Libyan controversy eroding Carter's grip on Demo nomination

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's lock on the Democratic nomination, while still intact, is showing sudden signs of weakening under the burgeoning controversy about his brother Billy's ties to Libya.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd told reporters Saturday that "as of today" — a qualification he used repeatedly — he thought Carter would be the nominee of the Democratic National Convention, which begins in New York in two weeks.

But the Senate's top Democrat added that it's "not inconceivable that developments between now and the convention" could alter the course of events.

Other congressional Democrats, including some nominal Carter supporters, acknowledge they are trying to find a way to open the convention for another candidate. Sources said possible alternatives included Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, Carter's persistent challenger for the nomination; Vice President Walter F. Mondale; and Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie.

White House press secretary Jody Powell denounced the push for an open convention on Saturday as "a Kennedy-inspired effort to take advantage of the difficulties the president now faces."

Meanwhile, the Justice Department and a special Senate subcommittee are investigating possible wrongdoing by Billy Carter, Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti and possibly the president himself.

The Washington Post reported in Sunday editions that the Justice Department attorney who directed the investigation of Billy Carter said that Civiletti's discussion of the case with President Carter had no effect on a decision not to seek criminal charges against Billy.

Loel S. Lisker, chief of the department's foreign agent registration unit, told the Post that he received no instructions from Civiletti about how to handle the case.

Civiletti's admission that he held a June 17 talk with the president about Billy's Libyan ties sparked an internal Justice Department investigation to see if laws or department regulations were violated by the attorney general.

In a separate story, the Post quoted Billy Carter's wife Sybil as saying she and her husband believe their telephones are tapped by the federal government.

Byrd, in his talk with reporters, said the Democratic Party has been "embarrassed" by the controversy and called on Carter to tell the full truth.

"It's in the president's interest, and for the good of the party and the public, for the president to see to it that it's all laid out on top of the table, and as expeditiously as possible," Byrd said of the brewing controversy. "I think it's going to be damaging if there are delays in doing so. ... It shouldn't have to be extracted day by day, tooth by tooth."

From what appeared to many only 10 days ago as partisan bickering over an embarrassing relative, the Billy Carter affair ballooned with startling suddenness last week into an issue that the president must confront to retain his support even within his own party.

By week's end, the Senate had voted to create a nine-member panel to explore various elements of the Billy Carter-Libya matter. Two House committees also have requested specific information about White House involvement in the case, and Powell said Saturday that Carter will provide detailed answers in writing.

President Carter sought to blunt the political harm of the issue by promising full cooperation and disclosure from the start.

Billy Carter has his palm read while having breakfast in an Americus, Ga., motel Saturday. Elsewhere, signs pointed to a weakening of his brother's lock on the Democratic nomination for president amid the controversy over Billy's ties to Libya. (AP Laserphoto)

7,500 evacuated after train wreck

MULDRAUGH, Ky. (AP) — Ten railroad tankers, most hauling highly toxic chemicals, jumped the tracks in a residential area near Fort Knox on Saturday, setting off fires and explosions and forcing the evacuation of at least 7,500 people, officials said.

Police sealed off a three-mile-radius area of northern Meade County after four tankers loaded with vinyl chloride caught fire. Two of the tankers exploded.

Three members of the train crew were injured when the cars derailed. One witness said a black cloud hovered about 1,000 feet over the site where a 37-car Illinois Central Gulf, en route from Memphis, Tenn., to Louisville, Ky., left the tracks.

Two other derailed cars also contained vinyl chloride, one was loaded with chlorine, one with acrylonitrile and one with toluene, officials said. The 10th car was believed to be empty.

The cars, which were still burning Saturday night, sent up a cloud of toxic vapor that can cause burns and irritation with brief contact, said Tom Little, a spokesman for the state Office of Disaster and Emergency Services.

"We call this chemical 'bad stuff' in the business," Little said. "It is highly flammable and extremely toxic." Vapors from vinyl chloride, used in the manufacture of plastics, can cause dizziness or suffocation. When burned, it produces poisonous gases which can cause inflammation or burns on even brief contact.

Little said that acrylonitrile and toluene are also "highly toxic."

About 4,000 people were evacuated from the nearby Fort Knox Military Reservation, and at least 3,500 were forced to leave the Muldraugh area. Most of the Fort Knox residents were allowed to return home Saturday afternoon, Little said, but some of the Muldraugh area residents would be kept away over the weekend.

No more evacuations were expected, although Little had estimated earlier that 10,000 people might be asked to leave their homes and said it might be necessary to evacuate the entire military post, which houses 41,700 soldiers and civilians.

Soldiers remained on guard at the facility on the fort housing the U.S. gold supply, and there was no threat to the $88 billion worth of gold, authorities said. Earlier the toxic cloud was reported heading north towards Bullitt County, Jefferson County and Louisville, 30 miles southeast of the accident, but it later stabilized over Muldraugh, Little said.

One of the six cars loaded with vinyl chloride exploded when the accident occurred at 9 a.m. A second car exploded around 1:10 p.m. and two others were burning, Little said.

Billy, taxes and politics

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.

Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

SAN SIMEON — As you know, National Editor Joe Kingsbury Smith and I have been abroad, interviewing the important leaders of our Western Europe allies. We arrived home Wednesday just in time to see Jerry Ford telling Walter Cronkite his ideas of the vice presidential job he might accept. To me, now, it appears as though it was an attempt to link two mismatched capsules in outer space. It is well the mission was aborted.

HEARST

Now, hard upon us is the Democratic convention in New York where a new party platform will be forged. Also, Senator Kennedy would like to get Jimmy Carter's job — which promises to make the session zestier than the GOP conclave.

Tax reduction will be the leading plank of the Democratic platform, just as it was in the Republican's. I have some thoughts on that which I'll get to in a moment. Betimes, don't hold your breath waiting for your taxes to be cut.

And now, beclouding the already boiling cauldron comes "L'Affaire Billy" as my French friends are undoubtedly calling it.

It now appears that Billy Carter is to be investigated by a nine-member blue ribbon panel created by the United States Senate. Although a majority in the Senate are of the president's own political party, those who stand for re-election this fall seem anxious to get all of the facts. They — along with the rest of us — have some questions they want answered, if only because the credibility of the entire Carter Administration is at stake. It may be that Billy, the arrogant buffoon that he is, is guilty of nothing more than poor judgment, something that seems quite possible. But we are entitled to answers to specific questions, such as:

Editor's Report

● Why would a Third World, America-hating country "lend" $220,000, unsecured, to a Georgia gasoline station owner?

● Why did President Carter say he had not spoken to Billy about the situation, then admit later that we had

Tax game not over yet

Final two stages are under way

By SUE FAHLGREN and DAVID CAMPBELL
Staff Writers

The lines of taxpayers to see the Board of Equalization has diminished. The angry, tired faces are gone; and the board has recessed to make its decisions on the property valuations of some 600 Midlanders. But the tax game is not over yet. In fact, it's only about halfway through.

According to plans set up by the State Property Tax Board to implement the Peveo bill by January 1982, communities will be using a four-stage taxing system this year.

The Peveo bill, sponsored by Rep. Wayne Peveo of Orange, establishes a single valuation appraisal board replacing the current school, city, hospital, county and college hodgepodge. Also, the bill allows for 100 percent property assessments statewide. In this way, the state would standardize the amount of property taxed in each community.

Midland already has undergone the first two of these stages: Setting market values of area properties by the tax office; and the review of those values by the Board of Equalization.

According to Tax Assessor-Collector Virgil Jones, letters on the final determinations by the Board of Equalization on the property valuations should be in the mail Aug. 10.

RESIDENTS STILL have until Aug. 1, however, to write letters to the BOE requesting a review of their property valuations, Jones said. Letters must include complete information and location of the property involved, as well as reasons why the owner believes the valuation is incorrect, Jones said.

Letters can be mailed to: Chairman, Board of Equalization, P.O. Box 157, Midland, 79702.

The final two stages of the taxing process are under way and will be completed soon.

Stage three is adoption of the tax rate; stage four is collection of the taxes.

The tax rate is set by each of the four taxing bodies — city, schools, hospital and college — in agreement with the amount of revenue it needs to fund its proposed budget for the next year.

Prior to the adoption of the budgets (See PROCESS, Page 4A)

Budget hearings during August will help determine tax rates

Tax rates for Midland property owners will be set by Sept. 1. During August, however, all four of the local taxing bodies — school, city, hospital and college — will conduct budget hearings to arrive at the tax rate rates they need to cover their budgets.

Early indications are that the tax rates will drop. However, some of the entities have implied their rates will not drop as much as previously expected.

On Friday, Mayor G. Thane Akins announced the effective city tax rate will be increased next year. The total expenditures should be $27,749,000 in 1981, an increase of $4,496,755, or 22 percent, over the current budget.

Because of the budget increase, Akins said the tax rate would not be lowered to the expected 39 cents from last year's 63 cents.

Instead, Akins said, the rate would be set at 45 cents which — combined with the increased property valuations this year — would produce the necessary increased revenue.

Tax rates are set according to 75 percent of the current property valuations. Further, the rates indicate the amount paid per $100 of valuation.

Last year's total tax rate came to $2.10 per $100 valuation. This year the total will be lower, taxing body officials say, but maybe not that much lower.

According to Virgil Jones, city tax assessor-collector, effective tax rates will be announced on Tuesday. The effective tax rate is the rate taxes would have to be set to obtain the same amount of revenue as the previous year.

The effective tax rate is used only as a basis for comparison. If the tax revenues increase 3 percent or more for any of the taxing entities, special public hearings about the increase must be made.

Although the city taxes will be up this year, Robert Abernethy, assistant administrator of finance for Midland Memorial Hospital, said the hospital will be about the same as its effective tax rate.

The budget, Abernethy said, "is in the summary stages right now. It will be presented the week after next to the finance committee," he said.

"At this time," he added, "no increase is expected. At this point, I

(See BUDGET, Page 4A)

How taxes are figured

Property evaluation (E) times tax rate (R) equals tax revenue (T) that the school system, city, college and hospital charge the taxpayers.

$$E \times R = T$$

Last year, evaluations were artificially low, but a high tax rate ensured taxing bodies with enough tax revenue.

$$E \times R = T$$

Evaluations were raised drastically to "true market value" in January, but the tax rate was to be lowered to give virtually the same tax revenues. Therefore, total taxes would not go up.

$$E \times R = T$$

Recently, however, some taxing bodies indicate they need more revenue. The tax rate would not go down as much as expected, which simply means higher taxes.

Republicans wooing judges

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The Republican Party is trying to pressure judges into ruling against abortion by including in its platform criteria for selecting judges, says the chief justice of the Illinois Supreme Court. And other top state judges at a conference here have criticized the GOP plank as a "poor basis" for choosing judges.

The plank says vacancies on the U.S. Supreme Court and other benches should be filled by judges "who respect traditional family values and the sanctity of innocent human life."

"What they're saying is that we shouldn't select a judge who will follow the Constitution on the issue of abortion," said Illinois Chief Justice Joseph Goldenhersh. "I think that's an extremely poor basis on which to select a judge."

But North Carolina Chief Justice Joseph Branch thinks the plank is "very good. I think those concerns are interwoven in good justice."

Branch maintained that agreeing with the plank's philosophy wouldn't necessarily commit a judge to ruling certain way.

Goldenhersh and Branch are among more than 40 top judges from state supreme courts gathered here for the annual meeting of the Conference of Chief Justices this weekend.

Several judges said Friday they thought the GOP had gone too far by setting down such criteria for judicial selection. While the sentiments behind the plank are noble, the judges said, they represent an unwise and unwarranted intrusion into the judicial process.

Their main objection is that the GOP's selection criteria would commit judges to ruling a certain way before they even hear the facts of a case.

"What judge could you find that wouldn't be committed to those principles?" said Chief Justice Allan Crockett of Utah.

"To take a position against something like that (GOP plank) would be like coming out against motherhood and apple pie," said Chief Justice John Bardgett of Missouri.

Bardgett, a Democrat, also said applying the criteria would be impractical. The only way to enforce them would be "pre-testing" a judge with a hypothetical situation. "I think it is a very poor way to go about it (selecting judges). I don't care what the test is," he said.

"A judge should not be committed on anything but obeying his oath of office," said Chief Justice Ray Brock of Tennessee. And for that reason, he thinks the plank is inappropriate and unwarranted. But he doesn't take it too seriously "because I don't take platforms too seriously."

"Just politics," agreed Chief Justice Joe Greenhill of Texas.

But he added, "We have to take an oath that we're not committed. I think it's rather a mistake to try to look for somebody who is going to rule some way."

On the issue of abortion itself, which the GOP platform wants banned by constitutional amendment, the judges were reticent and most refused to discuss it.

Democrats study convention alternatives

WASHINGTON (AP) President Carter could turn into a disaster for Democrats, concerned the party in November, that a ticket headed by ways to allow the selection of another nominee at the Democratic National Convention.

The group — which includes congressmen on record as supporting Carter, others supporting Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and others uncommitted to any candidate — met twice Friday to discuss strategy for the upcoming convention. Other meetings are scheduled next week.

Sources said the meetings were precipitated by the continuing problems Carter is facing in connection with his brother, Billy, who registered as a foreign agent July 14 after disclosing he had accepted $220,000 from Libyans.

Several participants reportedly are afraid the upcoming congressional probe — which will delve into Billy Carter's Libyan ties and determine whether the White House influenced a Justice Department decision not to prosecute for his initial failure to register as an agent — could severely hurt Democratic chances in November.

One source said between 15 and 20 congressmen attended the first meeting. The group grew to between 35 and 40 congressmen, including some Carter supporters, by mid-afternoon, this source said.

Others estimated the gathering at about 35 "all day long."

Possible alternate presidential candidates prominently mentioned in the discussions included Kennedy, Vice President Walter Mondale and Secretary of State Edmund Muskie, sources said.

All agreed no strategy had been decided on to open up the convention. One participant, Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., said an effort was made to get the congressmen to sign a letter advocating an open convention.

Deaf students benefit from summer session

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Staff Writer

Silence this summer has been golden for Midland deaf children involved in the first summer school program in Midland.

"As far as we know, this is the only summer program for deaf students in the state," said Kay Phillips, instructor.

Last Thursday was the final formal session for about 20 youngsters who are not the easiest subjects to teach, according to Keith Dial, superintendent for special education programs with the Odessa schools.

These students, ages 3 to 12, met three days a week at Midland College where Mrs. Phillips and Margaret Foulsham, another instructor, worked with the students in helping them retain the skills they learned while attending classes during the regular school year.

Students in the program were taught speech and language skills. Emphasis was placed upon the students communicating verbally as well as with sign language, which is a common occurrence with the pupils and their teachers.

Although there was very little formal classroom instruction, the students' learning took place outside the classroom, Mrs. Phillips said.

"Most of the kids have very limited experiences outside of their homes," she explained. "Not very many of them have seen a horse, an airplane, gone swimming or taken a picture."

By introducing the students to subjects outside the classroom, their association with the vocabulary developed, said Mrs. Phillips.

Thursday's session introduced the students to the art of horse vaulting. A demonstration by Girl Scouts brought stares of delight as the students watched the girls perform on a slow-moving horse while Mrs. Phillips explained to them through sign language what was happening.

Each session with the children was video-taped for review by the instructors. The film provides a record which shows how each student responded to certain situations, as well as reviewing the hand signs used to explain a concept to the child, she explained.

Also, the film will be used in a presentation to the Texas Education Agency for future projects in teaching the deaf, she said.

Federal funding for the program came from a special budget allocation for the deaf under Title I funds, explained Dial. In addition to these funds, the Westside Lions Club, the Midland Jayce-ettes and private individuals have contributed to the program.

Dr. James Mailey, superintendent for Midland schools, said the district is examining the program to see how it affects the student's learning process. He noted this is the first program of its kind for the deaf in Midland.

However, other students from as far away as Pecos and Big Spring have been invited to participate, he said.

conferred with Billy about seeing if the Libyans would intercede in an effort to get the hostages freed?

● Why did Zbigniew Brzezinski lie about what he purported to be his only contact with Billy, saying Billy had come to him as a "family friend" after being interrogated by the Justice Department? Turns out Zbig met with Billy more than once, another time, for instance, when he asked him to see if he could get Libyan dictator Qaddafi to intercede in Iran in behalf of the U.S. hostages.

● Why did the Justice Department take so long about insisting that Billy register as a representative of a foreign government?

● What are the details of the deal brother Billy has been working out with Libyan officials? The story here is that Billy was to get 55-cents a barrel on Libyan shipments to the U.S. This could earn him many millions. The $200,000 "loan" may have been to straighten out his affairs with the Atlanta office of the IRS where he seems to be having trouble.

There was another deal in which Billy and three Georgia friends were to set up a non-profit corporation in Atlanta called the "Libyan-American friendship society," through which, presumably, good investments were to be found for Libyan government investors.

To me, the most stupefying thing of all is in the White House's best-kept secret — that the President of the United States arranged to send his hubbubbling brother on a highly-sensitive diplomatic mission. What kind of judgment is that?

Beyond doubt, this is not going to help the president's quest for re-nomination and re-election, so the Carter boys, each in his own way, are in deep trouble.

They shall remain in trouble until we all learn the truth. There are many things that the voting public simply will not tolerate. And don't forget, Jimmy Carter promised he would never lie to us.

Gov. Reagan started the tax cut issue by announcing that he favored an immediate tax rollback to spur the consumption and increase expenditures for new plants and equipment.

President Carter responded by saying that he, too, favored a tax cut this year and was going to seek one in Congress.

Apparently the tax experts and other officials in the administration advised him that such a tax cut this year could result in a hodge-podge of new regulations. So the president announced he had changed his mind — the tax cuts would be worked out next year.

Gov. Reagan, however, had proposed something specific, based on the Kemp-Roth Bill calling for a 10 per cent reduction in taxes each year for three years. When this is coupled with efforts to balance the budget, it forces spending restraints on the lawmakers.

There are those who say that a tax cut will contribute to inflation. All I know is that when President Kennedy imposed a tax cut, it stopped his recession in its tracks.

Some are not convinced that a tax cut is needed, however. I asked my colleague Don Rogers, economic editor of the Hearst Newspapers, how taxes for the average American workman compared with taxes of the average workman in other industrialized countries. His answers, based on facts provided by the Conference Board, the trusted non-profit research outfit, were surprising.

Denmark, the most socialistic of western countries, gets about 25 per cent of the average household's income in direct taxes, and another 20 per cent for social security.

In the United States, the direct tax on average income is about 12 percent, same as West Germany, and social security taxes get another 8 percent. In Germany social taxes amount to about 13 percent.

The United Kingdom's tax on average is about 17 percent, and the social security adds another 8 percent.

Italy and France have the lowest tax rates of any industrialized western countries — and there officials often experience great difficulty collecting the taxes that are owed.

In the U.S., tax cuts may be beamed at the industrial world, for there is no question that our major companies need more money with which to modernize and expand. This, more than anything else, will take people off the unemployment rolls.

As this is written, joblessness in the U.S. is more than 8.1 percent of the workforce. It will probably go to 10 percent before the year's end.

Each percentage point represents one million workers, hence, 8,100,000 are out of work right now and about 10 million will be unemployed by Christmas.

Clearly, something must be done.

and rates, each body reviews its proposed budget and rate in public meetings. It is at these meetings, according to the "truth in taxation" statute, that the taxpayer must voice his dissatisfaction with the spending and costs of the group.

Further, if the amount of revenue a group is to receive under the effective tax rate is 3 percent or more than that of last year, the taxing entity must hold a separate series of public meetings before adopting the new budget and rate.

However, he said the 3 percent increase indicated in the school board notice means a 3 percent increase over the effective tax rate, not over the current $1.26 per $100 assessed valuation.

TAX RATES SHOULD decrease again in January 1981 when the 100 percent property assessment values are instituted.

Presently, only 75 percent of each property's market value is used to compute the amount owners are taxed.

Some Midlanders believe that taxing bodies will receive a windfall when the new property assessment goes into effect. However, Furgeson noted that a taxing entity can only receive the amount of taxes required to cover the budget. Therefore, tax rates should decrease to bring in the same amount of revenue to comply with budget demands.

The following is an example of how a tax bill is computed:

THE OWNER OF a house that has been valued at a market value of $100,000 will, under the present assessment ratio of 75 percent, pay taxes on $75,000.

The current total tax rate of $2.10 per $100 assessed value is then multiplied by $75,000 which will give a tax bill of $1,575. However, the total rate used in this example will be divided among the four taxing bodies.

All tax rates for the four taxing entities must be set by Sept. 1. Tax bills will be sent out by Oct. 1. Jan. 31, 1981, will be the final day for tax payments.

Budget hearings in August will help determine tax rates

THE EFFECTIVE tax rate is that rate which will bring in the same amount of income as the previous year, Jones said. This year the effective tax rate is expected to go down because of higher property valuations.

Before the entity can set an effective tax rate, they must have the total available tax base to be applied to the budget.

The total tax base for the four taxing entities is derived from real estate, which includes private, commercial and industrial properties, and mineral interests and personal properties.

After looking at effective tax rates and comparing them to next year's budget, the taxing entity must decide how much the tax rate needs to be raised to accommodate its budget needs.

Each taxing entity goes through this procedure to determine the final tax rate.

School business manager, Don Furgeson, noted the effective tax rate this year probably will go down somewhat because property market values have been reappraised to represent true inflation, the school district has posted a notice for a public hearing Tuesday to consider a 3 percent increase in its effective tax rate.

The proposed budget for the 1980-81 school year calls for $33,197,334 of which 80 percent of the budget belongs to personnel salaries. This year's budget is recorded at $28,421,651, according to school district figures.

Since property values have been reappraised to represent true market values, school officials predict the effective tax should go down.

Current tax rate for the school district is $1.26 per $100. The new tax rate for the 1980-81 budget should be set in August when the budget is approved.

Midland College trustees will approve final budget figures at their

Midland's economic index reaches all-time high in June

Midland's economic barometer hopped to an unprecedented high for June with an index reading of 182.47, according to the economic activity report compiled by the First National Bank.

The index in May was 175.40. And in one year the index has gone up more than 54 points from the 127.94 recorded in June 1979.

In determining the index, the number of gas meters, electric meters, telephones, employment, postal receipts, bank deposits, building permits, water meters and airline boardings are considered.

In comparing totals for the first six months of 1980 with the same period last year, the report noted that utilities had increased 3 to 6 percent. Employment, airline boardings and telephones have grown at a rate of 4 to 8 percent.

Postal receipts and buildings permits, however, have gone up 17 to 24 percent. Meanwhile, bank deposits have registered a 43 percent gain.

All these figures add up to a 43 percent jump in the index figure, according to the report.

Airline boardings by June 30, 1979, had hit 212,827. By last month, the number was 220,751, a jump of 7,924.

The report estimated that 46,500 persons were employed in Midland during June. This is a slight increase over the 45,750 in May, and an even larger increase over the 44,810 in June 1979.

Bank deposits for the first six months in 1979 totaled $796,952,000. The 43 percent jump this year puts the deposits up to $1,139,965,000.

Statistics in the report show that more people are moving into the Tall City than out of it. For the first six months of this year, Midland has had a net gain of 580 family units, or 97 per month. This is near the record of 607 total and 101 monthly average set in 1978.

Up through the end of June, 883 families had moved into the city while only 303 had left.

According to the report, the number of family units leaving the city is decreasing. The average number of families leaving is 51 per month, the same as the 1976 low figure. Last year at this time the number was 54.

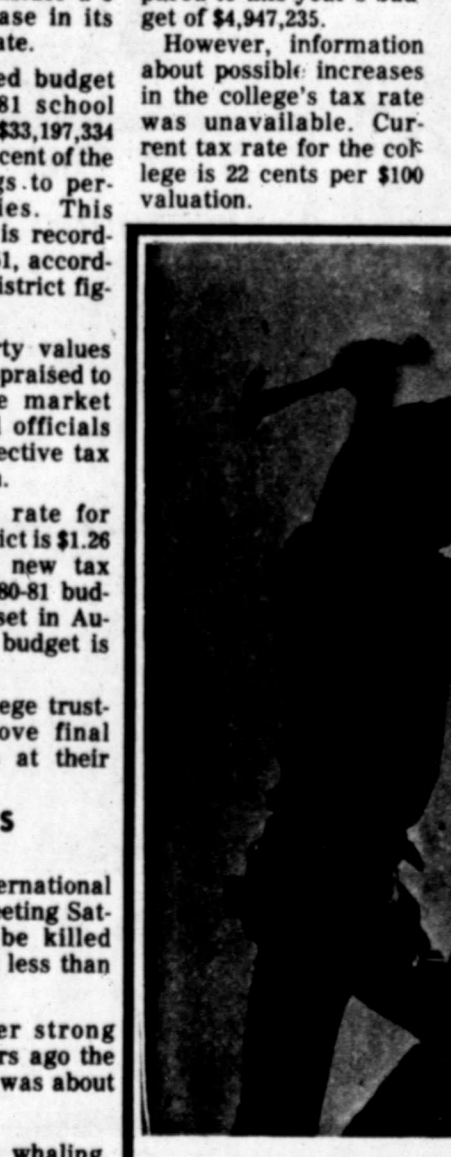

Whaling meeting concludes

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — The International Whaling Commission ended its annual meeting Saturday, ruling that 14,553 whales can be killed in the next 12 months. That is 9.2 percent less than the 15,656 killed this season.

