Council postpones action on mediation resolution

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.N. Security Council postponed action Saturday night on a resolution aimed at mediating an end to the Iran-Iraq conflict.

The postponement of formal Security Council action was viewed variously here as damaging the credibility of the council or as necessary to provide more time for an Islamic peace initiative led by Pakistan's President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq.

"We should have met already last Monday," a U.N. official commented grimly.

But an Asian diplomat, fearing a resolution might hamper Zia's goodwill mission to Iran and Iraq, told a reporter the 40-nation Islamic group here favored postponement of council action.

"The adoption of a resolution, no matter how innocuous, would be ill-timed today," the diplomat said.

The postponement was assailed as irrational by Donald F. McHenry, chief U.S. delegate to the United Nations. He voiced suspicion the it was dictated by military considerations and not just diplomacy.

"This is one I don't understand," McHenry told newsmen after the council ended eight hours of consultations. "I do understand if I were playing a game where you try to connect diplomacy with military strategy."

A formal Council session was scheduled for 3 p.m. Sunday. But McHenry and other ambassadors said they were not certain the peace-keeping body would vote even then on a Norwegian-sponsored resolution calling on Iran and Iraq to accept mediation of their violent dispute.

As the 15-member council discussed the conflict, a raucous crowd of about 300 Iranians gathered a city block away to demonstrate against the Iraqi invasion of their homeland and any possible U.S. intervention.

Five-month-old Italian coalition government falls

ROME (AP) — Premier Francesco Cossiga's five-month-old coalition government, under sharp fire from labor and the powerful Communist Party, resigned Saturday after parliament rejected its key economic program by one vote.

The fall of Cossiga's pro-Washington government raised the prospect of a long political crisis in NATO-member Italy at a time of mounting union unrest over plans by auto-maker Fiat to fire 14,000 workers because of slumping car sales.

After the government fell, however, Fiat announced it will hold off plans to dismiss workers for three months to avoid fueling political and social tensions. Communist leader Enrico Berlinguer had promised his party's "moral and material support" if Fiat workers decided to occupy the plants of Italy's largest private employer.

Cossiga submitted the resignation of the coalition of his Christian Democrats, Socialists and Republicans after the Chamber of Deputies, the lower house, voted down the economic package 298-297 in a secret ballot. Moments earlier he won a confidence vote in an open ballot by an overwhelming margin, 329-264, in the 630-seat chamber.

"A dark page in the history of the Italian parliament was written today," declared Claudio Signorile, deputy secretary of the Socialist Party. "There are no precedents of a government winning a vote of confidence and 10 minutes later being beaten on a provision it considered so important."

The Communists, Italy's second largest party after the Christian Democrats, led the fight against the economic program which called for increases in sales taxes on certain products and measures to transfer some heavy social costs from industry to the state.

Supported by the far-right Italian Social Movement and leftist Radicals, the Communists proposed hundreds of amendments that effectively blocked discussion of the program itself.

Political analysts said Cossiga, who has agreed to stay on in a caretaker capacity, would likely be asked to succeed himself. But negotiations for a new government could take weeks, particularly if Socialist leader Bettino Craxi renews his bid to become premier himself.

When the 52-year-old Cossiga, a Sardinian and distant cousin of Communist leader Berlinguer, formed Italy's 39th post-war government Aug. 4 it appeared the country was finally headed for a period of political stability. The government had a majority of 346 in the 630-seat lower house, with a revival after six years of the center-left coalition that governed Italy for a decade.

However, the secret vote appeared to reflect defections by some of the 252 Christian Democrats in the chamber who opposed the center left alliance.

The Christian Democrats, the country's dominant party, re-affirmed earlier this year their opposition to Communist participation in government and any change in this stance is viewed as highly unlikely at the present time. The United States has expressed concern over a Communist role in the government of a NATO ally, saying it would like to see the Communist influence in any Western European government lessened.

Cossiga has supported such NATO initiatives as the stationing of advanced nuclear missiles in Italy. On Friday, Cossiga's office said Italy was willing to participate in consultations asked by U.S. President Carter over the situation in the Persian Gulf.

Economy: Good or bad?

Economic discussions fill the air. From the highest councils in Washington to the corner drug stores, Americans are expressing uncommon concern over the peek-a-boo performance of what used to be known as prosperity.

week. There, the Commerce Department chief economist, Ms. Courtney Slater, announced that in her opinion the recession actually ended in July and that recovery may be underway.

Pleasantly surprised, I turned to my friend and colleague, Donald I. Rogers, economics editor of The Hearst Newspapers, and asked him if Ms. Slater was correct.

He said he couldn't imagine that she was, but that he would check the sentiments of colleagues. The response was more negative than hopeful. (See EDITOR'S REPORT, Page 4A)

Democrats elect state party chairman

Vow to regain governorship evident

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Democrats elected Sherman attorney Bob Slagle as state party chairman in a raucous floor vote indicative of the party's vow to recapture the governor's mansion.

Slagle won 2,194 to 1,487 in a roll call vote over El Paso State Rep. Luther Jones at the State Democratic Convention. Travis County Commissioner David Samuelson got 57 votes.

The vote came after a tumultuous hour of cheering, chanting and booing as the three candidates were nominated for the powerful political office.

Numerous speakers pointed out it was the first time in memory that Democrats have chosen their state party chairman in an open convention. Previously, the speaker was chosen by the Texas governor, who is titular head of the party, or the gubernatorial nominee.

However, Democrats lost the governorship in 1978 when Bill Clements became the first GOP Texas governor in this century.

Deralyn Davis of Fort Worth, current party vice chairman easily won re-election over Margaret Gomez of Austin by 2,183 to 1,320. Pic Rivers of Houston, president of the Texas Federated Democratic Women's Clubs, got 127 votes.

Jones had been recommended 20-11 by a convention committee, but Slagle was brought to the floor on a minority vote. Samuelson had been nominated from the floor.

"Now let us move forward," a beaming Slagle said after his election. "Let us keep one thing in mind: Beat the Republicans."

Earlier top Democratic strategist Bob Strauss told group that President Carter may be down 50 to 75 electoral votes now "but I think we can get him home if we work."

"We are doing a lot of measuring," Strauss told the fund-raising breakfast, "and by ever measure we have made Ronald Reagan fails to meet the threshold of acceptability for president from the people of this country."

Strauss ran down a list of the states giving his idea of Carter's prospects. "We will carry New York," he said. "Pennsylvania looks good. We are some behind in Ohio. We can win Illinois. Missouri looks good. Michigan looks pretty good. We are behind in California but we are making a big effort and can win. The South looks good but our main trouble is in the Southwest."

"Generally speaking, is it pretty close to a dead heat now. Carter may be down 50 to 75 electoral votes but I think we can get him home if we work," he said.

The drizzle and rain of Saturday morning had volunteers jumping at St. Ann's Family Fair, trying to set up booths in the wet and cold. Garwood decision expected

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — A ruling is expected Monday on whether Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood will undergo additional psychiatric testing before his court-martial begins.

Col. R.E. Switzer, presiding military judge at the court-martial, said last week it he may ask for testimony on Garwood's mental health before making the ruling on the prosecution's request for more tests.

The results of earlier examinations by Navy physicians were not revealed during a pre-trial hearing Thursday.

Garwood is charged with desertion and collaboration with the enemy during 14 years in Vietnam. He returned to this country in March 1979.

Maj. Werner Hellmer, one of the prosecutors, told Switzer that the government wants the additional psychiatric evaluation since the prosecution does not know what tests were administered to Garwood by the Navy panel.

Call for Cambodia talks predicted

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Asian sources predicted here Saturday the U.N. General Assembly in its current session would call for an international conference early next year to bring peace and a political settlement to Cambodia.

The well placed sources, speaking privately, added, however, they did not believe the conference would take place because they expected Vietnam would refuse to attend.

Vietnamese troops took over Phnom Penh, the capital of Cambodia, in January 1979, chased out the Pol Pot Cambodian government and installed the Heng Samrin Cambodian government in its place. The troops remain, resisting the guerrilla war Pol Pot is waging from the countryside. A Pol Pot delegation retains Cambodia's U.N. seat.

The situation in Cambodia is on the assembly's agenda as a carry-over from last fall's session, where the subject was raised by Thailand, Singapore, Malaysia, Indonesia and the Philippines — the members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations.

A resolution has been circulated under the sponsorship of those five plus Japan, Australia, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea, Fiji, Pakistan, Nepal and the Comoro Islands.

The pending proposal goes farther than the resolution the assembly adopted last year calling for the immediate withdrawal of all foreign troops from Cambodia.

The new resolution, using the U.N. name for Cambodia, would have the assembly decide "to convene early in 1981 an international conference on Kampuchea which should involve the participation of all conflicting parties in Kampuchea and others concerned

Titan silo neighbors appear least concerned at accidents

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

The people who live near the Titan II missiles in Kansas and Arizona, like their counterparts in Arkansas, know little about the atomic weapons that moved in next door 17 years ago.

And some were actually heartened when they learned that the Titan II explosion near Damascus, Ark., last week hadn't consumed the surrounding farmland.

"It made me feel quite a bit better," said Shirley Moore, whose family has been evacuated twice in the past two years during missile accidents near Potwin, Kan.

"Now we've seen that it can blow up and not destroy anything outside the missile complex. And knowing the warhead was blown off and didn't detonate makes me feel quite a bit better" about living near a Titan II, she said.

Air Force officials have declined to confirm officially that the 24-megaton atomic warhead that sits atop the Titan II missile was knocked into a nearby pasture by the Arkansas blast.

For most of the past 17 years, the people who coexist with America's most deadly ICBM have largely ignored the underground missiles. The only cause for concern was a freak accident in 1965 near Searcy, Ark., where 53 members of a civilian maintenance crew were killed when a worker accidentally pointed a blowtorch at a fuel tank.

In 1978, however, a propellant leak at the silo near Rock, Kan., killed two airmen and injured 29, and the cloud of toxic gas from the leak forced the evacuation of 400 area residents.

The incident prompted calls from Kansas congressmen and senators for investigations.

But area residents and local Civil Defense and law enforcement personnel say they are told little about the missile — until there is an emergency. Mrs. Moore says she would like to know more about what's happening at the silo a half-mile from her home.

"But once I think about it, I understand they (the Air Force) can't tell you," she added. "And that's fine, just so long as it doesn't endanger those of us who live around them. National security is important, but we're important, too."

Officials in Arkansas have complained that they had difficulty getting information about the seriousness of the explosion near Damascus. They have drawn up a list of demands dealing with communications operations during an emergency.

"There was a lot of confusion," said Faulkner (Ark.) County Sheriff Charles Castleberry. "Nobody knew what to do. All I was interested in was getting the people out and keeping them out until it was safe."

Greenbrier, Ark., Mayor Eddie Garrett echoed Mrs. Moore. "I know they can't give out any secret stuff, any classified material. But they could have let us know something."

The country's 54 Titan missiles are evenly distributed around three cities — Little Rock, Ark., Wichita, Kan., and Tucson, Ariz.

Spokesmen at McConnell Air Force

Base, which oversees the Wichita-area missiles, and Davis Monthan Air Force Base, which oversees the Tucson-area missiles, say no local authorities have sought assurances about Titan safety since the Arkansas incident, which killed one Air Force crewman and injured 21 others.

However, Arizona's director of emergency services, Charles Ott, said he called the Pentagon after the Damascus incident.

"I've contacted the Pentagon and the assurance is there," Ott said. "I wanted to find out whether it was a fact that they were going to start tightening this up."

Propellant leaks at Tucson-area silos have been reported three times in the past four years. One airman was injured in such an incident, but there have been no evacuations in Arizona.

Richard Casanova, emergency services director for Pima County, which includes Tucson, said the county is not routinely informed of such leaks.

"If it's contained and they handle it, nothing's going to happen," he said.

"We'd like to feel that they (the missiles) are safe, but all we can go on is what they (the Air Force) tell us."

"I think if there is a problem, we ought to know what they're doing about it. If these silos and missiles really are unsafe and can't be repaired, we should know that."

Both McConnell and Davis Monthan air bases have plans that call for notifying county emergency services officials in case of an emergency at one of the missile sites.

In Arizona, the area surrounding the silos is mostly desert and "we don't have thousands of people at risk," Casanova said.

In Kansas, Air Force and civil defense and local officials are working up evacuation lists, which will help local authorities move more swiftly to clear residents from the sparsely populated areas around missile sites. In the past, some area residents have been overlooked because they were working in their fields when authorities stopped by.

Butler County Sheriff Dave Williams, whose county includes the Po-twin missile site and five others, said the Air Force assured him recently that it would try to keep him informed on the status of the missiles.

"But we haven't heard anything," he said. "We know nothing about the missiles. We don't know what's hazardous. We're concerned about them. But we're going to have to rely on the Air Force to take care of the problems and we'll help where we can."

Even though they are told little, many residents of these rural areas aren't too concerned about their Titan neighbor.

"I'm no more afraid of living here than of getting out in a car on the highway," said Doris Woner, who lives a quarter-mile from the Rock silo. "I can sympathize with the people in Arkansas, but we're not going to move."

