Radiation alarms halt venting at TMI

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — Radiation alarms sounded just four minutes after authorities began releasing radioactive krypton gas from the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant Saturday, forcing a delay in the long-awaited venting effort.

Tests showed no excess radiation was released in the 8 a.m. incident, but officials ordered tests Saturday night to work out problems with radiation detectors.

The radioactive gas was released into the reactor's containment building when the system was damaged by overheating on March 28, 1979, in the nation's worst accident involving a commercial reactor. The gas must be removed before work can begin to clean up the building.

A picnic celebrating the long-awaited venting effort was held during the afternoon near the plant. Met Ed employees and their families wore buttons reading "Friends And Family Of TMI."

Police reported no mass exodus of anxious residents, and some people even held garage sales advertised as "Krypton Venting Sales."

Saturday's venting was stopped because the alarms indicated that excessive amounts of radioactive particles were being released. But later tests by Metropolitan Edison Co., the plant's operator, and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission indicated the readings were not accurate and that the releases were the minimal amount expected.

Harold Denton of the NRC said the problem occurred because the initial rush of krypton through the monitors causes an overly high reading before the flow stabilizes and the monitor settles to a true reading.

The alarm that caused the delay was on a monitor designed to detect radioactive dust particles that may escape filters as the gas is pumped from the building. Sensors to detect radioactive gases such as krypton did not go off.

"What happened was the monitor saw krypton and thought it was particulate," Denton said.

During a five-hour testing period that began at 5 p.m., authorities planned to process the krypton at a very slow rate and watch the response of the radiation monitors.

But the testing was shut down temporarily at 7:08 p.m. because thunderstorms in the area hampered off-site monitoring, said Met Ed spokesman David Crippen.

The off-site monitoring mainly involved "people out in the field with instruments," Crippen said. "We just can't have them standing out there in thunderstorms."

The test venting had increased the flow of air through the system from five to 10 cubic feet per minute at 5 p.m. to 95 cubic feet per minute when the procedure was resumed after the storm at 8:13 p.m., a TMI spokesman said. No abnormalities were observed and the test was ended at 10:06 p.m., TMI spokesman David Klucsik said.

Robert Arnold, chief of the recovery effort for Met Ed, said the earliest that routine venting would resume would be 2 p.m. Sunday. Crippen said Saturday night's temporary shutdown was not expected to delay that.

Arnold said a few thousand curies of krypton could be released during the testing period. The containment building holds gas with radioactivity of 57,000 curies.

Denton said the instrument response was not foreseen because it had not been tested with sufficient amounts of krypton.

Up to 300 cubic feet of air passed through the system before the shutdown, releasing 12 curies of krypton gas to the air. That was just a fraction of the 57,000 curies to be emitted during the next two to four weeks.

Texans sweltering in record heat

At least 21 deaths blamed on North Texas temperatures

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas officials pleaded with residents Saturday to keep their air conditioners running or to seek public shelter from a relentless heat wave packing 100-degree temperatures that already may have contributed to at least 21 deaths.

The mercury streaked to 117 in Wichita Falls on Saturday afternoon, breaking the all-time record high of 116 set Friday. The record high for June 27 in Wichita Falls was 108, set in 1928.

At 4 p.m. CDT, it was 112 at Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport, breaking the daily record of 103 set in 1930. Dallas-Fort Worth registered 113 for the second day in a row Friday, the highest ever recorded.

Ablene also set a new record, registering 106 and breaking the previous high of 105 set in 1928.

At least 21 persons have died of heat stroke or natural causes possibly aggravated by the blistering heat and hospital emergency rooms have been swamped with heat exhaustion and heat stroke victims.

Dallas County medical examiners said the heat could have played a role in the deaths by natural causes of three people brought in Friday night and early Saturday.

Field agent Bill Lene said autopsies would be performed on five more people who died Saturday to see if the heat was responsible.

"Any time you have a big shift in the temperature, there are more people dying ... in un-airconditioned areas," Lene said. "We can't always determine if the heat brought on the deaths, but it figures in the investigation. When it's 95-100, we don't see this."

Officials reported an illegal alien was found lying on a street near a hospital in the border city of Laredo. The unidentified man had a temperature of 110 and was immersed in ice water, but died Thursday.

At least five of the Dallas-area victims were found in homes with either no air conditioning or broken units. One man had turned the coolers off to save money.

Dallas Power & Light officials urged customers to keep cool rather than shut the machines off to save on electric bills. The company said customers would be allowed to pay higher-than-usual bills in installments.

"We don't want a problem with anyone out there endangering themselves because they can't afford the electricity," said DP&L spokesman Ray Ward.

In Dallas, where the majority of cars, homes and offices are air conditioned, residents have been running units at top speed all week, setting power use records every day since Thursday.

Ward estimated, however, at least 20 percent of Dallas homes have no air conditioning, and city officials opened shelters for people whose homes are too hot to live in.

"People have died because they don't have air conditioning," said city spokesman Noel Watson. "So coats and air will be available."

Doctors and city officials continued to warn residents against excessive physical or outdoor activity.

That didn't deter Paul D. Sterling Jr., an accountant who jogs around Bachman Lake every afternoon. "I'd rather be out here in the hot fresh air than at work in 80 degree air that isn't circulating," he said.

More heat due in Basin area

More hot afternoons are predicted for this afternoon and Monday as the record heat wave continues throughout Texas.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is predicting today's high should be near 105 degrees with tonight's low near 70 degrees.

The high for Monday should be near 102 degrees.

Saturday's high of 105 tied the record set in 1947. However, the record low of 61 degrees in 1948 remains on the books even though Saturday night's low was 72 degrees.

Winds today and tonight should remain southerly at 10-15 mph.

Midland's discomfort caused by high humidity, expert says

By BILL MODISETT
Staff Writer

As the mercury inched upward this week, scores of Midlanders — wiping perspiration from their brows — likely were wondering if this June had rapidly advanced to August.

"Isn't it hotter this summer than it was last summer?" some were heard to ask.

Others remarked how it seemed a bit more "clammy" this summer than last summer.

Well, if you say it's unusually hot for this time of the year and that Midland is experiencing more humidity than normal, you're right on one count and wrong on another.

Jim Yates, meteorologist in charge of the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, says those Midlanders who believe it's been hotter this month than usual are not completely accurate and he has the statistical data to back his contention.

On the other hand, those who think it's a little more humid than usual in the Permian Basin are right on target.

Yates said that although the mercury has been hitting the century mark pretty consistently since June 15, the monthly average for June is only 1.7 degrees above normal.

That's because the first half of the month was relatively cool, bringing the monthly average down to almost normal.

While Yates did concede that the record-breaking heat wave that has seen temperatures reach the 106-degree mark in the past week is a bit unusual, temperatures in the 100s in June in Midland "really is not anything exceptional."

However, there are a couple of reasons why Midlanders may think it's hotter this summer.

Midland experienced a cool spring this year, said Yates. Thus when it got hot — or normal — it may have surprised some Midlanders. For example, April's average temperature was 5.2 degrees below normal. In fact, February, March, April and May were all below normal.

Increased humidity recently also may make the heat a little more noticeable and uncomfortable than normal. Usually Midland experiences about 20 percent relative humidity during the hot part of the day, but recently the humidity has been ho

Midland's healthy economy bucks national trend

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

The economic outlook is bad. Unemployment is on the rise. Inflation eats up most of the paycheck. Money from banks is tight. Credit is hard to get.

It all boils down to a recession, say the economic experts, and the country probably will be in a slump until next year. It's time to tighten the belts and adjust to a simpler, less-expensive way of life.

In Midland, though, high-rise office buildings sprout out of the ground and grow as fast as the beanstalk that the fabled Jack climbed. Houses pop up like toadstools overnight. And sales are increasing as stores multiply.

It may be the hot air of the surrounding plains that keeps bad news out. Or it could be that Texans have a habit of never listening to what Easterners (commonly known here as "furreners") have to say.

No matter what the reason. It's just that in view of the fact that one of the worst economic diseases in recent years is eating away at this country, Midland stays healthy, growing and prosperous — somewhat like a grinning, fat Chesapeake cat.

Much of Midland's growth — continuing at its third record-breaking year — will effect a change in the character of Midland's downtown office area and in the tone of shopping and apartments provided for residents.

In essence, Midland more and more is taking on the look and feel of a larger metropolitan area.

The first indication of prosperity is that building permits for the first five months surpassed that of last year. At the end of May, $50 million of construction had been permitted. In 1979, the best year on record for building, the total was $94 million.

A spokesman with the Chamber of Commerce pointed out that at this pace, Midland should break last year's record and go over the $100 million barrier.

"The way it's going now, we should hit that $100 million mark," noted Grant Billingsley. "You can be fairly sure of it when you have $50 million permitted only five months into the year."

That $50 million doesn't include three new high-rise office buildings: A 14-story, 220,000 square foot Midland National Bank Tower; The Summit, a 12-story 150,000 square foot structure; and the Paragon, an 11-story, 200,000 square foot $18 million office building with a five-story attached atrium.

A fourth high-rise, Empire Plaza, was started early this year. The 12-story office building at 508 W. Wall St. should cost about $8.9 million.

Midland already has more than 4 million square feet of office space, including single tenant buildings. The latest office announcements will add another 570,000 square feet to that figure.

Billingsley pointed out that the unusual aspect about Midland "is that we have an unusual amount of office space for our size of city."

One local economist attributed the continued good mood of prosperity to "Midland's petroleum base that has been the backbone of our economy. It has been fostering the growth we have seen since 1973," added Doug Henson of The First National Bank's area development group.

Those new office buildings — especially the downtown high-rises — are only filling a gap that has been getting wider for the past two years, he claimed.

"We've seen growth in excess of our space capability. We've been clustering people into offices," Henson said. "We're coming out of an impacted situation, and the space we needed two years ago is finally going to be built."

Because of Midland's strong economy, it hasn't been hard to find backers for the major construction projects, even in times of tight money. Henson said that Midland "has been discovered by mortgage bankers throughout the country and they're willing to invest in mortgage ventures here."

To Henson, the recent announcements of the last three high-rise buildings were no surprise because of the lead time it takes to plan and secure financing. While major construction projects in other parts of the country might have been put on hold due to high interest rates, Henson explained the local projects probably had financing arranged before the rates skyrocketed at the end of 1979.

And he expects one or two more major projects to be announced by the end of the summer. One should be an expansion by Coquina Oil Co.

Potts wins second stay of execution

JACKSON, Ga. (AP) — Convicted murderer Jack Potts won a stay of execution Saturday from a federal appeals court panel, just three days before he was scheduled to die in Georgia's electric chair.

A three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals issued the stay pending a hearing on an emergency appeal filed Friday by Potts' attorneys.

On Thursday, O'Kelley balked at reinstating the stay after the condemned man changed his mind again and resumed his appeal.

Potts, 35, received word of the stay from Diane Nicholson, a former girlfriend who was visiting him at the Georgia Diagnostic and Classification Center near here.

Mrs. Nicholson said Potts was "elated" and jumped up and hugged her when he heard the news.

She said she received a telephone call at the prison from Andrea Young, an attorney with the Atlanta-based Team Defense Project who was at the court in New Orleans. The call came just minutes before the 1 p.m. close of prison visiting hours, she said.

Potts was moved Saturday morning to a special holding cell in the newly constructed death house at the Jackson prison to begin a 72-hour "death watch" prior to the scheduled execution.

Prison spokeswoman Sara Engle said the "death watch" would continue until the Georgia attorney general's office had an opportunity to review the 5th Circuit Court's decision.

Georgia Attorney General Arthur Bolton said his staff would appeal the stay immediately to the U.S. Supreme Court and ask the high court to order the execution carried out Tuesday as scheduled.

"I feel the people of Georgia are entitled to have this matter passed on by the highest court of the land before having it further delayed," he said in a statement issued by his office.

Marty Potts, wife of Potts' brother John, said the on-again, off-again execution has been "mentally and physically destroying the family."

Potts was sentenced to death after being convicted of kidnapping and murder in the 1975 slaying of Roswell auto mechanic Michael Priest. The former bricklayer set the stage for his execution last fall when he fired his attorneys, abandoned his appeal and announced his conversion to Catholicism.

A two-car accident occurred at 5 p.m. Saturday near the intersection of Front and Mineola streets. A 1972 Thunderbird, right, driven by Susie Riggs, 3321 W. Storey Ave., was involved in a collision with a 1972 Chevrolet pickup truck operated by Golinda Delores, 404 E. Ohio Ave., according to Midland Police Department reports. Although an emergency medical service ambulance was called to the scene, both parties refused treatment, the report said. (Staff Photo by Brian Hendershot).

Former shah in serious condition in Egyptian hospital, Sadat says

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The cancer-stricken ex Shah of Iran was hospitalized in "very serious" condition Saturday, under treatment by a team of French and Egyptian doctors, President Anwar Sadat reported.

Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, the deposed Iranian monarch who has been living in exile in Egypt for the past four months, was readmitted Friday afternoon to the Maadi military hospital, where his cancerous spleen was removed in March.

Rumors that the shah had died were denied in Cairo and by the New York office of the ex-monarch's spokesman, Robert Armao.

Chris Godek, at Armao's office, said Pahlavi had been hospitalized for a type of typhoid, but "the rumor that the shah died is completely false."

He said Armao, who is in Cairo, "was just on the telephone with the shah and said he is doing fine."

Egyptian Information Minister Mansour Hassan was asked about the rumor and said, "It's not true. We are following this very closely. He is in the hospital, he is seriously ill."

Sadat disclosed June 17 that the 60-year-old Pahlavi had suffered a relapse, attributed to complications resulting from chemotherapy for treatment of cancer, which doctors said had spread to his liver.

Sadat disclosed Saturday that the deposed Iranian monarch also contracted pneumonia at about that time.

The Egyptian leader, in Alexandria, said he had received an urgent message from the hospital saying Pahlavi's condition was "very serious," the official Middle East News Agency reported.

"Thus we should all pray for him," he said. Asked by reporters whether the ex-shah's death was imminent, Sadat replied, "Only God knows that, and I wouldn't want to hear of such a thing."

Gas supplies good; Plenty forecast for holiday weekend

Gasoline prices in Texas have remained almost stable for the second month in a row, and supplies should be abundant for the Fourth of July weekend with nearly three service stations out of four planning to open on the holiday.

A survey of 394 service stations by the American Automobile Association reveals that prices for all grades of gasoline except premium have increased by less than one cent per gallon since last month.

The average price of premium unleaded fuel increased sharply by almost two cents a gallon, and the price of premium unleaded gasoline declined slightly.

A Triple-A spokesman said the rising price of premium unleaded fuel is coinciding with a dramatic decline in availability of that grade of gasoline.

The AAA survey one year ago showed that 55 percent of the stations surveyed were selling premium unleaded compared to only 16 percent in the current survey.

"This reflects the gradual disappearance of the old high-compression engines which required this grade of fuel," the spokesman said.

The survey revealed that 53 percent of the stations surveyed are now open on Sundays, compared to 51 percent last month. Stations also increased, from 42 percent last month to 46 percent this month.

Nine percent of the stations are open 24 hours a day, and 73 percent will be open on Friday, July 4.

Current average full-time service gasoline prices are: regular, 119.0 cents per gallon; unleaded, 123.0; premium, 124.9 and premium unleaded, 124.8.

He said he was receiving hourly reports on Pahlavi's condition and planned to go to Cairo to see him if there was no improvement.

A presidential spokesman said later that Sadat would return to Cairo Sunday, interrupting his stay in Alexandria.

Humidity blamed for local sweat

Average self-service prices are: regular, 114.8; unleaded, 119.4; premium, 121.5; and premium unleaded, 122.4.

The average price of diesel fuel rose 1.6 cents per gallon from 107.0 to 108.6.

Yates noted. The increased humidity is due primarily to the positioning of the "Bermuda high," a semi-permanent high pressure system over the southern part of the North Atlantic which more or less regulates the flow of winds over the southern portion of the United States.

Due to the current positioning of the Bermuda high, Midland's predominant winds have been southeasterly recently, blowing in humid air from the Gulf of Mexico. That's uncommon, although not rare, said Yates, because usually moisture from the Gulf doesn't come this far inland or stay this long.

While house plants may enjoy the additional humidity when coupled with the hot temperatures of this part of the state, people suffer under the combination.

But Yates doesn't expect it to last long this way. Although he doesn't want to speculate too far in advance, the meteorologist said the outlook through mid-July is for above normal temperatures and below normal rainfall.

That adds up to "pretty much hot and dry," Yates added.

Editor's Report

However, it was obvious the United States did not play the key role it has in the past. Bernard D. Kaplan of the Hearst Newspapers wrote from Venice:

"Jimmy Carter did not clearly dominate this week's western summit as past presidents have earlier international conferences or as he himself has done previously. He failed to come across with the sparkle he showed at his first summit in London in 1977."

All in all, though, our president was an able and articulate spokesman for us in Europe. I believe most Americans share this impression.

While the president was mending fences across the Atlantic, Teddy Kennedy and his troops were still boring from within at home.

The Carter forces were able to write most of the planks of the Democratic platform, but Sen. Kennedy slipped one in that I consider disastrous. It calls for the complete phasing out of the nation's nuclear plants. It is particularly unfortunate, coming at this time when we are desperately in need of any and all alternate energy sources.

We all know that harnessing the atom is dangerous business, but so is harnessing fire. To abandon nuclear energy because of accidents makes as much sense as abandoning the advantages of fire because of the damage it does to peoples' homes and forests each year. The wise course is to improve safety measures.

While Carter was losing his party's year, adding 466 new units to Midland's more than 5,000 apartments. More are in the planning stage, such as one that will be behind North Park shopping center.

Apparently, no one has any qualms that these residences or apartments can be filled. According to Grant Billingsley, Midland is experiencing a growth boom this year. So far, the average number of families moving into Midland each month — after those leaving have been subtracted — is 95, which could set a new record. The last record was 93 set in 1978.

In 1977, it was 78 families a month adding to Midland's population while in 1979 the number was a "paltry" 65.

Henson believes this is a reflection of Midland's continued efforts to diversify industry.

In summary, he said, "Growth begets growth."

And that is exactly what is happening in Midland.

nuclear round to Kennedy in Washington, he was winning one in Venice, where he and the chiefs of government of all the great powers signed a summit declaration urging development of nuclear energy, with appropriate safeguards.

The world leaders declared: "Unless we can deal with the problems of energy, we cannot cope with other problems." Theirs was a statesmanlike approach. Kennedy's was that of the demagogic politician he is.

Statesman Carter returned to Washington to face a gathering congressional storm caused by an earlier decision of his to sell India 38 tons of enriched uranium. His approval of the sale on the eve of going to Venice dismayed administration supporters who feel he pulled a real booby this time.

The government of authoritarian-minded Prime Minister Indira Gandhi is sneeringly anti-American and has just arranged a multi-billion dollar arms deal with the Soviet Union. It stubbornly refuses all on-site nuclear inspection and rejects acceptance of the international non-proliferation treaty prohibiting the spread of nuclear weapons.

Enriched uranium is the stuff of nuclear bombs, one of which India exploded six years ago from material we transferred "for peaceful purposes."

Information has come to my attention that the imperious Mrs. Gandhi sent a high-handed letter to Carter demanding that he live up to a U.S.-India contract which has 13 years to go or else... It was straight political blackmail since some presidential advisers urged him to endorse the sale so he could keep a "dialogue" going with India. Acting on their counsel, Carter overruled a unanimous decision by our Nuclear Regulatory Agency banning the transfer.

It never pays to pay blackmail or to try to buy a friend. If Mrs. Gandhi's good will is salable, it will go to the highest bidder. Friendship which is for sale is not worth it.

Prime Minister Gandhi added an additional insult while Carter was deliberating with fellow summitters in Venice. Her personally appointed officials met with a commercial delegation from Iran that had the blessing of the Ayatollah Khomeini for its mission.

India agreed to a trade deal that allows Iran to obtain hard-to-get commodities exported by the U.S. but is strictly forbidden for Iran by the president's own sanctions. Of course, there wasn't any mention of our 53 hostages seized nearly seven months ago in Tehran. The president is betting our money and dangerous and valuable uranium on the wrong nag this time and I hope he is outvoted.

Meanwhile, back in Europe he did right by citing the plight of the hostages during his visit to Belgrade. He also muted uncalculated criticism for not having rushed off to the funeral of Tito with an appearance in Yugoslavia to deliver a vigorous defense of the little nation's policy of non-alignment.

It was a policy developed by Tito against all comers, especially the Soviet Union which hasn't wasted time putting pressure on Yugoslavia. The Yugoslavs warmly welcomed Carter's endorsement of their role and Tito's successors assailed ongoing attempts by "others" to subvert non-alignment. In their maverick communist shorthand it clearly means the Russian invasion-occupation of Afghanistan.

President Carter concluded that week by responding to the appeal for friendship from Spain and Portugal. As I am sure you'll remember, they were under dictatorships for many years but both countries now have representative parliamentary governments. Jimmy Carter said they deserve and should receive American aid and support.

While neither country is now in the European Economic Community; only Spain is not in NATO. If they join the EEC, it would strengthen the fiber of the entire western community.

It was a hectic flying foreign affairs week for President Carter. And in all, I feel he did good.

'But you can't win 'em all.

Anderson seeking Hispanic vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — John B. Anderson, the independent presidential candidate, made a direct appeal for Hispanic votes Saturday, pledging that as president he would "make executive level appointments that more accurately reflect the cultural and ethnic diversity of our nation."

"For too long now," Anderson said, "Hispanics and other minority groups have been underrepresented at the highest levels of government."

The Republican Illinois congressman spoke before the League of United Latin American Citizens, an umbrella organization of Hispanic leaders concerned with education and housing for Spanish-speaking Americans.

Anderson said despite campaign promises in 1976, President Carter has sorely neglected Hispanic interests during his time in office.

He said twice over the last four years the office charged with minority business enterprise in the Commerce Department has been without a director for six months.

Anderson also cited charges that the Small Business Administration's minority procurement program has become "politicized and arbitrary."

NAACP to hear candidates

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The nation's oldest civil rights group, beginning its annual assessment of blacks' progress, is wading into presidential politics by bringing candidates Carter, Kennedy and Anderson before its delegates.

As many as 20,000 persons — about one-fifth of them are delegates — are expected to attend the convention which opens officially on Monday.

There won't be a formal pulse-taking to determine the delegates' presidential preference. But the reception they accord President Carter, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and Rep. John Anderson will be watched as one indicator of how — and if — blacks are likely to vote in November.

"There is no more representative group of blacks meeting in America," executive director Benjamin Hooks said in an interview as he touted the convention as an barometer of sentiment in the national black community.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has 1,900 chapters spread among each of the 50 states. Hooks said its membership is "composed of people from every strata — grass roots to college presidents."

Hooks already is forecasting a light turnout in November.

"If the election was being held today, I'd say there would be a very light vote in the black community and the white community," he predicted.

"If the election catches fire, we'll have a big vote, black and white. If it doesn't, we won't."

The latest available scheduling information was that Anderson would appear on Tuesday night, Kennedy on Wednesday afternoon and Carter on Friday night.

But the national election won't be the only debating point before the convention.

Still fresh in delegates' minds is last month's riot in Miami, triggered by the acquittal of policemen accused of beating a black man to death. Questions still are being raised about whether similar violent outbreaks might occur elsewhere, especially since black unemployment stands at 13.9 percent compared to 7.8 percent overall.

Joblessness among black youth stood at 35.2 percent compared to 19.2 percent for all youth.

Laxalt leading candidate for Reagan running mate?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan's national campaign chairman is under serious consideration as a running mate for the former California governor, sources said Saturday.

The sources, declining to be named publicly, said that Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., a longtime Reagan friend and political associate, is among at least a half-dozen Republicans who have been asked to complete a questionnaire circulated by the Reagan campaign.

Laxalt, the sources said, is the vice presidential favorite of Reagan's wife, Nancy.

Laxalt was not immediately available for comment.

The sources also said that former U.N. Ambassador George Bush and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., are among those being considered for the No. 2 spot on the Republican ticket that Reagan is sure to head.

It was reported earlier that Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. and Richard Lugar and former Treasury Secretary William E. Simon had been asked to supply background information to Reagan's top aides.

Reagan has declined thus far to comment on the growing speculation over a running mate.

But Baker confirmed Friday that he had received such a questionnaire, and a spokesman for Lugar said the Indiana senator likewise had been selected for a background check.

No comment was immediately available from Simon, Bush and Kemp.

Oil price raised

KUWAIT (AP) — Kuwait will raise the price of its crude oil by $2 a barrel to $31.50 effective Tuesday, oil ministry sources reported Saturday.

New house parents sought for Culver Youth Home

There are problems at Culver Youth Home. As of Tuesday, house parents Howard and Clystene William will be gone. No replacements have been found, and county officials don't hold much hope of finding any by that time.

"We've got one couple we're supposed to be talking to the first of the week," said County Juvenile Probation Officer Grover Green. "They're from East Texas, but they might be interested. They used to live here."

"But it doesn't look too good to tell the truth." Green said the job opening had been turned over to the Texas Employment office, but there had been no replies.

The Williams had been house parents for six months. Tuesday, July 1, marks the date the Williams' six-month option expires, and June 16, the couple informed county officials they would not be renewing that option.

Official reason is that the Williams have an opportunity to go into business for themselves, but unofficially, the couple found the job extremely confining. At least one of them is required to be at the home constantly.

"The six months was a probationary period — to see whether we were satisfied or they were. Apparently they weren't because they are leaving," Green said. "But we were happy with their work."

Culver Youth Home is a "holding place" for juvenile offenders. The court can send the juvenile to the home for 10 days while awaiting juvenile proceedings or other court action. At the end of those 10 days, the youth can be returned to the home, but only after another hearing is held and the court approves the action. Last year, the average number of youths at the home at any one time was five.

Green said house parents' duties included preparation of meals, discipline, watching the youths, taking them to appointments, such as doctor's appointments, and generally looking after them.

"They are just like a mother and father. The home has family style meals and everyone chips in and helps keep the place cleaned up," Green added.

According to Green, house parents' stays seem to go in cycles.

"Seems like we get one that stays a long time and then a couple of short ones. It used to be the pay, but that has been upped since then."

"I'd say the confining part of it is what finally gets most of them."

Jury acquits man arrested in Midland

DALLAS — Johnny Darwin Eads, arrested in Midland Feb. 2 after a high-speed chase and shootout, has been acquitted of aggravated robbery charges by a Dallas jury — even though Eads jumped bond Wednesday.

According to Eads' attorney, Mark Withrow, the jury delivered its decision Friday night after deliberating for about six hours.

Eads had been charged in the Jan. 29 armed robbery of Metro North Dallas Gold and Silver Exchange, four days before he and two other men were arrested in Midland. Withrow said three men in ski masks robbed the business of between $40,000 and $50,000 in jewelry, cash, diamonds and gold coins.

Five Midland officers testified in the Dallas case, since the evidence used in Dallas was taken from the trunk of the car occupied by Eads, Reese Bernard Ray and Ray Edward Hines Feb. 2.

"I think he just got overwhelmed by the amount of evidence that was allowed to be admitted by the judge, over our objections," Withrow said about Eads' disappearance. The prosecution presented more than 70 exhibits and pieces of evidence to the jury.

Withrow said Eads' location was not known and that neither he nor the family had been in contact with him.

Due to the items removed from the car trunk Feb. 2, Eads originally had cases pending against him in Houston;

Friendswood, a small community outside of Houston; Dallas and Midland. Withrow said the Friendswood case had been dismissed and the only pending cases now were Houston and Midland.

"Midland is of the greatest concern," he added.

'Prosecutor named Sue' dies Friday at age 84

MADISONVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Sue K. Hicks, an assistant prosecutor in the landmark 1925 Scopes "monkey trial" whose given name was memorialized in song, is dead at age 84.

Hicks was named for his mother, who died when he was born. His name inspired the hit recording by Johnny Cash, "A Boy Named Sue."

He died Friday at a convalescent home. Hicks was an assistant Rhea County attorney in May 1925 and helped William Jennings Bryan prosecute biology teacher John Scopes in a court test of Tennessee's law forbidding the teaching in public schools of non-biblical theories of man's creation.

"Our motive right from the start was to test the anti-evolution law," Hicks said in a 1975 interview with the Knoxville Journal. "We wanted to get a conviction, and we wanted it appealed so that the Supreme Court could rule on its constitutionality."

Ford moved to Midland, and in 1951 he began work with Mobil Oil Corp., in production. He worked at Pegasus plant a number of years, retiring from Mobil in 1976 after 25 years of service. He was a member of Crestview Baptist Church and of the Masonic Lodge.

