Carter hiding behind old issues: Reagan

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Ronald Reagan, responding to new criticism by President Carter of his past record, said today he thinks Carter is raising old issues because he doesn't want to debate the new ones.

"I think he's trying to hide the fact he doesn't want to debate," Reagan told reporters in an impromptu meeting while campaigning in San Antonio.

Reagan was asked about a Carter allegation that the Republican presidential nominee had opposed the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Reagan didn't deny he had opposed the legislation at the time, but said, "Back there a great many people questioned the same thing, not the fact that there was a need for civil rights, but that provisions might be setting precedents for infringing individual freedom."

But Reagan said that in retrospect he thinks it was good legislation. "It has worked and like many of those other people I'm satisfied with it, and if anything I'd like to see it better," he told reporters.

Carter, campaigning in Atlanta today, also criticized Reagan anew for his suggestion in a 1964 speech that Social Security might be made voluntary for some people.

Reagan denied the accusation. "I've never suggested that Social Security be made voluntary," he said, but added he had suggested some changes be made.

Reagan seemed annoyed at having to respond to Carter charges about his past positions. The former California governor had hoped to focus attention on his campaign for support in Texas, a crucial Carter-Reagan battleground with 26 electoral votes at stake, and especially from the state's large Hispanic population.

Reagan, addressing a Mexican Independence Day rally attended by about 800 people, and criticized the fence that separates parts of the United States and Mexico to keep out illegal aliens. He said he favored issuing documents to people entering the country legally.

"The answer to the problem is that you document these workers. You don't build a nine-foot fence along the border between two friendly nations," he said to loud applause.

Appearing on the podium with Reagan and his wife Nancy was former Dallas Cowboy quarterback Roger Staubach, a Reagan supporter, who received a noisy ovation when Reagan said he appreciated having a "great quarterback" behind him.

Earlier, Reagan took a ride down the San Antonio River, which cuts through the heart of this Texas city, in an orange, barge-like boat bedecked with flowers. Also on board were a mariachi band and state GOP dignitaries including Gov. William P. Clements, Sen. John Tower and former Gov. John Connally.

Monday night, on his arrival from Washington, Reagan responded to a barb from Carter about being "under wraps" and "muzzled" from talking to reporters. Reagan said he was just as accessible to the press and public as Carter, "in fact more so."

Carter, campaigning in Texas Monday, said Reagan wouldn't be able to represent the country well as president because "you've got to be able to respond accurately in a way that doesn't embarrass you personally and does not embarrass our nation."

Reagan told reporters at the airport that "Mr. Carter has been so deep in the Rose Garden that I don't think Mr. Carter really knows what I'm doing out here."

Iran names committee to deal with hostages

By The Associated Press

The Iranian Parliament, in a stormy session on the American hostages, put off a full-scale debate on the issue today and voted instead to set up a special committee to deal with the fate of the 52 Americans who have been held for 10½ months.

President Carter, campaigning today in Atlanta, tempered his optimism of Monday and said "there is no prospect at this time for an early resolution" of the stalemate over release of the hostages.

Tehran Radio said the Majlis, or parliament, voted by a "decisive majority" to set up the committee. The action, in effect, postponed the long-awaited parliamentary debate that had been expected to provide an indication of how Iran would deal with the hostages.

Amid arguments over whether the Iranian Parliament should conduct a secret or public session on the hostages, hardline deputy Sayyed Fakhroddin Rahimi said "we do not need any special committee or a secret session." He said "the spy-hostages must be tried and executed and the non-spy hostages released on conditions."

But Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani ruled him out of order and said speakers should stick to setting up procedures for considering the issue. The speaker said discussions on the new committee will continue when Parliament resumes Thursday, but assured deputies that "the final decision will be by the Majlis itself." Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, leader of the Iranian revolution, has said the Majlis has authority to decide the fate of the hostages.

Abdolmajid Dialameh, speaking for 17 deputies who wanted a closed session to discuss the issue, said "this secret meeting is necessary for the deputies to gain information..." But Mohammad Mahammadi, a member of The Struggling Moslems Movement which is close to the militants holding the hostages, bitterly objected.

"Everything should be open to the nation," he shouted. "I am absolutely against any kind of secret session." Speaker Rafsanjani twice warned Mahammadi to stop shouting, and the proposal for a closed-door meeting was rejected.

Fifteen deputies proposed that the debate on the hostages be suspended "as long as the United States continues its provocations against Iran," but other deputies objected to the idea.

Push-button banking proposed

Wide use of unmanned tellers asked

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

It's reaching the point in our lifestyles today that almost anything can be accomplished by pushing a button. If a constitutional amendment on the November ballot is passed, banking could become a direct involvement between customer and machine.

Proposition 1 on the November ballot would permit banks in a community to share the operation of unmanned teller machines at various sites throughout the city which would be convenient to customers.

Pushing for approval of that amendment are past presidents of three banking organizations — Charles E. Cheever Jr. of San Antonio with the Texas Bankers Association; William P. Sinkin of San Antonio, Independent Bankers Association; and Derrell Henry of Odessa, Texas Association of Bank Holding Companies.

The trio, called the Convenience Banking Committee, is touring the state advocating a yes vote on the amendment. Don Cavness of Austin, former legislative consultant to the Independent Bankers Association, is coordinator of the public education campaign financed in large part by the banking industry.

Under current state law, banks are prohibited from installing unmanned tellers except at their banking locations. In Midland, two banks use the 24-hour push-button service: First National Bank of Midland and Midland National Bank.

According to George Christian, in Midland with the banking committee, branch banks in Texas have been outlawed. Texas is the only state in the union to take this stand. And until now, the unmanned tellers have been considered a branch bank, he explained.

The proposed amendment, however, would change the status of the teller machines.

One important aspect of the legislation would enable smaller banks to use the machines, also. When a similar amendment was proposed three years ago, smaller banks were afraid the larger ones would infringe upon their territory, said Christian. But the legislation was changed and banks now will be able to share the machine with other banks, savings and loan institutions and credit unions. Each bank would be charged a proportionate fee for utilizing the machine.

If passed, the law would become effective 270 days after its approval by voters Nov. 4.

The machines would allow a customer to withdraw funds from his account or draw against a line of credit; deposit funds into his account; transfer funds between accounts of the customer in the same bank; pay

Part three: Johnson takes the Senate by storm

By MERLE MILLER

Hubert H. Humphrey: "The class of 1948, so called, meaning those that were serving their first term in Congress, included besides Johnson and myself, Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, Paul Douglas of Illinois, Robert Kerr of Oklahoma, and Clinton Anderson of New Mexico, in the Senate; and I remember in the House Gene McCarthy and Gerald Ford. A very interesting group of newcomers, but as always Lyndon stood out."

Lyndon, of course, was not truly a Washington newcomer; he already had spent 12 years in the House of Representatives.

Walter Jenkins, longtime friend and aide: "Mr. Johnson took to the Senate as if he'd been born there. From the first day on it was obvious that it was HIS place."

Bobby Baker, then a Senate page:

"I first met Johnson in December of 1948. He had just been elected to the Senate, and I was 20 years old and had been in Washington as a Senate page boy since just after H. Johnson called me and said, 'I understand you know all the senators, their strengths and their weaknesses, and I'd appreciate it if you'd come by my office and talk to me.' Lyndon and I became very close very quickly because we both know how to count and he was very quick to learn all there was to know about each and every senator."

LYNDON'S MAIDEN speech in the Senate was a straight-down-the-line anti-civil rights diatribe that placed him squarely in the middle of the southern bloc.

And yet there were still the isolated cases where the old Lyndon, the Lyndon who had bought baseballs and bats for the Mexican-American children and had spearheaded an Austin housing project, appeared.

Humphrey: "I always felt that he was a lot more liberal than he ever acted. I felt that early."

Paul H. Douglas, leading liberal senator: "Johnson was an intensely ambitious man, anxious to get power and hold on to it, a rather curious mixture of pragmatism and idealism. He had a progressive background, and I think this had entered into his spirit and was a fundamental feature of his character."

Humphrey: "Early on in our Senate days, Lyndon started inviting me up to his office, and we'd talk. From the very beginning he understood the most intricate workings of the Senate. He was like a novelist, a psychiatrist. He didn't stop until he knew how to appeal to every single senator and how to win him over."

Warren Magnuson, senator from Washington: "He just paid attention to every little thing. He was very accommodating to people. He put a lot of IOUs in the bank, and when he needed them for something he really wanted, he could pull them out."

LYNDON WAS ABOUT to pull some of the IOUs out very soon.

In the November elections of 1950, the Senate majority leader, Scott Lucas of Illinois, lost heavily. The Democratic whip also was defeated. The routine duties of those posts made it difficult for the senators who held them to spend much time campaigning, and the result was often sadly predictable. Also, they held no power.

When the Democrats met in the late fall after the election to replace Lucas, Ernest McFarland of Arizona was finally persuaded to take the post. As for whip, Robert Kerr, the rich reactionary from Oklahoma, wanted Lyndon to consider it. True, it was not a position of power, but it was the next step to power, and Lyndon was never not aware of the next step.

So on January 2, 1951, Lyndon was chosen as whip — by acclamation.

ON NOVEMBER 4, 1952, Adlai Stevenson was roundly defeated by Dwight Eisenhower. There had not been a Republican in the White House for 29 years, and that change was profoundly to affect the career of the senator from Texas.

McFarland, the majority leader, also was defeated and for the third time in six years the Democrats were without a leader.

Ralph Hitt, political scientist and professor: "The liberals began mus-

Midlanders get tiny taste of fall weather

Halfway through September, Midland is finally experiencing the first tip of fall weather. Following last week's rain, this week's weather seems to be focused around cooling temperatures.

Last night's low of 63 will be followed tonight by a low again in the low 60s. The record low for Monday's date was 50 degrees set in 1951.

The high temperatures are also dropping somewhat, although highs today and Wednesday are expected to be near 90, with little change expected. Monday's high of 87 fell far short of the record 100 degrees set in 1965.

Winds will remain southerly, 10-15 mph, through Wednesday with fair skies through tonight. Skies will turn partly cloudy Wednesday, but no precipitation is expected.

Three railroads ask permission to merge

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Three western railroads asked the federal government for permission to create a single rail system covering 21 states from the Pacific Northwest to the Sunbelt.

Officials of the Union Pacific, Western Pacific and Missouri Pacific claimed the new line, with its 22,800 miles of track, would offer improved service and a stronger financial base.

In an application filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, the railroads said the merger would help them compete with the trucking industry by providing single-system service.

Control could be centralized, common prices set and duplicate equipment eliminated, officials of the three railroads said in a joint statement.

The proposal calls for Union Pacific and Missouri Pacific to be owned by Pacific Rail System Inc., a newly created subsidiary of Union Pacific Corp. Western Pacific would become a subsidiary of Union Pacific.

No line abandonments were proposed and few jobs should be lost, according to the companies, which predict a net gain of 235 workers.

About 300 Western Pacific jobs in San Francisco and 74 in Stockton, Calif., would be transferred or eliminated. New jobs for engine, train and maintenance-of-way workers would be created, they said.

Union Pacific President John C. Kenefick said $90 million would be spent over five years to upgrade Western Pacific's outdated track to handle expected traffic increases and to improve service.

The proposed merger was approved by Union Pacific and Missouri Pacific stockholders in April. Western Pacific shareholders would vote on the proposal after ICC approval which could take up to 31 months.

Union Pacific, headquartered in Omaha, Neb., operates a 9,577 mile system in 13 states, employing 29,000 people. St. Louis-based Missouri Pacific has 11,469 miles of track in 12 states, employing 21,700 people.

Western Pacific has 1,719 miles of track in California, Nevada and Utah. It is headquartered in San Francisco and employs 3,000 people.

Fire breaks out in jet; 217 escape by shutes

LONDON (AP) — All 217 passengers aboard a DC-10 jetliner escaped down emergency shutes today when fire broke out in the undercarriage of a Miami-bound plane as it was about to take off from London's Heathrow Airport. Up to 12 people were reported injured.

National Airlines Flight 099, with a crew of 17, was taxiing for takeoff at the time, airport officials said. They nationalities of the passengers were not immediately learned.

In Miami, Hugh Emmons, a spokesman for Pan American World Airways Inc., which merged with National earlier this year, said several tires blew out in succession during takeoff, and the heat of the braking action created a fire in the landing gear.

Jim Arey, spokesman for Pan Am in New York, said one of the injured passengers suffered a possible fracture. The others suffered minor friction burns during their escape down emergency shutes, he said.

Police at Heathrow said three people had been taken to a hospital with possible broken bones and six were treated for slide burns at the airport medical facility.

Arey said accident produced some smoke and a "small fire" which was quickly extinguished. He said the fire was confined to rubber and fluids in the landing gear.

Fire engines and ambulances rushed to the jet and passengers were quickly evacuated through escape chutes.

The flight crew aborted the takeoff after receiving advice from the control tower.

One of the passengers, a British businessman who declined to be named, said the pilot brought the aircraft to a halt with only 400 yards of runway to spare. "He did a magnificent job."

The Federal Aviation Administration in Washington grounded the entire U.S. fleet of DC-10s for 38 days following the United States' worst air disaster on May 25, 1979 when 273 people died in the crash of an American Airlines DC-10 in Chicago. The FAA ordered small changes in design and maintenance procedures.

A spokesman for the British Airports Authority said at least 100 flights were delayed as a result of the today's emergency.

Emmons said the passengers would resume their trip on a Pan Am flight from London to Kennedy International Airport in New York, where they would transfer to another National flight scheduled to arrive in Miami about midnight.

More than 10,000 persons lined up today at the Baltimore offices of the Social Security Administration to apply for 70 entrance-level positions that became available as the federal agency moved part of its operation to downtown Baltimore from suburban Woodlawn. See story on page 5A. (AP Laserphoto)

Panel finds no trace of intervention

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top State Department official told the Senate's Billy Carter subcommittee today that the department has found no indication of "any unusual or inappropriate intervention" by anyone in the formation of U.S. policy on the sale of aircraft, trucks and jeeps to Libya.

David D. Newsom, undersecretary of state for political affairs, testified as the panel resumed its effort to determine whether President Carter's younger brother influenced or tried to influence policy on behalf of the Libyan government.

Both the president and Billy have insisted that Billy did not do so.

Billy Carter registered as a Libyan agent July 14 at the insistence of the Justice Department and has acknowledged receiving $220,000 from the Libyans, saying the money constituted advances on a loan.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., chairman of the subcommittee, asked Newsom: "Did the president, his security adviser or anybody influence the process in ways that are not in the best interests of the United States?"

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., vice chairman, said the panel wanted to know "not only whether they influenced anybody but whether there was an attempt to influence anybody."

Newsom replied that since 1973, U.S. policy has been to disapprove sale of military equipment to the radical Arab government of Libya.

At that time, the department blocked the export of eight C-130 airplanes to Libya. Newsom said there has been no change in that decision "nor has there ever been serious consideration given to allowing such planes to be exported."

Regarding the sale of Boeing 727 and 747 aircraft to Libya, the department recommended in favor of sale of 727s in 1978 but later moved to block the sale of three 747s after learning that some 727s had been used to ferry troops and supplies to Uganda.

"There has been no change in that policy," Newsom said.

Newsom also said that "no real consideration" had been given to approving sale to Libya of tractors manufactured by the Oshkosh Truck Corp. of Oshkosh, Wis., which the department considered to have potential military uses.

He said the department has opposed the sale of jeeps to Libya but has concurred with the Commerce Department in permitting sale of four-wheel drive recreational and general-purpose vehicles.

"In summation, the State Department policy on sales to Libya has remained unaltered since the early 1970s," Newsom said. "We have no intention of allowing the sale to Libya of any U.S. product that in our judgment would make a significant contribution to Libya's military capability."

In nine days of public hearings stretched over six weeks, there has been no testimony that Billy Carter tried or succeeded to change policy. But Bayh said the panel "does not want to leave any loose ends" and will continue its investigation after the

Nov. 4 presidential election if necessary.

Whether the president will be questioned remains uncertain.

Summoned as opening witnesses today along with Newsom were Morris Draper, deputy assistant secretary for Near Eastern and South Asian Affairs, and Philip Wise, country officer for Libya.

Bayh said the panel also would hear from William B. Quandt, former Middle East specialist for the National Security Council; Karl F. Inderfurth, former special assistant to Zbigniew Brzezinski, and Philip Wise, the president's appointments secretary.

Brzezinski, head of the National Security Council, will testify on Wednesday and is expected to be challenged on his use of classified intelligence information in a telephone call in which he tried to steer Billy Carter away from a Libyan oil deal.

Bayh said the subcommittee hopes to wind up its public hearings with Brzezinski's testimony, although the staff will take sworn statements from former Budget Director Bert Lance on Thursday and from Billy Carter at a date to be determined.

The president's brother previously gave a sworn deposition and testified at a public hearing, but said several times that he could not recall conversations he was being asked about. Bayh said the additional interrogation would be "an effort to try to stimulate Mr. Carter's memory."

Lance is to be questioned about his role in Billy Carter's dealings with the Libyans, which appears to have been confined to steering Carter and an associate to business contacts.