There are others around Rock who may feel differently. More than 30 lawsuits seeking in excess of $60 million have been filed in connection with the 1978 Rock mishap.

Radio broadcast is for the birds

CHICAGO (AP) — Shotguns, pots, pans and fire hoses didn't work. So the townspeople of Hoopston are turning to the air waves to try to scare away thousands of starlings fouling their community.

The bird battle in the small east-central Illinois town, about 75 miles south of Chicago, is counting on WHPO, the local radio station. A tape of a dying starling was being broadcast a few times over the weekend in hopes of putting the fowls to flight.

Dave Stawick, WHPO news director, said the people in the community of about 6,000 can then perch their radios outside, in hopes of giving the birds the jitters and running them out of town.

"We have our doubts it's going to work," Stawick said. "But it's worth a try."

The frustrated people of Hoopston have been trying on their own for the past week, but with little success.

Last week, volunteers tried to shoot the birds down, but they severed cable television lines and blacked out reception for 700 people.

"We put half the town down," said Mayor Earl Smock.

On Thursday night, about 300 people marched from block to block, banging pots and pans, trying to raise a din and scare the birds out of their trees. The fire department also stepped in, dousing them with their hoses.

But "the timing could have been off," Smock said, with the people showing up before the birds.

"The birds are smarter than the people," says Herb Schoufler, a planning commission member.

"If you make noise, they realize nothing's going to happen," he said. "You have to do something to get their attention and shooting gets their attention."

Smock also said that one night of noise will not free the town of the nuisance birds. "You're not going to have much success by doing it just one evening," he said.

The starling population is not new to Hoopston. The birds, Smock said, have been nesting in the town for years and he estimates as many as 60,000 starlings may be flocking to the town.

"Their droppings are unbelievable," Schoufler said. "The sidewalks and trees are totally covered. You don't leave a car out... It covers virtually everything."

But despite the recent uproar, Smock thinks news accounts of the battle are blowing the story out of proportion. Reporters have called him from as far away as Ontario and California.

"Someone saw a chance for a story," Smock said. When 300 people gathered, he added, about half were kids and another 20 percent were news reporters.

"With all the notoriety with this, nationally, if there was an answer to the starling (problem), we'd have people sitting on the doorstep," Smock said. "But we have not had anyone come here."

Two charged in fencing operation

ODESSA — Two Odessa men have been charged in connection with a fencing operation, which had been the object of a plainclothes investigation by two Odessa police detectives.

According to a police spokesman, Manuel Fuentes and Jay Harges had been working undercover in connection with the fencing operation. Late Friday, Frank O. Cortez Jr. and Thomas C. Flores were arrested. The two officers also recovered about $2,000 in stolen merchandise, said the spokesman.

Saturday's high and low were only three degrees apart at 59 and 36. The record high for Saturday is 102 degrees set in 1977. The record low is 41 set in 1936.

During a 24-hour period ending at 7 p.m. Saturday night the National Weather Service recorded .88 inch of rain, bringing the month's total to 7.25 inches and the year's total to 13.26. This is near Midland's annual rainfall of 14.24 inches.

All area towns reported rain, with amounts ranging from two to four inches Saturday.

Bond for Cortez and Flores has been set at $20,000 each.

ful. Not many agreed.

What follows is a memo from him:

• "With due respect to Ms. Slater, July figures, released in August, were a bit more encouraging. They showed that employment is increasing, unemployment seems to be declining slowly, and industrial production — after months of falling — is up by nearly 1 percent, after steady losses of 4 and 5 percent.

"In addition, personal income for all Americans rose 0.8 percent in August. This would provide every man, woman and child in the U.S. with $8,095, compared with $8,048 the month before.

"There is, however, a big BUT.

"Interest rates are on the rise again, making it costlier to borrow money and impossible for most people to buy a home.

"Wholesale prices have surged ahead in recent months by a startling 17 percent, heaping inflation atop inflation.

"The cost of feeding a family of four in New York City exceeded $100 per week last week. Utilities and rent bills, of course, are always extra.

"The price index of the so-called crude goods — from mines and farms — has soared and will go higher as the effect of the summer's drought is felt on the feed crops. Meat prices can only go higher.

"The condition of the U.S. dollar has frightened foreign investors and banks that the price of gold — considered a hedge — is now over $700 per ounce.

"Let us not forget that this recession was created to combat inflation. It has failed miserably to do what it was intended to do.

"The nation's harvest of this experiment is lost jobs, lost income, lost production and lost confidence at home and in the world community.

"The battle against inflation is being lost. It does us no good whatsoever to say that the recovery is underway, for what we have done is to treat the symptoms of a terrible disease and have not cured the infection.

"The most highly-prepared economists figure that by year's end, the consumer price index will be 12 per-

Life in Tehran normal, despite many changes

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Despite power cuts, a ban on driving and the sound of distant nighttime gunfire, city life in Tehran is carrying on and close to normal, a resident said via telephone Saturday.

"The restaurants are open. It's quite normal during the day," the resident said.

The resident said offices, shops, elementary and high schools are open but universities are shut. There is a ban on driving private cars, and a not-so-strictly observed curfew has most citizens off the streets by 7 p.m. Food is plentiful and "morale is good," he said.

"We hear the shooting at night. We can't tell where it is from," he added.

The government of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini banned most Western news reporters long before the hostilities with Iraq erupted. Telephone callers lucky enough to get through and the monitoring of Tehran radio are the only ways to observe what the war is doing to the day-to-day lives of Iran's people.

Broadcasts by Tehran radio monitored here Saturday provided the following picture of life during the war.

—The streets are safe and cab drivers continue working.

—Teenagers are enlisting to join the war against Iraq, and Tehran pharmacists are donating drugs to the injured of the western provinces.

—Iranian citizens have been asking the government for permission to stage street demonstrations against Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and his minority Baathist party. The government rejected the requests on grounds large gatherings are unsafe.

—Tehran residents tried to flock to the city's airport and greet returning Iranian fighter pilots by slaughtering sheep, which is a Moslem gesture of overwhelming joy.

Iraqi forces capture vital oil center

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq claimed its forces captured a vital Iranian oil center today and also launched air strikes at Iran's oil heartland. Iranian jets attacked Baghdad twice on the sixth day of the war.

Baghdad radio said Iraqi forces had captured the city of Ahwaz, capital of Iran's Khuzestan Province, 70 miles northeast of Abadan. Capture of Ahwaz, if true, would mean that Iraqi troops had advanced more than 50 miles into Iran and were 330 miles southwest of Tehran, the Iranian capital.

Baghdad radio said the army was in Ahwaz "and your Arab brothers there are now under our protection," adding: "Our armies have now achieved the goals set by their commanders and all that is needed now is to destroy what is left of the enemy resistance and the achievement of other goals."

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime rejected diplomatic efforts to end the bloodshed between the two Persian Gulf giants. But Iran's president met in Tehran with President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq of Pakistan, heading a "goodwill" mission from Islamic nations, the Iranian news agency said.

There was no confirmation of the claim, although the Iranian news agency had reported heavy casualties from Iraqi air attacks on the city. It said two Iraqi jets trying to attack Hamadan, 350 miles to the north, were shot down.

Iraq claimed the fall of the important Iranian refinery city of Abadan was imminent and said its tanks and troops had reached the outskirts Dezful, 70 miles north of Ahwaz.

Iran's jets attacked southeast Baghdad twice today — once in the morning and again in the afternoon. Witnesses said they believed the strikes were aimed at the Rashid military base. "There were flashes on the fringes of the city accompanied by loud explosions. The Iraqis responded with anti-aircraft fire," one witness said.

Tehran radio reported, meanwhile, that Iranian fighters destroyed the military airport of the northern Iraqi city of Kirkuk. The broadcast, quoting a communique from Iran's military command, said the area's communications center was also destroyed.

But the heaviest fighting was concentrated 600 miles southeast of Baghdad, in the area of Basra and Abadan, the key Iraqi and Iranian oil centers on either side of the disputed Shatt al-Arab estuary that divides the two Persian Gulf enemies.

Pillars of smoke rose from the burning Iranian oil installation at Abadan. But reporters who reached the Iraqi side of the Shatt al-Arab said the sound of Iranian artillery shells pounding the Basra area was deafening and that oil installations on both sides of the waterway were afire.

Iran reported "very heavy" civilian casualties in the oil port of Khorramshahr, and conceded part of the nearby Abadan refinery was burning and out of operation. But it denied Khorramshahr had fallen, as the Iraqis claimed Thursday, and said the city's defenders were fighting in the streets and from rooftops.

Iraq said its MiGs attacked Tehran and a nearby oil installation Friday in retaliation for repeated Iranian air strikes on "economic and civilian targets" in Iraq. But Iran denied the oil refinery was attacked and said it was operating "at full capacity."

The Iraqi government, conceding that Iranian air raids had damaged Iraq's oil export capacity of 2.9 million barrels daily, halted all oil exports, including oil piped to the Mediterranean.

Two policemen injured during high-speed chase

Two Midland police officers were injured in a high-speed pursuit early Saturday morning when their car catapulted over a pile of dirt and struck the median in the Interstate Highway 20 service road near Terrell Street.

The driver of the car being pursued also was injured and was listed in satisfactory condition Saturday night in Midland Memorial Hospital. Unofficial reports said the man may have suffered a broken back.

According to reports, Officers David McNair and Ed Longoria stopped a vehicle on a traffic violation near Terrell Street and Florida Avenue about 2:47 a.m. Saturday. Suddenly, the car took off and reached speeds of about 100 mph, the two officers reported.

drugs, after officers found an unidentified bottle of pills in the car, according to the police report. He also has been arrested on charges of attempting to evade and on a felony warrant.

Shortly after 10 p.m. Love was sent to a disturbance at 1205 W. Wall No. E.2. Although reports are not complete, somehow he became involved in the fracas and was injured, a police spokesman said. Christine Peterson, 17, was taken into custody in connection with the incident.

Bond was set for her Friday night, but the amount was unknown, the spokesman said.

Police roundup

They were pursuing the vehicle south on Terrell when it struck a large pile of dirt, catapulted over and cleared the median on the I-20 service road. The car was totaled, according to police reports.

The police car also jumped the pile of dirt, but struck the median. That car also was totaled.

Both officers and the other driver were taken to Midland Memorial Hospital emergency room. One of the officers received a broken nose. Both were treated for cuts and bruises and released.

The man was arrested, though he remains in Midland Memorial, on charges of possession of dangerous

Three televisions valued at $1,085.60 were reported missing from John's Swap Shop 600 E. Florida Ave., Saturday.

A store employee told police that he left the store about 6 p.m. Friday. When he returned at 9:15 a.m. Saturday, he found the front door unlocked and two color televisions and a black and white television missing.

A Midland woman was taken to Midland Memorial emergency room after striking her head on the dash of her car in a two-vehicle collision late Saturday night. Her injuries were reported to be relatively minor.

The collision occurred about 10 p.m. Saturday night in the 300 block of West Wall Avenue. No further details were available late Saturday.

The accident was investigated by Trooper John Hunt of Odessa.

Truck-pickup mishap kills one

STANTON — A collision Saturday afternoon between a pickup and a semi-truck tractor-trailer resulted in the death of a Southland woman. Her husband was listed in critical condition Saturday night at Midland Memorial Hospital, according to a hospital spokesman.

A Department of Public Safety spokesman said the semi-truck tractor-trailer, driven by Jack William Smith of Tucumcari, N.M., was eastbound on State Highway 178 approaching the intersection with State Highway 137 at 2:30 p.m.

The pickup driven by Pedro Alvarez Flores, 56, of Southland was northbound. The two vehicles collided at the intersection, the pickup stuck to the front of the semi-truck tractor trailer and the two vehicles slid 501 feet into a field on the north side of the intersection, according to the DPS.

Pacantha Ortiz Flores, a passenger in the pickup, was pronounced dead at the scene by Martin County Peace Justice S.E. Kennedy. Her body was taken to Gilbreath Funeral Home in Stanton.

Her husband, Pedro Flores, was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital with massive head injuries. He was undergoing surgery late Saturday night.

Quakers' testimony is good deeds

By KAY CRITES
Staff Writer

Mention the word Quakers, and nine out of 10 people will think of oats and the Quaker pictured on the box.

"I know," laughed Shannon Smith, one of Midland's Quakers, people "think we look like the man on the Quaker Oats box."

Shannon, and her husband Allen, are two of Midland's approximately 10 to 20 practicing Quakers — or Friends, as they call themselves.

Although the clothing may have changed over the centuries, the old traditions of community involvement and plain speaking continue.

That sometimes makes Friends unpopular — not an unfamiliar position. One hundred years before the Emancipation Proclamation Quakers freed their slaves and urged others to do the same. They were also extremely active in the Underground Railroad. In West Texas they take an unpopular stand against weapons.

"IT'S AN UNPOPULAR stand in West Texas because it's a basic constitutional belief — the right to bear arms — out here where people are ready and willing to fight at the tip of a hat," she said.

"To strike out against another man," added Peter Clark, explaining the Quakers' belief, "is to strike out against God."