Union officials enter guilty pleas

NEW YORK (AP) — Carl Levy, former president of the newspaper deliverers' union, has pleaded guilty to receiving more than $100,000 in cash payoffs as a union official.

Levy, now president of the major wholesale distributor Metropolitan News Co., said Friday in U.S. District Court he had shared the payoffs with other union officials, including Douglas LaChance who succeeded him in the deliverers' union post.

Monte Rosenberg, a business agent for the deliverers union, followed Levy in pleading guilty to demanding and receiving $5,650 from five New Jersey newspaper wholesale firms.

Rosenberg, 48, of Plainfield, N.J., agreed to resign his post as he entered his plea.

The guilty pleas stemmed from the the federal government's inquiry into corruption in the metropolitan area newspaper and magazine delivery industry and the LaChance case.

LaChance was sentenced to 12 years in prison and fined $100,000 on Thursday for extracting similar labor payoffs of $330,000 "through a pattern of racketeering."

Mystery root from Far East gaining popularity in U.S.A.

By SEHYON JOH

NEW YORK (AP) — Ginseng, the mysterious root from the Far East, is gaining popularity in the United States as a "super vitamin" or "energizer," despite persistent skepticism among government officials and scientists.

"It used to be a fad. The people took interest in ginseng as they did in all other health foods. But now, they are taking it seriously, realizing many beneficial effects of the herb on the human body," says Chuck Dewattsville, a salesman at the Il Hwa Ginseng Center on New York's 5th Avenue.

Discovered 5,000 years ago in Korea and northern China, ginseng's white, multi-filament roots were brewed into tea that supposedly enhanced general physical well-being, promoted sexual potency and increased longevity. Now, the dried ginseng roots are ground into powders to be taken as instant tea or in capsules, pressed into pills or soaked in brandy.

Oriental physicians prescribe ginseng for infections and to relieve stress. It is also effective, they say, in alleviating asthma, indigestion, high blood pressure and diabetes. A recent European study found that ginseng can be effective in fighting effects of air pollution and foods that contain toxic chemicals such as insecticides, dealers say.

There has been no conclusive scientific evidence to back these claims.

The American Medical Association has included the ginseng root among "magic cures and mystery drugs," while the U.S. Federal Trade Commission classifies it as a "grass generally recognized as safe food," thus allowing it to be sold in health food stores rather than in pharmacies.

Ginseng's popularity, however, seems unaffected by the lack of official backing. South Korea, which sends almost all of its exported ginseng to American markets, has increased its shipments from $30,000 in 1970 to $12 million in 1979, says Woon-sung Yoon, a sales agent for the monopoly office of the South Korean government.

Yoon says ginseng is expensive because the short, leafy plant is very difficult to cultivate. It takes six years to grow, and during this time it absorbs so much of the nutrients from the soil that the soil must be fallow for at least 10 years.

Chemical fertilizers always kill the plant, as does direct sunlight during the first few years of growth. The properly harvested and dried roots, therefore, are worth thousands of dollars, Yoon says.

In his shop on Manhattan's east side, Yoon sells 30 tea bags of ginseng at $10.25, and 60 grams (2.1 ounces) of powdered ginseng at $15.50. He says the prices are similar to those at other health food stores in New York and other major American cities.

Increasing demand and rising prices of ginseng are sending enterprising Americans into mountain valleys in this country in unprecedented numbers, searching for the American variety of ginseng, the owner of a New York health food store says.

To protect ginseng from scavengers, Indiana recently enacted a law that prohibits digging ginseng for five months, beginning next April 1. Under the federal government's ginseng conservation program, other states are expected to follow suit.

No one knows exactly how much ginseng has been dug up and sold in the United States each year.

Who gives out special permits for automobiles so they can be parked anywhere at Midland Regional Airport? — T.D.

ANSWER: According to Col. Wilson Banks, director of aviation for the city of Midland, the Midland City Council voted to issue special parking permits to members of the council. The reason being, when the city council members are at the airport on city business, they can park any place.

Colonel Banks also said if you would like more information to contact him, 563-1460.

I found it necessary to cut several large limbs off a pine tree. I have used a recommended spray to "seal" the spots so the resin does not "run out," but it did not work.

Also, I would like to know how a volunteer apricot sapling, which is three feet tall, can be transplanted? — Mrs. D.S.

ANSWER: One nurseryman recommends a thicker tree coating for your tree's "spots." He also suggested scorching the "spots" by using Butane.

He said it is possible you pruned the tree too early. Charles Green, Midland County extension agent, suggests the time to transplant an apricot tree sapling is in December or January.

The hole for the transplant should be at least three feet deep and two feet in diameter. The sapling should be planted immediately. There should be no fertilizer added at first, but if the soil is "tight," peat moss should be added.

The sapling, according to Green, should be cut back one-third or one-half to balance out the root. Water the plant about once a week, and when the leaves appear, twice a week.

Would you please give Dr. Michael Bursleson's address in California? Please sign initials only, please. Thank you. L.G.

ANSWER: That address is 2427 G St., Eureka, Calif., 95501.

My question concerns the so-called "Blue Laws." I read in an article recently that certain business establishments were being sued for selling items in violation of these laws.

One of the items, according to the article, was a jar of peanuts. Correct me if I'm wrong, but I thought that peanuts were considered a food item and therefore could be sold. Is this true? — Mrs. S.G.

ANSWER: Yes. What you refer to as "Blue Laws" prohibit the sale of certain items on the two consecutive days of Saturday and Sunday, so says the State Bar of Texas.

Included are clothing, furniture, appliances, hardware, jewelry, luggage, drapes, blinds and curtains.

This law does not prohibit the sale of any food items.

Gin trash suggested to up cotton yields

SAN ANTONIO — Dryland cotton yields can be increased by 79 percent by using gin trash on blank — unplanted — rows and by rotating the planted and unplanted rows, according to a scientist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Yields were increased by 66 percent by the use of gin trash alone but without rotation of the unplanted rows.

"Water scarcity is the most important, single limiting factor in the production of dryland cotton," said Donald W. Fryrear, agriculture engineer with the USDA's Science and Education Administration. "The major benefit from the application of gin trash is improved water conservation and utilization," Fryrear said. "The trash reduces water loss from evaporation by as much as 50 percent."

In the eight-year experiment, Fryrear used the usual dryland system of planting two rows of cotton and leaving two rows blank.

Planting sorghum between rows of cotton reduced cotton yields significantly when it was planted around June 15. But when sorghum was planted on July 15, cotton yields were not reduced but not enough plant residue was produced to protect the soil from wind erosion.

No new funds for farm roads

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Despite the rising costs of constructing farm-to-market roads, the Texas State Department of Highways and Public Transportation has no plans to ask the Texas Legislature to increase appropriations to the farm-to-market road fund, says Engineer-Director B.L. Berry.

Y.O. Ranch auction sets record

MOUNTAIN HOME — The Y.O. Ranch, with its penchant for revelry and breaking records, grossed $531,552 in a record auction of 124 lots of Longhorn cattle and 20 lots of registered Quarter Horses on June 7.

The Longhorns averaged $3,723 for gross sales of $461,652. The Quarter Horses averaged $3,495.

The 1980 sale broke last year's record of $3,617 average on 107 lots. Sales conjured up by Auctioneer Eddie Wood included these top sales.

Self-exiled Midlander now thinks of returning

EDITOR'S NOTE: Larry Moffitt, a member of the high school graduating class of 1967 in Midland and the son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Moffitt of Midland, is now a columnist for The News World, a daily newspaper in New York. After an absence of 11 years, Moffitt recently returned to Midland for a visit with family and friends. The following is his impression of his old home.

By LARRY MOFFITT

In high school we used to joke that an exciting Saturday night in Midland was going to Gibson's to watch them unload trucks. In our minds, Midland was a sinkhole, a grave with the lid left off, and other unkind images. For high school seniors, the most important parts of Midland were the roads leading out.

Going to Texas Tech was an acceptable degree of "getting out" and The University of Texas represented a clean slice through the umbilical cord. But going beyond that to, say, Cal Tech or Vassar, was really burning your bridges. And going to Oklahoma, especially if you played football, amounted to driving a stake into the heart of your gray-haired mother.

But the main thing we all had in common, no matter where we planned to go, was that we weren't coming back. With the exception of Christmas visits and family reunions, Midland would only be thought of in historical terms.

SO WHAT I WANT to know is why, after 11 years of absence, do I return for a brief visit and suddenly find myself looking at Midland as though I stumbled into heaven? Did I go soft in the head? Have I lost the spirit of adventure that drives me over the top of every hill? Did my swash come unbuckled?

I think that change in me began when I stepped off the plane and noticed the air was clean. In New York, when the air isn't brown, it's because it's black. The next day it rained and I noticed the rain was made of water instead of battery acid. How unusual, I thought, rain you can drink. I stood outside in my clothes.

People I didn't know, complete strangers, nodded their heads and said "howdy" when I walked down the street. At first I thought they were mistaking me for someone they knew, but it happened so often that by the second day, I began to say "howdy" back.

I had forgotten about Midland's friendliness. In New York, even Houston, speaking to people you don't know is done with great caution. Muggers ask you for the time so they can see if the value of your wristwatch warrants their attention. A Mickey Mouse watch is sufficient.

AND THEN THERE'S the subway. Survival instinct dictates that you stand in the middle of the platform as the train approaches because there is a growing psychopathic element here that likes to push people in front of oncoming trains for laughs. We also have broad-daylight holdups on the trains, but recently whole carloads of onlookers have taken to jumping on the robbers and administering street justice. It would make a Texan proud.

When my father and I went to the store to pick up some groceries, I reminded him to lock his door when we got out of the car.

"Why?" he asked and walked to the entrance. Looking around I noticed all the cars had their windows down and doors unlocked.

At the boot shop, the kid behind the counter refused to fix my boot.

"It doesn't need it," he insisted, "save your two bucks. The leather is only stretching. It's not coming apart."

I WAS flabbergasted. Nobody in New York ever passed up a chance to take my money. I had to travel clear around the world and back to my hometown before running into my first truly honest merchant in almost a dozen years. I wanted to give him a gift. I offered to name my firstborn after his store but the guy didn't want to take responsibility for a kid being named Rudy's Boot & Shoe Repair Moffitt.

I'm sure this year's crop of high school graduates are just as eager to hit the road as we were, but it's funny because of my fellow Class of '67ers are coming back to fill up the new housing developments that make Midland one of the fastest growing places anywhere.

Any why not? Compared to where I've come from, you're still paying last year's prices for food and fuel. You have inflation, but you seem to have escaped the recession that has the rest of the country wringing its hands. Only in Texas can a cowboy sing "take this job and shove it." Elsewhere, we take whatever we can get.

The clincher for we disillusioned wanderers is that Midland is one of the only decent places left in which to raise kids. In New York schools, the teachers travel in pairs for safety. And of course we have our famous discos, with their nightly re-enactment of the fall of Rome.

IN MIDLAND, home, family, responsibility, patriotism and God are real things. They are not ridiculous vapors surging through the minds of primitives — as many of these Eastern Seaboard types presume.

My New York friends ask me about Texas as a place to live. "Is it true," they ask, "that Texas is still pretty much in the Dark Ages, with dirt streets, not so much electricity and killer rednecks who'd just as soon blow your head off as look at you?"

"Yes," I assure them. Who needs the crowds, right?

With the Empire State Building looking over his shoulder, former Midlander Larry Moffitt has decided to become part of the stampede of young professionals back to the Tall City. Moffitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Moffitt of 3206 Sentinel Ave., is a columnist for The News World, a daily newspaper in New York. He says to expect him within two years: "That's how long it takes to get through traffic to the airport."

Wallace to enter hospital

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Former Gov. George C. Wallace planned to enter an Oregon hospital over the weekend to undergo an experimental treatment aimed at relieving paraplegia discomfort, an aide said Saturday.

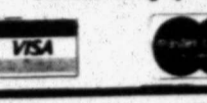

Elvin Stanton said Wallace was expected to be hospitalized for about two weeks.

CLOCK THERMOSTAT—MONEY SAVER

What steps can you take to conserve energy in your home? The first place to look is at your thermostat on the wall. Simply turning down the thermostat should save approximately 3% for each degree. Most people will feel very comfortable in a well insulated house when the temperature is set 65-68 degrees.

Turning down thermostats during sleeping hours will yield significant results, with extra savings in the area of 1% for each degree over an eight hour period. A clock thermostat, capable of automating this process, is an excellent and inexpensive investment, one which will pay for itself during the first heating season after it is installed. Units are available which can program two set-back periods, enabling the temperature to be reduced to 55 to 60 degrees when everyone is off to work or school, recycle before the first family members return home and provide a comfortable temperature until bed time. Then a bed time it can be set automatically again to a lower temperature until an hour before rising.

Border governors expand good will, solve few problems

By JAMES R. KING

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — One critic of the first meeting between U.S. and Mexican governors said problems between the neighboring nations should properly be discussed at the federal level.

State officials simply lack the authority to tackle problems like drug-smuggling, illegal aliens and pollution along the U.S.-Mexico border, said Bob Krueger, special U.S. ambassador to Mexico. The best they could do, he said as the historic two-day meeting got under way in this desert city Thursday, would be to improve good will among themselves.

As the meeting drew to an end Friday, it was apparent that despite much hugging, hand-shaking and back-slapping, in fact no major U.S.-Mexico problems were solved. But the American governors here insisted that good will was the whole point of this initial meeting in the first place.

"THE MOST SIGNIFICANT accomplishment? That we met," said Texas Gov. Bill Clements, the Dallas oilman who became the state's first elected Republican governor two years ago. Holding such a conference has been one of Clements' pet projects, but he has come under fire from fellow Texan Krueger, a defeated Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate for "meddling" in foreign affairs.

But at this meeting, the governors — all Democrats except Clements — put politics aside and defended the Texas Republic.

"I agree with Gov. Clements that it's not a wise or perceptive statement" that Krueger made, said Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt.

"BORDER RELATIONS are too important to leave to impersonal decisions in Washington and Chapultepec," he said. "The most significant accomplishment here was that for 100 years we have misunderstood each other and for the first time the six Mexican border governors and the American governors have sat down together. It's the beginning of an important and historical process."

Gov. Bruce King of New Mexico said Krueger was wrong because officials on both sides of the border vowed to press their federal governments into action on policies agreed to first at the state level.

But how easy it will be to get all governors involved to agree on those policies remains the biggest challenge now facing the governors.

AMONG THE NINE governors attending — only Gov. Edmund G. Brown of California was not there — Clements made the most concrete recommendation. His most controversial plan, which he had urged months before the border conference, calls for issuing special work visas to Mexicans, allowing them to cross the border for limited periods of time.

During a speech on energy Friday, Clements argued that his plan — which he said was a far cry from the controversial Braceros program of two decades ago — would be good for both sides. He said the United States can offer money and know-how, "while Mexico is in the position to provide manpower and natural resources."

The other governors agreed in principle with Clements' plan, but could not come to terms on the specifics. They agreed to set up a permanent border task force and several sub-task forces to work out details of that and other border issues. Each governor pledged "immediately" upon returning home to name representatives to the panels and have them set up meetings.

The governors also agreed to have another meeting like this one within a year.

MORE THAN 200 American and Mexican reporters converged on this border city just south of El Paso, Texas, for the conference — but newswriters were barred from morning meetings in which the governors discussed controversial issues.

Instead, reporters were permitted to attend only afternoon sessions on such topics as industrial development, tourism and cultural exchange.

David King, nephew of the New Mexico governor, who attended the private sessions, said the six Mexican governors were all "overwhelmingly" in favor of Clements' plan for allowing Mexican workers to enter the United States on a temporary basis. But he said some of the American governors, "disagreed on how it should be implemented."

CLEMENTS ALSO recommended that the federal governments of both nations relax requirements for Mexican tourists desiring to vacation in the United States and that border guards be beefed up to reduce north-bound traffic jams on international bridges.

Such a traffic snarl prevented one Mexican governor, Oscar Flores Tapia of Coahuila, from driving his limousine into El Paso on the first day of the conference.

Europe eyes highway plans

UDINE, Italy (AP) — Experts from 19 East and Central European nations met here to study a joint project to build a major highway system stretching from Greece to the Middle East and cutting across Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Romania, Bulgaria and Turkey.

The 8,000-mile network would not only link the Baltic Sea and the Mediterranean, but also facilitate traffic between Eastern Europe and the Middle East through Belgrade, Sofia, Istanbul and Ankara, a spokesman for the Trans-European Motorway project said.

The project is not expected to meet its original target year of 1990 and may be delayed until the year 2000, the spokesman said. No cost estimate was available.

Reagan counts on Democratic votes

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — GOP presidential candidate Ronald Reagan said Saturday that traditionally Democratic blue-collar workers will cross party lines in November to put Republicans in charge of the country.

Reagan spoke to delegates at the Utah Republican Convention who attended a fund-raising breakfast at the Salt Palace. He also was scheduled to address the convention's general session.

"Everywhere it's apparent party lines are going to be ignored," Reagan said. "I've never shaken so many calloused hands. The good, solid blue-collar workers are willing to follow the banner of the Republican Party."

Immediately following the breakfast, Reagan told Utah campaign workers that the hardest stretch of the campaign is yet to come. He predicted it would be a hard campaign, but said, "We have a target and it's a target we have to get at and convince our fellow Americans of the need for a change."

The need for change has never been greater than now, Reagan said, adding, "This country has a rendezvous with destiny. We have to keep that rendezvous."

Synthetic fuels program costly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government, which has a fondness for spending lots of money in crash programs, is launching another one — a gigantic push to manufacture synthetic fuels.

Supporters like to compare the effort to programs that put a man on the moon and developed a synthetic rubber industry during World War II.

However, the fight for energy independence will have a much higher price tag. Phase one of the program will cost $20 billion and the entire 12-year effort carries an $88 billion cost estimate. The Apollo moon program cost $21 billion.

But President Carter says synthetic fuels are a crucial element of the country's efforts to reduce foreign oil imports.

Congress authorized the first phase Thursday and the administration is wasting no time getting ready to dole the money out. The president will sign the bill at a ceremony Monday on the White House lawn and the Energy Department says it could issue the first $200 million in grants later in the week.

Judging from the response so far, there will be no shortage of applicants seeking to get in on the ground floor of the country's newest industry — the production of oil and gas from coal, tar sands and oil shale.

While there are a few small-scale demonstration projects currently in operation, there are no commercial-size plants using any of those technologies in the United States. The government wants to change that by putting up big sums of money for loans, loan guarantees, price-support agreements and outright purchase of the synthetic fuels.

DOE has received 971 different proposals all seeking a piece of the initial $200 million which will be handed out in amounts of up to $4 million for feasibility studies and up to $25 million to help firms pay pre-construction costs.

One company already knows it is a winner. Congress wrote into the law that a joint venture headed by American Natural Resources Co. would receive $22 million for pre-construction work on a Beulah, N.D., coal gasification plant.

The joint venture — Great Plains Coal Gasification Associates — hopes to begin construction this year on a $1.5 billion facility to produce 125 million cubic feet of gas a day. The plant could be completed in four years, its backers say.

Officials say the special treatment for Great Plains is justified because the company is a pioneer in the field. The company has been trying to get a federal loan guarantee since 1975.

Swim Olympics slated by YMCA

Alamo YMCA is registering entrants for its Swim Olympics scheduled July 2 from 1 to 8 p.m. at the Y. The cost for entering the full day of events for children aged 6-14, or having completed grade 1-9, is 75 cents.

Swimming games and relays, as well as a hot dog and watermelon picnic, are set for olympic participants and their families.

Alamo YMCA members as well as non-members are invited to participate.

Events are divided into three age categories: first through third grade; fourth through sixth grade; and seventh through ninth grade.

First, second and third place ribbons will be awarded in each of the three age levels and an Alamo YMCA Swim Olympic participation ribbon will also be awarded to entrants.

Some of the events listed include: a goldfish dive (catch a fish to take home); a penny dive (keep the pennies you dive for, plus win ribbons); an aquatic run (run, don't swim, across the pool); a barrel walk; and a tube race.

All events are subject to change. For further information, contact Genie McCartney, aquatic director at the Y, 901 N. Midland Drive, or call 694-2528.

Two inmates critical after prison disturbance

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Two state penitentiary inmates who were part of a group that held a prison guard hostage for more than an hour Friday remained in critical condition Saturday from wounds suffered when guards charged their cellblock.

Two others were listed in good condition. Prison authorities imposed a lockdown on the prison Saturday and state police were searching all cells. Department of Human Resources representative Dave Fiskum said.

Congressman says some big companies don't pay taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Major American corporations paid less in federal taxes in 1978 than in previous years and some of the biggest companies didn't pay anything, an Ohio congressman said Saturday.

In his eighth annual report, Rep. Charles A. Vanik, D-Ohio, said that "the amount of corporate freeloading on the American economy has increased." He said the companies are not doing anything illegal, just taking advantage of loopholes and government subsidies.

Vanik said the actual tax rates paid by the corporation are less than those fixed by law because of investment incentives, business deductions, credits for taxes paid in other jurisdictions and other reasons.

He said 14 companies earning more than $3.5 billion among them paid no federal income taxes in 1978 and another 30 earning $14.4 billion paid less than 10 percent to the U.S. government.

Spokesmen for the companies Vanik named could not be reached immediately for comment Saturday.

The 145 companies surveyed paid an average of 18.6 percent, about the same that a family of four earning $31,000 a year would pay, Vanik said.

The figures are based on annual financial reports to stockholders and to the Securities and Exchange Commission. The Internal Revenue Service did not supply any of the data, said Vanik.

The tax rates are only approximate because of "numerous technical problems" in interpreting the available documents, Vanik said.

The records show that the firms paid $23.96 billion in taxes to foreign governments, but only $3.45 billion to the U.S. treasury, he said.

Utilities, airlines and railroads lead the way in lowering their American taxes because of investment tax credit changes adopted in 1976, he continued. A number of banks also had low tax liabilities, Vanik added.

The 10 largest paid an average of 6.3 percent on $19.9 billion in income, he said.

The oil companies in the study paid an average of 13.3 percent on $28.4 billion in income, Vanik said.

He contended that corporate income taxes in 1978 produced 14 percent of total federal receipts, down from 17 percent in 1972. He estimated the figure would be 11 percent by 1983 and 5 or 6 percent eventually unless tax laws are changed.

"There has been an alarming and more or less unwavering decline in the effective rate of corporate income tax," payments, he said.

He also said the figures support his contention that corporate tax cuts are not needed to stimulate the economy.

The companies that Vanik said did not pay any federal income taxes in 1978 are U.S. Steel Corp., Occidental Petroleum, Continental Group Inc., General Dynamics, Seaboard Coast Line Industries, American Electric Power, Southern California Edison, Middle South Utilities, J.P. Morgan & Co., Chemical New York Corp., Lockheed Corp., Boeing Co., American Airlines and Eastern Airlines.

Three Midlanders jailed in Lamesa

LAMESA — Two males and a female, all of Midland, are presently in Lamesa jails awaiting arraignment on aggravated robbery charges of a Lamesa grocery store Friday night.

According to a Dawson County law enforcement official, the three were arrested about five miles north of Stanton on Highway 137 by a Stanton Department of Public Safety patrolman.

The incident occurred at about 7:10 p.m. when the three persons entered Matthews Grocery Store on Vines Street, the official said. One of the suspects knocked down a man and another suspect tied up a woman with an electric cord during the robbery, he said.

The three suspects left the store with $599 and drove south out of Lamesa, according to reports.

The woman in the store freed herself and call law enforcement officers, the official said.

When arrested outside of Stanton at about 7:41 p.m., a .22 caliber pistol was found inside the 1977 Monte Carlo, the spokesman said.

Bond for all three suspects was set at $50,000 by Martin County Judge Jimmy Mathis.

Heat, drought brew problems

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent - Agriculture

High temperatures and drying winds placed heavy stress on plants of all kinds last week. Cotton, which is a drought-resistant plant, continued to make generally good growth. However, as cotton approaches the fruiting stage moisture requirements will jump, and moisture may become limiting if additional rain is not forthcoming.

Garden and landscape plants developed some problems. Tomatoes, beans and other vegetables are not pollinating well due to the hot, dry conditions, and landscape plants with high transpiration rates are scorching on leaf margins.

THE 50th ANNUAL CONFERENCE of the Texas Pecan Growers Association is scheduled for July 14-16 at the Abilene Civic Center in downtown Abilene. The winning entries from the 1979 Regional Pecan Shows will be combined at the 1980 Texas State Pecan Show that will be opened to the public at 8 a.m. Monday, July 14. Commercial exhibits will be open at noon Monday, and demonstrations will begin at 3:30 p.m. in the McAlister Orchard on the outskirts of the city. Buses will shuttle people to the orchard beginning at 3 p.m. A barbecue will be staged in the orchard at 6 p.m.

Texas Pecan Queen Kami Bridges will preside over the beautiful Queen's Pageant in the theatre of the Civic Center at 8 p.m. Ten contestants from all parts of the state will participate. The conference theme is marketing, and a number of marketing authorities will appear on the program during the second day of the conference.

For pecan growers trying to control pecan not casebearers, it's one down and one to go. Spraying for the first generation of this pest is complete in the Midland area. Now growers need to be alert for the second generation of casebearers, which may appear in the next day or two. Eggs of the second generation will start appearing 28 to 32 days after the optimum spraying dates (which were June 4-9) for the first generation.

WHEN THE WEATHER really gets hot and dry in West Texas, folks start having problems with lawns, trees, shrubs, vegetables and flowering plants. One of the common symptoms is a withering and scorching of foliage. Leaves first show a burning or scorching around margins, usually with older leaves affected first. The marginal scorch progresses until the entire leaf withers and drops. The extent and rapidity of leaf drop is dependent on the type of plant and cause of damage.

Some plants are just not adapted to low humidity and drying winds. These plants will increase their transpiration rate under such conditions to the point that roots cannot supply enough moisture to the leaves even though soil is watered to field capacity. Some examples of such plants are the sycamore and maple trees and crepe myrtle shrub. These plants will do very well in the mild conditions of spring and early summer, but just as soon as the hot, dry days of July and August come will exhibit leaf scorch.

Dissolved solids (salts) in the irrigation water slow down the rate at which plants can take up water by a process known as reverse osmosis. This causes leaf scorch. Some plants are more salt tolerant than others. Some plants that can tolerate strong salinity (8,000 to 10,000 p.p.m.) include Bermuda grass, table beets, kale, asparagus, spinach, tomato, oleander, bottlebrush, arbor vitae, spreading juniper and lantana. Some plants having low salt tolerance: viburnum, rose, pear, radish, beans, apple, plum and strawberry.

Excessive use of fertilizer (which are salts) also causes plant scorch for the same reason as salt in the irrigation water.

ONE OF THE MORE COMMON causes of withering and scorching is root failure. Roots may be damaged by such things as disease, insects or factors that exclude oxygen from the soil. Certain insects, diseases or nematodes may devitalize enough of the root system to seriously hamper its function. When this occurs, the leaves are not furnished enough water and nutrients to supply the tops.

Root failure often results when oxygen is made unavailable to roots. This can occur when fill soil is added, concrete sidewalks or patios are built around trees or when there are natural gas leaks. Roots are killed when oxygen is excluded and carbon dioxide accumulates.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Literary detective Alan Gribben mixed ivory tower research with tireless travel and extraordinary luck to uncover Mark Twain's masquerade as a humorist who didn't cotton much to books.

Gribben, a University of Texas English professor, found evidence in his 16-year search that Twain, who posed as one who "read eccentrically, merely dabbling in books," probably owned as many as 2,800 books, and borrowed even more from public libraries.

He personally located more than 700 books that survive from Twain's personal library, scattered from California to Connecticut and from Texas to Wisconsin.

Gribben's quest cost him and his wife, Irene Wong, $15,000, not including the salary he lost for 1 1/2 years when he had to quit teaching to pursue Twain's literary background.

Along the way, Gribben, 38, earned a doctorate from the University of California at Berkeley, submitting in 1974 a 2,370-page dissertation on Twain's library that was the longest dissertation ever filed at Berkeley.

He wore out two typewriters, eight typists and four proofreaders in completing a 5,000-page manuscript that was published recently as "Mark Twain's Library: A Reconstruction."

Publisher G.K. Hall & Co. of Boston claims the two-volume annotated catalog "convincingly disproves the notion, encouraged by Twain throughout his lifetime, that his art was almost completely unencumbered by book learning."

The first printing of 500 catalogs is nearly sold out even though the two volumes cost $75.

Twain — born Samuel L. Clemens — died in 1910, and Gribben said he had so cleverly hidden his reading habits that "the attitude of many Americans at the time of his death was that the country had lost one of its foremost humorists and not much more."

Twain's writing now is an established part of college literature courses.

What did Twain read?