The subcommittee is required, under a Senate resolution, to submit at least an interim report by Oct. 4, when Congress is due to recess for the elections. Bayh said the panel would like to make that a final report but had not closed the door to holding further public hearings.

Drive renewed to force pre-election tax cut vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee today renewed its drive to force a pre-election vote on a $39 billion tax cut, agreeing unanimously to add only one new amendment to be attached to the bill.

On a 19-0 vote, the panel approved a motion to keep off of the major tax cut bill dozens of narrow-interest tax breaks that had been proposed by committee members.

Sen. Russell Long, D-La., committee chairman, said the action showed that the Senate could resist pressure to add special-interest tax breaks to the bill.

President Carter, in opposing a vote on the tax cut prior to the Nov. 4 elections, has said that political pressure could distort the legislation.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., urged the committee to bar narrow-interest amendments to the tax bill.

"I don't think for the dignity, and self respect of this committee that we should consider any of these measures," Ribicoff said. "I would hate to see the serious work of this committee... watered down as a Christmas tree bill."

The panel had been scheduled to consider about 100 narrow-interest proposals made by committee members that would benefit a wide range of industries and individuals — from people whose trees are killed by Dutch elm disease to producers of artificial fish bait.

The one amendment that was approved by the committee would allow taxpayers who do not itemize their deductions to take a special deduction for charitable donations. By a 13-4 vote, the committee agreed to phase that change in over four years at a cost of $900 million in 1981.

Congressional tax specialists estimated that the entire package of narrow-interest amendments would have totaled almost $30 billion although only a few were given any chance of committee approval.

The amendments included proposals:

—By Sen. Spark M. Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, to grant a 15 percent energy tax credit for the cost of commercial ships equipped with sails and powered at least partially by wind. Next year's cost: $3 million.

—By Matsunaga, to make owners of breeding or work horses eligible for a 10 percent investment tax credit allowed for livestock. Race and show horses, however, would be excluded. Cost: $6 million.

—By Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., to exclude from a 10 percent excise tax artificial fish bait consisting of at least 85 percent plant or animal substance that can be ingested by fish. Cost: negligible.

—By Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., to allow a property loss resulting from Dutch elm disease to be treated as a casualty-loss deduction. Cost: $30 million.

on their loans from a participating bank, or request balance information on his account.

Christian said users won't be able to pull money out of another person's account. Each customer of a bank will be issued a card and an identifying number that will have to be punched into the machine. Unless that number and card are matched up, the machine won't operate.

And, it was pointed out in defense of the machines, that they could save energy.

Currently, someone working downtown and using a bank there but living several miles away must drive numerous miles to cash a check or deposit money. Unmanned tellers placed at various points in the community, such as in a shopping mall, should save on the amount of gasoline it would take to go downtown to the bank. And, the machine should be operating 24 hours a day.

"Customer demand has brought about the unmanned teller concept," said Christian. "It gives the banks a way to broaden customer convenience services."

Police investigate burglary

Police are investigating a $1500 burglary that occurred sometime between Sept. 11 and Sunday at 507-W. Cowden St.

Jimmie R. Sutton told officers that two silver cigarette lighters, a silver and turquoise ring and a camera were missing. Total value of the items was placed at $1,560.

Sutton reported that he found the items missing when he was searching for the camera.

Police responded to a burglary in progress call at 6:37 p.m. Monday at 3306 W. Michigan Ave. Mark Wilson told police that he entered the house and saw a shadow in one of the halls.

However, when police arrived, they found no one.

Wilson said three power scopes worth $105 were missing.

Three Midlanders received slight injuries in a two-car collision at 6:27 p.m. Monday.

Key to understanding

No one can really know what anyone else is thinking, or what he is really like, except that person himself. And no one can know God's thoughts except God's own Spirit.

And God has actually given us His Spirit (not the world's spirit) to tell us about the wonderful free gifts of grace and blessing that God has given us.

In telling you about these gifts we have even used the very words given us by the Holy Spirit, not words that we as men might choose. So we use the Holy Spirit's words to explain the Holy Spirit's facts.

But the man who isn't a Christian can't understand and can't accept these thoughts from God, which the Holy Spirit teaches us. They sound foolish to him, because only those who have the Holy Spirit within them can understand what the Holy Spirit means. Others just can't take it in.

But the spiritual man has insight into everything, and that bothers and baffles the man of the world, who can't understand him at all.

How could he? For certainly he has never been one to know the Lord's thoughts, or to discuss them with Him, or to move the hands of God by prayer. But, strange as it seems, we Christians actually do have within us a portion of the very thoughts and mind of Christ.

Pennsylvania puts out friendly feelers

State attempting to regain its lost tourism

By JILL LAWRENCE

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The Keystone State is spreading the word — "You've Got a Friend in Pennsylvania" — and hoping that nuclear leaks and polio outbreaks have dimmed in the memories of tourists.

"We now have the financial backup to compete with Virginia is for Lovers' and I Love New York," said state travel chief Skip Becker. "1980 is proving to be a record year in many areas of the commonwealth."

Tourism, second only to agriculture in the Pennsylvania economy, brought in $5.6 billion last year, a lot of money but just enough, it turns out, to keep pace with inflation, Becker said.

The sluggish year was partly due to the fuel shortage and rainy weather that hurt tourism in many parts of the country.

The gas shortage hit hardest in the Midwest and mountain regions comprised of Colorado, Montana, North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Utah and Wyoming, as well as the tourist-dependent New York and New Jersey area, according to the Travel Industry Association of America.

"The consumer was very hesitant to travel last year in general," said Becker.

But he added that the situation in south central Pennsylvania last year was compounded by the Three Mile Island nuclear accident near Harrisburg and an outbreak of polio in the Amish country around Lancaster.

The region includes such basic attractions as the state capitol in Harrisburg, the Civil War battlefield at Gettysburg and the Lancaster County farms of the horse-and-buggy Amish, known by tourists as "the Pennsylvania Dutch."

"The whole area that forms the Pennsylvania Dutch tour was hurt. But fortunately other areas were able to hold on. They softened the blow," said Becker.

Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, convention cities located at opposite ends of the state, managed to prosper despite the weather, the gas shortage and what Becker calls "the curious aspects" of the Pennsylvania situation.

But in Lancaster, tourism plunged from 5 million visitors in 1978 to 2 million in 1979.

"Last year was an off-the-graph kind of a year," said Norene Lahr of the Pennsylvania Dutch Visitors Center.

"We call it a triple effect — the news about Three Mile Island, the Amish polio scare and the gasoline shortage," she said. "When people hear about a health hazard, it's very easy to draw conclusions like, 'the whole area is cordoned off. Everybody's in the hospital.'"

Eleven people — either Amish, none of whom had been immunized, or individuals exposed to them — contracted polio in 1979. During a vast immunization campaign last summer, the state Health Department vaccinated at least 200,000 non-Amish people and about 12,000 Amish — 75 percent of the Amish population.

The impact of the twin hazards has apparently faded. The 1979 visitors' figure was surpassed last month.

No new cases of polio have surfaced since late last summer. And Ms. Lahr said Three Mile Island "is having no adverse effect this year. It is water over the dam."

James Cole, director of the Gettysburg Travel Council, said business dropped 40 percent during the "horrible" 1979 summer, and the county became eligible for federal aid.

But he said Gettysburg National Military Park is reporting an upsurge and the newly opened Eisenhower Farm is doing capacity business. And he said the area is still busy well past Labor Day, with senior citizens and others taking advantage of off-season rates.

"We are making a very excellent recovery this year. All business seems to be doing very well, particularly in comparison to last summer," Cole said.

Robert Uguccioni, director of the Pocono Mountains Vacation Bureau, said the gas and Three Mile Island crises had raised serious doubts about the future of Pocono tourism.

But he said 1980 has been "a rejuvenator," with business up 20 to 30 percent and a "dynamite" finish to the summer over Labor Day weekend.

"It's made us feel pretty secure that we can not only survive in this kind of an economy, but we can do very well," Uguccioni said.

"The economy has been somewhat to our benefit. People came here who might have opted for more exotic destinations in more normal times," he said.

Becker agreed the state is in an ideal position to capitalize on the 1980s travel dilemma — high-priced gas and cash-short vacationers.

"Our proximity to what is essentially 20 percent of the population of the United States has made a positive impact for Pennsylvania's future," he said.

Junta facing many problems in Turkey

The Los Angeles Times

ANKARA, Turkey — Four days after they seized power in a coolly efficient coup d'etat, Turkey's generals appear to have successfully suppressed the political warfare that killed more than 5,000 of their countrymen in the last five years.

There have been no known outbreaks of large-scale violence. Since Friday, when the coup occurred only three people, including a Turkish army captain, have died in gun fights — but that is considered an encouraging figure compared to the average of 16, and sometimes more than 30, who were dying every day in the weeks before.

Army patrols have arrested an estimate 3,000 leftist and rightist extremists, and then released most of them with a warning, according to reports in the Turkish press. So far, that tactic has worked.

But now the six-man military junta is facing other, more complex problems — reviving a paralyzed economy, rebuilding the weak center of Turkish politics and passifying the rebellious Kurdish tribesmen of the east — for which their military training may prove less useful.

"It is impossible to rule the Turkey of 1980, at the current state of our society and the current situation in the world, with a military administration in the long run," warned Metin Tokar, a respected conservative senator, in a newspaper column over the weekend. "The enormous support (for the military junta) today is a product of the pains we feel today," Tokar wrote. "If new pains occur tomorrow, the support may disappear."

For the present, most Turks say they are simply pleased that the curfew is being eased, as it was in Ankara Monday from 8:00 p.m. to midnight, and that they can walk in their cities after dark without fear of being caught in a shootout. But some are already forecasting more difficult times ahead.

"It's going to be politically rather tricky," a former army intelligence officer said. "They have said they are going to appoint a civilian Cabinet and revise the constitution. If they don't do it carefully, they can make mistakes — and that makes enemies."

Many Turkish commentators, recalling similar military takeovers in 1960 and 1971, have speculated that the junta may stay in power as long as two years. Gen. Kenan Evren, the chief of staff who presides over the ruling National Security Council, said Saturday that he hoped to return the country to civilian rule soon. On the same day, however, Junta communiques began referring to Evren as "head-of-state," a title previously used by Turkey's elected presidents.

So far, the National Security Council has appeared sensitive to the pitfalls awaiting military men who try their hand at running the complex and crisis-ridden government bureaucracies. They have said that most of the policies of the conservative government o

Prime Minister Suleyman Demirel, who is now in detention with his wife at a comfortable military beach resort, will continue without change. On Monday, a junta communique gave authority to the highest-ranking non-political civil servants in each government department to make most operating decisions themselves.

Significantly, however, the order said that more important issues should be referred to the undersecretary of the prime minister's office — Demirel's economic policy chief, Turgut Ozal.

That made the conservative, American-educated Ozal, 53, the most powerful civilian in the government. He already wielded sweeping powers as the author of Demirel's economic recovery program, under which Turkish and foreign private investment were encouraged credit restricted and inflation slowed from more than 130 percent a year to an estimated 100 percent.

If Ozal is given broader responsibility by the junta, he could function almost as a de facto prime minister. But such a move, Turkish political commentators said, would leave the junta vulnerable to charges of being partial to Demirel's camp.

At least one extreme leftist faction has already drawn that conclusion. Members of freedom, a militant Marxist group, ran up Ankara's central Ataturk boulevard Monday, scattering printed leaflet attacking the junta and warning: "Fascism is rising." Military police chased the leaflets across the street from the now empty Parliament building and arrested several for violating the military's ban on all political activity.

The 33 promised appointment of a civilian Cabinet will be another test of the general's ability to walk a tight rope between left and right, as will the purge of political appointees in the bureaucracy, which has been rumored.

In the round of searches, seizures and arrests, the junta has been cracking down with apparent impartiality on urban guerrillas of all persuasions. Several Turkish newspapers reported a massive sweep Sunday of armed right-wing cells in Istanbul, with almost 2,000 people detained and interrogated, according to one report. All but about 600 were swiftly released, the report added. The government has released no comprehensive arrest figures.

Military authorities said that army patrols arrested dozens of militants Monday in the slums of cities in the south and southeast. In the Mediterranean seaport of Antalya and other cities, so many extremists were detained that they had to be held in movie theaters, officials said.

The mountainous southeast has been a chronic cockpit of political violence.

Giant bird fossils found in Argentina

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists have discovered fossils of what is believed to have been the largest bird ever to soar the skies of the Earth — a behemoth the size of a man with a wingspan of 25 feet.

The discovery, announced Monday by the National Geographic Society, was made in Argentina and confirmed by scientists at the Natural History Museum of Los Angeles County.

The remains are of a bird that measured 11 feet from beak to tail, weighed between 160 and 170 pounds and, when standing, could have looked a six-foot-tall man directly in the eye.

"This makes it the world's largest known flying bird," said Dr. Kenneth E. Campbell, curator of vertebrate paleontology at the Los Angeles facility. "It's definitely a most spectacular creature."

Campbell said the biggest flying bird alive today is the Andean Condor, a soaring creature with a 10-foot wingspan that can weigh about 35 pounds.

The biggest previously known flying birds were extinct varieties with wingspans approaching 16 feet. The largest known creatures to take to the air were flying reptiles called pterosaurs, some of which had wingspans of up to 35 feet.

In the latest discovery, about a dozen bones from one giant bird were recovered at a site about 100 miles west of Buenos Aires by Drs. Eduardo P. Tonni and Rosendo Pascual of Argentina's La Plata Museum.

"We have the parts of three different wing bones, two leg bones and parts of the skull," Campbell said in a telephone interview.

While visiting Argentina last year, Campbell was shown the fossils and immediately identified them as a new, larger type of teratorn. This is a now-extinct group of large birds whose name in Greek means "wonder bird."

Although no one knows exactly what teratorns looked like, of all living birds their bones most resemble those of condors.

"So, our reconstructions are patterned after condors and we assume they probably flew similar to condors," Campbell said. "Because of their size, they probably relied almost exclusively on gliding to fly, rather than wing-flapping."

"People are going to say that any bird that large simply couldn't fly," Campbell said. "But we are sure that it did... It's unlikely that a bird would have feathers and wing bones suitable for flight if it didn't fly."

Campbell, whose work is supported by National Geographic, said these predator birds are believed to have evolved in South America and spread to the southern United States.

Teratorns, which existed for millions of years, became extinct about 10,000 years ago, he said. The new fossils have been dated tentatively as being five million to eight million years old, he said.

Although fossils of teratorns have been found in Nevada, Florida and northern Mexico, the vast majority have been recovered from the Rancho La Brea area in Los Angeles. The latest discovery confirms that the birds existed deep in South America.

Wells injured in jump

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Daredevil motorcyclist Gary Wells and six others were injured Monday when Wells jumped his motorcycle over the fountains at Caesars Palace Hotel for a segment of ABC-TV's "That's Incredible."

Wells made the 170-foot leap across the fountains, but his motorcycle hit the side of the landing ramp at about 90 mph and he skidded along a parking lot and into a retaining wall near the entrance to an underground garage.

Another retaining wall at the top of the garage collapsed, plunging the six others 15 feet to the concrete.

Wells, 23, of Phoenix, and three of the injured were taken to nearby Desert Springs Hospital, where spokeswoman Barbara Scarantino said Wells was in critical condition with injuries to the head, chest and legs.

"He had a concussion but he is awake," she said.

The three others taken to Desert Springs and three victims taken to Southern Nevada Memorial Hospital apparently suffered minor injuries.

ABC officials said the segment, originally scheduled for broadcast Monday night, would not be put on the air.

Daredevil Evel Knievel unsuccessfully attempted a similar jump at the hotel in 1967, and suffered numerous broken bones.

About 4,000 people witnessed Wells' attempt. He seemed to be unconscious as he was worked on by a team of physicians, but at one point he appeared to raise a feeble hand and was cheered by hundreds of spectators who had rushed into the area.

James Stewart has been released from hospital

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actor James Stewart has been released from St. John's Hospital after being relieved of his pain from mild sciatica, a hospital spokeswoman said Monday.

Stewart, 72, was released Saturday. He had entered the hospital last week for the second time in a month, said the spokeswoman, Sandy Gimpelson.

The Academy Award-winning actor spent five days in the facility's coronary care unit last month after complaining of an irregular pulse. However, hospital officials said Stewart's sciatica was unrelated to his earlier heart problem.

Stewart was admitted to the hospital last Tuesday and treated for severe pain along the sciatic nerve, which runs from the pelvis to back of the thigh, said Ms. Gimpelson.

Japan's policy is now more outward-looking

The Los Angeles Times

TOKYO — For years, Japan restricted its foreign policy role to economic affairs, emphasizing non-military measures for bolstering its security and confined its defense strategy to its own national borders.

Now, that policy has been ended officially.

Within a span of 24 days, the Foreign Ministry, the Defense Agency and the Economic Planning Agency issued four statements that reversed the inward-looking policies that Japan had followed for years.

Although the change, in terms of actual policy, started about four years ago, the statements confirmed that a consensus for more positive, outward-looking policies had been achieved.