It was a continuing reduction under strong pressure from conservationists. Two years ago the total kill was 20,102, and five years ago it was about 25,000.

Conservationists, who want to ban all whaling, complained the week-long IWC meeting did not adopt measures to protect the 80 or so species of smaller warm-blooded sea animals such as dolphins and porpoises.

Thunderstorm skirts area; Forecast same

A few interesting lightning displays were about all Midlanders got out of the maverick thunderstorm that skirted the area last night and headed southwest of Midland, providing a little variety to an otherwise dull summer weather outlook.

The thunderstorm activity was reportedly west of Odessa, and there were no official reports of precipitation.

The forecast contains nothing Midlanders haven't heard several times before, according to the National Weather Service: Hot sunny days and warm nights today and Monday. The high is expected to be in the upper 90s and the overnight low near 70. Winds will be light and variable.

Saturday's high of 100 was just five degrees lower than the record high of 105 set in 1944. The overnight low of 72 was much warmer than the record low of 60 degrees set in 1973.

Though temperatures in some parts of Texas Saturday peaked above the century mark for the 34th consecutive day, a line of thunderstorms sandwiched the state, moving in from the Gulf and along the northern border from Arkansas to Louisiana.

Forecasters in Galveston and Brownsville reported a heavy line of thunderstorms widely scattered along the coast from Freeport to Louisiana, and out in the Gulf of Mexico, 60 miles offshore moving northwest into Texas.

New Iranian prime minister named

By The Associated Press

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr named a 33-year-old, French-trained engineer Saturday as the turbulent country's new prime minister, an appointment that could prove crucial to the fate of the American hostages in Iran.

The new government chief, Mostafa Mir-Salim, who has been head of the national police and a deputy interior minister, will now select a Cabinet. He and his ministers must then obtain a vote of confidence from the Iranian Parliament.

Iran's revolutionary leaders say the establishment of a full government will clear the way for the Parliament to open debate on the hostage issue. But no date has been set for the debate, and some of those in power have suggested putting it off until October.

By then, the 52 American hostages will have spent 11 months in captivity.

In other developments, the last two accredited American journalists in Iran left the country, and the State Department said in Washington it heard that a free-lance reporter from Buffalo, N.Y., Cynthia Dwyer, was being held in Tehran on espionage charges.

Washington Post reporter Jay Ross said he and Los Angeles Times reporter Doyle McManus left Tehran Friday with three British television reporters to avoid probable arrest and imprisonment by Iran's revolutionary committees, which have been arbitrarily stalking "counter-revolutionaries" vigilante-style in an open challenge to Bani-Sadr's authority.

Family, friends say last farewell to Peter Sellers during thunderstorm

LONDON (AP) — With a thunderstorm hammering a dramatic counterpoint outside, a small group of family and friends gathered Saturday to bid farewell to Peter Sellers, the comic actor who brought laughter to millions in a screen career cut short by a heart attack.

"In a theatrical way, I'm sure the thunderstorm would have appealed to Peter's sense of humor," said the Rev. John Hester, an Anglican priest and longtime friend of the actor, who conducted the 20-minute service at Golders Green Crematorium in North London.

Sellers, 54, died in a coma early Thursday — his 16-year battle against heart disease played out in a final, massive coronary suffered Tuesday as he was dining at a London hotel.

Sellers' only son, Michael, 26, limited the funeral to the actor's close family and friends. Among them were the three British comedians with whom Sellers launched "The Goon Show," a 1950s radio review that provided his first big break in show business.

Movie moguls and show business celebrities who had asked to attend were requested to wait for a memorial service planned for later this month.

"So many people wanted to pay their last respects to Peter that it was decided to keep today's service for family and close friends," a family spokesman said.

But neither the restrictions, nor the pouring rain dampened the spirits of some 200 fans, who crowded outside the crematorium to pay their respects to the comic creator of Inspector Clouseau, the bumbling hero of "Pink Panther."

Pets can bring major external parasite woes

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent — Agriculture

Small domestic pets often are maintained in and around the home in an environment favorable to the year-round development of external parasites. These can include fleas, ticks, lice and mites.

Judging by the calls coming into the office in recent days, ticks have apparently been on the increase and causing concern and problems for pet owners. Several species of ticks infest dogs and cats. The American dog tick and the brown tick are the most common.

The life cycle of the tick includes the egg, six-legged larvae (seed tick), nymph and adult. The larval, nymphal and adult stages require blood meals from warm-blooded hosts to mature. Blood-gorged, mated females lay 1,000 to 3,000 eggs in grass, cracks in walls, baseboards and other protected areas. After hatching, larvae and nymphs seek a warm-blooded host to secure a blood meal. Tick feeding results in blood loss and irritations to the pet and the possible spread of disease-causing organisms. Pet paralysis caused by the injections of toxins during the feeding of some tick species is also possible.

SUCCESSFUL PARASITE control on dogs, cats and pet birds usually requires the proper use of approved pesticides on the pet, its bedding, pen and other areas in the yard or house that are visited by the pet. Treatment of only one of these areas probably will prove unsatisfactory because parasite maintenance and pet reinfestation may occur from several sources. For example, ticks that attack the dog or cat may be harbored in the pet's bedding, the carpet of the home or the yard grass. Recurring parasite problems require treatment of the pet and all these areas simultaneously.

Careful treatment of indoor areas frequented by pets is important in effective parasite control programs. Approved residual pesticides may be applied to the pet's sleeping quarters, to baseboards, carpets, drapes and fabric-covered furniture. Re-application of pesticides may be required to eliminate the parasite infestations completely.

A CERTIFIED PEST CONTROL operator is familiar with the procedures and approved pesticides required to control animal parasites infesting the home and yard. Pesticide treatment of outdoor areas frequented by pets is necessary. Grass, crawl spaces, kennels and exercise areas are often infested with fleas, ticks and mites.

Pesticides recommended for tick control include carbaryl (Sevim), ronnel (Korlan), dioxathion (Delnav) and pyrethrin plus piperonyl butoxide for pet treatment, and carbaryl, ronnel and diazinon (Spectracide) for premise treatment.

All pesticides are toxic and should be used only according to instructions on the container label. Dosage rates, treatment methods, application intervals and the names of animals that may be treated safely with the pesticide appear on the label. The information should be read thoroughly and understood by the applicator prior to using the pesticide.

THE YELLOW BUTTERFLIES that become quite abundant in alfalfa fields in the summer are adult alfalfa caterpillars. They have been especially abundant in recent days, and suburban residents that live in rural areas near alfalfa fields have seen large numbers. Many have asked about them. The butterflies lay eggs that hatch the worms that are a bright, velvety green with a thin white and red stripe running down either side of the body. Full grown worms are one and one-half inches long. They feed on leaves, but are host specific and do not normally bother anything other than alfalfa.

Most alfalfa growers cut hay often enough so that insecticide treatment is not needed.

If population pressures mount, and growers find it necessary to use pesticides, they may use Bacillus thuringiensis (a bacteria), Sevin, Dylox or malathion, none of which requires a waiting period between application and harvest. Also Bacillus thuringiensis and Dylox are easy on beneficial insects.

Graffiti artists attack Berlin Wall

By STEPHEN H. MILLER

BERLIN (AP) — Now almost two decades old, the Berlin Wall has become a one-of-a-kind showcase for Western graffiti artists, political activists and promoters.

Neo-Nazis, Communists, rock fans, soldiers and tourists have joined in taking their spray cans to the wall which takes up 27 miles of the 100-mile East German barrier around West Berlin.

Swastikas, political slogans, more than occasional obscenities and jokes at the expense of East Germany now decorate a border where at least 70 people have died trying escape to the West since the wall went up in August 1961.

Some examples of the wall graffiti that greet tourists at Potsdam Platz, a standard stop along the wall:

- "Freedom Ends Here."
- "Death of Fascism."
- "Rolling Stones."
- "Help Afghanistan."

The Afghanistan slogan is part of a major wall work that blacks over 60 feet or so of the originally white wall.

Wall graffiti is applied at the scrawler's risk because most of the wall itself stands roughly six feet inside East German territory.

East German officials say little about the apparently nocturnal graffiti artists, but West Berlin authorities have made it clear that Western police can't help if they get into trouble in the strip of Eastern territory.

In practice, East German guards rarely come over to the Western side except to watch over renovation work on the wall.

Over the years, the wall has changed from chunky bricks and blocks with barbed wire and broken glass to a modern design of smooth, precast concrete topped by a round tube to foil climbers — all painted white.

Once, in 1978, guards made a dawn appearance not far from Potsdam Platz, overseeing the efforts of an anti-graffiti squad armed with white paint. The whitewash mission was completed only hours before the arrival there of President Carter.

Western television crews with Carter were left with a clean white wall instead of one decorated with slogans assailing its East German builders.

The same area, between Potsdam Platz and the military Checkpoint Charlie about a mile away to the southeast, is now as scrawled-over as before, its slogans including the initials of the Nazi party and a call for a free Croatia in Yugoslavia.

FARM-RANCH REPORT

Golden Spur winner named

LUBBOCK — Fred H. Dressler, whose family has been ranching in the Carson Valley, Nev., area for more than a century, has been named the 1980 recipient of the National Golden Spur Award.

The award is presented annually by seven of the nation's leading livestock organizations to the person who has brought distinction and made significant contributions to the ranching and livestock industry. The award is a gilded O.K. spur encased in Steuben-designed crystal.

The award presentation on Sept. 19 will highlight two days of activities, which will include a national Livestock and Money Symposium, a Prairie Party and Ranch Day at the 12-acre Ranching Heritage Center of The Museum of Texas Tech University.

Record premium offered

DALLAS — A record amount of premium money — $141,391 — is being offered to exhibitors in the combined livestock shows of the 1980 State Fair of Texas, which opens its 17-day run on Oct. 3.

Largest share of the premiums will go to exhibitors in the 31-breed Pan-American Livestock Exposition Oct. 3-12. The balance — $47,650 — will go to exhibitors in the Texas Future Farmers and 4-H Club Livestock Shows Oct. 13-18.

New grain figures in WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has a new bundle of statistics to back up what it has been saying about the effectiveness of President Jimmy Carter's partial embargo of grain sales to the Soviet Union.

In the first six months of the "suspension" — as administration officials prefer to call it — the embargo "has had a significant effect on the Soviet economy," officials said Friday.

An analysis issued by the department's World Food and Agricultural Outlook and Situation Board said the embargo "compounded problems that had already arisen from the poor 1979 grain and forage harvest" in the Soviet Union.

Earlier in the day, Carter met with Edward Andersen, master of the National Grange, who told the president the farm organization still supported the embargo, although some other farm groups and farmbelt members of Congress have called for an end to it.

Carter suspended further grain sales to the Soviet Union on Jan. 4 in response to its invasion of Afghanistan, including a halt to shipments of 17 million metric tons of U.S. corn and wheat that Russia was expected to import in the year that will end on Sept. 30.

However, Carter permitted the shipment of 8 million metric tons of grain annually that was provided by an earlier agreement. That grain has been shipped, and Russia has started buying corn and wheat under terms of the agreement for 1980-81, the final year of the pact.

20,000 windbreak trees sold

LUBBOCK — More than 20,000 trees have been sold this year for windbreaks in the Panhandle, according to the Texas Forest Service.

The 1-year-old trees were sold by the Texas Forest Service to landowners to establish natural windbarriers around their homesteads and to improve wildlife habitat. The service does not sell trees for landscaping and ornamental plantings.

Sold were more than 13,000 conifers, including Austrian pine, Ponderosa pine, Arizona cypress and red cedar) and some 6,700 hardwood trees, including mulberry, native plum, Russian olive, honey locust and sawtooth oak.

Midland, Dawson and Hale county residents purchased more than 1,000 trees. Lubbock County people purchased some 4,290 trees.

Sorghum farmers have deadline

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Farmers who put sorghum grain into the government's reserve program after Jan. 7 have 90 days in which to pay off loans on the grain, says the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

John Goodwin of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service said Friday loans are being called in because sorghum prices have risen to $5.18 per 100 pounds, the trigger point at which the loans must be repaid or the grain turned over to the government in lieu of repayment.

The latest call of loans applies to sorghum stored by farmers under "new agreement" provisions, meaning grain that was put into the reserve program after Jan. 7. About 23 million hundredweight of sorghum is affected.

American missionaries released

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — The U.S. Embassy said Saturday that Bolivian army rangers have released six Methodist missionaries from the United States who were arrested in remote Beni Province.

A spokesman declined to identify the six, but said members of the group were from Alabama.

He said they were flown to La Paz after their arrest at a mission near Sapecho, about 250 miles northeast of the capital, and were held here at the Miraflores army barracks.

After first week, panel can't justify registration

WASHINGTON (AP) — As officials and opponents argue whether the first week of draft registration was successful, congressional investigators say the Pentagon cannot justify the war manpower needs registration is designed to help meet.

An estimated 2 million young men born in 1960 were supposed to register at post offices across the country last week. Those born in 1961 are required to register this week.

While actual registration figures won't be available before late this year, Selective Service Director Bernard Rostker said, "The feedback we're getting from the field is quite good. By all accounts it's going well, which means that the system is operating as planned.

"The clerks are well trained, the material is where it should be, the demonstrations were less and less intense than anticipated and have fallen off substantially since the beginning of the week."

However, the Rev. Barry Lynn of the Committee Against Registration and the Draft said his contacts estimate that "many cities are 30 percent behind where they should be."

"In some cities there has actually been a decline from the first day. Apparently the most fervent supporters signed up all together in some cities. In fact some people camped out so they could register first. Beyond that it looks very, very slim," Lynn said. "I think it's not going well. The thing just isn't working."

Peacetime registration was renewed partly because the Selective Service System was unable to guarantee that it could meet the national war mobilization requirement of 650,000 men in 180 days.

That requirement is based on estimated manpower needs in the first six months of a major non-nuclear war in Europe.

However, in a report released Saturday by Rep. Bennett M. Stewart, D-Ill., the General Accounting Office said the Defense Department is unable to document the validity of the manpower goal, which was set in 1977.

The GAO, an investigative agency of Congress, said the 650,000-man requirement apparently was "the result of informal inquiries" on how many men could be trained for combat in 180 days, not how many actually would be needed.

"I find it inconceivable that the Selective Service is initiating a peacetime registration to meet the manpower needs of the Department of Defense at a time when the Department of Defense cannot justify its manpower figures," Stewart said.

However, the report said an in-depth calculation expected to be completed by the Pentagon next month may conclude that the current manpower goal is too low.

Defense Department spokesman James Freeman said, "We're still reviewing the mobilization requirement," but he refused further comment about the GAO report.

The Selective Service system says having men already registered will enable it to draft the men required in the first six months of a war.

There is no draft now, and Congress hasn't been asked to authorize one. Rostker said a report on the registration program will take 90 to 120 days.

His agency is not tabulating the number of registrants every day. "To do so would be meaningless," Rostker said. "We have no basis for comparison and not all post offices forward reports daily."

Designer of Midland's new Sears store inspects facility

By SUSAN BAKER
Staff Writer

"You know you're getting old," said Sears' J.E. Duggan, "when you start designing new stores in communities to replace old stores that you also designed a few years back."

Duggan, manager of facilities planning for Sears, Roebuck and Co.'s 11-state southwestern territory, was in Midland Friday to inspect work on the new 118,000-square-foot Sears retail outlet before its grand opening in Midland Park Mall this week.

Duggan, who works from Sears' Dallas regional office, employs a staff of about 50 in a process combining real estate, construction and store design expertise that can take as long as two or three years.

With 27 years of experience in the retail department store business, he has noticed many trends. One of the most prominent is the move of many downtown retail shopping areas toward the outlying areas of a city into shopping malls. In some cases, this has been detrimental to the downtown areas.

"Shopping malls have become an important part of our lifestyle," Duggan said. "A climate-controlled mall is the ultimate shopping experience. You can do anything — eat, go to a show, buy anything under the sun — without ever leaving the building."

"The location of malls in the outlying areas, closer to where consumers live, also is a big advantage. Shoppers no longer have to drive all the way downtown to buy what they need."

DUGGAN SAID THE responsibility of maintaining the downtown areas of cities is in the hands of the office districts.

"Cities with downtown areas that are primarily office districts in the first place, such as San Angelo, are more likely to survive."

"Midlanders should be very pleased and proud that Mel Simon and Associates (Midland Park Mall developers) have chosen to build such a fine, modern facility in their town. This mall would be creditable in almost any city."

Midland is the 10th community in the last two years in which he has returned to design a new Sears to replace the old store which he also designed, located at Midkiff and Cuthbert streets.

"It's been a fine store — we've had a lot of pride in the old location," Duggan said. "But we have a tremendous amount of faith in this economy, so much that we were willing to invest millions in a new facility. We want to keep up with our market here."

How many millions, he said, is not known yet. "But we constructed this facility at a substantial price, and all because of the dynamite economy this area seems to be enjoying."

The amount of planning and thought that goes into designing a new Sears retail outlet is not to be taken lightly. In fact, as Duggan can testify, it involves a process that can stretch over a period of several years. And, as in the case of the new Sears location, it can involve as many as 300 people.

Duggan and his staff of design specialists from Sears' Dallas headquarters began working on the Midland store project several years ago. Designers were sent to the Midland market area to observe the living habits of prospective customers, their homes and their attire.

"WE EVEN TOOK into consideration the cars you were driving and the styles of architecture that were

Reporter may have jumped from bridge

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Newspaper reporter Fran Krzywicki wrote last year that few women jump from the Chesapeake Bay Bridge, saying "many may perceive the act of jumping into water as a singular swallowing into a watery grave."

On Friday night, the 25-year-old woman's car was found abandoned on the 4.3-mile bridge which spans the bay between Annapolis, Md., and Maryland's Eastern Shore. The motor was running and the lights were on. There was blood on the floorboard and a bloody towel lay nearby.

Miss Krzywicki's mother said Saturday she's convinced her daughter, recently engaged to be married, jumped.

Maryland Police listed her as a missing person and said that if she did jump from the twin-span bridge, her body would probably not wash ashore for about a week.

Miss Krzywicki's car was found at a point on the bridge about 160 feet above the water. "I don't have any hope at all," Jean Krzywicki said from her home in Chula Vista, Calif. "From what the police told me, they thought for sure she'd gone over the bridge."

Bay Bridge Police Sgt. William Hasenel said the blood in the car indicated the woman may have tried some other method of suicide before apparently jumping. He said Miss Krzywicki reportedly slit her wrists at least one time previously.

Mrs. Krzywicki said her daughter, a 1976 graduate of the University of California at Berkeley, had been depressed because she wasn't satisfied with her own performance as a newspaper reporter.

"She was out here in June for a visit, and we talked to her on the telephone several times since then, but not in last four or five days," she said.

dominant in the area," Duggan said.

"We got a very contemporary feeling from this area, from the clean, uncluttered lines in the architecture to the casual lifestyles of the people."

Results were fed into a master computer and the finished product, Duggan said, is a custom-designed store especially suited to the needs of the people of Midland.

"No two Sears stores anywhere in the country are exactly alike — this store was designed very differently from the one in Bangor, Maine, for instance," he said. "Snow skis are one item we won't be selling here, for example. But we noticed a tremendous western flair in this area and, as a result, our western wear department will be quite expansive."

Regional differences between Midland and Odessa were even picked up by Duggan's staff, who also designed the relatively new Sears store in Odessa's Permian Mall.

"Because Midland is essentially more of an office town, we noticed a lot more suits and neckties here," he said, "although the overall feel for this area is casual."

The new Sears is twice as big as the old location, and the automotive department has been doubled as well.

"We've also added several extra features, such as a photo studio, optometry shop, beauty salon, and a combined candy shop and restaurant."

"SINCE 80 PERCENT of our customers are women, we specially designed the store to appeal to women. For instance, we used all of fashion's newest colors throughout the store, and we placed the women's apparel section nearest the mall entrance."

"We realize that most of the women in this area are both homemakers and workers, and want to save as much time and avoid as much inconvenience as they can while doing their shopping, so we've streamlined processes such as package pick-up and catalog pickup to save as much time as possible."

One killed in Union Station fire

CHICAGO (AP) — An apparent electrical fire spread heavy smoke through cavernous Union Station on Saturday, killing one person and injuring 20 others, including five firefighters.

At least six people were rescued from the roof of the block-square structure by two helicopters, police said. Others climbed through fire doors or windows, and waited on parapets and wide ledges to be rescued by fire ladders.

Most of those in the vast eight-story, railroad terminal with its stately columns were employees of various rail lines, authorities said. Several dozen were trapped, firefighters said, but there was no panic.

Smoke choked the corridors and billowed in great white clouds from windows methodically broken by firefighters and the force of fire hoses.

'Relatively Speaking' to open Friday

"Relatively Speaking," a British comedy of mistaken identity, opens an eight-performance run at Theatre Midland on Friday. This production will be staged in Theatre Two, the smaller, more flexible stage in the Theatre Midland complex. Alan Ayckbourn, Britain's answer to Neil Simon, is the author of "Relatively Speaking." Other Ayckbourn comedies which have been seen on the MCT stage include "How the Other Half Loves" and "Absurd Person Singular." The plot centers around the complications of terminating one romance while commencing another. Jerry Watson of Midland College is director. Heading his cast will be Mavis Murphy, a young woman with two men on the line. Her new love is Robert Russell while John Taylor will play the soon-to-be discarded suitor. Adding to the confusion will be Taylor's wife, played by Shirley Ireland. Frank Motyka is stage manager. For reservations call 682-4111.

City Council's agenda light

The dog days of summer apparently have hit City Hall. The agenda for City Council's session that starts at 10 a.m. Tuesday in City Hall appears sparse of meaty items.

Dates and times should be set for public hearings on the proposed city budget for 1980-81 and the tax rate.

The budget went up 22 percent to $2.7 million. The proposed tax rate of 45 cents per $100 on 75 percent of the valuation is lower than the current 63 cents. However, since valuations were increased, the 45 cents should bring in more money for the city's coffers.

Chaparral Aviation will request permission to renovate two rooms in one of its hangars. R.W. Browne and Basin Flying Service will ask for T-hangars to be constructed at Midland Air Park.

A public hearing at 3 p.m. will review an amendment to the zoning ordinance to create an O-2, office district that would allow for six story office buildings. The council also will consider exempting filing fee requests for specific use permits in temporary Agriculture Estates districts.

Providing out-of-city water services to county residents will be discussed.

Other items include discussing the possibility of hiring the Urban Land Institute to study south and southeast Midland, public hearings for numerous zone change requests and accepting a bid for labor and material to install an automatic irrigation system in the Downtown Park.

Woman arrested in 1978 stabbing

Almost two years after the event, a 36-year-old Midland woman has been arrested and charged with capital murder in connection with the stabbing death of a Gardendale storekeeper.

Late Friday morning Midland police arrested Doris Maxine Duson of Midland on a warrant issued by Ector County Peace Justice Virgil Lumpee. She was charged with capital murder in connection with the Oct. 24, 1978, stabbing death of Floyd McArthur, 66.

Peace Justice Robert H. Pine set bond at $100,000. Ms. Duson then was transferred to Ector County Jail.

Two other persons were named as accomplices in the stabbing. The man, Kenneth Thomas, was fatally shot in Midland about a month after McArthur's killing.

Ms. Duson was charged with Thomas' death, according to police. She pleaded guilty and received a three-year probation sentence. The other woman involved has not been charged and is living out of state, said police.

McArthur died after being stabbed once in the heart during a robbery of his store, Mac's Country Store, at FM 1788 on Highway 158 in Gardendale. The assailants took about $100. Investigators managed only to find one witness who had seen a car at the store at the time of the robbery.

But last week, investigators finally got a break when an informant came forward with information, said police.

Authorities would not identify the informant, saying only that the person was facing a murder charge in another incident, was not at the McArthur murder scene and was an associate of the suspects.

Capt. Gene Kloss of the Ector County Sheriff's Department criminal investigation division said, "The information we received from the informant has checked out with what we knew about the incident and what no one else could have known unless they were at the scene."

Commissioners to discuss 12-item agenda on Monday

Midland County commissioners will consider a 12-item agenda at 1:30 a.m. Monday when they met in a regular session in the Commissioners' Courtroom on the second floor of the courthouse.

The agenda includes: —Discussion of status of low-interest bond program for Midland. —Consider request of the Permian Basin Mental Health-Mental Retardation for funds for court appearances and child-welfare examinations. —Consider appointment of a Midland City-County Health Department doctor. —Discussion of a proposed contract between the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and Midland County as a new rate of $500 per man beginning Sept. 1. —Consider transferring a 48-acre parcel of land adjacent to the south edge of Texas Electric Service Co.'s Service Center to TESCO for a fair-market value of $4,320.

—Consider accepting an agreement proposed by the Policy Advisory Committee of the Midland-Odessa Regional Transportation Study. —Consider request by Sheriff Dallas Smith for a generator. —Hear reports by County Judge Bill Ahders and Commissioners Durward Wright, Charlie Welch, Jack Leonard and Win Brown.

