and WGBH-TV in Boston.

Many prisoners receive Social Security benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Like 35.2 million other Americans, James Lee gets a Social Security check in the mail each month — $357.80 a month as a disabled worker. Unlike most of the others, Lee is in prison.

His checks are sent to him at a prison in New Jersey where he has been jailed since 1973 for his third sex offense involving children. He says a beating at police hands subjects him to dizzy spells and prevents him from working.

Lee and several thousand other inmates around the nation — no one knows exactly how many — are at the center of a growing controversy in Congress about government benefits to prisoners.

Rep. G. William Whitehurst, R-Va., has lined up 72 co-sponsors in the House for a bill to bar Social Security disability benefits to prisoners, and Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., was introducing a similar measure in the Senate today.

Congress also is considering legislation that would reduce Veteran Administration education benefits to inmates or put some of the money in escrow. David Berkowitz, New York's "Son of Sam" killer, recently applied for mental disability benefits from the V.A.

The Social Security Administration says it does not keep separate records on how many inmates get benefits because under current law a person's eligibility is not affected by being in jail.

But it said the 1970 census indicated that 3,934 inmates in federal, state and local jails were getting Social Security benefits of some type at that time. That amounted to slightly more than 1 percent of all prisoners.

Whitehurst claims there may be as many as 30,000 prisoners getting Social Security disability benefits now at a cost of $60 million a year. He bases that "rough estimate" on conversations with prison officials in Virginia, Michigan, Minnesota and New Jersey.

"The program is not designed for these people. They're in jail and their needs are being taken care of by the state," he said. "It's absurd to permit the Social Security fund that already is in weakened condition to be bled by them."

Whitehurst cites the case of 30-year-old Carl Eckstrom, convicted of killing four persons in California in 1973, who was awarded Social Security disability in 1976 because of his mental condition. He reportedly got $195 a month. Eckstrom, serving a life sentence at Soledad Prison, could not be reached for comment.

Robert Chatterton, an Orange County, Calif., district attorney who prosecuted Eckstrom, said a jury rejected his insanity defense. The prosecutor said Eckstrom has refused to accept psychiatric help in prison and he called it "ludicrous" to give him Social Security.

Whitehurst has not yet gotten a hearing for his bill before the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security. A subcommittee staff member said the bill raises constitutional questions about tacking an additional penalty on to someone's sentence for a past crime.

"There may be some constitutional questions, but if we don't do anything about it, there will be more ripoffs," Whitehurst said.

Lawrence Thompson, associate commissioner of Social Security for policy, said his agency is studying Whitehurst's proposal, which he said makes no distinction between a suspect and a convict. It states that anyone who spends any month in prison is ineligible for benefits for that month.

At the Adult Diagnostic and Training Center in Avenel, N.J., James Lee said his monthly Social Security checks have allowed him to save $3,000 that he hopes will keep him out of trouble when he is paroled.

Lee, who said he has used some of his benefits to publish religious tracts and to support a 7-year-old son, was formerly an electrician. Now he washes trays in the prison kitchen and hopes to work when he gets out.

"I don't plan to be getting Social Security from now till Doomsday," he said in a telephone interview.

Significant progress seen in Japanese concessions

TOKYO (AP) — Japan decided today to eliminate tariffs on auto parts and take steps to improve access to the Japanese car market, and U.S. trade representative Reubin Askew termed the move "significant progress."

But he said his three days of talks failed to get Japanese automakers to invest in U.S. assembly plants and the Tokyo government to open up bidding on government contracts to U.S. companies.

Askew told a news conference that Japanese government pledges it would eliminate tariffs on auto parts, simplify import procedures and inspections, and press the auto industry to invest in the U.S. market were "actions which will assist in keeping our markets open."

The government announced today, at the conclusion of the bilateral talks, that it would "eliminate, in principle, tariffs on auto parts," for the fiscal year starting April 1, 1981. It also said that a government-business mission would be sent to the United States early this summer to "explore economically viable investment and licensed production in auto parts production."

The announcement said "the Japanese government also hopes that further efforts will be made to increase the export competitiveness of U.S. automobiles and to foster export orientation in the U.S. automobile industry so that the Japanese import promotion measures can be of maximum benefit."

Askew said he was "pleased by the awareness of Japanese auto executives" in the plight of the U.S. auto industry, but acknowledged in talks with Toyota Motor Co. he had received "no absolute commitments" it would invest in U.S. plants.

"We appreciate the explanations of Toyota that they are making a serious study of automotive investment in the United States. They indicated that Toyota would invest in the United States if studies show that such investment would be economical and financially viable."

Askew indicated little progress had been made in talks, begun more than a year ago, on the issue of opening up Japanese government contracts to foreign bidders.

He said he and the chief Japanese trade negotiator, Takeshi Yasukawa, "are committed to working diligently to seek a solution by the end of this year." But he said procurement offers made by the United States are "still significantly higher" than those made by Japan.

If a solution is not reached by the end of the year, when new procurement laws under the Multilateral Trade Negotiations are scheduled to go into effect, "Japanese companies will not be allowed to participate in bidding for U.S. government contracts," Askew said. "This is not retaliation, but provisions of the law."

Referendum campaign in Quebec growing bitter

MONTREAL (AP) — The campaign for the referendum next Tuesday on the future of Quebec is growing increasingly bitter in its final days, with partisans on both sides accusing each other of nationalistic hate-mongering, fascist tactics and a "campaign of fear."

The voters of the largely French-speaking province are being asked to make a historic first move toward leaving the 113-year-old Canadian confederation.

A "yes" vote would authorize the separatist provincial government to negotiate with the rest of English-speaking Canada to establish "sovereignty-association" for Quebec — political independence coupled with continued close economic ties.

The province would not secede until an agreement was negotiated and approved by the voters in a second referendum.

The latest opinion polls show the pro-Canada "no" forces with a lead of 3 to 5 percentage points, but the undecided vote is as much as 20 percent.