ALTHOUGH JAPAN'S interests have long aligned it with the Western world's, despite its geographical location in Asia, the Foreign Ministry has never emphasized Japan's association with the West. Before, the focus was always on seeking friendly relations with all nations, a policy that was dubbed "omnidirectional" by Takeo Fukuda when he was prime minister, from 1976 to 1978.

Cited as the reason for the change was the growing military power of the Soviet Union. However, the ministry's recent statement talked not merely of Soviet moves in areas surrounding Japan, but declared that Moscow was using its military power to forward its political interests in Africa and the Mideast, not to mention Afghanistan. In a dramatic broadening of focus, the Foreign Ministry declared that those moves by the Soviet Union affected Japan.

Also for the first time, the ministry said that Japan could no longer afford to adjust its policies to global conditions that match its national interests.

AS IF TO UNDERSCORE that the ministry meant what it said, Foreign Minister Masayoshi Ito, returning from a trip to Thailand, Burma, India, Pakistan and China, opened a drive to deny U.N. recognition to the Vietnam-backed government of Heng Samrin in Cambodia.

He ordered Japanese diplomats to contact more than 40 nations that had not decided how they would vote on the question of Cambodian representation at the United Nations when the issue comes up in the General Assembly this fall.

Ito also took the unusual step of calling in U.S. Ambassador Mike Mansfield and urging that his government join Japan and members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) in supporting an ousted faction as the true government of Cambodia.

This move, a rare departure from Japan's past practice of evading international political issues, was a calculated slap at both Vietnam and the Soviet Union. Vietnam, with Soviet support, invaded Cambodia in 1978, ousted the government of Premier Pol Pot and replaced it with a puppet government headed by Heng Samrin. The Pol Pot faction, which is recognized by Japan and other nations, is now headed by Khieu Samphan.

Ito's move was also a rare example of Japan asking the United States for support; usually, the United States sets the pace.

In a separate report on national security, the Foreign Ministry said for the first time that the defense of Japan should not be considered in isolation from the rest of the world. Rather, the ministry said, it should be considered as part of a global effort to combat Soviet military and political advances.

The ministry even challenged a traditional taboo — the question of sending troops overseas. It said that Japan should contribute "personnel" to U.N. peace-keeping efforts around the globe — and did not rule out including military men among the categories of personnel that might take part in such efforts.

The same kind of awakening was displayed in the Defense Agency's statement. In a preface, Defense Director Joji Omura said that "as a member of the Western world, we must consider our defense in connection with the defense efforts made by other Western nations."

AS LOGICAL AS SUCH comments may appear to outsiders, the lingering aftermath of World War II had forced Japan's defense planners to avoid any suggestion that Japan might play a role, however indirect, in the security of any other nation.

Against such a background, the new position, which suggests that Japan might consider military action even if its own security were not immediately affected, represents a dramatic turnaround in thinking.

The Defense Agency also acknowledged for the first time that Japan's defense forces are insufficient to cope with even a small-scale attack upon Japan. Previously, the agency had sought support for steady boosts in defense spending by stressing the limited goals of Japan's defense strategy, but this time arguments were focused on current shortcomings.

Backing up the new emphasis on a more active foreign policy and on broader attention to defense, Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's Cabinet approved special increases in budget requests for foreign aid and military spending.

ALTHOUGH SUZUKI ORDERED that the overall budget deficit be reduced by at least $9.1 billion compared to this fiscal year, the Defense Agency was given permission to request a budget increase of 9.7 percent for itself. Other ministries and agencies were told to confine their requests for fiscal 1981 increases to 7.5 percent or less.

With an annual military pay increase, included, the Defense Agency's fiscal 1981 budget could theoretically rise by as much as 12.2 percent.

Wrangling with the tightfisted Finance Ministry will determine how much spending will actually be approved, but, whatever the outcome, the special treatment given defense was unprecedented.

Not since the end of World War II has defense spending been given priority over other items in the budget — at any stage of budget-making.

Even the Economic Planning Agency joined the call for a more active international role for Japan.

IN ITS STATEMENT, the planning agency echoed the Foreign Ministry's argument that Japan must stop looking at world conditions as a factor to which Japan must adjust and start looking at them as something that Japan must seek to change for the better.

Tosito Komito, the agency's director, later pointed out in a speech that the vitality of Japan's economy gives the nation a unique opportunity to devote more attention to such matters as foreign aid and defense. While the United States and Western European nations are struggling through slumps that promise little or no real growth this year and next, Japan's gross national product, he said, would grow by at least 4.8 percent in real terms this fiscal year.

He also said the government would probably target real growth for fiscal 1981 at 5.5 percent.

The government's zeal has not been matched, however, by popular support. As Ambassador Mansfield said last week in a speech in Kanazawa, "Many Japanese still see themselves as inhabitants of a poor island nation." And the Economic Planning Agency's statement complained that too many Japanese believe that Japan is "not yet rich."

THE UPSHOT OF SUCH thinking is uneasiness or fear any time the government tries to implement a more active foreign role for the country. Already, major newspapers and opposition political parties are attacking the calls for Japan to fulfill its responsibility as a member of the Western World as a policy that will deprive Japan of what they call a "free hand" to stand back and do nothing.

SS offices swamped by job applicants

BALTIMORE (AP) — Social Security Administration offices in Baltimore and suburban Woodlawn were swamped today by at least 10,000 eager job applicants seeking to get one of 70 entry-level positions.

"It was unbelievable," said Leslie Saunders, supervisor of the Federal Job Information and Testing Program.

Saunders, whose office is in the federal building in downtown Baltimore, said his supply of 2,200 job forms had run out by 9:30 a.m., and an emergency supply of 3,000 additional applications were gone by late morning.

Elsewhere, at least 4,000 applications were distributed before the lines finally trickled out at noon.

Many of the applicants had stood in line for two hours or more for the trainee jobs. The jobs would become permanent after a three-year probationary period. Most of those in line were black, unemployed high school graduates.

The jobs, which require no written test and no prior experience, pay from $7,210 for a clerical position to $11,564 for warehouse workers.

Saunders said applications would be accepted through the end of the week.

It's nice to know people care!

Board says immigration system discriminates against racial minorities

The Los Angeles Times

The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights has charged that this country's immigration system inherently discriminates against racial minorities and often abuses the rights of citizens and non-citizens alike.

The commission's charges are contained in a lengthy report entitled "The Tarnished Golden Door," they constitute one of the most far-reaching recent attacks on a bureaucracy that was already one of the most criticized agencies in the federal government.

After a two-year study and public hearings throughout the country, the civil rights commission recommended discontinuation of a number of immigration service practices and called for renewed attention to individual rights in immigration policies.

Taken together, the recommendations would amount to a major restructuring of the way the nation's immigration system conducts itself.

Among the most significant changes recommended was the discontinuation of the so-called "voluntary departure system," under which more than 800,000 Mexican and other aliens are sent home each year without formal proceedings.

The civil rights commission, which released the report in a Washington, D.C. press conference, also recommended the abolition of the immigration service's Border Patrol and separation of immigration enforcement and service functions as much as possible.

The Border Patrol, the commission said, should be replaced by a "border management agency" under the Treasury Department, a change that has been sought by the Carter administration but which is opposed by the Department of Justice.

The report also recommends the abolition of the present 20,000-person annual limits imposed on countries sending immigrants to the United States.

The commission argued that the limit is a remnant of the "national origins" quota system disavowed by this nation 15 years ago as racist.

Instead of the present limits, immigrant visas should be allotted on a first-come basis, a practice that would at least initially favor countries with long waiting lists of immigrants, principally Mexico, the commission said.

In addition to cataloguing what it considers major problems of the existing immigration system, the commission strongly opposed two suggested methods of coping with the problem of illegal immigration — sanctions against employing illegal aliens and the use of a national identity card or work permit.

Both suggestions have strong support among members of the Select Commission on Immigration and Refugee Policy, which is completing its own examination of national policy in the area.

The civil rights commission's opposition to employer sanctions brought dissents from two of its five members, Vice Chairman Stephen Horn, president of California State University, Long Beach and Commissioner Frankie M. Freeman, a St. Louis attorney.

The rest of the commission argued that employer sanctions might work a disproportionate hardship on U.S. citizens and legal residents aliens "who are racially and culturally identifiable with major immigrant groups."

National work cards, the majority of the commission said, "would provide a tool that could be used to violate the right of privacy of the individual."

Three arrested in assassination plot

CLEVELAND (AP) — Three Cleveland men have been arrested after authorities uncovered an alleged plot by Croatian terrorists to kill two people in Ohio and one in New York, U.S. Treasury agents and Cleveland police said.

Police identified the men as Vinko Logarusic, 34, also charged in the 1979 bombing of a Cleveland travel agency; Milan Butina, a 30-year-old carpet layer, and his 24-year-old brother-in-law, Gaines Buttrey, a welder.

The three men were charged with conspiracy to commit aggravated murder and were being held in lieu of $15,000 bond each.

Justice for nearly all

Well, well, well. Look who's in the news again.

It's old Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the revolutionary religious leader of Iran. And this time the lily-white figure's dirty laundry is showing for all to see.

A landlord in Iraq where Khomeini lived in exile for 15 years has filed a suit against the maniacal religious leader. The suit claims that while Khomeini lived in Iraq's Najaf province he did not pay his rent or his water, electricity and telephone bills, and the suit seeks compensation for the house's depreciation during Khomeini's stay.

The total bill, it seems, comes to some $3,500. Now we can't claim any first-hand knowledge of these pleadings. The information came from the Baghdad Observer via the Associated Press wires.

But it seems logical that the allegations contained in the suit feasibly could contain a grain of truth. After all, is it not possible that a religious leader can suffer from the same financial difficulties encountered by other human beings? Can they not incur financial obligations they find difficult to make good on?

Khomeini, most Americans probably would agree, already has a few black marks on his record. We know that he lies. We know that he double-talks. We know that he cannot be trusted to keep his promises.

And we know that despite his claims of being a staunch religious leader, Khomeini "uses" his religion. We have seen during the past few months how he interprets the Koran, the Moslem religion's guidebook, as it suits his own needs and desires. We have watched during the hostage crisis how Khomeini simply ignores the teachings, for the most part, of his own religion.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, bluntly, is a hypocritical, self-serving egotist committed solely to revolution and totally unconcerned with international law and the concept of human decency.

In respect to the lawsuit against Khomeini, however, we don't believe he could receive a fair trial in Iraq. After all, Iraq and Iran are blood enemies engaged in military confrontation at the current time. Neither could Khomeini receive a fair trial in Iran. Understandably, any jury in Iran would be prejudiced in the ayatollah's favor.

Instead, let's change the venue of the trial to a third, impartial nation. The United States would be a good choice and we'll be real fair.

CHARLEY REESE

Jean Rance a victim of uncaring bureaucracy

This is a story of an injustice. The villain is the Small Business Administration. The crime is pig-headedness and lack of compassion.

Charley Reese

The victim is Jean Rance, a 48-year-old divorced mother of five children who lives in Maitland, Fla. Three of her children still live at home with her. She works as a secretary and her total monthly income, counting child support, is just under $700.

The Small Business Administration is moving in federal district court to foreclose on her home and to evict her and her minor children. The SBA apparently has a legal right to do it. There is a lien on her home which is part of the collateral her former husband put up for an SBA loan of $85,000 in 1974.

If Jean Rance were a career businesswoman who had initiated the transaction, I would be less sympathetic. She is not. She was a wife and a mother who was asked to sign the lien by her husband. After the business went bust in the 1974-75 recession, her husband divorced her, declared bankruptcy, and split. He gave her and the children the house — with the lien.

If the federal government were a frugal organization, keenly interested in protecting the taxpayer's money, the blood-sucking tactics of the SBA might be excused, but we all know it is not. We know it wastes money by the billions. We know that the SBA has made all kinds of settlements with people who have political pull, sometimes for a nickel on the dollar.

Therefore there is absolutely no excuse, in my opinion, for the federal government to throw a mother and three children out of a home they have occupied for 11 years and onto the welfare rolls to collect less money than Rosalyn Carter pays her appointments secretary.

It's only because the home was purchased in 1969 and has a low monthly mortgage payment that Jean Rance has been able to survive at all without seeking public assistance. As it is she is having a tough time, but rents in her area are much higher than she can possibly afford.

Let it be noted, too, that Jean Rance is not trying to avoid an honest obligation. From the start, she has been much more helpful to the SBA than they have been to her, pointing out some assets of which they were not aware.

The SBA, however, has acted like loan sharks. They have never given her the courtesy of offering to settle. They have called her at work and left messages with her children. They have not even given her a satisfactory accounting. They have given her the bureaucratic run-around. "Sorry," the SBA says. "It's in the hands of the U.S. Attorney and there's nothing we can do." "Sorry," says the U.S. Attorney, "we are merely acting on instructions from the SBA and there's nothing we can do." Horse feathers.

The SBA has already confiscated and sold the property on which the business was located as well as the machinery and another piece of property put up as collateral. They have, in fact, plenty of options. The SBA could settle for any amount it wanted to or the SBA could simply declare a five-year moratorium on the debt. By that time, Jean Rance's youngest child would be of age and she would be in a better position to let them have her home.

But Jean Rance is only a frightened, honest citizen with no political clout. The bureaucrats are simply taking the easy route. Routinely foreclose and destroy a family. They don't care.

Another injustice is the cavalier way in which they have treated her. We taxpayers are forced to provide attorneys for thieves, killers and rapists, but when the mighty federal government sues an honest citizen, she must face the Justice Department alone. Jean Rance can't afford an attorney.

It's one of the most rotten instances of innocent people being ground up by the bureaucracy that I've ever seen. The woman is harried and distraught. Her hands tremble. She cries when she talks about it.

If you are outraged, and I hope you are, you might send a Mail-gram to A. Vernon Weaver, Administrator, U.S. Small Business Administration, 1441 L St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20416. There isn't much time.

'Doonesbury' candidate stressing difference

By WILLIAM ENDICOTT
(c) 1980, The Los Angeles Times

SAN FRANCISCO — Just before he was to speak at a luncheon here, John B. Anderson was slipped a note by a campaign volunteer who had read an advance text of Anderson's speech and was concerned that it was loaded with criticism of President Carter and Ronald Reagan.

"What you do right and not what the others do wrong is the important thing," the volunteer had written.

Implicit in that message last week was the fact that Anderson's followers are looking for something different from him — something more than the traditional political rhetoric full of thrusts, jabs and parries at one's opponents, sweetened with some sugar-coated campaign promises.

And it reflected one of the serious dilemmas that Anderson faces as he tries to draw sharp distinctions over the next seven weeks between his independent presidential candidacy and the candidacies of the two major party nominees — Carter and Reagan.

The Republican Illinois Congressman knows he cannot sell himself to the country, and emphasizes an "Anderson difference," if he resorts to old-fashioned political campaigning as usual. But he finds it hard to resist the temptation to constantly unload on his opponents in often harsh and strident language.

In a recent interview, he told a reporter he hoped he had a higher calling "than to simply play to the lowest common denominator." Yet his campaign speeches remain peppered with attacks on the president and, particularly on Reagan, who he has labeled irrelevant.

With Carter still planning to boycott the first presidential debate sponsored by the League of Women Voters next Sunday in Baltimore, Anderson can be expected to step up his assault on Reagan and try a strategy of convincing voters that Carter cannot win in November and that the race is between him and Reagan.

"Increasingly, it will be apparent to the electorate that the choice on the 4th of November is going to be between Ronald Reagan and John Anderson," he said at a press conference here Sunday.

Whether such strategy can work is doubtful — it will not be easy to dispell the presence of an incumbent president so easily — but it may be important to Anderson that in trying to define such a strategy he do it in less strident terms.

"This is going to be a positive campaign," he told a Labor Day audience in Park Forest, Ill., two weeks ago. "But, you know, you've got to make a comparison."

Still, his press secretary, Tom Matthews, conceded to reporters the other day that it is to voters disaffected with such conventional politics that Anderson must look to for support and what they are looking for is a man "who won't lie to them, won't treat them as naive children and won't pander to them... This year they had nowhere to go until Anderson came on the scene."

Although Anderson has enjoyed a series of pluses over the last 10 days, including an invitation to the first league debate, and a ruling from the federal Election Commission that he can receive post-election federal subsidies to pay off campaign debts, he faces still other significant problems in addition to developing a campaign style that suits both him and his supporters.

Not the least of them, of course, remains the difficulty in convincing a cynical electorate that he can win and is not in the race as a spoiler, and it's a question that bombards him at virtually every campaign stop.

"I'm just going to have to keep hammering away at the fact that 1980 is different, that there is another choice, that there is another alternative," he told reporters here. "I don't accept the thesis that I'm going to throw the election to anybody. That's not my purpose for being in the race. I'm going to win by bringing millions of new people into the process."

But beyond that is the persistent problem of his image as the "Doonesbury" comic strip candidate — the "trendy" intellectual candidate favored primarily by upper middle-class white liberals. It is an image that he recognizes he has but does not think justified.