Officials disagree on need for officers to take in-car pursuit training course

By KAY CRITES

Hoyt Axton will appear in concert Wednesday night at the Stardust, 1008 S. Midkiff Road. "When the Morning Comes," "Bony Fingers," "Della and the Dealer" and "Rusty Ole Halo" are among the songs for which he is known. His concerts usually center around his songs and storytelling capabilities. Backup band will be Pepper Martin. Doors open at 8 p.m.

A large parking lot and a few traffic cones might have prevented at least some of 91 traffic accidents that in recent years involved on-duty Midland police officers, says Officer Steve Otto, author of a master's thesis dealing with police in vehicle accidents.

Police officials, however, disagree with some of Otto's conclusions, including the cost for an in-car pursuit driver's training course for officers. They estimate adequate facilities to give the training would run well over quarter of a million dollars.

The 91 accidents studied occurred in a three-year period from 1977 to 1979. Eight officers were injured, as well as seven civilians. Another civilian was killed.

Otto, in his thesis, suggests that in-car driver's training might lower these figures. Currently, Midland officers are given only classroom, defensive driving classes, like those available to any citizen.

Training for new officers is mandated by the state Commission on Law Enforcement Standards and Education. Under a new curriculum, which begins this fall, the commission eliminated driver's training.

According to Vince Conklin, who is in charge of the Permian Basin Law Enforcement Academy, the commission conducted a study several years ago, asking police officers how they spent most of their time. The study reflected that relatively little time was spent in actual pursuit; therefore training for in-pursuit driving is unnecessary, said Conklin, explaining the commission's logic.

SHOULD THE 17 counties whose officers are trained at the academy agree to support the facility with local funds this fall, they could decide to add driving courses to the state's required curriculum. However, Police Chief Wayne Gideon said the issue "has not been discussed at this point."

In his recommendations, Otto has suggested a 24-hour course, which would include training in such things as maximum breaking, backing and turning, accident avoidance and hazard avoidance.

He claims all that would be needed is a large parking lot and some traffic cones to set up the exercises.

"This thing is a skill," Otto said about driving. "It's something you have to practice every day. For the basic driver's skills, all you need is a parking lot and traffic cones. A lot of accidents were caused by backing down an alley, not seeing that gas meter and running over it."

Otto's thesis breaks down the 91 accidents into categories. Thirty-five, by far the largest number, occurred while the officer was driving during the course of duty but not in response to a call.

Lt. Herman Wicker, head of the traffic division, agrees that many of these accidents did involve such things as backing over gas meters.

"THIS IS A lot of our accidents. It's night; our officers are checking buildings, and they pull up into a close place. Or they're answering a call and when they start to back out there's an object close to the ground they don't see and they'll back into it."

"Just training him how to back up properly and how to watch and control his vehicle" could help, he said.

"But we're only looking at 20 accidents out of 91 that involves possibly the police officer's skills. A high percentage were at night, and that is mostly a lack of visibility on low objects. In that situation, even with all the training, unless you get out and look you are still going to have these accidents," he added.

"One serious accident is bad and if it could have been avoided by training we should have it. But over a three-year period I don't really feel 20 accidents is going to upset too many people," Wicker concluded.

Other categories included 17 accidents during pursuit, with seven of those resulting in deliberate ramblings of the vehicle being chased. Eight accidents occurred while the officer was responding to a call; and 29 were termed "unavoidable," such as being backed into while parked.

In his thesis, Otto points out that during the three years, 24.1 percent of the officers were involved in accidents, compared to 4.2 percent of the populace. Of course, he admits that the comparison isn't the best, since officers drive much more than the average citizen and they are more often placed in high-stress driving situations.

IDEAL SITUATION would have been to compare Midland officers to a similar-sized department that had driver's training. But there weren't any.

"I don't know if this is high," Otto admitted.

"This is basically a descriptive study. Provided training, will the accidents decrease? We won't know until the training is provided."

Wicker also pointed out that Otto divided the number of civilian accidents, 3,403, into the entire populace, 78,000, when in actuality the average number of people involved in each accident is two.

"If you take the percentage of 6,806 accidents in 78,000 it's not quite as bad as it sounds."

"I AGREE WITH him (Otto) that every police department or anyone else who drives as much as we do needs as much training as we can get. We would like to see it put into effect, but there are limitations."

However, for an actual pursuit driving course, Wicker said the department would need a paved area large enough to set up a road track and skid pad (area either wet or oiled to induce skids), with buildings and plumbing.

He also said it would have to be secluded. "Otherwise you'll have the public out there watching and if a car went out of control you'd kill half the spectators."

The recommendations made by Otto have been discussed by the city's Accident Review Board. This board, composed of city department members, reviews all on-the-job accidents and any reported off-duty accidents and makes recommendations to the city manager concerning the liability and responsibility of the person involved.

Board Chairman David Hunter, who has been on the board 1 1/2 years, said that "on a department to department basis — and of course they have a larger number of vehicles and a larger amount of time driving as part of the job — we probably reviewed more accidents from that department than any other. Apparently from information Steve's gathered, there is some indication these programs do help."

Otto quoted figures from several departments throughout the nation that do have driving courses. They reported 26 to 58 percent decreases in injuries, day and wage losses and vehicular damage costs.

"I think a program like this would be worth a try," Hunter said. However, Hunter said the board probably would not be making any recommendations concerning the study. That, he added, would need to come from the Police Department.

Attorneys likely to appeal $10 damage award in child's death

ATLANTA (AP) — A defense attorney said Saturday he would recommend filing an appeal of a jury's decision awarding only $10 in a $2 million damage suit against the city of Morrow in the 1976 police slaying of a 14-year-old boy.

After deliberating for six hours, the federal court jury Thursday found the city guilty of "gross negligence" in the shooting death of Dale Bragg by police officer William Howard.

But the $10 award to the boy's parents outraged defense attorney James Edwards of Decatur, who said he would recommend that the family seek a third trial in the case. The first trial in June ended in a hung jury.

"Legally, what the jury decided was that the city was at fault and that the value of a 14-year-old boy's life is $10," Edwards said.

The youth was shot to death by Howard during the investigation of a possible burglary at a vacant house. The officer fired when Bragg and two companions fled from the building.

Howard, who said the shooting was an accident, had been cleared of criminal charges by a Clayton County grand jury.

During the second trial on the damage suit, city attorneys introduced a psychological evaluation that showed the youth to be a "schizophrenic childhood type," Edwards noted in a telephone interview Saturday.

Edwards speculated that the detailed report was introduced to "minimize the damages, but to do that you have to accept the idea that the value of a schizophrenic child's life is less than that of a normal child."

Minnows stir West Texas row

DEL RIO, Texas (AP) — An issue of minnows and men became an age-old battle over water rights here when a federal plan to save endangered fish was taken to task by angry residents who claim their only source of water is the tiny minnows' home.

A Department of Interior proposal outlines a plan to declare the Devil's River and San Felipe Springs a "critical habitat," and thereby place Del Rio's sole source of drinking water under federal control.

Attending a meeting held Wednesday night by the Department of the Interior in Del Rio, representatives of the Texas Sheep and Goat Administration, Val Verde County Commissioners Court, the Texas Department of Water Resources, City Council of Del Rio and Southwest Texas ranchers and businessmen criticized the plan.

At issue is the threatened extinction of the Dionda Diaball minnow through overuse of ground water feeding springs that provide the only home for the tiny minnows, according to the Fish and Wildlife Commission.

Lotario D. Ortega, field solicitor for the Interior Department, listened to the various complaints at a meeting designed to solicit public input for the plan.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Set aside some quiet time for study or reading. A friendship may develop when and where you least expect it. Pursue a romantic interest to a happy conclusion.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take the initiative when it comes to planning social activities. Be very honest when talking with young people. A relative who is quick to accuse others of hypocrisy may be guilty of self-deception.

Volcano climber recalls Vesuvius

By DAN LIEFGREEN
 Scottsdale Progress

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Although the spirit of adventure that spurred James J. Hall to twice walk up the side of Mount Vesuvius during its March 1944 eruption has waned with the years, his curiosity about volcanoes has been rekindled by the Mount St. Helens eruptions.

"There was a terrific, roaring noise when it (Vesuvius) erupted. It looked like a crown of fire," recalled Hall, a Scottsdale resident who photographed Vesuvius' eruption March 18, 1944, from the balcony of an Allied officers' club overlooking the Bay of Naples. Hall was stationed in Naples with the Air Force.

"Curiosity and adventure" led him to travel up the side of the simmering mountain during its six days of eruption, he said.

"It was a sight unparalleled to my eyes ... ash could be seen from the entire bay," said Hall.

Two days before Vesuvius erupted, Hall flew over it and remembers peering into its gigantic crater.

"There was no indication of an eruption ... It looked like Sunset Crater (near Flagstaff)."

The night after the 3,668-foot-high mountain erupted, Hall and five other officers crowded into a command car and drove about half-way up the side of the mountain. They abandoned the car and walked to take a closer look at the lava gushing an estimated 45 mph and 100 feet wide.

A piece of lava lodged in one of his untied boots, he said, and he found it to be "uncomfortably hot." Standing next to the molten lava reminded Hall of working inside a Birmingham, Ala., blast furnace.

fortune. Be careful not to fan the flames!
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Break away from old habits, habits. Research and study can shed new light on old dilemmas. Emotions become more tranquil after candid talk with family member. Be firm about sticking to budget.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Follow through on project that has suffered several delays. Intuition is accurate guide where a romantic request is concerned. Be honest if unable to live up to loved one's expectations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Postpone signing agreement, contract until more information is available. Friend who claims to "be in the know" is really in the dark. Make own investigation of any hard-to-believe claims.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Courageous adherence to your beliefs can pay off royally. Influential person may offer you opportunity to travel and learn. Find the time to make new friends, contacts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Tend to legal matters without delay. Do all possible to put business, social contacts at ease. Someone who often acts belligerent may prove to be a pleasant companion this afternoon.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Finalize business negotiations today. Plan short mid-week journey that will provide a much needed change of scenery. Close friend may be unable to give objective advice. Be understanding of this person's dilemma.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Career affairs demand more attention than usual. Be alert to the motives of others. Ability to write or speak foreign language can be a big advantage in business ventures.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Let others take the lead today. Tempo at work is apt to be slow. Use extra time to promote project that is a potential money-maker. Investigate the possibilities of forming a new partnership.

'Father Christmas' survives close call in Minnesota

STILLWATER, Minn. (AP) — The Stillwater school board has decided the "Father Christmas" cartoon book is not the best dealing with Santa Claus or Christmas but isn't bad enough to be banned.

By a vote of 6-0, the board agreed the book could remain in the library of the Lakeland-Afton Elementary School. However, the board agreed that the book should be removed from the shelves used by first, second and third-graders.

The book by British artist-author Raymond Briggs depicts a Santa Claus who complains about winter weather, his traditional duties of distributing gifts and things in general. It concludes by showing Santa faithfully delivering gifts and returning home to gifts of his own. The only one he apparently likes is a bottle of cognac.

Most school board members said they would ban "really morally offensive" books but felt "Father Christmas" did not fit into that category.

Family now facing $1,500 water bill

ROCKWALL, Texas (AP) — In contrast to the rest of Texas, just about everything in Rockwall County is small. Everything, that is, except water bills from the small Mt. Zion Water Supply Co.

Mt. Zion serves rural areas in the northern part of the smallest county in Texas, about 30 miles northwest of Dallas. The company recently notified customers its rates were being hiked from 70 cents to $10 per thousand gallons for customers who use more than 40,000 gallons a month, to encourage conservation.

"We're just trying to keep them from using so dad-blamed much," said Mt. Zion manager J.E. Harris Jr., explaining the increase.

But the rate hike is extremely bad news for Rosemary Brandler. She, her husband and three children moved to a one-acre country home in Rockwall County in 1976, and one of their home improvements was extensive landscaping. Last month, she said, they used almost 180,000 gallons of water and the new rate, in the form of a surcharge, would boost their monthly water bill from $130 to more than $1,500.

"We could never pay that," she said. "We'll have to look into the legal aspects. There has to be some kind of regulation that will prevent this heavy-handed tactic."

Harris claims it was far from heavy-handed. Rather, he said, it was a last-resort effort at cutting down water consumption during the drought, after pleas for voluntary conservation went unheeded.

He said he asked customers to water their lawns only between midnight and 10 a.m.

"They paid attention to that about a week," he said.

He said his customers have been using about two million gallons a day more than the normal amount, and he was besieged with complaints from customers with low or no water pressure until he instituted the new rate. Now, said Harris, consumption has dropped and the water system is coping with demand.

He said he hopes to eliminate the surcharge once it rains.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON Medical teams await hostages

Dear Dr. Solomon: Has our government made any plans from a medical standpoint to care for the hostages in Iran once they are released? — Mrs. W.W.

Dear Mrs. W.: According to the publication "U.S. Medicine," the State Department has assembled a team of physicians experienced in dealing with hostages and prisoners of war to care for the Americans being held captive. The team includes both military and civilian government psychiatrists. Once the hostages are released, they will be taken to a military hospital either in Europe or the United States, where they will be treated for any physical illnesses or injuries incurred during their period of captivity.

It is likely that the hostages will be transported to the Air Force Hospital in Wiesbaden, Germany, where the first group to be set free was taken last November. There, they will go through a decompression period — that is, a period during which they will be helped to make the transition from confinement to freedom. Exactly how they will be handled will depend on the circumstances of their release, including whether they are all released at the same time.

Dr. Frank L. Pettinga, assistant medical director for health care programs, believes the transition may take longer for some than for others. It is a general rule that the longer the period of captivity, the longer the period of adjustment needed. This opinion is shared by Dr. Herbert C. Haynes, assistant medical director for mental services. He points out that the hostages will have been exposed to life in captivity for several months, and that it would be unrealistic to believe that they could resume their former lives without a period of readjustment. He notes that one of the military personnel who was released last November after 17 days as a hostage was preoccupied with the experience for a week after his release.

The physical problems of the hostages, which could include parasitic or infectious diseases and nutritional deficiencies, will be managed by the hospital's general medical staff. For example, one hostage noted in a letter that made its way to the United States that he had lost 40 pounds. The hostages will be helped to adapt to a better diet and to adjust to new sleep cycles.

Group therapy will be emphasized as well. Dr. Haynes believes that the opportunity to talk over their experiences among themselves after their ordeal is over will provide mutual support.

Dr. Haynes notes further that the hostage situation has created anxieties for the foreign service community in general. Most of its members probably have a friend or acquaintance among the hostages. The stresses and strains placed on the foreign service corps have enhanced the importance of the State Department's mental health programs.

The department's office of medical services provides care to foreign service personnel stationed in ambassadorial posts in foreign countries, as well as to persons conducting government business abroad. These include employees of the Agency for International Development and of the Department of Agriculture. At present, the medical services division has two psychiatrists stationed overseas, one in New Delhi, the other in Vienna.

(If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Dr. Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Carver makes good use of precious wood supply

SUN CITY, Ariz. (AP) — Carl Underwood once burned wood to heat his home, but not today — he has a better use for it.

"All of a sudden I thought of wood and woodcarving and that was it," he says. "I got a knife and checked it out."

That was 37 years ago, and never a dull moment with his carving since, he says. "I'm always working on something."

"I hardly throw anything away except sawdust, and then sometimes keep it for making a glue paste," he adds. "Wood is getting so costly and hard to get, especially good wood such as walnut, mahogany and maple."

Underwood specializes in working with various types.

"It takes a couple of weeks sometimes to figure out the pattern and how the woodgrain will go with the pattern," he explains. "The woodgrain enhances the piece."

He says he gives most of what he carves to friends. And though he's often asked to design a special piece for someone, he also often says no.

Bob Lilly

Lilly blossoms into Dallas' first Hall of Famer

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Jim Otto, Herb Adderley, Dayid "Deacon" Jones and Bob Lilly will move into the Pro Football Hall of Fame Saturday before the Green Bay Packers and San Diego Chargers launch the 1980 season.

The annual AFC-NFC Hall of Fame exhibition traditionally serves as the first of the preseason tuneups for the National Football League. It will be carried by ABC-TV, beginning at 2:30 p.m. CDT.

The 1980 enshrinement, staged on the steps of the game's shrine at 12 noon CDT, will swell the list of its immortals to 106.

Of this year's enshrinees, all but Adderley were elected in their first year of eligibility after five seasons in retirement. The four are from the same era, Otto beginning in the old American Football League in 1960 and the others in the NFL in 1971.

OTTO'S SELECTION climaxes an incredible career. Considered too small for the pro sport at 205 pounds, the University of Miami (Fla.) product went on to become the only all-league center in the AFL's decade.

He is the first Oakland Raider chosen for the shrine and admits it will be an emotional moment Saturday when he is presented by Al Davis, the Raiders' managing general partner.

"When the time (his hall selection) came, I was so choked up I couldn't even tell my wife Sally for awhile," said the 42-year-old native of Wausau, Wis.

Lilly, a Texas Christian All-American defensive tackle, will be scoring another first. He is the initial Dallas Cowboy named to the shrine. The team's first No. 1 draft choice in 1961 also was the Cowboys' first Pro Bowl performer in 1962 and its first All-NFL selection in 1964.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry, Lilly's Hall of Fame presenter, says of the 41-year-old Throckmorton, Tex., native, "A man like this comes along once in a generation. There won't be another Bob Lilly in my time. He is a man who will become a legend." Lilly, 6-foot-5 and 250 pounds, was "A man like this comes along once in a generation. There won't be another Bob Lilly in my time. He is a man who will become a legend." — Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry who will present Lilly at Pro Football Hall of Fame induction.

selected for 11 Pro Bowls and was a consensus All-NFL choice eight times, six of them in a row. He played in 196 straight regular season games.

Jones, now 41, skyrocketed to pro stardom after the Los Angeles Rams made him a 14th round draft choice from Mississippi Vocational College. The 6-4, 272-pound defensive end, from Eatonville, Fla., developed so rapidly that he became an all-league choice six straight years and played in eight Pro Bowls.

HE SET A CLUB single-season record of 53 sacks and coined the term for tackling an opposing quarterback for a loss.

"Like, you know, you sack a city — you devastate it. And the word is so short you can even get Deacon in front of Jones in some headlines," he said of the sport's new word.

Jones, who finished his career with the Chargers and the Washington Redskins, will be presented by George Allen, his coach with both the Rams and the Redskins.

The 6-1, 200-pound Adderley, a cornerback, becomes the sixth Green Bay enshrinee, including late Coach Vince Lombardi, from the Packers' dynasty in the 1960s. The No. 1 1981 draft choice out of Michigan State earned all-league acclaim five times and played on a team that won five NFL titles and the first two Super Bowls.

Adderley, 41, from Philadelphia, had 48 career interceptions. His philosophy on playing: "When people leave the stadium, I want them to say they've just watched one of the best cornerbacks they've ever seen in their lives."

ADDERLEY, WHO played the last three seasons of his career in Dallas, will be presented by Willie Davis, the Packers' great defensive end.

The accompanying exhibition before a Fawcett Stadium sellout of 20,000 will mark the first Hall of Fame appearance for the Chargers.

Midland salvages doubleheader split

By TERRY WILLIAMSON Sports Writer

When Texas League Division leaders meet on the same field, one expects to see tight fisted, close games. Well, the Jackson Mets, leaders of the East, met the Midland Cubs, leaders of the West, Saturday at Cubs Stadium and the close part was right, but maybe loose fisted is more appropriate for the twinbill split.

The Jackson Mets got a three-run homer from Bill Haslerig in the first game to post a 4-3 decision over the Cubs, and Midland came back in the nightcap with three runs in the sixth, two unearned, to take a 9-6 win and a split.

But it was shoddy play in both games that may have turned the tide for both teams.

IN THE FIRST game, Jackson scored all four runs in the third inning off loser Herman Segelke, but it wasn't necessarily all his fault even though all the runs were earned. With one out and Ron Gardenhire on second base, Ed Cuervo grounded back to Segelke. Segelke caught Gardenhire in between second and third, but the Cubs never made the play as Gardenhire got back to second safely.

Gardenhire then scored on a single by Mike Howard and that proved to be the margin of victory. Later in the inning, Haslerig unloaded his ninth homer of the season with two men on for the eventual game winning hit even though the Mets managed only five hits off Segelke, who threw just the one bad pitch.

Haslerig's ninth homer doesn't sound like much, but he has only been with the Mets for 19 games and he already has 26 RBI. In the last seven games, he has hit five homers and driven home 13.

The Cubs scored two runs in the fourth frame to get back in the game as Joe Hicks, on a homer tear himself, hit a solo job to left for his 18th of the year. Then Gary Krug later scored on a single by Jim Payne. Midland scored another in the seventh when Mike O'Berry doubled and scored on a single by Scott Fletcher, but the Cubs left two men on base in the final inning and the run down play came back to haunt them.

IN THE SECOND game, Midland held a 2-1 lead heading into the third after O'Berry knocked home two runs with a booming double to center in the second, but the Cubs fell behind again in the fourth when fielding problems arose again.

Brian Giles doubled down the left field line with Keno Perry on first, but Randy LaVigne let the ball get past him in left. Perry scored and Giles went to third and scored on a ground-er by Gardenhire for a 3-2 lead.

Midland came back with four in the fifth on a two-run double by Fletcher and run scoring hits by Tom Grant and Joe Hicks to make up for the error. But in the sixth, Gary Krug misjudged a fly ball by Perry in right and let it fall over his head for a double and that opened the gates for a three-run uprising that chased Jon Pearlman, who was seeking his 11th win of the year.

Jackson, however, was not to be outdone, and shortstop Gardenhire threw a ball away on a force play at second, allowing Krug to score from second with the game winner. The Cubs got two more in the inning for the final 9-6 margin.

Sally Little of South Africa grimaces during Saturday's action in the Western Union International Classic at Meadowbrook Country Club in Jericho, N.Y. Still, she fired a 69 to take a comfortable cushion into today's final round. (AP Laserphoto)

Little enjoys big LPGA event lead

JERICHO, N.Y. (AP) — Sally Little of South Africa, winner of the Ladies Professional Golf Association championship earlier in the year, shot a 69 to take the 54-hole lead with a 7-under-par 209 Saturday in the $125,000 tournament at the Meadowbrook Club.

The 29-year-old Little, who had an eagle-3 on the par-5, 472-yard third hole, had a three-stroke lead over Sandra Palmer, whose 71 gave her 212.

Amy Alcott, the U.S. Open titlist less than a month ago, carded a 70 on the par-72, 6,347-yard course to remain in contention with a 213.

Alcott, the leading money winner on the circuit with $155,651, has a two-stroke advantage over Beth Daniel, runnerup in the tourney last year. Dot Germain and Judy Clark, Daniel, in her second year on the tour, shot a 69 to tie Little for the best round of the day while Germain had a 70 and Clark a 73.

Patty Hayes, who was tied with Little at 140 going into the third round, fell apart with a 79 and dropped to a 3-over-par 219.

"This was a lot more consistent round than yesterday," said Little, who is seventh on the money list with $90,729.

She was referring to Friday's 31-40 en route to a 71.

"Today I hit a lot of greens," she said, "and it's a great feeling to stand up there and know that you can put the ball where you want to. Hopefully, it will continue one more round."

"My strategy is going to be the same tomorrow. I'm just going out there and hit the ball, not worry about anybody else, and, above all, I won't play it safe."

Asked about her consistency over the past two years, the 10-year veteran of the tour replied: "I'm getting older and wiser and I am not as impatient as I used to be. On top of that, I feel a lot more confident in America than when I first came here. And I also trust my game a lot more."

Palmer, winless on the tour since 1977, admitted to feeling the pressure because of her victory drought.

"I've worked very hard the last couple of years," said the 39-year-old native of Fort Worth, Texas. "You have to hit good shots to get into contention and you have to make them. Today I didn't make enough putts, and I left two of them hanging on the cup."

"Sally's been playing very well, and I figure I have to shoot two or three under par if I'm going to have a chance to catch her."

Alcott, who gained her 2-under-par 70 with a pair of 35s, was happy with her round, explaining: "My game is under control. Don't count me out. I came out today to have fun. I'm sure Sally will continue to play well, but I'm coming out tomorrow to get her. Anybody can be caught."

The tournament is sponsored by Western Union International.

Twitty blisters Wethersfield Country Club course

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Howard Twitty says he has no target score in mind for Sunday's final round of the $300,000 Greater Hartford Open, but the third-round leader believes a 67 might give him a victory.

"Whoever shoots a 20-under will have a great shot," said Twitty, whose 8-under-par 63 Saturday left him at 16-under 197 after 54 holes. "I'm not going to set any target, but I would have an awful good chance (to win) if I shoot a 67."

Twitty's 54-hole total of 197 was a tournament record at the 6,534-yard Wethersfield Country Club course. The previous record of 198 had been held by three others — Art Wall, Wes Ellis and Bob Murphy.

"Confidence builds on good play," Twitty said, "and I should be pretty confident tomorrow."

"I made a lot of good putts," Twitty said, "but unless you're Houdini, you don't shoot in the low 60s without making a lot of putts."