The federalist side is using "every means to divide people," Quebec Premier Rene Levesque, leader of the "yes" forces, told French radio listeners Wednesday.

He has accused the federalists of waging a "campaign of fear" by telling "the weakest groups in society" that sovereignty-association would threaten Quebec's economy. He was referring to pensioners and others worried about any change in the economic status quo.

The "no" side accuses Levesque of carrying on a nationalistic campaign, pitting Quebec's 5 million French speakers against its 1 million English speakers.

The premier and his separatist Parti Quebecois exhort all French Quebecers to stick together and vote "yes" to overcome what is expected to be an almost solid "no" vote by the English-speaking minority.

A "no" vote is "a vote against equality for your people" in North America, Levesque told one French audience this week.

Claude Ryan, a French-Canadian and leader of the provincial Liberals, the main opposition party to the PQ, has accused the separatists of using "fascist" methods of vandalism and intimidation of "no" workers.

French-Canadians have long grated under English cultural and economic domination. The Quebec nationalists accuse the federal government of neglecting the French province's economic well-being, of encouraging Ontario province's growth as Canada's manufacturing center while using Quebec as the source of raw materials.

Because of the language difference, French-Canadians complain, they have been kept from getting the best jobs in private business and the national government.

Many see their "Quebecois" society as a shrinking minority in a backwater of booming, westward-looking Canada. A century ago Quebecers comprised more than a third of the Canadian population, but by the year 2000 they will barely be 20 percent. They also fear that the cultural bombardment of American television, films and publications will eventually drown their Frenchness unless they have stronger control over their own destiny.

The PQ wants to negotiate an arrangement whereby Quebec will become an independent nation that makes its own laws and collects all taxes but continues to have tariff-free trade with Canada, free movement of people and capital and a common currency.

The PQ tells the voters that they risk nothing by voting "yes" and seeing what the Levesque government can come up with in negotiation. It's like trying out a new restaurant, Quebec Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau said this week.

"What we're saying is, why don't you come with us and try the soup?"

Sadat's Cabinet sworn in CAIRO, EGYPT (AP) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat swore in a new Cabinet today and ordered it to fight Egypt's soaring inflation and put an end to Moslem-Christian strife.

After the ceremony and a meeting with aides to discuss the stalled Egyptian-Israeli autonomy talks, Sadat traveled to the Kubbeh Palace in northern Cairo to visit the deposed Shah of Iran, who received sanctuary in Egypt two months ago.

Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi is recuperating from the March 28th removal of his cancerous spleen. The shah's aides say his condition is improving, but the former monarch has not appeared in public. Reporters and photographers were barred from covering Sadat's visit with the shah.

Sadat swore in the Cabinet at the Abdine Republican Palace in central Cairo. Afterwards, Deputy Prime Minister Fuad Mohiaddin read a statement to reporters outlining the goals of the 25-member Cabinet.

"The government headed by President Sadat will do its utmost to carry out this program and its first goal will be to fight inflation and rising prices," he said.

Inflation is running at more than 35 per cent, despite government subsidies of nearly $2 billion a year to hold down prices on basic commodities.

In announcing the Cabinet shuffle on Wednesday, Sadat also set price ceilings on 77 commodities produced by government-owned firms and abolished the national security tax.

A second major goal cited by Mohiaddin was to "curb the latest tension and guarantee the unity of both (religious) elements of the country."

Controllers warn about flight risks

BOSTON (AP) — New takeoff and landing patterns going into effect today at Logan International Airport "will dramatically increase the risk of a major aviation catastrophe," an air traffic controllers group says.

The Federal Aviation Administration has denied the charge, saying any problems associated with the new routes have been solved.

The patterns are intended to route more flights over the Atlantic Ocean to reduce noise in Boston and its suburbs.

In a statement released at a Wednesday news conference, Michael W. Fermon, president of the Boston local of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, said his co-workers had not been properly trained in the new procedures.

In a letter to Gary Tucker, chief of the Boston tower, Fermon said the plan has "inherent design deficiencies," and "many who have received the allotted hours of training are still unfamiliar and confused about these procedures."

before deciding on which line to embark.

After ruffing the opening lead, declarer should cash the ace and queen of trumps. If either defender shows out, declarer proceeds as above. But when both defenders follow to the second trump, declarer should play the hand as a dummy reversal.

He ruffs a heart, returns to dummy with a high diamond and ruffs dummy's last low heart with his remaining trump. Now he can get back to dummy with a club to draw the outstanding trump with the eight of spades, and the rest of the tricks are his. In all, declarer makes six trump tricks, one heart, and three in each minor suit.

If you think that this hand looks familiar, you are right—it appeared in the column about two months ago!

At that time we suggested that declarer should not commit himself to making a discard at trick one. Instead, he should ruff the opening lead, draw trumps and then try three rounds of diamonds, ending in dummy. If that suit breaks 3-3, declarer discards a club on the ace of hearts and claims. But when the diamond suit fails to break, declarer discards a diamond on the ace of hearts and falls back on a 3-3 club break.

That line is correct if trumps are 4-1. However, there is a superior line if trumps are 3-2, and declarer can check on that possibility

'It's all in the fingers,' and Rubinstein family

NEW YORK (AP) — Virtuoso pianist Arthur Rubinstein said he knew from the time his son, John, was 4 years old that he would "amount to something."

Tuesday night at the Longacre Theater, Rubinstein, 93, said his son had more than met his forecast.

John Rubinstein, 32, was performing in the hit play "Children of a Lesser God" — a role that brought him a Tony nomination for best actor — and his father was in the audience. Rubinstein plays a man who marries a deaf woman and communicates in sign language.

The famed pianist asked his son: "How do you do it, this play?" "Daddy, it's all in the fingers," his son replied.

Bill Anderson

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Bill Anderson, the country-western singer, is to be the host when a nationally syndicated television show, "Backstage at the Grand Ole Opry," debuts in the fall.