"I come from a very middle class, if not lower middle class, background myself," he told a television interviewer in Los Angeles last week. "My father was a groceryman. I grew up behind the counter of a grocery store, worked my way through school... the kind of issues that I'm talking about are of as much interest to blue collar America as they are to white-collar class America. So I just resist being typed or categorized or classified as being just an elitist candidate."

He may have helped dispell that image somewhat here Sunday by winning his first two significant endorsements by blacks. Actor Paul Winfield who starred in the movie "Sounder," and the Rev. Cecil Williams, a nationally known black activist minister in San Francisco, attended a press conference with Anderson at a downtown hotel and announced their support of his candidacy.

"I feel insulted by the president, Jimmy Carter," Williams said of Carter's refusal to debate. He also said he had decided to endorse Anderson "because of the position that he takes in regards to human need and social justice... I am convinced that John Anderson is not a spoiler, he's a winner."

Williams said Anderson had promised "there would be blacks" in his Cabinet if he wins the White House, and that more blacks would be assuming an active role in his campaign.

Anderson attended services Sunday at the all-black Taylor Memorial United Methodist Church in nearby Oakland and delivered a 10-minute speech. He addressed the congregation as "my Christian friends" and said he was not there to deliver a political message but to "share with you some thoughts as a fellow believer."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 16, the 260th day of 1980. There are 106 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Sept. 16, 1940, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed the Selective Service Act, which set up the first peacetime military draft in the nation's history.

On this date: In 1630, the village of Shawmut, Mass., changed its name to Boston. In 1850, slave trading was forbidden in the District of Columbia.

In 1919, the American Legion was incorporated by an act of Congress. In 1945, Japan surrendered Hong Kong to the British.

Ten years ago, President Richard M. Nixon spoke at Kansas State University and referred to violence — including campus disorders — as a "cancerous disease."

Five years ago, members of the United Federation of Teachers voted to end a 10-day teachers' strike in New York City.

Last year, Afghanistan's President Nur Mohammed Taraki was overthrown in a coup headed by hard-line Communist Prime Minister Hafizullah Amin.

Today's birthdays: Actor Peter Falk is 53 years old. Television producer Allen Funt is 66.

Thought for today: The happiest miser on earth is the man who saves up every friend he can make — Robert Sherwood (1896-1955)

Reagan's educational philosophy in step with the times

By AN MORGAN
(c) 1980, The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In the emotionally charged field of educational policy, Ronald Reagan has staked out a position that puts him squarely at odds with his two major opponents.

Only Reagan wants to help private and parochial schools, and to provide aid to families who send their children to them.

And only Reagan speaks and writes about ending the public school "monopoly," a theme that fits in with his broad philosophical belief that the private sector can do most jobs better than the government.

"Right now in public education we are very close to a monopoly," wrote Reagan in his 1976 book, "Call to Action." "Every year thousands of parochial and private schools close down because they can't compete against the public schools, which drain off more and more in taxes. Most of us are left with no choice but the public schools, good or bad."

Reagan supports a limited program of tax credits to families paying private school tuition — assistance long sought by Catholics.

Catholic backing was a key factor in Congress' near approval of such aid in 1978. The fight for it in the Senate was led by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., who warned of "fearful" pressure toward state monopoly over education. The measure passed the House but died in conference, under the cloud of a threatened veto by President Carter.

Reagan also supports experimentation with a controversial plan to issue vouchers entitling children to attend private or public schools of their choice.

Public school forces, led by the National Education Association, charge that tuition aid and a voucher system could lead to the destruction of public education in the United States.

The positions that candidates for the presidency take on educational issues are mainly symbolic. The federal government has only a limited role in financing secondary and elementary education, and in guiding the decisions of the nation's 107,000 local public schools.

Nevertheless, the views of a presidential candidate on education tend to reflect his thinking on social issues generally.

And in this election campaign, with many of the distinctions between liberals and conservatives blurrier than they were a few years ago, some of Reagan's educational positions may appeal to more than conservatives.

Conservatives such as economist Milton Friedman support voucher plans that would have the effect of substituting a private school "market" for parents to replace public schools. But a voucher plan that would preserve the public schools is also supported by California liberals who are now pressing for a statewide referendum on the issue.

Tuition tax credits for private schools appeal not only to Catholics but also to some non-Catholic middle-class families who have become dissatisfied with local public schools. And the credits also are supported by various advocates of more freedom of educational choice for parents, including members of the Libertarian Party.

A few years ago, the stand of Reagan and of the Republican Party platform against mandatory busing to achieve school desegregation would have been branded by liberals as racist. But in 1980, some black leaders, and many black families, are questioning the effectiveness of busing — especially within school districts with overwhelmingly black student enrollments.

Reagan and the Republicans also have pledged to abolish the Department of Education, a creation of the Carter administration. The symbolism of this position went beyond education to American voters concerned about the growth of government bureaucracy.

None of these issues is more embroiled in politics, or more laden with emotion than the proposal for tuition tax credits for private school enrollees.

The leading Senate opponent of the credits, Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., has warned that they would "turn our education on its head, benefit the few at the expense of the many, proliferate substandard segregated academies, add to the federal deficit, violate the First Amendment and destroy the diversity and genius of our public schools."

Given the numbers of children attending private and parochial schools, this threat seems to proponents to be vastly exaggerated.

An estimated one out of five pre-college educational facilities in the United States is funded by private or church contributions. But only 4-5 million children attend these facilities, compared with about 41 million children attending the $95-billion-a-year public school system. About half of the non-public schools are Catholic.

Nevertheless, public school proponents fear that such programs as tuition tax credits would set a bad precedent and would add to the already extensive problems of these schools.

Public school supporters acknowledge that parental disaffection is dangerously high and has led to renewed interest in private schools.

Scott Thomson, executive director of the National Association of Secondary School Principals, told a House committee this year that there has been a "rather significant flight to private schools in the last five or six years," and added that newly founded private schools "are not just segregated academies located in urban areas or the South."

According to the U.S. Census Bureau's Survey of Income and Education, 82 percent of children attending private school come from families with income under $30,000 a year.

Thomson said that parental concern with public schools is "a broad, nationwide phenomenon based upon, among other factors, 15 years of federal policy."

Mary McCreath, who served on the San Jose, Calif., Unified School District Board for 15 years, warned in an article in the San Jose Mercury last October:

"The tax revolt and the demand for austerity in the schools has led many parents to find a more enriched and acceptable private school for their children... We are close to crossing the fail-safe point as America hurtles toward a new and very changed social order."

Lyndon Johnson quickly gains control of Senate

'He was quite an actor, manipulator, leader'

ing on whom they were going to support. Long before they ever got around to doing something, Johnson had the job nailed down."
In 1953 the Democrats became the minority party in the Senate and Lyndon the minority leader. He immediately realized that the situation now offered him the possibility of becoming the most visible Democrat in the country. He would, he planned, deal with the new president, possibly the most idolized and beloved man in the country, by allying himself and his Democratic minority as firmly in the Eisenhower camp as possible.
Then in the 1954 election, the 48-to-47 Republican majority in the Senate exactly reversed itself to the Democrats, and at the age of 47, Lyndon Johnson took his front row center aisle seat as the youngest majority leader in the history of the Senate.

HE SOON DEMONSTRATED his genuine for taking a position of small power and building from its own position of enormous power. How he managed that came to be known as the

"Johnson method" or "system," and the "Johnson treatment."

Through this method or system, Lyndon controlled, for example, who was put on what committee and who was not, decided when a bill should come to the floor and when it should come up for the vote. He decided which of the president's bills the Democrats should back and which not, and he decided when a bill was worth risking defeat on.

Then there was the "Johnson treatment."

Benjamin Bradlee of the Washington Post: "When Johnson wanted to persuade you of something, when you got the Johnson treatment, you really felt as if a St. Bernard had licked your face for an hour, had pawed you all over. When he was in the Senate, especially as majority leader, it was like going to the zoo. He never just shook hands with you. One hand was shaking your hand, the other hand was always someplace else, exploring you, examining you."

"AND OF COURSE he was a great actor. At the same time he was trying to persuade you of something, something something that he knew and I knew was not so, and there would be just the trace of a smile on his face. It was just a miraculous performance."

William Jordan, diplomat: "When he talked to somebody, Johnson used to get right up close and poke him in the chest, and at the same time he would drop his head and cock it to one side and really come in to talk to you with his head coming in under your face. And he would poke you in the chest with his finger and cock his head under and look up at you and talk, all of it at the same time."

Robert S. Allen, syndicated columnist: "Humphrey told me how Johnson gave him pep talks and Humphrey demonstrated saying, 'He'd grab me by the lapels and say, 'Now, Hubert, I want you to do this and that and get going,' and with that he would kick him in the shins hard. Then Humphrey added, 'Look,' and pulled up his trouser leg, and, sure enough, he had some scars there. He had a couple of scars on his shins where Lyndon had kicked him and said, 'Get going.'"

LYNDON NOW WAS SMOKING at least three packs of cigarettes a day, sometimes more. He never had lunch unless a legislative matter was being discussed. And his cook remembers that he missed dinner more often than not, and when he did make it home, usually as late as 10 or 11 p.m., he was almost never alone, and he sometimes scarcely touched the meal. He was drinking more than usual, too, and despite his haphazard diet, he was putting on weight; he weighed 225 pounds.

In 1955, while traveling to Middleburg, Va., to spend part of a Fourth of July weekend with friends, he suffered a heart attack.

Lyndon Johnson: "I was an hour late, and I was trying to make it up, and there was this sense of pressure. My chest hurt, and I thought to myself, if only I hadn't eaten that cantaloupe at lunch."

"I was able to talk all right. I got out a cigarette, I remember, and the doctor at the house told me to put it away, but I said, 'Let me have just one more,' and then I'll never have another." So I had that cigarette, and it's the last I've ever had. When I got to the hospital, they (family) were all there. I gave Bird my keys and money out of my pocket."

LYNDON WENT INTO SHOCK and during the night, he came close to dying.

But on August 7, he was discharged. He had been an impossible, demanding patient, and many members of the hospital staff were relieved to see him go.

James H. Rowe Jr., lawyer and adviser: "He came back to Washington after his heart attack and what he did is typical Johnson, vintage Johnson. He called me up and said he needed my help. He was just getting started and he desperately needed me. So I told him I'd give him a day a week. He said, 'No, that's not enough, I need you all the time.' I said that that was just impossible."

"And he put on his act. He started weeping, and he said, 'You know I am going to die. And nobody cares. You don't care. Nobody cares.' And so on. Finally, I said, 'All right, I'll do it.' And within seconds, the tears were gone. He straightened up in his chair, and he said, 'All right, but just remember, I make the decisions, you don't.'"

IN 1960, President Eisenhower could not run again by law and there was little enthusiasm anywhere for Richard M. Nixon, the vice president. It looked as if any acceptable candidate the Democrats put up would be a shoo-in.

Lyndon Johnson told everybody who would listen that, although Jack Kennedy has said that he, Lyndon, was the most qualified candidate, he wasn't interested. Who would want to be president when he could be the Senate leader?

Still there were times, as the 1970 session went along, when Lyndon doubted his own ability as a legislator. From the passage of the civil rights bill until July 1963, when Congress adjourned for the national convention, absolutely no significant legislation was passed.

With the end of an unpopular and unsuccessful August Senate "rump session" which he himself had engineered in hopes of improving his legislative record, Lyndon's years in the Senate were over — although he wasn't quite sure of it yet. The nature of his personality and the often rough-shod method of his leadership had earned him enemies, but most of his colleagues were friendly, and quite a few were actually friends.

IN THE END IT WAS one of the bitterest opponents who best summed up Lyndon's Senate years.

Barry Goldwater: "I'll say this about him...in those days, at least you KNEW. When Lyndon Johnson said, 'This is going to be legislation, you knew you weren't going to leave until it WAS legislation, until it was finished. These days you never know what is going to happen."

As Lyndon was about to learn.

Anderson hints that Reagan 'too old' for family stance

The Los Angeles Times

PORTLAND, Ore. — Independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson suggested Monday that Ronald Reagan is too old to understand the problems of the modern American family.

"The Reagan platform has the frontory to call itself pro-family," Anderson told a gathering of women's groups at a hotel here. "(But) family styles change in every generation."

"Those in the older generations fear change, and the ones who always very darkly predict the end, the demise of the family. And they've always been wrong..."

Later, in Seattle, Anderson told reporters he believes "chronological age does affect our thinking on some issues."

And he said that while he did not have Reagan exclusively in mind with his Portland comments, the Republican presidential nominee does represent "a kind of vintage thinking that simply believes that we can go back to some previous period in our history and find answers to the kind of problems that face the American family."

Anderson is 58; Reagan is 69. The Illinois congressman artfully raised the issue of Reagan's age-as he was delineating the differences in his positions on women's issues and those of the GOP candidate.

The Reagan program, which opposes abortion and the Equal Rights Amendment, "stands in stark contrast" to his own program, Anderson said.

"Justice for women is not a luxury," he said. "It is a necessity. As long as the ERA remains unratified, we cannot say we have achieved the kind of full, legal equality that we should."

Carter decries his political opponents

ATLANTA (AP) — President Carter, campaigning before a black audience at the Ebenezer Baptist Church, today decried political opponents who are "spreading hate" in efforts to wrest the White House from him.

Without naming anyone, it was clear Carter was referring to Republican rival Ronald Reagan when, departing from his prepared text, he said:

"You've seen in this campaign the stirrings of hate and the rebirth of code words like state's rights in a speech in Mississippi, and a campaign reference to the Ku Klux Klan relating to the South."

"That has a message which creates a cloud on the political horizon," said Carter, who one day earlier had asserted that Reagan has been "muzzled" by his own campaign staff to keep him from making embarrassing mistakes.

"It creates a cloud of hatred that has no place in this country," the president said.

Carter told his audience of several hundred that they have "a friend in the Oval Office" who accepts their phone calls. "If my opponent should be elected," the president warned, "you're going to have a hard time getting a phone call through to the White House."

And he returned to the theme set Monday, accusing Reagan of having been reined in by his staff.

"He's now been deprived by his staff of the opportunity to speak out," Carter said of Reagan. "He didn't do so well on the Ku Klux Klan or China..."

In emphasizing the differences between himself and the Republican nominee, Carter claimed that Reagan was against Medicare and "repeatedly advocated that Social Security be made voluntary."

The president also implied the GOP nominee thinks he "can make our nation more secure by starting a new nuclear arms race."

"It is always important to vote," Carter said. "This year it is more important than ever because the choice is so clear."

"I do not believe we can meet the needs of elderly Americans better by turning over the administration of Social Security to someone who is against Medicare and has repeatedly advocated that Social Security be made voluntary."

"I do not believe we can solve our energy problems by knocking down the windfall profits tax, turning over a lot of money to the big oil companies and hoping they will take care of it. I do not believe we can revitalize our industry by giving a lot of money to the rich and hoping they will use it to create jobs in America rather than spending it on a new Mercedes Benz or a Rolls Royce."

"I do not believe we can make our nation more secure by starting a new nuclear arms race..."

Reagan has denied suggesting Social Security be voluntary, though he did say in 1964 that the system should be examined to see if it might not be made voluntary for some. He has said during the campaign that he has rejected that notion

Truman's things auctioned off

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — To the auctioneer, it was just another estate, but for about 100 bidders it was a memento of Mount St. Helens legend Harry Truman.

They gathered in Pringle, about 28 miles east of here, to buy Truman's ash trays, his swizzle sticks — even his toilet.

AT WIT'S END

Seeing the sights

By ERMA BOMBECK

It's been explained to me a thousand times and I still don't understand it.

Why is it that men embarking on a fun-filled, pleasure-seeking, leisure-paced vacation feel obliged to start at four in the morning?

I ask you, what good are breathtaking colors of the Smoky Mountains... in the dark? How can I feel the pulse and excitement of New York City where David Hartman going to work and a passed-out wino are the only things on the street? What good is a vacation if you can't keep awake through lunch?

We were the first family ever to "See America First" by headlights. Every morning before hitting the road the alarm would go off in the middle of the night. Picking my way through the darkness, I'd guide arms and legs through clothes. It was like threading a needle with wet spaghetti. As the kids continued to sleep, I'd walk them to the car and arrange them in the back seat. I'd wait until the motor was running and we were ready to leave before I did my last dastardly deed on those still sleeping... flush!

My children never awoke asking, "Where are we?" It was always, "What time is it?" They could never play games other children played, like "Count the Chevies" or "Out-of-State-License-Plate Rummy." There weren't any other cars on the road.

We'd sit there like zombies, listening to the hog and grain markets on the car radio, trying to figure out if we ate a candy bar what meal we would spoil.

Once as we stopped at a roadside park for a potty break and I hooked my sweater over the hood ornament to keep from falling, a station wagon pulled in with another family. They looked terrible. The kids stumbled along with blankets dragging on the ground, their hair uncombed, their eyes puffy and glazed. The woman and I didn't say anything at first. Our eyes met in that rare moment of understanding without words. Finally she said, "Would you have married him if you had known he was nocturnal?"