Jim Simons, who led the first two rounds, was alone in second at 199. Simons shot a 4-under 67 round that included four birdies. Simons had tied the opening-round record Thursday with a 9-under 62.

Lindy Miller shot a 66 to move into sole possession of third with a 13-under 200.

Six were tied for fourth at 12-under

201. Shooting the best round of the six was Gary Hallberg, who like Twitty, shot 63. He was followed by Bobby Nichols with a 64, Antonio Certa with a 66, Jaime Gonzalez with a 67, and Lee Trevino and John Fought with 68s.

Twitty amassed ten birdies en route to bettering the three-round record, but he had two bogeys, one on the 17th. He parred both 13 and 18.

Ovett defeats Coe in battle of Britons But Russians continue Olympics domination

MOSCOW (AP) — Steve Ovett, the quiet Britisher, took the lead on the final turn and beat archrival Sebastian Coe by a half second in the Moscow Olympics 800-meter run Saturday night. It was the first half of the British grudge match that winds up Friday with the 1,500-meter run.

A capacity Lenin Stadium crowd of 103,000 roared for the British for a change. The local crowd had plenty to cheer about with Soviet athletes dominating these Games boycotted by 36 nations because of Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Daley Thompson of Britain won the gold medal in the decathlon but failed to break the Olympic record set by Bruce Jenner of the United States in the 1976 Montreal Games. Daley finished last in the 1,500-meter run, the 10th and final event, but was the first Briton since 1904 to win the overall competition.

Petra Schneider set a world record of 4:36.29 Saturday in the final of the 400-meter individual swim medley, giving the East German women their ninth gold medal in 10 Olympic races.

Schneider broke her own world record of 4 minutes, 38.44 seconds. Another East German gold went to Ute Geweher with a time of 1:10.22 in the 100-meter breaststroke. She had broken her own world record of 1:10.11 in the preliminaries.

In a freak accident in the fencing competition, a Polish fencer's foil snapped and went through his Soviet competitor's body. The foil went through the back of Vladimir Lapitsky's arm and came through the front of his chest. It damaged a blood vessel but missed Lapitsky's heart, and he was described as not in serious condition at a hospital.

Through Saturday, the Soviet Union had won 39 gold medals and 93 total medals to 20 golds and 62 total for runnerup East Germany. Twenty-four world records were set in the first week of the Games.

Alberto Mercado, a 19-year-old Puerto Rican boxer who had been considered a medal hope, lost to Mexican Roman Gilberto because of a cut Saturday in a 112-pound bout. Mercado, one of only a handful of U.S. citizens at these Games, cried after a doctor stopped the bout at 1:32 of the first round because of a cut on his right eyelid.

Thompson, the new Olympic decathlon champion, piled up 8,495 points in the 10 events. Going into the final event, he had a good chance at Jenner's Olympic mark of 8,617 and the world record of 8,649 held by Guido Kratschmer of West Germany, a nation which also is boycotting these Games.

To surpass Jenner, Thompson needed to run a 4:22.6 in the 1,500. To beat Kratschmer's mark, he needed to run a 4:17.2. But the previous nine events obviously had taken a toll, and he could manage only a 4:39.9.

Other track and field gold medalists Saturday were Ludmilla Kondratyeva of the Soviet Union in the women's 100-meter high jump with an Olympic record of 6 feet, 5 1/2 inches, and Volker Beck of East Germany in the men's 400-meter intermediate hurdles in 48.70 seconds.

In swimming events Saturday, Sandor Wladar of Hungary won the 200-meter backstroke in 2:01.93. Mark Kerry of Australia, who lives in Los Angeles, took the bronze.

Robertas Zulpa of the Soviet Union won the gold in the 200-meter breaststroke in 2:15.85.

Heike Dahne of East Germany set an Olympic record in qualifying for Sunday night's final of the women's 800-meter freestyle. She was clocked in 8:36.09 to break the previous mark of 8:37.14 set by Petra Thumer of East Germany in 1976.

Yurik Vardanyan of the Soviet Union set three world weightlifting records Saturday night and won the gold medal in the Olympic 182-pound class. He lifted 390.5 pounds in the snatch, set a jerk record of 499.5 pounds and a combined record of 880 pounds.

France won the gold medal in the men's team foil event after the accident in which the Soviet fencer was injured.

Last-minute touchdown allows South to triumph

HOUSTON (AP) — LaPorte's Ricki Byars rammmed nine yards for a touchdown and Falls City's Robert Pawelek kicked the winning extra point with 2:20 left to give the South a 7-6 victory over the North Saturday night in the Texas High School Football Coaches Association All-Star football game.

Byars' touchdown offset a 25-yard touchdown reception by McKinney's Jamie Harris with six seconds left in the first half.

A disappointed Astrodome crowd of 11,624, the smallest attendance since 1957, watched the South narrow its deficit in the series to 25-16-4 in the third consecutive 7-6 final score. The North won last year's game.

The South started its winning drive with 6:23 remaining on a 29-yard run by Austin Anderson's Bobby Micho. Spring Branch's Mike Luck, who will attend the University of Texas with Micho, contributed key runs of 9, 3 and 4 yards to the march.

Harris, who will attend Texas Tech, cut behind South defensive back Don Johnson of Carlisle to catch the touchdown pass from Highland Park's Lance McIlhenny.

The drive had started on the North's 45-yard line following a 3-yard punt by Doug Johnson of Pasadena Rayburn. Harris helped set up his touchdown with a 13-yard catch, also from McIlhenny.

Paul Goodie of Aldine Eisenhower broke through and blocked the extra point by the North's Mike Funderberg of Breckenridge.

Brown Delozier of Lakeview Centennial intercepted three South passes, including one return of 21 yards that bruted a fourth-quarter drive.

Misho, who gained 67 yards on 12 carries, was named the most valuable back for the South. Goodie and Gregory Portland's Tommy Robison shared the lineman honors for the South.

Harris, who caught four passes for 65 yards, earned MVP honors for the North and Tyler John Tyler's Keith Guthrie received lineman honors for the Yanks.

Bryant enters hospital

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Alabama football Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant entered Druid City Hospital Saturday for tests and to have his medication regulated before the start of fall football practice, school officials said.

"My doctors have been after me to come in for a checkup so they could get my medicine right before we start practice," the 66-year-old Bryant said.

Eckersley's pitching baffles Twins

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Dennis Eckersley, 6-9, tossed a four-hitter and struck out six batters and Carl Yastrzemski homered as the Boston Red Sox beat the Minnesota Twins 5-1 Saturday. Yastrzemski highlighted an 11-hit attack for Boston with his 12th homer of the year, a solo shot in the eighth inning off loser Roger Erickson, 3-8. Yastrzemski, who also doubled and scored in the second, now has 416 career homers, 17th on the all-time list, 10 behind Billy Williams. Boston got to Erickson early, taking a 2-0 lead in the second.

Charboneau's hitting boosts Tribe

CLEVELAND (AP) — Rookie Joe Charboneau drove in four runs and Ron Hassey knocked in three to pace Cleveland to a 14-4 rout of the California Angels Saturday, the Indians' fifth consecutive victory. Wayne Garland, 5-3, allowed four runs in six innings for the victory. Victor Cruz held the Angels the rest of the way to earn his fourth save. The Indians pounded out 18 hits. Hassey followed Charboneau's first-inning two-run triple with two-run homer, his third of the season, giving the Indians a 4-0 lead against Don Aase, 5-12. The Indians put it away with six runs in the eighth.

Detroit hammers Oakland, 7-0

DETROIT (AP) — Dan Schatzeder pitched a five-hitter and notched his second consecutive complete game while Tom Brookens and Al Cowens drove in two runs apiece to carry the Detroit Tigers past the Oakland A's 7-0 Saturday. The Tigers got two runs off Brian Kingman, 5-11, in the first when Rick Peters and Alan Trammell scored after catcher Jim Essian threw the ball into the left field bullpen area while attempting to pick Peters off third. John Wockenfuss walked and scored on Brookens' double to left in the second inning. Cowens scored on Brookens' RBI grounder and Wockenfuss later scored on Lou Whitaker's sacrifice fly to center in the sixth.

Mariners, Toronto split double-dip

TORONTO (AP) — John Mayberry smashed a three-run homer and Otto Velez hit a two-run double, leading the Toronto Blue Jays to a 7-5 victory over the Seattle Mariners and a split of Saturday's two-night doubleheader. In the opener, Willie Horton paced a 12-hit Seattle attack with a two-run homer and Rob Dressler earned his first victory of the season in the Mariners' 7-2 triumph. Mayberry, who had been hitless in his last five games, cracked his 18th home run of the season off loser Glenn Abbott, 8-6, in the fifth inning, scoring behind Al Woods and Velez, who both singled. Jack Kucek, 3-3, was the winner with 4 2-3 innings in relief of starter Balor Moore. In the opener, Dressler, 1-4, whose last 16 appearances were in relief, went eight innings, scattering six hits, striking out three and walking two in his first start since May 18. Dave Heaverlo worked the ninth. Horton's home run, his fourth of the season, was a towering shot that capped a four-run Seattle fourth inning and chased Toronto starter Dave Stieb, 10-7, who had pitched shutouts in his last two outings and was seeking his eighth consecutive complete game.

Stone bags 14th consecutive game

BALTIMORE (AP) — Steve Stone, with relief help from Tim Stoddard, won his 14th consecutive game as the Baltimore Orioles defeated the Milwaukee Brewers 4-1 on Benny Ayala's tie-breaking two-run homer in the seventh inning Saturday night. Ayala's seventh homer, the fifth hit off loser Mike Caldwell, 9-7, followed a two-out double by Eddie Murray and gave the Orioles a 3-1 lead. Doug DeCinces homered leading off the eighth for the Orioles' final 4-1 run. Stone, 16-3, yielded a sixth-inning homer to Paul Molitor and was lifted with two runners aboard in the eighth after Gorman Thomas hit a foul drive deep into the upper left field stands on a 1-0 pitch. Stone, with an 18-2 record in Baltimore's Memorial Stadium over the past two seasons, is two short of the American League record of 16 consecutive victories shared by Walt Johnson, Lefty Grove, Joe Wood and Schoolboy Rowe. The major league mark is 19.

Yanks nip Royals in clash of leaders

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Bob Watson, Ruppert Jones and Reggie Jackson slugged home runs and unbeaten New York reliever Rich Gossage notched his fourth victory Saturday night, leading the Yankees to a 5-4 victory over the Kansas City Royals. A crowd of 41,860, the largest ever to see a major league baseball game in Kansas City, witnessed the battle between the two American League division leaders. It was only the fourth victory for the Yankees in 11 meetings with the Royals. After Willie Randolph singled in the New York seventh, Jones hammered a 3-2 offering from Dennis Leonard, 10-8, into the Royals' bullpen in right field for a 4-3 New York lead. Jackson, the major league home run leader, led off the eighth with his 28th, a huge blast over the 410-mark in straightaway center field off Dan Quisenberry.

Mariners, Toronto split double-dip

TORONTO (AP) — John Mayberry smashed a three-run homer and Otto Velez hit a two-run double, leading the Toronto Blue Jays to a 7-5 victory over the Seattle Mariners and a split of Saturday's two-night doubleheader. In the opener, Willie Horton paced a 12-hit Seattle attack with a two-run homer and Rob Dressler earned his first victory of the season in the Mariners' 7-2 triumph. Mayberry, who had been hitless in his last five games, cracked his 18th home run of the season off loser Glenn Abbott, 8-6, in the fifth inning, scoring behind Al Woods and Velez, who both singled. Jack Kucek, 3-3, was the winner with 4 2-3 innings in relief of starter Balor Moore. In the opener, Dressler, 1-4, whose last 16 appearances were in relief, went eight innings, scattering six hits, striking out three and walking two in his first start since May 18. Dave Heaverlo worked the ninth.

White Sox sidestep Rangers, 4-3

CHICAGO (AP) — Rookie Harold Baines' leadoff home run in the ninth inning powered the Chicago White Sox and Lamar Hoyt to a 4-3 victory over the Texas Rangers in the first game of Saturday's two-night doubleheader. The second game was delayed by rain with the score tied 1-1 in the sixth inning. Baines' eighth home run of the season came off starter and loser Fergie Jenkins, 8-9, and made a winner of Hoyt in his first major league start. Hoyt, 3-0, a 25-year-old right-hander who had previously worked only in relief, scattered nine hits. The White Sox took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on singles by Mike Squires, Jim Morrison, Bob Molinaro and Lamar Johnson before Jenkins could retire a batter. Jenkins allowed only two harmless singles after that until rookie catcher Rick Seilheimer tied it in the seventh with his first major league home run. Texas scored a pair in the fourth inning on a single by Buddy Bell, a run-scoring double by Rusty Staub, who advanced to third on an infield out and scored on an error by shortstop Greg Pryor.

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — Cale Yarborough, the defending race winner, impressively won the pole position in time trials Saturday for Sunday's 500 mile auto race at Pocono International Raceway. The Timmonsville, S.C., resident and three-time driving champion of the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing (NASCAR), set a new qualifying mark for the 2.5-mile, three-turn track with a speed of 151.469 miles per hour. The old record of 149.236 mph was set in qualifying for the 1978 race by Benny Parsons. Second fastest in the 40-car field for the $188,225 event, the 19th of the 31-race series, was Neil Bonnett in a Mercury. Bonnett also eclipsed the old time trial standard, recording a speed of 150.023. Richard Petty, NASCAR's all-time winningest driver and a two-time winner of this event, was third fastest of the day with a speed of 149.656. Buddy Baker was next in a Buick, clocked in 149.452. Houston hands verdict to Montreal

MONTREAL (AP) — Houston reliever Frank LaCorte walked Montreal's Larry Parrish on a 3-2 pitch with two out and the bases loaded in the bottom of the 12th inning Saturday night, giving the Expos a 2-1 victory over the Astros. Tim Raines started the inning by drawing a leadoff walk from LaCorte, 7-2, and Andre Dawson reached on an infield hit when the Astros failed to cover first on his grounder. After LaCorte retired Ellis Valentine and Warren Cromartie on fly balls, Gary Carter walked to load the bases before LaCorte walked Parrish, pushing home the run that ended Montreal's three-game losing streak and left the Expos 1 1/2 games behind Pittsburgh in the National League East. Stan Bahnsen, 7-4, earned the victory after relieving Fred Norman in

Foster powers Cincinnati past Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — George Foster collected three hits and drove in three runs to give the Cincinnati Reds a 5-1 victory over the New York Mets Saturday. Foster's bases-loaded single keyed a three-run third off Roy Lee Jackson, 1-1. Bill Bonham, 2-1, with four innings of relief from Tom Hume, got the victory. Hume collected his 17th save. Jackson experienced control problems in the third. He walked Bonham and Dave Collins and Dave Concepcion, attempting to bunt, was awarded first base on interference by New York catcher Alex Trevino. Ken Griffey then drew a walk, forcing in the first run, and Foster followed with his single to center field. Cincinnati added two unearned runs off Tom Hausman in the seventh.

Giants triumph

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jack Clark's triple in the 10th inning gave the San Francisco Giants a 4-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday. Joe Strain led off the 10th against Grant Jackson, 8-3, with a single and, one out later, raced home on Clark's triple to right-center field. Greg Minton, 3-3, was the winner in relief. Two-out walks to John Milner and Bill Madlock preceded Lee Lacy's fourth-inning double off Al Hargesseimer that gave the Pirates a 2-0 lead. Trillo helps Philadelphia stop Braves PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Manny Trillo drove in three runs with two doubles as the Philadelphia Phillies downed the Atlanta Braves 6-3 Saturday night. Rookie Bob Walk, 7-1, appeared to be on the way to his first major league shutout when Brian Asselstine homered for the Braves in the eighth. One out later, Walk gave up consecutive singles to Gary Matthews and Bob Horner. Mike Lum walked, and pinch hitter Jeff Burroughs singled home two more runs. Ron Reed relieved at that point and slammed the door. Trillo, hitting .350 in July, raised his average to .324 in going 2-for-4. His double in the second inning scored Garry Maddox, who singled and stole second. One out later, Bob Boone walked and Walk drove in Trillo with a single. Pete Rose opened the Phillies' third with a single and went to third on Bake McBride's single. Mike Schmidt struck out and Maddox fled out before Trillo doubled for two more RBI. Rose overcame a 4-for-37 slump with his second hit in the fourth, an RBI single that scored fleet Lonnie Smith, who was off with the pitch and scored all the way from first.

Cubs shade LA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lynn McGlothen scattered seven hits and also had a run-producing single while Bruce Sutter recorded his 21st save as the Chicago Cubs downed the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-3 Saturday night. The victory was the first for Joey Amalfitano, the Cubs' new manager, who took over Friday after Preston Gomez was fired. Amalfitano had served as the Chicago skipper during the final week of the 1979 season, going 2-4.

Opinion and emotion. These human traits have gotten man into a lot of trouble over the years. People watch bemusedly as issues rise and fall and extremists on both sides make noise and headlines. Facts and feelings are manipulated and the public is left to sort one from the other. Then, one day, the louder voice is heard and a change takes place.

In no arena of public argument has fact been so distorted and emotion played so important a role as in wildlife conservation. Sportsmen's alliances and preservationist groups volley claims and counterclaims to the point where the real issue, conservation of America's wildlife, is confused.

The point of contention is the role of sport hunting in wildlife conservation. Sportsmen view wildlife as a renewable source to be managed and utilized with hunting a legitimate consumptive use and an effective management tool.

Preservationists argue that wildlife is an endangered commodity, threatened and suffering at the hands of hunters in the face of shrinking habitat.

Why is there a lack of cooperation toward what seems to be the common goal, improvement of wildlife resource?

Hunting is as old as man and has played a historical role in his survival. Demand for mean and fashionable clothing in the U.S. brought near-tragedy of market hunting in the last quarter of the 19th century as commercial gunners brought a number of bird and animal species to the brink of extinction.

SPORTSMEN supported laws were passed in the early 1900s, ending the slaughter. The states began setting up fish and wildlife departments to restore wildlife populations. Then, encouraged by sportsmen, the following measures were taken:

—State hunting license systems were set up with fees used for conservation. License fees currently provide state agencies with some $160 million annually.

—In 1934, the Migratory Bird Hunting Stamp Act passed. The mandatory purchase of these federal duck stamps by hunters now provides more than $11 million annually for conservation.

—In 1937, the Pittman-Robertson Federal Aid in Wildlife Restoration Act placed an excise tax on sporting arms and ammunition. Amended and expanded since, PR revenues now contribute $60 million annually to wildlife restoration and habitat improvement.

Tens of millions of dollars are raised through private sportsmen's groups, benefiting all wildlife, not just the few game species. The improved areas and birds and animals living there can be enjoyed by all, but the dollars come from the sportsmen.

Organized groups opposing hunting began appearing in the mid-1950s. They called for a ban on hunting. Finding no sound scientific basis for such a ban, some preservationists began attacking the character of the sportsman himself, slandering the hunter as a person of below-average intelligence and picturing isolated acts of poor judgement as typical.

The battle has been taken to the courtroom as preservationists attempt to end hunting through bureaucratic boondoggle. In one case, suit was filed against wildlife management projects funded by the Pittman-Robertson excise taxes. Amid claims that non-game wildlife was being destroyed by such projects, it was contended that environmental impact statements were not being prepared for each project and, therefore, work must be halted until such statements were prepared. Had the anti-hunters won, millions of dollars' worth of conservation work would have been stopped. These people were clearly willing to sacrifice support of wildlife in order to win a case against hunting.

Such cases indicate the reason for lack of cooperation between the groups toward conserving wildlife. Since 77 percent of wildlife monies come directly from the sportsman's pocket, a ban on hunting would effectively destroy this country's wildlife conservation system as it now stands. There is no room for compromise.

Strangely enough, the membership of preservationist groups is tiny when compared to numbers of hunters. The two best-known anti-hunting organizations combined only 150,000 individuals. Conversely, the pro-hunting National Wildlife Federation alone numbers some 3.5 million.

BECAUSE OF the small number, anti-hunting groups are often disregarded as nuisances by many of the nation's 20 million hunters. But make no mistake, these people, who sincerely believe they are doing the right thing, are taking advantage of the anti-gun, anti-hunting media to reach the public with distorted statistics and emotional pleas to ban hunting.

The way to stop this threat is to use facts to educate the non-hunting public in the sportsman's role in conservation. The complete story is available from the National Shooting Sports Foundation. Send 25 cents to "Hunter and Conservation", NSSF, 1075 Post Road, Riverside, Ct., 06878.

Vilas, Lendl advance to finals of Austrian tennis meet

KITZBUHEL, Austria (AP) — Guillermo Vilas of Argentina and Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia have advanced to Sunday's finals of the Austrian International Tennis Championships.

In the women's finals Saturday, Czechoslovakia's Virginia Ruzici, 1979 champion and this year's favorite, defeated countrywoman Renata Tomanova, 6-1, 6-1.

Vilas easily eliminated Brazil's

Carlos Kirmayr, 6-1, 6-2, Saturday in a match that lasted just one hour. It was Kirmayr's fourth loss to Vilas in four contests.

In Saturday's other semi-final, second-seeded Lendl defeated Australia's Peter McNamara, 6-7, 6-3, 6-4, but only after a 2½-hour battle in which the first set lasted as long as the entire Vilas-Kirmayr match.

McNamara appeared to tire under the broiling heat after leading 3-1 in the third set before he lost four straight games.

Gottfried breezes past Gene Mayer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Brian Gottfried, taking advantage of spotty play by Gene Mayer on Saturday, moved into the finals of this week's $175,000 men's Grand Prix tennis tournament with a 6-3, 6-2 victory.

In the second semifinal match, scheduled for Saturday evening, Italy's Corrado Barazzutti met Argentina's Jose-Luis Clerc.

Mayer, rated seventh in the world, hardly looked like the player who breezed past three opponents to reach the semifinals. Nor, for that matter, did Gottfried produce his best tennis in the humid, hot weather.

Unforced errors characterized the entire match with Gottfried committing more of them in the first two games of each set.

Mayer could not take advantage of either of his 2-0 leads. His normally reliable two-fisted backhand deserted him, and soon he was futilely trying an assortment of lobs and drop shots.

Gottfried, sensing the weakness in Mayer, began following his serve to the net consistently, normally a dangerous practice on the slow artificial clay surface of this tournament. But against Mayer on Saturday it worked.

Massey wins British Women's Open

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — American professional Debbie Massey won the British Women's Open Golf Championship with a 20-foot putt on the last green at Wentworth Saturday, following a dramatic collapse by Spanish amateur Marta Figueras-Dotti.

Figueras-Dotti had held the lead for the first three rounds.

Massey, 29, a former Curtis Cup player, took the lead for the first time with that 20-footer to complete a solid final round of 72 for a 2-over-par 294.

The victory was worth $10,350. Figueras-Dotti scored 76 for 295, where she shared second place with British amateur Belle Robertson.

The Spanish girl, studying medicine at the University of Southern California, had her concentration broken when a woman spectator screamed out as she was poised over an 18-inch putt on the 16th green. She had been three shots ahead, but she missed the putt, skied her drive at 17 and followed with her third straight bogey at the 18th.

Bad circulation plagues Richard

HOUSTON (AP)—An extensive examination of Houston Astros' pitcher J.R. Richard has revealed an impairment of arterial circulation in the area of his right shoulder, team physician Dr. Harold Brelsford announced Saturday.

Richard, placed on team's 21-day disabled list July 16, was released from Methodist Hospital Saturday following completion of the examination under the supervision of Dr. Michael Felto- vich.

Brelsford said corrective surgery was not anticipated for the hard throwing right-hander who had complained of arm fatigue prior to going on teams disabled list.

Brelsford said because of the nature of Richard's illness and the lack of usual clinical findings associated with arterial insufficiency, the problem was impossible to diagnose without hospitalization.

It looks like something from outer space. The large circular disk is high above the rooftops. Strange guide wires run from a hook in the center to the outer edges of the shiny white disk. It must be something left over from the space program.

In a way, Fred Allison's radar dish at 2806 Lockheed Drive is something left over from the space program. At least the technology of the 10-foot-diameter dish is derived from the program. But now the technology is used for the general interest of man — more television shows.

Allison's Anixter Parabolic Antenna can pick up transmissions from any of four satellites in space with the turn of a wrench. The satellites extend his television range well beyond the cable and home box office capabilities of the regular paying viewer. In fact, his television can pick up stations from New York to California and everywhere in-between — and beyond.

"There is no end (to its reception)," Allison said. "It's almost unlimited."

Allison, a professed retired multi-millionaire, bought his radar dish in May 1979. A friend in electronics had heard about the radars after attending a trade convention in Florida, Allison said, and told the former oilman about his find. A company in Florida, AB Electronic Communications Inc., began offering the dish to the general public earlier that year.

"It sounded like something I didn't have," Allison grinned.

The dish and equipment that are hooked up to the television inside can pick up 120 options in addition to the standard local, cable and home box office offerings — which he picks up without the monthly consumer charge — on any of the six televisions in his home.