"Absolutely everything except Herman Melville, Karl Marx and Sigmund Freud," says Gribben.

Why would Twain downplay his literary knowledge?

"To help (book) sales, and also it was probably a personality quirk," said Gribben in an interview.

"Possibly it was advisable not to seem so erudite, because his audience was broader than most," Gribben said. My own hunch is his parents made him feel a little guilty about the time he spent reading, that he should have been helping around the house or at his brother's print shop.

Shortly before his death, Twain arranged for two-thirds of his library to be donated to the public library at Redding, Conn., where, until 1959, they were loaned without restrictions, and many were lost.

Many of the remainder of Twain's books were sold at auction by his daughter, Clara Clemens, in 1911 in New York and in 1951 in Hollywood. "The prices look ridiculously low today," said Gribben. "It would have been better than buying gold."

What makes Twain's library so valuable is that he wrote in the margin in approximately half the volumes, allowing researchers, for example, to note he had labeled 30 books as belonging to his "Library of Literary Hogwash."

"I've often had the feeling that Twain expected people to come along behind him and be entertained," said Gribben.

Redding still has 240 books from Twain's library, and Gribben estimates the collection is worth at least $120,000. The bidding, however, on a copiously annotated volume "might reach into the tens of thousands of dollars," he said.

Gribben thought he had completed his project in 1977, when a black notebook turned up in which a Redding librarian had jotted down Twain's donations to the library in 1908-1910. Gribben said his hands trembled when the notebook was turned over to him, and it took him 1 1/2 years to insert the new findings.

A family who owned nearly 90 volumes "was flabbergasted when I told them how much they were worth. They said, 'Please don't let anyone know we own the books.' I think I spoiled the whole thing for them," Gribben recalled.

"One of my most exciting moments," he said, came when he discovered 40 Twain books that a maid had inadvertently placed in a stack of books that were to be given to a religious charity.

More incredible, however, was the instance in which Gribben routinely ordered a copy of George Combe's "Notes on the United States" through an inter-library loan service, because he thought Twain might have once owned a copy of the book.

"The book arrived from a major state university, and I just nearly reeled. I thought, 'Irene's right. I've worked too long, and I'm hallucinating.' There in front of my eyes began to form ... Clemens' script, written in the margin in pencil. I remember grabbing hold of my head and leaning back against the wall. Then, I turned to the front of the book, and there was his signature. It really was his book ... Think of the odds."

Gribben said he felt during his research "it would be almost dangerous for me to be lusting" after a book from Twain's library, and it has been only in the last few months that "I've had a longing to own some moments of my project."

Gribben stated, now that his book has been out a few months, "To my vast relief, no one has come forward and said, 'Oh, you forgot these hundred volumes over here.'"

"My colleagues told me I had created a monster. I got nothing but resistance and discouragement," Gribben said, "but I never tired of the project. It was very largely love for the project."

"It's an odd feeling to be the most foremost authority on anything, however small an endeavor," he said.

Mauritius to ask return of key U.S. island base

PORT LOUIS, Mauritius (AP) — The prime minister of this Indian Ocean island state said Friday he will "lay fresh claims" with British officials in London this week for the return to Mauritius of Diego Garcia, an island that is emerging as a key U.S. military base in the region.

The 13-mile-long Diego Garcia, 800 miles northeast of here, was a dependency of the British colony of Mauritius until 1965, when it was ceded to direct British control as Mauritius prepared for independence. The British have leased it to the United States, which is developing it as a strategic military outpost.

The Mauritians contend the American presence in the Indian Ocean, and particularly on Diego Garcia, is increasing tensions in the region.

On Friday, a bipartisan bloc in the Mauritian Parliament failed to push through an amendment formally demanding return of the island. But Prime Minister Sir Seewoosagur Ramgoolam, scheduled to visit London next week, said later he would seek annexation of Diego Garcia in talks with British officials.

At a news conference, Ramgoolam would not rule out eventually taking the matter before the International Court of Justice at The Hague.

EFM monitors mother, fetus

Dear Dr. Solomon: My obstetrician has mentioned that he might want to monitor me when I go into the hospital to give birth. My personal preference is that childbirth be as natural an experience as possible; but I certainly don't want to endanger my own health or that of my child. What exactly is it that a doctor monitors, and why is this kind of monitoring recommended? — Mrs. H.L.N.

Dear Mrs. N.: Many obstetricians use electronic fetal monitoring (EFM) to keep tabs on both the mother and the fetus during childbirth; however, not all physicians recommend the procedure, and some are actively opposed to it.

EFM is used to monitor the fetal heartbeat and the timing and strength of the mother's uterine contractions. By comparing the two readings a doctor can evaluate the baby's reactions to the stresses of labor.

If the doctor concludes that the baby is in some difficulty, he can take appropriate action before a serious complication occurs. In more simple cases, sometimes a change in the mother's position to relieve pressure on the fetus is all that is needed. In more serious circumstances, the obstetrician may decide to deliver the baby by means of a Caesarean section.

Physicians who favor EFM contend it can warn of early signs of trouble and therefore help avoid complications. Those opposed to it maintain that EFM occasionally is used even when there are no indications for it, and that the procedure itself may actually involve some risk.

Opponents of EFM cite a study sponsored by the National Center for Health Services Research, a component agency of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Drs. H. David Banta and Stephen B. Thacker reported that there is little evidence that EFM helps prevent the death or long-term disability of babies, and that the cost and risk involved in performing EFM exceed any possible benefits.

On the other hand, Dr. Allen B. Weingold, chairman of the Department of Obstetrics at the George Washington Medical Center in Washington, D.C., maintains there is no evidence that EFM is in any way dangerous, and suggests that patients have the right to decide whether it is something they want.

The National Institutes of Health recently sponsored a task force to try to reconcile these conflicting opinions. The task force reported that EFM is indicated in the following circumstances: (1) where there is low expectation that the mother will deliver a healthy baby, (2) where the mother's medical history suggests she has problems that may affect the delivery, and (3) where the doctor detects an abnormal fetal heart rate with the stethoscope. Where a mother is not considered to be in a high-risk category, the task force suggests periodic use of the stethoscope to monitor the condition of the fetus.

As you can see, medical opinion is divided on the issue of EFM. In view of this, each pregnant woman would discuss with her physician the advantages and disadvantages of EFM as they relate to her particular case. Free and open discussion between patient and doctor is the best guarantee of arriving at a decision that will be best for both the mother and the baby.

Mason named chief AP European correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — David Mason, veteran foreign service newsman for The Associated Press, Friday was named chief European correspondent and head of the news service's diplomatic coverage in Europe.

The appointment was announced by Keith Fuller, president and general manager.

Mason, who during his career has directed news coverage in Paris, Saigon, Moscow and London, has been chief of the London bureau since 1977.

"David Mason has 26 years of foreign service and has handled some of the most difficult foreign assignments in the last two and a half decades. His experience eminently qualifies him for his new assignment," Fuller said.

"The intricate relationship between the United States and its Western allies demands the sort of overview that Mason can bring to diplomatic coverage," Fuller added.

Mason will continue to be based in London but will travel in the diplomatic circuit of Europe. His assignments will be coordinated directly with Nate Polowetzky, foreign editor of the news service in New York.

Administration of the London bureau will be assumed by Myron Belkind, managing director of The Associated Press Ltd., the wholly owned subsidiary covering the business activities of The Associated Press in Great Britain and France.

Mason, 58, became chief of bureau in London after serving there as news editor for Europe.

Californians to vote on smoking sections

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An initiative to create smoking and non-smoking sections in public buildings and places of employment qualified Thursday for the November state ballot, and local supporters claimed voters are ready to approve such a measure.

Paul Loveday of Californians for Smoking and No Smoking Sections said at a news conference here that the initiative will fare better than its predecessor, Proposition 5.

That measure — which also sought to establish defined smoking sections — was narrowly defeated in 1978 after a heavy spending campaign by tobacco companies.

"Most importantly, the initiative creates smoking and non-smoking sections in places of employment," said Loveday, chairman of the coalition of health and environmental groups sponsoring the measure. "But it's important to note that the smoking sections initiative is not a rearguardion or a rewrite of Proposition 5."

In Sacramento, Caren Daniels of the secretary of state's office said 510,120 verified signatures were submitted for the Smoking and No Smoking Sections initiative, well above the 346,119 required to put the proposal on the ballot. The smoking initiative was the only citizen-sponsored measure to be certified for the election, Ms. Daniels said.

Loveday said the new initiative would be fairer and easier to implement than Proposition 5. Unlike the previous measure, it would allow for smoking as well as non-smoking sections, would not require walls or partitions between sections, would prohibit tax increases to fund implementation and would forbid searching people or taking them into custody for smoking.

Violations would be punishable by a $15 fine. Smoking and non-

Meeting to discuss MX missiles slated

LUBBOCK — U.S. Rep. Kent Hance has scheduled a July 9 meeting in Lubbock for area county officials to discuss the possibility that the proposed MX missile might be located in West Texas.

Hance emphasized that Texas has not been selected as a site for the missile, but the Air Force will be looking at it as a possible alternative to Utah and Nevada for part of the system.

The West Texas congressman has invited Gen. Forrest McCartney of the Air Force to the meeting to outline details of the MX system to the county officials.

"I will be contacting all county judges in the 19th District asking them to send representatives to the meeting," Hance said. "This will be strictly an information meeting. It will not be a public hearing at which we are soliciting opinion about the MX."

"The Air Force has stated that Nevada-Utah is the number one priority location for the MX and that West Texas-New Mexico is the alternate location. I just want everyone to be informed with the proper facts."

Hance said the meeting will be open to the public. However, questions will be limited to those from the official representatives of each county along with those of the news media.

"The Air Force will hold public hearings at a later date at which everyone will have the opportunity to express their opinion of whether they want the system located in West Texas-New Mexico. This is a meeting I am initiating so that everyone will have the proper facts on which to base an opinion. We do not want to be caught off guard and unprepared."

"I want to emphasize that West Texas has not been chosen as a site for the missile," he said. "However, the Air Force will be studying our area in depth as an alternate site and I want everyone in the 19th District to have as much information as possible with which to make their decisions."

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, has said he expects the Air Force will conclude that Utah and Nevada are the logical sites for the missile.

Even Ted Nugent finds his art 'indescribable'

By GEORGIA TEMPLE Staff Writer

Prancing nearly naked across the stage at Chaparral Center Tuesday night, Ted Nugent's performance mesmerized his fans.

Onstage, Nugent is the total performer, with his act encompassing his entrance, attire, rapport with the audience and the sound he creates. Sailing on to the stage Tarzan-like, his long disheveled mane flowing halfway down his back, clad only in a loin cloth, suede boots and his guitar, Nugent seems to fit the stereotype of the wild-eyed, shooting-up, spaced-out, hard rock performer. He isn't.

Offstage, Nugent, at 31, is sober, serious with a sense of humor, articulate, intelligent and he tells it like he feels.

He has been performing for 21 years.

"I had my first professional band when I was 10 years old. I did my first professional job in Detroit at the Polish Arts Festival at the Michigan State Fair grounds. It was hysterical — 10 years old and boogie-wooging and honky-tonking. I've been doing it ever since."

"It's been a successful road financially for Nugent, who has sold '14 million albums." Plus, he's been doing what he loves.

The feeling he has onstage is "indescribable."

"There's a sense of unbelievable power, like you're just the baddest you could be. It's all unified; they're all unified in my thing. I'm calling the shots.

"First of all I've got to acknowledge the fact that I'm just one of them anyhow. I'm just a big rock and roll fan. I want it. I want to rock and roll so bad, I always have and I wouldn't settle just for listening to the radio or listening to records. I had to have a whole lot more than that could offer, so that's why I started playing.

"So just being a rock and roller up there, I'm obviously in my element. And I'm obviously getting a bigger kick out of it than anybody," he said, laughing, but serious.

"And then the magnification of the event through the multiplication and intensification of those people out there; it's like a big ricochet. I rock them, they rock me back, I rock them, etc....

It's like we're all trying to outdo each other lifting the same thing. It's as though we're trying to out-spirit each other. Ultimately the spirit wins, no matter who wins.

"It's so unique and right now this is only a meager attempt to try and explain it because the overall feeling I get up there is indescribable. I can't put it to words. It's unique for me and those of us who get to do it."

Nugent, whose idols

when he was growing up included The Ventures, James Brown, Lonny Mack and Dwayne Eddy among others, said he feels he came along at just the right time.

"The electric guitar was just getting on its feet when I was there so I had the incredible luxury of being there when Les Paul's technology was in the hands of funky rhythm and blues Chuck Berry. And the amplification technology was developing to the point where all of a sudden these boogie-woogie, honky-tonk, rhythm and blues guitar patterns became more fun, louder and faster, which is what rock and roll is. Rock and roll is louder, faster, more intense rhythm and blues.

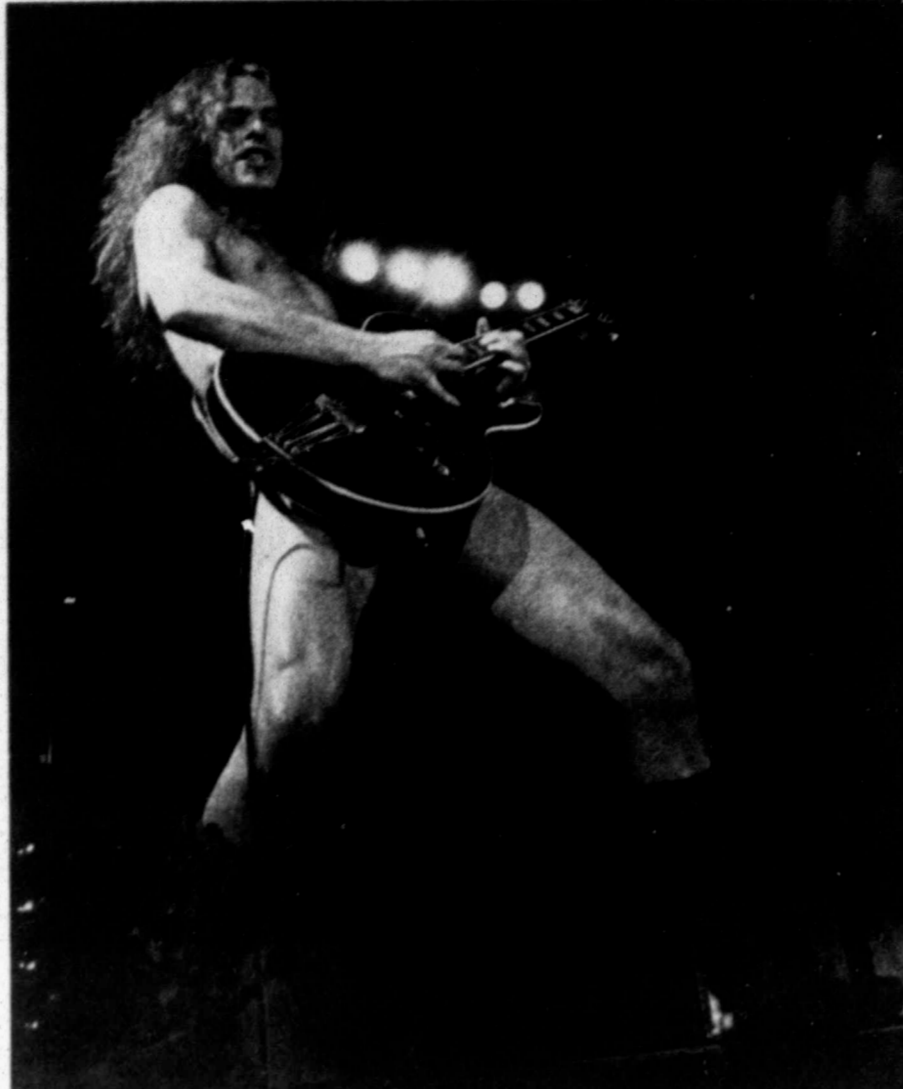

"Where traditionally a musician was given credit for development based on the technical advances on his given instrument, rock and roll tends to focus on the capabilities of an individual based on his feel; his slang on the instrument. It's a mover music; it's a motivator music.

"Guys like Billy Gibbons (with ZZ Top) basically play the same licks that Keith Richards played in the first Rolling Stones album, but play with such pizzazz. You've got guitar players that are absolute technical monsters on their instrument, but it's the ones who are really making statements that really make the mark."

Music is not Nugent's only love.

"I only spend six months a year rocking out. The other six months I spend in the woods hunting.

"I can just tell you right here and now what I'm all about. My life revolves around my little girl Sasha, 6, and my little boy Toby, 3, rock and roll and the outdoors."

Nugent, guest bands present concert worth admission price

Chaparral Center was the scene of a hard rock concert Tuesday night that included Def Leppard, Scorpion and Ted Nugent. For those whose ears could handle it, it was worth the admission price.

Many in the industry feel that, with more polish, this group is destined to be one of the future big names in rock. With the average age in the group being 19, time is on their side.

After a brief intermission, the German rock group Scorpion wound those already there a little higher. Their sound is the hard hitting rock which is more common in Europe than in America.

Rock lovers were still coming in the doors, with an initial crowd of about 1,800 growing to 4,000 by the time Nugent sailed onto the stage.

Clad only in a loin cloth and boots, Nugent made his grand entrance Tarzan fashion and the crowd went wild. They wanted Nugent. And once they got him, they weren't disappointed.

Credited by many as playing the best and hottest rock guitar today, once he started, he didn't stop until it was over. It's hard to gauge how long he played because his sound plus his attire, or rather lack of, combined to create a time stopping performance.

Even for those who were not rock music lovers, the show Nugent put on was worth the price.

Bette Davis stars in movie 'Skyward'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Bette Davis and Howard Hesseman are filming the NBC movie "Skyward" on location near Dallas.

Suzie Gilstrap, a 15-year-old Californian, makes her acting debut as a paraplegic youngster who yearns to become a pilot to escape her troublesome life in a wheelchair. Miss Davis plays an aging movie stunt pilot who now runs the airport cafe, and Hesseman is the airport night watchman and owner of a bi-plane.

Nancy Brackett wrote the screenplay from an original story by Anson Williams, who is co-producer with Ron Howard. Both star on "Happy Days."

German band finds more room for rock in U.S.

Relaxed back, eating sandwiches and getting something wet to drink, the members of Scorpion were unwinding after their Tuesday night performance at Chaparral Center.

The language was not Texan, nor even American. It was German, or British-style English, which was to be expected since all five members are from West Germany. Although this group may be somewhat new to American audiences, they have been playing gigs in Europe and England for many years.

ENTERTAINMENT

"We love America," explained drummer Herman Rarebell. "We are basically having a very good time over here. The reception was great and we like playing here."

"You reach more people here than in Europe. Over here there are real rock stations. Everything is much more rock oriented in this country than in Germany."

Herman, who joined Scorpion in 1977, has been playing for about 15 years. Now 30, he started playing professionally when he was 20.

"In the early days I was influenced by such groups as the Stones. I wanted to be like them. The music really got me crazy. I wanted to be a musician. I didn't want anything else."

So it was necessary to play the club scene, Herman explained. This is one of the ways a group can get known since rock is not given the air time it gets here.

"The high spots to perform in Germany are Munich, Hamburg and Frankfurt," Herman said. "And once you've played those three places and they accept you there, you've made it."

But, Scorpion's first big break came after the band went to Japan in 1978.

"In Germany they like you more. If you are big in another country. Since we have gotten back from Japan they like us more than before. It's crazy."

Herman said there is a definite difference in the rock Americans like and that appreciated by a German audience.

"Americans like to listen to more lay-back rock and roll. In Germany they're still into speedy bands. But a change is happening. All the bands that are big in America are big in Germany now, too."

But for Herman, the No. 1 country in the world in rock and roll is America.

"I'm really inspired in America. I like it much more than being in Germany. There is no doubt to me that the No. 1 country in the world in rock and roll is America."

"And our favorite places to play in America are Texas, California, Arizona and Florida."

Playboys, Cowboys bands offer 'down home' evening

By GEORGIA TEMPLE Staff Writer

Country music filled Chaparral Center recently when, for the first time, Bob Wills' Texas Playboys and Hank Williams' Drifting Cowboys performed onstage together. The event, which was sponsored by the Midland Jaycees, brought country music lovers of all ages together for a real "down home" enjoyable evening.

It was a night of yesterdays. Backstage, before the show began, members of both groups were joking and reminiscing as only those who have known each other for more than half a lifetime can. The Texas Playboys were created in 1935 and have played together for 45 years.

The Drifting Cowboys were created in 1949, but split up as a band after they worked with Ray Price and Hank Jr. following Hank's death. But, they never quit playing somewhere as part of a band until they re-formed approximately four years ago.

The Playboys, who in 1934 were sharing a basement apartment among the eight of them, were the highest paid band in the U.S. in 1937-38, explained drummer Smokey Dacus.

Dacus, who joined the group in 1935, said that before Bob Wills asked him to join his band, he was playing dance music for a hotel club. When Dacus joined the Texas Playboys, he became the first drummer in a country and western band.

Bob told him, "I want to take your kind of music and my kind of music and make it swing."

It's not easy to be the first one to attempt a new style. "I went through hell," Dacus said, laughing. "I tried everything and finally wound up with a brush in one hand and a stick in the other. Although one's light and the other one's heavy, which is not the way it had been done before, it meshed with the other sounds in the band."

The feel of the sound was all important to Wills. "Bob would not play music according to anything other than how it felt, so we played with a feeling. We play to each other. It's like a conversation, but we don't say anything. With Wills' death, those in the music industry realized that the sound of Bob Wills and The Texas Playboys was hard to duplicate. But there was a demand.

"For us it was natural. We found the demand as well as the desire to continue the sound," said Dacus, explaining their many years of success together. "People wanted to hear it and we continued to play it."

Drifting Cowboys fiddler Jerry Rivers joined Hank Williams in 1949 when the four man band was formed. Hank's death had a great impact on the group, he explained, pointing out that they had not been performing together as long as the Texas Playboys, nor had they had as many years of success when Hank died. To go from performing for an established artist to performing for a relative newcomer, which Price was then, was rough.

"It's like starting over. Five or six years before his death, Hank was hoping he made enough to get by. Then he was the number one country artist in the world. We all felt we had paid our dues in honky-tonks, bar suppers, socials, etc."

Another difference in the two bands involved attitude. "Hank Williams didn't even pretend to be a musician," Jerry explained. "His big ambition was to be a successful song writer."

The Drifting Cowboys have played through the years with Hank Jr. whenever he's needed them. Otherwise, until approximately four years ago, they have performed independently with other artists. Although they talked about getting back together years ago, they decided it wouldn't work at that time. "But today, it's fantastic."

Both groups spent most of their time admiring the other band's performing ability. It was appropriate that, after each had said they were the other's greatest fans, they performed several numbers together on stage.

All in all, it was a special evening for country music lovers.

Eastwood's new theater film both outrageous, touching

By BOB THOMPSON Associated Press Writer

BRONCO BILLY is a rip-roaring hallelujah of a movie, often outrageous, sometimes touching. Clint Eastwood proves he is that rare bird: a star who can direct himself without making the result seem like an ego trip. He is cast as a not-too-bright impresario of a ragtag wild, west show that hovers on the brink of bankruptcy. Billy is an autocrat with his intoling followers, who recognize him as a symbol of western virtues: loyalty, square-shooting, ambience to orphans and helplessness women. Sandra Locke is splendid as a runaway waitress (shades of "It Happened One Night") and the rest of the cast is just right. Despite the PG rating (for a bit of cussing), the movie seems like a bear-warmer for the entire family. Motion Picture Association of America rating

The Midland Amateur Radio Club is participating in a world wide Field Day to demonstrate the use of ham radios under emergency conditions. Shown manning the voice-commanded radio, from left, are members Jim Greene, Loyd Bell and Orr Swinford. The Field Day, an annual contest for amateur hams, will continue through noon today at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum. (Staff Photo)

Radio operators more than 'hams'

Buzz-buzz. "CQ, CQ, calling anyone. This is WS4LR."
"This is KB5RP, go ahead." Buzz-z-z-z.
"This is WS4LR from North Texas, alpha 18, alpha 18, go ahead." Buzz-buzz.
"WS4LR, this is KB5RP from Central Texas. KB5RP from Central Texas, signal alpha 1, alpha 1."
"KB5RP, what's the location?"
"WS4LR, this is KB5RP. Location is Central Texas. Good Luck with the contest!"

If dialogue from citizen band radios interests you, chances are ham radio dialogue will fascinate you — if it doesn't confuse you.

Members of the Midland Amateur Radio Club set up operations to fascinate the public Saturday at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum. Beginning at noon, members of MARC demonstrated the use of ham radios by calling places across the country. Under simulated emergency conditions, MARC members got involved in a worldwide contest to see how many contacts they could make with other places.

The 24-hour contest will continue through noon today.

Field Day, as radio operators refer to the annual event, allows amateur operators to compete with one another under the sponsorship of the American Radio Relay League (ARRL). It also gives them a chance to show people what they do when there's an emergency, and power and telephone lines are down.

Most of the 25 or so members worked extensively with the ham radios during the Wichita Falls tornado in 1979. They located relatives for people and relayed the needs of the town to officials. The ham operators were the only communication the city had. And they were used.

Saturday, local operators first hoisted an antenna to the top of the museum's historic wooden oil derrick. Two men climbed the derrick, while others sent the three-pronged antenna and a mass of wire up to them. The height of the derrick would enable them to operate for a greater distance. With several minor difficulties, the antenna was in place after about two hours.

The two stations, one for voice and one for code, were hooked to the group's generator. And the operators started calling.

Group member Roger Rose, known as WS4XS, organized the local field day. Rose, who said he's been "hamming" for 19 years, operated the ailing code machine. Rose is proficient in the international morse code used by operators.

The voice dialogue for the ham operators is similar to that of CB operators, Rose said, except hams use "Q" before their codes instead of the "10s" that CBers use. Instead of the "10-50s," then, hams use Q messages.

Both the voice station radio and the code station radio were operating on low-power: five watts, in 44 meter wavelengths or a frequency of 7.2 megacycles. Although the numbers sound technical, to operators they are commonplace.

Rose said the group would get more points from ARRL if they used a lower power.

Last year, Rose said the group spoke to more than 350 hams across the nation — the farthest being in Hawaii. He said he expected the group to contact as many if not more than last year's total by the end of the contest today.

Official says little can be done to get bodies back

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration believes a Vietnamese mortician's story that the remains of 400 American servicemen are being kept in a building in Hanoi, but officials admit there is little that can be done to get the bodies back.

A top-ranking State Department official said privately Saturday that as a practical matter the United States has little hope beyond trying to sway public opinion to force the Hanoi regime to cooperate. He does not foresee any change in the near future.

"We don't have much to withhold," the official said in an interview. He noted the United States has no diplomatic relations with Vietnam, already has prohibited trade with Hanoi and has no economic aid to curtail.

The seeming inability of the government to force Vietnam even to acknowledge existence of the bodies was greeted with anger by relatives of missing American servicemen at a meeting with administration officials Friday.

"What is the executive branch going to do... other than go to New York and tell the Vietnamese (representative at the United Nations) and get the same denial," demanded Earl Hopper, a retired Army colonel whose son was shot down over Vietnam in 1968.

Hopper's question during a meeting with Pentagon and State Department officials Friday brought sarcastic laughter when State Department official Steven Lyne, groping for a better answer, could say only: "That is a good question."

The report Friday of the bodies in Hanoi, denied by the Vietnamese government, is the largest single mass of American servicemen's remains so far pinned down, say government officials. In all, the Pentagon says there are about 2,500 Americans unaccounted for as a result of the fighting in Southeast Asia. Many of them have been officially declared presumed dead.

Lyne conceded "the pressures we can put on Vietnam are limited.... But he said he was refused access to the building — once a POW prison known to Americans as the Plantation of the Citadel — although the entourage drove within 200 yards of it.

The mortician, who was kicked out of Vietnam last year, told Wolff's subcommittee that from 1969 to 1975 he processed many of the 400 bodies kept at No. 17 Ly Nam De Street in Hanoi. As late as mid-1977 he said he was ordered to reprocess some remains because of decay.

American women win 10 of 16 places in Wimby singles

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Four seeds — Stan Smith, Victor Pecci and Jose Luis Clerc and Ivan Lendl — went tumbling out of the rain-plagued Wimbledon tennis championships Saturday.

Americans claimed 10 of the last 16 places in the women's singles. Four of them — Pam Shriver, JoAnne Russell, Lele Forood and Terry Holladay — have come through unseeded.

Brian Gottfried of the United States was the most convincing of the giant-killers. He humbled Smith, the 1972 Wimbledon champion and this year's No. 15 seed, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2.