The goal is a generation of children "with the tools to deal with their feelings of aggression and their anger" and eventually a world of peace.

To this end, each year Friends petition Congress for a Peace College as a foil to the War College — a college where politicians and military officers can go to learn the tools of peace.

Midland's meeting consists of eight or nine adults from Midland and surrounding towns and the Cambodian family sponsored by the Quakers. A second Cambodian family is on its way to Midland and will come under arm of the Quakers.

"WE'RE ALMOST outnumbered by the people we are supposed to be sponsoring," laughed Mrs. Smith.

Two of Midland's Friends are birthright Quakers, those born into Quaker families. The others are converts or potential converts.

Shannon and her husband Allen are converts, she becoming interested in the religion while in college. Peter Clark is one of the two birthright Quakers.

"Friends were everywhere on campus, but you never knew Friends were doing the work. So I was kind of drawn to this and it was three years before I found out these people all had something in common. They were all Friends. I had never heard them speak of their religion.

"I was drawn to Friends because as a group they are quiet and they don't do the evangelical work the other groups do. Friends just don't care to increase their membership that way."

"My father said, 'so you're a Quaker. Well, you'd better not be like the only Quaker I know.' — Richard Nixon. But he wasn't a practicing Quaker," she said.

Clark added, "Their (Friends') testimony is by what they do rather than what they say. We do a large amount of community work because we like to help other people."

Allen Smith joined the meeting, the Quaker version of "church," because it was the only religious group in the United States that used silent meditation in their worship.

"I GOT INTERESTED in Eastern philosophies, cultures and silent meditation in college, and the only church in the United States where you can go and worship in silence is the Quaker church," he explained.

Quakerism began in England about 1650 in the aftermath of the Protestant Reformation. The name "Quaker" was the result of a nickname given to Children of Light or Friends of Truth, as they called themselves, since they supposedly shook or quaked with religious zeal.

The religion, started by George Fox, is founded on the immediacy of Christ.

"I feel that Quakerism is very fundamental," Clark said, "But not Biblically fundamental. The Bible may actually interfere with communication with God because of questions or ambiguous wording in the Bible.

"Jesus is a prophet of God that can be used. The Bible is a tool that can be used. I don't — and many Quakers don't — feel that the Bible is God's word. I get appalled at the closed-mindedness of the people who are Biblically fundamental," he said.

QUAKERS OR Friends have traditionally stressed the practical aspects of life. Plain dress, plain speech and honesty.

"Quakers always stressed...everything but music and art because they felt like that was a frivolity for a long time," Mrs. Smith said.

"Traditionally," Clark added, "Quakers dressed in plain clothes and stayed away from music and art because they felt they were distractions. Same thing with ornate churches. They felt people got caught up in other things and forgot what they were supposed to be doing, which is communication with God."

"John Greenleaf Whittier," interposed Mrs. Smith, "is the only poet I know who was a Friend."

Midland's meeting has been in existence for about five years, and in the old tradition is a silent meeting.

"It's not enforced silence," Mrs. Smith said, "if someone feels the need to speak they are free to do so."

"In the purest sense," added Clark, "it should be spontaneous and prompted by God."

Recently the meeting, attended by Friends from Midland and surrounding towns and held in Trinity School library, has gained much attention from other local religions.

"We've been studied a lot lately," said Mrs. Smith.

"There's always a lot of confusion with (us and) Jehovah's Witnesses. I don't know where the identification comes, but all those groups they don't know about they put together."

She also said Friends were often confused with the Amish because of the plain dress.

"There's been a lot of interest from Sunday School groups and ministers here in town," she said.

"Friends," said Clark, "will probably always be an oddity."

Pahlavi may declare himself emperor

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Reza Pahlavi, eldest son of the late shah of Iran, is expected to declare himself emperor of Iran despite the overthrow of his father's dynasty by followers of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, October magazine said Saturday.

The influential Egyptian magazine said in an issue published Saturday that former Crown Prince Reza is expected to make the announcement in conjunction with his 20th birthday Oct. 31.

Reza, son of the late Shah Mohammad Reza

Pahlavi, abandoned his studies in the United States after his father's death earlier this year and is living in Egypt with his mother, former empress Farah Diba.

Czech dissident freed

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Czechoslovakia has released Otta Bednarova, a jailed Czechoslovak dissident who is gravely ill, for an "interruption of her prison term." Czech emigre sources said Saturday. They also reported a case of alleged police brutality against a young rights activist.

Mrs. Bednarova, 53, a former journalist and member of the Charter 77 committee to defend the unjustly prosecuted, was set free a day after her two sons issued a desperate international appeal for her release.

Mrs. Bednarova was sentenced on subversion charges to three years in prison along with five other leading regime critics a year ago. She has been in a prison hospital in Prague being treated for hepatitis, fatigue and other ailments.

"Her life is in danger," Mrs. Bednarova's sons said in their plea, noting she lost more than 45 pounds in prison.

Stanton Reporter gets new publisher-editor

STANTON — Grant Mabry, a veteran newspaperman, has assumed duties as publisher-editor of The Stanton Reporter, a weekly newspaper edited and published for the past seven years by Terry Neill. "I feel like it will be a real challenge to edit and publish The Stanton Reporter," Mabry said in Thursday's edition of the Reporter in announcing that the Permian Basin Publishing Inc. has purchased the newspaper from Neill. The sale price was not disclosed. Neill, who said he was in search of another challenge after building up the Reporter into an award-winning newspaper, has bought the Van Horn Advocate in Far West Texas. He said Van Horn has "good potential." Mabry, 31, who holds a B.A. degree in journalism from North Texas State University, comes to Stanton from Seguin, where he was advertising director of the Seguin Daily Gazette-Enterprise. Previously, he was editor-publisher of the Hood County News in Granbury. Earlier in his career, he was editor, advertising director and assistant publisher of the semi-weekly Andrews County News, which is edited and published by James Roberts.

Rankin crafts fair scheduled

RANKIN — The third annual Rankin Homecoming Arts & Crafts Festival will be held Oct. 25. Those interested in setting up booths may contact Angela Teichelman at 693-2390.

Cycle-Fest begins Saturday

FORT DAVIS — Cyclists who want to ride in the Mile-High Country and to challenge themselves and their machines to some hill-climbing and two-wheel sailing in scenic country may join in the third annual Davis Mountains Cycle-Fest Saturday and Sunday at Fort Davis.

The ride begins at 9 a.m. Saturday, on the Prude Ranch just northwest of Davis Mountains State Park off Texas Highway 118 and covers a 74-mile route along the Scenic Loop — Texas 166 and Texas 118. The Fort Davis Tour follows a route which was approved for qualifying Olympic cyclists in 1974.

All riders in the Cycle-Fest will receive Davis Mountains monogrammed T-shirts.

A sag-wagon, provided by Peyton's Bikes of Midland and Odessa, will follow the cyclists to render aid if needed. A picnic lunch will be held for the bicyclists at the ride's midway point.

Later that day, at 6:30 p.m., a barbecue supper will be held for the cyclists, their families and guests at the Prude Ranch.

The next day, the Cycle-Fest will host the two-mile endurance ride up the 17-percent grade of Mount Locke, which is site of the McDonald Observatory. Patches will be awarded to those who "make the grade." The ride up Mount Locke will begin at 9 a.m.

Also on that Sunday, the Prude Ranch will sponsor a Bicycle Rodeo for boys and girls 12 years of age or younger.

Cyclists wishing to participate in the weekend ride may write John Robert Prude at the Prude Ranch, P.O. Box 1431, Fort Davis, Texas 79734 or call the ranch at 426-3347 or 426-9906. Entry fee is $12 per cyclist; the fee covers the lunch, barbecue feed, sag-wagon conveniences, T-shirts and patches.

The annual ride is sponsored by the Lubbock County Wheelmen of the American Wheelmen and Prude Ranch, in cooperation with Peyton's Bikes of Midland-Odessa and Hunchinson Cycles of Lubbock.

Entry forms for the ride may be picked up at the bicycles shops in Midland, Odessa and Lubbock. Those wishing additional information may call David Ham at Peyton's Bikes at 684-5984 or Tom Hutchinson in Lubbock at 806/744-4189.

Those wishing rooming for the weekend may find lodging at Prude Ranch, at the near by Indian Lodge at Davis Mountains State Park or at Suttler's Boarding House, Limpia Hotel and Stone Village in Fort Davis. Campsites are available at the state park.

Minority appointments record important, protocol chief says

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House protocol chief Abelardo L. Valdez says a candidate's track record of minority appointments is more important than any bid for Hispanic attention on the campaign trail.

He said campaign professionals have jammed more ethnic symbolism into Ronald Reagan's appearances lately, but there were few minority appointments when the GOP presidential candidate was governor of California and there are few minorities in his organization now.

"You know how it is with cramming for a test. You remember a few things on the day of the exam, but it's all forgotten when the exam is over," Valdez said in remarks prepared for delivery Saturday at the Texas state Democratic convention in Houston.

The Floresville, Texas, native said it would be a "sad likelihood" that minorities would be forgotten after election day if Reagan were elected. "His public record of recognition for blacks, for Hispanics, for women and other minorities is not just woeful — it doesn't exist," Valdez said.

Reagan attended Mexican Independence Day celebrations Sept. 16 in heavily Mexican-American areas of South Texas, which is becoming one of the major battlegrounds for the state's 26 electoral votes.

Valdez pointed to President Carter's appointment of almost 200 Hispanics to high-level positions in his administration.

The protocol chief said Reagan's foreign policy would rely too heavily on the threat of force.

"It is a world in which every time he hears thunder, he sends out for the Marines. For Ronald Reagan, being president would be like playing the lead in 'Those Magnificent Men in their Flying Machines,'" Valdez said.

He said Carter's foreign policy has placed its emphasis on peace, respect for diversity and human rights, including the development of a more cooperative relationship with Mexico. In an interview, Valdez said that Hispanic-American Democrats were taking care of the expenses for his political trip to Texas.

He said that he planned to campaign for Carter regularly throughout the fall, mostly on weekends and in areas like Texas, California and Illinois where Hispanic votes could be crucial.

ERA, abortion stance questioned

NEW YORK (AP) — Ronald Reagan's opposition to the Equal Rights Amendment and abortion appears to be costing him votes in his quest for the White House, particularly the votes of women. The latest Associated Press-NBC News poll says Reagan draws less support from women than from men. And Jimmy Carter is the beneficiary of that difference, drawing much of the support among women that Reagan fails to get.

At least part of that weakness in Reagan's appeal to women comes from his stands against both the proposed Equal Rights Amendment and abortion. Support for both is significant among all likely voters.

And Reagan does the worst among women who disagree with his positions on the two issues. Interestingly, independent John B. Anderson, a strong supporter of the ERA and opponent of efforts to ban abortion, benefits only marginally from his policy differences with Reagan and Carter.

The AP-NBC News poll, taken Monday through Wednesday, says Reagan is the choice of 45 percent of the male likely voters, while Carter is the choice of 31 percent — a 14-point edge. Independent candidate Anderson is the choice of 13 percent and the rest were undecided or named others.

In contrast, the women among likely voters split their votes with Reagan getting 39 percent and Carter 36 percent, with Anderson garnering 13 percent. Thus, Reagan enjoys a clear margin among men and only a rough split among women.

Reagan is strongly opposed to abortion and opposes ratification of the ERA. Carter and Anderson support the ERA. Carter personally opposes abortion, but he has said he does not support a constitutional amendment to ban abortion. Anderson has come out strongly for the right of a woman to have an abortion.

Both abortion and ERA are backed by people likely to cast ballots on Nov. 4, the AP-NBC News poll said.

A woman's right to an abortion is favored by a 72-24 margin among likely voters, with the remainder not sure. The ERA is backed a 41-28 edge, with 13 percent saying they are not sure and 18 percent saying they haven't heard of it.

On both issues, Reagan does best among those who agree with him.

Those who oppose the ERA favor Reagan over Carter by a 60-24 edge, with Anderson drawing 7 percent. In contrast, those who back the amendment give Carter 38 percent; Reagan, 29 percent; and Anderson, 21 percent.

Similarly, those who oppose abortion give 54 percent to Reagan, 27 percent to Carter and 9 percent to Anderson.

Those who favor abortion split, with Reagan getting 37 percent, Carter 35 percent and Anderson 15 percent.

The contrasts are even more stark for women who are likely to vote. Women who favor the ERA favor Carter by a 41-26 margin over Reagan, with Anderson drawing 23 percent. Women who oppose the amendment back Reagan by 55-27.

Likewise, women who favor abortion give Carter 38 percent, Reagan 34 percent and Anderson 16 percent. Those women who oppose abortion favor Reagan by a 51-29 edge over Carter.

As with all sample surveys, the results of the AP-NBC News poll can vary from the opinions of all Americans or all likely voters because of chance variations in the sample.

For a poll based on 1,512 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 3 percentage points either way because of such chance variations. That is, if one could have talked to all likely voters with telephones last week, there is only one chance in 20 that the findings would vary from the results of polls such as this one by more than 3 percentage points.

Of course, the results could differ from other polls for a number of additional reasons. Differences in the exact wording of questions, differences in when the interviews were conducted and different methods of interviewing could also cause variations.