Allison said there was no city ordinance against having such a device on a Midland roof and said he planned to get a more advanced model for his new million dollar home being built on the corner of Western and Scharbauer drives.

According to Bob Behar, owner of AB Electronics and Communications Inc. in Hialeah, Fla., "The technology has advanced quite a bit in the past two years," since the company began selling the radar dishes. Now, he said, there are some 12 to 15 companies selling the antenna receptors throughout the world, many of which go to places in Mexico, the Bahama Island chain and Brazil where television stations are at a minimum.

Currently, Behar said, models range in size and price from a small unit which costs $5,000 to a large one costing $15,000. As for the advancements made to the more expensive model, Behar said, "the quality of the picture will have less 'snow.'"

The more advanced model Allison is considering, Behar said, has a "push button" rotating device on it so the dish can switch satellites automatically. The current model on the Allison roof has to be "manually" switched by going up on the roof and turning some bolts with a wrench. A change of about 1/4-inch can mean reception from a different satellite thousands of miles from the first.

"It's very fascinating to think of the magnitude of just turning a switch," Allison said.

Theoretically, Behar said, the parabolic antennas can pick up any of the 18 satellites in space now — next year another European satellite will be added. However, he said, there are some guidelines from the Federal Communications Commission which allows reception from only a few of the satellites.

"There is some restriction as to what you can watch," Behar said. But, he added, "the law is very vague."

However, when he was interviewed Friday in Florida, Behar was watching live coverage of the Olympics with Nadia Comaneci on the parallel bars via a Russian satellite received on his equipment.

Fred Allison, too, can receive a large variety of shows night and day from all over the country.

His dish can pick up signals from a satellite 22,000 miles in space and relay movies, serials, symphonies, ballets, news and re-runs from San Diego, New York, Chicago, Miami and just about any other broadcasting city in the country.

Factions fight at Lebanese funeral

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Gun battles erupted between rival Moslem factions during the funeral procession Saturday for the slain chairman of Lebanon's press syndicate, forcing Premier Salim el Hoss to take shelter in a village hotel, witnesses said.

The fighting broke out as a convoy of cars carrying Lebanese government leaders and press delegations from throughout the Arab world entered the mountain town of Baalbeck, 40 miles east of Beirut. They had departed from Beirut at daybreak, escorting the hearse with the body of Riyadh Taha, a 53-year-old Shiite Moslem who was shot down Wednesday on a Beirut street.

Witnesses said the motorcade had halted briefly in Baalbeck when militiamen of the pro-Iranian Shiite Amal group and Iraqi-backed Baathist gunmen began shooting at each other.

WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GAS.

Everytime the price of gasoline goes up, the Datsun 210 Hatchback is worth more. The 210 is one of Datsun's high mileage cars with an EPA estimated 31 MPG. No wonder this Datsun 210 Hatchback is worth its weight in gas. So come down and test drive one today to empty in a Datsun 210 Hatchback. Dollar for dollar, there's no better value anywhere. Prove to yourself, "It's a long way to empty in a Datsun 210 Hatchback." Based on EPA estimates. Use these estimates for comparison. Your mileage and range may differ depending on speed, distance and weather. Highway mileage will probably be lower than EPA estimate.

Chantel Christensen, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Christensen, gets direction from trainer Steve Weder. She has been riding only about five months, but has already won many trophies. Her mother, Deborah, is also an avid horsewoman. Chantel holds the reins of Speck of Class, a four-year-old red roan.

A veteran of showing horses at 17, Janice Zimmerman began riding about five years ago in 4-H Club. She went on to tougher competition in the American Quarter Horse Association. She participated in 48 horse shows last year, missing only four weeks of competition. Here she whispers to Skipster's Lad, a two-year old quarter horse. Janice is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Zimmerman.

A horse is a horse, of course, of course

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

Nobody ever said the life of a horse trainer was easy. But for Steve Weder, it's a challenge. Steve, who moved to Midland just a few weeks ago, is one of Midland's first professional trainers. He's young at 22, but brings a wealth of experience with him.

"I've been involved with horses full time for the past four years," he said. "It hasn't been all good times by any means and much of it has been an uphill climb." But he made up his mind that horses were to be his business and he hasn't yet swayed from that goal.

Steve hasn't followed the typical road of most professional trainers. He wasn't raised in a family that had show horses. He didn't show as a youth, he didn't walk into a job and he didn't have a nest egg that is usually required to back up those first lean years in an expensive business.

He's excited about the prospect for expanding the interest of horses in Midland. "There are quite a few people here interested in horses, but before, there was no one to train them," he said.

"What I would really like to do is start a youth center so that persons can start training and showing their horses at a young age. Right now, though, he is starting out here by giving lessons, both private and group.

However, he's able to do it all. "I take in outside horses and performance horses to train, and do everything for individuals from fitting their horses up, training them and showing them," he said.

His background is varied. A native of Oklahoma, he grew up on a farm "where I learned the basics of hard work," he said. Though there were a couple of stock horses kept around the farm that the kids rode for fun, Steve never was that involved with them. But his interest was stirred in his early teen years when he and some friends attended a few local rodeos and horse shows.

And, like the boy who yearns to run away and join the circus, Steve got a yearning to join the world of horse shows.

At 15, he got his first job for a summer riding two-year-olds, grooming and cleaning stalls.

His first ventures were buying and selling stock horses. He turned his attention then to show horses and purchased a horse. And from there he trained and fitted a stallion, showed him and purchased more.

And in between these times, he worked for two veterinarians, believing that he needed to acquire a basic knowledge of the field.

He found time to continue showing his own horses while working for a number of wealthy individuals, usually ranchers, throughout the Southwest, buying, training and showing their personal horses.

He worked for some time on the Hays Ranch in Snyder. "I had my choice of riding horses and the quality was there," he said. "Judy had top horses and that was a young trainer's dream."

"I really enjoyed working on the ranches, but thought it was time after a few years of it to launch out on my own," he said.

He has had an unusual chance to fit some real champions.

He has shown horses in all three classes—English, Western Pleasure and halter—and won in all of them.

He showed Fairest Reflections who went on to win the Oklahoma State Fair Western Pleasure in youth. He also finished the Superior Western Pleasure award on Barred Deck, a Paint. Steve showed Dolly Dodad, a Paint, in halter and English, winning many grand champions and reserve champions, and placing her at the National Paint Horse Congress in both classes.

Steve has fitted such horses as Gray Bar San, 1979 Reserve World Champion 2 year old Gelding and Threading Chick, Reserve Champion Mare at San Angelo, High-Point All-Age Mare of the Golden Spread Quarter Horse Association and previous winner of the West Texas Quarter Horse Association Yearling Halter Futurity.

He also fitted Tiffany Treasure, Grand Champion Mare of the 1979 State Fair of Texas as a yearling and Reserve Champion Mare of the 1980 Houston Livestock Show, second largest show in the country. Tiffany Treasure was eventually sold by the Hays to country-western singing star Lynn Anderson.

And the list goes on and on.

"It's hard sometimes to get up at 4 a. m. in the morning and get ready for a show," he said while brushing down a quarter horse at J&B Stables which he has recently leased.

"Especially when you've worked late the night before getting the horse groomed perfectly. It has to be clipped and bathed. The next day, we do last-minute touch-ups, like polish the hooves and put baby powder on the legs to make them white.

"Then there's the loading of the horses and the long trip to the show."

But showing is essential because the points acquired in these shows are what "up" the value of the horse for resale.

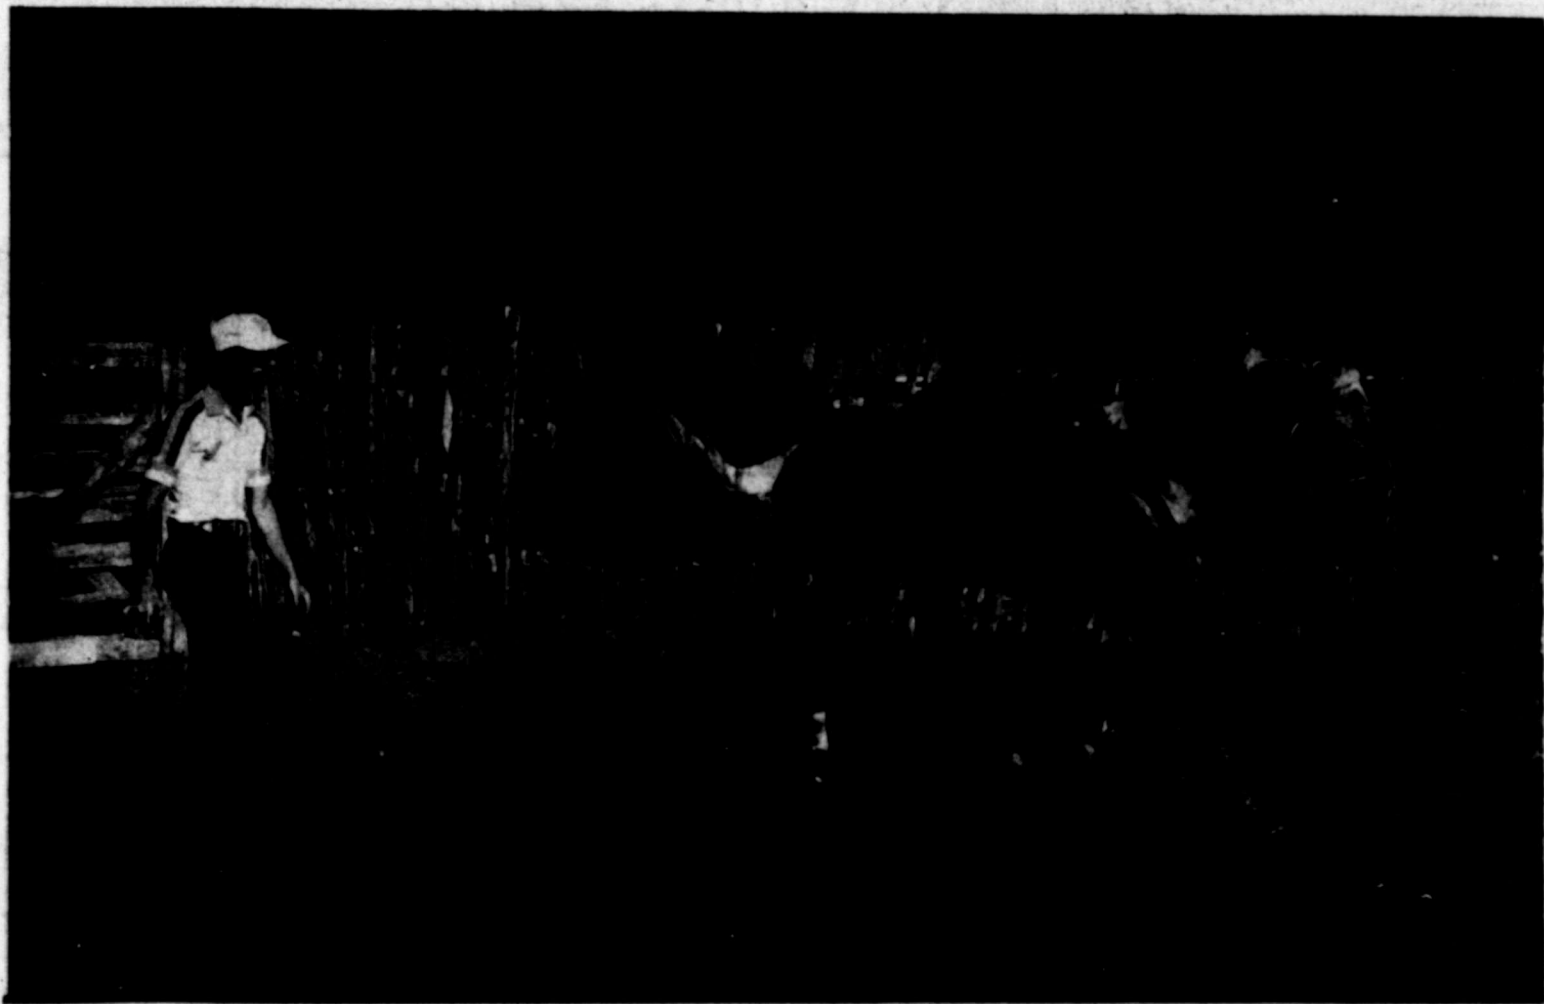

"My horses come first for me, though, and I do what I need to do."

And though he won't admit it, he's addicted. Addicted to a life of living among those stables with their mingled smells of horses and leather. To the country-western music blaring out from the other end of the barn.

Even to the dust that stirs with the gallop of every horse and its rider whom he patiently follows, giving instruction around and around the arena.

But nobody ever said the life of a trainer was easy.

"My horses come first," says Steve Weder, one of Midland's first professional trainers.

Red-headed Carol Gee unsaddles Miss Tuff Bars, an 11-year-old chestnut quarter horse. With their chestnut coloring, they make a striking pair. She is a newcomer to showing horses, but is eager to jump into the activity of competition.

...HOW MUCH WATER DO YOU USE? Useful tips on conserving water include the following:

When running water to get hot water, fill a bucket for plants or a bowl for working vegetables.

Rather than running the tap for cool water, keep a container in the refrigerator for drinking.

Close the drain in the tub before turning on the water. The water will soon be hot and then you can adjust the temperature for your bath—then take the water and put it on your shrubs and trees.

For hand washing, presoak with smallest possible quantity of low sudsing detergent. Then save rinse water for next wash. Just add soap.

Use any available recycled water for heavy cleaning followed by clean rinse. Use least possible soap or cleaning agent.

Use no more water than you need for a job.

Turn water off while brushing your teeth or shampooing your hair—then turn it back on when ready to rinse.

Try taking your tub bath with at least an inch less water.

Water lawn, shrubs and trees slowly, thoroughly and as infrequently as possible.

Use garbage disposal only once each meal and use the garbage can more.

Adjust the variable load control on your dishwasher or washing machine if they have one. If not, wash only full loads.

Lerii Fitzhugh, Miss West Texas, was born and raised in Rankin, but is living in Midland this summer. She is a sophomore at Texas Tech University and will return to Lubbock this fall. (Staff Photo by Brian Hendershot)

Lerii Fitzhugh: Miss West Texas

By WANDA MOUTON Lifestyle Editor

She calls herself "a Rankin girl." Lerii Fitzhugh, the new Miss West Texas, is living in Midland this summer, but still calls Rankin home. She says she's enjoying life in Midland and at her summer job working at Kruger Jewelry before she goes back to school at Texas Tech this fall.

She'll be taking back more than just a typical summer tan, though. She'll also bring with her to Lubbock a beauty pageant title.

"I know it's going to be a busy year, but I'm looking forward to it," said the sophomore home economics education major.

Her fact sheet reads like the typical beauty title winner. She graduated from Rankin High School in 1979. While in high school, she did double duty (and earned double honors) as a cheerleader and twirler. She was voted several honorary titles, belonged to a dozen organizations, competed in several sports and was named salutatorian of her class.

Also, she's been competing in beauty contests since she was a sophomore in high school. In 1977, she was named Upton County Pecan Queen and in 1978 went on to win the state title as Texas State Pecan Queen.

Under that sponsorship, she competed in the Miss West Texas Pageant last year in Odessa where she was named first runner-up.

She came back this year to take it all.

No wonder, with these statistics: blonde hair, blue eyes, 5'9", 130 pounds, and measurements of 35-26-36.

Her talent was a trumpet solo to the Broadway musical title song, "Cabaret."

She will be making appearances at ribbon cuttings and other events when called upon throughout the West Texas area this year. And she'll be preparing for that annual trek to Fort Worth next summer to compete for the state title of Miss America Pageant.

She intends to make no big changes, though she will pick a new trumpet solo in her talent number. She plans to get more training in makeup and modeling. Have a long dress tailored. "And get a good tan—that's important, also," she says.

All that—and attend college, too. She isn't sure what direction her career will take, but is preparing for a profession of either extension work, public relations or education.

"I plan to just be myself—this won't change me," she insists. She doesn't feel that she is involved so much in a beauty pageant, but more a scholarship competition.

"After all, I won a $2,000 scholarship, a $2,000 wardrobe and an all-expense paid trip to the Miss Texas Pageant," she said. She has also won numerous other scholarships in her other competitions.

"I'm no different from other girls—and I don't intend to change," she said.

She says that her attitude has changed, though, since becoming involved in pageantry. "I thought all the other girls involved would be stuck-up, but they're not. They're just normal girls all wanting a chance to win that title."

AT WIT'S END

'Dinner's ready!'

EDITOR'S NOTE: While Erma Bombeck takes a two-week vacation, we are printing some of her most popular past "At Wit's End" columns.

By ERMA BOMBECK

In the mid-'20s, physiologist Ivan P. Pavlov made a rather interesting discovery. Every time he brought food to a dog, he would ring a bell and the dog's mouth began to water. Later, just by ringing the bell, he could bring about a reflex action of saliva.

In the late '40s, Erma Bombeck, a simple housewife in Ohio, made another interesting scientific discovery. By announcing to her family, "Dinner is ready," it was noted that the entire family swung into action like a precision drill team. For no apparent reason, her husband would exit to clean out the medicine chest, one child would pick up the telephone and begin dialing, another would go to the bathroom and lock the door, and once one of them took a bus to Detroit.

After awhile, she wouldn't even have to say anything. When she appeared at the door, they all just took off and scattered.

Just when it seemed her frustration had reached a breaking point, she observed yet another phenomenon. Hours later as the family sat around the table and raised their forks for the first bite, the phone would ring. It became as predictable as rain the day you washed the car, and it was driving her crazy.

She tried everything. She scheduled meals at odd hours. She tiptoed to the table. She once went to the living room where they were all seated around the TV set and instead of announcing dinner said, "I'm not here to announce what you think I am." But the group could not be fooled.

Every night they sat down to warm lettuce and cold french fries, while members of the family filed in and out like they were visiting a 7-11 market. And every night as they prepared to eat the first bite, the phone rang.

Her husband said she was imagining things until one weekend Erma was flat on the sofa with a virus and he was in charge of dinner. Flushed with heat from the stove, and the pressure, he ran into the living room and announced, "Dinner is ready."

One son stood up and went to the mailbox, another went to the car to look for his tennis racket, the dog went to the door and scratched to get out and Erma started to exit.

"Where are YOU going?" he asked hysterically.

DEAR ABBY

Railroad widow forced to cover her tracks

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Is it possible to be married in the eyes of God only? As a widow of a retired railroad man, if I marry again, I'll lose my widow's retirement benefits.

Five years ago I fell in love with a fine and decent man—a retired disabled widower. We love each other and want to marry, but that means giving up my widow's benefits, and we can't make it on his check alone. So we are forced to live in sin.

I'm a God-fearing woman, Abby, but we love and need each other, so we're living together. We are trying to get a law passed (like Social Security) that will permit widows of railroad men to marry, but until we do, we are in a bind.

DEAR M.: I have heard that there are some compassionate ministers who will bless a common-law union such as yours, enabling you to be married in the eyes of God even though you are not married in the eyes of the law.

DEAR JUST: He's probably forgotten his promise, so don't mention it. But if he reads this column, you may collect after all.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is that I am always in debt and can't seem to get out. I don't know what to call myself except maybe "stupid."

drawn at the bank, have several unpaid bills staring me in the face and am scared to death to tell my husband.

I am not extravagant with myself. It's usually something I buy for the children or the house. This is nothing new—I have always been behind in my bills—but this time I can't see my way clear.

DEAR DROWNING: First I will tell you what NOT to do. Don't borrow any money without your husband's knowledge!

mess you're in. If he doesn't immediately remove you from the treasury department, resign!

You can learn how to budget if you really want to, and you should. But until you do, let Hubby handle the family fortune.

DEAR ABBY: An acquaintance of mine sent me an invitation to her daughter's wedding. I have never met the daughter and do not plan to attend the wedding.

I feel that to ignore the invitation would be rude, so I thought I'd just send the bride and groom a nice card of congratulations.

I have asked the opinions of others about this, and have been told that

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Do Americans take their mothers more seriously than their fathers?

More likely they're loath to show too much sentiment in their feelings about Dad, according to a publisher of greeting cards. Which is why, say researchers for Hallmark Cards, contemporary, or humorous cards are much more popular on Father's Day than on most other observances.

About 10 percent of this year's Father's Day cards will be comic, with Mother's Day only about 5 percent.

Sequined t-shirts are in

Copley News Service

NEW YORK — Fashion designer Morton Myles says it all with his sequined T-shirt, which is nothing more than a short chemise.

"The line is simple — the glitter is great for the '80s," says the designer who went into business for himself in July 1979 "because the other designers are failing to offer the American woman what she really wants in a wardrobe."

"I am designing for the woman who is reasonably well-off, vividly aware and involved in living to the hilt, but not super-affluent," says Myles.

His price range is $135 to $225 retail.

Myles' designs include silhouettes that are somewhat wide at the top, rather elongated through the body and usually have a low flaring movement below the hip. The chemise-in-variation is the base.

"Women need the lighthearted, youthful look of the '20s to forget their cares and look dazzling after 5," he says.

Famous people trying to save last authentic drive-in

By DEBORAH BELGUM
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — What do Rep. John Anderson, Sally Struthers and Ricardo Montalban have in common? They're all trying to save one of this city's last authentic drive-in restaurants.

Straight out of "American Graffiti," Dolores Drive-In in Beverly Hills has been delighting the famous and not-so-famous since 1946, with its Dolores burgers, Suzy-Q fries and homemade pies.

The quaint, brown-stucco landmark seats 75 people inside and on the California-Spanish patio, and has 26 spaces for vehicles, where real-live carhops skillfully balance food-laden trays as they scurry from Volkswagens to limousines.

Celebrities especially enjoy Dolores because they can have a quiet bite to eat while maintaining complete anonymity inside their cars.

BUT AFTER 34 years, the haunt soon may be replaced by another of the steel and smoked-glass high-rise buildings that already dwarf it along bustling Wilshire Boulevard. If property owner Don Levin gets his way, bulldozers will raze the culinary landmark on Oct. 31.

However, Dean Williams, who owns the building and has operated Dolores for 10 years, has undertaken a petition drive to preserve the restaurant as an official "landmark historic site."

A 1975 ordinance empowers the Beverly Hills City Council to designate historic landmarks on the advice of the city's Architectural Commission, protecting their continued existence. To date, the ordinance has not been tested.

With a goal of 150,000 signatures, Williams so far has gathered 50,000 names on his list, which reads like a Who's Who in spots: Miss Struthers, Montalban, Shelley Winters, Chuck Barris, Anderson, the independent candidate for president, even called and asked to sign the petition when he was campaigning in town recently.

Williams also hired behavioral scientist John Simmons to put together a study pointing out the nostalgic and historic value of Dolores, one of the few original drive-ins still operating in Southern California.

"WITH THE PETITION and the study, I think we have a 90 percent chance of having the drive-in declared a historical site," Williams declared.

However, Beverly Hills Mayor Edward Brown is not as enthusiastic: "When the issue was brought before the city council about four weeks ago, no one was that interested because they don't believe it's a historical landmark," Brown said.

Don Levin, who bought the site a year ago, wouldn't discuss the issue.

The Dolores saga goes back to 1925 when Amanda and Ralph Stevens opened the Goody Goody Drive-In in Tampa, Fla. Four years later, the couple moved to Oklahoma City, where they opened the first drive-in restaurant on Route 66 and named it after their 2-year-old daughter, Dolores.

As World War II was nearing an end, the family moved again, this time to Los Angeles, where drive-in restaurants dotted the city. They opened Los Angeles' first Dolores Drive-In in 1945 on Sunset Boulevard. In the summer of 1946, they moved the drive-in to Wilshire.

FOR OUT-OF-WORK ACTORS and discharged veterans alike, Dolores was the first Los Angeles drive-in that hired male carhops. One of them was Marty Cable, a fresh young kid just out of the Marine Corps.

Recounting his days at the drive-in, Cable, who today owns his own restaurant chain, said Dolores had a reputation for good tips and beautiful female customers.

"I'd never worked as a carhop in my life," said Cable. "I was so poor I had to dye my Marine greens brown. Our uniforms were brown slacks, white shirt and black tie."

Cable remembered that the carhops were paid $1.90 a day plus tips. "On a good day we could make about $25 in tips. We knew who the big tippers were. They left a dollar and we always gave them a linen napkin instead of a paper one."

WILLIAMS, THE OWNER, differed with Cable on a point. He said the carhops were not paid.

"They didn't receive any wages and they had to pay their own Social Security, which was about 25 cents a day. But the tips were great. They could make $25 a day in the rain."

Women get $7 million in discrimination settlement

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — More than 200 women jammed into a federal courtroom Thursday to seek a piece of a $7 million sex discrimination settlement against Western Electric Co.

U.S. District Judge Herbert J. Stern heard comments from dozens of past and present employees of the communications company before giving his final approval to the settlement.

"This is perhaps the largest private settlement reached in a sex discrimination case," Stern said, calling the agreement a "very dramatic, enlightened and commendable plan."

The settlement sets aside $7 million in damages for almost 2,000 women found eligible by the court, and requires the company to set up an affirmative action plan to increase the number of women in management positions.