A few weeks ago on vacation the alarm went off at 3:30 as my husband whipped out of bed and began to dress.

"Why are you doing this?" I mumbled.

"I've told you before, the children travel better by night when they can sleep."

"We don't have children with us."

"There's no traffic on the road and I can make better time."

"We're flying."

"If we start early, we can stop early and be sure of getting a hotel room"

"We're going home."

"I'm basically sadistic."

Now that makes sense!

DEAR ABBY

'Well-meaning' children break mother's heart

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband of 42 years died three weeks ago, and immediately following the funeral, my children insisted that I go to stay with my sister in another town to get away for a while.

Yesterday I came home to an immaculate but very empty house. I have three wonderful daughters (all married) whom I love dearly, but sometimes I wish they wouldn't be so helpful. In my absence they came in and cleaned my house—even the garage, from top to bottom! Every closet, cupboard and corner had been cleaned out, so there was not one trace of my beloved husband. All of his clothes were gone; even his fishing gear, golf clubs and tools had been disposed of. I know they did this only to spare me the difficult job of sorting through his belongings and deciding what to do with his things, but I really think I should have had a say in making those decisions.

I know my daughters meant well, and what's done is done, so I am not going to say anything to them about it, but I just had to get this off my chest. Thanks for listening, Abby.—HEAVY-HEARTED

DEAR HEAVY-HEARTED: I understand your feelings and agree that your daughters wanted to spare you one of the most painful and difficult tasks a widow must face. However, you should have been consulted first. Perhaps your letter will prevent other well-meaning children from doing what yours did.

DEAR ABBY: Please help settle an argument. My friend insists that a hostess should ask her guests if they care for refreshments instead of serving them something they may not want. She says it's wasteful and foolish to go to a lot of trouble preparing refreshments and offering them to guests who may not care for anything but force themselves to eat to avoid hurting a hostess's feelings.

I say that a gracious hostess will get off her duff and serve something because most people want refreshments, but if asked they will refuse so as not to put their hostess to any trouble.

Whose side are you on, Abby?—GRAND ISLAND, NEB.

DEAR GRAND: Yours.

DEAR ABBY: With reference to the letter putting down the woman who came to a wedding in silver lame stretch pants and a tight sweater: I suggest that one is offended by what one wants to be offended by.

Several years ago, when miniskirts were in style, I decided they looked good on me, so I wore one to Easter services. The pastor mentioned to me that HE considered such attire out of place in church, particularly when worn with high heels!

I think what really bothered him was the fact that some of the congregation were distracted by my shapely legs and failed to pay proper attention to what he had to say.

If a woman looks good in short skirts or a sweater and stretch capris, she should wear them, and criticism be damned. As long as she is neat and clean, it's nobody else's business how she dresses.

Some women have great hair or facial features and take advantage of them. Some have great bodies. So what's the difference? Just as beauty lies in the eye of the beholder, so does umbrage.—ERIKA

DEAR ERIKA: I agree. There's nothing wrong with taking advantage of everything you have going for you, but one should consider the occasion. While silver lame stretch pants are great for a disco, they are inappropriate for a wedding. And miniskirts make for maximum distraction in church.

(Problem? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. For a person-

Bendectin causes low number of defects, says scientist

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — A federal advisory panel was told Monday that the drug Bendectin, used by millions of pregnant women for treating morning sickness, causes birth defects at a statistically low level.

Beverly Paigen, a scientist who represented the Environmental Defense Fund, evaluated the available studies on the drug and concluded that Bendectin poses a threat for the children of five out of every 1,000 women who take it.

If five percent of the pregnant women in the United States took the drug in a year, she calculated, some 750 children a year would be born with varying types of birth defects.

Bendectin is not a very potent teratogen, or cause of birth defects, she told members of the Food and Drug Administration's fertility and maternal health drugs advisory committee. "However, since the drug is prescribed for pregnant women, it is a very important teratogen."

DESPITE THE LOW odds associated with use of Bendectin, Ms. Paigen said the drug represented "a risk which I think most women would choose not to take."

Robert Irvine, a spokesman for Richardson-Merrell Inc. of Wilton, Conn., which makes the drug, said the company has not had an opportunity to evaluate the four studies on which Ms. Paigen based her conclusions. Three of those studies have not been published and the scientists who conducted them were scheduled to present their evidence to the advisory panel.

"We base our conclusions primarily on published scientific data," Irvine said. "Based on that, we feel very strongly that there is no evidence to link birth defects and Bendectin."

The advisory panel, headed by Dr. David Archer of the University of Pittsburgh, is charged with evaluating the scientific data and recommending whether FDA should require label warnings for Bendectin, should remove it from the market or should leave it alone.

Bendectin, used to help control the nausea and vomiting associated with the early stages of pregnancy, has been taken by about 30 million women worldwide over the past 20 years. It is available by prescription in the United States but is sold over the counter in some other nations.

THE MOST WELL-KNOWN case involving Bendectin surrounded a lawsuit in Orlando, Fla., brought against the company by the Mekdecil family. Their son, David, who is now 5, suffered severe limb malformations which his parents attribute to Bendectin. Although a jury found in the family's favor and ordered a financial compensation of $20,000, the case will be retried.

Limb reductions and deformities are the most frequent malformations attributed to Bendectin by its critics. But the studies used by Ms. Paigen associated the drug with heart defects and cleft palates as well.

A version of the drug sold abroad contains dicyclomine, an antispasmodic, doxylamine, an antihistamine, and pyridoxine or Vitamin B-6, which has anti-nauseant properties. But the version sold in the United States no longer contains dicyclomine because that drug's effectiveness was not adequately proven.

Critics of the drug recommend that, except in extreme cases, women use home remedies such as eating crackers or toast to control nausea and vomiting.

Dr. Robert Brent of Philadelphia, who served as a consultant for the drug company at the Mekdecil trial, said he, too, had evaluated the evidence on Bendectin but has not found it convincing enough to label the drug a teratogen. He said despite public perceptions to the contrary, only 10 percent of birth defects can be attributed to environmental factors and only 1 percent can be blamed on drugs.

And, he said, common substances such as vitamins A and D and aspirin seem more likely to cause birth defects than bendectin.

Nellie Bly had lots to do years ago

Copley News Service

When Nellie Bly raced around the world in 80 days, catching the imagination of American newspaper readers, editors of other papers moved in fast to hire women reporters to do the same for them.

Women today may have more opportunities in more fields, but few people now have lives as exciting as those turn-of-the-century sob sisters.

When Winifred Black Bonfils traveled to San Francisco in 1889 in search of a wayward brother, she probably had no idea she was destined to become the San Francisco Examiner's answer to the Eastern-based Nellie Bly.

Oct. 14 marks the birthday of the remarkable Bonfils, who won fame as Annie Laurie, daring girl reporter, but stayed around to serve as a San Francisco reporter for more than 50 years.

Nellie Bly developed the idea and has been remembered best by historians, but Annie Laurie perfected the sob sister tradition.

After Nellie became famous she married a wealthy man. When he died she lost her fortune and finished her career as an obscure newspaper columnist. Bonfils, on the other hand, grew along with her profession.

She was first sent out to cover the local send-off for Nellie Bly's race around the world. When Bonfils handed in her story the editor didn't like it. Her story was too refined and formal.

"We don't want fine writing in a newspaper," he said. "Remember that."

She was told to write for the grip man on the cable car, who might grab a paper on his way to work and read it while waiting for his shift to begin.

Bonfils not only changed her style, but dug into a bag of tricks to make her approach more dramatic.

She dressed in shabby clothes and faked an accident to report personally on how badly women were treated at San Francisco's receiving hospital.

She wrote an inside story from a leper colony, stowed away on a presidential train to get an interview with President Benjamin Harrison, and disguised herself as a boy to get into Galveston where a storm and tidal wave had killed 7,000 people.

When San Francisco was struck by an earthquake in 1906, publisher William Randolph Hearst sent Bonfils a one-word telegram... "Go!"

Birth control is working in China

PEKING (AP) — Every day in China 47,000 babies are born, about 33 a minute, the official Chinese news agency reported last week.

According to China's family planning office, that is about 28,000 fewer babies a day than in 1970 — and a demonstration of effective family planning in this country of one billion people, the world's most populous nation.

China has a rigid family planning program and now demands that couples have only one child. Under China's proposed marriage law married couples will be legally obligated to practice family planning.

China reported the birth rate in 1970 was 33.59 per thousand, but last year it had dropped to 17.9 per thousand.

From 1971 to 1979, it said, births were reduced by 56 million. China always has had a high birth rate but before the People's Republic was founded in 1949 a high mortality rate cut the population growth to 2.6 per thousand. After 1949, birth rates remained the same but the mortality rate dropped sharply. Last year it was 6.24 per thousand.

In the last 30 years, the net growth of the population has been 430 million.

Junior varsity cheerleaders named; Stickers now on sale

By DEBBIE FOSTER, MARTHA WENTWORTH and JANET LANDENBURGER

The Chatter is back thanks to all those who had a hand in getting it back. A special thanks goes to the editor of The Midland Reporter-Telegram, Jim Servatius. It will appear in the paper every Tuesday.

If you weren't at the football game Friday night, you really missed a good one. The Tigers didn't have a chance as our roaring Rebel Express rolled right over them from the very beginning. Congratulations to our Rebel men as the final score was 17-7. Also, our strong Stonewall Brigade trampled the Tigers by a score of 23-0. Way to go, guys.

In volleyball action last week our varsity girls traveled to Plains to take on their varsity team. It was a strong fight but our girls fell behind and lost. The JV also had a tough fight and lost.

Last Tuesday, junior and sophomore girls tried out for the position of junior varsity cheerleader. The new JV cheerleaders are Sharon Baum, Tina Green, Gay McClelland, Connie Freeman, Katherine Kenny, Sandy Owens, Lynn Sanders and Michelle Mayberry. Congratulations, girls.

ATTENTION: Bumper stickers are now on sale.

Student Council stickers can be purchased from officers and band or chorale members. Senior class bumper stickers are available from any officer.

We would like to wish good luck to the Purple Pack against Monterey this week. We know you can do it. Also, we wish Jerry Zachery a speedy recovery.

For anyone interested in joining the French club, there will be a meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday in room 424.

P.S. If you have information you would like to run in the Chatter, contact any of the writers.

B.C. comments: About the 100 Club—I'm disappointed that more sophomores did not show up for our organizational meeting, but there is still room for many more, and I hope you will see me about joining the 100 Club. We need you and there is plenty of time for you to get your points. So if you are interested, come by—you will be glad you did.

The 100 Club officers elected at our first meeting are Tina Harrington, president; Debbie Blackman, vice president; and Kim Ross and Pam Southerland, secretaries.

About the Youth Center cards: During the entire month of September, I will be at the door to see your card at lunch time. Cards will be on sale at both lunches and after school during September. There are four more dances scheduled and, yes, we will have more dances during football season, so you will be money ahead by purchasing your card now because admission is 50 cents or nothing with your card and $3 without a card.

Governors discuss waste disposal

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — The nation's Southern governors have called for each state to assume responsibility for disposition of its own low-level radioactive waste.

The governors, acting in their role as the Southern Regional Energy Advisory Board, also urged Congress Monday to authorize and encourage regional cooperation on the problem.

South Carolina has one of the nation's three disposal sites and, like Nevada and Washington state, is decreasing the amount of waste it accepts from other states. The resolution adopted by the governors, meeting here for the Southern Governors' Association conference, was proposed by South Carolina Gov. Richard W. Riley.

Meanwhile, federal officials told the governors, whose states include the nation's three major oil producers and four major coal producers, federal regulations are not to blame for the nation's energy dependence.

The conference also heard Monday from a University of Texas professor who said the federal government should "turn this whole business of energy production and distribution over to the people who know what they're doing."

Barbara Blum, deputy administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, said the EPA is "bending over backwards" to speed up the conversion of oil-fired electric plants to coal, a subject of interest to Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee.

Blum said delays were caused by state regulatory policy, utilities' reluctance to finance the capital expenditures, uncertainty over coal prices and public opposition.

Professor John McKetta maintained, however, that federal mine safety regulations made it uneconomical to mine coal and federal clean air standards made it illegal to burn it.

Lake levels stabilize after rise

Lake levels had about stabilized Monday from last week's rise, and the Colorado River Municipal Water District was about 50,000 acre feet of water to the good.

Although there was still some minor flow into Lake E.V. Spence Monday, 48,000 acre feet of good quality water had coursed into that reservoir, raising the level 9.1 vertical feet to an elevation of 1863.18. Lake J.B. Thomas did not share in the big rains, but it did pick up .78 of a foot to elevation 2220.34; a net inflow of 1,800 acre feet. It is two feet ahead of where it was on the same date a year ago.

Aside from the welcome supply, quality of water will be a big benefit, said O.H. Ivie, general manager of CRMWD. Water flowing past the Lake Spence pump station now is very low in chlorides, and thus cities are benefiting from this immediately. In time, the new water will mix with that already in the basin and not be quite as good as now, but in any event will still be at least a third better quality than before the rise.

Another bonus from the inflow is that it will affect water quality next summer when CRMWD has to draw from Moss Creek Lake, the on-line storage southeast of Big Spring, to meet peak demands. During the past summer CRMWD pulled the level of Moss Creek down about 10 feet, and as this 2,000 acre feet of water is replaced from Lake Spence during autumn months, it will be of much higher quality than was withdrawn last summer.

The rise at Lake Spence has brought to 64,000 acre feet the gain this year, the third largest on record since closure of the dam in 1969. The peak was 109,500 acre feet in 1971, followed by 75,600 in 1974. Together, Lake Thomas and Lake Spence have caught 88,000 acre feet this year.

Volcano caused great losses, had little economic impact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The volcanic eruptions of Mount St. Helens in Washington state caused some $1.2 billion in losses but have had only a small impact on the economy of the Pacific Northwest, a government report concluded today.

The impact on the U.S. economy has been "virtually insignificant," said the report to Congress by the International Trade Commission. The report was released today by the House Ways and Means Committee.

"There has been little overall impact on the area's imports and exports, despite the fact that specific activities such as agriculture — including timber production — and shipping experienced immediate short-term losses," the report said. It added:

"The long-term effects depend primarily upon the volcano's future activity. If volcanic activity continues for a significant period, there may be a reduction in investment and a lower rate of growth in the region.

"However, if Mount St. Helens returns to a dormant state, the long-term impact will be minimal, with a probable growth in tourism due to the unique nature of the mountain."

Mount St. Helens, in southwestern Washington, began showing signs of activity in March. A major eruption on May 18 killed 31 people and left 33 missing. The blast from the eruption leveled some 120,000 acres of forest, blew out roads and bridges and flooded the Columbia River and other smaller rivers with silt.

Smaller eruptions occurred in June, July and August, and the volcano is still active.

The economic report put timber industry losses at $695 million, agriculture losses at $192 million and fishery losses at $95 million.

The report said dredging to clear the Columbia River would cost $44 million.

Stores selling more goods

Midland stores are selling more goods this year as reflected in the sales tax rebates announced last week by State Comptroller Bob Bullock. For the first 10 months of this year, Midland's rebates are up 45 percent over last year's.

Rebates through October totaled $4,401,972.02, more than $1.3 million over last year's total to date of $3,019,932.10.

Payment for October was more than 50 percent higher than last year's payment for the same month, according to Bullock's office. Midland received $313,362.60 this year compared to $194,495.34 in 1979.

Odessa also is recording an increase in its sales tax rebates, but only 20 percent for the year to date. Payments through October have hit $4,944,245.92. Last year, the total was $4,108,492.56.

Payment for October was $319,694.66, compared to $241,732.26 in 1979.

The city sales tax is collected by merchants and businesses along with the state sales tax and is rebated each month by the comptroller's office to the cities where it is collected.

Man indicted

A federal grand jury Monday indicted John F. Cunningham, 35, 3403 Sentinel Ave., on two charges of willfully failing to file Federal Income Tax Returns for 1975 and 1976, in violation of Title 26 of the United States Code.

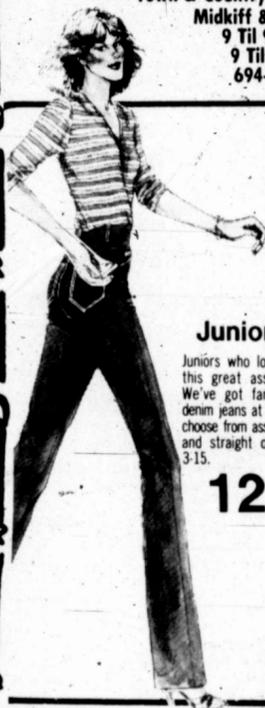

The indictment states that although Cunningham had a gross income in excess of $10,000 in each year, he knowingly and willfully failed to file Federal Income Tax Returns stating specifically the items of his gross income and any deductions and credits to which he was entitled.

Maximum punishment for each count is three years imprisonment and a $10,000 fine, together with costs of prosecution.