Carter's decision doesn't look costly

NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter's decision not to debate Ronald Reagan or John Anderson does not appear to have cost him any support among voters, according to a Newsweek poll released Saturday.

Results of the magazine's poll said Reagan's participation did not result "in any marked gains in voter preference" and that Anderson's candidacy "did not get the post-debate bounce his campaign had banked on."

A New York Times-CBS News Poll, however, said Reagan was the only "significant beneficiary" of the debate, improving his relative standing against Carter and enhancing public views of his abilities. The New York Times reported in its Sunday editions.

The newspaper also said results from the poll, in which 1,627 persons were interviewed by telephone, indicated the debate did not reverse Anderson's decline.

Newsweek said its survey found that Carter still trails Reagan in voter popularity by 39 percent to 35 percent. Anderson was favored by 14 percent of the respondents.

"Worse for Anderson, of those surveyed who watched the debate, 35 percent say the debate made them more likely to vote against Anderson, compared with only 26 percent who came away more likely to vote for him," Newsweek said.

The poll also said 38 percent of the participants considered Carter the candidate "best able to keep the nation out of war." Twenty-three percent said Reagan would be better than Carter at maintaining peace.

Newsweek said that in conducting the poll, the Gallup Organization telephoned 1,045 registered voters on Wednesday and Thursday. The poll had a 3 percent margin of error.

League calls on public to press for debates

WASHINGTON (AP) — The League of Women Voters called on the public Saturday to bring pressure on Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan and John B. Anderson to stop squabbling over details and agree to a series of campaign debates.

But, in a statement, Ruth Hinerfeld, president of the league, conceded that the outlook for a second session — following last Sunday's Reagan-Anderson meeting in Baltimore — appears dim.

"The league is dismayed with the current impasse in planning future debates," Mrs. Hinerfeld said. "The fact that the American people may see no more presidential debates this year is not because the league did not try to make them happen."

President Carter has accepted the league's offer, issued Thursday, for a Carter-Reagan debate followed by a three-way debate involving Anderson, but Reagan's camp refused to accept.

Aides to Reagan reportedly have decided there is little for the Republican candidate to gain by participating in any further debates as long as he leads in the public opinion polls. It is customary for the leader, having the most to lose, to be the most reluctant to debate.

Mrs. Hinerfeld deplored the impasse and decided to apply some pressure of her own.

Bush defends Reagan image

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Republican vice presidential candidate George Bush described GOP standardbearer Ronald Reagan as "reasonable and broad-minded," saying Saturday he hopes people won't jump to hasty conclusions about the former California governor.

During a news conference on the campaign trail in Delaware, Bush was asked about the image of the Republican Party and its presidential ticket.

"Right now, the party is the most unified I have ever seen," he said. "People must get to know Governor Reagan. They need to listen to what he's saying and not what they think he believes. He's a reasonable and broad-minded man who has done a tremendous job leading the most populous state in the nation."

Flanked by his wife Barbara, Gov. Pierre S. du Pont IV and Rep. Thomas B. Evans Jr., Bush said the Republican Party can win in November if Reagan "continues to do what he's doing."

U.S. influence diminishing in IMF over PLO controversy

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A bitter dispute over participation by the Palestine Liberation Organization in meetings this week of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank points up the diminishing influence of the United States in the two institutions.

The United States nearly always has had its way in the 141-nation IMF and the World Bank, which were established after World War II to oversee operations of the world economy. But the same forces of change that have challenged U.S. economic and political influence around the world and long ago eroded U.S. domination of the United Nations, are now being felt in these institutions.

THE UNITED STATES still is the most powerful member, but no longer is it pre-eminent.

While there have been disputes before, none has burst into the open and so divided the IMF and World Bank members into opposing factions as the PLO issue. The controversy extends into the staff of the institutions.

Backed by powerful Arab nations like Saudi Arabia, the PLO has sought observer status at the four-day annual meeting of the IMF and the World Bank that opens here Tuesday.

However, the Carter administration, pressured by anti-PLO sentiment in Congress and apparently fearing an adverse impact on the Jewish vote in the November election, adamantly opposes it.

In pre-meeting jockeying, the United States managed to twist enough arms to obtain a majority of votes to block the PLO bid, but at the same time it had to accept a compromise that no observers will be invited.

In addition, the chairman of the meeting, Tanzanian Finance Minister Amir H. Jamal, says he will allow an open debate the issue this week, and the United States has been unable to get him to change his mind.

ALTHOUGH THE UNITED STATES expects to win in the end, it is embarrassed by this challenge to its influence. Officials argue that injecting political issues into the deliberations of the economic institutions threatens their very existence.

"We believe the PLO has no legitimate purpose attending these meetings," said C. Fred Bergsten, an assistant secretary of the Treasury for international affairs. "We oppose politicization of these institutions."

But the line between what is a political issue and what is an economic issue cannot be clearly drawn and if the debate in fact takes place at the opening meeting Tuesday, which seems likely, the United States may be publicly denounced by some members for its stand.

Although they are little-known to most Americans, the IMF and World Bank have played a major role in carrying out objectives of U.S. international economic policy with respect to the U.S. dollar, foreign investment and foreign trade.

IMF loans often have made the difference between solvency and bankruptcy for its members. In addition, the World Bank annually dispenses billions in aid for development projects in impoverished nations of Africa, Asia and Latin America.

It has an equally strong voice in the World Bank.

However, the Arab countries are gaining in influence disproportionate to their voting strength because of the enormous oil wealth of such members as Saudi Arabia and Kuwait. Adding the votes of other Third World members and the handful of Communist countries, these nations probably can command a majority of the members, although not the votes, on some issues at least.

CHINA HAS RECENTLY joined both institutions, and because of its size, it is assuming a role of immediate influence, and nobody can be sure what this will mean for its future.

The Arab countries also have leverage over the IMF and World Bank because the institutions need access to the enormous wealth of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Abu Dhabi to carry on their activities.

But when IMF Managing Director Jacques de Larosiere, a Frenchman, opened discussions with these countries recently to arrange loans for the IMF's future needs, it was understood they indicated they wanted to see the PLO seated as an observer before making any commitments. Kuwait and Saudi Arabia also have pulled back from lending to the World Bank for the same reason.

Dayan watched for signs of political life

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Although he is 65, ailing and busy writing memoirs, many Israelis are still watching Moshe Dayan for signs of political life.

The patch-eyed ex-soldier has been down before, only to bounce back into the forefront of Israeli politics.

Today, while Dayan potters about in his garden, works on his treasured archaeological collection or pores over manuscripts with a single, faltering eye, the pundits sift through the arithmetic of parliamentary seats to see whether there is still room for him to maneuver.

risers and falls. He has been called a swashbuckler and a brigand, a brilliant diplomat and an amoral, turncoat politician, a man of sweeping historical vision and, in a revealing self-portrait he painted in 1951, a fox, complete with black eye-patch.

Dayan burst upon the international scene in 1956 as chief of staff of the army that swept a huge, Soviet-supplied Egyptian army out of the Sinai Desert.

But the brilliant career prophesied for him seemed not to materialize. After a brief stint as a junior Cabinet minister he joined his mentor, David Ben-Gurion, in founding a new, reform-minded party. It fared poorly at the polls and Dayan faded into obscurity.

Then came the 1967 war, and the public clamor for a strong leader swept him into the key position of defense minister. Most of the glory of Israel's six-day military triumph fell on Dayan's shoulder.

October 1979, he was again out of office, having resigned in protest of the way Israel was conducting negotiations on self-rule for the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

He had undergone surgery four months earlier to remove a cancerous part of his intestine, and later had to have an operation on his throat which left his voice weak and gravelly.

ALTHOUGH HIS DOCTOR said the cancer was completely removed, it was whispered that Dayan feared he had not long to live, and had resigned to give himself time to write his own account of the peace talks and settle accounts with the many foes he had accumulated during his flamboyant career.

Associates say, however, that the book, to be published in a few months, will contain no bombshells and, like his previously published autobiography, will be written in his characteristically dry, painstaking and curiously impersonal style.

His favorite interest remains the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip, where he has built up a network of relationships with important Arab figures which he believes will prove valuable as negotiations for Palestinian self-rule progress.

Dayan has hinted that the only official post that might interest him would be as an adviser on West Bank and Gaza affairs. He says he will not run for Parliament again, and neither wants nor expects to be offered another Cabinet post.

Meanwhile, he lives quietly with his second wife, Rahel, in a suburb of Tel Aviv populated by army officers past and present. He attends parliamentary sessions and goes to a few basketball games — otherwise he is seen and heard only occasionally in public.

It is precisely that kind of obscurity that Dayan's foes have learned to beware of.

THE MAJOR AID recipients usually are countries that are vital to U.S. interests, such as the Philippines, Brazil, South Korea, Indonesia, Turkey, India and, more recently, Zaire and Kenya. A new member, the People's Republic of China, surely will receive substantial aid in years ahead.

The United States itself has received timely aid from the IMF over the years to support the dollar on world money markets.

The United States has managed to maintain its dominance in the economic institutions in part because the Soviet Union and most Communist powers were not members and in part because of a system of weighted voting.

The weighted voting is linked to the amount of financial contributions a member makes. As the major benefactor in the IMF, the United States has nearly 20 percent of the total votes, an amount sufficient to also have veto power over major deci-isions. It has an equally strong voice in the World Bank.

However, the Arab countries are gaining in influence disproportionate to their voting strength because of the enormous oil wealth of such members as Saudi Arabia and Kuwait. Adding the votes of other Third World members and the handful of Communist countries, these nations probably can command a majority of the members, although not the votes, on some issues at least.

CHINA HAS RECENTLY joined both institutions, and because of its size, it is assuming a role of immediate influence, and nobody can be sure what this will mean for its future.

The Arab countries also have leverage over the IMF and World Bank because the institutions need access to the enormous wealth of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Abu Dhabi to carry on their activities.

But when IMF Managing Director Jacques de Larosiere, a Frenchman, opened discussions with these countries recently to arrange loans for the IMF's future needs, it was understood they indicated they wanted to see the PLO seated as an observer before making any commitments. Kuwait and Saudi Arabia also have pulled back from lending to the World Bank for the same reason.

SOME CONCLUDE THAT there is — especially among the 30 percent that constantly replies "undecided" when asked by pollsters to pick a prime minister.

There is widespread disillusionment both with Prime Minister Menachem Begin and the Labor Party opposition, and the polls almost always place Dayan among the five most popular figures in the country.

Friends insist that Dayan has no political plans. But no one dares flatly write him off, even though he has no political party, no easily grasped ideology, and no power base other than his backbench seat in the Knesset, the Israeli parliament.

But as commentator Mark Segal has written in the Jerusalem Post: "Who knows? When the political kaleidoscope shifts again, may we not find Dayan in the limelight again, being urged to lead a new right-of-center political grouping?"

UNTIL HIS RESIGNATION last October as foreign minister, Dayan's career had been a series of dizzying

FOR THE NEXT SIX years he was second only to Prime Minister Golda Meir in making policy. But the 1973 war drove him and Mrs. Meir out of office, blamed for Israel's disastrous battlefield setbacks. Mrs. Meir died in 1978.

Four more years of obscurity, and then Israelis were treated to comeback No. 2 as Begin, newly elected and casting about for someone to give his government international stature, handed Dayan the Foreign Ministry portfolio.

Dayan's rehabilitation meant he would play a major role in the peace talks launched by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's visit to Jerusalem. But a little more than two years later, in October 1979, he was again out of office, having resigned in protest of the way Israel was conducting negotiations on self-rule for the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

He had undergone surgery four months earlier to remove a cancerous part of his intestine, and later had to have an operation on his throat which left his voice weak and gravelly.

ALTHOUGH HIS DOCTOR said the cancer was completely removed, it was whispered that Dayan feared he had not long to live, and had resigned to give himself time to write his own account of the peace talks and settle accounts with the many foes he had accumulated during his flamboyant career.

Associates say, however, that the book, to be published in a few months, will contain no bombshells and, like his previously published autobiography, will be written in his characteristically dry, painstaking and curiously impersonal style.

It is precisely that kind of obscurity that Dayan's foes have learned to beware of.

THE MAJOR AID recipients usually are countries that are vital to U.S. interests, such as the Philippines, Brazil, South Korea, Indonesia, Turkey, India and, more recently, Zaire and Kenya. A new member, the People's Republic of China, surely will receive substantial aid in years ahead.

The United States itself has received timely aid from the IMF over the years to support the dollar on world money markets.

The United States has managed to maintain its dominance in the economic institutions in part because the Soviet Union and most Communist powers were not members and in part because of a system of weighted voting.

The weighted voting is linked to the amount of financial contributions a member makes. As the major benefactor in the IMF, the United States has nearly 20 percent of the total votes, an amount sufficient to also have veto power over major deci-isions. It has an equally strong voice in the World Bank.

However, the Arab countries are gaining in influence disproportionate to their voting strength because of the enormous oil wealth of such members as Saudi Arabia and Kuwait. Adding the votes of other Third World members and the handful of Communist countries, these nations probably can command a majority of the members, although not the votes, on some issues at least.