Stern said the terms were reached with the company voluntarily last month in an effort to end the 7-year-old suit originally filed by Kyraki Cleo Kyriazi, an industrial engineer who was fired in 1971. Stern ordered her reinstated last October.

"There would have been nothing, no money, no affirmative action, were it not for the fact that one of you sacrificed for all of you to have these benefits," Stern said of Ms. Kyriazi's legal battle.

The suit was expanded in 1975 as a class action to include all women hired or laid off by the company since June 1971.

How to sell your house

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

In nearly all areas of the country, it has been quite a few years since we have had a seller's market in housing. Aside from a handful of exceptions in special situation sections, selling a house that is occupied usually proves to be a trying experience for a family.

Mortgage interest rates may have declined, but they simply haven't gone down enough to do more than stir a trickle of buyers into action. Other factors contribute towards the scarcity of existing home purchasers.

When a buyer does make an appearance, don't add to the selling problem by what you do or fail to do. One of the first things to do is to check with one or more local banks or other financial institutions to determine the size of the mortgage loan that might be available to a family with a good credit rating. It's a question you're sure to be asked sooner or later. While doing the checking, consider the possibility, if your finances will permit it, of accepting a second mortgage should a buyer with acceptable credit be unable to raise all of the required down payment.

Try to remember the things that turned you off when you were house hunting. You were aware then of the importance of a first impression. So, if your house needs painting and the front lawn needs cutting, take care of these things before placing the house on the market.

Vitamin A vital to health, beauty

Copley News Service
For really super skin, you must get enough vitamin A. Although an increase in A can't guarantee a change for the better in your skin, it's certain that without enough A, your skin will never be at its best.

Vitamin A is important for your skin because it controls the development of the lower layer of skin cells. Called epithelial cells, they line every part of your body that contacts the outside world - skin, eyes, nose, sexual organs, and even your non-hormone-producing glands inside. Throughout life, your surface cells function for a time and then die, to be replaced by new cells coming from the epithelial layer. These new cells develop and maintain their characteristics only if enough A is present. Actually, vitamin A is said to act like a hormone, controlling cell development and functioning. In addition, A helps retain moisture in your skin and therefore helps retard aging.

Vitamin A is also important to beautiful skin.

Three scientists say Agent Orange could be causing birth defects

WASHINGTON (AP) - More research is needed, but it appears "highly suggestive" that the Agent Orange chemical used by the United States in the Vietnam War may cause birth defects, three scientists say.

The trio told a House veterans affairs subcommittee this week that other conditions in Vietnam may have caused the birth defects blamed by some persons on the chemical.

Agent Orange, a defoliant, contains dioxin, a toxic chemical. Thousands of Vietnam veterans have filed claims, charging that their exposure to Agent Orange is responsible for a host of maladies ranging from stomach, liver and neurological problems in the veterans to birth defects in their children.

Tuesday's testimony came from Drs. Steven and Jean Stellman, who analyzed for the American Cancer Society 535 claims that disabilities were caused by Agent Orange, and Dr. Samuel S. Epstein, director of toxicology at the University of Illinois Medical Center.

Epstein said evidence of Agent Orange damage is sufficient to justify disability payments.

He also said Dow Chemical Co., the maker of the herbicide, withheld for at least six years the knowledge that Agent Orange was contaminated with dioxin.

But Donald Frayer, Dow's claims manager, said outside the hearing room that "we thought it was safe then and we think it is safe now."

Dr. Steven Stellman said he and his wife's analysis of the veterans' complaints indicated statistically that veterans exposed to Agent Orange are 30 percent to 80 percent more likely to father children with birth defects. He said the analysis also found more cases of stomach illnesses than usual.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Rub-a-dub-dubber, crochet a scrubber

HI THERE!
You know me and my nylon net scrubbers! Couldn't get along without one.
But would you believe, since giving instructions again on how to make the little pompon scrubbers, I've gotten letters from several ladies who crochet their scrubbers?
Now why haven't I heard of this before? For you who are talented enough to know how to crochet, this way of using nylon net is a dandy.
All they did was cut strips of nylon net about 2 1/2 to 3 inches wide, stitching the ends together to make a long strip.

One of the ladies crocheted nylon net into a granny square shape. Another made a circular one. These are handy sizes as they fit the hand well. One lady said her nylon net pompon was great for scrubbing potatoes (over 100 a day for a Meals on Wheels group).
So...if you'd like a change of pace or a nifty club project, try your hand at making a crocheted scrubber. It'll help get some of those unpleasant jobs done in a hurry. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE: Just passing along another recycling hint.
When your oven mitt has lost its protection power for your hand and fingers, throw it into the washer and dryer and then give it to your husband to wash the car.
I enjoy reading your column every day along with collecting useful hints and recipes. I get a lot of pleasure knowing there are still people who take the time to help others. — Laura Ash

Luv, Heloise
DEAR HELOISE: My husband told me that if I sent you this question, I shouldn't sign my name! But...
How do you put a top sheet on a bed to show off the pretty border if you turn the sheet back to protect the binding on the blankets?
I like to buy the pretty colored and printed sheets, but want to put them on properly. Can you shed some light on the subject? — Dolores You're not the only one concerned about how to properly put on sheets — or even if there is a proper way.

I get letters from husbands and wives, even children, debating the issue and leaving it up to a third party to decide.
My own personal opinion would be to do your own thing.
If you fold the top sheet down a few inches over the blanket but want the pretty border to show, here's what to do: Put your top sheet on print side down.
One little girl wrote that she did this as she wanted to be able to see the pretty sheets from her vantage point — under the covers!

It's your home and your preference, but however you decide to put those sheets on, spread a little sunshine along with them too. — Heloise

Solons urged to increase spinal injury research money

By TOM SEPPY
AP Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Donny McKnew, the first undergraduate to attend Yale in a wheelchair, knows the agony and misery of living with a spinal injury.
McKnew, a Washington, D.C., native, was injured Feb. 17, 1978, when a car he was driving skidded out of control on a patch of ice, jumped the curb, sideswiped one tree and hit another head-on, leaving him with a gash on his head and two broken vertebrae. The trauma to the spinal cord left him a quadriplegic.

"My hospitalization was sheer hell," McKnew told the House health and environmental subcommittee Tuesday. Despite having what he called the finest care available in the United States, he said: "I never dreamed life could be so hard nor so painful."
McKnew and several other persons in wheelchairs, including former Texas Christian University football player Kent Waldrep, testified before the House subcommittee in support of legislation, introduced by Rep. Doug Walgren, D-Pa., to provide $16 million a year to finance spinal-cord regeneration research.

"The emotional trauma is difficult to describe," said McKnew. "Most of my spiritual strength was spent in getting by, moment by moment, pain through pain, trying to move fingers and toes that refused to respond. Just trying to move drained me more than running any wind sprints ever had."

After his rehabilitation and release from the Rusk Institute, McKnew said he began his indoctrination in what he called the real world — life in a wheelchair. He said his indoctrination will continue until he gets out of the chair. "I can't walk," he said. "My freedom, my sovereignty have been compromised. I am totally dependent on others every single day of my life. For two and a half years, I have woken up each morning to the voice and sight of someone else. I am a slave to my own body to an awesome degree."

"This bondage has not defeated me," he said. "But the bondage is real, and the mind and the body are by no means separate. My mind has taken a toll, just as it must continue to do so."

Walgren said almost a half million Americans are paralyzed as a result of back, neck and spinal cord injuries — more than half of them victims of automobile accidents.
He said sports — football, wrestling, trampoline and water and snow skiing — are the second-leading cause, with home accidents, such as falling off a ladder or slipping down stairs, the third major cause of spinal injuries.

"For too many years, these citizens have lived without hope," Walgren said. "But certainly, with proper funding, this nation can develop the medical technology so that paralysis, if treated quickly, need not be permanent. That should be our first goal."

Grocers worried

The Washington Post

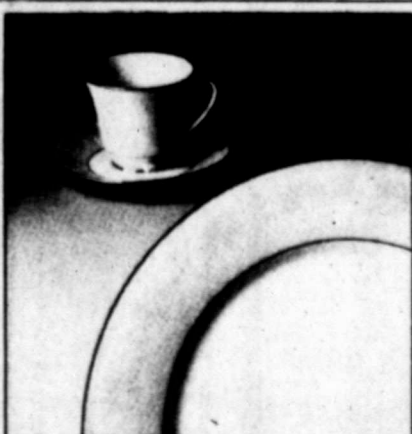

Your grocer is worried. Costs are up, productivity is down. The immediate future promises increased wholesale prices for food but no increase in customers. Heiscoping pretty well with the energy crunch, but now realizes that expensive modern technology may have been oversold as an economic cure. He's keeping a wary eye on consumers, who may make him the target of their wrath if food prices jump upward, and on labor, whose wage and benefit demands he says he can't meet.

The grocer in question isn't a person. He is the personalized image of the large and sometimes impersonal supermarket industry. While there's no sign the industry, 50 years old this year, is ready to throw in its collective paper towels, the impression left by a day-long press seminar in Philadelphia earlier this month is that the grocer is not having much fun these days and expects things to grow worse.

Next to inflation, the chief concern touched on by various speakers was the lack of new customers and changing shopping patterns.

Offshore platforms in the Gulf of Mexico tap into underground reservoirs of natural gas. Some of the gas produced at this platform, operated by Aminoil USA, Inc., supplies Texas homeowners with fuel for cooking and heating. Moving constantly through transmission pipelines, a cubic foot of gas would reach Texas about 17 hours after leaving this platform 250 miles away.

Gas for Texas homes makes long trip

HOUSTON — By turning a dial or flipping a switch, nearly 3 million Texas homeowners can instantly summon natural gas for cooking or heating.

The apparent speed and ease of conjuring up that gas is deceptive, however. It is likely that the gas delivery was instigated by someone working on a windswept island of steel in a watery expanse far from the Lone Star State.

Much of the natural gas used by residential customers throughout the country is produced on offshore platforms in the Gulf of Mexico.

To reach a Texas home, gas produced in the Gulf crawls through pipelines at 15 miles per hour, reports Aminoil USA, Inc., the third largest independent oil and gas producer in the United States.

Companies like Aminoil search for natural gas reservoirs by drilling beneath the ocean floor from offshore platforms. Aminoil's largest concentration of natural gas production is in the Gulf of Mexico, where the company's net production was more than 52 billion cubic feet of natural gas last year.

Aminoil and the other producers in the Gulf sell their natural gas to transmission companies, which have extensive pipeline systems throughout the country.

The transmission companies then pipe the gas to local distributing utilities, which purchase it wholesale. The local utilities subsequently provide the gas to residential and commercial customers in their area.

In Texas alone, there are more than 2.8 million residential gas customers. Nationwide, natural gas is distributed to more than 42 million residential gas customers for space heating, water heating and cooking.

There are more than 1 million miles of natural gas pipelines in the United States to handle transmission to these customers.

The path taken by natural gas produced from one of Aminoil's offshore platforms illustrates the movement of natural gas production throughout the United States.

One of the platforms Aminoil operates in the Gulf is in the High Island 330 field. The natural gas reservoir drilled into from that platform lies about two miles beneath the ocean floor.

Aminoil, as operator of the field owned by 13 companies, flows 160 million cubic feet of gas from the platform daily. The gas initially enters the High Island Offshore System (HIOS), a 42-inch undersea pipeline which moves the gas toward shore.

HIOS, which services dozens of producers in the Gulf, handles about 36,000 tons of gas per day. The HIOS pipeline — every foot of which weighs more than 1,000 pounds — delivers gas to 13 different transmission companies.

Closer to shore, the gas enters the United Texas Offshore System pipeline, which completes the 132-mile trip from the platform to the coastline. When the gas comes ashore near Cameron, La., it moves into the transmission system operated by the Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America (NFPA).

The gas then continues on a journey which stretches more than 1,300 miles. NGPL pipelines carry it 250 miles away from the platform through Louisiana into Texas. From there, it moves into Arkansas, Missouri and Illinois. Along the way, gas is sold to regional utility companies, for resale to local customers.

Moving constantly through the pipeline system a cubic foot of gas produced in the Gulf would reach Texas about 17 hours after the gas emerged from beneath the ocean floor.

However, the arrival of a cubic foot of gas in Texas passes unnoticed by the Aminoil employees working in the Gulf. From the platform which stands like a lonely sentinel in the sea, they monitor the production of more than 6½ million cubic feet of gas per hour — all day, all night, every day.

Wallace says rules strengthening

AUSTIN — Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace said Texas' jurisdiction over its minerals industry may need some legislative strengthening for environmental and public safety reasons and to blunt further federal regulatory intrusion.

Wallace pressed that observation in comments last week to members of the Texas Mining Council during their quarterly meeting at the Capitol. He is chairman of the council, and advisory arm of the Texas governor.

The council is "expertly staffed" for a study of needs for further legislation to enhance Texas statutes pertaining to coal, uranium and a score or so of other minerals that make Texas the leading mining state, Wallace stated.

His suggestion drew support from Ed Vetter, special energy adviser to Gov. William P. Clements Jr., and a member of the council.

Vetter deemed a council inquiry, as advanced by Wallace, an "appropriate" action "to get adequate control (of mining operations) at our level." State regulatory authority over mining operations is vested in the Railroad Commission.

Wallace and J. Randel Hill, director of the RRC's Surface Mining and Reclamation Division, reported complaints to the Commission of improperly drilled and closed holes in minerals exploration and core hole activity point to one area of Texas mineral statutes that need more muscle.

Wallace noted that improperly drilled and inadequately plugged exploration and core holes pose threats to fresh water sources and the safety of persons and livestock in an area where drilling has occurred. He directed the TMC regulatory and legislative practices committee to review current statutes and prepare proposed legislation to provide adequate environmental and safety protection.

During today's session, the council members were given an update on Texas' non-fuel mining activities and outlook by Murphy Hawkins, who recently retired from the federal Bureau of Mines and now is director of mining for the state General Land Office.

Hawkins reported that Texas' $1.25 billion non-fuel mining industry figures significantly in the nation's supply of industrial minerals. Needs of the U.S. have caused a refocusing on a number of Texas minerals and the reactivation or acceleration of mining operations.

The Texas mining industry "is ready to go and only needs proper government policies" to trigger optimum operations, Hawkins told the council.

Reed reports '80's highest Permian Basin rotary count

Three hundred and thirty-nine rotary rigs, the most at any time this year, were counted making hole last week in the Permian Basin of West Texas and southeast New Mexico.

The count was reported by Reed Rock Bit Co. on its weekly survey of Basin rotary operations.

On the previous county, there were 333 rotary rigs actually drilling at the time the count was made. Only those operations making hole are listed in the survey.

One year ago, there were 225 rotary rigs going in the Basin.

Counties recording increases last week over the previous count, included Lea County, N.M., from 45 to 46; Coke, from 4 to 5; Culberson, from 1 to 2; Dawson, from 5 to 6; Gaines, from 5 to 9; Garza, from 7 to 10; Howard, from 7 to 8; Irion, from 7 to 8; Lynn, from 0 to 1; Lamb, from 0 to 1; Lubbock, from 5 to 7; Mitchell, from 3 to 4; Reagan, from 10 to 14; Runnels, from 0 to 1; Sutton, from 4 to 5; Terrell, from 3 to 5; Upton, from 8 to 9; Valverde, from 1 to 2, and Ward, from 12 to 13.

Lea County is the most active county in the two-state Permian Basin, and Eddy County ranks second. Last week that area reported 33 rigs, down three from the 36 a week earlier.

Pecos County, the perennial West Texas leader, was the scene of 25 active rotary rigs last week. The previous count showed that county with 28.

West Texas counties with 10 or more rotary rigs making hole last week included Andrews, 13, a loss of two; Crockett, 13, a loss of one; Garza, 10, a gain of three; Reagan, 14, a gain of four, and Ward, 13, a gain of one.

Center slates two courses

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will offer two more courses in the center's headquarters at 105 W. Illinois St., Midland.

"Drilling Fluids School" is scheduled Aug. 4-6, with classes to be held from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Neal Adams, associate of Prentice and Records Enterprises, Inc., will be the instructor.

The three-day course is designed for engineers, drilling foremen or mud engineers.

It will discuss the basis of drilling fluids, and their purposes. Also included will be mud systems, mud additives, mud problems, hole deterioration, stuck pipe, lost circulation, and formation damage.

Fee for the course is $275, including a set of notes and materials. Registration is limited.

A one-day workshop on "Assertiveness Training" will be offered Aug. 6. The classes will be held from 9 a.m. to noon, and from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Marion Kimberly of Midland, an individual, group, and career counselor, will be the instructor.

Fee for the workshop is $65 and registration is limited.

Refineries cut gas prices

NEW YORK (AP) — Several leading refiners have cut wholesale gasoline prices as petroleum inventories have swelled, but at least one major company is raising prices, according to industry reports.

The Chevron U.S.A. Division of Standard Oil Co. of California, the nation's seventh-largest gasoline marketer, says it is raising wholesale prices for its gasoline brands by as much as 3 cents a gallon.

U.S. refiners had 264.9 million barrels of gasoline on hand as of July 18, according to the American Petroleum Institute. That is 30.5 million barrels above levels of a year earlier and well above the inventory level the U.S. government considers acceptable, the institute said. There are 42 gallons in a barrel.

The inventory buildup comes as consumers have reduced gasoline use by about 7 percent from a year ago as fuel prices spiraled.

With storage tanks bulging, "almost every independent refiner of any significance has gone down one or two pennies (at wholesale) in the past two weeks," Dan Lundberg, publisher of the Lundberg Letter, an oil industry trade newsletter, said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles Friday.

Chevron said regular fuel rose 2 cents at wholesale nationwide to 92 cents a gallon; unleaded climbed 2 cents to 95 cents a gallon; and leaded premium gained 3 cents to 99 cents a gallon.

According to a survey by Lundberg, the average U.S. retail price of a gallon of gasoline was $1.239 in mid-July, up from $1.2368 in June and 92.82 cents a year ago.

Chevron spokesman Jerry Martin said in San Francisco the company's increase largely reflected rising U.S. oil prices, the result of the government's gradual lifting of crude oil price controls.

Chevron's wholesale prices "are still 3 to 6 cents a gallon below" those of several major competitors because of the company's access to Saudi Arabian crude oil. Saudi Arabian crude sells at $28 a barrel, which is $4 less than comparable grades from other countries, Martin said.

DOE predicts big drop in U.S. crude oil imports

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department is predicting that U.S. oil imports will drop by 16 percent over the next five years as the country turns to domestic energy sources such as coal.

The decline will be spurred by sharply rising prices of crude oil, which could cost $96 a barrel by 1990, according to the department's annual report to Congress on energy production and prices.

A $96-a-barrel pricetag would translate into gasoline prices of over $3.50 in 1990. In the short-term, the department predicts that motorists could be paying as much as $1.60 for regular gasoline by the end of the year and $1.89 by the end of 1981.

The current average price of regular gasoline is $1.26.

The report released Friday forecast that the cost of imported oil would increase to $33.51 per barrel this year and to $36.85 by the end of 1981 and $51 by 1985.

However, the report cautions that world events, such as production cutbacks by Persian Gulf countries, could drastically alter the price predictions. It noted that in the 12 months since the last report, the department had revised its projections of 1990 oil prices upward by 85 percent.

The report projected that U.S. oil imports will drop from 7.9 million barrels a day in 1979 to 5.9 million barrels in 1985 and then remain nearly constant through 1985.

The United States will "rapidly return to coal" over the next decade, the report predicted, forecasting that production will grow from 776 million tons in 1979 to 1.1 billion tons in 1985.

The report also said the use of nuclear power would rise from the 3.5 percent of total energy it supplies now to 9.2 percent in 1990 and 14.8 percent by the year 2020.

Those projections, however, were 13 percent lower than last year's predictions, reflecting reduced electricity growth and "renewed public anxiety over reactor safety and siting," the report said.

The report predicted that natural gas prices will rise more rapidly than those for any other energy source, but said that fuel will still "remain a bargain, compared with petroleum products."

Because of the higher gasoline prices, motorists will turn to more fuel-efficient cars and gasoline usage will drop from a high of 7.4 million barrels a day in 1978 to 6.6 million barrels daily in 1981 and 5.9 million barrels per day in 1990, the report said.

The report predicted declining oil and gas production, while coal, uranium and such renewable sources of energy as solar power are expected to increase from 28 percent of total supplies in 1978 to 76 percent by 2020.

Museum gifts announced

The Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame in Midland has made public two major gifts to the museum. The donors were Mr. and Mrs. George T. Abell of Midland.

The gifts were not announced in 1976 or 1977, when they were made, at the donors' request. Their size has not been disclosed, but the museum said they were designated to assist in construction of an addition to the museum and were "extremely influential" in the museum's current expansion.

The Abell gifts triggered the decision to start active work on the building program and to encourage giving by others, museum officials said. A number of gifts, made by different donors, will be disclosed soon.

The new museum addition, known as Phase II or North Wing, was contracted in December 1979 and will cost in excess of $1.5 million, including exhibits, fees and other costs.

No opening date has been set for the new addition, through the museum expects completion in the first part of 1981.

Maurice R. Bullock and Russell J. Ramsland, who head the museum's two governing boards, said "We are glad that we now can give due credit to Mr. and Mrs. Abell for once again moving the museum forward toward a still more valuable period of service."

Bullock and Ramsland said the museum's new Development Fund, intended to cover the present expansion and other capital projects in the years ahead "will always need funds." New exhibits and updating of older ones will require constant work, they said.

"Midland and other Permian Basin cities have a clear and constant ambition for the museum: To make it one of the best and most talked about anywhere. 'We're already part of the way there, and we hope to see it go the rest of the way,' the officials said.

LNG bogged in disputes

TULSA, Okla. — Trapped in a bog of price disputes and government resistance, liquefied natural gas imports may never boost U.S. energy supplies as much as the gas industry says they can, Oil & Gas Journal reports in its July 21 issue.

Two of three existing LNG import projects are suspended because importing companies and the major exporter—Algeria—can't agree on whether LNG should be priced with crude oil at the point of shipment or with alternative fuels at the point of use.

And the only clear signal from the U.S. Department of Energy, which regulates LNG via the hybrid partnership of the Federal Energy Regulatory Administration, is that LNG is a low-priority energy source.

Yet the American gas industry is counting on LNG imports as a major source of supply to replace declining U.S. gas production during the next two decades.

In 2000, according to the American Gas Association, the U.S. could be importing 3 trillion cubic feet per year of LNG. That would almost double the 1.8 trillion cubic feet in pipeline imports expected that year from Canada and Mexico.

Potential exporting countries also are counting on the U.S. as an important market for large volumes of gas now flared or shut in.

According to a high-ranking Algerian official, the U.S. is about to enter an LNG era in which foreign gas prices will rise to match those of synfuels and electricity.

But at least one U.S. government source says the country is about to phase out LNG imports, ending a 21-year-old industry that hardly got off the ground. The main government objection is that LNG comes from abroad, while current natural gas policy stresses domestic supply. The government worries about LNG safety and prices.

At the moment, therefore, LNG's future in the U.S. is up in the air.

The price dispute between Algeria and the U.S. focuses on the point in trade where LNG price approximates the energy equivalent price for alternative fuels.

Algeria says LNG price should be equal to that of crude at the point of export. On that basis, LNG price would be $6 a thousand cubic feet f.o.b. Arzew, Algeria, with Saharan Blend, Algeria's basis crude, at $36 a barrel.

August auto output to drop

DETROIT (AP) — U.S. automakers plan to build 20 percent fewer cars this August than they did in August 1979, a trade publication reports.

Meanwhile, the automakers say their long-term layoffs are creeping up to 247,650, from the 246,950 reported last week.

August production schedules — almost all for 1981 models — call for 358,886 cars to be built during the month.

GM reports biggest loss since depression

DETROIT (AP) — The giant General Motors Corp., caught with an inventory of big cars at a time of rising fuel prices, has reported its first loss in a strike-free quarter since the Great Depression — a company record $412 million.

Top company officials said there were no "near-term" prospects of a return to profitability for the nation's third-biggest company. In last year's second quarter, GM earned a record $1.19 billion or $4.13 per share.

The company, which makes nearly half the cars sold in the United States, blamed the loss on the recession, consumer concern about higher fuel prices and competition from imports that get better gas mileage than domestic makes.

Large-car sales for the first half of the year were off 35 percent compared with last year, the company has reported.

"I think they underestimated the cost of getting rid of the biggies," industry analyst Arvid Jouppi said. Jouppi is research vice president of the brokerage house of John Muir & Co.

The record loss, reported Thursday, came to $1.43 a share for stockholders. It was more than three times larger than the company's previous record loss, $335 million, reported in the fourth quarter of 1979, when the company was being struck. Its last non-strike loss was in 1932.

GM has been cutting employment and production in recent months in efforts to cope with its financial problems.

Thomas A. Murphy, the company chairman, and Elliott M. Estes, the president, issued a statement saying that a "restoration of production and employment cannot be expected sooner than the fourth quarter of 1980."

The officials did say that they did not plan to reduce capital spending, which they say is essential to the company's plan to produce smaller cars with better gas mileage.

In another auto industry development, American Motors Corp., tiny by comparison to GM, also reported a record loss for the quarter.