Show Biz Inc., which is syndicating the show, said the 30-minute program would include interviews with country music singers and performances by them.

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Rep. Charles C. Diggs Jr., convicted of fraud in a $66,000 payroll kickback scheme, has decided he won't seek re-election after all.

Charles C. Diggs Jr.

The 13-term congressman had insisted since his October 1978 conviction that he would continue to seek office. A month after his conviction he won re-election by a 4-1 margin.

Diggs, 58, said he was resigning for personal reasons, but did not say what they were.

He said the announcement was not motivated by the hope that it would prompt a reduction in his three-year prison sentence. He said neither he nor his attorneys have had any contact with judges or prosecutors on that possibility.

Diggs was convicted of paying several aides inflated salaries, then accepting kickbacks from them. His appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court is pending.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 25-year-old carpenter who moonlights as a model has been named Man of the Year by Playgirl Magazine.

Playgirl said Wednesday Bill Davidson of Los Angeles was judged by Playgirl's readers to be the most exciting man to appear nude in the magazine's centerfold in 1979.

Davidson said he didn't feel exploited.

"Not at all. I don't think there's anything wrong with showing my body to women who want to see it," Davidson said.

"The way I look at it, it's kind of like a work of art. People used to go to museums to see nude male statues. This is just a modern-day version of that," he said.

ERA's sponsors in Illinois may try for vote next week

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Sponsors of the proposed federal Equal Rights Amendment, who called off plans to bring the measure to a vote in the Illinois House Wednesday, say they may try again as early as next week.

ERA supporters called off plans for the House vote after a day of feverish lobbying left them two votes short of the 107 — or three-fifths majority — required to ratify.

Democratic Rep. John S. Matijevich, an ERA sponsor, said if the measure — already a six-time loser in the House — were voted on and rejected "that could do damage to the (ERA) movement throughout the country."

He said he might call ERA to a vote as early as next week if the two additional votes could be found.

The ERA, a proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution, would outlaw discrimination on the basis of sex. It must be ratified by 38 states by June 30, 1982, to become part of the Constitution. Thirty-five states have ratified, but five have rescinded approval and the Justice Department has said the validity of those moves must be reviewed by Congress.

The ERA came up short despite lobbying by Gov. James R. Thompson, who was bedridden with a back injury. Republican Rep. Louis F. Capuzi, previously an ERA foe, said Thompson called him to the Executive Mansion and persuaded him to change his vote, even though "he was flat on his back in excruciating pain."

Also lobbying for passage were President Carter, Vice President Walter Mondale, Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne and hundreds of ERA supporters who swarmed through the Capitol.

"It's absolutely a victory — if they never bring it up it's a victory," said Phyllis Schlafly, national head of Stop ERA, whose supporters flocked to counter the pro-ERA forces.

ERA foes passed out pictures taken at a pro-ERA rally at Chicago Saturday that showed demonstrators carrying signs supporting lesbianism and socialism.

After the vote was called off, about 100 disappointed ERA supporters gathered to sing and cheer each other up.

"Close doesn't count," Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women, told the group. "We're going to multiply and divide and we're going all over this state."

Bush, Kennedy remain in race

They won't give up, despite Carter, Reagan leads

By G.G. LABELLE
Associated Press Writer

Nevertheless, George Bush and Edward Kennedy keep running.

It's been said so often by so many in so many different places it has become almost superfluous to repeat: Ronald Reagan and President Carter have their parties' presidential nominations virtually wrapped up.

So the question is why — with each new defeat, with the delegate numbers adding up against them — Bush and Kennedy keep declaring that they can still turn it around, that it's not over yet, that they simply won't quit.

On Wednesday, aides to Kennedy denied yet another report that the Massachusetts senator was about to pull out of the campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination.

In fact, one said, Kennedy would deliver a speech today in Los Angeles indicating a "redefinition of the purpose and direction" of the campaign.

The senator's staff says he will not withdraw and will not concede the nomination, but Kennedy himself said something that indicated one reason for staying was to keep his liberal philosophy alive in the Democratic party.

"My candidacy obviously is of importance," he said Wednesday in a speech in New Mexico. "But I think what is even clearly more important is the direction of the Democratic Party as an institution, to try and resolve some of the concerns that people have. I am a spokesman for the concern of people, the anxieties they have, the anguish and their uncertainty about the direction of the country."

Bush said Wednesday that he wants to "send a message" to the nation that there is an alternative to Reagan and Carter.

At the same time, Bush does not have the philosophical differences with Reagan that Kennedy has with Carter. That gives the former U.N. ambassador another possible reason to stay: He has been mentioned as a running mate for Reagan. Just Wednesday, Sen. Howard Baker — in virtually withdrawing his own name from vice presidential consideration — again threw out Bush's name. "I never quit anything in my life," Bush also said Wednesday in explaining his continued campaign for the Republican nomination. But he added that Oregon and Michigan, which hold their primaries next Tuesday, are states "where we've got a chance to do real well."

"If we can do there what I think we can do, I believe we can turn it around," he said.

And Kennedy has lately been questioning Carter's claim to the nomination, saying the president's failure to carry big, traditional Democratic states means he could not defeat a GOP contender in the fall. Kennedy has defeated Carter in New York, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Michigan and his aides say he should win California, Rhode Island and New Jersey, which are among eight states holding primaries June 3.

The numbers, though, are still on the president's side, and on Reagan's.

To stop Reagan short of a majority of the 1,994 Republican convention delegates needed to win nomination, Bush will have to win 97 percent of the remaining GOP delegates. Reagan need only win 21 percent of those to gain the nomination.

Similarly, Kennedy, must snare four out of five of the remaining delegates to stop the president from winning the 1,666 needed for nomination.

Reagan now has 821 GOP delegates, according to The Associated Press count — 177 short of the 998 needed for nomination. Bush has 186.

Carter's delegate total now stands at 1,365, just 301 short of the magic number, according to the AP count on the Democratic side. Kennedy has 770 and 55 delegates are uncommitted.