Big serving Phil Dent of Australia ousted Pecci, the No. 8 seed, of Paraguay, 3-6, 6-2, 6-3, 6-1, while Onny Parun of New Zealand, who played through the qualifying competition, downed Clerc, of Argentina, the No. 16 seed, 3-6, 7-6, 6-4, 6-3.

Hard-serving Colin Dibley of Australia, a strong grass court player, ousted No. 10 Lendl, of Czechoslovakia, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 7-6.

The grass courts were damp and slippery after overnight rain. There was even a little rain during the tennis itself. It was a day for upsets among the men, when booming services were liable to skid on the turf and come off at irregular heights.

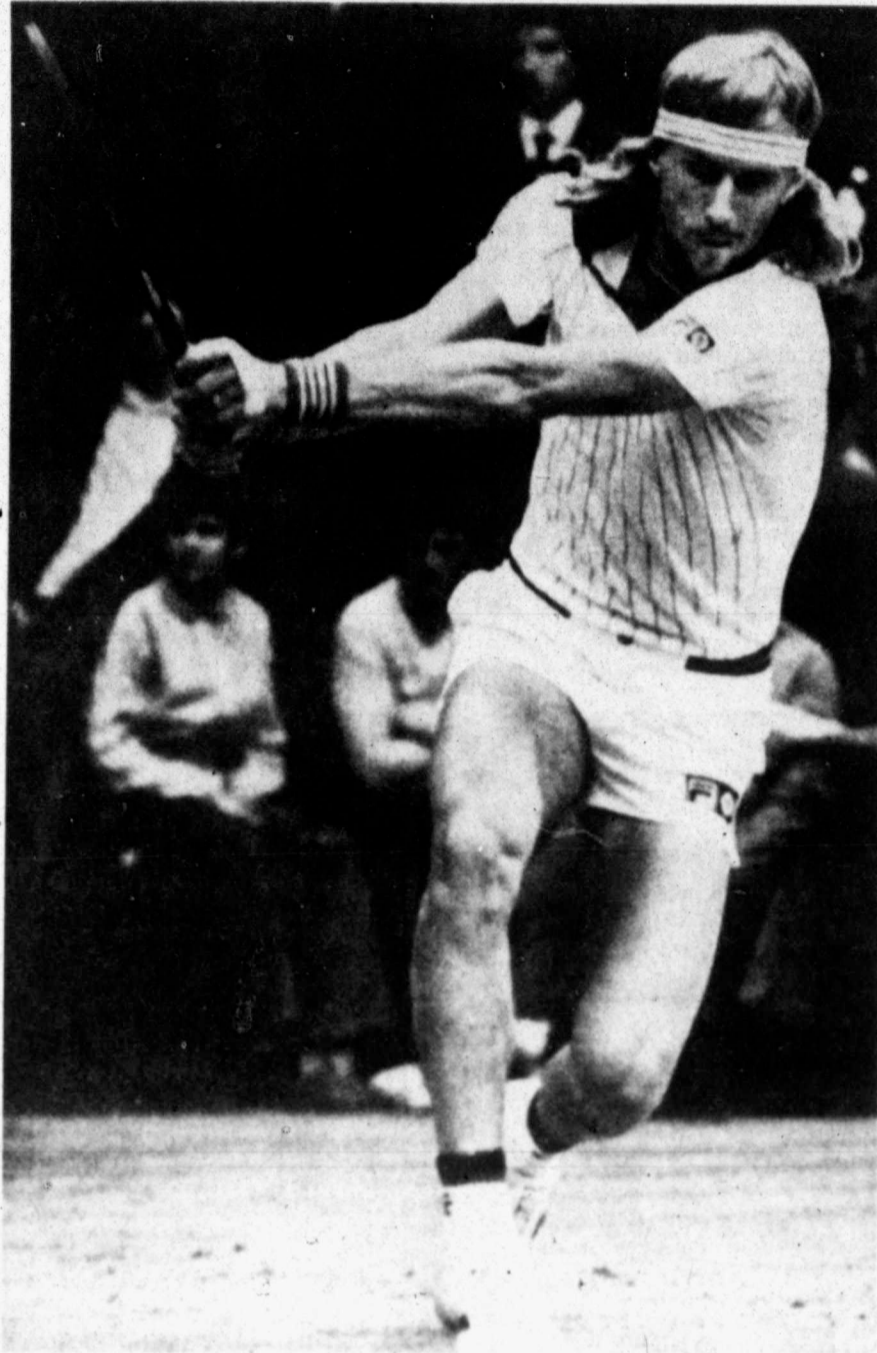

Some of the top challengers for Bjorn Borg's title had difficulty before reaching the final 16. John McEnroe, seeded to meet Borg in the final, saved two set points in a tiebreaker before overcoming Tom Okker of the Netherlands 6-0, 7-6, 6-1, then grumbled about the conditions.

Vitas Gerulaitis, the No. 4 seed, dropped a set before beating Bruce Manson of the United States 6-4, 4-6, 7-5, 6-4.

JIMMY CONNORS also dropped a set before downing Heinz Gunthardt of Switzerland 6-7, 6-2, 6-1, 6-4.

Gottfried's service worked like a machine at times. Gottfried served four times in the third set and dropped only three points. Smith managed only three points in the last four games of the match.

McEnroe's service, too, went like a dream in his first and third sets against Okker. But in between the 36-year-old Dutchman, who was playing his 17th Wimbledon and is one of the most experienced campaigners on these courts, caused some problems.

Bjorn Borg of Sweden is a picture of concentration during Saturday's play at Wimbledon. The defending champion did drop a set to his opponent, Australia's Rod Frawley, but still managed to win, 6-4, 6-7, 6-1, 7-5, to continue into the fourth round of the event. (AP Laserphoto)

In the second set, Okker turned back the clock and played the kind of strokes that have delighted fans over the years — feathery drop shots, deli-catly angled returns and one magnificent looping forehand which dropped on the line and gave him a set point in the tiebreaker.

McEnroe faltered for a while. He missed frequently with his first service and tried a half-dozen lobs, all of which landed over Okker's baseline. But once McEnroe had saved a second set point with a forehand volley, Okker faded. McEnroe won the tiebreaker 11-9 and then raced through the third set.

"You sit around waiting all the time, and you don't know when you're going on, with all these interruptions and rain delays," McEnroe said of the troubles caused to the players by the rain that has plagued the tournament and caused a huge backlog. It was still 70 matches behind schedule at the halfway point.

Peter Fleming, the No. 7 seed, won a rousing match against Ilie Nastase 6-4, 3-6, 7-6, 7-6.

The crowd obviously was sorry to see Nastase go. His clowning and artistic strokes made him one of the most popular players of the week, although he has been in trouble with the British press. A reporter had his glasses smashed as Nastase warded off questions about his recent marriage breakup.

NONE OF THE seeded women still alive in the tournament was upset after four had fallen out on Friday.

The day's bravest losers were South Africa's Tanya Harford and Betsy Nagelsen, the 23-year-old from Winnetka, Ill.

Harford became the first woman to take a set off Navratilova in the championships and broke service to lead 2-1 in the final set before the exiled Czech, seeking her third straight Wimbledon crown, won 3-6, 6-3, 6-3.

Navratilova criticized the damp court, saying, "It was the worst court I've ever played on. I was tiptoeing out there. The grass was so slippery I was afraid I'd get hurt. It's hard to go for a shot on such a surface. You don't know whether the ball will bounce two feet high or five feet to the left."

Nagelsen saved eight match points and pulled up from 0-5 to 3-5 before bowing to Virginia Wade of Britain, the 1977 champion and the No. 7 seed. Wade, with the crowd at the No. 1 court all rooting for her, won 6-7, 7-5, 6-3.

No. 2 Tracy Austin was extended to three sets before eliminating fellow-

American Barbara Potter 6-2, 6-7, 6-2. Chris Evert Lloyd, No. 3 seed, strolled smoothly on, defeating American Lesley Morse 6-1, 6-4. Evonne Goolagong, No. 4, was in trouble against Betty Stove, the big Dutchwoman, but came from behind to win 3-6, 6-2, 6-3. Billie Jean King, seeded fifth and after her sixth singles crown and 20th overall title here — gave 19-year-old countrywoman Peanut Louie a lesson in grass court technique and won 6-2, 6-2.

No. 6 Wendy Turnbull of Australia beat Sherry Acker of the United States 6-3, 6-2; No. 8 Dianne Fromholtz of Australia overcame American Stacy Margolin 6-4, 6-3; No. 9 Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia ousted Ros Fairbanks of South Africa 6-2, 6-4; American Kathy Jordan, seeded 10th, defeated countrywoman Pam Teeguarden 6-4, 6-3; No. 11 Greer Stevens of South Africa topped American teen-ager Bettina Bunge 6-4, 6-3.

Tennis a family affair with Texas Giammalvas

By WILL GRIMSLEY

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — When the Texas Giammalvas go to a tennis tournament, such as famed Wimbledon, they go as a family.

And they all play.

Papa Sammy Giammalva, a former United States Davis Cup player returning to the ancient shrine of the game after 25 years, is entered in the senior men's doubles, with Ham Richardson as a partner.

Older son Tony, 22, a graduate of Trinity University, played in the men's singles, losing to Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia. Younger son, Sammy Jr., 17, is one of the favorites in the juniors.

In all the 103 years of the All England Championships, no family has had members playing in three age divisions simultaneously.

Daughter Mary Jo, 19, conceivably might have made it a foursome but she had tournament commitments back home. She is a sophomore and member of the tennis team at the University of Texas.

Mary Jo and mom, Cecile, are flying here this weekend to join the party from the sidelines.

"Cecile doesn't play," says Sammy Sr., now manager and tennis director of the exclusive Houston Metropolitan Racquet Club. "She just cooks and keeps busy picking up rackets and balls.

"But she doesn't mind. She loves every minute of it."

Papa Giammalva ranked in the Top Ten in the mid-1950s and was a member of the American Davis Cup teams that went against the great Lew Hoad and Ken Rosewall.

He was born 10 years too soon to cash in on the professional boom.

"I couldn't play on the amateur tour forever and still eat," he says, "so I turned pro in 1959 and started teaching."

That was nine years' before the game went open.

Giammalva was teaching pro at the Century Country Club in White Plains, N.Y., for 14 years, doubling in the winter as coach of the Rice University tennis team.

He went to the Houston Racquet Club in 1973 and five years ago moved to the Metropolitan, with its vast facilities for all racquet sports.

Tony is joining the pro tour. Sammy Jr. was No. 1 ranked among 16-and-under players last year and is bidding for 18-and-under honors. Rated the most promising of the Giammalvas, he may spurn college to tackle the tour early.

"That's where the money is," he says.

Records toppled by men, women at track trials

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Versatile Jodi Anderson smashed the American record in the women's long jump Saturday night, leaping 22 feet 11 1/2 inches, and Henry Marsh erased the U.S. mark in the 3,000-meter steeplechase with a time of 8 minutes 15.68 seconds at the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials.

With a record crowd of 16,736 at the University of Oregon's Hayward Field cheering their every move, Anderson broke the record of 22-7 1/4 she had set at Los Angeles two years ago. Marsh clipped more than three seconds off the record of 8:19.3 set by his Athletics West teammate, Doug Brown, in 1978 at the West Berlin.

Before her prodigious leap, Anderson had missed her previous mark by only one-quarter inch, clearing 22-7 1/4 on her fourth attempt in the final round. She got the record on her next try.

Eastern's title dream becomes reality

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

Eastern's First Savings and Loan Cubs have been living on borrowed time since Wednesday in the American Little League city championship playoff tournament at Henderson Field, but after Saturday morning's action, time doesn't mean a thing to Eastern's city champions.

The Cubs defeated Western Mallard Exploration, 4-1, Saturday to win the city title. There was a time when that sounded like a mere dream. Just last Wednesday, Western defeated the Cubs by a 4-0 count in the double elimination tournament and mere survival was the name of Eastern's game plan.

Eastern fought back with a victory over Mid City on Thursday to gain another crack at Western, but still faced the problem of having to defeat Western twice to win the title. And Eastern responded with a 5-4 win on Friday and came back with a 4-1 victory Saturday to win the title. It's the stuff dreams are made of.

matchup after scoring all four runs in the third inning, but things did get a little tense before it was all over. Relief pitcher Raul Pena did give up a run to Western in the sixth inning, but then pitched out of a base loaded jam to preserve the win. It was a gutsy performance.

Western's Anthony Deande opened the sixth with a single to right, but Pena countered by striking out Burt Fisher and Chuck Ankerholz. Pena, however, seemed to tire at that point and walked Kenny DeLaGarza. DeLaGarza then started a double steal maneuver which worked with Deande scoring from third. Pena then walked John Waldrep and Kendall Bowlin to load the bases and put the tying run on first base.

That set up a showdown between Pena and Western's Bill Truitt. Pena won the battle with another strikeout and Eastern had the title in its hip pocket.

George Matta pitched three innings of shutout ball before Pena was inserted on the mound. The pair allowed only three Western hits. Matta struckout four Western batters and Pena sent five down swinging. Eastern virtually won it in the third when they touched losing pitcher Waldrep with four runs. But Waldrep didn't have much help. He gave up three singles in the inning, but there was also four errors behind him, the only errors of the day.

Juan Rivera started the uprising when he reached on an error and Pena followed with a single to left. Rivera scored on a throwing error. Then Tommy Yorkman singled to move Pena to third. Pena scored on a grounder by Rodney Sims and he later scored on a single by Matta. Matta later scored on another throwing error for the final run of the inning.

That was the only muscle the Eastern crew could produce. The only other hit by Eastern came in the fourth when Felix Alvarado single to center, but relief pitcher Deande got out of the frame with no damage and sent Eastern down in order in the fifth. Eastern also went down in order.

The two teams move into game two of the series today (2 p.m.). Midland's Herm Segelke was

Midland Cubs blow three-run cushion, lose to Sox

AMARILLO — The Midland Cubs frittered a three-run lead here Saturday night and ended up on the short end of 5-4 Texas League decision with Amarillo in the series opener.

The Gold Sox struck for two big runs in the eighth after trailing 4-1 after four frames.

Bob Fireovid notched his eighth victory of the season with Daniel Boone getting his 17th save of the season with an inning of work in the ninth.

The Cubs drew first blood, scoring two runs in the first. Tom Grant doubled in one of the tallies and Gary Krug singled in the other.

Then in the second, the Bruins got one more, as Randy LaVigne, who had reached third on a hit and two errors, scored on George Enright's ground out.

Amarillo scored one in the first, two in the second and two in the eighth. In the eighth, Frank George scored from third on a Brian Greer single, then Jerry Johnson scored from third when Midland tried to gun down Greer, who was trying to steal sec-

Former Bulldog hoopsters still remember Berger

I still have visions of Midland High's devastated lockerroom following this winter's district playoff loss to Odessa Permian. It was one of the toughest pills to swallow since I've been in Midland.

However, the heart breaking loss to Permian is probably not the most disappointing loss in MHS basketball history. Twenty years ago (1960) another MHS squad tasted the hurt of defeat and that one could probably be listed as the most infamous game ever played by a Bulldog cage unit.

Mike Humphrey, who now lives in Dallas, and Dick Campbell, who moved back to Midland in the past year, were members of that 1960 MHS team. Both were at the Midland Country Club Saturday night to attend their 20-year class reunion. And both remember that night of infamy.

TO SET the stage, Midland High lost to El Paso Ysleta, winning both the flip and the game, "against a very good team," according to Humphrey.

With 29 games in a row that year leading into the playoffs. They then dropped for a home-and-home encoun-

"I WENT on to play at the University of Texas, and in my junior year, we lost in the NCAA regionals to Cincinnati, the No. 1 ranked team in the country at the time. But that loss didn't bother me near as much as the one to Berger.

Campbell also remembers the moment in MHS history, but time has dulled the hurt he felt at the time. "Oh, I remember that everyone was really down after we lost to Berger, but it isn't something that I spend a lot of time thinking about now. It was just one of those things," Campbell said.

"I don't even remember many of the details of that game, but I do remember that we couldn't do much of anything right. Now, it's a mystery to me that we managed to stay as close as we did. They hit everything that went up and we couldn't hit anything. But winning 30 games in a row is something special.

"I think we had a unique team with Humphrey at 6-8 and (Mike) Marsh at 6-7. I was a 6-4 forward and just tried to play defense. I let them do all the scoring. Also Charles Dishman and Bob Davis were good shooters."

HUMPHREY AGREED that the team was unique. "The whole team played college ball. I went to Texas Neither Campbell or Humphrey felt and Campbell played for a while at Oklahoma while Davis and Dishman both went to SMU."

Humphrey said that he carried the Berger loss with him to Austin. "Joe Fisher came to Texas the same year I did and he had been on the state championship team from Beaumont French in 1960. I thought that title should have been ours, so every day I put the uniform on, I was playing for the state championship with Fisher."

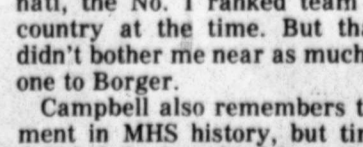

"I went to OU without a scholarship and played freshman ball," Campbell said, "and they told me I might make the team. I even lived in the athletic dorm, but I was in architecture and it just took too much time, so I dropped out of basketball after one semester."

the team was overconfident when they played Berger for the third time that year. "We just didn't play well and they did. I do remember it was a very cold night and we were really down after the game," Campbell said.

Humphrey said, "I spent the afternoon with Coach Todd, and I asked him the same question. He said that it just wasn't meant to be. We got into some foul trouble and they hit something like 75 per cent in the first half. A lot of people don't remember that Berger was a good team. They were rated No. 1 in the state before we beat them the first time that year. It was not a bad ball club, but we had beaten them so easily the first two times, that everyone thought we would have an easy time.

"I know one thing, we all loved Coach Todd and we all do to this day," Humphrey said. "I even have a son named Todd. I do anything in the world for him."

So, it is easy to see that lasting memories and cherished friendships can remain after bitter losses. The high school sports experience really never ends.

Cepeda claims time spent in jail made him better man

CHICAGO (AP) — Orlando Cepeda, a hero in his native Puerto Rico before a narcotics conviction two years ago, says spending time in jail showed him something about America and that the experience has made him a better man.

"America showed me a lot. It's a lot like me actually," Cepeda, once one of baseball's most feared hitters, recalls. "I'm sympathetic to the underdog, the guy who's down. He's the man you can really use help."

"I had lots of friends before I went to prison," he added. "But now I don't have so many friends. The one's I have ... they are what America's all about."

Cepeda refuses to say that Puerto Rico turned its back on him after his conviction on possession of marijuana and transportation of drugs charges. But he does admit that public ridicule there hurt him.

"It wouldn't do any good to talk back about Puerto Rico," he said. "It's over with. I love my country and I always will."

Still, Cepeda leaves the impression that treatment of him in Puerto Rico hurt him more than the 10 months he spent in jail at Eglin Air Force Base in Florida, a minimum security facility.

He feels the Puerto Rican justice system tried to make an example of him because he was so famous, but manages to find some good in the experience.

"I don't say that I'm glad it happened to me. But it's probably the best thing that ever happened," said Cepeda, who now is a batting instructor with the Chicago White Sox. "I've been through a lot in my life and I'm a better man because of it (prison sentence). I try to understand people's problems more."

Cepeda said it is with the attitude of "helping the man's who's down" that he approaches his job with the White Sox.

"My philosophy is not to teach hitting. Everybody knows how to hit or they wouldn't be in the big leagues," the 297 career hitter said. "Slumps are caused when batters tend to fall into some bad habits. Guys get down on themselves and I lift them up."

"My job is to watch them and watch the pitcher and try to help them adjust. Remind them of what a pitcher does in a certain situation and what he can do to get his stroke back."

He said the players have accepted him and that he is happy with the way things are going. He insists he's not bitter about the past.

"I never thought I'd be back in baseball. When I retired I wanted to set up a health spa in Puerto Rico. But all my plans went down the drain (with the conviction)," Cepeda said. "I don't dislike anyone for what happened to me. It was part of life and I'm just going to go on and try to be happy."

Cepeda's first job after his release from prison last year was a two-month stint with the Philadelphia Phillies. He said Manager Dallas Green was pleased with his work, but couldn't retain him because of commitments to other coaches.

"He (Green) wrote a letter to all the owners about the good job I did and the White Sox got in touch with me," said Cepeda. "I was thrilled and happy, because I know I can do the job."

And more importantly, Cepeda said, "I didn't want someone feeling sorry for me. I wanted the job because I'm good for it and the White Sox made me feel that I'm needed."

"The players' acceptance has been beautiful. There's a lot of talent on this team, but it took awhile to get to know everybody," said Cepeda. "They knew me by my reputation. But they had to get to know me as a coach. It's worked out good."

Cepeda's reputation as a hitter should have been enough to inspire everyone to lend an ear. Nearly a third of his 8,000 at bats during his 17-year career resulted in base hits. He was National League Rookie of the Year in 1958 and nine years later NL Most Valuable Player and Player of the Year.

He played in three World Series, six All-Star games and smacked three homers in a game once. And though he didn't achieve a number of milestones with which the "greats" are identified, Orlando Cepeda was more than good and he knew it.

"Looking back, I know I could have done more if my knees hadn't been bad," he recalled. "But sometimes I think about it and I say to myself, 'Wow, I was really something, bad knees and all.'"

Cepeda, 42, retired after the 1973 season. With all his accomplishments, he had no reason to look forward to "my proudest moment in the game."

"It was more than six years coming and the thought of it brought a smile to his face. 'I was proud of my accomplishments in baseball, but my proudest moment was when I put on this uniform in spring training,' he said. 'I did everything I wanted to do as a player, but coming back after being in jail really made me proud.'"

"I'm not bitter about what happened to me. I'm looking for the good in things, not the bad," he said now peering out of the White Sox dugout at Comiskey Park.

"This is my life. This is where I feel free and relaxed. This is where I want to be forever," he continued. "When I die, I hope I'm on the baseball field. That's just how much baseball means to me."

Unknown driver still keeps winning

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Transform John Campbell's harness racing accomplishments onto the baseball field and his picture would be splashed across every magazine in the country. But he's a driver, not a home run hitter, so he labors in relative anonymity.

"It doesn't bother me personally, but it's not good for the business," Campbell said recently.

Outside of harness racing fanatics and those directly involved in the sport, Campbell is an unknown. But the 25-year-old Canadian's performance is turning the sport upside down.

"He won the national title for money earned in a single year in 1979 — $3,308,984, to dethrone Herve Filion. He won the racing title easily at the Meadowlands and then picked up another $1.5 million in purses when he crossed over to neighboring Yonkers and Roosevelt, proving he could win in tough New York."

"This year, the soft-spoken Campbell is racing at an even more furious pace at the Meadowlands. The drivers are in two distinct groups — John Campbell and all the rest. He recently became the first driver to surpass the $2 million mark in one meet and he did that with half the meet still to go."

He has racked up close to 190 victories, more twice as many as runner-up Catello Manzi. And he does it as a catch-driver, meaning he free-lances rather than drives for one trainer. The winning horse in a race takes 50 percent of the purse and the driver gets 5 percent of the winnings.

It's rare in harness racing for one driver to so totally dominate the sport, but that's exactly what Campbell is doing. He credits trainer Dave Elliott for supplying him with top notch horses but it's got to be more than that. Is it his technique? Does he whisper sweet nothings to the horses? Just what is it that's making him so much better than the rest?

"The better you do, the more business you get," said Campbell, who lives with his wife and two young daughters in River Vale, N.J. "People start asking you to drive their horses all the time. I have no answer for it."

Campbell downplays his success, mainly because it's come relatively early and easy. He's trying to put everything in perspective. After 145 nights of racing at the Meadowlands this year, Campbell's share of the purse is already over $100,000.

"Everybody drives different, has their own style," he said. "I don't think my particular style is any better than anybody else's. I just do whatever is called for."

And that usually sends Campbell into the winner's circle.

"The only frustrating thing is when I have some horse I expect to do well and don't win," said Campbell, who trains 10 horses in New Jersey and five in New York. "When the favorite gets beat, that's when the fans get on you."

Which doesn't happen very often when John Campbell is in the sulky.

Whitaker lifts Tigers

By The Associated Press

Lou Whitaker drove in three runs and Al Cowens, playing his first game since a seven-game suspension, belted his first home run in a Detroit uniform as the Tigers extended their winning streak to nine games by beating the Toronto Blue Jays 8-3 Saturday.

Whitaker, who went into the game with a .209 batting average, had three hits, including a two-run triple in the sixth inning and a run-scoring double in the ninth.

Cowens, who came to Detroit earlier this month but was suspended for seven games for his part in a brawl with Chicago pitcher Ed Farmer on June 20, hit a solo homer in the seventh.

In other American League day games, rookie Dan Graham drilled a three-run homer in the third inning and the Baltimore Orioles added five more runs with two out in the seventh in breezing to an 8-4 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Rich Wortham and Ed Farmer combined on a four-hitter as the Chicago White Sox blanked the Oakland A's 3-0. Farmer came on in the eighth inning and posted his 17th save, tops in the majors.

In the National League, Terry Whitfield's run-scoring single in the 11th inning gave the San Francisco Giants a 4-3 triumph over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs split a doubleheader, the Cards rallying for four runs in the ninth — two on Leon Durham's double — to win the opener 8-6 before the Cubs took the nightcap 2-1 behind the three-hit pitching of Mike Krukow. That ended St. Louis' winning streak at six games.

At night in the American League, New York beat Cleveland 11-10 on Rick Cerone's two-run single in the bottom of the ninth and Texas slammed Minnesota 11-3 as Buddy Bell homered twice.

In the National League, Pittsburgh beat Montreal 4-3 as Dave Parker drove in three runs while Cincinnati, led by Johnny Bench's three-run double and Dave Concepcion's two-run triple, defeated Houston 8-5.

In a pair of NL two-night doubleheaders, New York beat Philadelphia 2-1 in an 11-inning opener on John Stearns' tie-breaking double while Atlanta topped San Diego 5-4 in their first game on Bill Nahorodny's two-run homer in the top of the ninth. In two later AL games it was Milwaukee at California and Kansas City at Seattle.

Stepney saves Tornado triumph

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Goalkeeper Alex Stepney saved three shots in the tiebreaker shootout to give the Dallas Tornado a 1-0 North American Soccer League victory over the Tampa Bay Rowdies Saturday night at Texas Stadium.

The Tornado won the shootout, its second in as many games, by a score of 3-2 on successful shots by Omar Gomez, Njeo Pesa and Flemming Lund.

Steve Wegerle and Neill Roberts netted for the Rowdies, but Stepney blocked shots from Peter Anderson, Mike Connell and Jan Van Der Veen.

Tampa Bay out shot Dallas in the regulation time, forcing Stepney to make five difficult saves. The Tornado extended its scoreless streak to 367 minutes without a goal, but won via the tiebreaker for the second time in four days.

Dallas Coach Al Miller celebrated the 100th victory of his NASL coaching career.

Veterans Barber, Trevino tied at top of Memphis Classic

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Miller Barber, a 49-year-old veteran gasping for breath in the muggy heat, birdied two of his last three holes for a 68 and tied Lee Trevino for the third round lead Saturday in the $300,000 Danny Thomas-Memphis Golf Classic.

Barber, winner of 11 titles in his 22 years on the PGA tour, put together a 54-hole total of 203, 13 shots under par on the 7,249-yard Colonial Country Club course.

And it must have seemed longer than that to Barber.

"Man, it was hot," he said. "Coming down that 18th fairway, it was questionable to me whether I'd make it to the green."

Trevino, a notorious hot-weather player in his element in the temperatures that soared into the upper 90s, also had a 4-under-par 68, including an eagle-2 on the fourth hole, and shared the top spot.

"I played pretty good today," he said. "I'd set a goal for myself, to shoot 67 on the first day, and I did it. I wanted to shoot 68 today and I figure 68 tomorrow ought to do it."

But Trevino, twice a winner of this title, quickly reconsidered.

"But you can't tell. Ol' Miller is playing pretty good; 68 might not be his act. We'll just have to wait and see."

They shared a 3-stroke lead over Tom Purtzer, who shot a 71 and had a 206 total.

Jerry Pate, who led the first two rounds, made double bogey 6 on the eighth hole, hit one in the water on the 18th and finished with a 74 that dropped him back to a tie for fourth with Danny Edwards at 207, 4 strokes back. Edwards had a 67.

Another 2 strokes behind at 209 were Bruce Lietzke, Morris Hatafsky and Lon Nielsen. Nielsen shot a 68, Lietzke had a 71 and Hatafsky a 73.

John Adams of Midland was a 222 after a round of 79 Saturday.