AUSTIN—The Railroad Commission, in an emergency action, has pumped $150,000 into its gas pipeline safety program so rules compliance and enforcement can be accelerated throughout the state.

Chairman John Poerner and Commissioners James E. (Jim) Nugent and Mack Wallace increased the current pipeline safety budget during the weekly conference on Gas Utilities Division matters by ordering the transfer of funds from other GUD activities to its safety section.

The additional funds will permit the immediate hiring of additional personnel and acquisition of equipment to be stationed throughout Texas so that more of the state's 120,000 miles of gas pipelines can be inspected and monitored more often for compliance with rules and regulations, explained the division acting director, Jeffrey R. Hill.

In addition to the funds reallocation, the Commission directed Hill to prepare for filing with the U.S. Department of Transportation all necessary applications for federal funds that are available to the State of Texas under the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1979. As much as $250,000 is estimated to be available.

By Texas law, the Commission is required to provide and enforce safety standard for the regulation of all transportation of gas and gas pipeline facilities which are not subject to exclusive federal jurisdiction.

Also, the RRC is required to promulgate such safety regulations in accordance with applicable federal statutes and regulations.

Hill said recent safety problems along gas distribution and transmission systems at Daisetta, Tenaha, Huntington and near Pearland point up the need for additional safety inspection.

Daisetta, Tenaha and Huntington, all in East Texas, have been sites where high volumes of lost-and-unaccounted for gas and unsafe accumulations of gas have required emergency actions. A major gas transmission line explosion-fire occurred near Pearland in late 1978.

Commission gets 25,000 pricing applications

AUSTIN—The Railroad Commission's well classification section reported it has received more than 25,000 applications from Texas oil and gas operators for gas well production and pricing determinations under the federal Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978.

The Commission's NGPA section was formed in December 1978, in compliance with Federal Energy Regulatory Commission guidelines. Through this section, the RRC is responsible for the processing of operator applications for natural gas well determinations under five producing and pricing categories in the NGPA. The section docketed the 25,000th application on July 8. It was filed by Texas Oil and Gas Corp. of Midland. The 20,000th application, filed by Southland Royalty Co. of Fort Worth, was docketed on Feb. 1.

The application will go through the usual process of checks to verify the various production data it contains, according to Program Supervisor Sandra Buch.

Her July 17 report of section activities showed the following breakdown of categories applied for by operators since the program began:

1) 10,877 applications for determinations under NGPA Section 108 for stripper well natural gas average of no more than 60,000 cubic feet per production day. This category provides a maximum ceiling price of $2.680 per Mcf (thousand cubic feet) for the month of July.

2) 10,862 applications for determinations under Section 103—new onshore production wells drilled after Feb. 19, 1977. This category allows a ceiling price of $2.255 per Mcf in July.

3) 2,267 applications for determinations under Section 102 (c) (1) (C)—wells drilled in new onshore reservoirs. This category allows for a federal ceiling price of

$2.504 per Mcf this month.

4) 219 applications for determinations under Section 107—high cost gas wells drilled after Feb. 19, 1977 and completed at a depth below 15,000 feet. A ceiling price of $2.504 per Mcf is allowed through July.

5) 818 applications for determinations under Section 102 (c) (1) (C)—gas from wells meeting distance requirements from other wells. A ceiling price of $2.504 per Mcf is the maximum for

Amoco moves solar energy closer with test of commercial technology

CHICAGO, Ill. — Amoco Oil Co. moved solar energy closer to large-scale application as it inaugurated the first commercial test of a new solar technology.

The project is designed to help speed development and reduce the cost of solar energy.

Amoco, its largest involvement with solar energy to date, is using electricity from photovoltaic solar cells to dispense gasoline at one of its suburban service stations.

By doing this, Amoco is demonstrating a practical application of solar power and is showing its potential as an additional energy source. Photovoltaic solar cells turn sunlight directly into electricity.

The gasoline pumps at the station are powered by electricity generated by 5,184 photovoltaic solar cells housed in 72 interconnected panels. The panels are mounted on a structure Amoco built specifically for this project at the Amoco station on Illinois 59 and North Avenue in West Chicago, Ill.

The solar equipment was constructed by Amoco by Solarex Corp. of Rockville, Md. The company, in which Standard Oil Co. (Indiana) has a minority interest, is the world's largest manufacturer of photovoltaic solar cells.

Solarex made the four-inch square solar cells from innovative semi-crystalline silicon, produced by Semix, a Solarex subsidiary. The new Solarex/Semix technology offers the potential for substantially-reduced solar cell costs.

Las mont, Solarex/Semix entered a $10 million cooperative agreement with the U.S. Department of Energy that will help speed commercial introduction of semi-crystalline silicon.

The cells used at the station produce a maximum of 5,000 watts of power during hours of full sunlight. This is enough to "satisfy more than half the electrical needs of an average home," said Robert J. Rauscher, Chicago region vice president for Amoco Oil Co.

During daylight hours, the system at the station generates more electricity than it needs. The excess is diverted to special storage batteries inside the solar structure. When there isn't enough sunlight, the system pulls electricity from the batteries. When that is consumed, a computer automatically switches to conventional electricity sources.

Rauscher said Amoco's main objectives for the research project are to get first-hand experience with this new technology, to use the experience to help reduce the cost of solar energy and increase its efficiency, and to help educate the public about its potential.

Rauscher encouraged the public to visit the solar demonstration site and learn about photovoltaics. Visitors can pick up free brochures that explain this type of solar energy. They also will see a computer-programmed display that's connected to a TV screen and continuously shows a solar energy scenario.

A service station was chosen for the project, explained Rauscher, because it is easily accessible to the public and is a highly-visible part of the community. At this station, which is operated by dealer Len Kamenjarin, Amoco can reach 100,000 customers a year who will be able to observe the test.

In opening the solar demonstration, Rauscher and Illinois Lt. Governor David C. O'Neal flipped a switch that started solar energy dispensing gasoline. Using this solar-powered electricity, they then pumped the first gallon of gasoline into a classic 1932 Packard Phaeton, owned by Robert Joynt of Batavia, Ill.

In addition to examining the prospects of solar energy, Standard Oil has sizeable investments in oil shale, tar sands, and coal liquefaction projects.

Rauscher said Amoco and other subsidiaries of Standard Oil Co. (Indiana) are dedicated to helping free the U.S. from reliance on foreign energy resources. "We are committed to do our part to expand our country's energy resources, which include expenditures of $2 billion this year alone for domestic exploration and production of oil and gas.

Ships ferry 1,700 loads of oil south

By SARAH OVERMYER

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — One by one, the lines dropped away and the 983-foot Arco Juneau eased from the dock and into Valdez Harbor.

The ship was riding low under the weight of 800,000 barrels of North Slope crude oil on Aug. 1, 1977, as it headed south to the Atlantic Richfield Co. refinery at Cherry Point, Wash.

It was the first crude produced at the Prudhoe Bay oil field and pumped through a $7.7 billion, 800-mile pipeline environmentalists billed as a nightmare and engineers hailed as a dream.

The Arco Juneau and other tankers have since ferried more than 1,700 loads of oil south to refineries — 1.27 billion 42-gallon barrels.

The oil has changed Alaska life, bringing billions to the economy, adding to pressure to open the arctic wilderness to further oil and mineral exploration, and expanding the government's role.

Gov. Jay Hammond says the nation's No. 2 oil-producing state (Texas is first), still faces great potential and serious problems.

THE ECONOMY: The nation's 49th state has 400,000 residents. Lawmakers who convened in January with an estimated $1 billion surplus were told last week another $1 billion was likely to accumulate by the time they convene in 1981.

"It's easy to be seduced into believing there will be no tomorrow and that we can spend for virtually all our needs and wants today," says Hammond.

To encourage companies to invest in drawing oil from the region, the price of Alaska crude was set above other U.S. oil and tied to prices set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Analysts estimate the state's surplus due to OPEC price increases could total $27.8 billion by the 1990s.

The state's voters have created an Alaska Permanent Fund, an investment trust of 25 percent of non-tax oil revenue from Prudhoe Bay and other leases. The fund gets up to half what oil companies bid for drilling rights and half the actual production revenues. Earnings are split between the government and citizens, based on length of residency, and it is reducing income tax obligations by a third for each year of residency until no taxes are paid. Newcomers have challenged both provisions.

THE STATE: Oil money has enabled the state to enter "all sorts of areas not normally government's province," says Hammond.

The state subsidizes loans for homes, fishing, businesses, child care centers and college tuition. The state is helping bring television to Alaska via satellite, and distributed more than $500 million this year to build swimming pools and other local projects.

But the recession has hit hard and unemployment stands at 9.4 percent, higher than the national rate of 7.7 percent.

Hammond has says there has been "an epidemic" of bankruptcies and "thousands of people are leaving the state because they can't make a living." Besides a post-pipeline jobs shakeout, logging has been hurt by the housing slump and fishing has been depressed by oversupply.

THE ENVIRONMENT: Alaska now has two oil-producing areas — in and around Cook Inlet and at Prudhoe Bay — with combined daily production of 1,627,483 barrels. Some 1.52 million barrels a day flows through the pipeline operated by the Alyeska Oil Pipeline Service.

There were fears the pipeline would disturb the tundra, alter caribou migration patterns, create a target for terrorist sabotage and risk an environmental disaster in the event of a massive leak.

Despite minor spills and buckling in a few places, the pipeline today gets high marks.

"... Even the most hard-nosed environmentalist would agree that within the realm of capability, the pipeline is being operated in a pretty darn environmentally sensitive manner," says Hammond.

A 10-year study released last week concluded effects of the development of the Prudhoe Bay field and construction of the pipeline "have not been of a drastic or permanent nature."

The study, conducted by Canadian zoologist Angus Gavin and financed by Atlantic Richfield, was released while Congress debated a wilderness protection bill to restrict oil drilling, timber cutting and other development on about 100 million acres of Alaska.

The state has been at odds with the federal government over development of its resources, including proven and estimated oil reserves of as much as 85 billion barrels and natural gas reserves totalling 571.6 trillion cubic feet.

Deliveries underway

HOUSTON — United Texas Transmission, intrastate gas transmission subsidiary of United Energy Resources, Inc., announced initial deliveries of natural gas have started flowing through its new 284-mile, 30-inch pipeline from Laredo to Katy.

Construction on the new pipeline system was started in November 1979 to connect new gas reserves in the Laredo area and along the pipeline to the United Texas system at Katy near Houston.

The pipeline has a present delivery capacity of 400 million cubic feet of gas per day and will increase to 850 million cubic feet per day with the completion of a compressor station at Kenedy, Texas.

United Texas has signed gas purchase contracts with several companies with production operations in the area of the pipeline and these purchases have a current deliverability of approximately 225 million cubic feet per day.

Budget increased

CHICAGO, Ill. — Standard Oil Co. (Indiana)'s 1980 budget for North American exploration and production now totals $2.4 billion, with the approval today of a $220 million supplement by the company's board of directors.

Simultaneously, the board approved a $35 million increase in budgeted funds earmarked for overseas exploration efforts.

During the first half of 1980, Standard spent $969 million in exploring for and developing U.S. supplies of crude oil and natural gas. This was more than 90 percent of Standard's total worldwide earnings from all sources for the period and represents an increase of 73 percent over 1979 first half expenditures.

To illustrate the level of activity, John E. Swearingin, Standard chairman, said 94 rigs and 46 seismic crews are currently exploring prospective areas in the U.S. In addition, Amoco has added in 1980 over two million additional acres to its domestic leaseholdings.

With the supplements announced today, Standard's total 1980 worldwide capital and exploration budget becomes $4.5 billion.

Natomas given grant

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. — Natomas Co. announced it has received a $367,511 federal grant to study the commercial application of a Natomas-patented process to extract petroleum from U.S. tar sands.

Under the grant, awarded by the U.S. Department of Energy as part of its alternate fuels development program, Natomas will determine the technical feasibility and commercial viability of constructing a 20,000-barrel-a-day tar sands extraction facility. The company also will investigate the environmental, health and socioeconomic impacts of such a facility.

Natomas' patented process, which the company began developing in 1975, employs a solvent to extract bitumen, a heavy crude oil component, from oil-filled sands. Bitumen, in turn, can be refined to produce gasoline, heating oil and other petroleum products.

Finance commission working on interest rates

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Members of the State Finance Commission are looking at a more active role in recommending legislation, including interest rate matters, to the 1981 Legislature.

The commission, which oversees the Department of Banking, Savings and Loan Department and Office of the Consumer Credit Commissioner, anticipates financial institutions will be seeking interest rate changes from the new legislature.

OCCC Commissioner Sam Kelley, speaking to the group at their quarterly meeting, asked members to consider what they would want done in that regard, noting he's often called to testify on interest rate matters, but hasn't, in the past, taken a stand "pro or con" on such bills.

"It's not a right or wrong question...it's a subjective thing, not an objective thing," Kelley commented.

He also predicted the next session will bring renewed efforts for a constitutional amendment to allow liens against a homestead for other than improvements - which, he added, "is probably going to be an emotional proposal."

Kelley was questioned by the commission regarding the consumer finance industry, which is expected to seek an increase in the interest rates permitted them under the Consumer Credit Code.

Kelley reported the number of nationwide chains operating in Texas generally has "shrunk in number and size over the past four or five years," with lenders in the $100, and over, category hit particularly hard (with no independent Texas companies remaining in that field) while those in the $100 or smaller loan category have been less affected.

Pawn shops, Kelley said, "are probably the best deal to be in in the finance business today; they're making money."

Commission member Gerald Hicks Smith, Houston, said he was concerned that "an entire financial group has...evaporated from a Texas domicile."

"Even though they're competition," another member commented, "I'd hate to see them close down."

Savings and Loan Commissioner Alvis Vandygriff reported his office has been working with the Senate Finance Committee, which may have interest rate proposals of its own to offer.

Vandygriff also noted the savings and loan industry is faced with many changes under the recently-passed Monetary Control Act, including the ability to offer interest-bearing checking accounts and perhaps trust services (that latter remains unclear, he said.)

His agency will be working closely with the Department of Banking and Commissioner Robert Stewart as associations move into those areas, Vandygriff said.

He also reported the Savings and Loan Department is "on line" with the Department of Water Resources for computer services, and is able to monitor state-chartered associates on a monthly basis, replacing work that was being done manually.

"It offers us an opportunity to detect immediately any problem areas that may be arising," he said.

Commissioner Stewart reported the Department of Banking is proceeding "faster than expected" on implementing its electronic data processing examination program, with the examination section fully staffed, and training sessions held.

Internal control reviews already are being carried out at some banks, and bankers have been "quite complimentary" about the program, Stewart said.

Work on the new trust examination division is progressing, with some operations where better controls are needed having been located, he added.

Stewart noted the latest "call" by his agency showed the Department of Banking is having to oversee assets of $32.25 billion - and he may need additional people to do that (Stewart received approval for a budget change resulting in six more field examiners without a change in the overall spending by the department.)

The Banking Section of the Finance Commission and the department are carrying out a review of the State Banking Code, to update it and to "make the state banking charter continue to be attractive," Stewart reported.

That has been of increasing concern with changes in federal legislation, he added.

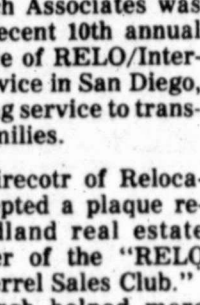

Among the changes being considered are reducing the examination requirements from three every two years to two every two years, and allowing the state to accept

This controversy surrounding registration merely is sheer and utter nonsense, period.

For awhile last week it looked as though the current draft registration program would not get off the ground. A three-judge federal panel struck down the law creating the registration process, saying the law discriminates against men because it does not also require women to register.

But Supreme Court Justice William Brennan issued an order staying the effects of the ruling pending a review by the high court. So last Monday some young men began to register at post offices throughout the United States.

During the revival of the draft registration process, it was the birth of a movement discouraging young men from registering that was most astounding. Fortunately in Midland traditional values have prevailed and there have been no protests. But some areas aren't so lucky.

Apparently the leaders of the opposition movement are of the mistaken opinion that if young men do not register for the draft they cannot be subjected to a military draft and, therefore, will not become the victims of war.

Unfortunately, those involved in the anti-draft registration movement are grossly misinformed or unbelievably naive — or both.

In the first place registration is merely a first step in a draft process that none of us ever wants to complete. But undoubtedly we all do want to have the process available to us should a clear and present danger to our way of life become evident at some future date.

Secondly, the sex-discrimination argument has been handed over to the Supreme Court which will rule on that complaint. Until that issue is settled, it obviously is the prerogative of the Congress to prefer an all-male draft.

The last time opposition to the draft surfaced so noticeably was during the Vietnam War which, interestingly enough, was a totally different situation than the one the United States faces today.

No longer is the United States recognized as the premiere military power of the world. The Soviet Union during the past few years has closed the margin between the military capability of the two countries rather significantly.

Perhaps registration for the draft is an inadequate response to the Soviet power play in Afghanistan and the growing tensions between Russia and the United States. Perhaps the preferred response would be, rather, upgrading the United States' strategic weapons in hopes of deterring a future confrontation.

But the decision to dust off the draft machinery has been made and, therefore, should be accepted.

Besides, anybody who thinks his individual freedoms are jeopardized more by his own country than the Soviet regime hasn't been doing any realistic thinking lately.

Will all those young Americans who oppose draft registration or the draft or military service be able to impress upon the Soviet leaders that they also oppose oppressive regimes? Unlikely.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, July 27, the 209th day of 1980. There are 157 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1953, the Korean War ended with the signing of an armistice in Panmunjom.

On this date: —In 1789, Congress established the forerunner of the State Department — the Department of Foreign Affairs.

In 1941, Japanese forces landed in French Indochina during World War II.

In 1954, Britain and Egypt agreed on terms ending British control of the Suez Canal.

In 1960, Richard Nixon was nominated for president at the Republican National Convention in Chicago.

Ten years ago: Three people were killed when racial riots erupted among a crowd of 75,000 people gathered for a rock music concert in Grant Park, Chicago.

Five years ago: President Gerald Ford met with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt. They agreed it was "vitally important" that the U.S. intensify efforts to coordinate economic policy with Western Europe.

One year ago: A congressional report accused the Nuclear Regulatory Commission of not giving enough emphasis to emergency planning for nuclear accidents.

Today's birthdays: Former big league baseball manager Leo Durocher is 74 years old.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Kissinger power play didn't work this time

WASHINGTON — It takes a two-thirds majority of the 50 states to amend the Constitution — or half a dozen Republican politicians in a smoke-filled room.

The GOP's revisionist historians and columnists have been busily denying that Ronald Reagan and Gerald Ford were trying to tamper with the Constitution by assigning powers to the vice president that the Founding Fathers never contemplated. But the fact of the matter is that, in the interests of getting elected in November, the Republicans apparently were willing to rewrite the Constitution ad hoc.

Media pundits, with their usual flair for simplification, quickly termed Ford's demands for a significant role in a Reagan administration as "co-presidency." The Republican deal-makers, striving to find a less inflammatory phrase to make their Reagan-Ford "dream ticket" palatable to the electorate, described it as a "restructuring of the vice-presidency." The word "restructuring" rang an alarm bell in my memory. When I learned that Henry Kissinger was involved in the mercifully unsuccessful negotiations between Reagan's and Ford's satraps, I remembered where I'd heard about "restructuring" before.

It was the innocent-sounding concept that Dr. Kissinger had used early in Richard Nixon's first administration — on its very first day, in fact — to justify his seizure of foreign-policy authority from the traditional custodian of America's dealings with other nations, the secretary of state.

Kissinger was Ford's chief negotiator in the backstage dealings that would have given the former president unprecedented power in a Reagan administration. Indeed, the little professor's insistence on arrogating a lion's share of presidential authority to his former boss is credited with the breakdown in the negotiations, and the ultimate decision by Reagan to go along with George Bush as a more compliant running mate.

Whether the Reagan negotiators were aware of Dr. Kissinger's role in a previous "restructuring" of executive power, I don't know. But classified documents I've seen show they were wise to be suspicious of Kissinger's attempt to give Ford — and, thereby, Kissinger himself, as Ford's adviser — powers that no vice president in history has ever had.

Judged purely on past performances, Kissinger would have bilthely stolen the authority to make foreign policy from the candidate who, rightly or wrongly, Republican voters had decided was the man they wanted to represent the United States in its dealings with the world.

Kissinger's past performance in power-grabbing began on Jan. 20, 1969 — Nixon's first inauguration day. While the new chief executive was smiling and waving to the units in the inaugural parade, Kissinger was busy drafting secret memos for Nixon's signature.

The memos — called National Security Decision Memorandum No. 1 and No. 2 — undercut Nixon's gentlemanly choice for secretary of state, William Rogers, and gave effective control of U.S. foreign policy to Kissinger

ART BUCHWALD Vehicle's safety harness can spoil a good dinner

If the president is really serious in his campaign to protect Americans from invasion of privacy, he might start with automobile safety belts. These harnesses, which are attached to screaming buzzers on the dashboard, may save lives, but they're also wrecking marriages, driving people stark-raving mad, and causing untold havoc on the road.

Just the other day I was in Tucson, and the Sheltons offered to take me to dinner in their new station wagon. There were six of us in the car, three in the front seat and three in the back. Everyone was in a jovial mood.

Then Shelton tried to start the car. A red light, the size of a highway billboard, lit up and a buzzer that sounded like an air-raid siren went off.

Shelton yelled to his wife, "Fasten your safety belt!"

"It is fastened!" she screamed back over the din.

"Well, it isn't fastened right. Put the shoulder strap over your chest."

"It is over my chest," she said angrily. I was sitting between them in the middle seat.

"Maybe it's my belt!" I yelled. I unhooked and then rehooked the belt, but the buzzer wouldn't stop.

"Hurry up," someone in the back seat shouted, "or the whole car will self-destruct."

Shelton leaned over me, grabbed his wife's shoulder harness and pulled it tightly around her.

The red light went off and the buzzing stopped.

"There," Shelton said, "that's better."

Art Buchwald

"I'm choking," Mrs. Shelton gasped. "I can't breathe."

"Don't do anything," Shelton cried, "or the buzzing will start again."

"I can only hold my breath for two minutes," Mrs. Shelton gagged.

I lifted the shoulder harness from her neck and the red light went on again and the scream of the buzzer filled the car.

"Everybody get out," Shelton said. "Let's see if I can solve this thing."

We all got out of the car. Shelton studied the front seat.

"All right. My harness goes in this slot, your harness in this slot and her harness goes in this one. Now let's all get back in the car again, and I don't want to hear any buzzers."

We got back in and in five minutes managed to get the harnesses around us.

Shelton turned on the ignition and everything on the dashboard flashed red.

"You hold her harness," Shelton yelled to me, "and let her hold yours."

"Who's going to hold yours?" I shouted.

"I'll hold my own."

"How are you going to drive?" I asked him.

"Who cares, as long as I can stop the buzzing."

I was holding on to Mrs. Shelton's harness for dear life, and she had my seat belt in the crook of her elbow. Shelton had one hand underneath his seat and was driving with the other.

For five minutes it was quiet in the car. Then Mrs. Shelton said, "I think the circulation in my arm has been cut off. There's no feeling in it."

"We've only got three miles to go," Shelton raged. "Hang on."

"Please let go of my harness," Mrs. Shelton begged me.

"If you do, I'll kill you," Shelton told me.

We made it to the restaurant just before Mrs. Shelton passed out.

It was a good dinner, but no one really cared. Everyone was thinking of the drive back to the hotel.

They're cheaper and with every Taiwanese-made tank you get a little paper umbrella.

The Republicans missed a great opportunity in Detroit. After the national anthem and opening prayer, they should have shown a film of Billy Carter making the pledge of allegiance to the flag — of Libya.

For their $200,000 investment, the Libyans received two cases of Billy Beer, a free grease and oil change and dinner for two at the I'll Never Lie to You Diner in Plains, Georgia.

The Libyans sure love Billy. He now has the only house in Plains with a camel parked on the front lawn — up on cinder blocks.

NICK THIMMESCH

AMA wisely stands against doctors performing executions

WASHINGTON — The American Medical Association deserves a salute for officially voicing its strenuous opposition to any provision that a physician be an "active participant" in the legal execution of a prisoner.

In recent years, four states have passed laws specifying that a lethal chemical injection be used to execute condemned prisoners. While the states — Oklahoma, Texas, Idaho and New Mexico — do not now require that a physician administer the fatal dose, the medics are concerned that eventually those states and others will get around to passing laws specifying that a doctor must do the job.

Thus physicians would become executioners, a role that goes against everything they have been taught, and which also brings to mind the horrible euthanasia program which disgraced German medicine in the late '30s and early '40s.

The German doctors, according to Dr. Fredric Wertham in "A Sign For Cain," killed 275,000 institutionalized psychiatric patients in the name of "the good death." The German program did not have its roots in Nazi ideology, but rather, in the "enlightened" writings of German psychiatrists who advocated euthanasia to put people out of their misery.