Reagan is still running hard, but his barbs are mostly at President Carter, which won't do him any harm this fall. He was in Michigan on Wednesday and blamed Carter's economic policies for the troubles of the auto industry.

In a speech prepared for delivery today to the Detroit Economic Club he said the "U.S. auto industry is virtually being regulated to death." He said he sees a consensus in the nation to reduce the role of the federal government.

Reagan and Carter may have a new worry, even if they win the nominations. An ABC-Harris poll released Tuesday said if voters thought Rep. John Anderson's independent candidacy had a reasonable chance of succeeding, 29 percent would vote for him.

That would still put Reagan ahead with 35 percent and Carter second with 31 percent, but Anderson said that meant either Reagan or Carter could be considered as much a "spoiler" as he.

Without Anderson being given a chance of winning, the poll results were Reagan 39 percent, Carter 33 percent and Anderson 23 percent. The poll has a margin of error of 3 percent up or down.

Muskie in Vienna to discuss peace plan with Gromyko

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie arrived in Vienna today to explore with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko a peace proposal from the pro-Soviet government of Afghanistan that American officials termed "new and interesting."

Gromyko arrives in Vienna on Friday for the 25th anniversary of the end of Austria's postwar occupation by the United States, Russia, Britain and France. Muskie and Gromyko will meet following the anniversary ceremonies.

The Afghan plan, as reported by the Soviet news agency Tass, called for Afghanistan and neighboring Pakistan and Iran to sign bilateral agreements barring hostile action against each other. These would be guaranteed by the Soviet Union and the United States, and the United States would also pledge not to conduct "subversive activity" against Afghanistan.

"The question of the withdrawal of Soviet forces from Afghanistan will depend on the resolution of the issue of effective guarantees of the bilateral agreements of Afghanistan with Pakistan and Iran," the Afghan government's statement said.

The Russians contend they intervened in Afghanistan because of rebellion supported by the United States, China and Pakistan against the communist regime in Kabul. All have denied the charge, and Chinese Vice Premier Li Xiannian said today talk of the Soviet army withdrawing from Afghanistan "is a lie. It will remain there."

Muskie said the burden is on the Soviets to show they are interested in normal relations with the United States and its allies, and their first step should be the withdrawal of the 100,000 or more troops they have sent into Afghanistan in the past five months to try to crush a tribal rebellion against communist rule.

He said he expects from Gromyko considerable "probing to see any soft spots" in the U.S. position on Afghanistan because of the Soviet interest in the advantages of detente. But he indicated he would be emphatic in his response, saying: "I think it would be a mistake to raise expectations to the point where there is any doubt in their mind of our determination to pursue the goal of withdrawal."

Muskie's theory is that the Kremlin's interest in arms control and business and cultural contacts is so strong they may be willing to withdraw from Afghanistan to restore better U.S.-Soviet relations.

"It's a question of whether or not that mutual advantage is now sufficient to overcome the problem of Afghanistan, overcome the feeling on our side that Afghanistan represents such an apparent change in our relationship as to undermine our perception of

May 3 primary votes to be canvassed today

By The Associated Press

Texas Democratic and Republican party leaders met today to approve results of the May 3 primary and clear the way for the June 7 runoff.

The State Democratic Executive Committee met in Austin to canvass the primary voting. The few members expected to show up also will certify candidates for the June 7 runoff in three contests for the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals and two congressional races.

A small turnout of the State Republican Executive Committee was expected for a similar meeting in San Antonio. The GOP committee also will approve results of the May 3 presidential preference primary in which Ronald Reagan won 61 Texas delegates to the national convention and George Bush got 19.

Both committees expected brief sessions with no scheduled speakers. State Democratic headquarters said Wednesday the state committee would not be able to consider a complete report on state convention delegates elected at the May 10 county and senatorial district conventions.

Lee High biology teacher given Outstanding Conservation Award

Billy Gilbreath, Lee High School biology teacher who preaches conservation of natural resources, was presented the Outstanding Conservation Teacher Award on Tuesday. This came during the second annual Texas Conservation Awards banquet at Angelo State University in San Angelo.

"Gilbreath was instrumental in developing an innovative approach to teaching, called Individually-Guided Biology, in which he incorporates aspects of an environmental conservation program," according to Dick Hagelstein, district conservationist for the U.S. Soil Conservation Service in Midland.

Hagelstein said Gilbreath has taken the teaching concept to other school systems "and has had a definite influence on students and teachers in an area (conservation) that is vitally needed."

Gilbreath was nominated for the award by Edwin A. Dwyer, education committee chairman of the Midland Soil and Water Conservation District.

"Mr. Gilbreath has distinguished himself in the field of conservation education," Dwyer wrote in his letter of recommendation, "and has developed a very innovative approach to teaching this very important subject."

Dwyer noted Gilbreath's "untiring dedication to teaching conservation" and also mentioned that he is an "outstanding civic-minded citizen and family man." The award was presented by the Texas State Soil and Water Conservation Association.

In addition to his classroom work, Gilbreath is working with the Midland Soil and Water Conservation District in developing a 40-acre outdoor learning environment center in northeast Midland.

Gilbreath, chairman of Lee's department of science, has been teaching in the Midland Independent School District since 1958, except for the 1964-65 school year, when he taught in Jefferson County.

He was named Lee's outstanding teacher in 1963 and was a nominee and alternate for Outstanding Biology Teacher in Texas for 1964.

Gilbreath received a bachelor's degree from Hardin-Simmons University in 1958 and the master's degree from Purdue University in 1963.

Summer orchestra camp to be held in Lubbock

LUBBOCK — The 24th annual Texas Tech University summer orchestra camp for string students in grades seven through 12 is being held June 16-28 at the university's music department.

String students who have had at least one year of training are invited and will be required to participate in an orchestra and section rehearsal, in addition to several electives. Students are placed into one of the orchestras by audition.