Cunningham was in City Jail this morning.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, Sept. 17, 1980

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actress Anne Bancroft shares this birthday with you, and both of you have a great desire for privacy. Choose partners and friends with great care and you will find lasting success in both your personal and professional life. The employment outlook is particularly bright in the year ahead, and much can be accomplished by working behind the scenes. Your quiet charm wins you many admirers, although a natural reticence is sometimes mistaken for an indifference to romance.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A methodical approach works best when tackling difficult tasks. Be sure to return all phone calls promptly. It is far better to ask direct questions today, than to simply assume that a rumor is true.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Optimism and self-confidence separate the leaders from the followers. An imaginative award for community service may play a role in today's plan.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An eye for beauty could lead to a surprising romantic encounter. Material security may be uppermost in mate's thoughts. Try to be reassuring, but discuss spending habits realistically.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The emphasis is on perseverance, determination. A message will bring new hope of advancement. Give romance a chance! Buy something that will add beauty and comfort to home surroundings.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Self-confidence may be your greatest strength today. Increased flexibility will insure greater happiness in personal relationships. Be gracious when adjusting schedule to accommodate others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You get a unique chance to be competitive without incurring the ill will of associates. An attractive newcomer could make an interesting proposal. Ask for more details!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Money matters dominate the day. Let others set the pace where both work and social activities are concerned. An important point could be overlooked in a routine business discussion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Hard work can perform miracles, transforming a dream into reality. Share innermost thoughts with mate or best friend. Those who work at night are apt to get an extra reward in the near future.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A co-worker who is usually pleasant may be out of sorts today. Just ignore the situation and go about your own business. Lunch or dinner could take place in glamorous surroundings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A defiant mood will only cause trouble. Avoid accusations and direct confrontations. Clear house of unnecessary clutter, and give away the clothes that you no longer wear.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A good day to ship for personal items. Curb an urge to confide in co-workers. There will be a silver lining in that cloud which appears about to burst.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Witty remarks will cause associates to laugh, but they may not sit so well with a conservative "higher-up." Resist an impulse to invest in a highly speculative venture.

The Bath Coup is a form of holdup play which is used when declarer has A J x of a suit and his left hand opponent has led an honor. The object of this play is not to gain a trick, but a tempo. That can be enough. However, on today's hand declarer executed a Bath Coup only to end up taking a bath!

With 8 points and a good five-card suit, North was full value for his game invitation. South had an absolute maximum no trump opening, so he was happy to accept.

West led the king of hearts, and declarer remembered the Bath Coup. He played a low heart from his hand, and West could not continue hearts unless he wanted to give declarer a second-trick in the suit.

West shifted to the ten of diamonds. East overlooked with the jack and declarer had to hold up again. East reverted to a heart, and the jack lost to the queen. West cleared the hearts and, since declarer needed club tricks to make his game, he entered dummy with a spade and tried the finesse. West won and took two more heart tricks for down two. South's play to the first trick was elegant but mistaken. His diamond weakness should have warned him that a holdup in hearts could be fatal. In addition, the holdup play was unnecessary for declarer could afford to lose the club finesse to West. West would be unable to make a damaging return, and declarer would then have established enough tricks for the contract.

Therefore, declarer should win the ace of hearts at trick one. He enters dummy with the jack of spades and runs the queen of clubs. If East has the king of clubs, declarer must make at least three club tricks and his contract, regardless of the distribution. If West holds the king, declarer cannot be prevented from scoring an overtrick, for he is entitled to four tricks in the suit even against the actual 4-1 split. Assume West refused the finesse. When East shows out on the second round, declarer simply rises with the ace and continues clubs to force out the king.

Pollock's hot dogs made him a multi-millionaire

BALTIMORE (AP) — John Kafka, who parlayed a hot dog stand into a $6 million-a-year business, seems like the man who has everything. He even has about two dozen piglets who call him "Grandpa."

In a city of characters, Kafka — better known as Pollock Johnny — is a character's character. Television appearances and advertising have made his face instantly recognizable to thousands. A man who unmistakably personifies Baltimore — boisterous, friendly and without pretense. "I'm on the other side of mellow, pal," he says.

Kafka, who hit the road at 14 to work for a carnival, picked up his nickname along the way. "I'm proud to be Polish," he says.

In the less than 20 years since he took over his father's hot dog and Polish sausage stand, Kafka has seen the once-tiny lunch counter mushroom into a chain of 25 fast-food stands in the city.

It is in those stands, some of which have been franchised, that Kafka sells "The Unburger" — a spicy tasting, specially made Polish sausage on a hot dog roll dripping with chili or a secret sauce he calls "the works." Bumper-stickers proclaiming his fame adorn cars around the city.

In his office, overlooking the city's busy Lexington Street mall, Pollock Johnny appears an unlikely executive to head a multimillion-dollar enterprise.

He does not wear a suit and tie, and he keeps his battered hat on indoors, grinning broadly and rolling his eyes as he recalls some of the publicity stunts he has used over the years.

When his business was tiny, a single stand on the city's legendary "Block" — an area of strip joints and peep shows — Pollock Johnny started passers-by with his antics.

"We used to have people come down there in Rolls Royces all dressed up in tuxedos," he says, recalling how he then had the customers dine by candlelight.

"We once made a hot dog for charity that was longer than a football field," he says. He took it out to a football field to make sure.

"We rolled it up on one of those telephone things they put wire on. It must have been over 300 (feet) because it went into the end zones."

And then there was the other love in Johnny's life, besides his wife of 28 years, Margie. The "other woman" was Joy, a 245-pound pig Johnny picked up at a fair for a mere $24,500.

"We paid $100 a pound — they say it's the highest price ever paid for a pig," recalls the 54-year-old Kafka. "I just wanted to prove we put the finest ingredients in our sausages."

As it turned out, Johnny found that he didn't have the heart to turn Joy into Polish sausage. A prize ribbon she won still hangs on the door to his office.

"After I bought her I couldn't kill her, I took a liking to her so I put her up on a farm and she had a litter of piglets," he says.

Reaching into a desk drawer, Johnny produces a porcine family album. "Now I'm a grandfather," he says, laughing.

The piglets were given to children in the 4-H Club to raise and Johnny still follows the progress of his grandchildren.

"The kids send me letters and tell me how the pigs are coming along. Thank God I didn't have Joy killed."

Life as a big executive may be sweeter in some respects from the days when he sat on a box of paper cups and did his books on an overturned soda crate. But Kafka admits it isn't always as much fun as it was in the old days when he was shooting to break records selling Polish sausages.

"Every time we broke a record they used to get a $5 bill, you'd think it was Christmas," he says of his helpers. "I used to take my hat and throw it in the air and scream."

Kafka also still enjoys presiding over "Pollock Johnny's Polish Sausage Eating Contest" an annual gastronomic debauch now in its 13th year, which draws serious eaters from around the country.

And Kafka, a religious man who credits God with his good fortune, still believes in being courteous to his customers. "I never sold a hot dog in my life," he says, "without saying, 'Thank you.'"

Roy Orbison's career is not over yet

NEW YORK (AP) — When Roy Orbison played his first New York City concert in eight years not long ago, he found he hadn't been forgotten.

The Lone Star Cafe was packed to the rafters, with those who remembered singing "Running Scared" in the high school locker room and with fans who were just discovering Orbison through Linda Ronstadt's version of "Blue Bayou."

Miss Ronstadt herself attended one of the Lone Star performances, along with other assorted celebrities.

And the audience reacted with delirious cheers as Orbison hit the high notes on his classics — "Pretty Woman," "Only the Lonely," "Crying," "Running Scared" and "It's Over." Orbison's career, now in its 25th year, is far from over.

Within the next few months, shooting will begin on a movie based on Orbison's life. Martin Sheen will star, and while he may be able to duplicate Orbison's distinctive looks — the pale face, black

Texas except play and sing.

"My father asked me early on what I was going to do when I grew up, and I said, 'I'm going to be a singer.' And he said, 'That's fine.'"

By the time Orbison was 14 or 15, he'd formed a group quaintly named the Wink Westerners, and he taught them how to play.

The fact that Orbison is standing up on a stage these days at all is a near-miracle. Last year, he had open-heart surgery, but was back on the road three months later. Orbison's great reserve of calm, inner strength has enabled him to survive that crisis and the twin personal tragedies — his first wife, Claudette, was killed in a motorcycle accident in 1966, and two sons died in a fire that destroyed his home in 1968.

He says that at the time he "just went through the motions" of daily life. "It was a whole time frame I later wanted to block out of my mind."

He ran to the road — tours of Europe, Australia, the Far East, and very few dates in the U.S. He admits, "I didn't care about records any more. I had to allow time to be the natural healing force for the internal, personal pain I was experiencing."

happen, I wouldn't change either," he says.

hair and dark glasses — he could never reach Orbison's three-octave range. So Orbison himself will re-record 10 of his songs for the film, and write two new tunes.

After a 10-year period which included several label changes, unsuccessful albums and very little U.S. touring, 1980 is Roy Orbison's year. In addition to the film project, he and Emmylou Harris have a hit single, "That Lovin' You Feelin' Again." It's from the movie "Roadie," in which Orbison made a cameo appearance.

Orbison is both delighted and a little apprehensive about the rediscovery of his songs. "For the longest time, I was wondering when I went on tour and did 'Blue Bayou,' would the younger generation think I was copying Linda Ronstadt."

His recording career began with Sun Records, the legendary Memphis outfit that launched Elvis Presley, Johnny Cash and Jerry Lee Lewis in the '50s. In fact, Sun Records launched rock 'n' roll. Presley, Orbison and Lewis fused country and western, rockabilly swing and rhythm and blues, and invented a new kind of music.

Orbison remarks, "It's a strange thing that we're in a period of so much instant history. The Sun period became instant history in 1970. Then by 1975, everybody was interested in what happened in the pre-Beatle era."

He was very much a part of the "pre-Beatle" era, too. From 1960 to 1964, from "Only the Lonely" to "Pretty Woman," he was never out of the Top 10 on the charts. In 1963, his British tour with the Beatles created mass hysteria.

Orbison's professional career began with Sun, but he began playing and singing for his many relatives when he was 6 years old, growing up in the tiny West Texas town of Wink.

He says that during those family jamborees, "I found out that I got to stay up as late as the grown-ups. It was that early attention and early involvement with grownups that spurred me on to go ahead. Also, there wasn't much to do in West Orbison's strength comes from a basic philosophy — be true to yourself, don't lose touch with life.

"When I had a hit record, I didn't take to the bottle. I didn't stop reading, and doing what I do for hobbies. By the same token, when something traumatic would

Lynda Carter is playing all roles on CBS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — You can see Bette Midler, Tina Turner and Kiss. You can also see Lynda Carter in all those roles, as TV's former "Wonder Woman" proves she has musical talent in a rock 'n' roll fantasy segment of "Lynda Carter Encore" on CBS.

Her real guests in the Tuesday night special are Tom Jones and Merle Haggard, who perform solo and with Miss Carter.

"This is my second special and I like it better than the first," the actress said before leaving for a concert tour in England. "It's more diversified. My favorite part was just being silly, doing those parodies."

"The thing I like is that we have no theme when we start work on a special," Miss Carter said. "It's a collaborative effort and it comes out of the ideas we discuss. It all comes out of the music because the music is the most important part."

"It's amazing to me that other people always seem to start with a concept and pick the music to go with it."

The Tina Turner bit, she said, came up while everyone was sitting on the grass on the Malibu ranch belonging to Miss Carter and her husband, Ron Samuels, who also manages her career and was executive producer of the special.

"We were talking about Tina Turner, and I said she's a phenomenal dancer," Miss Carter recalled. "At that, Lester Wilson, who's our choreographer, got up and said, 'Lynda, you can do it.' Then he improvised the whole routine right there on the grass."

"The most fun I've ever had creatively is doing specials. It's so great working with people who have an input and are not just told what to do."

The opening number for the special, "Stay With Me Tonight," was written one night by Miss Carter and a collaborator, Johnny Harris. They started at 5 p.m. and had it finished at 5 a.m. the next day. Miss Carter also wrote three songs for her last album.

One of the melodies she sings on the special is "The Last Song," the theme and title of her television movie. CBS is expected to set an early air date for the film.

It came about when two writers saw her appearance in Reno and decided to write a musical for her. "I would be a singer, but I really wanted to do something dramatic first," she said.

"Through a series of developments I became a singer who became inadvertently involved in a coverup of hazardous industrial wastes. There's some evidence on a tape that's in my possession, but I don't know it. It's a thriller, not a fashion show. It's a real departure from 'Wonder Woman.'"

She said the trouble began as soon as word got out that they were doing film on industrial waste. "We got letters from chemical companies, the Environmental Protective Agency, everybody. We had to be so careful. We couldn't make a direct reference to a chemical. It had to be a completely fictional story."

Miss Carter, 27, was in London at airtime for a series of singing appearances, including two nights at the Palladium. She was stricken en route to London, and left the plane with a bandage on her right eye.

A hospital official said she had suffered an "obstruction under the cornea of her right eye," possibly a scratch from a contact lens. A spokesman here said she had recovered fully, with no permanent eye damage, and would keep her commitments.

SECTION D

Buff comeback highlights area football action

Stanton's Buffaloes came up with the stirring finish-of-the-week, spotting AAA Coahoma an 18-0 lead and then storming back to pull out a 20-18 decision and what's more they did it without starting quarterback Craig Elland.

However, Curtis Williams, filling in for Elland, qualified as Pinch-Hit Performance of the week, returning an interception 35 yards for one touchdown and passing seven yards to Arthur Reece for what proved to be the winning score. However, it wouldn't have been the winning score if Elland had converted a couple of extra points.

There was still 3:49 to go, time enough for Coahoma to drive to the Stanton 14 and miss a field goal with seven seconds left.

The win leaves Stanton with a 2-0 record going into this week's game with 0-2 Crane while Seagraves, the team the Buffs must beat in 5-2A stormy by the Sundown Roughnecks, 42-0.

DENNIS BLACK, who scored on runs of 66 and 16 yards against Eldorado, again came through for unbeaten Rankin with TD runs of six and 36 yards as the Red Devils were forced to score twice in the last half for a 12-0 win over Marfa.

McCamey, also 2-0 and headed for another Oil Patch showdown with Rankin this week, started sluggishly, but scored 19 fourth-quarter points to beat Reagan County, 1-1, 26-7. In beating Iraan in the opener, 21-19, the passing combination of Ernest Velasquez and Ben Ferguson was responsible for three touchdowns, but the Badgers went 0-for-3 against the Owls. That gave tailback B.J. Terry a chance to strut his stuff, running 30 and 14 yards to set up McCamey's third period score, setting up a Ferguson TD with a 14-yard romp and then bursting 76 yards for the final score to put in a strong bid for Back-of-the-Week honors.

Greenwood boosted its record to 2-0 as Homer Lopez ran 30 and 25 yards for scores and Larry Dickerson passed for two TDs, including a 38-yarder to Ken Foshee, in a 31-6 romp over Whiteface. The Rangers play their first home game Friday with tough Klondike, a 17-14 loser to

Plains

LOOMING as a challenger to 6-A favorite Rankin is Wink, which buried Sierra Blanca, 47-7, holding an awesome 18-4 edge in first downs and a 265 to 1 margin in rushing.

At Iraan, first coach Steve Maurer was back at page 1 in the instructional manual after a 46-20 thumping at the hands of Eldorado, a disappointment considering the Braves' two-point loss to McCamey the week before.

But the week's outstanding offensive performance had to go to Andrews' Van Pearcey, who was magnificent in the Mustangs' 18-14 win over Midland. The 185-pound senior scored three touchdowns, two by run and one by pass from Keith Brooks, gained 170 yards in 17 carries and despite one clunker still averaged 47.8 yards for five punts, including 62 and 64 yarders. What more could you ask for in a big game?

Oilers take 16-7 victory

CLEVELAND (AP) — Tony Fritsch booted three field goals and Houston evened its early season record at 1-1 as the Oilers took a hard-hitting 16-7 victory over the Cleveland Browns Monday night before more than 86,000 fans.

Neither team was able to move the ball effectively during their first two possessions.

IN HIS first four carries, Houston star running back Earl Campbell managed only seven yards total. The Oilers managed only 26 total yards to 75 for the Browns.

Mike Pruitt was Cleveland's main offensive weapon with eight carries for 33 yards and two pass receptions for 20.

As the quarter ended, the Browns were attempting to take advantage of a poor punt by Cliff Parsley that gave them the ball at their own 43. Passes from quarterback Brian Sipe to Pruitt and Dave Logan helped move the ball to the Oiler 20 as time in the first quarter expired with the game scoreless.

The Browns went over for the first touchdown of the game on the second play of the second period, a three-yard pass from Sipe to Calvin Hill.

The play was set up by a 15-yard reception by Pruitt. Don Cockroft's extra point gave the Browns a 7-0 lead with 13:47 left in the first half.

The Oilers struck back for a field goal on the ensuing series. Ken Stabler hit five of six passes for 29 yards and Campbell rushed for 23 in six carries before the drive stalled at the Browns' eight.

Fritsch's 25-yard field goal capped the drive which consumed over nine minutes.

A CAMPBELL fumble at the Browns' 43 wrecked the next Oiler drive, but Cleveland could not capitalize and had to punt.