According to Dr. Wertham, psychopaths, epileptics, encephalitics, mental defectives, deaf-mutes, amputees, and grossly handicapped people were put to death by gas, poisoned food and lethal injections in half-a-dozen otherwise respected state hospitals. Initially, Jewish patients and others who would have been targets of Nazi persecution were spared this "good death" because the medics reasoned that they didn't deserve such a favor.

Anyway, recollections of that horrid chapter in medicine, plus the conviction that it just isn't right for a physician to administer death to anyone, caused several delegates at the AMA convention in Chicago this week to rise up and demand a resolution proclaiming that physicians wanted no part of this chore.

"Ethically we are sworn to do no harm," said Dr. Armond H. Start, medical director of the Oklahoma Department of Corrections. "How in the world can I be involved in an execution and not violate my own ethics?"

Dr. Start said that he wouldn't assist in any execution, nor would any of his staff, and commented that it wouldn't be easy for a prison doctor to be directly involved in an execution one day and to expect other prisoners to feel comfortable with him on another.

Some physicians argued that the AMA should not take a stand, but one delegate, Dr. Carroll Witten of Louisville, had the good sense and guts to insist that inaction would mean the AMA had "neglected to attend to one of the most important social and professional issues of our time."

Let me digress here to say I am against capital punishment because it is barbaric. I am for tougher treatment of prisoners convicted of murder, assault or other serious crimes. I also believe that judges, "counselors," and that cadre of psychologists and psychiatrists dealing with young prisoners have been too easy on these offenders. There has been too much mushy-headed explaining away of crime.

Having said this, I still argue that capital punishment is not the answer. And yet, in response to popular demand (like the Roman circuses?), 38 states now provide for capital punishment, and executions have been performed in three states.

Electrocution, poison gas, and the firing squad are specified in state laws on execution, but some death penalty enthusiasts now affect to be of more humane mind, and argue that the poor condemned lout be injected with a lethal dose of chemical, just as those unfortunate Germans were 40 years ago.

Nowadays, the enlightened crowd would put the prisoner on a table, hook him up with an intravenous system which would first drip sodium thiopental into his veins — to make him relax, and even go to sleep — and then let a flow of tubocurarine finish him (or her) off.

According to Dr. Wertham, when the German program began in 1939, the first patients were gassed and then burned. But the state doctors wanted a less grisly form, and by 1942 were killing the patients with "lethal doses of morphine, scopolamine, Veronal and chloral." So what's new under the sun?

In every society, there are people who feel that other people would be better off dead, or should be dead. They may think this because they harbor elitist feelings and really detest the run of humanity, or they may be emotionally convinced that a killer deserves to be killed. And so at various times, these people advocate overt euthanasia or capital punishment, and are willing to assume a God pose to implement their conviction.

Beware such people. They themselves are killers, and would be indignant if you told them that. They would also be outraged if some other vengeful souls wanted to kill them, thus completing the lethal circle.

The doctors in Chicago were right and wise to vote as they did, and thus wash their hands of the sordid business of executions.

Decision on education of alien children does have its contradictions

By BILL KIDD Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — "A basic contradiction," Gov. Bill Clements commented on the ruling by U.S. District Judge Woodrow Seals, which struck down part of the 1975 Texas Education Code limiting state funding to public schools to citizens and legally admitted aliens.

the equal protection of the law in another area.

In one sense, it's extremely hard to disagree with Seals on one point: that "for good or for ill," the children of illegal aliens are here to stay, and that failure to educate them can do little but assure continuing problems for them.

In that regard, Seals' decision is one that should be welcomed as one which is humane and understanding.

But what is unwelcome to many Texans is the prospect of the added cost of educating those children, a cost which has been estimated by the Texas Education Agency at $100 million annually, based on an estimate that 110,000 school age children are illegally living in Texas.

And that cost likely will hit hardest in school districts along the Mexican border — where the number of the poor is large, where unemployment is high, and where resources already are strained.

Obviously, those districts will be turning to the state for additional help, and some will be available, based on the additional number of students. Unfortunately, that aid isn't likely to be enough to meet the needs of those districts, or their new students — many of whom will need bilingual instruction and other special assistance (and bilingual teachers are already in short supply.)

Clements argues that the federal government should supply funds to help educate such children, pointing out that their situation is part of the overall problem of immigration to the U.S. of Mexican jobseekers.

The federal government, Clements says, won't or can't keep the aliens out, has refused to deal with changing the law, and has failed to come up with any means of allowing aliens to work legally while in the U.S.

Those problems are the ones which need to be solved, Clements argues, to help straighten out our relations with Mexico — and the question of educating children of those Mexicans coming into Texas is "peripheral."

Critics of Seals' ruling say it will encourage a flood of illegal aliens to Texas, seeking free education for their children, or will cause those already in the state to bring across any children who've been left behind before now.

That remains to be seen, but it seems clear that the decision in Houston doesn't come to grips with any of the main problems in the illegal alien question.

Seals, in his decision, chides Texas as having, "unlike other states," rejected efforts to discourage the employment of undocumented workers. Presumably, that includes attempts in past legislative sessions to impose penalties on employers who "knowingly" hire such workers — legislation which received some support from union officials, and much opposition from business interests.

Another ironic aspect to the situation is that the ruling that all children in the state must be given free public education comes when there is strong pressure to reduce costs in education at all levels.

The Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System, voted at its recent meeting to reaffirm its call for increased tuition to all students at state-supported universities (and other groups appointed to look at higher education have done the same.)

Coordinating Board Chairman Mrs. Beryl Milburn, Austin, says she feels it's hardly unfair to ask those who receive the benefits of such education to help bear some of the cost.

And she says she'd like to see more consideration of "a basic question...which has never been debated, that I know of," namely, "What is the obligation of society in providing higher education to its citizens? A B.A.? Master's degree? Ph.D.?"

A legitimate question — and one which can be paraphrased, "What is the obligation of society in providing education to its citizens, and non-citizens?"

Judge Seals has ruled that, at least through high school, society has that duty, to anyone within the jurisdiction of that society — strengthening previous court decisions to the effect that education is a "right," and not a "privilege."

Whether Seals' ruling ultimately will stand remains to be settled. Also remaining to be settled are the larger problems pointed out by Clements and noted by Seals.

And Seals' ruling, significant though it may be, does nothing at all in that regard.

Taking a friendly look at life's platonic art

Two lawyer-types were involved in a cursory discussion of friendship when they were riding up the old rash and quick-to-snap elevator in the Midland County Courthouse.

"A friend in need is no friend to easy rider on the courthouse elevator was paraphrasing him or Shakespeare or Twain some other soul who might have penned the notion that taxing a friend endangers friendship.

The wise Baron de Montesquieu looked up friendship like this: "Friendship is an arrangement by which we undertake to exchange small favors for big ones."

D'Arcy W. Thompson suggested a cautious approach to the bonds:

"Against a foe I can myself defend — But Heaven protect me from a blundering friend."

Charles Caleb Colton took the humor out of seriousness: "True friendship is like sound health: The value of it is seldom known until it is lost."

Ideally, a friendship flows like an undisturbed river and enhances life all about. There is an aesthetic beauty in an undemanding tie.

Yet, eventually all friendships undergo stress, and it is a tribute to the quality of the hearts when the relationship soars to new, platonic heights.

This, of course, is not to imply that paramours, like spouses, cannot be friends. Indeed, lovers should be the best of friends. But, paradoxically, the evolution of a friend into a lover may pass the former into extinction.

More than not, friendship is an innate need. A person should be as comfortable with himself as he is with a friend.

POSITIVE THINKING

With God's help, you can find way back

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

On a speaking trip to the Southwest I was having dinner in my hotel when a man came in asking for me. He introduced himself, very kindly saying he had been wanting to meet me for a long time. I asked him to sit down and we began to talk.

the streets. Then I panhandled through the countryside. I slept in barns, haystacks, any place I could find. My clothes were rags. I was down and out.

"One day I stopped at a house to ask for a handout. A woman fed me and, as I sat back on the back stoop eating, she said to me: 'What makes you this way? You must have something more in you. You can make a man of yourself.'"

"Then she went into the house and came out with a book, which she gave to me. It was your book, 'The Power of Positive Thinking,'" he concluded.

Then he reached into his coat pocket and pulled out the book to show me. It was torn, ragged, dirty. He continued:

"I took the book with me. Often, to get out of the cold, I would go into a public library and read it. I read it a dozen times while I was going across the country. "I came to this town eventually because I had heard there was a kindhearted man here who might give me a job. I had his address and went to his house. A young woman was outside sweeping the sidewalk. That woman, incidentally, is now my wife."

He went on with this story: "As I read that book, I began to feel close to God. I could actually feel myself change. A feeling came to me that perhaps I could be an accountant. So I borrowed some books and began to study accounting."

"An oil company finally hired me for a special job. It was a kind of work I'd never done before, but I applied the spiritual principles I'd learned, and I prayed. I'd been told that if my figures were within 20 percent of accuracy, my employers would be satisfied. In my prayers, I asked God to help me figure it out. With His help, I came within seven-tenths percent on the final figures."

When I said goodbye to this remarkable man who had started our conversation with the words, "I was a bum," I knew that I was seeing a man who had found his way back.

He had learned that, if you put your trust in God and let Him help you, it doesn't matter what you have been or what you are. He can help you become what you ought to be; He can help you find your way back.

One wonderful thing about human beings is that no matter how old they are, how badly they have failed, how frustrated they are, there is always a spark within them — the hope of starting again, doing better, achieving their dreams, finding their way back to their highest desires.

Never let that spark die in you. For, no matter what happens, with the help of God, you can find your way back.

Recession fashioned for fall by Jimmy Carter

(Lester C. Thurow, a professor of economics and management at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is the author of "The Zero Sum Society.")

By LESTER C. THUROW Special to The Los Angeles Times

No Democratic president since Franklin Delano Roosevelt has presided over a recession during an election year. Since World War II, only one recession, that of 1949, has ever occurred during a Democratic administration. Roosevelt's recessions could be blamed on a nasty inheritance, the Great Depression, from the preceding Republican president. And Truman could blame his recession on the post-World War II transition from military to civilian production.

ed recessions like a plague for a very simple reason. It gets them re-elected. The people who vote for Democratic presidents are the people who end up being unemployed when a recession strikes. Traditional Republican voters are only lightly affected when unemployment rises.

On the stone tablets of the Democratic Party there is engraved one commandment — and only one: "Jobs come first! Thou shalt never deliberately create unemployment!" Whatever the problem, it must be solved in some way other than throwing Democrats out of work.

It is a commandment to which the Carter administration pledged its support. In the fall of 1976, Carter as a candidate promised that he would never use unemployment to cure inflation. He broke that pledge, and with it the only sacred principle of the Democratic Party.

He will now have to pay the price for breaking that commandment. He will either be cast into the hell of defeat or have to suffer the tortures of purgatory by spending several months in which his re-election is in doubt.

Since the recession began early this year, more than 2 million people have been added to the unemployment rolls. But 1.4 million, or 69 percent of them, have been blue-collar workers. With blue-collar workers accounting for only one-third of those employed, the net result is a situation where blue-collar workers are five times as likely to become unemployed as the rest of the labor force.

But these are the voters that form the backbone of the Democratic Party. Without them, no Democratic president can be elected.

One can admire the altruism of adopting a policy that hurts your own political supporters far more than those of your opponent or marvel at the political stupidity of an administration that did what the Carter administration did, but the fact remains that there is no objective reason why blue-collar voters should support the Carter administration. The administration that was supposed to look out for their interests, and the administration that promised never to use their unemployment to fight inflation, did exactly what it had promised not to do.

One can make the argument that when it comes to equal rights, labor legislation, minimum wages and Supreme Court justices, blue collar workers would be better off with Carter than with Ronald Reagan. But when it comes to the bread-and-butter issues of jobs, Reagan could not be worse than Carter.

Nor is there any reason to believe that things will get better. The administration plans to continue a strategy of using blue-collar unemployment to fight inflation. Carter is now opposing a tax cut that might shorten the recession and reduce blue-collar unemployment in 1981.

His chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, Paul A. Volcker, is promising to keep credit tight and to hold the rate of growth of the money supply below where even he previously pledged it would be held. He is not going to make up the shortfall between performance and targets that occurred earlier in the year. Interest rates are going to be higher than they should be.

As a consequence, Volcker is promising to make the current recession worse. If the president disavows these policies, he has not said so. What makes the matter worse, no one — not even the administration — thinks that inflation will fall below the 10 percent range.

While the Federal Reserve Board is an independent agency, one of the purposes of electing a president is to ensure that independent agencies will be responsive to the electorate's needs. If the president fails on this dimension, it is simply another political betrayal.

When you add up what Carter is now doing and what he promises to do, blue-collar workers would be as bad off in the second Carter administration as they have been in the first. Given this prospect, it is not surprising that they are now planning to treat the president badly in his re-election bid. They are simply returning the treatment they have been given.

If Carter's ineptitude was simply dragging him down to defeat, that prospect could be viewed with a certain equanimity. But as a president who does not seem to know what the Democratic Party stands for, who supports it, and what is necessary for its survival, he threatens to drag the whole party down to defeat with him in November.

This is a disaster, not just for those who hold office, but for traditional Democratic voters. Their views aren't going to be represented in this election. And those elected officials who support their views and protect their interests are going to be fewer in number after this election is over. They are going to go down defending the president.

But it is not too late for them to act.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Note of thanks

To The Editor: Would you please publish this open letter to Fred M. Allison?

Dear Mr. Allison: We have been associated with the City of Midland swim team for nearly ten years as parents, board members, treasurer and president of the team. We have seen many phases of swimming in Midland and throughout the state, but meets like the Allison West Texas Invitational can only be a Midland function. We know what you have generously donated to our team for the past four years as we have helped account for every dollar, and we also know what it means to the team and the community.

Each year parents, coaches, and yes, even swimmers, are amazed at the flurry of activity and expectation in setting up for the meet just prior to the first competition. They enjoy the precision of the handling of each event, each session, and each day, for as you know, there is nothing worse than a shabbily run meet. The West Texas hospitality is shown again by the Friday evening mixer in which all parents, coaches and workers are welcomed and by the huge barbecue that concludes the meet. The Reporter-Telegram and other area news media continued their fine support and coverage of the meet this year.

Richard Vincent's summation in the Reporter-Telegram of July 22, 1980, sports section really captured the Allison West Texas Invitational's spirit and essence.

Well, Mr. Allison, you have made possible the continuation of this tradition. By combining your efforts with other community members, such as Parks and Recreation, the Midland Chamber of Commerce, Jaycees and Jaycee-ettes, and others, we truly have the finest meet in the state of Texas; a meet that teams from all over the United States want to attend. As parents and members of the Midland community, we want to say thank you.

Mr. and Mrs. John G. Seay Midland

Price is too high

To The Editor: In his decision on Monday, Judge Woodrow Seals opened the doors to illegal (not undocumented) aliens. This decision illustrates once again that the will of the government of the United States has little or nothing to do with the will of the people of the United States.

He writes, "...this statute absolutely deprives undocumented children access to education, thereby causing them great harm."

Does he believe that an additional $100 million in taxes (according to the Texas Education Commissioner) will not cause the people of Texas "great harm"?

Why should we educate these people or their children at our expense? Are they unable to get an education in Mexico because they are "undocumented"? If these illegal aliens want to educate their children, let 'em stay at home!

Ruben Bonilla (of LULAC) called the decision "...a giant step for the concept that all residents of America are entitled to equal protection of the laws." I was under the impression that this protection was guaranteed to CITIZENS of America. We can no longer try to be saviors of the world. The price has gotten too high.

William L. Morton Midland

Proud of police

To The Editor: I am writing this letter to commend the fine officers of the Midland Police Department.

Recently our sixteen-year-old son mixed some pills and alcohol. Needless to say he went a little "crazy." After trying to keep him under control so he wouldn't hurt himself or someone else and it looked like we were fighting a losing battle we took him to the hospital, but were told there a patient cannot be kept against their wishes even if they are a minor. After this fruitless attempt for help we had no other choice but to turn to the police.

The officers that answered our call were very patient and understanding with our son. He was placed in protective custody until he came down off his "high."

Our special thanks go to Lieutenant Ward, the Juvenile Officer, this is truly a fine man who has worked very closely with us and our son and has helped us any way he could.

We are still on the road to recovery, but with God's help and the help of the fine officers of Midland maybe we have the worst part behind us.

I hope no other parent has to go through an ordeal like this, but if you do there is help and understanding people you can reach out to.

Marvelous meals

To The Editor: Thank You, Need-A-Meal Volunteers!

Thank you for nice meals. Please thank all the lovely girls for their faithful deliveries. They all just must be very dedicated to sacrifice time and efforts to make life a bit easier for others whose health is impaired.

My sister, Vivian, and I do wish to thank each and every one concerned. Makes the day brighter to know that there are ones who still care.

H. Earline Gaddy Midland

No 'sticky wicket'

To The Editor: I am an exponent of the theory "give the flowers while we yet can smell them."

At this time I would like to pay tribute to Lieutenant P.A. Diltz who came to my rescue in a very trying time. I returned to Midland Saturday night at midnight to find the battery dead in my automobile and a flat tire on the station wagon, (a week-end without wheels can be a real "sticky wicket") and this nice policeman not only jumped my battery and started the car but also inflated the flat tire with his portable air tank.

The world would be a far better place to live if we had more people with the qualities of this fine officer. My hat is off to him.

DEAR HELOISE:
I have a great collection of photographs of family and friends. I've been wanting to hang them up on the walls, but found that frames made for collage displays are a little too expensive for my budget.

So I decided to make my own out of a sturdy piece of poster board covered with self-adhesive paper.

I took a piece of paper the same size as the poster board and planned out the collage of pictures. I then outlined the pictures and removed them from the pattern.

With a sharp knife and a ruler (to help me make a straight edge) I secured the paper pattern over the poster board and cut out the different shapes a little smaller than the outline to allow overlap of my pictures on the openings.

Prints, however, probably would clash with the pictures. An inexpensive frame could be purchased if desired.

C.A.P.

Sounds like you've put that old American ingenuity to working overtime.

With a low-budget project like this, one could get out Great-Great Grandma's pictures and display them!

SAVING WAY
DEAR HELOISE:
Hang a small hand towel (on a cup hook works fine) next to the roll of paper towels you have in your kitchen.

Instead of reaching for a disposable towel all the time, this hand towel will help stretch that roll a little further.

DEAR HELOISE:
Since I broke my finger, I've had a problem opening twist-off caps on soda pop bottles. I finally found a way to open them easier. Take a rubberband and wrap it around the cap that you're trying to get off. Put it on pretty tight though. Get a good grip and twist. It doesn't take much effort.

Where there's a will, there's a way, huh? Hang in there, Lanna.

THE FROSTING ON HER CAKE
DEAR HELOISE:
One day I baked a cake and was frosting it, using decorating tips, the ones that make flowers and things. Well, as I was cleaning up my mess, it was a breeze until I got to cleaning the tips. The frosting had dried and wouldn't come out, so I thought of using a cotton swab.

It got them clean as a whistle.

PUMP 'EM CLEAN
DEAR HELOISE:
I use empty hand lotion bottles with pump tops at my kitchen and bathroom sinks. I put one-third dishwashing detergent to two-thirds water in them. It's so convenient for washing hands.

When my hands are dirty or greasy, I just pump with the heel of my hand — no dirty soap and soap dish to have to clean up.

It's handy for squirting a little dab into a dirty skillet or pan for last minute cleanups too.

LETTER OF THOUGHT
DEAR HELOISE:
We all know we're in an energy shortage — we are reminded of it everywhere we look and every time we have to shell out another dollar.

But, thanks to your column, and all the readers that contribute their time and energy-saving tips, we can make it easier on ourselves, as well as the future generations.

So let's all make the terms "thrifty housewife" and "thrifty person" respectable again! For as we go, so goes the nation!

A NEW TWIST
DEAR HELOISE:
Here's a new twist to the sliced onion in the leftover pickle juice.

After slicing the onions into rings and adding them to the pickle juice, I add several drops of food coloring to the juice.

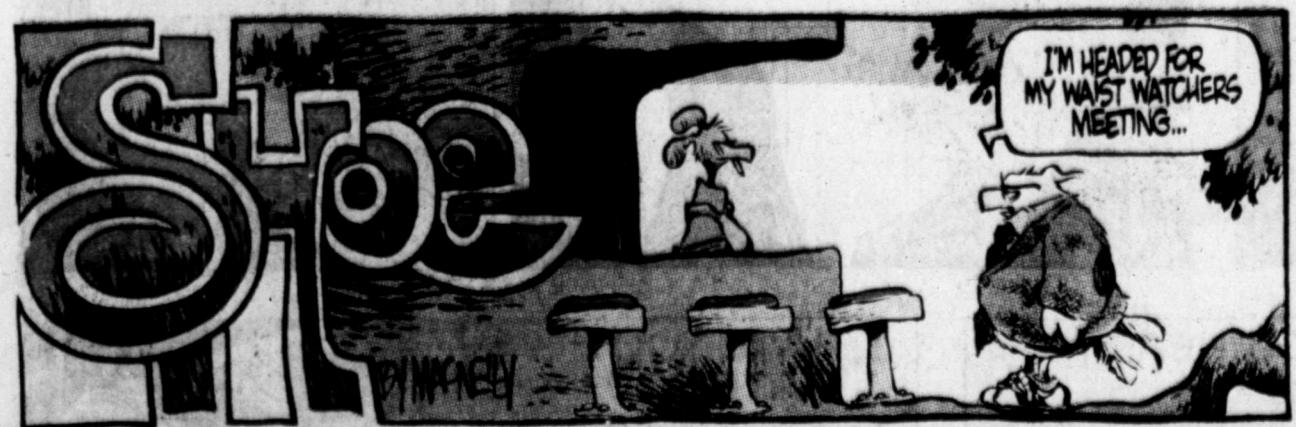

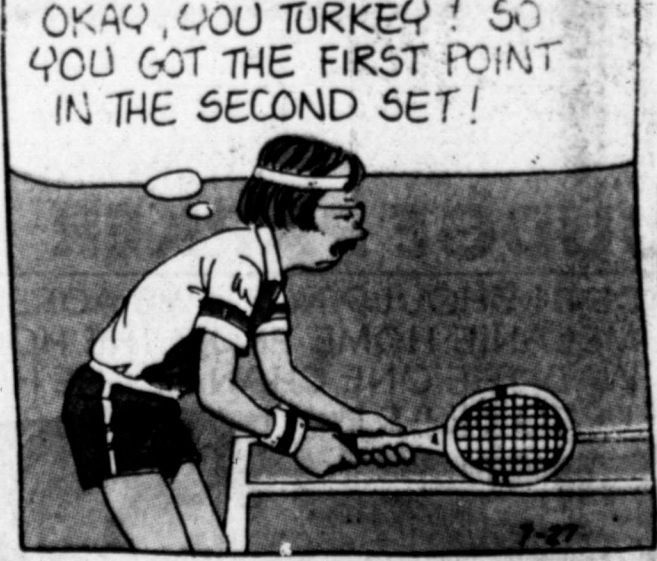

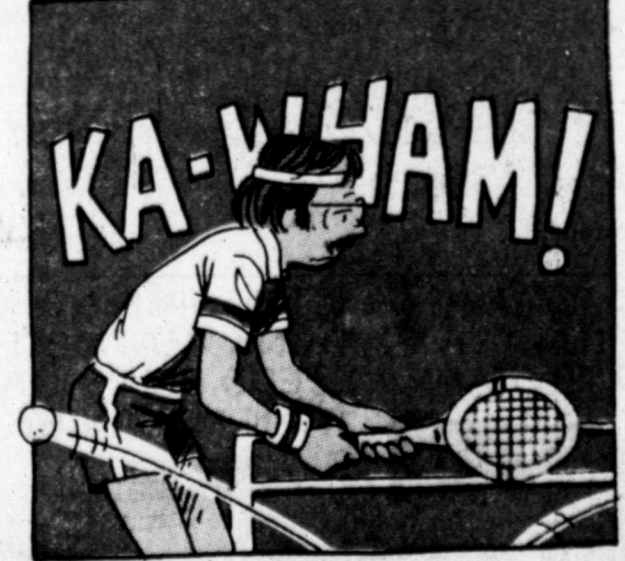

I decorate salads and other dishes with my "red" pickled onions and it makes me feel special.

Mrs. J.W. Shaffer

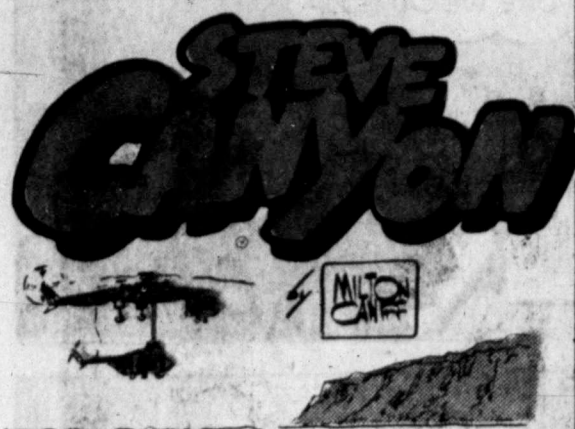

You don't need red pickled onions to be "special" in my book. Thanks for sharing, Luv.