CHINA HAS RECENTLY joined both institutions, and because of its size, it is assuming a role of immediate influence, and nobody can be sure what this will mean for its future.

The Arab countries also have leverage over the IMF and World Bank because the institutions need access to the enormous wealth of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Abu Dhabi to carry on their activities.

But when IMF Managing Director Jacques de Larosiere, a Frenchman, opened discussions with these countries recently to arrange loans for the IMF's future needs, it was understood they indicated they wanted to see the PLO seated as an observer before making any commitments. Kuwait and Saudi Arabia also have pulled back from lending to the World Bank for the same reason.

It is clear to all, including the United States, that if the IMF is to continue in its role as overseer of the world economy, the wishes of its membership cannot be ignored, and if the United States is out of step with those wishes, it will have to compromise.

The same is true for the World Bank, which is about to undergo a major organizational change anyway as Robert S. McNamara, the former U.S. secretary of defense, has announced he is stepping down as bank president after 12 years in June.

Rose garden dedicated

By SUE FAHLGREN
Staff Writer

Rain may be good for gardens, but it's not so great for garden openings.

The Midland Rose Garden ribbon cutting ceremonies had a wet reception for some 30 Midlanders in the Parks and Recreation Department building instead of the planned affair at the garden located in Crier Park, 1500 W. Texas Ave.

The ceremonies, which included award presentations to volunteers and donors who have helped establish the rose garden over the past eight months, were expected to attract many more citizens.

Five city council members did make it, though, to cut the ribbon and Mayor G. Thane Akins declared the day Midland Rose Garden Day.

Akins called the garden a "paragon for our city park system."

Also on hand were three officers from the American Rose Society — Jack Walters, Dr. Elden W. Lyle and Sid Shackelford — who flew in from across Texas for the dedication ceremonies.

Some 27 individuals, companies and organizations received — or will receive — certificates of appreciation for their help with the garden of some 800 rose bushes.

Wayne Kohout, director of the Parks and Recreation Department, who acted as master of ceremonies at the presentation, said he didn't mind the rain.

"I don't think we should complain about it," he said, even though many of the people didn't show up, because it was good for the flowers.

Kohout explained the garden was "spawned in the mind of an individual," Joy Butts, and "has eventually grown to be the Midland Rose Garden."

He added, "It has become a community effort and eventually became a part of our city."

Mrs. Butts, a member of the Midland Rose Society, worked out plans for the garden and work began on the project in January when the City Council approved her idea.

Mrs. Butts also contacted Jackson and Perkins, a nursery outlet in Oregon, which donated all the bushes and has pledged an additional three-bedworth to be planted next year.

Kohout called the council members "the people who were so instrumental in making this a reality."

Dr. Gene Spires, president of the Midland Rose Society, said the volunteer "efforts have introduced an enrichment of the community — a very valuable enrichment."

Walters, regional director of the ARS, said he "hoped the rose garden will be here for 150 years." Walters, a nurseman from Saline, also noted the rain was good.

"When I got off the plane and saw the rain coming down," he told the group, "I thought that was the best thing in the world."

Dr. Lyle, former president of the ARS who moved the national headquarters from Ohio to Shreveport, La., acted as special advisor to the Midland Rose Garden. A plant pathologist in Tyler, Lyle said, "I don't think you could do better than to have a rose garden like you started here."

Shackelford, a Houston construction company owner and designer of specialty rose gardens in Shreveport, said, "I would like to congratulate the council for having the vision to let this thing happen here."

Responsibility claimed for Oktoberfest bombing

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — A woman claiming to speak for right-wing extremists said Saturday they were responsible for the Oktoberfest bomb blast that tore through a crowd of beer festival revelers here, killing 12 and wounding 144, authorities said.

The Munich-based weekly magazine Quick reported Saturday that among the dead, police found the mutilated body of Gundolf Koehler, 21, a known member of a banned neo-Nazi group.

Munich newspapers reported police had evidence a member of another banned right-wing organization, the "Hoffmann Defense Group," was among the suspects and that several members of the neo-Nazi group were arrested as they tried cross the border into Austria.

There were unconfirmed reports police searched the lavish, castle-like Nueremberg home of Karl Heinz Hoffmann, a painter who reportedly affects Nazi-type uniforms on occasion.

Police refused comment on the reports, and the federal prosecutor's office in Karlsruhe ordered a news ban.

The 146-year-old Oktoberfest celebration has its roots in ancient harvest rituals, but is usually held in September. Tens of thousands of people, undaunted by Friday's incident, shouldered their way onto the Oktoberfest grounds Saturday to sample carnival rides, sausages and liters of beer.

Police said they assumed Friday night's explosion at the fairgrounds was a terrorist attack but expressed some doubts about the woman's claim, which also indicated the group was behind last month's Bologna, Italy, train station massacre.

"We don't have any firm lead," a police spokesman said.

The woman, speaking with a heavy French accent, called two newspapers in Munich and said "this is the Right of Bologna, we have struck again," according to Bavarian state police.

Authorities felt the claim "doesn't mean all that much," a police spokesman said, but he noted the Bologna railroad station explosion and the Oktoberfest bombing appeared aimed at the public instead of a single prominent public figure as in most organized terrorism. A total of 83 people were killed in the Bologna blast.

Friday's explosion came only hours after Rolf Clemens Wagner, one of West Germany's most wanted terrorists, was sentenced to life imprisonment by a Swiss court for a murder committed during a 1979 Zurich bank robbery. It was not known if there was any link between the sentencing and the blast.

Police said the dead in Friday's bombing included two Austrians, one Swiss, one Briton and that the others were Germans. "We have no indication that any of the victims were Americans," a spokesman said. The wounded were being treated at five local hospitals.

Thousands of tourists and local residents crowded the Theresien Meadow despite the attack the night before, and authorities announced the festival would continue as scheduled through Oct. 5 because so many advance tourism commitments had been made. Munich's mayor announced a memorial service for the dead would be held Tuesday and said festivities would be canceled that day.

From fragments found at the blood-smeared site near the main gate of the fairgrounds, police deduced the bomb was a piece of half-inch-thick iron pipe filled with at least two pounds of highly potent explosives. Bavarian State Interior Minister Gerold Tandler said the device, hidden in a trash can attached to a traffic sign, was triggered by electric means and blasted in all directions. Police estimated 1,000 people were in the immediate vicinity at the time of the explosion.

"I saw a bright flash, then I appeared to be out for a few seconds and when I came to my senses again, I saw this awful mess around me," a witness said immediately after the blast.

The crowd near the explosion was just a fraction of an estimated 200,000 people who that night visited what is generally billed as the world's biggest beer party. Most were on their way home.

Police in Goepfingen, just east of Stuttgart, said Friday they recently recovered from a nearby Charlottensee Lake several unfinished bombs of the kind Tandler described. Police said they suspect right-wing terrorists disposed of the bomb casings in the lake.

Abortion stance protested before Michelangelo's Pieta

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Five women and two men chained themselves before Michelangelo's masterpiece statue, the Pieta, in St. Peter's Basilica on Saturday to protest the Roman Catholic Church's opposition to abortion.

Swiss Guards, members of the Vatican's tiny army, moved in promptly and cut the chain tied to an iron bar in front of the glass shield that protects the large sculpture of Mary holding the body of Jesus Christ. They turned over the protesters, all members of Italy's Radical Party, to Italian police.

The "chain-in" lasted only 30 minutes, but Vatican officials expressed concern that the basilica, the largest church in Christendom and filled with masterpieces, is becoming an arena for protests. Last month, a group of Iranians chained themselves to guard rails outside the basilica to protest the arrest of Iranian students in the United States.

"There are limits to security measures we could take in a church," said a Vatican official. "The church cannot be a fortress, and we don't want guards to check people entering the basilica."

St. Peter's, a masterpiece of the Italian Renaissance is the composite work of some of the greatest artists of the 16th century. It is adorned with numerous statues of popes, emperors and others and enlivened with frescoes and mosaics by such great masters as Michelangelo, Bernini and Raphael.

The 6-foot-7, 6,700-pound marble Pieta was seriously damaged on May 21, 1972, by a hammer-wielding Australian geologist, Laszlo Toth. He broke off the Madonna's left arm, dented her veil and chipped the left side of her face.

The restoration took nearly a year. The statue is now protected by a bullet-proof glass shield and a special warning system against intruders.

"If the pope is against abortion, we want to dramatize the plight of millions of children starving to death every day," the radicals said in leaflets they distributed to passersby.

The maverick Radical Party has been waging a campaign against Pope John Paul II's expressed desire to have Italy's two-year-old abortion law repealed.

The protesters also demanded that a bishops' synod under way at the Vatican consider the world's hunger problem as "a top priority issue."

LUBBOCK — Twenty-one textile leaders representing 10 Far Eastern countries which bought more than 4 million bales of United States cotton in 1978-79 will be in Lubbock Oct. 17 and 18 to study High Plains cotton production, processing, merchandising and research.

Those 10 countries which account for almost 70 percent of all U.S. cotton exports in 1978-79 are — according to officials of Plains Cotton Growers Inc. of Lubbock — Bangladesh, Korea, Malaysia, Singapore, Hong Kong, The Philippines, Thailand, Indonesia, Taiwan and Japan.

The foreign delegation will tour the Textile Research Center at Texas Tech University, the Texas A&M University Research and Extension Center, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Ginning Laboratory, the instrument class line and merchandising facilities of Plains Cotton Cooperative Association, and The American Cotton Growers denim plant at Littlefield.

Powell comments on embargo action

WASHINGTON, D.C. — White House press secretary Jody Powell says the Russians will be pleased but American farmers will not be helped by the U.S. Senate action to cripple the U.S. embargo on grain exports to the Soviet Union.

Powell commented after the Senate approved by voice vote Friday an appropriations bill amendment barring the Commerce Department from spending any money to implement the embargo imposed by President Carter.

Underwater farming program OK'd

WASHINGTON, D.C. — President Jimmy Carter has signed into law a measure authorizing the government to devise a plan to establish a $70 million underwater farming program.

Two years ago, the president vetoed a similar bill, contending it was too expensive.

The measure signed by the president Friday authorizes the departments of Agriculture, Commerce and Interior to identify species of aquatic plants and animals that could be grown under water, along with their commercial potential. They have 18 months to finalize their plan.

Pecan festival slated for December

The Midland County Pecan Growers Association will hold its annual pecan show, an expanded affair tabbed "Pecan Harvest Festival," in the downtown Midland Center on Dec. 1 and 2.

The festival will include a pecan food fair, queen pageant, and pecan judging, tasting and exhibiting.

The processing and judging of pecans will take place on the afternoon of Dec. 1. Pecans will be displayed and the pecan food fair will be held on the following day.

Midland-Odessa television talk show co-host Linda Bond will emcee the show.

The pageantry and queen competition for teen-agers and women ages 16 to 22 will be held at 6 p.m. on Dec. 2. The Midland County Pecan Queen will represent the county in the 1981 Texas State Pecan Queen Pageant.

Contestants will be judged on the basis of their interest in and knowledge of pecans and on the contestants' beauty, poise and personality.

Girls and women interested in vying for county pecan queen and any individual or business interested in sponsoring a candidate in the contest may contact pecan boosters Cathy Harris at 684-6031 or RB Henderson at 682-6741.

The sponsor's fee — $50 per contestant — may be sent to the Midland County Pecan Growers Association, Queen's Scholarship Fund, 2001 W. Missouri Ave., Midland, Texas 79701.

Those interested in entering pecans by variety in the show may contact the pecan association or Charlie Green, the Midland County agricultural agent, at 682-9481 weekdays.

Medical Record Week proclaimed by governor

Gov. Bill Clements has proclaimed Monday through Friday as Texas Medical Record Week. Over 1,500 medical record professionals currently practice in the state of Texas and are employed in all areas of health care including hospitals, outpatient clinics, mental health and mental retardation centers, rehabilitation programs and regulatory agencies.

During the past decade, the entire sector of health care has become increasingly complex. With expanded public concern and governmental surveillance of health care, more and more importance is placed on quality. As the medical record is the first and foremost tool in assessing quality, the need for more sophisticated systems of medical record management has mushroomed, according to the governor's office.

A bachelor of science in medical record administration is required of the top medical record professionals and is available at four universities and colleges in Texas. A two-year associate degree program is available at five junior colleges producing graduates eligible to become accredited record technicians.

An independent study program is available through the American Medical Record Association, of which the Texas Medical Record Association is a charter member. National Registration and Accreditation exams are administered twice yearly by the AMRA. Those passing these exams, the BREA and the ART, are entitled to function as vital members of the health care team.

In Midland, there are five accredited records technicians. They are Deborah Roberts, who is regional director for TMRA, of region 2; Betty Haines; Myra Foley; Betty Morris; and Denise Lanch.

Areas of expertise in which the medical record practitioner may lend support to hospitals include compliance to standards, rules and regulations (both governmental and voluntary); confidentiality and release of information; health data statistics and classification; education of staff who perform record-keeping functions; and quality assurance activities.