The program is designed to complement public school string programs. The daily class schedule is from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. and includes elective

Pickwick Players hold summer tryouts

Auditions for the Pickwick Players' summer season are slated for Saturday at 1 p.m. in the Blakemore Room at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Needed are individuals who would like to learn about the theatre by acting or working backstage. The company members (seventh through 12th graders) spend six hours daily, five days a week at the theatre, producing three plays for children over a 10-week period.

The season runs from June 2 through Aug. 9. Most Pickwicks enroll for the entire summer. But it's possible to attend a portion, which is usually a three- or six-week period.

Tuition for the 10-week session is $120 for season ticket holders' children and $150 for children of non-members.

No past experience is necessary to audition, only the desire to learn and have fun. Those auditioning should prepare some demonstration of their talent such as a poem, song, art work or design.

Those unable to attend Saturday's audition may call the theatre at 682-2544 and talk with the Pickwick's director, Debbie Waddell.

School sets registration

Registration for beginning kindergarten and primary-grade students bound for Rusk Elementary School this fall semester will be from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays through May 21 in the school office, according to Principal Printus Burkhardt.

Children who will be 5 on or before Sept. 1 may register for kindergarten at those times, said Burkhardt. Parents of kindergarten students are to bring their children's birth certificates and immunization records when they register their children.

THE NEWSPAPER BIBLE

Whom are you seeking?

AFTER saying these things Jesus crossed the Kidron ravine with His disciples and entered a grove of olive trees.

Judas, the betrayer, knew this place, for Jesus had gone there many times with His disciples.

The chief priests and Pharisees had given Judas a squad of soldiers and police to accompany him. Now with blazing torches, lanterns, and weapons they arrived at the olive grove.

Jesus fully realized all that was going to happen to Him. Stepping forward to meet them He asked, "Whom are you looking for?"

"Jesus of Nazareth," they replied.

"I am He," Jesus said.

And as He said it, they all fell backwards to the ground! Once more He asked them, "Whom are you searching for?"

And again they replied, "Jesus of Nazareth."

"I told you I am He," Jesus said; "and since I am the one you are after, let these others go."

He did this to carry out the prophecy He had just made, "I have not lost a single one of those You gave Me . . ."

Camping seen as alternative to expensive vacation plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the high cost of hotels and restaurants is gnawing away at your vacation plans, you may want to consider an alternative — camping out.

"Depending on where you go you can enjoy scenic beauty, solitude, wildlife, fishing, photography, relaxation and a sense of physical well-being," commented Dick Joy of the U.S. Forest Service.

Joy said that you don't have to be in top physical condition to backpack, but you should be in reasonably good shape and must enjoy isolation in remote country.

"Camping in a tent and cooking in the backcountry are cheaper than staying in a hotel and eating in restaurants, and you don't have to pay a lot for gear. It's available in a wide price range," Joy said.

He urged that trips be planned carefully, selecting a route and terrain that match your abilities. Check any regulations in the area and bring along maps, lightweight equipment, food and suitable clothing.

Trying to carry too much weight can turn fun into misery, he observed, recommending a maximum of 30 to 35 pounds for women and 40 to 50 pounds for men, depending on physical condition, terrain, length of trip and time of year.

For long trips you need a good, heavy boot, but lighter ones should suffice for shorter hikes. One pound on your foot is like three pounds on your back, he said.

Joy reminds hikers to carry out what they bring into the woods, leave cans and bottles at home. Bury human waste at least eight inches deep and 100 feet from water. Dump dish and bathing water away from lakes and streams.

"Use backpack stoves to avoid fire scars and conserve wood," Joy said.

He urged that people looking for a place to hike consider the national forests. These offer 187 million acres of backpacking country across the nation. Details can be obtained from any forest service office.

Sight takes time

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world is mostly a blurry place of light, dark and shadow to newborns, who need some time to learn to see, according to the nation's eye doctors.

But with a little help babies quickly learn to recognize parents and to begin reaching for a nose, hair, fingers or anything else within grasp.

Babies must learn to coordinate seeing with body movements and there are things parents can do to help, according to the American Ophthalmic Association.

They suggest hanging crib mobiles in a newborn's line of sight, playing "peek-a-boo" with a six-month-old, allowing lots of time and space for crawling and giving a toddler simple puzzles.

Show your colors — in artists' unique dresses

By NANCY RAY
The Los Angeles Times

SOLANA BEACH, Calif. — People who buy paintings by Ralph Costantino and Rosemary Valente are afraid of seeing their artworks ripped off.

It could prove very embarrassing. While most artists must be content to display their works on the walls of homes and galleries, these two Solana Beach artists paint on women's apparel.

Called Wear A Painting, Costantino's and Valente's blending of art and commerce was conceived several years ago. Now their originals are walking around at the in spots of the world.

Both artists admit they are criticized by fellow artists who feel that serious art does not include paintings on blouses, pantsuits and kaftans. After all, you don't see any Rembrandts bouncing down the sidewalk. Constantino, however, replies that "each one of our paintings is in an original. We don't decorate clothing. We paint on dresses. It is just another medium."

A woman living on the Hawaiian island of Maui sometimes takes down the formal canvases from the walls of her home and replaces them with her wardrobe of originals — as artistic backdrops for a social gathering.

In the backroom workshop of Wear A Painting, the pair turn out their abstract and floral creations amid a clutter of canvases. They paint at a rate that varies with their moods.

"Sometimes I can whip one right out. Sometimes it takes me all day to get it just right," Constantino said. "We just keep painting until it comes out right."

Wear A Painting was born one day when Constantino, the teacher, and Valente, the art student, were engaged in more formal artworks and Constantino decided to decorate an old pair of jeans and a shirt as a diversion.

"She has the business head," Constantino said of his former student and now business partner. "She saw the possibilities right away."

In the early stages, the pair ruined quite a few garments before perfecting their techniques and finding the proper mix of paint and acrylic to insure their paintings would survive the rigors of washers and dryers.