The heat and humidity was the most severe on the PGA tour this year. At least one caddy had to be taken from the course and was treated for heat prostration. More than a dozen spectators also received first aid treatment for heat-related illnesses.

But Trevino loved it. He was walking briskly, with his customary swagger, talking all the while, in his journey over the rolling hills and through the heat-collecting valleys.

Bradley's 70 gains command of LPGA tournament

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Pat Bradley charged to a 3-under-par 70 Saturday and wrestled the lead from Nancy Lopez-Melton after three days of the $125,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tour event.

Bradley's three-birdie, one-bogey performance on the par-37 back nine gave her a 54-hole total of 211, one shot ahead of Lopez-Melton, who tied Bradley's one-year-old course record Friday with a 67 on the 6,206-yard, par-73 Locust Hill Country Club.

Lopez-Melton birdied two of the first three holes but later ran into trouble.

The tournament was delayed about four hours by heavy rain while Bradley and Lopez-Melton were on the fourth hole.

The 72-hole event is known as The Sarah Coventry.

Kathy Whitworth had the second-best round of the long afternoon, her 71 moving her into contention at 215 — four shots behind Bradley.

Maureen Floyd, who was tied with Bradley one stroke behind Lopez-Melton at the halfway mark, struggled to a 76 and was tied for fourth at 217 with Ai-Yu

Tu, who posted a sub-par round of 72.

Murle Breer, Pat Meyers and Myra Van Hoose were tied at 218. Breer and Meyers matched par in the third round, with Van Hoose, a rookie, shooting 74.

Cathy Sherk, the first-day leader, suffered through a 4-over-par 77 and landed in a deadlock with Betty Burfeindt at 219. Lori Garbacz and Penny Pulz were nine shots behind the leader at 220.

Playing head-to-head with Lopez-Melton, Bradley served notice of things to come when she birdied the first hole along

The 23-year-old Lopez-Melton also birdied the par-4, 347-yard No. 3, going 8-under-par at that point, but she seemed to lose momentum after the restart while Bradley took on new life.

"After the rain, I didn't feel that good," Lopez-Melton said. "Rain tomorrow could be an advantage for both Pat and me, but I still think I'm in real good position."

Bradley said she enjoyed her duel with Lopez-Melton and expected to play as well during Sunday's final round.

Roberto De Vincenzo leads inaugural U.S. Senior Golf Open

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — Roberto De Vincenzo, winner of the British Open in 1967 and holder of 140 world-wide titles, registered a 3-under-par 68 Saturday to move into the lead with a 215 after 54 holes of the inaugural U.S. Senior Open Golf championships at the East course at the Winged Foot Golf Club.

The 57-year-old De Vincenzo, a native of Argentina and now living in Tarzana, Calif., held a 2-stroke advantage over Art Wall Jr., the 1959 Masters winner who carded a 1-over-par 72 on the 6,617-yard layout.

Bill Campbell, a 57-year-old insurance man from Huntington, W.Va., a former U.S. Amateur champion and the leader at the midway mark, skied to a 76 and dropped into a four-way deadlock for third place at 220 with Julius Boros, winner of two U.S. Opens and one PGA crown, Charlie Sifford of Brecksville, Ohio and Ted Kroll of Cold Spring Harbor, N.Y.

Ed Tutwiler, a 60-year-old amateur from Carmel, Ind., shot a 68 to match De Vincenzo for the best round of the day in the $100,000 tourney and he shared sixth place at 221 with Tommy Bolt, another former U.S. Open winner. Bolt had a 1-over-par 72.

"I felt bad on the first tee," explained De Vincenzo, who turned pro in 1938. "I felt as if I was going to shoot an 85."

"I had a birdie on the second hole (par 5) and that made me feel a little better. From that point on, my game improved."

De Vincenzo, a member of the PGA Hall of Fame who played with Boros, had a total of four birdies, three of them on par-5 holes, the 2nd, 4th, and 12th, and only one bogey. That was on the 14th when he three-putted from 10 yards.

Wall, who will be matched against De Vincenzo in Sunday's final, missed a four-foot putt for a birdie on the second hole, a 4 1/2-footer for another birdie on the 11th, and a makeable putt for still a third birdie on the 12th, said. "There's no excuse. I just couldn't handle it."

"I tried not to make any bad mistakes. The round could have been better, but it also could have been worse. It was a good 72. All I'm trying to do is play smart golf. So far things have been OK."

Boros, who has career earnings of $1,004,861 since joining the tour in 1950, three-putted two greens and needed 3-strokes from the fringe on the 11th hole.

"I'm not putting well at all," said the 60-year-old PGA Hall of Famer. "I've only had four birdies in three rounds and that's not too productive."

Campbell, who bogeyed the par-4 opening hole, offered. "My work was untidy around the greens. I missed several putts in the range of five to 10 feet. Maybe I tried too hard, but that's even a valid excuse."

Chandler ousted from dive team

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Teen-age sensation Megan Neyer, "Grandma" Cindy Potter, and surprising Chrj Seufert qualified for the 1980 U.S. Olympic women's three-meter diving team Saturday night with a poor final dive relegating veteran Jennifer Chandler to an alternate's role.

It's the first Olympic team for the 18-year-old Neyer, a freshman at Long Beach State, and the 23-year-old Seufert, a Californian who attends the University of Michigan.

For the 29-year-old Potter, who holds the all-time record of 27 AAU national competition victories, it was her fourth Olympic trials success.

Chandler, the Olympic gold medalist in 1976 in the three-meter springboard, finished fourth and will make the trips to China and Japan if one of the other girls cannot go.

"I've been there four times and I think I was more nervous tonight than I was the first time," said

Potter, who closed strong with two near perfect dives.

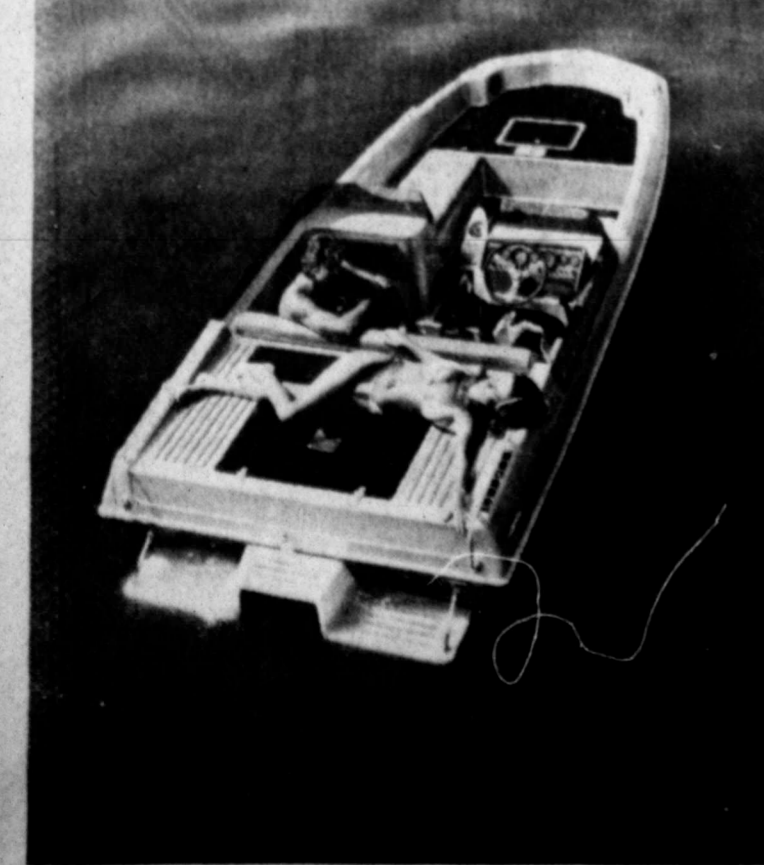

"I was nervous on all of my dives," said Neyer. "It was mind over matter out there. My knees were shaking, but I was consistent."

Neyer scored 746.280 points to far outdistance Potter, a trampoliner saleswoman, who totaled 704.685. Seufert was 702.015, and Chandler posted 688.920.

Kelly McCormick of Missisa Viejo, Calif., was fifth at 683.040, followed by Carrie Finneran of Columbus, Ohio at 663.975, Michele Hain of Dallas 657.570, and Christine Loock of Fort Worth, Texas 637.620.

"I'm going to retire this summer after the meets," said Potter. "I've got frazzled nerves and I've got to get back to work."

Potter has been away from her job on a leave of absence since January, preparing for the Olympic Trials.

JIM MURRAY

Is heavy-hitting Carew baseball's Rodney Dangerfield?

Los Angeles Times

Watching Rod Carew hit is like watching a guy make a watch. Or cut a diamond. Or paint a picture, string a violin.

It's like watching Nick the Greek play a poker hand or one of the great cabinetmakers build a chest. He's an artisan. He's a perfectionist.

You wouldn't figure Rod Carew for a troubled man. I mean, what's the big deal? He makes $800,000-a-year for hitting baseballs. And that's like paying a bird to fly, right?

So, what's with these headlines, "Carew Angrily Refuses To Talk To Press Anymore"? Or "Carew Criticizes Fans"? Why doesn't he just shut up and bat .400? What does he want from us? Look, it's easy, right? He could be marooned on a desert island for 20 years, get picked up, shave — and then go out and go 3-for-4 against Guidry, right?

It's not so simple. Rod Carew is like every great craftsman in history. What he does requires great concentration, painstaking attention to detail.

Rod Carew is as bottled up as a bottle of fine old wine, and he admits it. He carries a tremendous weight of obligation. He feels he OWES it to the world to hit .380. He's SUPPOSED to win the batting championship, now, isn't he? The cabinetmaker who is going to sell to the drug chain doesn't care if the woods don't match. But Chippendale does. So does Carew.

So, Rod Carew puts pressure on himself. The great ones do.

Carew never speaks above a semi-whisper and is so polite, you think he has come to fix the plumbing. But he is a vastly proud man, and the temperature can drop 40 degrees around his locker when he stiffens with resentment.

At first blush, a kid who once swam in the Panama Canal and who is now making $4.5 million on a five-year contract would seem obliged to go through life smiling, if not tap dancing. But it wasn't too many years ago when Rod Carew was winning seven (count 'em) batting championships for the Minnesota Twins (only Ty Cobb has won more) and he took his case to arbitration. He wanted a modest $140,000-a-year. The arbitrator ruled against him. He bought the club argument that Carew didn't hit enough home runs! (Carew hit .364 that year and .280 hitters were signing $3.5 million contracts.) The owner later bragged in public that Rod Carew was "a damn fool" for low-rating himself in contract negotiations.

So, Rod Carew feels it is a matter of respect. Or lack of it. He sometimes feels like a guy who spent his life building a fine piece of furniture only to see someone use it to start a fire. He wonders what he has to do to get credit — die? He sat in the dugout the other night and discussed Rod Carew's war with the world.

The sequence of events, he admitted, was this: on the day before the strike deadline in baseball when a season without seemed inevitable, Rod Carew lashed out in frustration, noting bitterly that this would please the fans, whom he said "are as bad as the owners. They think we are nothing but overpriced egomaniacs, they sit home and put up with the wife, then come out to the ballpark and take it out on us. It's a case of the average fan being frustrated and venting it on us."

Actually, it was Carew who was frustrated. He had come to the Angels with hands playing and flags flying one year earlier and promptly tore the ligaments in his right hand making a tag at first base. After a 12-week layoff, he returned to the lineup, unable to grip a bat properly, unready to play, but, still, he batted .318 and helped the Angels to their first-ever divisional championship and scored the winning run in their only playoff victory.

But, in Carew's mind, he had made a bad cabinet. The outside world interfering with the artist at work again. For Carew, the cork came off. He was furious with events, so he took it out on the nearest group, the fans.

"I don't scream and yell. I keep a lot inside. And, sometimes, that's bad. My wife, for instance, hates it. But, one result is, when I say something, people pay more attention. It's like that E.F. Hutton commercial. When E.F. Carew speaks, everybody listens."

Carew was so embarrassed by his outburst, he took to feuding with the press over it. "I never said I was misquoted. I said I had to accept what I had done, but one writer came up with the headline 'Rod Carew Owes The Public An Apology.' I started to get hate mail, my family was threatened, and security people had to walk me to my car at night."

Worst of all, the strike never materialized. And Rod began to construct a genuine, vintage, hand-carved piece of Rod Carew cabinetry this year, a priceless heirloom that could be handed down to posterity like the others (he quietly got his 2,300th hit the other night, and only two active players have more). So, the outburst was unnecessary — and Rod Carew hates to do unnecessary things.

There's a solution: If Carew will stop assembling those masterpiece Carew years, and start batting .260, he can come out against Motherhood, the Fourth of July, peanut butter sandwiches, and the Notre Dame varsity, and no one will care. But, if you're batting .380, you have to be careful to say something nice about the man-eating shark. And if you bat .400, the fans don't care if you do say they fight with their wives.

Dodgers' Reuss relishes first no-hitter

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — So he didn't become the ninth man in modern baseball history to get a perfect game. Big deal, says Jerry Reuss.

"I just threw a no-hitter!" said the Los Angeles Dodgers' left-hander. "What could be a bigger thrill! I haven't pitched in the World Series yet."

Reuss' lack of disappointment at missing a perfect game was understandable — his consolation prize in an 8-0 victory over the San Francisco Giants Friday night was his first no-hitter and the first in the majors since Houston's Ken Forsch turned the trick against Atlanta in April 1979.

To say he was impressive was putting it mildly. He retired the last 25 batters in a row and even finished with a flourish, getting Billy North to hit back to him for the final out.

The only flaw was Bill Russell's throwing error of Jack Clark's first-inning grounder to short. From then on, only Larry Herndon, with a tough shot to third in the eighth, came close to reaching base.

"It was one of the most overpowering games I have ever seen," said Giant hitting coach and former Dodger Jim Lefebvre. "He was literally breaking the bats in our hands."

The victory was Reuss' ninth in 10 decisions this year for Los Angeles and lowered his earned run average to 1.88.

"He's been a godsend," said a grateful Dodger Manager Tommy Lasorda. "And in all the years I've been managing, I've had never a pitcher pitch a no-hit, no-run game. It really a thrill for me to sit there and watch him. He was awesome."

While Lasorda never had been associated with a no-hitter and Reuss never had thrown one before, both sides had players who had shared in the experience in the past.

"The last one was a bit different," said Dodger outfielder Rick Monday, who played for the Oakland A's when Catfish Hunter threw the majors' last perfect game in 1968. "Cesar Tovar was the last hitter and he fouled off six 3-2 pitches before he got out. This time North hit a chopper back to the ground.

"When Jerry went after that ball it was like a hungry lion going after a steak placed in a cage. There was no way it was going to get away from him."

"As a pitcher I can appreciate what he did," admitted losing hurler Vida Blue, who threw a no-hitter with the A's in 1975. "Personally, I'm glad for him. But as far as the San Francisco Giant is go, I hate his guts."

But perhaps no one knows the feeling of throwing a no-hitter better than Sandy Koufax, now a Dodger coach but once the pitcher of four no-hitters, including the last perfect game in the National League in 1965.

"It will probably be hard to get the smile off his face for a while," Koufax said after watching Reuss' gem. "The next start will be the next start, though. You always hear, 'Can you pitch two in a row like Johnny Vander Meer.'"

"I never even came close to that. Unless you call the second inning close."

Hartung ties

BREMERHAVEN, West Germany (AP) — James Hartung of the United States and West Germany's Volker Rohrvick tied for the men's overall title Saturday night in a dual meet between gymnasts from the two countries.

The U.S. men beat the West Germans 284.20-279.50, and the U.S. women downed the West Germans 187.80-179.

Rohrvick finished second in two events, the parallel bars and rings, to tie Hartung with 57.25 for the top spot in the men's overall competition.

KENNY REDIN'S
Fin & Feather

We went structure fishing for bass in the last Fin and Feather, defining some terms used by professional anglers. Today, we'll look at more terms stemming from the bass' pro language.

FANCAST—Casting in a circular or semi-circular pattern at 15-degree intervals to check out an area.

RETRIVE—Route and speed of a lure from splash down to pickup. Ranges from ultra slow to fast, topwater to bottom bumping.

PRESENTATION—Refers to position of the boat, the cast, the line, the lure and the retrieve. The method used to offer bait to the fish.

HORSE—Getting bass from craggy cover to landing net with least delay or skipping "popcorn" bass across the top of the water.

TOPWATER—The upper 12 inches of the water mass. To fish or work lures in this area by floating or using the "retrieve" technique.

MIDWATER—Water between two and eight feet where most fishing is done, but where the least number of lunkers are caught.

BOTTOM—Surface on which a body of water lies. Or where the brick will stop when dropped overboard. Where the big bass hang out.

FLUTTERING—A midwater retrieve variation using swimming lures. During a slow or medium speed retrieve the rod tip is quickly jerked upward causing the lure to flutter rapidly before the process is repeated. Good lures for this are pinfish, speed shad, pico perch and razor-back.

VERTICAL JIGGING—Fishing directly below the boat, lowering lure to the bottom and reeling up a few turns, jerking the lure up three or four feet and letting it quiver back down.

BOTTOM BUMPING—Knocking on the kitchen door. Using a Texas-rigged plastic worm, jig-an-eel, spoon, floater-diver or spoonplug to fish the bottom.

WORMING—Fishing with a plastic worm, usually bottom bumping.

TEXAS RIG—A plastic worm rigged weedless by inserting the hook into the head of the worm, bringing it out an inch down and hooking until the eye is inside the head of the worm, turning the point around toward the worm and inserting it back into the worm. A slip sinker is placed on the line to provide the most consistent bass lure ever designed.

SWIMMING LURE—Midwater lures designed to resemble bait fish.

SCHOOL—Bass grouped together.

SCHOOLING—A school feeding near the surface. Schoolies refer to bass eight to 12 inches in length.

LIMIT, LIMIT OUT—Legal maximum number of fish that may be caught or kept.

COVER UP SCENT—Not an attractor. It is not believed bass feed by scent, but it is known they are repelled by certain odors.

TRIANGULATION—Method of relocating a hole or hot spot. Choose two prominent landmarks in line with each other. Then, at a 90-degree angle find two or more lined up objects. Make a note and mark the spot on your map for future reference.

LIGHT LEVEL—Minimum depth at which bass can remain during daylight hours without discomfort. Bass do not have eyelids and the eye pupil does not open and close to regulate the amount of light. The depth of this level is regulated by light intensity, as determined by cloud cover, fog, calm water (ripples break up light rays), time and clarity of water. Bass prefer to stay just below this twilight zone, choosing stained water over crystal clear. Bass feed and hold on the side of a channel, point or bar that is darkest.

These terms are fun to read about and interesting. And in the heat of summertime bass fishing, apply these techniques to your fishing...it could improve your creel census.

Florida drivers qualify

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Floridians Byron Weaver and Cary Palmer clocked the fastest time Saturday in the final day of qualifying for Sunday's Six-Hour World Challenge for Endurance Drivers at Daytona International Speedway.

Minter retains middleweight title

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — Alan Minter of Britain retained his undisputed world middleweight boxing title when former champion Vito Antuofermo of the United States retired on his stool at the end of the eighth round of a scheduled 15-round contest at Wembley Arena Saturday night.

Antuofermo was bleeding badly from cuts around both eyes and his handlers advised the referee he was in no position to continue.

Minter, who won the title from Antuofermo at Caesar's Palace, Las Vegas, three months ago, dominated the fight, repeatedly pummeling Antuofermo's face with right jabs.

It only was the third time that Antuofermo — born in Bari, Italy, but fighting out of Brooklyn, N.Y. — had been stopped in 51 professional contests.

He called 28-year-old Minter a "pussycat champion" after their first fight but there was no doubt who was the master in their second meeting.

The Englishman, an odds-on favorite, dominated the fight from the opening bell, connecting with lefts and rights to Antuofermo's face with alarming regularity.

Cheered on by a partisan crowd of 10,000 fans, Minter, the only world champion recognized by both the WBC and WBA, did not appear to lose a round.

Minter, winner of 37 of his 44 pro contests, was piped into the ring by five white-helmeted Royal Marines.

While Antuofermo fixed him with icy stares, the champion studiously ignored the challenger, waving instead to the noisy, flag-waving crowd.

As early as the first round, Minter's jabs were deflecting the bull-like rushes of Antuofermo.

A straight left saw the challenger's legs buckle momentarily, and a series of rights to Antuofermo's head opened up a cut over his right eye.

A string of rights from Minter in the second round bloodied Antuofermo's face, and his corner men did a sterling job to clear up the gruesome mess between rounds.

But no sooner had the damage been repaired than the southpaw Minter's fists reopened the wounds.

Minter was able to ward off all of Antuofermo's clumsy attempts to smother him, and by the end of the third round, the 27-year-old Antuofermo was also bleeding from his left ear.

With the challenger all strength and no science, Minter continued to dominate. Antuofermo tried vainly to get inside to work on Minter's body, but the champion's hooks and jabs to the head continued to ward him off.

At the end of the sixth round, Mexican referee Octavio Meyran took a close look at Antuofermo's eyes. One round later, Antuofermo was sent back to his corner for attention to his bleeding.

The referee appeared ready to stop the fight if Antuofermo's corner men had not made the decision to prevent their man from continuing.

Minter weighed in at 160 pounds and Antuofermo 159 1/4.

Minter, an eight-year professional, won the title under controversial circumstances in Las Vegas when he was given a split decision with British judge Roland Dankin awarding him the fight by an 11-point margin.

This time, there was no doubt, and a live television audience in the United States, Italy, Canada, Mexico and Australia was treated to Minter at his best.

The champion is now set for a lucrative October defense against Marvin Hagler of Boston.

In a preliminary bout, Charlie Magri of Britain retained his European flyweight title by stopping Giovanni Camputaro of Italy after 2:20 of the third round. The referee stopped the fight.

The fight had been scheduled for 12 rounds, but the 25-year-old Italian champion was clearly outclassed by the unbeaten Magri.

Magri landed all the punches in the opening two rounds with Camputaro repeatedly warned for holding.

The 23-year-old champion, No. 1 contender for the WBC world title, weighed 110. Camputaro weighed 110 1/4.

It was the 18th straight victory for Magri. Camputaro had lost only three of his previous 24 contests.

In another preliminary fight, Johnny Owen, 24, of Wales retained his British and Commonwealth bantamweight titles by outpointing John Feeney of England in 15 rounds.

The victory boosted Owen's record to 25-1-1. Feeney was unbeaten in his previous 18 bouts.

Western European countries approve plan

PARIS (AP) — In an effort to remove all semblance of politics from the Olympic Games, Western European nations sending teams to Moscow next month decided Saturday not to attend the opening and closing ceremonies and to shun all national identification.

In supporting the idea broached at an earlier meeting in Rome, the national Olympic committees meeting here were quick to emphasize that "the principle of participation cannot be interpreted as implicit acceptance of any ideology or of any political conduct."

Of the 19 European national committees that met here, 17 of them had rejected President Carter's call for a boycott of the Summer Games to punish Moscow for its Dec. 27 intervention in Afghanistan. Of those 17, all but four of them confirmed they would not participate in the opening and closing ceremonies and would not use national flags, emblems or hymns during the Olympics.

The remaining four — Sweden, Greece, Austria and Denmark — had not made a final decision but were leaning strongly toward the common position, said Claude Collard, president of the French National Olympic Committee, who spoke for the group.

There was no immediate comment from the Soviet Union on Saturday's decision, but Soviet officials had indicated earlier that they do not care what flags are carried into the Olympic arena.

"The national committees of certain West European countries asked for permission to appear under the International Olympic Committee flag in connection with the pressure put on them by their governments," Vitaly G. Smirnov, vice president of the Moscow Organizing Committee, said in an interview last month.

But he said there have been no basic changes in protocol. The countries announcing a firm decision Saturday were Andorra, Belgium, Spain, Britain, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Ireland, San Marino, Switzerland, Portugal and France.

The meeting also was attended by West Germany and Monaco, both of which are boycotting the Games.

Wood is ready to antagonize '76 Olympians

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Al Wood probably never has antagonized North Carolina head Coach Dean Smith in his three years at Chapel Hill. But Wood will get the opportunity Sunday as a member of the 1980 U.S. Olympic basketball team.

The 1980 team will meet the 1976 U.S. squad that Smith coached to a gold medal in Montreal. Included on that team will be four of his former pupils — Tommy LaGarde, Walter Davis, Mitch Kupchak and Phil Ford.

"This will be the first time I've had to play against Coach Smith," Wood said. "He can be intimidating, but I'm looking forward to it."

The Gray, Ga., native came to North Carolina as a forward. But Smith convinced him to move to the backcourt on the grounds that he would enhance his chances to play in the National Basketball Association if he made the switch.

Smith and Olympic basketball Coach Dave Gavitt also felt that Wood's conversion would help him earn a berth on the team.

With the change made, Wood has proven Smith to be somewhat of a genius. Wood is the team's fourth leading scorer with a 9.4 per game average. From the floor, he's hitting .586 to lead the squad.

His sharp eye also paid off in a victory for the Olympians against an NBA all-star team in Madison Square Garden last week. Wood canned a 20-foot jumper at the buzzer to clinch a 77-75 victory.

Wood narrowly missed making the 1979 Pan American team as a swingman, and he thinks the fact that he hadn't played Olympic-type basketball may have hurt.

"I didn't have any experience with international rules and competition, and I didn't know what to expect last summer," Wood said of the Pan American tryouts. "This year, I was ready. I knew they'd be looking for consistency and the willingness to sacrifice yourself."

Wood also felt his ability to switch between forward and guard was a key factor in his selection this year. "It only stands to reason that a player who can play two positions will be more valuable to the team."

American wins

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Michael Dokes of Cleveland knocked down Ossie Ocasio of Puerto Rico three times in the first round to win their heavyweight fight Saturday.

Referee Ismael Quinones Falu stopped the bout with 1:27 left in the opening round after the three knockdowns.

Dokes first decked Ocasio with a hard right hand. Ocasio took a standing eight count but he quickly was sent to the canvas twice more, both times with straight lefts.

Euthanasia position relaxed

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Roman Catholic Church Thursday relaxed its stand on euthanasia in a major document which made concessions to "precarious and burdensome prolongation of life."

While reaffirming the traditional Vatican teaching which bans mercy killings and counsels against "intensive use" of painkillers, the document, issued by the Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith and approved by Pope John Paul II, blazed new trails in the area of extension of life in the light of modern scientific advances.

"When inevitable death is imminent in spite of the means used, it is permitted in conscience to take the decision to refuse forms of treatment that would only secure a precarious and burdensome prolongation of life, so long as the normal care due to the sick person in similar cases is not interrupted," the document said.

"In such circumstances the doctor has no reason to reproach himself with failing to help the person in danger."

THE VATICAN said the document was issued, after consultation with experts, to respond to questions raised by a number of bishops' conferences.

On painkillers, the document said, "it would be imprudent to impose a heroic way of acting as a general rule" and that "human and Christian prudence" suggest for most sick persons medicines capable of alleviating or suppressing pain even though these may cause semi-consciousness and reduced lucidity.

But it said painkillers that cause unconsciousness need special consideration. "For a person not only has to be able to satisfy his or her moral duties and family obligations; he or she also has to prepare himself or herself with full consciousness for meeting Christ."

It noted a warning issued in 1958 by Pope Pius XII that "it is not right to deprive the dying person of consciousness without a serious reason."

THE VATICAN document restated church teaching that suicide is "equally as wrong as murder" although it said at times psychological factors present can diminish responsibility or even completely remove it.

It defined euthanasia as an "action or an omission which of itself or by intention causes death, in order that all suffering may in this way be eliminated. Euthanasia's terms of reference, therefore, are to be found in the intention of the will and in the methods used."

And it firmly restated church teaching that "nothing and no one in any way permit the killing of an innocent human being, whether a fetus or an embryo, an infant or an adult, and old person, or one suffering from an incurable disease, or a person who is dying."

"Furthermore, no one is permitted to ask for this act of killing, either for himself or herself or for another person entrusted to his or her care, nor can he or she consent to it, either explicitly or implicitly."

Lack of water is not a major problem for gardens this summer in West Texas, but improper ways of watering could destroy the plants. Midland County Extension Agent Charlie Green examines his homemade drip irrigation system, which he says is the best way to water in this area due to the high salt content of the water. Mistress Mary, quite contrary

How does your garden grow?

By SANDI BREEDEN
Lifestyle Writer

During March, April and even into May, many "summer farmers" got their tools out, worked the soil and got their hands wet and dirty planting a garden so they could enjoy the fruits of their success.

Well, those who sat in the shade sipping on a cool drink and watching their neighbors develop backaches may have the last laugh. Some of the favorite plants in this area are not producing very well this summer.