Denver's United Way may drop Legal Aid

DENVER (AP) — Mile High United Way has warned the Legal Aid Society of Metropolitan Denver that it will cut off its funds unless the society drops its opposition to utility rate increases.

Public Service Co. of Colorado, the state's largest public utility, is a major contributor to United Way's annual campaign through corporate and individual contributions. And Public Service president Richard Walker serves on the United Way board.

United Way officials confirmed Friday that the Legal Aid Society has been warned its 1981 allocation may hinge upon promising not to use United Way funds for anti-utility activities.

Legal Aid, which provides free legal help to poor people, gets $160,000 a year, or about 10 percent of its budget, from United Way.

A brief statement given by United Way's public information office didn't say specifically whether another agency, Denver Catholic Community Services, had received a similar warning.

A Legal Aid lawyer, who asked not to be identified, said that group and Catholic Community Services, another United Way recipient, had received the warning from United Way during the past week.

Catholic Community Services gets more than $500,000 per year from United Way, and it, too, has been active in supporting consumer protests of Public Service Co. rate increases and policies.

Merwin's 'magic' word-smithing well remembered

Longtime editor retiring from Reporter-Telegram ranks

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Merwin Ratcliff epitomizes the work ethic in newspapering as few others do and has for more than half a century.

But this gent, this editor's editor who sees no purpose in word-smithing and editing if the aim is not perfection, has put his pica line gauge and other tools of his work aside and has struck "— 30 —" to his career.

It's all over, except for the remembrances and far-flung impressions he has made on the art and craft of journalism and on those other professionals in the field.

He's a purist, a professional and a perfection at his craft.

John Merwin Ratcliff, who is nearing 79 years, put in his last full-day's editing work at The Reporter-Telegram on Saturday, sealing a career that had its beginning at the Jasper News-Boy, where he, as a grammar-school lad, worked as a Linotype operator.

Later, after receiving a bachelor's degree in chemistry at The University of Texas in Austin in 1923, he worked as a chemist for Lufkin chemistry house for a year.

"It didn't survive," the white-haired Ratcliff recalled, "and when it folded, I had to do something."

That something was newspapering. He returned to Jasper, his hometown where he was born on Nov. 7, 1901, to Dr. J.R. Ratcliff, a pioneer East Texas dentist, and Carrie Parker Ratcliff. He was hired on at the weekly Jasper News-Boy and "took over" operation of the newspaper on April 1, 1924.

"I HAD A HECK of a time," recalled the sage. "Everybody on a weekly does a little bit of everything... just a small country weekly. I wrote; I did whatever was to be done."

Before that, he had survived the "black flu" of the winter of 1918-1919 and a bout with school-teaching in 1920-21. He was a football coach, science teacher and principal at Alvin between his sophomore and junior years at the university.

"They were hard up for teachers in those days," he noted, but shunned the thought of being a poor teacher back then.

Editing and publishing a weekly newspaper was a chore, particularly in hard times.

"I went through the Big Depression and the war, and that was a pretty tough job. During the war, I couldn't get any help, and after the war, I was too cantankerous to keep any," he jested.

For 23 years, until 1947, he published and edited the News-Boy, sold it and got out of the operation for his health's sake. But then he was hired by Reporter-Telegram Editor W.H. "Bill" Collins, and moved to West Texas with his wife, Myrtle, and sons John and Dan to become news editor of The Midland Reporter-Telegram.

He held that job for about a quarter of a century before he voluntarily downshifted his position to a copy editor. He "retired" in 1976, but continued working on a part-time basis doing full-time work.

RATCLIFF'S FORTE, he candidly admits, is not writing; that's his choice. He's an editor whose bent is editing — dressing up copy and making it readable, lucid, logical, concise and grammatically correct.

"I don't like to write; I like the concept," Ratcliff had commented just after his boss, Reporter-Telegram Publisher William C. "Bill" Thomas had lauded him and suggested that he in retirement "may go home and write two or three novels."

"I think that he's quite a man," said Thomas. "He has an energy level and mental level far above most. He loves the (newspaper) business. He made the work exciting and challenging.... It's a tough thing to see him finally retire officially."

Ratcliff — to borrow a phrase — is many things to many people.

To his pianist wife of 48 years, he's the complete husband.

"Oh, he's always considerate and thoughtful and always has been," she said. "That's his disposition."

Ratcliff stands apart from the run-of-the-mill fellows in this world. He's an intellectual; tends to be heady; shuns sentimentality and memorabilia; reads, favors mysteries; cooks exacting dishes (his minestrone soup and mulligan stew are delights, as is his wife's corned beef and cabbage); once played bridge; grew gladiola flowers in East Texas; is an avid sports — football, baseball — fan (he played guard and running back in high school football); follows politics and world events closely; is shy and modest and most amiable; and dearly relishes mental challenges; such as solving cross-word puzzles.

"HE WORKS a heck of a lot of crossword puzzles," said his wife. "He won't fool with them if they're not difficult."

He's an astute fellow.

"Probably Merwin knows more about world affairs than any other person," said Joe Salman, a longtime friend of Ratcliff, "and can read the politicians' strategy far better than any person I have ever known."

Salman, oil editor of The Reporter-Telegram, noted Ratcliff's skills in contract and duplicate bridge, and his joy in cooking. "He does a stew (mulligan) that is out of this world."

"Throughout his many years here, his main hobby has been his work," said Salman. "Merwin's expertise in laying out news pages can be topped by no one."

Ratcliff's expertise is "word-smithing" and praises of his dedication to work are sung by many.

"In the newspaper business, as in any other, there are true professionals and there are those individuals who choose to work in the newspaper business for a certain amount of time. Merwin certainly is among the former," said Jim Servatius, who succeeded Collins as Reporter-Telegram editor. "His attention to detail in both editing newspaper copy and in planning newspaper pages is unexcelled."

COLLYNS, who hired Ratcliff in 1947, beholds him as the "top grammarian" at the newspaper and a "solid and dependable" worker who "never gets upset or voices his troubles."

"He always did the job he was expected to do," Collins said. "I have no complaints. He's very dependable. He (by editing) made me look a whole lot better than I maybe ought to."

Author-playwright Larry King, who was the newspaper's sports editor in the early 1950s, cast similar laurels on Ratcliff. King wrote the popular Broadway play "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas."

"I was the worst speller in the United States," King said in a telephone interview from his home in Washington, D.C., "and poor old Merwin had to edit my copy every day. And this puzzled look would come over his face, and he'd say, 'What in the hell is this word?'"

"Merwin Ratcliff is the fellow who taught me to 'half spell,' and you'd have to know how bad a speller I was to appreciate that," King said.

"Old Merwin was always intelligent, and he was always a gentleman."

COPE ROUTH, an ex-newspaperman who often is praised as "one of the best" writers to grace West Texas and Midland, views Ratcliff as "a real professional."

"He's a real fine man personally and professionally," said Routh, who now lives in Odessa. "He (by editing) made me look damn good. Merwin is a real professional, a perfectionist and a grammarian. I'm sort of a purist, and I know Merwin is that, too."

Larry Lovelace, a Houston Post copy editor who "newspapered" with Ratcliff in Midland, beholds Ratcliff as a beloved friend and teacher.

"He taught a lot of us what it (editing) was all about," said Lovelace. "We more or less got all of our training under Merwin."

The newspaper will suffer "a great loss" in his absence, Lovelace said. "The Reporter-Telegram will not be the same without him."

"He's a good friend and a good drinking buddy," Lovelace said of his friend. "He's a lot like a grandfather, too. He's a helluva person."

"He's the best 'old Texan' I've ever met," said Lovelace's wife, Ingrid, a Denmark native.

Another good friend, Charley Reinken, assistant news editor of the Post, lauded Ratcliff, whose professionalism inspired him and "contributed to my decision to stay in journalism."

"I don't know of anybody who has worked with Merwin who didn't have the highest respect for him," he said.

"He approached copy editing with professional detachment and with a sense of humor on the side," said Reinken, who was a reporter and then a copy editor at the Reporter-Telegram in the early 1970s.

"I really didn't know from Shinola about editing until Merwin broke me in at The Reporter-Telegram," he said.

Merwin Ratcliff, who's liked, loved and respected by those who know him, was a bit modest about being interviewed for a story on the eve of his retirement.

"Don't try to color it up," he had said of his life's story, "because it's solid-gray."

If so, gray is grand.

Astros blank Cincy, 2-0 for security

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Joe Niekro and Dave Smith combined on a four-hitter and Craig Reynolds clubbed a two-run double as the Houston Astros blanked Cincinnati 2-0 Saturday.

The Astros, who also beat Cincinnati 2-0 Friday night, solidified their hold on first place in the National League West.

Cincinnati starter Mario Soto, 10-7, pitched 4 1-3 innings of hitless ball until Denny Walling got an infield single in the fifth to start Houston's two-run surge.

Alan Ashby then hit a fly ball to right field and it fell for an error on center fielder Dave Collins, who ran into right field and deflected the ball from right fielder Ken Griffey.

Reynolds, batting .218 going into the game, then hit his eighth double of the season down the first base line, scoring Walling and Ashby.

Niekro, 18-12, allowed only one hit going into the sixth when Griffey and Dave Concepcion each singled but George Foster hit into a double play and Dan Driessen struck out to end the threat.

Niekro went 7 2-3 innings before giving way to Smith, who picked up his ninth save. He fanned three batters in 1 1-3 innings of hitless relief.

Rice upsets LSU

HOUSTON (AP) — Rice quarterback Robert Hoffmann hit Frank Wilson with a 15-yard touchdown pass with 3:36 to play Saturday night to break an 11-game losing streak and lead the Owls to a 17-7 upset victory over Louisiana State.

LSU had taken a 7-3 lead into the closing minutes on a 57-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Alan Risher to split end Tracy Porter in the first quarter.

But the Owls, who had not won a game since they upset Tulane a year ago, fought back in the fourth quarter, driving 67 yards for the winning touchdown aided by a fake punt play at midfield.

Rice's Calvin Vance put the game out of reach with a 24-yard touchdown run with 42 seconds left to play.

Facing a fourth-down and four yards to go, Wilson took the center snap and drove five yards for a first down. Rice freshman quarterback Doug Johnson then hit tight end Robert Hubble with a 17-yard pass to keep the drive alive.

With time running out in the first half, Hoffmann hit Bobby Williams with a 32-yard pass to the LSU 36. With 7 seconds left in the half, Hubble on his first collegiate scoring attempt booted a 52-yard field goal for Rice's first points.

Rice linebacker Robert Williamson led the Owls defense, sacking LSU quarterbacks three times for 17 yards in losses. Williamson also was credited with 16 tackles and 13 assists.

LSU appeared headed for a second touchdown in the second quarter when Risher directed the Tigers 67 yards to the Rice 3 before he fumbled on two successive snaps.

Risher recovered his first miscue but Rice defensive tackle Clenzy Pierson grabbed the second fumble at the Rice 3. Hoffmann then hit Williams with the 32-yard pass to set up Hubble's surprising three pointer.

Jubilant Stanford player John Elway (7), celebrates smashing 31-14 victory over Oklahoma in Norman Saturday. (AP Laserphoto).

Stanford stuns OU in 31-14 upset win

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Sophomore quarterback John Elway fired three touchdown passes and burned fourth-ranked Oklahoma with some timely running as he led Stanford to a 31-14 upset Saturday.

Elway hit on 14 of 25 passes for 187 yards as the Cardinals jumped to a 17-0 halftime advantage on the rain-slickened artificial turf of Owen Field.

Stanford stretched the lead to 31-0 before Oklahoma finally scored. Elway, a 6-foot-4, 202-pounder, threw two of his scoring passes to split end Andre Tyler, and scored once as the Cardinals rebounded from an upset loss last week to Boston College and pushed their record to 3-1.

The defeat snapped a 20-game home winning streak for the Sooners, 1-1, after a 29-7 victory over Kentucky two weeks ago. Oklahoma had not lost since it played Texas at Dallas last year.

Stanford's feat was accomplished without the services of its star running back Darrin Nelson, who sat out the game with a bruised hip.

The first quarter was scoreless, but Stanford controlled the football with Elway's passing magic out of the shotgun formation, keeping it for more than 11 minutes. Only penalties kept the Cardinals out of the end zone.

Stanford erupted for 17 points in the second quarter as the Elway and his receivers didn't seem to be bothered by the rainy conditions, which had Oklahoma's fleet running backs slipping and sliding much of the afternoon.

Dickerson sparks easy SMU victory

DALLAS (AP) — Sophomore running back Eric Dickerson scored three touchdowns as the Southern Methodist Mustangs turned two interceptions and a blocked kick into scores in a 52-16 rout of the Texas-Arlington Mavericks Saturday night.

The 6-3, 205-pound, Dickerson got the first two touchdowns on a pair of three-yard runs in the first quarter, the second one coming after Lane Smith interception and 20-yard return to the UTA 27.

SMU, now 3-0, padded its lead to 21-0 on Mike Ford's 12-yard pass to Anthony Smith in the second quarter, and reserves tackled on two more touchdowns before half time.