Now, most of their business is with wholesale firms that stock chic shops in Scottsdale, Ariz., Las Vegas, Honolulu and Acapulco. Their wearable artworks bring $32 to $150, "and sometimes double that price in some of those posh places."

But neither artist has dreams of becoming rich because of the painstaking work that goes into the designs.

Constantino said he would not "put down" artists who use stencils, silk screens and air brushes to speed up and standardize their work.

"Those are legitimate art forms but they are not ours," he said. "Each design we paint is different."

To protect their artistic integrity, both painters allow their customers to dictate only the size, clothing style and colors involved in the apparel paintings.

"One buyer told me he could sell every butterfly I would paint but I wouldn't do it," Constantino said. "I tried painting butterflies and owls and flowers but I blocked. I just couldn't do it."

At times, to spur sales and to twist more serious artists, Constantino paints a formal work and duplicates it on a garment. "Then, if the price is right, I sell the painting and throw in the dress for free," he said, "although, unfortunately, they (the apparel paintings) sell a lot better than our canvases."

The 50-year-old artist admits he is a "compulsive painter," using his talents on almost everything that comes to his attention: chairs, straw hats, even on sales carts — small booths on wheels — which Constantino hopes to turn into a profitable sideline.

He figures that he could sell the mobile shops — each with original designs — for about $2,000 apiece to enterprising newcomers who cannot afford to lease business space, to church women for their bake sales, even to service station owners for outdoor displays.

A good gas well has been completed in the Thigpin (Devonian) field of Pecos County, four miles northwest of Sheffield.

It is John H. Hendrix Corp. of Midland No. 1 J. N. Thigpin "B" which was completed for a calculated absolute open flow potential of 15,900,000 cubic feet of gas per day, with a gas-liquid ratio of 21,360-1. Gravity of the fluid is 59 degrees.

Completion was through perforations from 7,686 to 7,712 feet after a 3,500-gallon acid treatment.

Total depth is 7,963 feet, 4.5-inch pipe was landed at total depth and hole is plugged back to 7,962 feet. The pay was topped at 7,682 feet on ground elevation of 2,291 feet.

Location is 2,173 feet from north and 1,350 feet from east lines of section 1, block C-3, EL&RR survey and one location north of the pool's discovery.

COKE RECLASSIFICATION
Campana Petroleum Co. and Mann Rankin of Midland No. 2 Harris Estate-Sadie "A" has been reclassified from oil to gas to reopen Canyon gas production in Coke County's Willmo Sandy field.

It completed for a calculated absolute open flow potential of 205,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations from 5,584 to 5,592 feet after 500 gallons of acid and 20,000 gallons of fracture fluid.

Originally drilled to 4,450 feet, the project was plugged back to 5,712 feet and completed in 1974 through perforations from 5,584 to 5,572 feet as an oil producer to open the Willmo Sandy (Canyon oil) pool.

The well is eight miles south of Silver and 1,330 feet from north and 467 feet from east lines of section 12, Winfield Scott survey.

NOLAN RE-ENTRY FINALS
W. H. Price of Granbury has completed his No. 1-C Elmer Jordan as an unidentified discovery four miles northeast of Blackwell in Nolan County.

The operator reported a daily flowing potential of 167 barrels of 29.5-gravity oil, natural, through a 17/64-inch choke and perforations from 3,857 to 3,872 feet. The gas-oil ratio was not reported.

A re-entry project, it originally was drilled to 4,011 feet and finished in 1979 through perforations from 3,900 to 3,913 feet opposite the Canyon reef to open the Price Jordan (Canyon reef) field.

The strike is one mile southeast of the Group, South (Saddle Creek) field.

Location is 990 feet from north and 2,285 feet from east lines of section 34, block 1-A, H&TC survey.

FISHER OPENER
Terrell Oil Co. of Hamlin No. 1 Jake T. Weir has been completed as a Canyon sand discovery in Fisher County, two miles north of Hamlin.

Operator reported a calculated daily potential of 472 barrels of 38-gravity oil, with gas-oil ratio of 2,000-1. The potential was based on a six-hour flow of 118 barrels of oil through a two-inch opening.

NEW YORK (AP) — A farmer had three sons and 17 horses.

In his will, he bequeathed that the horses be divided among the sons, the eldest to get half of them, the second son one-third, the third son one-ninth. How did they divide the horses?

Stick around for the answer.

It's one of the puzzles designed to tease some of the nation's best brains. It appeared in a little publication called "Inside AIP," the newsletter of the American Institute of Physics.

"We have about 900 names on our circulation list and they include Nobel laureates as well as school kids in the mail room," Audrey Likely, the editor, explained. "We try to strike a balance, some for the PhDs, some for the school kids."

Here's one for the PhDs:

Letters have been substituted for numbers in this addition problem: XEBHLLNL plus XRBNGNL plus XEPNWLNL equals XXXGNNHNL. The same letter stands for the same digit wherever it appears — except for one. One letter is wrong. Which one?

Here's one for the kids:

Tim, Joe and Sam are digging identical holes in a field. When Tim works with Joe, they dig one hole in four days. When Tim works with Sam, they dig one hole in three days. When Joe works with Sam, they dig one hole in two days. When Tim works alone, how long does it take him to dig one hole?

The puzzle editor for "Inside AIP" is Ethel Brauer. She professes not to enjoy puzzles particularly, except for crossword puzzles, at which she is a whiz.

Question: Where, then, does Ethel find these brain ticklers? Answer: Ethel steals them.

"I get them from various journals, mostly scientific journals, and from puzzle books, and people are always sending me puzzles. I don't know where they get them, but I demand that they send the answer along with the puzzle."

Only once in her memory, she said, and it happened just last week, has she printed a bum puzzle.

"Can't be done," an irate physicist wrote her. "Neither Joe nor Ted nor Sam nor Sue could have won the French prize." Just so. Apologies will be made next issue.