West Texas summers have never been known for their coolness, but this summer's heat and high humidity has taken its toll on everyone and everything. Not only are people getting weak and asking for refrigerated air, but garden plants are wilting too.

According to Midland County Extension Agent Charlie Green the hot weather is keeping plants from producing. "I've got some good looking tomato vines," said Green with a grin, "but because of the heat, not many varieties will produce viable pollen, meaning not many tomatoes will be harvested."

THE COOL, ALMOST freezing temperatures West Texas experienced in late April has taken its toll on tomato plants also, said Green. "The early tomatoes planted did not set well because of those cool nights."

And Green's Irish potatoes didn't do too well this season because of the heat. "I planted my Irish potatoes March 15 and they didn't tuber too well because the ground got warmer sooner than usual."

Those favorite southern dishes of green or red beans may not adorn many supper tables this summer either. "The beans are blooming, but they won't do too well if we don't get some relief from this heat," said Green.

There is hope, however, for those who like squash, blackeyed peas, corn, okra and melons, some of the most common plants found in West Texas gardens. "These plants like the hot weather and are doing pretty well," he added.

Green stressed that regardless of those plants that do well in the hot sun, all plants must get plenty of water. "Plants try to adjust to temperatures just like humans do," said Green. "Humans perspire and plants transpire. The plant can't get the water up to the leaves fast enough even though there is plenty of water there."

GREEN ADDED THE transpiration process is why plants look wilted and their leaves are burned.

Well water and city water has a lot of salt content, according to Green, and this can cause problems in the garden. "You want to keep the soil moist at all times, but that's hard to do in this area because sand doesn't retain water," he said.

Green said he prefers the drip irrigation system of watering because it saves a lot of water, of which West Texas does not have abundance, and it also helps the salt go away from the plant. Other good ways to water in West Texas to help keep the salt from doming under the plant is flood irrigation — letting the water run down the row of plants, and planting with dykes.

"If you are going to plant in a dyked area," said Green, "put the plant between the dykes and not on top. Putting the plant on top is a sure way to smother it with salt."

The reason for this, he said, is because when watering the plant, the water goes around the dyke and pushes the salt up.

ANY GARDENER KNOWS heat is not the only problem encountered in raising vegetables. Insects and viruses can destroy garden plants also.

"The curly top virus in tomato plants plugs up the plant's vascular system," explained Green. Symptoms of this virus, according to Green, are plants which turn pale, veins which become prominent and turn purple, and a central stem which goes straight up instead of in the natural curve of a healthy plant.

Green said it is easy to confuse this virus with what is known as sunlight curly top. "The sunlight curly top curls on bottom like the curly top virus-infected plant does, but the top of the healthy plant looks normal."

Like its name suggests, sunlight curly top is caused from extreme heat.

What is the cure for the curly top virus? "Plant viruses are just like human viruses," said Green, "there is no cure for them."

GREEN DID SAY a curly top resistant tomato plant is being studied, as are many other different virus and insect resistant plants.

Horned worms can also kill a tomato plant. Green said he found some of these creatures on his tomato plants last week and said the only way to get rid of them is "get them off the plant and stomp them."

Leaf hoppers, a fly, also likes tomato plants. "This insect's natural host is the tumbleweed. In the early spring, it gets on the tumbleweed and when the weed dries, the insect goes to the garden and inoculates the tomato plants."

Not all leaf hoppers can kill a tomato plant, said Green. "It depends on where you are located in the county and how many leaf hoppers there are."

Squash bugs are in abundance again this year, according to Green. Contrary to popular belief that the infamous "Sevin Dust" will kill the bugs, Green said once a squash bug is mature, the only way to kill it is to "physically kill it." "The only time Sevin will affect a squash bug is when it is still immature."

THERE IS A new product out that "is supposed to" kill squash bugs said Green. It is called SevinMol — Sevin Dust with molasses. "This product is not available in small quantities and consumers would have to buy it by the five gallon and that costs about $100," he said. "Because of this, not many people are using it."

Hot, buttered ears of corn is an all-year favorite of many, but the corn worms aren't particular — they like their corn before it even ripens. "The corn worms are here in force," warned Green, and they are here now.

Sevin Dust will get rid of the worms, said Green, "if you spray the plants every other day. Put the Sevin on the silks where the eggs are deposited."

Wind may cause a problem with corn also, added Green. "When the corn is tassling, sometimes the wind dries the pollen, causing the corn to become nonfertilized. This causes the corn to have few kernels."

In an age when everyone is concerned about organic anything, Green said he believes in having the best of both worlds — chemical and organic control. "I don't think plants without any chemical control are better than those plants with organic control. The plant doesn't know if it is getting nitrogen naturally or chemically."

THERE IS ONE drawback with organic insect control, however. "Organic insect control is so slow that you usually loose the crop before the organic control takes over," he said.

On the other hand, Green said gardeners should not use a lot of pesticides. "Sevin is about the only thing that will work," he said. "People should use their common sense about pesticides. In any given situation, insects can take over, but in this area they are normally not that much trouble."

"A problem a lot of people have is when any plant looks abnormal they spray it with a pesticide. They have no concept if it is an insect or virus."

A solution to the problems of the West Texas heat and wind, according to Green, could be "in educating the folks on selecting a variety that will last through the heat. These varieties are available, but not in Midland," he said.

"The nurseries' suppliers do not offer the varieties and unless we can get somebody locally to grow these varieties, the gardeners will have to send off for seed."

"But," Green added with some pessimism, "I don't know if anything will fruit in 105 degree heat and 10 percent humidity."

Is it curly top or is it not? Green says only time will tell for sure.

DEAR ABBY

'No fool' bachelor should stop fooling around

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Shortly after we were married, my husband's brother came to live with us. It's been five years now, and I am a nervous wreck.

He's a bachelor with a good job, money in the bank, a new car, yet he has no interest in sports, women, church or anything. He spends hours in the bathroom getting ready to go nowhere. He's an authority on every subject and has his nose in everything that goes on in this house. We have absolutely no privacy.

When I suggest he find some nice girl and get married, he says only fools get married.

My husband says we can't ask him to leave because he has no place to go. What do you say?—SICK OF HIM

DEAR SICK: I say you should tell Bachelor Brother that two "fools" who have provided a home for him have had it. And if he's not "foolish" enough to take a wife, he should take an apartment.

DEAR ABBY: I'm an adult woman, employed as an office manager. I take classes at college at night and work weekends as a volunteer in a nursing home. I am also the mother of three fine teen-agers.

I am happily married to a wonderful man who adores me. By the way, I am fat, I know I am fat and I've been that way for years.

Last night I was offended by a slim, well-meaning acquaintance who said, "You don't need that," when I reached for a pretzel.

Abby, I am sick and tired of people who feel compelled to tell me what I should and shouldn't eat. I am fully aware of my problem, and will handle it—or not handle it—as I see fit.

I am convinced that thin people do not understand fat people. I know this person meant well, but if she and others like her knew how their fat friends felt, they would keep their comments to themselves. Please convey our feelings of frustration, anger and humiliation.

Overeaters Anonymous has a rule about not pushing a person into the program until he/she is ready. Please appeal to your readers to honor that philosophy. It's the only one that works.—HEAVY IN HICKSVILLE, N.Y.

DEAR HEAVY: Strange you should mention Overeaters Anonymous. I read the following letter immediately after yours:

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago you recommended Overeaters Anonymous in your column, and it was the best thing that ever happened to me. It saved my life.

At that time I was grossly overweight and no longer cared if I lived or died. (I was strongly leaning toward the latter.) Even with a fine husband and four wonderful children needing and loving me, I felt there was no reason to go on living. I looked like a fat slob and didn't have the willpower to do anything about it. Every time I looked in the mirror I came away hating myself. Then I read an article in your column that turned the tide for me. I had tried all sorts of diets but nothing lasted. I wasn't totally convinced that Overeaters Anonymous was the answer, but as an ardent fan of Dear Abby, I had to try.

Today I am 75 pounds lighter, maintaining my ideal weight, feeling great, looking terrific and loving life.

Please keep plugging this marvelous group. I found people at O.A. who were exactly like me with the same kind of problems. We all work together, helping each other overcome the desire to eat compulsively. Thank you, Abby.—GRATEFUL IN KENTUCKY

DEAR GRATEFUL: I, too, am

Cooking out and cooking off

By WILLIAM G. JACKSON
Copley News Service

California has its barbecues, Maine has its clambakes and Texas has cookoffs. The cookoff, a natural outgrowth of a region that delights in cooking out on a grill stoked with aromatic wood of mesquite, is a contest to reward the best recipe for a particular food.

There are cookoffs for just about everything not eaten raw in Texas, from jackrabbits to rattlesnakes, although chili cookoffs have gotten more national publicity in recent years than the more exotic delicacies.

Many of the cookoffs develop into what might be called "bashes." Quite often they are the idea of a knowledgeable promoter who knows how to turn a few fast bucks out of the attending crowd and sponsoring organizations.

When crowds reach the size they do at Texas cookoffs, it becomes a major event requiring policing by narcotics agents, local police and the alcoholic beverage control people.

Not that all cookoff crowds get out of hand, but the potential fester of trouble is always present these days in large gatherings.

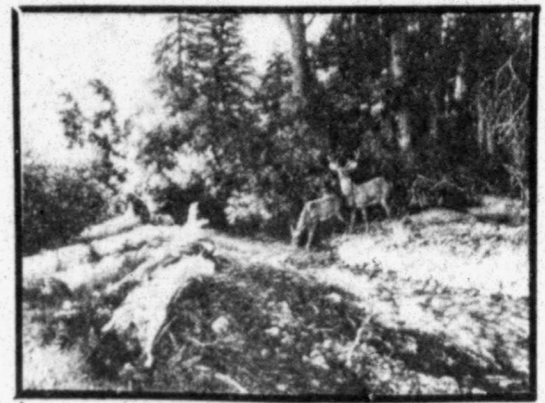

There is a large cookoff scheduled for our recreational vehicle park in South Texas over the Independence Day weekend. It is representative of cookoffs everywhere. It will be the fifth annual fajitas affair, launched initially as part of the country's Bicentennial celebration.

Beef ribs are a popular cut of meat for barbecuing and, when slowly heated for several hours over the heat and smoke of mesquite, are a delicacy that can only be termed "larruping!"

Not satisfied, cookout specialists—as do good cooks everywhere—devised improvements such as chopping, dicing, marinating, stuffing, pounding and spicing fajitas which they boiled, braised, fried, baked or roasted. This does not mean that this year's fajitas chefs will be limited to such prosaic methods of cooking their product.

Of course, the crowd will be able to sample the results once the judges have determined the winners, but the affair will not be limited to sampling the recipes.

Keep car keys in pocket

By WILLARD ABRAHAM, Ph.D.
Copley News Service

Q. The difficulty is our family automobile, or rather our teenagers's feeling about it.

My husband and I both work, but use public transportation to get there. The reason that we do is related to expenses — gasoline, car upkeep and parking costs.

Our boy's high school is within walking distance, so we feel it's not unreasonable to ask that he use his two feet rather than the car.

Because his friends drive he feels that he should, and I guess I'm just tired of his nagging. I've thought about letting him drive once or twice a week. Do you think that may be a good solution?

A. Probably not, for it would perhaps be only a short time until he wants it for three, four or five days a week.

Just as it is with smoking and too much liquor, one of the best things we can provide for our children is a good example.

Obviously it would be best if you could communicate with him through a calm conversation, but although that's a good way to start, it doesn't always satisfy all involved. If it doesn't go smoothly through talk, that's too bad. The next step may be the possession of the car keys — in your pocket.

Q. Do you think it's all right for children to use calculators in school? My husband and I don't because we feel strongly that children should learn to add, subtract and all the rest, and not be totally dependent on calculators.

What can we do to stop this hectic trend of saving time and becoming more and more stupid in the process?

A. It's sometimes hard to adjust to all of the changes in our lives, but we can hardly go back to horses and gaslight. Yet, that doesn't mean that we have to displace all effort with labor-saving devices.

A child can use the calculator and still learn to add, just as we can drive our cars and still walk once in a while.

AT WIT'S END

Give spouses attention they deserve

By ERMA BOMBECK

An actor whose name I've forgotten once said on a talk show, "Husbands and wives see one another at the worst possible part of the day — a few minutes in the mornings when they're pressured and trying to get on with their day, and in the evenings when they have no more to give and are irritable and exhausted."

It's true. How many of you have said, "I know I'm late and I didn't call, but you're my wife (husband) and I expect you to understand!"

We all play havoc with the most precious, fragile, important relationship we have — our family.

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Two exhibitions of early American photographs — "West of the Rockies" and "Edward Muybridge" — are on view at the Elvehjem Museum of Art through Aug. 3.

husband used the same guidelines at home that he used in other relationships?

Do you give your wife the attention you give Abdul-Jabbar?

Do you give her the praise you give your secretary when she moistens the sponge for stamps on your desk?

Do you listen to her with the intensity you devote to your auto mechanic?

Do you give her the same trust you give your banker?

Do you pamper her as you do your golf clubs?

Do you love and protect her as you do your charge card?

Do you share with her the joy you reserve for the comic page or the office Christmas party?

Do you have the compassion for her pain that you do for the kid who parks your car and is going to have a root canal?

Do you have the patience with her that you have with your biggest client who puts you on "hold"?

Do you have the honesty with your husband that you do with your gynecologist?

Are you as enthusiastic for his return as you are when your washer repairman arrives?

Are you as interested in his day as you are with the menu at Baskin-Robbins?

Do you make his children seem as wonderful to him as you did when you explained them to their teachers?

Do you feel his disappointments as deeply as you did with the cast of "Ryan's Hope"?

Do you have the same pride in his achievements as when you got the mold off the grouting in the hall shower?

Do you feel the same glow for him that you did when they validated your parking ticket at the dentist's office?

Do you fuss with your appearance with him as much as when you visit your safety deposit box?

It's something to think about.

Specialist says allergies may not be so common

Copley News Service

Food allergies are not as common as most people believe. That's the viewpoint of Dr. Allan Bock, a specialist in pediatric allergies, who says that much of what passes for an allergy may not be.

"Food allergies do exist," says Bock, a researcher at National Jewish Hospital-National Asthma Center in Denver. "But they're not as common as people think."

Bock says coincidental experiences will often lead parents and doctors to believe a child is allergic to a specific food, but careful laboratory testing fails to confirm an allergy.

In a study of 300 children at NJH-NAC, Bock says, only 40 percent proved to have genuine allergies. Children in that study were administered suspected allergens and placebos in capsule form so that they did not know what they were taking, he says.

Save money through cash refunds

Copley News Service

In 1895, C.W. Post was looking for a way to stimulate sales for their new cereal, Grape Nuts. So they offered purchasers a 1 cent refund. That was the beginning of couponing.

Today, food companies distribute billions of coupons annually. Most are the cents-off variety. These are valid for a certain amount off the regular price of a product. Many shoppers who use them religiously claim to save up to 20 percent, or more, on their grocery bills.

But a great many overlook an even bigger giveaway from food companies, cash refunds. Often, for a refund (label, boxtop, etc.), they will send you a check for part or all of your purchase price.

Among the numerous cash refunds currently being offered is one from Kraft. They will give $1.50 for six proofs of purchases from specific products made by the firm. Yet a person doesn't have to run out and buy all those items in order to cash in on this. People who are familiar with refund offers know that certain companies tend to run them regularly. These include, Kraft, Campbell, Lipton, Consolidated Foods, Standard Brands, Quaker Oat, Green Giant, General Foods, Stokely Van Camps, General Mills and Pillsbury.

Therefore, the smart shopper will save proof of purchases from products made by these firms, so they are ready when a refund offer appears. It doesn't hurt to save a few labels from non-name brand items, sometimes a company will not only require a proof of purchase from its product, but one from a related one as well.

Good places to find cash refund coupons are in newspapers (especially Sunday editions) and in grocery stores. Generally, they are placed near the product offering the refund. Some stores now have coupon bins where people can bring in coupons they don't want and take those they do.

Environmentalists believe easy defeat of board victory for common sense

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM

WASHINGTON (AP) — Environmentalists say the surprisingly easy defeat of President Carter's proposal to create an Energy Mobilization Board was a victory for common sense.

"The legislation just grew into a Frankenstein, really," said Jonathan Gibson of the Sierra Club. "It was a piece of legislation that was so bad, from so many points of view, that the force of good sense just came down on it."

In a lopsided 232-131 vote, the House rejected a complex compromise bill Friday that would have created a three-member board intended to cut through the red tape that sometimes impedes construction of important energy projects.

Opposition to the Energy Mobilization Board came from both environmentalists and conservatives worried about the bill's impact on states' rights. Supporters of the measure said the vote effectively killed the bill for this session of Congress.

A White House official, who asked not to be identified by name, said later that the administration viewed the vote as a partisan defeat, with solid Republican votes and fragmented Democratic ranks. The official said no decision had been made on whether to mount an effort to revive the measure.

Although Republican opposition to the measure was firm — only nine GOP congressmen voted for the bill — other opponents included Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., the liberal chairman of the House Interior Committee.

Opposition came from environmentalists worried that pollution standards would be sacrificed in the rush to produce more energy and from conservatives worried about giving the federal government waiver rights over state laws.

They argued that what started as a simple proposal to ease projects through the bureaucracy, had gotten out of hand.

"What began as a good idea, to cut red tape, has in reality become a monster," said Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn. "It has the very real potential for wiping out important regulations and important laws."

Supporters had argued that a strong board would help the United States shed its dependence on foreign oil.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, urged support for the measure by citing the decision by the Standard Oil Co. (Ohio) to abandon plans to build a new oil pipeline to speed the flow of Alaska oil.

"It failed because there were some 700 permits required by the State of California," Wright said. "It would have saved us 400,000 barrels of oil a day, and the bureaucracy killed it. Do we want that to happen indefinitely?"

The so-called "fast track" bill would have authorized the board to waive federal, state and local regulations enacted after a designated high-priority project is under way.

expenses and other related charges.

In addition, Southland would create a "Permian Basin Royalty Trust," by the transfer of a 75 percent net overriding royalty out of Southland's existing interest in its Waddell Ranch properties in Crane County, together with a 100 percent net overriding royalty in approximately 75 percent of Southland's producing royalty properties.

Each trust would be a passive entity which would receive the proceeds attributable to the net overriding royalties and distribute them to holders of units in the trusts.

Southland to create trusts

FORT WORTH — Southland Royalty Co. announced a plan to create two independently administered trusts, units of which would be distributed to its stockholders.

The "San Juan Basin Royalty Trust" would be created by Southland's transferring to such trust a 75 percent net overriding royalty out of Southland's existing interest in its New Mexico San Juan Basin properties.

This net overriding royalty would be entitled to 75 percent of the excess of gross revenues from production over operating and development

William C. Haverlah has been named general manager for Williams Company's South Texas operations responsible for exploration, drilling and production operations.

He is a 1952 graduate of Texas A&M University and served as a lieutenant in the U.S. Army from 1952 to 1954. From 1954 to 1964, he was in the land and scouting departments for Mobil Oil Corp. He joined Williams in Fort Stockton in 1964 where he worked two years.

From 1966 until the present, he has been an independent landman, rancher and farm operator and has been responsible for most of Williams' land activities in South Texas the last four years.

Dave Greenlee of Midland has been named exploration manager of the South Texas Division, Williams said. Greenlee is a 1959 graduate of Sul Ross University with a degree in Geology. He did post graduate work at the University of Texas.

He has a district geologist with Mobil Oil Corp. and manager for North American Resources.

He has been an independent geologist in Midland the last 10 years. He will be responsible for the direction and coordination of Williams' exploration in South Texas from his office in San Antonio. His main area will be seismic, drilling and production operations in the Giddings field in Lee, Fayette and Burleson counties.

Calvin E. Stone was appointed assistant manager and supervisor of contract and volume administration of Clajon Gas Co.'s South Texas operations, headquartered in San Antonio.

He also is responsible for handling governmental regulations.

Offshore drilling statistics impressive, magazine says

By MAX B. SKELTON
AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Despite a decline last year in the number of new wells drilled, the word "impressive" is being used in describing results of the 10th annual statistical survey of worldwide offshore oil operations.

Offshore, a monthly trade magazine, reports the number of offshore oil producing countries has jumped from 19 to 35 since 1970.

"Twenty-one countries have a flow of more than 100,000 barrels a day, with at least a few of those reporting less than that having the promise of quickly climbing up the list," Offshore said.

"India and Brazil are both on the threshold of moving into the higher category and probably will soon."

Last year's offshore production averaged 12.6 million barrels a day, accounting for 20.1 percent of total worldwide output.

Offshore reports that except for the number of wells drilled last year moderate gains were made in nearly all aspects of the offshore.

And the mood of worldwide explorers was said to be that of optimism despite the momentary lapses.

"And as production increases, and new exploration areas begin to open, the drilling rate seems assured of catching up," the publication said.

"Most indications are the well count is going to climb in 1980."

The anticipated gain is attributed to several factors.

"First is that much new drilling equipment is coming out this year and next, and there are signs of new acreage becoming available," Offshore said.

"The United States has a new five-year leasing program that could provide impetus to the offshore play. The United Kingdom and Norway, dominating forces in the ripe North Sea exploration play, have plans for more offerings of acreage there. And there are bright spots elsewhere on the leasing scene."

In reporting the 1979 decline in new wells, the publication said count was "not as high as it could have been and probably ought to be."

"Since the lead time for offshore wells is anywhere from five to 10 years, the industry should be drilling today for 1985 and 1990 production," Offshore added.

Crude cutoff could come

CHICAGO (AP) — A cutoff of oil supplies in the Persian Gulf could force energy conservation measures more extreme than those during World War II, according to scientists pressing for an emergency energy plan.

And international events could lead to such a cutoff within a few years, they said.

Both predictions were made Friday during the second National Conference on Energy Adequacy, which continues through Sunday. The group released an outline it is recommending to the federal government for the development of a national emergency energy plan.

"We are in a far worse position with regard to planning (for energy) than we were in 1940 with regard to mobilization plans for World War II," said John McCarthy, professor of computer sciences at Stanford University.

Edward Teller, the Nobel Prize-winning atomic scientist often called the father of the hydrogen bomb, said the free world has "no plan" to deal with a cutoff of oil supplies from the troubled Persian Gulf area.

"It is a possibility — and I assert more than possibility — that in the near future, possibly in five years hence, the Kremlin will find a way to take hold of the oil spigot" in the Persian Gulf, Teller said.

The cutoff would result in a 35 percent reduction in U.S. oil supplies, according to Miro Todorovich, professor of physics at the City University of New York.

McCarthy said such a cutoff would mean Americans would be unable to heat their homes and would have to close off some rooms, families would have to share houses and young people would have to turn to dormitory living to save on heating and transportation costs.

The group's plan for the government to "minimize the consequences" of an oil cutoff included: —Government support of development of domestic energy sources such as coal, gas, nuclear power and shale oil.

—Decontrol of oil and gas prices and abolition of entitlements.

—Reconsideration of environmental laws.

—A speedup of licensing for nuclear power plants.

—Prompt replacement of liquid fuels in non-transportation uses.

—Development of a conservation plan that could include rationing.

—Tripling of the rate of additions to the Strategic Petroleum Reserve to more than 300,000 barrels a day.

—Providing assistance and encouragement to Japanese and European allies to shift from use of oil to coal and nuclear power for generating electricity.

The 1979 slump in new wells resulted in part, the publication continued, from a lack of opportunity in some of the more robust drilling areas such as the United States, Venezuela, and Norway.

"They are likely to come back this year," Offshore said. "But there are other significant declines as well, Nigeria is down, as is Saudi Arabia, Iran, understandably so, and a few smaller nations in Africa and South-east Asia."

In 1970, just three nations, Venezuela, Saudi Arabia, and the United States, produced 5.28 million barrels of offshore oil a day or 70 percent of the worldwide offshore total.

The magazine said the United States is still in third position on the offshore producing list but its total flow has fallen from 1.5 million barrels a day in 1970 to 1.066 million in 1979.

"The decline is actually steeper than that because the United States didn't hit peak offshore oil production until 1973 when it reported 1.69 million barrels a day," Offshore reported.

Saudi Arabia is now No. 1 in offshore production "with 2.82 million barrels a day for 1979 and still growing."

"The United Kingdom, which wasn't even on the producing list, or even considered much of a contender nine years ago, rose to second place last year with a flow of 1.5 million barrels a day. Venezuela, for years the offshore leader, peaked at 2.7 million in 1973 and has been in decline since. It is now at fourth place, producing just slightly less than the United States."

Compared with 70 percent in 1970, the combined 5.45 million barrels a day for the three top producers today account for only 43 percent of the world's total offshore output.

Mexico reported the greatest increase in offshore production last year, jumping from 40,000 barrels a day to 430,000 by year-end, a 969 percent increase.

The United Kingdom boosted its production 46 percent, moving from 1,070,000 barrels a day to 1,571,400.

Top-ranked Saudi Arabia moved from 2,621,400 to 2,828,000 barrels a day, a 7.5 percent gain. Venezuela meanwhile was declining 3 percent, from 1,083,500 to 1,050,000 barrels a day.

UT geologist says U.S. short on energy strides

AUSTIN — Although the United States has made some strides in solving its energy problem, those positive steps have not been enough, a University of Texas geologist said last week.

The energy problem was a long time in the making and will be a long time in solving, Dr. William Fisher told a group of UT exes on campus for five days of seminars.

"Unfortunately, we don't have the luxury of time," he said. Dr. Fisher is director of the Bureau of Economic Geology at UT Austin and the State Geologist of Texas.

Energy is a complex technical issue that Dr. Fisher said is not clearly understood by the public and less than fully appreciated by the experts. Energy not only affects the U.S. economy in terms of Gross National Product, currency valuation, inflation and productivity, it also bears critically on our strategic position in world power relationships, he said.

"Energy also is an issue of emotion, without any question," Dr. Fisher noted.

Because of the complexity involved, "our ability to resolve the energy issue politically over the last seven years...has been less than certain. We have really not come to full grips with it," he said, adding that that was "understandable" but not "excusable."

Dr. Fisher said that unless the public and the government fully realize the magnitude of the energy problem and what has brought it about, and the "rather limited and rather tough options" before us, "we will find it even more difficult in the future to resolve the issues."

Although most people date the beginning of the energy problem to the 1973 OPEC oil embargo and price hike, "the making was much earlier," Dr. Fisher said.

In the early 1950's, at the start of a tremendous increase in U.S. energy consumption and a massive shift to oil and gas, our ability to find oil and gas dropped dramatically to one-tenth of what it had been earlier.

"That was a very significant event," Dr. Fisher said.

From that time forward, it has meant we have had to do about 10 times as much drilling to find the same amount of oil, he explained.

By the late 1960's, reserves began to decline. Then in fall 1973, for the first time in our history, energy production started to fall, largely as a consequence of the events that happened in 1953.

Museum gets Phillips grant

Phillips Petroleum Foundation, Inc., Bartlesville, Okla. has made a grant of $15,000 to the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum Library and Hall of Fame in Midland.

The donation will be used in the museum's expansion project, now under way, and for updating of present exhibits.

In announcing the contribution, the museum's president, Russell J. Ramsland, said that the Phillips foundation and company had made earlier gifts to the museum and had assisted in other ways.

"Phillips has been a friend to us for a long time, and this latest evidence of its interest and support means a great deal," Ramsland said. "We're extremely grateful."

Notification of the grant came from E.E. Clark, operations manager for Phillips Petroleum Co. for West Texas.

The Phillips monies, with other contributions, will help pay for a 9,000 square-foot addition to the north of the present 33,000 square-foot building. With exhibits, furnishings and equipment, the cost will run in excess of $1.3 million.

In addition, the museum has a long-range program for updating or changing present exhibits. Two of these, the "Living Map" and geology exhibits, were given new programs and equipment in 1979 at a cost of $20,000.

Reed reports slight drop in Basin rotary rig count

Operators were working 325 rotary rigs in the Permian Basin of West Texas and southeast New Mexico last week, according to the weekly survey of drilling operations conducted by Reed Rock Bit Co.

The count is four less than the previous week which listed 329 rigs going. One year ago there were 218 active rotaries in the Permian Basin.

Lea County, N.M., the perennial Basin leader, remained constant with 42 rigs reported both this week and last week.