UTA fell to 0-3 with the loss. Wes Hopkins' interception and 41-yard return to the 21 set up a one-yard sneak by quarterback Mike Fisher in the second quarter. Cornerback Dick Blaylock blocked a UTA kick in the end zone giving SMU the ball on the 14, and Lance McIlhenny hit Edward O'Brian with a pass for the touchdown with three seconds left in the first half.

Brian Hoppel's 26-yard field goal was the Maverick's only score of the first two quarters, but Tony Felder scored twice for UTA in the third quarter. He made a one-handed catch of Scott Logan's pass and stumbled into the end zone for an 11-yard TD play, then later scored on a two-yard run.

SMU finished the scoring with Michael Charles' 14-yard TD run and Eddie Garcia's 45-yard field goal.

Craig James, who alternated with Dickerson, set up two of the touchdowns with pass receptions from Ford.

James eluded two tacklers at midfield on a screen pass and scampered 28 yards down the sideline to the 20 early in the second quarter.

Moments later, Ford found Smith alone in the right side of the end zone for a 12-yard touchdown pass.

Ford's 27-yard pass to James to the 3 set up Dickerson's third-quarter touchdown.

The triumph improved Miami, off to its best start in 16 years, to 4-0, while Florida State, losing for the first time in 19 regular-season games, dropped to 3-1.

Dickerson was the game's leading rusher with 56 yards on 14 carries, while Felder gained 51 yards on 7 carries and Randy Johnson 48 on 12 carries for Texas-Arlington.

Ford completed 8 of 19 passes for 133 yards, but set out half of the game. Fisher hit nine of 11 passes for 132 yards. Smith was the leading receiver, with 7 catches for 94 yards.

This is one horse that makes cents

Equine Editor

When a man who makes pizza and a man who makes tacos get together, you might expect them to come up with something good for lunch.

Midland Herb Blankinship and Odessa Bob Cox are trying to get the word out about their pride and joy, "Mighty Deck," but it isn't a three-layer deep-dish Parmesan taco.

It's a horse, of course. Mighty Deck, a handsome blaze-faced quarterhorse, arrived at Cox's Winnermaker Farms on Friday, and the well-muscled stud received a champagne reception yesterday afternoon.

Cox, president of the 41-store Taco Villa chain, and Blankinship, who runs five Pizza Huts in Odessa, put aside their fast-food competitiveness and went in as partners to purchase the ebony stallion.

The price tag for the 16-year-old breeding champ was "in excess of a million dollars."

That's a lot of tacos. "We should get our investment back in about three years," said Cox, a 46-year-old East Texas native.

"Our goal is to get 150 mares bred with him in 1981," he said. Stud fee for Mighty Deck is $3,500, which sounds reasonable compared to the $20,000 fee a horse like Easy Jet might bring.

Mighty Deck is no slouch, however, being a running champion himself in 1968.

One of his sons, Mighty Deck III, turned everyone's head this past season, winning 13 of 14 races and finishing second by a nose at Ruidoso's fabulous All-American Futurity on Labor Day.

The two-year-old gelding's success renewed interest in it's sire, since geldings never breed well, outside of Aggie jakes.

Cox, with 32 brood mares and a 4-year-old horse farm, saw Mighty Deck as a possible king pin for his operation.

He and Blankinship aren't too worried about their four-hoofed friend's mature age, either. "His line is well known for having a long life, and a long breeding life," said Blankinship. "His brother, Go Man Go, is still alive at 28 and was breeding up until 26. We'd like six breeding years for Mighty Deck; that would be great."

"Of course, any horse can just lay down tonight and die, but that's a chance you take."

One chance horse breeders don't take is damaging their investment, and although the stallion's farm, artificial insemination methods are used to avoid injury, keeping the horses separate.

So much for the life of the million-dollar stud.

Field goal lifts Porkers to win

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Ish Ordonez kicked a 41-yard field goal with 7:28 left in the game and 15th-ranked Arkansas eked out a 13-10 victory over fumble-plagued Tulsa Saturday.

Tulsa lost five fumbles and turned the ball over on downs once at the Arkansas 2, but still came within a hair of tying Arkansas. Stu Crum's 46-yard field goal attempt with 2:40 to play was wide right and Arkansas killed the clock.

Tulsa had a chance for a chip shot field goal when it drove 35 yards to the Arkansas 3 with less than six minutes left in the third quarter, but the Hurricane disdained the field goal. Running back Kenneth Lacy's fourth-down dive was inches short of a first down.

Arkansas, which did not get a second-half first down during the first 10 minutes of the third quarter, drove from its 10 to the Tulsa 18 early in the fourth period, where Ordonez badly missed a 35-yard field goal attempt.

The Razorbacks started the game like it would be a rout, taking the opening kickoff 75 yards to the Tulsa 5 in 12 plays. Ordonez hit from 22 yards for a 3-0 lead with 8:49 left in the first period.

Tulsa quarterback Kenny Jackson, who ran around the Arkansas ends almost at will, engineered a 70-yard Tulsa drive that produced a TD on Kenneth Session's 10-yard run with 8:49 left in the second.

Arkansas' Steve Douglas, who recovered two Tulsa fumbles, grabbed one of them at the Tulsa 28. Three plays later, Gary Anderson bolted 20 yards down the left sideline to make it 10-7. Crum hit a 36-yard field goal in the final seconds of the second quarter to tie the score.

Cougars post 24-20 win over North Texas

HOUSTON (AP) — Freshman quarterback Brent Chinn came off the bench Saturday night and led the University of Houston to a 24-20 victory over underdog North Texas State.

Chinn, a skinny, 160-pounder, got the fumbling, penalty-plagued Cougars moving in the third quarter and carried the once high-ranked Southwest Conference champion to its first victory of the season.

North Texas gave it a 9q, matching Houston for point and touchdown drive for touchdown, and led 17-14 at intermission.

With time running out North Texas made one last effort, getting to the Cougar 34 before being stopped. Houston started its comeback when defensive back Ronnie Vonner picked of a Joe Stevenson pass at the North Texas 25. Five plays later, Chinn carried it over from the 7.

The next time Houston had the ball Chinn ran and passed the Cougars 60 yards, with David Humphries kicking a 37-yard field goal.

In the first half, North Texas scored first on a 38-yard field goal by Whitt Smith.

Then it was the Cougars' turn. Grady Turner intercepted a deflected pass and Houston quickly moved 45 yards for a touchdown with David Barrett going over from the 2. The Mean Green struck right back covering 80 yards in nine plays, with wide receiver Pete Harvey grabbing first a 29-yard pass and then a 9-yard aerial for a touchdown.

Tulane victorious

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Vince Manalla kicked a 29-yard field goal as time ran out Saturday, lifting the Tulane Green Wave to a 26-24 football victory over the fumble-plagued Mississippi Rebels, who had seemed to have locked up victory only moments earlier.

Quarterback Nickie Hall, who fired three touchdown passes for the day, gave Manalla his chance with a last-gasp drive from the Tulane 29 featuring a 40-yard pass-run play by tight end Rodney Holman.

MTC resets action today

The Midland Tennis Club Fall Tournament's qualifying round was postponed until 9 a. m. today after rains washed away Saturday's effort.

The qualifying men's singles tournament is for a berth into the 20th annual MTC fall tournament proper. This year's tournament, however, marks the transition from what amounted to a college invitational in past years to the Penn Circuit of the USTA.

The USTA-Penn Circuit encourages the development of promising talent by providing an opportunity to play competitively and eventually to move up to the Volvo Grand Prix Tour.

The top 16 players in today's qualifying meet will join 48 internationally ranked players in the tournament proper, which begins Tuesday. The Midland High courts will serve as tournament headquarters, but next Sunday's finals will be at the Racquet Club.

Tournament officials said that today's qualifying will be played regardless of weather. If rain persists, the tournament will move indoors.

Texas Lutheran takes 7-0 win

ARKADELPHIA, Ark. (AP) — Ray Rapp threw a 4-yard touchdown pass to Joe Little on a fake field goal attempt as Texas Lutheran whipped Ouachita Baptist University 7-0 Saturday night.

The lone score came with 32 seconds left in the first half. Rapp, who line up as the holder on the field goal attempt, took the snap, faded to his right and found Little in the end zone.

Texas Lutheran made 308 yards total offense in a heavy rain while OBU managed only 135 yards. Brad Trietsch accounted for much of the visitors' output, carrying 34 times for 184 yards.

Ouachita drove to the Texas Lutheran 7 in the final minutes, but Charles Strickland recovered a fumbled snap for a 12-yard loss and the Tigers could not recover.

Texas Lutheran is now 1-3 and OBU is 1-2.

Georgia buries Horned Frogs

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Buck Belue fired two touchdown passes, kicker Rex Robinson became the school's all-time leading scorer and a swarming defense set up two quick fourth quarter touchdowns as 10th-ranked Georgia buried Texas Christian 34-3 in college football Saturday.

The Bulldogs, struggling offensively early in the game, finally assumed command on their sixth possession when freshman tailback Herschel Walker bolted 41 yards to the 8, setting up Belue's 4-yard scoring pass to Ronnie Stewart.

Walker, suffering a slightly sprained ankle on the play, was used briefly as a decoy in the second quarter, but never carried again the rest of the day and finished with 69 yards on 9 carries. Officials said the injury wasn't serious, but that they were not taking any chances.

Belue's other touchdown pass was a 28-yarder to Chuck Jones just before halftime, giving the Bulldogs, 4-0, a 20-3 advantage.

Robinson contributed field goals of 31 and 36 yards. He added 4 extra points, running his streak to 79 in a row since missing his first kick as a freshman. Robinson lifted his career total to 211 points, two more than former record holder Alan Leavitt.

Stewart also scored on a 7-yard run early in the second quarter and Barry Young, another freshman tailback who had 83 yards rushing, added another 54 seconds later on a 5-yard run. Both scores were set up by pass interceptions.

TCU's only score came on Greg Porter's 46-yard field goal against a brisk wind with 3:20 remaining in the first half. It was the longest of his career. It was TCU's third straight setback this season.

The Bulldog defense was led by end Pat McShea, who had two quarterback sacks for losses of 24 yards, deflected three passes while bearing down on TCU quarterback Kevin Haney and also recovered a fumble.

Haney was sacked five other times during the game and the Bulldogs also sacked backup quarterback Steve Stamp three times to shut down the TCU offense.

The Horned Frogs had a net of minus-8 yards when they put together their 32-yard field goal drive in the second quarter.

The Frogs had one other opportunity when Jim Bayuk intercepted Jeff Paulks' pass and rambled 40 yards to the Georgia 18 with 11 minutes remaining. Stamp was sacked twice in a row by Eddie Weaver for losses of 15 yards and, after Georgia was penalized 15 yards, the threat ended on two straight incomplete passes by Stamp.

Georgia's two quick fourth quarter touchdowns came after interceptions of Haney by Scott Woerner and freshman Freddie Gilbert.

Woerner immediately lateraled his interception to Jeff Hipp, who returned 23 yards to the TCU 42. Gilbert's interception came at the line of scrimmage and he returned it 13 yards to the TCU 12.

McMurry trips LCC

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Fullback Lester Lavalais rushed for 67 yards and scored one touchdown as McMurry College, the nation's fifth ranked NAIA Division 2 team, defeated Lubbock Christian College 27-6 Saturday in a Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association game.

Lavalais six-pointer in the first quarter was the only one scored in the first half on the rain-soaked field.

McMurry scored again in the third quarter on touchdown runs by Mark Cox and Eric Isaac.

LCC scored in the final seven seconds of the game on a 17-yard pass from Curtis Dean to Daryl Cash.

Redwine, Huskers just too much for Penn State

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Jarvis Redwine slashed through mistake-prone Penn State for 189 yards and two touchdowns while quarterback Jeff Quinn added another to fire unbeaten and third-ranked Nebraska to a 21-7 victory Saturday.

Redwine's 1-yard run in the third period capped a 13-play, 74-yard drive. The touchdown put the game out of reach for the 11th-ranked Nittany Lions, who suffered seven turnovers and had their quarterback sacked nine times for 89 yards in losses.

During that key drive, Quinn completed three passes for 30 yards. In all, he hit on 12 of 16 passes for 158 yards as the Cornhuskers dominated the second half.

Nebraska, now 3-0, cashed in on two Penn State turnovers to race to a 14-0 lead midway through the second period.

Quinn scored on a 1-yard run four plays after defensive end Derrie Nelson recovered a Jeff Hostetler fumble at the Penn State 30. It gave Nebraska a 7-0 lead with 5:55 left in the opening period.

In the second quarter, defensive back Sammy Sims intercepted a Todd Blackledge pass that tipped off the hands of tight end Brad Scovill.

Sims' 27-yard return put the ball on the Lions' 19, and Redwine's 3-yard scoring plunge came three plays later.

Penn State, now 2-1, finally got its offense untracked and drove 74 yards in eight plays for its lone touchdown. Tailback Curt Warner scored from the 3 with 4:06 remaining in the half. The key play was Blackledge's 30-yard pass to freshman wide receiver Kenny Jackson, which put the ball on the 5. Warner's score came two plays later.