"Inside AIP" is chock full of erudite information of special interest to physicists in various branches — optics, acoustics, rheology ("things that flow," a rheologist explained, "think of catsup"), astronomy, crystallography — but the puzzle, according to editor Likely, is a favorite feature of all of them.

"Some of them phone us to confirm their answers because they can't wait until the next issue," she said.

"One physicist, a vice president at Douglas Aircraft, sent his answer in the form of a limerick. I guess the message is that physicists like to have fun, too."

All right, end of suspense. Here come the answers.

It takes Tim, a slowpoke, 24 days to dig a hole alone.

Writer finds census office wasteful, disorganized

EDITOR'S NOTE — Is $1 billion of taxpayers' money being well spent for the census? To find out, Associated Press writer Malcolm N. Carter worked for more than a month as a census supervisor. He identified himself on his application as an AP writer, but nobody seemed to notice. The following story details the waste, disorganization and bungling he found.

By MALCOLM N. CARTER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In five weeks as a supervisor at a Manhattan district office of the U.S. Census Bureau, I found waste, inefficiency and lax management existing alongside an effort to make an accurate count.

I worked as a crew leader in charge of eight enumerators, who went to households from which questionnaires were not returned by mail, and discovered these lapses at the North Manhattan office:

—A WHOLE WEEK WENT BY with virtually no work by any of the 38 crew leaders. At the end of the week, which cost the government more than $7,600 in wages, the crew leaders got overtime pay over the weekend to help the office staff catch up on paperwork. In other weeks, they put in only 10 to 12 hours for 40 hours' pay of $204 and, in effect, got $20 an hour instead of $5.10.

—Enumerators get two days of training, by the book, and then get paid according to the number of questionnaires they complete. But our bosses said they did not yet have the lists of households which hadn't responded by mail and told us to train for an extra day. The waste: $208 for my eight enumerators and perhaps $6,000 for North Manhattan.

—Ironically, these enumerators got less than a week's work in the end. And while some of the same census takers were being let go, others were being recruited.

—CREW LEADERS WERE TOLD to hire fewer enumerators than they could supervise so the work could be extended and they could prolong their jobs.

—The lists of households to be counted, called Master Address Registers, were inaccurate. Some had whole apartment buildings listed twice, while others failed to register those households for which questionnaires had been received.

—And there were reimbursements to crew leaders for expenses not incurred, such as taxi fares for crew leaders who rode in carpools.

Confronted with this inside view of the census he administers, Director Vincent P. Barabba commented, "Yours is not a unique experience. Our system is not perfect."

SAYING THAT THE WASTE was not troubling compared with the private sector, Barabba added: "I haven't heard about anything out there that I don't think we can handle ... My guess is we get a helluva bang for our buck."

He also said that New York is one of the most difficult and aberrational areas in the country, if only because a 12-day transit strike may have stalled mail and delayed return of the forms.

Of the Census Bureau's 409 district offices nationwide, Manhattan has five, including North Manhattan, where I worked. That office is counting the individuals in 125,000 households.

BUT THERE ARE PROBLEMS elsewhere, too. "Things are so disorganized in the office that I have not ruled out sabotage," declared a crew leader in the South Manhattan office. Saying he may quit in disgust, he added that lists were in such disarray he expected the count to be wrong.

"I know that work is being done that doesn't need to be done," he said, "and all we're doing is enumerating clerical errors."

NAMES OF SOME APPLICANTS were provided the next day, far fewer than the number supposedly needed. So the crew leaders, who were instructed to check on "suspicious" application forms, lacked the inclination — never mind the resources and the knowhow — to look up such things as criminal records.

But a day later, Roberto Rabanne, a 32-year-old commercial photographer who is a field operations assistant, told his crew leaders to freeze hiring. Mail response to the Census had been so good, he said, that the work otherwise would end in a week or two. (Officials deny that the response in Manhattan has surprised them.)

Rabanne, who would not be quoted about his actions after I told him I was a reporter, also advised his group to "stretch out" enumerator training. "That way everyone will be taken care of," he said.

"I feel like I'm contributing to the delinquency of the country," crew leader Bertha Fuller-Rodgers remarked later. "I just think the whole thing kind of stinks."

ONE ENUMERATOR DISCOVERED that her Master Address Register was clogged with duplications. After spending six hours untangling the confusion in her list without pay — enumerators get piece rates, up to $4.45 a form — she found that some 350 uncounted households had become perhaps 100, or seven days' work.

Like the others, she found many people claiming to have mailed in their questionnaires. When the office finally caught up to the paperwork, she learned she had wasted valuable time knocking on doors and being turned away by people who really had sent in forms.

WHOLE DAYS PASSED WITHOUT census work. And I was paid $40 for each one, work or no. No one seemed sure what to do with the seven parts of a form that crew leaders fill out to transmit the questionnaires to the office.

Clerks there often sat around with nothing to do, explaining that they sometimes waited all morning until they got questionnaires to check over for completeness.

When these quality control clerks discovered that one enumerator was making up answers on the forms, the census taker was fired. If anyone else was faking questionnaires, it certainly wasn't apparent to me and it seems that the bureau is trying hard to check this "curbstoning."

ALTHOUGH CREW LEADERS were ordered to get 14 questionnaires a day from their enumerators, Rabanne said five was enough.

However, regional director William Hill said in an interview that five was a "ridiculous" goal.

Hill — whose region comprises the metropolitan area into New Jersey, onto Long Island and upstate into Rockland and Orange counties — said some of the incidents encountered by this reporter "baffled" him.

"Do we have problems in a large operation?" he asked. "You betcha. Lots of problems? Yes. There are problems — the thing is we have the mechanism for solving them."

He said he would investigate.

Census expects to count 22 million people

NEW YORK (AP) — Mandated by the Constitution, the U.S. Census has been conducted every 10 years since the nation's founding.

It is used by the federal government to apportion congressmen according to population and to distribute federal money equitably.