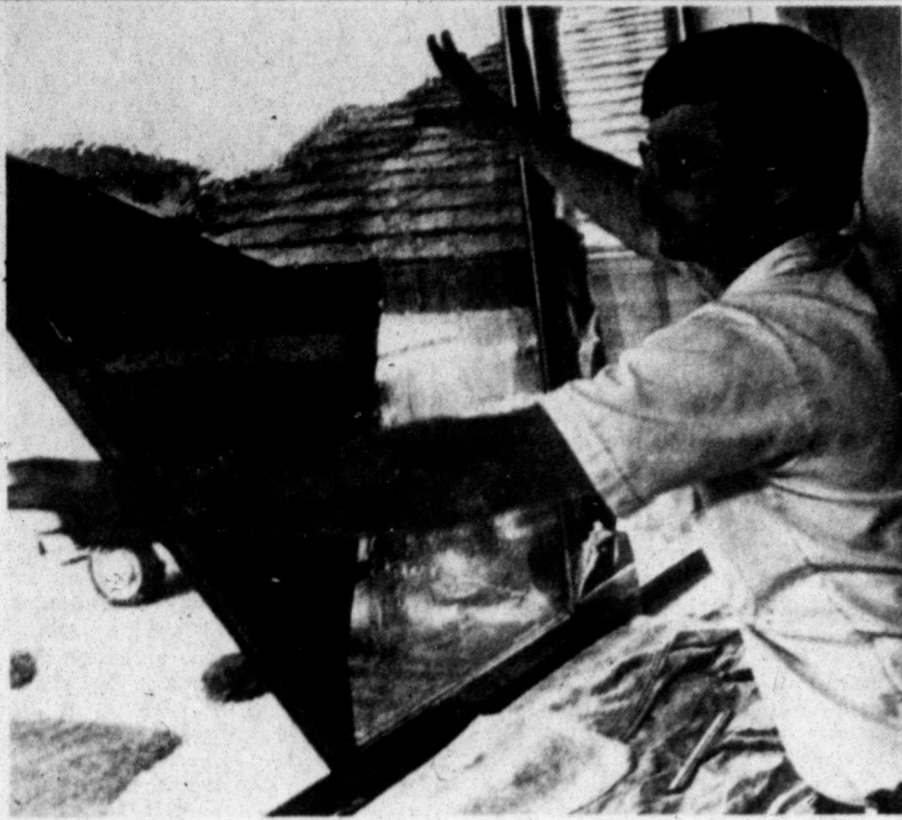

Eddy County, second in New Mexico and in the Basin, counted 36 units, a decrease of one from the previous survey.

Pecos County continued to lead the West Texas Counties with 24 units reported making hole, a decrease of one rig from the week-earlier survey, while Andrews County edged past Reagan for second place with a total of 15 active units.

Other counties with 10 or more rotaries at work last week included: Crockett, 10; Ector, 10; Reagan, 14; Ward, 10; and Winkler, 10.

Sun control film is shown being professionally installed in a residence, bringing the almost incredible benefits of beauty as well as reflection of up to 75 percent of the sun's heat in summer, and up to 20 percent reduction of heat loss in winter. Call 3M Business Products, West Highway 80, at 697-2266.

Let 3M help eliminate the bright sun's glare

Have you ever thought of eliminating your windows to save energy? Seems a bit drastic. We want to see out. And we want the light from outdoors. But, it is true that windows are holes in an otherwise effective insulation system. Glass transmits both heat and cold very readily. If you could keep that heat from beating in and building up in your home or business, your air conditioner would have an easier job. And, during the winter, if you would keep the inside heat from escaping out the window, some of THAT money could be kept from going out the window, too! Well, there is a way. There is a way that lets you have the light, but cuts the heat, glare and fading from the sun. A way to see the outside, but keep the outside from seeing in. A way that enhances the appearance of your home at the same time. 3M's Scotchtint sun control film comes in four stunning colors: Silver, Bronze, Smoke, and Gold. It is easily applied and kept clean. It reduces sun fading of materials as much as 99 percent, depending on the color of the film. Glare is reduced up to 82 percent. Privacy is increased. One-way mirror effect lets you see out, but others cannot readily see in. To learn more, contact 3M Business Products, phone 697-2266.

Firestone cuts benefits for salaried workers

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — About 10,000 salaried employees of Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. will no longer receive automatic cost-of-living adjustment benefits, beginning July 1. Firestone said it is ending the program mainly as an economic move, but also to return to a system of awarding raises for merit. Since the salaried workers were placed under the program in April 1977, the formula has increased the pay of eligible employees by as much as $350 a month, the Akron-based company said. The benefits were won by the United Rubber Workers in contract negotiations and extended to salaried employees. Hourly workers covered under the URW's master contract with Firestone will continue to receive the quarterly pay adjustments, which are tied by a formula to the Consumer Price Index. The No. 2 rubber-maker, which reported a loss of $65.8 million in the first half of the fiscal year ending April 30, earlier had announced it is omitting its regular quarterly dividend to shareholders in July to save $8.6 million. The company said that although economic considerations were the main reasons for the benefits cut, it also wanted to return to "the principles of merit increases" as part of a "more equitable salary compensation program."

Oil Industry Notes

HOUSTON — Western Geophysical Co. broke ground in Houston last week on a $4 million building that will expand the company's seismic data processing capabilities.

Located in the same block as Western's world headquarters building at 10001 Richmond Avenue, the new two-story, 90,000-square-foot structure will house a computer room, a tape library, and playback processing, drafting, and analysts departments. Approximately 300 employees will work in the new building.

TULSA, Okla. — Noble Drilling Corp. has announced several transfers and promotions of its personnel.

The Tulsa-based company, which operates 10 offshore rigs, three inland barge rigs and 34 land rigs, is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Noble Affiliates, Inc., of Ardmore, Okla.

R.G. "Dick" Fulger, formerly manager of the company's central division, Shreveport, La., has been promoted to vice-president-marketing in the company's headquarters in Tulsa.

Lanny Bretches, formerly chief engineer in Tulsa, has succeeded Fulger as manager of the central division in Shreveport.

Charles Yester, who was engineer in the central division in Shreveport, has succeeded Bretches as chief engineer in Tulsa.

Karl Benzer, formerly engineer in the Gulf Coast division headquartered in New Orleans, has been transferred to Shreveport, replacing Yester as engineer in the central division.

Charles R. Copeland, manager of contracts and billing in Tulsa, has been promoted to director of administration.

The parent firm is also engaged through its subsidiaries, Samedan Oil Corp. and B.F. Walker, Inc., in oil and gas exploration and production, and the operation of a regulated motor carrier, respectively.

DALLAS — Phillips Driscopipe, Inc. has announced plans to expand the size of the firm's plastic pipe extrusion facility at Pryor, Okla., according to Guy E. Sutherland, president.

Phillips Driscopipe is a subsidiary of Phillips Petroleum Co., Bartlesville, Okla.

Expansion of the Pryor polyethylene manufacturing facility will enable the production capacity to increase by some 30 percent, Sutherland said.

Pipe produced at Pryor is used primarily for natural gas distribution and in oil field applications.

FINDLAY, Ohio — Marathon Oil Co. announced three personnel appointments.

Harrell D. Chiles has been appointed senior production engineer on the staff of the Houston onshore division engineer, at Houston. He served previously as southern district operations engineer with the Houston division, at Shreveport, La.

Ernest G. Zullo Jr. has been appointed southern district operations engineer, replacing Chiles. He served previously as superintendent of the company's South Coles Levee Plant, near Bakersfield, Calif.

John W. Sims has been appointed to the newly created position of manager, lubricants & TBA supply, at Robinson, Ill. His title reflects expansion of the lube oil and grease component of marketing operations' lubricants and services department to incorporate plastic blow molding and packaging operations.

Sims replaces B.L. Snyder Jr., deceased.

GLENVIEW, Ill. — Kraft, Inc. and Dart Industries Inc. have signed a definitive merger agreement, following unanimous approval by both boards of directors.

The agreement provides for transactions that will result in the two present corporations becoming separate subsidiaries of a holding company that will be called Dart & Kraft, Inc.

Special meetings of the shareholders of the two companies are expected to be held in September to approve the merger.

DENVER, Colo. — Hugh M. Macmillan Jr. was named vice president - Exploration, Southern Region for Energy Management Corp. and its wholly-owned subsidiary, Resources Investment Corp.

Macmillan is based in Energy Management's Houston office at the One Allen Center building until September when the company's southern region office will move to the new Three Allen Center building.

HOUSTON — Bruce H. Stover joined Anadarko Production Co. in Houston as chief engineer. He previously was lead exploitation engineer for The Superior Oil Co. in Conroe.

ARDMORE, Okla. — Noble Affiliates, Inc. announced that its contract drilling subsidiary has ordered the construction of a new offshore jackup drilling rig at an estimated total cost of $37 million.

The rig, a Livingston Class 111-C, will be built for Noble Drilling Corp. by Livingston Shipbuilding Co. at its Orange, Texas, yard.

Delivery is scheduled for October 1981.

Capable of drilling to 25,000 feet in water as deep as 300 feet, the rig will be fitted with a cantilevered substructure.

It will be used initially on a term contract by Samedan Oil Corp., Noble's exploration and production subsidiary, in the Gulf of Mexico.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. — Ronald C. Grundstein has been appointed division manager, Houston division, in the International Aviation Sales Department of Texaco Inc.

Grundstein will succeed Donald R. Mulkey, who has elected early retirement after 24 years of service.

DALLAS — Sun Production Co. has announced two appointments.

T.E. "Ed" Maxwell has been named to the newly created position of manager of operations at Dallas.

He joined Sun in 1956 as a junior petroleum engineer in Odessa, and subsequently served in various production posts in Texas, Alaska, Canada, Scotland and Peru.

Bill F. Brawley, former district engineer at Roswell, N.M., and at Newhall, Calif., will succeed Maxwell as manager, Western District. Brawley will headquarter in Newhall, Calif.

HOUSTON — A registered offering of 850,000 shares of common stock of Moran Bros., Inc., is being made at $30.25 per share through an underwriting group managed by Smith, Barney, Harris Upham & Co. and Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards Inc.

Fifth thousand of the shares are being sold by the company.

Geothermal energy near

LUBBOCK — The 1980s are expected to witness the development of geothermal energy, a source that will provide 7 to 10 percent of the nation's electrical power needs.

Geothermal energy is stored in the earth's crust in the form of superheated steam which can be withdrawn at high pressures and used to operate conventional turbines for generating electricity.

According to a group of geothermal experts who met at Texas Tech University recently, the major obstacles in the advancement of geothermal sources include the extremely high temperatures in the earth's crust, the nature of the hard geothermal formations and corrosion of drilling equipment.

Dr. Samuel Varnado, a geothermal expert at Sandia Laboratories in Albuquerque, N.M., said that "these problems are likely to be solved through research by the late 1980s and will result in the reduction of geothermal drilling costs."

Geothermal energy would then provide "an impressive" 7 to 10 percent of the nation's electrical power needs, Varnado said. That is enough power for 100 cities like Lubbock, population 182,900.

Varnado's research time table expects to reduce drilling costs 25 percent by 1983 and 50 percent by 1987.

Part of the research that will ultimately reduce drilling costs is being conducted by Dr. Necip Guven, Texas Tech geosciences professor.

Guven is developing drilling fluids that can survive the high temperature and pressure deep in the earth's crust. The fluids, among other things, need to act as coolants for the drilling bits.

The Texas Tech geoscientist hopes to complete his work by next summer.

Research at other institutions is aimed at reducing corrosion on drilling equipment by using nitrogen as a drilling fluid and reducing corrosion-causing agents such as oxygen.

Cotton Petroleum well opens Anadarko region

HOUSTON — Cotton Petroleum Corp. has completed a significant wildcat discovery in the Anadarko Basin of Oklahoma and has completed a well in Uintah County, Utah, Philip M. Keeley, vice president of exploration for Cotton, announced.

The No. 1 Unruh wildcat discovery is in section 29-7n-8w, Grady County, Okla. The well was completed without stimulation from the Boatwright sand member of the Mississippian age Springer formation, flowing 2,029,000 cubic feet of gas, with 10 barrels of condensate per day on a 9/64-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 7,422 pounds.

Perforations are at 16,333 to 16,382 feet. Cotton Petroleum has a 37.5 percent working interest in the discovery and holds 1,885 net acres of leases within 3,520 gross acres in the nine-section area surrounding the discovery.

ural Gas Production Co.

Cotton also has completed the No. 1-12 Love Unit in section 12-T11s-R21e, Uintah County, Utah, for 1,812,000 cubic feet of gas per day and 13 barrels of condensate per day, from 23 feet of pay in the lower Wasatch formation.

Flowing tubing pressure is 1,500 pounds on a 15/64-inch choke.

Economists say battle over rising prices far from over

By WILLIAM GLASGALL
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Many economists believe the nation's battle against rising prices is far from over, even though inflation's rapid pace has slackened in the past two months as the recession has deepened.

The Labor Department reports consumer prices rose at an 0.9 percent-a-month rate in April and May — a drop from the 1.4 percent monthly average gain during the first quarter — as energy cost increases abated.

But inflation "typically continues to advance at a rapid pace during periods of recession," said Lawrence A. Kudlow, chief economist at the brokerage house of Bear, Stearns & Co.

The National Bureau of Economic Research estimates the recovery from the 1973-1975 recession peaked — and the current recession began — in January. And Kudlow believes inflation "is not likely to undergo sustained reduction" until 12 to 18 months after a business cycle's peak.

The government expects falling home-mortgage interest rates will help moderate consumer price index advances by July. But economists say inflation still is likely to be spurred by these factors:

— Continued gains in labor costs as wage hikes in trend-setting unions contract take effect.

— Rising gasoline and heating oil prices, the result of international oil price hikes and of the gradual lifting of domestic crude oil price controls.

According to Lawrence Chimierne, chief economist of Chase Economic Associates Inc., wage pacts are showing "increases in the 9 percent to 10 percent range," while "major labor settlements, even in relatively depressed industries, show no sign of easing."

At the brokerage house of Goldman, Sachs & Co., economist Gary M.

present rate of 7 percent," said the economist for the Bala Cynwyd, Pa., analyst and forecasting service.

"In the first half of the year, food price inflation has been held in check by large meat supplies and relatively weak consumer demand. But those same factors have undermined profitability in the livestock industry," he said.

The profit decline has sparked a 6 percent cutback in beef shipments to super markets since the beginning of 1979 and is likely to lead to the first reduction in pork output since 1975, Danie l said.

Economists also don't see much relief at the fuel pump.

Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries price increases in May and June could add up to 4 cents a gallon to U.S. gasoline and heating oil prices.

But the government's plan to bring controlled U.S. crude oil prices up to world levels by October 1981 is adding another "cent a gallon a month" to fuel prices, estimated an industry source who asked not to be quoted by name.

In other economic and business news of the past week:

— Several major U.S. banks reduced their prime lending rate to 11.5 percent from 12 percent as business-loan demand continued to sag. The prime is the base for most commercial loans and typically is offered only to top-rated corporate borrowers.

— Assets of 119 money-market mutual funds followed by the Investment Company Institute rose $1.2 billion to a record $75.46 billion as of June 25 despite declining interest rates.

— Congress passed a $20 billion plan to produce 500,000 barrels of "synthetic" fuels a day by 1987 to ease American dependence on oil imports. A barrel contains 42 gallons.

BUSINESS

Wengowski said hourly wages should rise 10.4 percent this year and 9.8 percent in 1981.

"Even with 9 percent unemployment, wage increases are unlikely to be depressed much below a 9 percent rate, if the inflation expectations of workers and managements are in the 8 to 9 percent range," Wengowski said.

May's price increases would become a 10.9 percent annual rate — down from more than 18 percent earlier in 1980 — if the month's figures were compounded over a year.

But "we are going to find ourselves forced, as the consumer price index goes down below 10 percent, to confront the more enduring rate" of inflation resulting from rising wages, Alfred Kahn, chairman of the President's Council on Wage and Price Stability told a congressional hearing.

Rising food prices also won't help the inflation fight.

Beef and pork supplies are shrinking, and labor and transportation costs are rising, said Chase economist Raymond Daniel.

"By year-end, food prices in the United States will be accelerating at a 15 percent (annual) rate, double the

Exports log drop in May

WASHINGTON (AP) — American exports dropped sharply last month as the U.S. trade deficit rose steeply, the Commerce Department says.

Figures released Friday showed U.S. firms exported $17.6 billion worth of merchandise in May, a drop of 4.3 percent from April and the biggest one-month decline in almost two years. Imports rose 6.4 from April to May.

The $3.9 billion deficit was more than double April's $1.8 billion deficit but still far below last February's record $5.57 billion deficit.

Despite the figures, Commerce Department analyst David Lund said the situation was "lightly positive." But he agreed that the increase in imports and decline in exports during a recession runs counter to intuition.

"I don't see any major weaknesses in exports," said Lund. He noted that almost all the net drop in the value of exports could be accounted for by the decline in shipments of gold and non-ferrous metals, particularly silver.

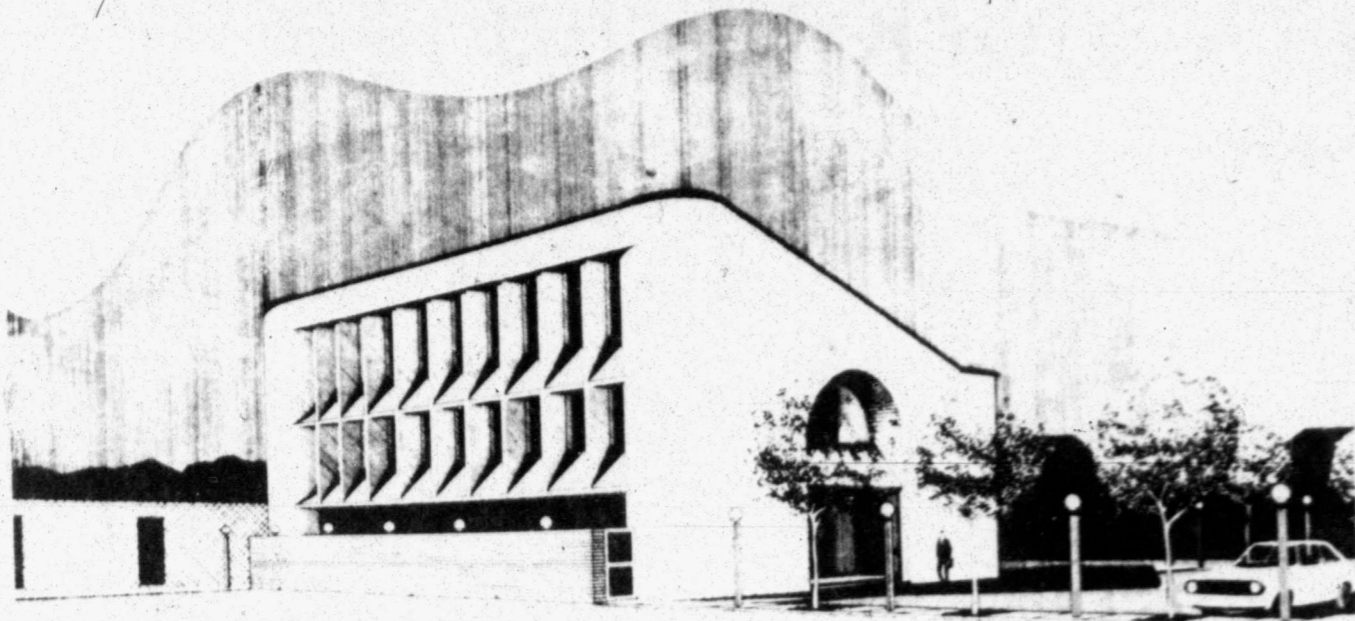

Another analyst said President Carter's embargo on grain shipments to the Soviet Union was the big factor in the decline of wheat and corn exports. The value of wheat shipments dropped $55.2 million, to $417.7 million, and corn fell $141.8 million to $535.1 million.

But overall, U.S. agricultural exports in May exceeded imports by $1.6 billion, down from $1.9 billion in April.

The values of 16 of the 25 exported commodities counted in the report fell in May, most by small amounts. The value of the other nine rose.

The value of oil imported last month rose 1.5 percent. Volume increased from 6.4 million barrels a day in April to 6.8 million, partially because May has one more day than April.

The price of imported oil increased 10 cents a barrel to $32.38 — a rise Lund said was the smallest in more than two years.

Construction is underway on a building for Carl F. Lawrence & Associates. It is adjacent to the present CFL&A Building in the 1400 block of West Wall Street. The 3-story structure will include ground floor office space, a second-floor studio area and the third-floor loft area. The passive solar design is by Doug Burleson with Burleson Architects of Midland. Rod Stevenson of Midland is the general contractor. The building will contain 13,000 square feet of working space.

Stock Market believed in good shape

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Considering the storms it has had to weather, the stock market is approaching the midway point of 1980 in remarkably good condition.

Since last winter, the financial world has been buffeted by a crisis in the silver market, the onset of a sharp recession and the widest swings ever seen in interest rates.

But with one trading session remaining in June, all the major stock averages show sizable gains for the year to date.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, with a 12.12 gain to 881.83 in the past week, stands 43.09 points, or about 5 percent, above its 1979 close of 838.74.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index, up 1.14 at 66.34 on the week, shows a 7 percent gain for the year so far. And the American Stock Exchange market value index, up 11.64 at 296.76 for the week, is about 23 percent higher than it stood at New Year's.

The progress those indicators have made has been anything but slow and steady. Stock prices shot upward early in the year amid a near-panic over spiraling inflation.

They took a steep drop in late winter and early spring as the focus of attention shifted to a rapidly developing recession.

And then they rallied again as interest rates, which had been rising steadily for more than two years, peaked at record levels and abruptly fell.

In this volatile climate, stock trading volume has been the heaviest on record. Turnover at the NYSE is already well past 5 billion shares for the year, and seems certain to surpass the previous high of 8.2 billion set in 1979.

If the first half of the year offered a little something for everybody, there is an equal range of choices — from heady optimism to deep gloom — in Wall Street forecasts for the remaining six months.

Somewhere in the middle is the investment policy committee at Goldman, Sachs & Co., which recently reported: "We find ourselves somewhat ambivalent in the sense that we are not particularly bullish or bearish about current market prospects."

Though the firm sees the potential for considerable further gains in stock prices, it also maintains, "More evidence as to the length and depth of the recession and decline in corporate profits and, most importantly, some tangible evidence as to the type of fiscal and monetary policy responses to the current recession seem necessary before this potential can be realized."

In the midyear forecast, Standard & Poor's Corp. analysts expressed some similarly mixed feelings.

They predict that prices will be 10 to 15 percent higher than their recent levels by the end of the year, with the caveat:

"The path, however, will be crooked. Sharp and potentially unnerving moves in both directions, as were experienced in the first half, can be expected. Indeed, a period of backsliding seems to lie just ahead."

"Sharply lower interest rates and surprisingly favorable inflation reports have taken the sting out of the economic recession as far as investors are concerned. But these positive forces may exhaust themselves temporarily.

Funds transfer accounts problems being solved

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Officials at the Texas Savings and Loan Department and Federal Home Loan Bank, Little Rock, Ark., appear to be resolving some of their differences over use of automatic funds transfer accounts by savings and loan associations in Texas.

Some two weeks ago, it appeared the matter was on the way to the courthouse (and it still could be) after Joseph E. Settle, president of the Little Rock agency, ordered associations to stop use of such accounts by June 16.

Some 18-20 associations in Texas were then offering such systems, which consisted of two accounts, between which funds could be transferred.

Settle pointed to an opinion from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to the effect that such accounts amounted to a subterfuge to allow payment of interest on checking accounts — while savings and loan officials argued that recently passed legislation, which permits the so-called "NOW accounts" (negotiable order of withdrawal) as of Jan. 1, amounted to authorization for the automatic funds transfer accounts.

Texas officials had issued "no-objection" letters allowing such accounts.

Savings and Loan Commissioner Alvis Vandygriff asked Settle for a clarification on the earlier order from Little Rock — with Settle replying that such accounts won't be considered illegal if they don't involve payment of interest.

And Settle also indicated it will be permissible for associations to operate "NOW" accounts on a pilot basis — as long as those accounts are restricted to officers and employees of the association making the test — before Jan. 1.

Left open, however, was the question of what role the State department would play in cases where

Little Rock feels its order is being violated — with Settle having indicated earlier he would seek a cease-and-desist order from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board against any violator.

"NOW" accounts, amounting to interest-bearing checking accounts, also are coming in for attention from banks — which want to know how to price such measures.

Sam Kimberlin, Texas Bankers Association, notes 400 bankers attend TBA's Austin seminar on "NOW" accounts, with over twice that many expected at sessions planned in Houston and Dallas.

TBA also plans a workshop in August to cover bank reserves required under PL-96221, the new financial institutions reorganization act.

Basically, Kimberlin explains, the new law provides for state-chartered institutions not members of the Federal Reserve System to put up more reserves than in the past, while reserves for members of the system will be reduced.

But the ins and outs of that are "quite complex," he notes, as are the regulations on the subject.

In another area involving savings and loan associations, talk has revived on creation of state-sponsored insurance accounts — an issue which has come up repeatedly, including during the last legislative session.

Durward Curlee, executive vice president, Texas Savings and Loan League, says the League "as a trade association" hasn't taken any position on seeking legislation for such a program — although some members are interested.

"Everyone knows the advantages of it," Curlee says — reporting such a system would be cheaper and safer for Texas associations, because the "really high risks" are located outside Texas.

By going to such a plan, Texas associations would be "getting out of the general pool and into a special pool," he comments.

But he also agrees that "the Sharpstown thing" — the 1970-vintage scandal involving proposals for state insurance of accounts for banks — is likely to make such a program difficult to pass, if it is ever proposed.

"It's unfortunate that an excellent economic idea got involved with a scandal," Curlee says.

"On a theoretical basis," he adds, "we'd like to see it happen — but there are no plans to take on any kind of bill right now."

Curlee also notes that while a guaranty program — under which each member of the insuring group agrees to make good the losses of another member — would be possible by statute, but says that having the state as the insurer, with the "full faith and credit" backing which he feels desirable, would require a constitutional amendment.

Curlee also sees the possibility of renewed efforts in 1981 to allow homeowners to borrow against the equity in their homes — something which can't be done now if the home is designated as a homestead.

That, too would require a constitutional amendment — and last year's legislature balked at approving one.

No magic solutions

President Jimmy Carter apparently is playing for big stakes in his bid for re-election.

His administration's plan to cut the inflation rate is working, gradually, but as the inflation rate begins to descend from its record heights unemployment is growing. For President Carter that's a nagging worry he'll soon have to address.

Carter isn't the only president of modern times who's been confronted with the double dilemma — inflation and unemployment. In fact, few presidents in the past couple of decades have escaped those two troublesome economic woes.

Things are better now, of course, in the United States than they were a few months back. Early in the year, you'll recall, inflation was recorded at an annual rate of 18 percent and people began to scream.

The economic screws were applied and — now — things are beginning to look up. Prices appear to be stabilizing somewhat. But today's double-digit inflation remains too high.

But that other problem — largely a political one — is raising its ugly head. Unemployment is increasing and threatening to pose yet another obstacle to Carter's re-election, as if he doesn't already face enough obstacles.

This isn't intended to imply that the inflation-unemployment problem is an easy one that simply isn't being addressed. The economic problems in this country are difficult, complicated ones. But they are problems that must be addressed regardless of the political consequences.

Carter no doubt knows that he's taking a big chance politically with his economic medicine. He is, without question, torn currently between the desire to loosen the economic vise to provide suffering Americans — who also happen to be voters — some degree of recession relief. Such a move, though, could cut short the deflation of prices which, in turn, could fuel more runaway inflation.

If that occurred, the president likely would feel the backlash of the voters at the polls in November.

But if he chooses not to provide that recessionary relief and instead to go for the full benefit of a reduction in the inflation rate, Carter would stand the chance of alienating some voters who would not hesitate at lashing out at him when they go to the polls.

For Carter it's a difficult situation with no easy answers. One thing is for certain, however, the voters of this nation want long-term action for the economy and they won't take no for an answer.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, June 29, the 181st day of 1980. There are 185 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: In 1967, Israel defied international protests and united the divided city of Jerusalem for the first time in two decades, following victory in the Six-Day War.

On this date: In 1577, Flemish painter Peter Paul Rubens was born.

In 1776, Virginia adopted a state constitution, and Patrick Henry was made governor.

In 1966, the United States bombed Hanoi and Haiphong, North Vietnam's capital and principal port, for the first time in the Vietnam War.

In 1973, former White House counsel John Dean ended his testimony before the Senate Watergate Committee, unshaken from his claim that President Richard Nixon took part in the scandal cover-up.

Ten years ago, the last American

NICK THIMMESCH

Who provides the best service for airline passengers?

WASHINGTON — In a world where American firms no longer lord the market and are pressed hard to compete, one wonders about the quality we show, particularly in something as visible as airline service.

Seeing a U.S. flag carrier overseas can make you think of all the competing airlines in the world, and how well our Americans compare in giving service. No nation has better pilots, planes or maintenance than the U.S., but passengers, domestic or international, have come to assume these basic requirements are standard.