With 1:37 left in the half, Stabler completed five straight passes to push the Oilers to the Cleveland 25. But he lost 10 yards on a sack and a fourth-down pass failed to pick up the needed yardage.

The Oilers took the second half kickoff and strolled 67 yards for their first touchdown and a 10-7 lead.

Campbell broke loose for runs of 18 and 17 yards and Stabler hit two passes for 19 yards to set up a one-yard run by fullback Tim Wilson.

Cleveland was unable to pick up a first down in its next possession and the Oilers took the punt at their own 35 and consumed the final 7 1/2 minutes of the quarter, driving to the Browns' 11 as time ran out.

A ROUGHING the passer penalty on Lyle Alzado kept the next Oiler drive alive and Fritsch kicked a 29-yard field goal for a 13-7 lead at the start of the fourth period.

Akers fears Utah State's blazing speed Saturday

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Coach Fred Akers said Monday that Utah State — with blazing speed among their receivers and an "absolutely excellent" kicking game — "is better than most folks in this part of the country realize."

Texas, 1-0 after a 23-17 victory over Arkansas on Sept. 1, and Utah State, 1-1, play here Saturday night in an inter-sectional game.

Akers told a news conference receivers Stacy Colbert and James

Murphy of Utah State "are as fast or faster" than former Texas star Johnny "Lam" Jones, a 1976 Olympic gold medal winner and the No. 2 choice in the 1980 pro draft.

He said Utah State punter Guy McClure had averaged about 43 yards a kick over the past two years.

A half dozen Texas players are injured, but Akers said for the most part the injuries "are nothing we can't overcome."

One who will miss a month or more is freshman bluechip linebacker Jeff Leiding, who suffered a slight shoulder separation and a pinched nerve in his neck.

Akers said his young players had taken advantage of the long layoff since Arkansas to achieve "noticeable improvement." He specifically mentioned freshmen offensive linemen Doug Dawson, Mike Ruether and Adam Schreiber and first-year running backs Terry Orr, John Walker and Mike Luck.

"For an older group it (the layoff) might have been boring, but the younger guys really did see an opportunity to improve," said Akers.

Akers announced that freshman running back Joe Monroe had been moved to defense as an end-linebacker and also that senior Terry Adams finally had been put on scholarship.

Akers described Utah States as a "dangerous... wide open" team that used 25 formations in its first two games and probably averages up to 35 passes a game.

"It will be a great test for our young secondary and defenders," he said.

"I think we have the strongest football team," said Akers, "but we're going to have to play well to prove that. I'll tell you that."

"Utah State," he added, "is certainly not a team anyone can afford to overlook, because with their style of play, if you give them very many opportunities, they'll make it too exciting."

Texas has won both its previous games against Utah State, 27-12 in 1972 and 61-7 in 1975.

A crowd of 65,000-70,000 is expected for the game. Kickoff is at 7 p.m., CDT.

MC women tied for 17th place

OKLAHOMA CITY—Texas Christian University shot a 299 to take over first place after one round of the three-day Susie Maxwell Bering Invitational at Lincoln Park Golf Club. Tulsa was second with 305 and UT-Austin third 307.

Midland College, one of two junior colleges in the 24-team field hosted by Oklahoma University, was tied for 17th with Nebraska.

Scores for Coach Susan Holland's golfers after a windy Monday were: Debra Cargetta 80, Sheryl Bunton 80, Michelle Wilks 81, Deborah Latham 81, Wendy Swift 86.

Syracuse opening new dome

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — This is the week that Syracuse University's $27 million domed stadium goes into operation with Saturday's football game pitting the Orangemen against Miami of Ohio.

The 50,000-seat stadium is expected to herald the rebirth of Syracuse University's football team as a major power. The stadium also is expected to be an economic boon for this upstate New York city of 170,000.

It already is scheduled to be used as a centerpiece for next summer's National Sports Festival, which will bring America's top amateur athletes to Syracuse, as well as future Empire State Games, where New York's top amateur athletes meet in Olympic-style competition.

The stadium also will be used for Syracuse University's home basketball games, which university officials say will attract more big name schools that refused to visit the cramped Manley Field House where the Orangemen were nearly impossible to beat.

Religious meetings, conventions, trade shows and rock concerts also will be staged in the stadium, which already has been booked for 54 days in its first year of operation.

There even has been talk among local Republicans of trying to secure the stadium for a mass meeting highlighted by an appearance by presidential nominee Ronald Reagan the week before the election. University officials say they know nothing about that.

Although a sports facility for a private university, the new stadium has its roots in politics. Gov. Hugh Carey pledged his support and the promise of $15 million in state funds in 1978, an election year, when the stadium still was an idea with a lot of critics.

The university was left to raise the rest of the money, including more than $2 million paid by the Carrier Corp., to have the stadium carry its corporate name.

The stadium, built with 44 million pounds of concrete and 1.5 million tons of steel is the fifth largest domed stadium in the nation and the only facility of its kind in the Northeast. Another distinction for the stadium is that it was completed on schedule and on budget.

Syracuse will be more widely known across the country because of the new stadium, says Irvin Schultz, director of the Greater Syracuse Chamber of Commerce.

Former All-Pro commits suicide

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Former Kansas City Chiefs All-Pro tackle Jim Tyrer shot and killed his wife early Monday, then committed suicide, Kansas City police reported.

Police said that Tyrer, 41, and his wife, Martha, 40, were found in the upstairs bedroom of their two-story ranch home on the city's south side. A 17-year-old son told police that he heard three shots and found the bodies. Two other children, ages 11 and 13, were asleep at the time.

Police said the boy, fearful that someone had entered the home and was shooting members of the family, hid beneath his bed for an hour before going to his parents' bedroom about 5:50 a.m. He then called police.

Officers said Tyrer and his wife each suffered a single gunshot wound to the head. A .38-caliber revolver was found near Tyrer, police said. Both bodies were found on the floor near the bed.

Midland, Lee opening district volleyball slate

Football Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Want a change of pace? Try volleyball. The Midland High and Midland Lee girls plunge into their District 5-5A seasons tonight and against the Odessa schools.

Linda Jolly, who moves up from assistant coach to replace Jo Ann Martin at the helm, is looking forward to a season in which her Bulldogs will be complete for the title, if she can keep her girls healthy. As MHS goes into tonight's game against Odessa Permian at the MHS gym, injuries have already taken their toll.

At Lee, Coach Linda Weikel sees a rebuilding season ahead as the Rebels travel to Odessa High for the season's opener. Lori Breeding, a two-letter senior, is the only returnee with experience.

"We are 2-9," says Coach Weikel, "but we've been playing good teams, trying to get ready for district. We are on the young side with only one senior and two juniors."

Junior Varsity matches start at 6 p.m. and the varsity contest will follow approximately 15 minutes after the JV game.

Midland posted a 7-4 pre-district record, but lost Thena

Deandre, who broke a wrist during practice, and Holly Randall suffered a shoulder injury, but will play against Permian tonight.

"We should be pretty good," says Coach Jolly, who will have four seniors, two juniors and two sophomores starting, "but right now we are hurting."

Midland's starting lineup tonight will include 6-2 Kathleen Teague, whom Jolly labels as the team's leader, Landra Sisneros and Cara Blaschke, all letter winning seniors and the experience on the team. Randall and Ann Miller are the juniors while Penny Griffin, a sophomore, will complete the lineup.

Starting for Lee will be Deborah Quintela, Rozena McCabe, Lori Breeding, Meg Brennan, Sylvia Ochotorena, Susan McGaha, Carmel Scott and Sharon McLaughlin. All are sophomores except Breeding and juniors McGaha and McCabe. Sharon Miller and Michelle Elig, sophomores, also could see action tonight.

After tonight's openers, district action continues Thursday with Midland hosting Big Spring while Lee will be at San Angelo.

Jay Jeffrey, junior business major from Shawnee Mission, Kan., was named Associated Press Back of the Week for his performance in Baylor's 42-7 victory over Lamar Saturday night. Jeffrey completed eight of 14 passes for 122 yards, including a 41-yard strike to Mike Fisher. (AP Laserphoto).

Dodgers, Astros both are beaten in Western race

By The Associated Press

San Diego polished off the Houston Astros, 6-3 while the Los Angeles Dodgers dropped a 9-0 decision to the Atlanta Braves Monday night to keep the Astros from moving into sole possession of first place in the Western Division of the National League.

In other games, the St. Louis Cardinals took a 5-1 win over the Chicago Cubs and the Cincinnati Reds took care of the San Francisco Giants, 6-2 in the National League while in the American League, the Texas Rangers blanked the Oakland A's, 2-0.

San Diego's Gene Richards highlighted a three-run rally with a two-run double in the fourth inning to lead the Padres over the Astros, ending a five-game win streak by Houston.

Houston took a 1-0 lead in the first inning off starter Bob Shirley on a run-scoring single by Art Howe.

The Padres tied the game in the third when Ozzie Smith reached first on a fielder's choice, stole second and scored on Jerry Mumphrey's single.

Joe Morgan tripled off the right field wall in the third and scored on Enos Cabell's double before the Padres broke open the game in the fourth off starter Nolan Ryan.

Braves 8, Dodgers 0

Right-hander Tommy Boggs, who fired his second five-hit shutout this season, handcuffed the Dodgers and in doing so, says that the Braves will help decide the National League West pennant race.

The Braves, baseball's hottest team over the last five weeks (28-9), downed the Dodgers 9-0 as Bob Horner belted his 33rd home run of the season to support Boggs' pitching.

Boggs has half of the four shutouts thrown at the Dodgers this year. Boggs says he has no explanation as to why he has been so successful against the Dodgers.

Reds 6, Giants 2

Tom Seaver tossed a three-hitter and Damn Driessen and Ray Knight knocked in two runs each Monday night to boost the Reds over the San Francisco Giants, 6-2.

Seaver, 9-7, surrendered a leadoff single to Bill North in the first inning, a leadoff homer to Darrell Evans in the ninth and a single to Rennie Stennett in the same inning.

Seaver entered the ninth looking for his sixth career one-hitter, which would have established a modern National League record.

The Reds scored four runs in the first to hand the Giants their sixth straight loss and 12th out of their last 13.

The Giants scored an unearned run in the first with the help of two Cincinnati errors.

Rangers 2, A's 0

Al Oliver's 2,000th career hit knocked in the first run of the game in the sixth inning and the Texas Rangers went on to defeat the Oakland A's, 2-0 Monday night and allow the Kansas City Royals to clinch at least a tie for the American League West title.

The Royals now have a 17 1/2-game lead over the A's.

The 33-year-old Oliver, in his 13th year in the majors, joined Pete Rose and Rod Carew as the only active players with 2,000 hits and a lifetime .300 average.

Jon Matlack, 10-7, picked up the victory over Matt Keough, 15-13, who had allowed only one hit until the sixth inning, when he gave up an infield single to Mickey Rivers and walked John Grubb ahead of Oliver's single.

Cardinals 5, Cubs 1

If the judge who fined Andy Rincon for speeding in San Antonio last week saw him pitch the St. Louis Cardinals to a 5-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs Monday in his major league debut, he might have doubled the fine.

Rincon, a 21-year-old right-hander, shackled the Cubs on five hits and didn't allow a hit over the final five and 1-3 innings.

Keith Hernandez and George Hendrick keyed a four-run rally in the sixth inning to break a 1-1 tie, with a double each.

Hendrick scored on a balk after his two-bagger off loser Doug Capilla.

Orioles are frustrated

BALTIMORE (AP) — If the Baltimore Orioles are feeling frustrated, and they undoubtedly are, it's understandable. The defending American League champions just finished a 6-2 road trip, but still fell two games farther back of the New York Yankees.

"Before leaving for this trip, if we had said we would be 6-2, we might have sounded greedy," Weaver said after the Orioles lost a 13-inning, 4-3 contest to Toronto Monday.

"But the Yankees ended up sweeping Boston, and in the end we needed more than six out of eight," he said.

With both New York and Baltimore taking a day off Monday, the Yankees had stretched their lead to five games with just 19 games left on the schedule for both teams.

That five-game deficit is a bitter fact to face for the Orioles, who trailed New York by just half a game on Aug. 28. Since then they have won 12 games and lost seven, a more than respectable pace.

But during that same period, New York went on a 16-2 binge, including a just-concluded four-game sweep over Boston.

It was the Boston sweep, coupled with two Baltimore losses to Toronto, that was hardest to take for Weaver and the Orioles.

"I fully expected Boston to win at least two games from the Yankees, but they don't win any and we play .750 and come home disappointed," Weaver said.

Now the Orioles, who seemed to be in the driver's seat after winning six of eight from the Yankees in two crucial August series, are reduced to talking of mathematical possibilities and hoping for a minor miracle.

"It's been tough for us ever since we lost those two games in Seattle when we were only a half-game out," Jim Palmer said after the Sunday loss to Toronto. "But there's still hope until we have exhausted every mathematical possibility."

"We have to keep going and hope something turns around in these last days. Stranger things have happened," Palmer said.

Nobody on the team is giving up hope yet, at least not publicly.

The one thing the Orioles realize they have to have is some help from the teams the Yankees will be playing for the rest of the season.

"It isn't impossible to come back now at all, but we need help more than ever," Weaver said.

Gullickson named NL Player of Week

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Gullickson of the Montreal Expos was named National League Player of the Week Monday.

Gullickson established a rookie record with 18 strikeouts against the Chicago Cubs last week and posted two victories. In 18 innings, he allowed just two runs and seven hits, striking out 21 batters and walking only two.

Earnhardt has lead

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt's lead in the NASCAR points standings has been cut to 60 following his disappointing 34th-place finish in Sunday's Dover 500 at Dover, Del., it was announced Monday.

Richard Petty was in second place with 3,632 points to Earnhardt's 3,692. Cale Yarborough was only 14 points behind Petty with 3,618.

They were followed by Benny Parsons, 3,558; Dover 500 winner Darrell Waltrip, 3,487; Bobby Allison, 3,347; rookie Jody Ridley, 3,135; Harry Gant, 3,082; Richard Childress, 3,019, and Terry Labonte, 2,937.

In the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing money earnings, Earnhardt also remained on top with $351,325. Yarborough was second with $326,130, while Waltrip became the fourth driver on the circuit to top $300,000, taking third place at $308,940.

Redskins looking for healthy offensive lineman

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Redskins searched the "help wanted ads" Monday for healthy offensive linemen.

Starting offensive tackles George Starke and Terry Hermeling and backup tight end, Phil Dubois, were injured seriously in Sunday's 23-21 victory over the New York Giants, to say nothing of those who suffered the normal bumps and bruises.

Starke, who suffered a sprained knee, most likely will be out of action for two or three weeks or more and might be placed on the reserve list, a decision that won't be made until later in the week. Hermeling also suffered a sprained knee but it is not considered as bad as Starke's although he is listed as doubtful for next Sunday's National Football League game at Oakland.

Coach Jack Pardee said Hermeling's knee was placed in a splint Monday, but the protective device would be taken off Tuesday. "We're told his knee will come around and will be better later in the week," he said.

Neither Starke nor Hermeling tore any ligaments in the knee, so Pardee was optimistic about their recovery period.

At tight end, Dubois suffered several fractured ribs and will be out of action for a month or more. Starting tight end Don Warren, who suffered a hairline leg fracture just two weeks ago, did not reinjure himself but was unable to play for long periods of time because of the pain.

Pardee said he probably would bring in a replacement for Dubois.

The Redskins' coach explained the problems he had late in the game against the Giants by saying two timeouts had to be called, so that the new players could be told how to lineup.

With Starke, Hermeling, Warren and Dubois out of the game, Pardee sent backup tackle Fred Dean in for Hermeling and had Gary Anderson, normally a backup guard, replace Starke. And Rick Walker, a free agent signed last Friday after a four-year career with Cincinnati, took over at tight end.

Young Leukemia victim dies after having to give up playing football

CHICAGO (AP) — Frankie Kawsh so loved football that when he learned he couldn't play any longer, he seemed to give up his fight against leukemia, the disease that was slowly killing him, his father says.

Frankie, 16, died Friday, a week after entering the Loyola University Medical Center in suburban Maywood.

Two days before entering the hospital, he was told by school officials that he was ineligible to play football at Lake View High School, where he wanted to transfer. Officials said he had missed nearly half a semester during the previous school year at Kelyvn Park High School.

"He was terribly despondent about the whole thing," his father Frank said. "When he went back in the hospital, he made the statement to his mother, 'Why don't I just die?'"

"He was very quiet, conscientious, coachable," football Coach Earl Gorden at Lake View said of the 5-foot-10-inch, 155-pound player. "He was a fairly serious kid ... he wasn't very large. A good athlete. Quick."

The youth had practiced with the school's team for two weeks in late August.

Gorden said Frankie would have been Lake View's starting quarterback.

The leukemia was diagnosed in the spring of 1979 and Gorden said Frankie "didn't talk about it at all."

Gorden said he understood the absences from Kelyvn Park were due to treatment of the disease.

"He had to go for chemotherapy treatments," he said. "He looked as well as you or me."