The census is expected to count 222 million people in 96 million housing units in all of the United States, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa and the Trust Territories of the Pacific Islands.

A temporary work force of 270,000 is being hired for the task.

The Census Bureau says the cost of all this is $1 billion, including planning over the years. Of the $1 billion, $660 million is to be spent this fiscal year, including $425 million for operating the 409 district offices.

While the crew leaders in the North Manhattan office were allowed to waste entire days each week, the South Manhattan office made him work every day plus overtime to help straighten out botched address registers.

Crew leader training, which began on Census Day, April 1, was supposed to run four days. But the field operations assistants, FOAs, in North Manhattan stretched it to five because the office clerks were running behind in compiling address registers.

THE TRAINING DAY HARDLY ever began before 9:30, lunch rarely was shorter than 90 minutes and training classes never went beyond 5 p.m. Though the day never came close to eight hours, each crew leader followed instructions to put down eight hours a day on payroll forms.

The day after training was a day off — with pay — because, our bosses said, the office was late again, this time with correcting the tests of prospect-

National Cowgirl Hall is dedicated to many women

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

HEREFORD, Texas (AP) — One might logically wonder what a horsewoman and a historian have in common. Or an author and an artist and a cowgirl. And a bootmaker?

Of course.

For here in this Texas Panhandle city, they all come together in the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage.

It is a rather innovative tribute to those women past, present and future whose contributions to the Western heritage are deemed noble, notable or both.

The hall is dedicated to the pioneer spirit of all women.

"Our purpose is to honor the Western woman," explained Margaret Formby, the president of the fledgling project.

"We have a long way to go but we feel like it will be worthwhile. In fact, it is worthwhile now. It will really be unique when the museum is completed."

By virtue of its name alone, one might suspect that Hereford is cow country. It does indeed boast one of the greatest concentrations of feedlot cattle in the world.

But with its flat, fertile farmlands, Deaf Smith County also reigns as one of the state's leading farming centers.

"We treat foods with respect, not chemicals," is the motto of Hereford's Arrowhead Mills Inc., whose organically grown foods are sold nationwide.

A city of some 15,000, Hereford launched the Cowgirl Hall of Fame in 1974 with the announced goal of calling attention to its cows and crops and more subtle charms.

"At the time, we really needed something in Hereford," acknowledged Roy Faubion, then president of the Chamber of Commerce.

As a visitor once observed:

"After the farming, and the steak restaurants, and the Mexican food restaurants, and the occasional dances, the residents admit there is very little to do."

It began with the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame Rodeo and has gained modest ground since. Art shows, benefit balls and other projects produce operating funds.

"Rarely is a donation rejected," said one officer with a wry smile.

The city provided land for a permanent museum and plans call for a unique underground structure east of downtown Hereford.

Underground housing is not yet a regional rage, but the concept has growing support throughout the South Plains and the Panhandle.

As the Hall of Fame people point out, earth-concealed structures are free of noise, dirt, pollutants, radiation, violent winds, vandalism, fat utility bills and costly insurance.

The long-range program includes a center for Western art, a documentary center, exhibits on honorees, a founders' room, a gift store and nature trail.

Additionally, there will be a corral for demonstration of rodeo cowgirl techniques and a "sasparrilla saloon" with afternoon stage shows.

Currently, 28 women have been inducted into the feminine equivalent of Oklahoma City's National Cowboy Hall of Fame. Most are cowgirls.

But among the honorees are Enid Justin of Nocona, Texas, founder of Nocona Boot Co., and author-historian Perry Blakely of Pendleton, Ore.

The hall includes a mother-daughter tandem — pioneer rancher Kathryn Cabot Binford and 1979 honoree Nancy Binford of Wildorado, Texas.

Nancy Binford helped organize the Girls Rodeo Association (GRA) in 1948 and served as its president 10 years later.

The first edition of the Cowgirl Hall of Fame's annual magazine, Sidesaddle, carried a cover portrait of 1977 inductee Rhonda Coy Sedgewick of Newcastle, Wyo. She is a rodeo organizer and expert horsewoman.

Among the most recent honorees were Wyoming's Vera McGinnis, a pioneer cowgirl who retired in 1934, and Dora Waldrop of nearby Amarillo, an expert horsewoman who still competes in shows and rodeos.

One member, Tad Lucas of Fort Worth, a champion trick rider and all-around cowgirl, was given a place of honor in the Cowboy Hall of Fame.

Many of the members have loaned or donated trophies, saddles, awards, photographs, scrapbooks and other memorabilia to the museum. It is currently on display in the center's temporary headquarters in the new county library.

"We've got to make people believe in what we're doing," said Margaret Formby. "I feel like we have quite a heritage out here in the West, and not only men but women have contributed."

"There's a lot to be said about the woman's role, not only as a cowgirl, but as a pioneer woman, conquering the untamed land. And here at Hereford we're going to be the ones to say it."

British strike fizzle shows union crumbling

LONDON (AP) — British union solidarity, a major political and economic force for the last 50 years, showed signs of crumbling as nine out of every ten workers defied a call from their leaders for a one-day strike against the Conservative government.

"A qualified flop," the independent Times of London said of the walkout Wednesday organized by the Trades Union Congress (TUC), Britain's AFL-CIO, to protest Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's economic policies.

A "Day of Action," the TUC called it. "Day of Disaster," said the jubilant headline in the Conservative Daily Mail.

The decision of millions of Britons to work as usual on the "Day of Action" was less an endorsement of the Thatcher government than a demonstration of the growing schism between union leaders and the rank and file.

In recent months, increasing numbers of Britain's 12 million union members have demonstrated more concern for getting a job and keeping it than in using strikes to fight their leaders' battles.

Thousands of steelworkers rebelled against their union and went back to work in March during the national steel strike.

More than 27,000 miners in Wales, a socialist heartland, refused to strike in February to show solidarity with the steelworkers and also protest job cutbacks in their own area.