Service — the way people take care of you — usually makes the difference. Historically, Europeans were better at it than we were. Americans somehow got the idea that democracy is compromised if the employee bows and scrapes for the customer.

So it is even fair to expect flight attendants on U.S. airlines to tend to passengers as European attendants do, or even to approach the sort of pleasing service happily given by Asian carriers like the national airlines of Japan and Singapore? After all, we Americans affect egalitarianism, and also practice unionism and now, women's rights. The Asian mentality is different.

Still, I wonder about the kind of service I witnessed on a recent long, international flight with Pan-Am. I cannot argue that it was typical of Pan-Am, but it seemed typically American. I was flying first-class — a rare occasion for me — and probably expected more.

Anyway, one attendant provided nominal service at best, and seemed the airline, it was the age difference, the older attendants being more professional and attentive. But I checked with various airlines, and was told, on authority, that there are 21-year-olds who smother people with hospitality, 60-year-olds who do the same, and others of the same ages who couldn't care less about passengers.

All the airlines claim that they discipline attendants who goof off or aren't courteous. But how can the airlines really prove such charges? And doesn't one day just melt into the next, with passengers forgetting poor service or even rudeness?

There are 55,000 flight attendants working for U.S. airlines. Back in 1960, when there were 10,640, they were called stewardesses and stewards. Even in 1970, when there were 35,000, they were virtually all young-ish women. But today, after civil rights cases and a changed attitude by the airlines, 10 percent of the attendants are male; the average age has risen to 30, and married and even pregnant women are allowed to fly as attendants.

Beginners make from $13,000 to $18,000 the first year, and several years later, can make up to $25,000, depending on whether they want to fly more than 67 hours a month. Senior attendants on overseas flights can make up to $42,000 a year. There are all manner of incentives, and on assignment, attendants are even paid $1.25 an hour extra when they are sleeping in some hotel.

Once, stewardesses had to retire at 32, but today, nearly all flight attendants can work until age 65 and beyond. Indeed, Pan-Am recently feted

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

1980 campaign promises to get rougher

WASHINGTON — Jimmy Carter made good his boast of last summer — that he'd whip Kennedy's you-know-what in the battle for the Democratic presidential nomination — by a simple but effective technique: He made Ted Kennedy the issue in the primary campaigns.

It was a low-level campaign of personal attack by not so subtle innuendoes, which reminded voters of the skeletons in the Massachusetts senator's closet — the Chappaquiddick tragedy and his marital difficulties. The purpose was two-fold: It took the public's attention away from Carter's dismal record in office, and it was safe from retaliation in kind, since Carter had no known personal scandals that could be dredged up.

The strategy worked, mainly because the media proved a willing, indeed enthusiastic, puppet for the president's political manipulators. The press obligingly trumpeted Carter's line that the crises in Iran and Afghanistan prevented him from debating Kennedy on the issues — followed later by his preposterous announcement that the Iranian rescue fiasco had miraculously rendered the international problems "manageable" enough for him to campaign actively.

The vilification of his opponent may prove to have been a costly way of winning renomination, however. The personal acrimony between Kennedy and Carter has extended to their campaign staffs and even to their wives, according to my sources. First lady Rosalynn Carter, in particular, is reported to be implacable in her dislike of the Kennedys.

At the staff level, the young Georgians in the White House seem determined to humiliate Kennedy at the life is as spotless as Carter's own, the subliminal message in the Carter campaign, sources say, will be that Reagan is too old and tired to handle the grueling tasks required of a president.

If all this seems distressingly sordid, it should be noted that mudslinging is one of the oldest traditions in American presidential campaigns. In fact, the 1980 campaign has been mild compared to some in the country's more boisterous past.

Putting the current campaign in perspective, my researcher Jack Lyman has catalogued some of the juicier examples of name-calling, slander and other personal attacks used in earlier battles for the White House. Some of them make today's sly innuendoes look downright namby-pamby.

Abraham Lincoln was publicly vilified in the following explicit terms by various opponents: drunkard, buffoon, ape, fiend, ghost, ignoramus, lunatic, murderer, Negro, outlaw and (almost politely) vulgar weakling. Some of the choicest epithets, incidentally, were flung by members of his own party.

Thomas Jefferson was accused of being personally dishonest and immoral and of having sired numerous children by his slave concubines. On a slightly higher plane, he was charged with being an agent of Napoleon, planning to overthrow the Republic and plotting the destruction of all property rights.

Martin Van Buren was smeared as an effete snob who used eau de cologne and laced himself up in corsets. His accuser was that rip-roaring frontiersman and one-time congressman, Davy Crockett.

Grover Cleveland was accused of fathering an illegitimate child — and he admitted it. "Ma, Ma, where's my Pa?" chanted the Republicans, to which, after Cleveland was elected, the Democrats responded, "Gone to the White House, ha, ha, ha!"

James G. Blaine, the "plumed knight" who ran against Cleveland in 1884, was accused of shady manipulations in railroad stock while in the Senate. Unlike Cleveland, he would not admit it. So he was the target of this Democratic doggerel: "Blaine, Blaine, James G. Blaine: The continental liar from the state of Maine!" And a fellow Republican wrote that Blaine "had wallowed in spoils like a rhinoceros in an African pool," which inspired political cartoonists and delighted the public.

In these tamer times, one recalls Interior Secretary Harold Ickes' devastating punditisms of two men who challenged his boss, Franklin Roosevelt: Indiana-born utilities tycoon Wendell Willkie, "the barefoot boy from Wall Street," and short, mustachioed Tom Dewey, "the little man on the wedding cake."

It remains to be seen whether this year's presidential campaign rhetoric will reach the level of vituperation or wit shown in earlier elections, but it seems unlikely. More's the pity.

ART BUCHWALD

Man waiting in Tabas spoiled rescue mission

WASHINGTON — They recently assigned a panel of retired generals and admirals to find out what went wrong in the hostage rescue attempt in Iran. I can't think of a more objective board of investigators.

I have read as much as I could on the subject and, while I don't claim to be an expert, I have my own theory as to why the mission failed, and I hope the senior officers devote some time to it.

To me, it was all over the minute that tourist bus came down the road on its way to Tabas, just when the helicopters and C-130s were landing for refueling.

Let's replay the scenario that would have taken place if all the helicopters were operating. Remember that this was a 48-hour operation and depended on the element of complete surprise.

It is several hours after the bus has been stopped. The 31 Iranian tourists have all been herded onto a C-130 and flown off to some airfield in Egypt.

Muhammed Khaffi, the owner of the Shepphound Bus Line, is waiting impatiently in Tabas for his bus to arrive. When it is five hours late, he goes to an official of the Revolutionary Council and says, "Something has happened, my bus is late."

Karim Jalil says, "Your bus is always late. It probably broke down in the desert."

"That is what I'm afraid of," Muhammed says. "I have tourists aboard, and if they have broken down in the desert they could all die, and I will have to pay for their hotel rooms in Tabas.

Art Buchwald

"So what do you want us to do?"

"Please go with me in a jeep down the road, and see if we can find it."

"You must be crazy. We don't have time to bounce all over the place looking for one of your buses."

"But we need the bus to take our students to next Friday's anti-American demonstration in Tehran."

"I forgot about that. All right, Muhammed, I will find your bus."

Karim then orders three of his men and Muhammed into their jeep. They start driving down the road from Tabas to Tehran. Every time they are about to turn back, Muhammed urges them to go a little further. Finally, they arrive at Poosh-e-Badam, the site of the airfield the Americans used for refueling. The bus is there, but there are no passengers.

Muhammed bursts into tears. "They have all left. They will never use Shepphound again."

One of Karim's men shouts, "Look, there are tracks leading to the airfield." The five men follow the tracks. "It appears that they were picked up in a large airplane."

Karim looks sternly at Muhammed. "Are you sure your bus was not used to help the enemies of the revolution escape?"

Muhammed cries, "May Allah be my witness, they were tourists!"

The men walk around the airfield. They find all sorts of equipment, as well as fresh fuel on the ground. Karim says, "Something is rotten in Denmark. We better let Tehran know about the bus and all the airplane activity. I can't believe anyone would go to so much trouble to kidnap 31 Iranian tourists!"

From that moment on, everyone in the Iranian capital has been alerted, and while the commandos are putting their act together in the mountain hideouts they were flown to, the element of surprise has been lost.

So, if the admirals and generals are going to be thorough in their investigation, the place to start is with the intelligence person who assured everyone there was no chance of any traffic being on the road where the rescue team would refuel. Anyone who reads thrillers knows that when you have 48 hours to pull off a sneak attack, the last thing you want to deal with is a bonload of tourists, particularly if someone is waiting for it in Tabas.

Let us try to come up with some reasons for selling uranium to India.

1— We might as well, since their nuclear power plants have less restraints than ours. This is because Jane Fonda doesn't like the climate over there.

2— A nuclear explosion would help solve India's population problem.

3— India has failed to accept any international safeguard. India has set off nuclear explosions before, and when it comes to signing a test ban treaty, Indira Gandhi can't find a pen.

4— Although there is no guarantee that India will use this material responsibly, the Administration wants to sell them 28 tons of enriched uranium. It's the old gun lobby logic: Everybody has the right to bear arms. Even your crazy neighbor who couldn't hit a bull with a bass fiddle.

German foundation's published test results help buyers

BONN, West Germany (AP) — In West Germany, when the results of tough tests on new products are published each month, manufacturers and retailers brace for consumer reaction.

After one poor rating, the maker of a German sparkling wine was flooded with 250,000 bottles sent back by dealers.

Such is the power of the highly regarded Foundation for Product Testing, which runs the tests.

"Products that test 'good' or 'very good' are practically assured of heavy sales. Those that get a 'defective' rating quickly disappear from the market," said the Foundation's Juergen Teves.

The tests, some say, have made West German consumers perhaps the world's most knowledgeable people on household gadgets and services such as insurance and banking.

Rising consumer awareness in West

Germany has paralleled the country's soaring prosperity, and consumer groups have flourished in the last decade as the variety of products mushroomed.

Now, with German products trusted around the world for their high technical quality and reliability, the consumer organizations are battling misleading advertising to make sure the "Made in Germany" label will continue to guarantee top quality goods.

High standards in West German industry have largely eliminated unsound or unsafe products from the market, but "the biggest loophole is misleading advertising," said Thomas Schlier of the national Consumers' Cooperative headquartered in Bonn.

"Unlike in the United States, a consumer here can't demand his money back if the product fails to meet exaggerated advertising claims. That's only possible if it's defective," Schlier said.

A West German retailer or manufacturer cannot be fined for making false claims about his product, Schlier said. A retailer may offer television sets at vast savings as a come-on, but have only three in stock, or advertise "full-sized" stoves that have only two burners and lack an oven.

Consumer groups are fighting back with class action suits, but even where abuses are proven, court fines are usually so nominal that the risk is worth it for manufacturers.

Schlier's organization, which operates 150 consumer counseling centers around the country with government subsidies, is lobbying for a change.

"We believe every consumer should have a money-back guarantee and the right to sue for compensation if the product is sold by misleading advertising," he said.

On paper, West Germany has among the world's toughest safety standards for consumer goods, especially electronic and household appliances, which must meet tough industry standards before going on the market.

But in direct comparison with foreign competition, the products sometimes rate lower in practicality, design or level of advancement, said Teves of the testing foundation.

"Our tests emphasize appliances, hi fi and optical goods. We test some food and household products and compare prices and services of banks, insurance and other services."

"You can't say German goods in general are better or worse than those of other Western countries," said Teves.

"It depends on the article... But Germans dominate the household appliances, partly because there aren't as many foreign products offered on the domestic market."

The 15-year-old foundation runs comparison tests on five or six products each month, and the results are printed initially in Test magazine, which has a circulation of 780,000 and a readership 10 times as high, said magazine spokesman Friedrich Draeger.

The results are then reprinted by newspapers and magazines, reaching a potential of 40 million to 45 million West Germans. Many buyers of basic appliances check the results before making a purchase.

Industry initially had little more than an indulgent smile for the foundation when, in 1966, it published its first test results on the performance of electric hand mixers and juice presses.

But when the tests' effects on the public were gauged, industry sat up for another look. In 1969, a ski binding maker sued for damages of 1 million marks (then about $258,000) after getting a poor rating, but the West German supreme court dismissed the case, upholding the foundation's right to publish test results.

"Surveys show they have come to be an important power factor as far as retailers are concerned. Ninety-five percent of radio, TV, phonograph and photographic retailers reckon their customers are conversant with test results," reports the Deutsches Allgemeines Sonntagsblatt newspaper.

DICK TRACY

by GOULD/Fletcher/COLLINS

YOU KNOW, LIZZ—IN MOST CASES A PURSE SNATCHER OR MUGGER WOULD DISCARD THE PURSE IN A GUTTER OR GARBAGE CAN—

BUT THE SKATER TAKES ONLY CASH, THEN PUTS THE PURSE IN A MAIL-BOX, IN THE APPARENT HOPE IT GETS BACK TO ITS OWNER."

A THOUGHTFUL THIEF—AND OF COURSE THE POSTAL AUTHORITIES DO TURN THE PURSE OVER TO US, AND WE TO THE OWNER.

MAYBE YOUR SKATER DOESN'T KNOW THE STREET VALUE OF THE I.D. AND CREDIT CARDS HE LEAVES BEHIND," SAYS LIZZ.

WELL, HE'S A BEGINNER, ALL RIGHT—PRINTS ON THE PURSES MATCH NOTHING IN OUR FILES—

THIS IS NO STREETWISE CRIMINAL," SAYS LEE EBONY, "BUT A LONER WORKING FOR AND BY HIMSELF—"

hints from Heloise

DEAR FOLKS:

This is a little bit of advice I hope you will follow. I have written many things about photo albums, including how to make it easier to keep one. Now I want to pass along a little tip for those of you who may not get around to putting those precious pictures in an album right away.

As soon as you get snapshots developed — now I mean instantly, not a few days later — get out a pen and, on the back of each print, write the date, where the picture was taken and, even more important, the names of the people in it.

Some of the older snapshots used to have the date printed on them but many of the new, borderless prints don't. Believe you me: five or 10 years from now you are going to be sorry that you don't know if Jimmy was 5 or 6 in that picture or exactly where it was taken.

So do it. It only takes a few minutes now and will save many questions later.

Have a good day, and pass this along.

Love, Heloise

CORSAGE CUE

DEAR HELOISE: Throughout the years I have saved mountings of corsages for sentimental reasons and because they were so pretty.

Recently I was wrapping a present for a baby shower and discovered that I did not have a bow.

After prowling through everything, I came across the perfect topping — a corsage mount!

I put diaper pins where the flowers were originally. I think this would be ideal on birthday and wedding gifts.

A real inflation fighter, huh?

Beverly Hatfield

SQUARE MEASURE

DEAR HELOISE:

Cover part of your fabric cutting board with one-inch square gingham.

It's great for measuring lining up, or as a guide line for cutting on the bias.

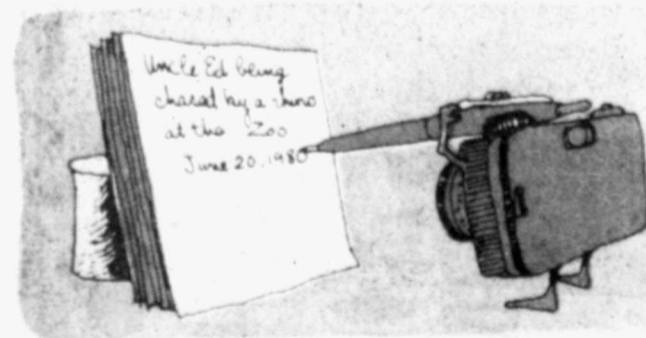

Just be sure you have it secured straight on the board.

Columbus, Ohio

DEAR READER:

This is your column. If you'd like to share a hint, ask a question or make a suggestion, write me care of this newspaper.

Hugs, Heloise

MAKEOVER FOR DOLLING OUTFITS

DEAR HELOISE:

We have an idea for doll clothing. Girls are always wanting to get new clothes for their dolls.

We have a solution for them. Instead of getting new ones, take the old clothes and trim them or add something onto them to make them look like new outfits.

Lori Clark and Shanon Southwick

A HOLIDAY SALUTE FOR PETS

DEAR HELOISE:

If anyone who reads this column has a hamster, mouse, guinea pig, or any other small caged animal, they will find this thought helpful!

All you have to do is get wrapping paper for the season (Christmas, Valentine, Fourth of July), cut it to the right size of the back of the cage (or aquarium) and tape the paper on the outside so that the design is facing the inside of the cage.

It will brighten things up for you and your pet.

Lisa Bennett, Age 12

NET A MEMO BOARD

DEAR HELOISE:

A double thickness of nylon net, the color of a girl's bedroom wall, makes a lovely, strong and almost invisible bulletin board.

Cover an area by thumb-lacking from the ceiling to the floor and you'll have a place to pin all kinds of keepsakes that won't show pin marks or tear.

Best of all, it can be installed by the "lady of the house" rather than having to ask Dad to make a frame and find a secure spot for a real board!

Allison

SMOKERS FOILED

DEAR HELOISE:

Never did I think I would have a handy hint but out of the blue here, after 78 years, is mine.

I'm not a smoker and detest the smell of used ashtrays. So after all these years I got smart and now place a neat piece of aluminum foil in the bottom of each ashtray.

No more mess, just close it up and dispose properly. A clean ashtray and a good way to use up those small pieces of used foil.

Pauline H. Douville

Wish you hadn't waited so long to write, but thanks and drop in again soon.

Heloise

BAG 'EM

DEAR HELOISE:

To keep small items from getting lost in the washer and dryer, I made a nylon net bag with a drawstring to put them in.

It works fine for stockings or baby socks — any fine material.

I keep the bag in the bottom of the clothes hamper so it's always handy to use.

Mrs. F. Kaurtman

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is an idea that readers might look upon not only for recycling but for economy and the joy of "doing it yourself."

Cut the top off of a 2-liter plastic soft drink bottle about 2 1/2 inches from the holding lip and use it as a funnel to transfer or pour spices into shakers.

With the lid still on it, it can be used as a cover for small dishes of leftover lemons or tomatoes, etc.

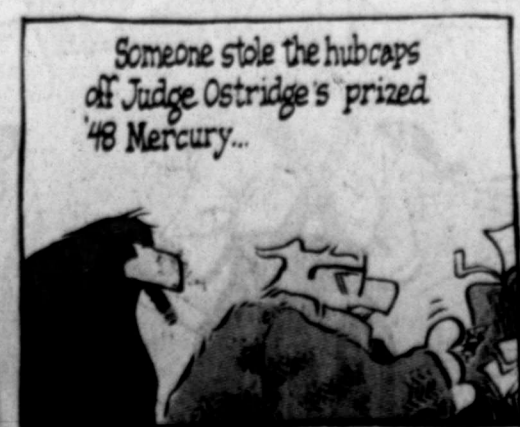

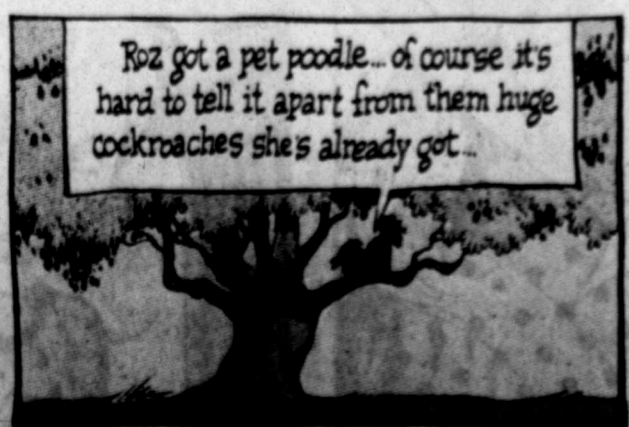

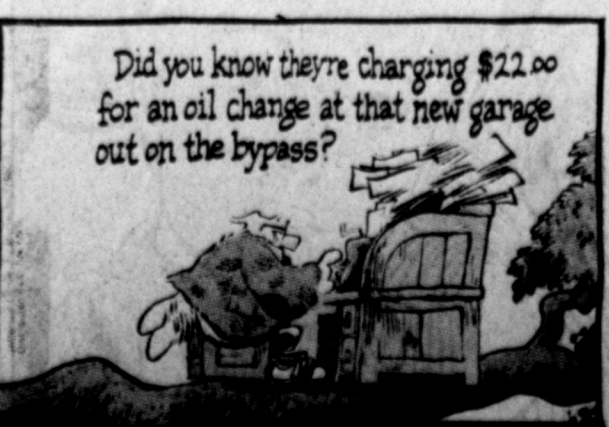

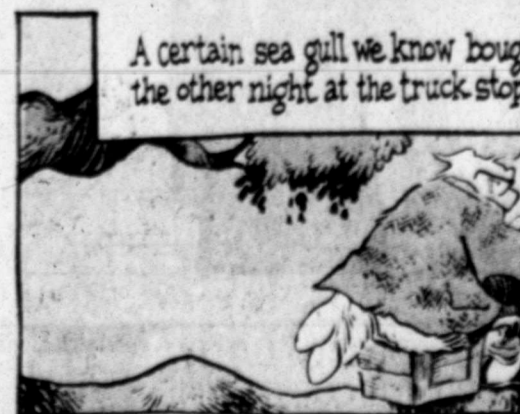

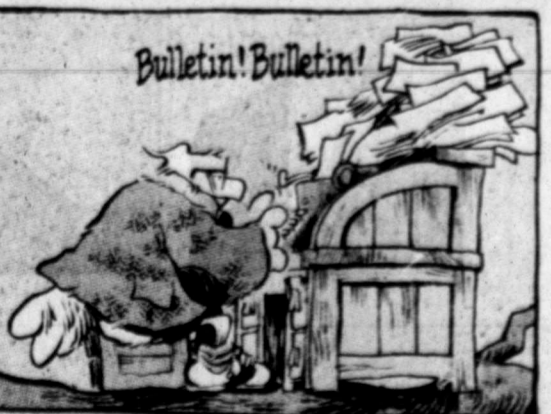

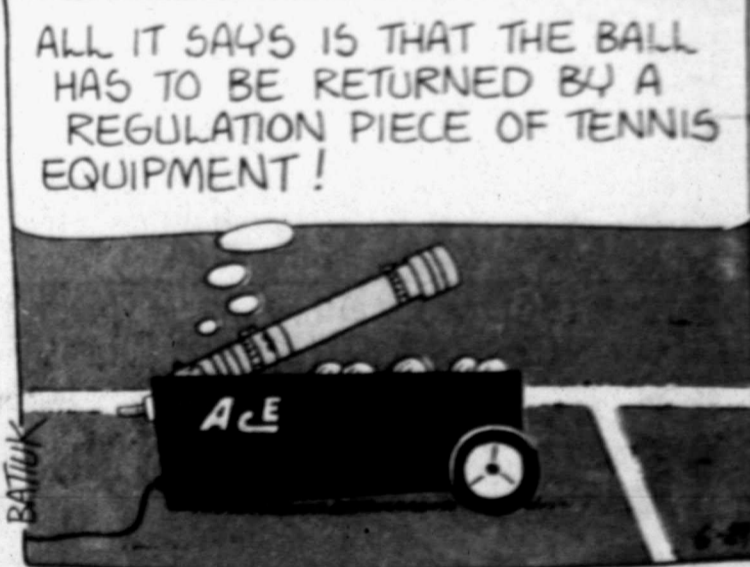

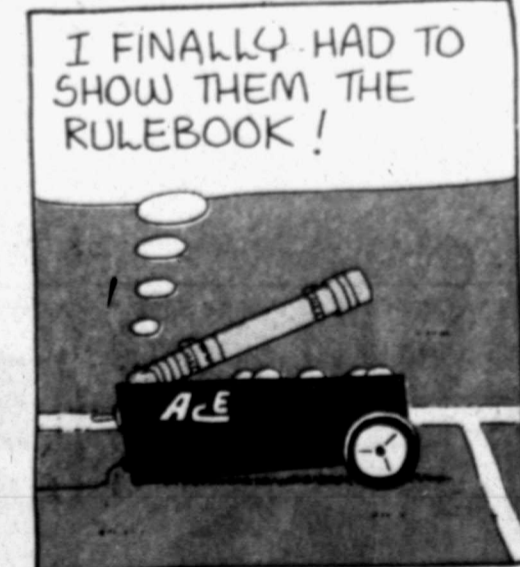

You can even cut several bottles in half and, by removing the cap for ventilation, use them to protect seedlings in the garden from birds' and insects.

Andrew Hanko

Featuring HARRIET and STANLEY PARKER

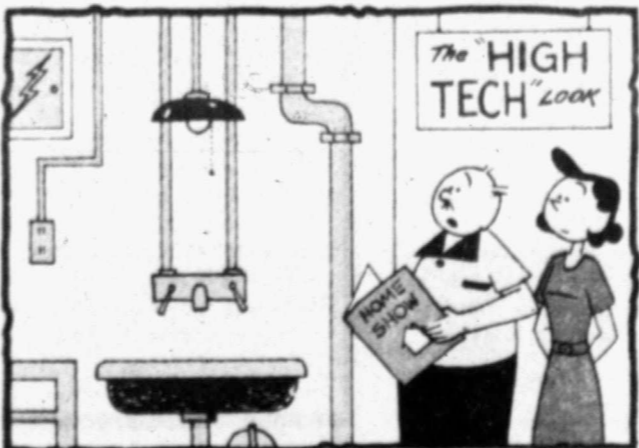

"What? You say your arm ISN'T sore, Brother Parker? I thought it was because you had such a pained look when you reached for your wallet."

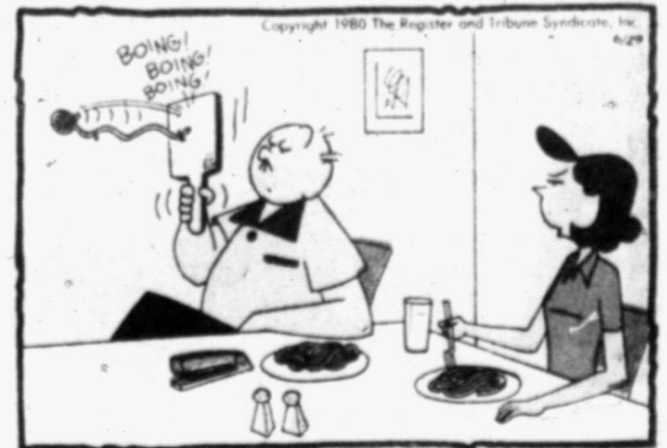

"I hear the pitter-patter of tiny feet. Has your mother stuffed her clodhoppers into size 5 shoes again?"

"I invited her. I thought our junk would look practically brand new by comparison."

"So this is the 'high tech' look. I wonder if Ralph and Alice Kramden knew they were 30 years ahead of their time!"

"OK, OK! I admit the spaghetti and meatballs MAY be a little over-done."

WORSENS DAILY.
NO ONE SUSPECTS THAT THE KING IS BEING POISONED
BY HIS SCHEMING
HALF BROTHER,
MORDRED.

SIR GAWAIN WORKS GALLANTLY TO PRESERVE THE ROUND TABLE, BUT NOT ALL KNIGHTS ARE MEN OF HONOR. EVERY DAY BRINGS A NEW DEFECTION TO MORDRED'S FACTION. "HE IS BUYING LOYALTY WITH PROMISES OF LAND," A SPY REPORTS. "THE CROWN, HE WANTS FOR HIMSELF."

GALAN ENDURES ANOTHER LESSON, AND FOR ONCE SEEMS HARD AT WORK. ONLY LATER DOES GEOFFREY DISCOVER THAT THE LITTLE IMP HAS BEEN DRAWING PICTURES ALL OVER THE LIBRARY'S PRECIOUS BOOKS.

A WHIPPING DOES NOT FIT GALAN'S PLANS. HE BOLTS FROM THE ROOM, HEAD SWIVELED TO GUARD HIS REAR. "KNAVE!" CRIES ARTHUR'S OLD NURSE. "NOW CLEAN THIS UP WHILE I BREW THE KING MORE MEDICINE."

GALAN WELCOMES SOME UNEXPECTED HELP. "GOOD DOG! WE'LL BE GONE BEFORE THAT WITCH COMES BACK."

A QUEER LOOK SUDDENLY COMES OVER THE MUTT. GALAN RUSHES TO HELP HIS FRIEND, BUT THE DOG IS ALREADY DEAD.

THERE IS NO TIME TO THINK. "YOU HAVE LEARNED A GREAT SECRET," PURRS THE CRUEL VOICE. "NOW YOU WILL PAY FOR IT."