Bird didn't feel any pressure last year

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Pressure? Larry Bird says he didn't really feel much last season.

After all, he was only the biggest hope the Boston Celtics had to rebound from their worst record in 29 years. And there were the big contract and big college reputation to live up to.

"Pressure? It'll take a lot more than that to get to the imperturbable do-it-all forward from Indiana State University."

"I think when Larry was a kid he got a dictionary and that word — pressure — wasn't in it," says Boston Coach Bill Fitch.

But now Bird must be reading a revised edition because the word does slip out on occasion.

"I didn't really have pressure on me (last season)," Bird said at the Celtics' Hellenic College training camp. "Maybe I have more this year."

That's not because he feels he must show that his first season in the National Basketball Association was no fluke.

"Rather, he said, it's because the only Celtics' player who had more assists than him last season may bypass the 1980-1981 season because of a contract dispute. Nate Archibald, the director of the offense, has not come to camp.

If Archibald doesn't play for the Celtics, the versatile Bird might have to carry an even bigger share of the load and function as a 6-foot-9 guard on occasion.

"We're in the process of losing a key guy, Tiny," said Bird. "It's hard to say how (his absence would affect the Celtics) ... The consequences may be great, may be nothing, but we'd like to have him back."

Archibald was a key to the Celtics' resurgence last season. He was second in the NBA in assists with an 8.4

average as Boston posted a 61-21 record, the league's best.

But Bird was a bigger factor. He led the team in rebounds with 10.4 per game and in points with a 21.3 average, and was the NBA Rookie of the Year. He also had more turnovers and fouls than any other Boston player.

"I think everybody's got weaknesses," he said. "If you don't shoot 100 percent you can improve. That's what the summer's for, to work on those things."

"Maybe you don't go to your right as well as your left. Maybe you force too many passes," Bird added. "I'm a split-second passer. I'll make turn-overs. The ball might slip from your hands."

Bird expects fewer distractions than last year.

"Last year was more hectic," he said. "I came into camp. I didn't have myself settled. I was neXavey wanted me for programs and talk shows. Now I don't have that as much."

NL cancels meeting on DH

NEW YORK (AP) — A National League meeting called to consider the designated hitter has been canceled, NL President Chub Feeney said Monday.

NL owners, who had defeated a DH proposal 5-4-3 last month, were set to discuss the matter again Wednesday in Chicago until St. Louis, San Diego and Philadelphia, the three teams asking for the meeting, withdrew their request. St. Louis and San Diego voted for the DH in the last meeting and Philadelphia abstained.

A simple majority of seven teams would be enough to carry the rule change.

Still scheduled for Wednesday is a joint major league meeting at which Commissioner Bowie Kuhn will continue a financial seminar, and an American League meeting to consider the sale of the Oakland A's.

Danielson shows leadership after daughter dies

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The story of Detroit Lions quarterback Gary Danielson provides almost a classic study in the effect a field leader can have on a National Football League team.

Danielson suffered a knee injury in the final exhibition game last year and missed the entire season. Without him, the Lions were a sorry team in 1979 with a 2-14 record.

The poor record was rewarded with the No. 1 pick in the college draft, and the selection of 1978 Heisman Trophy winner, Billy Sims, a running back from Oklahoma. But Coach Monte Clark knew his team's fortunes still depended on Danielson.

Sims has been sensational in the Lions' resurgent 1980 season — a shocking 41-20 victory over Los Angeles in the opening game and Sunday's solid 29-7 triumph over Green Bay.

However, it was Danielson who won the admiration of friends and foes alike with his gutsy performance against the Packers, playing only three days after the death of his 9-year-old daughter Kaity.

"I just felt that I had to play because so many people were depending on me," Danielson said. "The decision was easier because Kristie (his wife) is from a sports family herself, and she understood."

Danielson handled the Packers' blitz effectively and finished with 11 completions in 17 attempts for 246 yards. One completion was an 87-yard play in which the ball went about 10 yards through the air to Sims, who ran the remaining 77 with sheer speed.

"Billy Sims? He'll get a lot better," Danielson said. "I mean, he is just awesome, the way he runs with a football. What people ought to understand about him is how hard he works; he really wants to be a good player."

It was Clark's first coaching victory over the Packers, and he gave most of the credit to his quarterback even though rookie place-kicker Ed Murray booted five field goals.

"Danielson deserves a lot of credit," Clark said. "The job he did under his circumstances of the last few days was remarkable."

Danielson said the full impact of what he had done didn't really hit home until after the victory was secure and reserve quarterback Jeff Komlo was sent into the game.

"The only time I really felt bad, when tears came to my eyes, was when Jeff went in," Danielson said. "I started thinking; my wife is going home (to Indiana) for a few days and I'm going home to an empty house. I'm not looking forward to that."

"The toughest two days were when I found out about Kaity being sick and the next day when I decided to go to practice. I didn't really practice very well, my mind was going in a lot of different directions."

"But Friday night I went home and studied a little more. I decided if I expected my family to go on, I had to go on myself and I had to play."

Forrest Gregg says no reason to panic yet

CINCINNATI (AP) — Bengals Coach Forrest Gregg says there's no time for self-pity, even though winless Cincinnati hasn't reached the toughest part of its National Football League schedule yet.

"We play Pittsburgh next week and Houston the next Sunday, so we can't go crying in our beer," Gregg said after Sunday's 17-16 loss to the Miami Dolphins. "All we've got to look forward to is hard knocks."

Both Cincinnati losses resulted from breakdowns in the Bengals' special teams.

Against Tampa Bay in the season opener, a fumble by punter Pat McInally on the 5-yard line set up the Buccaneers' winning touchdown. Sunday, the Dolphins successfully retained possession with an onside kick following a safety, and later blocked a McInally punt to set up the winning field goal.

"The onside kick was the turning point," Gregg said. "It's something you preach to them all the time, to expect that every time you go out there."

Rookie linebacker Andrew Melon-tree was the Bengal defender who couldn't handle the surprise kick.

"I think I charged the ball too hard," Melon-tree said. "When I saw the ball was kicked short, the first thing that clicked in my mind was to go get it.

"I really wasn't expecting it. I was thinking about going back (to block). Then, somebody said 'onside' and I turned around and there the ball was. I went to the ball, but it got away. It was just a freak thing."

The Dolphins scored in four plays and added the extra point to trail 16-14, then got the ball back when Miami rookie Bill Barnett blocked McInally's punt.

"This time I can't say anything, because I don't know anything," said McInally, who freely blamed himself for botching a crucial snap in the loss a week earlier.

"I don't look at anything but the ball. I didn't see the guy (Barnett). All I saw was the ball."

Gregg, a Hall of Fame lineman who played 15 years in the NFL, said he couldn't remember a loss "that hurt any worse than this one."

"We played hard and tough all afternoon," Gregg said. "It came down to the nitty-gritty."

Linebacker Jim LeClair, who is third in seniority on the Bengals has seen the club go from the AFC playoffs in 1975 to two consecutive 4-12 seasons, said the Bengals played too well, overall, to get down on themselves.

"It's discouraging to lose like that, but we've got to suck it up and get ready for Pittsburgh," LeClair said. "We're still a good team."

Don Shula concerned

MIAMI (AP) — Although still savoring an amazing comeback victory, Coach Don Shula and the Miami Dolphins were concerned Monday with some lingering problems.

The Dolphins needed an onside kick after a safety, a pass reception that was fumbled but recovered for a touchdown, and a blocked punt to beat the Cincinnati Bengals 17-16 in the final minutes of their National Football League game Sunday.

"Oh, what a relief," Shula said. "We couldn't have afforded to go 0-2."

But Shula and his players know they can't count on such last-ditch heroics to win, and will need to generate some offense.

Sunday, their running game worked in the first half, but not in the second, and their passing game worked in the second half, but not in the first.

"We've got to get more balance in the offense," Shula said.

After two games, the Dolphins seem faced with a repeat of last year's revolving quarterback situation, with 14-year veteran Bob Griese and 7-year pro Don Strock virtually alternating.

Griese left the game under a shower of boos after being sacked for a 22-yard loss and throwing an interception on the next play in the second quarter. He hit only 3 of 8 passes for 36 yards.

Dupont traded to Quebec

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Defenseman Andre "Moose" Dupont, who helped the Philadelphia Flyers win successive Stanley Cups in the mid-1970s, has been traded to the Quebec Nordiques for "future considerations," the National Hockey League team announced Monday.

Dupont, 31, played eight seasons with the Flyers, collecting 55 goals, 135 assists and accumulating more than 1,800 penalty minutes — a club career record.

"If he was six years younger, and I was a general manager, he'd be one of the first guys I'd go after for my team," said Joe Watson, a Flyers' scout. "There was no more than what you could ask from a guy than what he gave."

Dupont said he was surprised by the trade, but he admitted that he had been warned of the possibility of a deal by the Flyers' front office.

"I knew, but I'm still in a bit of a shock," he said.

Trojans won't muscle their way into Rose Bowl

The Los Angeles Times

For the first time since John McKay began assembling championship teams at USC in the early '60s, other conference schools won't have to worry about the Trojans muscling their way into the Rose Bowl.

USC, UCLA, Arizona State, Oregon and Oregon State are ineligible to compete for the 1980 league title or play in any bowl because of penalties imposed by the Pacific 10 for violations of various academic rules.

What this ruling did was elevate the strong outsiders — Stanford, Washington and possibly California — to the role of favorites to win the conference title and play in the Rose Bowl.

In a preseason poll of Pac 10 coaches USC was an almost overwhelming choice to top the league standings. Stanford, Washington and California were the 2nd, 3rd and 4th choices, with UCLA 5th, Oregon 6th, Arizona State 7th and Oregon State 10th and last.

Pacific 10 writers picked the teams to finish in exactly the same order, placing USC first for the 16th straight year. They've been wrong only five times.

USC has been in the Rose Bowl 10 of the past 14 years. In the '70s only Stanford, UCLA and Washington played in the Rose Bowl when USC wasn't there. The Cardinals represented the conference in 1971 and 1972, UCLA in 1976 and Washington in 1978.

Although the penalized schools' games will count in the standings this season, in effect there are two conferences: the Pac-5, comprised of the eligible schools, Stanford, Washington, California, Arizona and Washington State, and the sub-Pac, USC, UCLA, Arizona State, Oregon and Oregon State.

So which school has the best chance of going to the Rose Bowl? John Robinson, the Trojan coach, says Stanford, Washington and California, the new favorites, are all on the come.

By this he means they are strong in some areas, doubtful in others (like his own team) but, if they minimize their weaknesses, all could be in the race until the end.

Stanford, as usual, will have a sophisticated offense with the return of halfback Darrin Nelson, who sat out the 1980 season with an injury, and the passing combination of quarterback John Elway and wide receiver Ken Margerum. The new coach, Paul Wiggin, has 23 years of professional experience as a player and coach including 2 1/2 years as head coach with the Kansas City Chiefs.

What is traditional about Stanford is that it is capable of beating USC and just as capable of losing to Oregon State.

Washington has a proven college coach, Don James, and a promising offense led by quarterback Tom Flick. But James returns only two defense starters.

California has a Heisman Trophy candidate in quarterback Rich Campbell and plenty of quality receivers. But Cal may not have much of a running game and some holes need to be filled on defense.

Even Washington State, which hasn't been to the Rose Bowl since 1931, figures it's in this race. "We have fantasies, too, just like everybody else," says Coach Jim Walden, "and we fantasize winning the Rose Bowl."

Arizona has strengths including running back Hubert Oliver, a 1,000-yard rusher last season. But former Tulane Coach Larry Smith, replacing ousted Tony Mason, must find an adequate replacement for graduated quarterback Jim Krohn.

All of the Pac-5 teams have some sort of a chance at the Rose Bowl and the schedule may be a factor.

Washington doesn't play California or UCLA and, if the Rose Bowl representative is decided by a tie-breaking procedure of most points for a conference win (4) or a nonconference win (3), the Huskies are in pretty good shape. They can probably count on 9 points with such nonconference opponents as Air Force, Northwestern and Navy.

After a conference opener with Oregon Saturday at Eugene, Stanford meets Tulane and Boston College and should win. But not Sept. 27 unless you think that the Cardinals can beat Oklahoma at Norman.

Washington State has one of its easier nonconference schedules. Moreover, the Cougars don't play USC or UCLA and get Stanford at home. WSU can be troublesome at Pullman. It upset UCLA there last year.

Arizona's tough schedule includes consecutive games with Iowa, USC, Washington State, Notre Dame, UCLA and Washington.

Of course, the sub-Pac teams, spoilers now, will have a lot to say about who eventually wins the title. Key games among Pac-5 members are Washington-Stanford at Palo Alto Oct. 18 and Stanford-California at Berkeley Nov. 22.

There has been talk that the Pac-5 might become the Pac-3 if the conference or NCAA penalizes California or Arizona.

It has been reported that Chuck Muncie, a former California star running back now with the New Orleans Saints, didn't attend classes when he was at Cal.

The NCAA is investigating some Arizona football players who reportedly accepted jobs with the Tucson recreation department and were paid while not working.

Any Cal or Arizona sanctions aren't expected to affect the schools this season.

What bothers some coaches, including James, is that they don't want to be stager in the Rose Bowl with a 6-5 record while USC is smirking out of it with an 11-0 or 10-1 mark.

"We feel the team that represents the league would like to be the bona fide champion," James said. "We don't want to go down to Pasadena as the backed-in, shaded champion."

Bailey given release

HOUSTON (AP) — Veteran guard Gus Bailey was released Tuesday by the Houston Rockets, reducing the National Basketball Association team's roster to 16 players, officials announced.

Bailey, 31, was a 5-year NBA veteran.

A club spokesman also said rookie forward Lee Johnson, of East Texas State, missed the Rockets fourth day of workouts at Houston Baptist University to have a wisdom tooth extracted.

Sputtering Pirates return

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The sputtering Pittsburgh Pirates are back in town after a bruising road trip. But they're likely to get little respite when they open against Philadelphia Tuesday.

The Phillies, who won two games from the Pirates early last week, are hot on the trail of East Division-leading Montreal.

While they're definitely down, no one's counting the Pirates out yet.

OPEC 'settles' internal disputes

By MURRAY SEEGER
The Los Angeles Times

VIENNA, Austria — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries settled two internal disputes and started negotiations to produce a new long-term economic strategy for its 13 member countries Monday.

In an unannounced preparatory meeting, the OPEC members disposed of two moves by Iran, which recently accused the two leading oil producers, Saudi Arabia and Iraq, of aiding "Western imperialism" by maintaining high production schedules during a period of oil surplus.

The Iranians objected to making an Iraqi the meeting chairman, and also asked that the members discuss price and production levels before considering the proposed blueprint for long-range planning.

The long-term strategy includes both a formula for regular, automatic price increases and the first, tacit OPEC agreement to coordinate production levels. The program also includes proposals for negotiating with the industrial world to obtain trade and development concessions for OPEC and other less developed countries.

To get past the first hurdles at this meeting, the ministers decided to name Mohamed Benyahia, foreign minister from Algeria, as meeting Chairman because Algeria currently occupies the OPEC presidency.

An Iraqi will take over for a subsequent session planned before OPEC holds a 20th anniversary summit meeting of its heads of state in Baghdad, the capital of Iraq, in early November.

The second proposal was brushed aside because the other members have accepted the plan of discussing current prices and production levels only after making progress on the long-term program.

Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi oil minister and chairman of the planning committee, had suggested that his country would be willing to raise its own prices, now the lowest in OPEC, closer to what the others charge in return for agreement to a permanent pricing system.

At the present time, Saudi Arabia is producing 9.5 million barrels a day of OPEC's total production of more than 27 million, and charges $28 a barrel for it.

The other OPEC producers charge substantially more so that the average for all 13 countries is about $31.50 a barrel.

If they win approval of the long-term program, the Saudis are expected to raise their price to $32 a barrel over the next six months, while the other OPEC members stand firm and perhaps reduce some of the extra special charges they are now collecting.

That 14 percent rise by Saudi Arabia would raise the average OPEC price by 5 percent.

Three members, Algeria, Libya and Iran, have objected to the pricing section of the proposed long-term program.

In setting an index for future oil price rises, the Yamani committee suggested using a measure to include the inflation rates of the industrial world, an exchange rate factor based on the combined value of 12 major currencies, and the real economic growth recorded by the industrial countries' groups in the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development.

The formula would make sure that the price of oil in the next decade would go up faster than other world prices and nearly double by 1990. Oil buyers, however, would be able to plan on their future costs.

For their part, the OPEC members, according to the draft plan, offer "an orderly balance between supply and demand in the long term, taking into account the production policies of the member countries."

The program suggests that production would be cut during periods of excess supply, and prices restrained at times of shortages.

In that way Arabia would for the first time accept joint planning on production, but also insist on price restraint by the more radical OPEC members.

Yamani and Libya, two of the OPEC hawks, opposed Yamani's plan because they wanted oil price indexed to the cost of their imports.

1.2 wildcat projects staked in Permian Basin counties

Twelve more wildcat operations have been announced in Permian Basin counties, nine in West Texas and three in New Mexico.