Penn State's final chance to get back in the game was dashed midway through the final period, again on a turnover. The Lions had driven from their own nine to the Nebraska 11, aided by a 26-yard pass interference penalty against Russell Gary.

But on a third down play, Jackson fumbled a flanker reverse that middle guard Jeff Merrell recovered at the 25. The Lions failed to threaten seriously after that.

In the first half, Nebraska place-kicker Eddie Neil missed field goals of 42 and 44 yards. Kicker Kevin Seibel also missed a 40-yard attempt early in the third quarter after Curt Warner's fumble was recovered by Toby Williams at the Penn State 28.

Penn State mounted a late threat in the final minute of the first half. Linebacker Walker Ashley partially blocked a punt to give the Lions possession at the Nebraska 44. But Sims' second interception of Blackledge stopped the drive.

A record crowd of 84,565 and a national television audience saw Nebraska roll to 445 yards in total offense, including 287 on the ground. Penn State had 156 yards total. Warner led the ground attack with 84 yards on 16 carries.

Crenshaw holding five-stroke lead

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — Ben Crenshaw built a 7-stroke lead before taking his first bogey in two days and finished the third round of Napa's $300,000 golf tournament with a 5-stroke edge after a 4-under-par 68 Saturday.

It was the third consecutive round under 70 for the 28-year-old Texan, who hasn't won a tournament since January, 1979 but has finished second seven times since then.

Crenshaw's 54-hole total after Saturday's round on the 6,870-yard Silverado Country Club North Course was a 15-under 201. Jack Renner surged into second place at 206 by birdying the final three holes and finishing with a 3-under 67.

"I don't imagine Ben is too scared," said Renner, the who has had a rough year on the pro tour, winning $65,101 compared to $182,000 last season.

"The only person I have to worry about is myself," said Crenshaw.

The Napa tournament, the Anheuser-Busch Classic, offers a first prize of $54,000.

Crenshaw has won $183,727 so far this year, and a victory Sunday in his final tour event of the year would move him to fifth place on the money-winning list topped by Tom Watson, who has a record $513,408.

Watson, also making his final 1980 tour appearance, posted a 70 Saturday and was in a six-way tie for fifth place at 110.

place at 207, and Johnny Miller was next at 209 after shooting a 72. Joining Watson in fifth were Bobby Wadkins, Lon Hinkle, Dave Eichelberger, Tom Weiskopf and Gary Hallberg.

Lee's Schooler wins x-country

ODESSA — Midland Lee's Robert Schooler posted a 15:02 here at Floyd Gwinn Park to win the Odessa Junior College Invitational Cross Country meet Saturday.

Schooler's victory was his second of the season in as many outings. He won at San Angelo last week.

Odessa High won team honors, and was followed by San Angelo, Odessa Permian, Lee, Midland High and Big Spring.

Other Lee runners were Orlando Padilla, 11th; Carl Piccolo, 18th; Raymond Urias, 26th; Joey Odum, 31st; and John Hill, 35th. Running in the junior varsity division were Ector Reyes, James Chaucey, Lynn Nabi and Darrell Holmes. However, there was no team competition in that division.

Midland High's results were unavailable.

The local teams will travel to Abilene Saturday for their next competition. Both boys and girls will be entered in this meet.

Oilers face Bengals today in AFC Central contest

CINCINNATI (AP) — Proving their victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers was no fluke won't be easy for the Cincinnati Bengals.

The Bengals, 1-2 after a surprising 30-28 upset of the Super Bowl champs, tackle the ball-hogging Houston Oilers in Riverfront Stadium today.

Houston, 2-1, finished second to Pittsburgh in the rugged AFC Central Division last year.

The Bengals, who started their last two seasons with disastrous 0-8 and 0-6 records, are counting on the momentum of an early-season win to carry into the Houston game.

"Guys really had a great concentration on what they were doing last week," said Coach Forrest Gregg, referring to the Pittsburgh game. "I think they gained some confidence from the two heart-breaking losses at the beginning."

"It was like they were saying, 'Hey, we're not half-bad.' It's still too early in the season — three games into it — and a lot can happen."

Gregg is relying on a make-shift backfield to carry his offense. Fullback Charles Alexander was moved to halfback in practice this week, with running backs Archie Griffin, Deacon Turner and Cleotha Montgomery hobbled by ankle injuries.

Jack Thompson is expected to start at quarterback again in place of Ken Anderson, nursing a stretched ligament in his left knee.

The Oilers, employing a ball control offense in victories over Cleveland and Baltimore, don't know if indefatigable fullback Earl Campbell can play today because of a groin strain. But Coach Bum Phillips wasn't overly worried, with back-up fullback Rob Carpenter coming off a 114-yard afternoon against Baltimore.

"Carpenter runs the same plays, with pretty much the same style," Phillips said. "Carpenter is a little more elusive and Campbell is a little more powerful."

Turnbull gains net finals

ATLANTA (AP) — Fourth-seeded Wendy Turnbull defeated fellow Australian Dianne Fromholtz Saturday to advance to the finals today of the $100,000 Atlanta Tennis Classic.

Turnbull will play the winner of the Chris-Evert Lloyd-Hana Mandlikova match.

Turnbull defeated the fifth-seeded Fromholtz 6-4, 6-3. Turnbull had taken a 4-2 lead in the first set before Fromholtz evened the contest at 4-4.

But Turnbull, ranked seventh in the world, then won six consecutive games to take a 4-1 lead in the second set. Fromholtz, ninth in world rankings, rallied but was unable to head off Turnbull.

In the first doubles semifinal, the Wimbledon championship duo of Kathy Jordan and Anne Smith defeated Sherry Acker and Lele Forood.

Candi Reynolds and Ann Kiyomura were to play Barbara Potter and Sharon Walsh for the right to oppose Jordan and Smith in the final.

School officials blunder

Paris-Ennis game called off Friday

By ALAN SAYRE
Associated Press Writer
 While many of Texas' top-ranked football squads were enjoying a wee k-end off, Paris was raring to go Friday night against Ennis.
 Unfortunately, someone forgot to tell the officials.

Paris, ranked ninth among Class 4A teams in The Associated Press schoolboy football poll, and highly regarded Ennis were forced to cancel their scheduled game when the officiating crew failed to show up.

ENNIS SCHOOL Superintendent Harlan Daughn said the Fort Worth chapter of the Southwest Football Officials Association incorrectly listed the game as being scheduled for Oct. 24 instead of Sept. 26.

Paris Coach Bill Hicks and Ennis Coach Dick Stringfellow decided to cancel the contest.
 "We discussed playing the game tomorrow (Saturday night), but it cost us at least $2,000 to come down here and we couldn't do that again," Hicks said. "Coach Stringfellow didn't want to come to Paris to play the game and frankly I can't blame him," Hicks said.

OF THE top-ranked teams that managed to make the field, only one squad — fifth-ranked Tidehaven in Class 2A — failed to come away a winner on a Friday night marred by heavy rains and muddy fields across wide sections of Texas.

In Class 5A, No. 1 Temple, second-ranked Plano, third-ranked Port Arthur Jefferson had the weekend off, along with No. 7 Odessa Permian, ninth-place Trinity and 10th-seeded Bryan.

Fullback Kit Case scored three touchdowns and rushed for 148 yards as No. 4 Highland Park blasted Denison, 35-10.
 Running backs Alan Simmons and Mark Hatch scored two touchdowns each to lead fifth-ranked Brazoswood to a 35-10 shutout over Houston Belleaire.

Kevin Anderson and Ross Williams both tallied twice as sixth-rated Conroe ran over Spring Klein Forest, 28-13.

Ronnie Cole dashed for two touchdowns as No. 8 Port Neches-Groves beat Beaumont French, 28-13.
 In Class 4A, top-ranked Bay City squeaked by Columbia, 8-0; quarterback Wilbert Brown ran for one touchdown and threw for another in the fourth quarter to lead No. 2 Beaumont Hebert to a 14-10 win over Houston Forest Brook; and third-rated Gregory-Portland clipped Corpus Christi Ray, 18-0-6.

FOURTH-RANKED Gainesville massacred Ardmore, Okla., 55-0; seventh-ranked Andrews downed Lamesa, 27-7; and No. 8 Corsicana clipped Dallas Jesuit, 13-3.

No. 5 Navasota, sixth-ranked Waco Connally and Wichita Falls Hirsch, No. 10, were not scheduled.
 In Class 3A, No. 1 Breckenridge blanked Graham, 20-0; second-place Childress downed Wellington, 27-12; third-ranked Hallettsville whitewashed La Grange, 23-0; and fourth-rated Pittsburg edged Jacksonville, 14-7.

No. 5 Allen shut out Midlothian, 10-0; sixth-ranked Cedar Hill beat Quinlan, 21-6; Marble Falls, No. 7, trimmed Lampasas, 14-12; and eighth-place Edna won over Sweeny, 12-6.

NINTH-RANKED Refugio and No. 10 Slaton did not play.
 In Class 2A, No. 1 Pilot Point creamed Southlake Carroll, 40-6; second-ranked Waskom creamed Shreve Christian of Shreveport, La., 35-0; third-rated Troup defeated Garrison, 20-7; and No. 4 Groveton shellacked Woodville, 35-6.

Fifth-ranked Tidehaven played to a 6-6 standoff with Ingleside; No. 6 Shiner demolished Smithville, 26-7; ninth-rated Rotan won over Hamlin, 20-12; and Seagraves, No. 10, beat McCreary, 31-24.
 Panhandle, ranked seventh, and No. 8 Dublin had the weekend off.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Dan Marino threw three touchdown passes in the first half before leaving the game with a slight knee sprain to lead the sixth-ranked University of Pittsburgh to a 36-2 college football victory over winless Temple Saturday.
 Marino, a 6-foot-4, 215-pound sophomore, hit nine of 15 passes for 150 yards before he injured his knee on a scramble early in the second quarter. A team spokesman said the injury was not believed serious and that Marino could have played in the second half.

Temple, which fell to 0-3 as Pitt climbed to 3-0, got a break in the opening moments. Pitt punter Dave Hepler was tackled in the end zone for a safety after a snap from center sailed over his head. However, Pitt marched 73 yards on its next series for a touchdown that came on a 13-yard pass from Marino to split end Willie Collier.
 A series later, Marino led Pitt on another 46-yard touchdown drive, lob-

North Carolina in shocker

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's Amos Lawrence rushed for 103 yards as the 14th-ranked Tar Heels jared 19th-ranked Maryland 17-3 Saturday in the Atlantic Coast Conference opener for both teams.

Lawrence scored only once, on a touchdown pass from quarterback Rod Elkins, but his running was not the story of the game. Four Maryland fumbles, costly Maryland penalties and a rugged Tar Heel defense were.

Maryland tailback Charlie Wysocki was held to only 17 yards, the first time he hasn't gained more than 100 yards in five games.
 He fumbled three times in the first half, two of which led to North Carolina scores.

Maryland quarterback Mike Tice added to that in the second half by fumbling twice, one of which led to a Tar Heel score.

North Carolina put the final touches on their victory in the fourth quarter, following Tice's fumble. It was recovered by Lawrence Taylor on the Maryland 30.
 North Carolina tailback Kelvin Bryant took it in from 6 yards out five plays later with 13:09 remaining.

Maryland, 3-1, could do nothing on offense as the Tar Heels stymied the Terps before 51,400 fans, the largest crowd in North Carolina history.
 Maryland was held to 32 yards rushing, while North Carolina piled up 211 yards rushing.

It was the first time more than one touchdown has been scored on Maryland this year, and the first time in six games. The last time to score more than one touchdown on the Terps was North Carolina in last year's 17-14 Terp victory.

UCLA thunders past winless Wisconsin with freshman whiz

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Freshman Kevin Nelson, filling in for the injured Freeman McNeil, gained 123 yards on 20 carries and scored a touchdown Saturday as 16th-ranked UCLA overpowered winless Wisconsin, 35-0.

Nelson, who had gained only 40 yards in UCLA's first two games, surpassed that total early in leading the unbeaten Bruins to their third consecutive victory. Wisconsin is 0-3 and has yet to score a touchdown.

UCLA dominated all the way, scoring two touchdowns in each of the first two quarters. Nelson, younger brother of Stanford standout Darrin Nelson, gained 114 of his yards in the first half and didn't play in the final quarter. He also caught three passes for 36 yards.

Fullback Frank Bruno put the Bruins ahead to stay after just 6:08 of play when he plunged over from 1 yard out to cap a 46-yard drive.

Navy sinks William & Mary

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Fred Reitzel completed 13 of 16 passes, three for first-half touchdowns, to lead Navy to a 45-6 romp over William & Mary Saturday.

Reitzel, a senior who moved into the quarterback slot this year after two seasons in the defensive secondary, passed for 206 yards, most of which came in a 35-point first half.

His touchdowns came on passes of 13 and 18 yards to split end Greg Papajohn and 13 yards to tight end Curt Gainer.

Navy's defense, ranked third nationally going into the game, didn't allow a William & Mary score until the fourth quarter when quarterback Chris Garrity hit Ed Schiefelbein with a 23-yard scoring pass. It was the first touchdown given up by Navy in three games this year.

The loss was the fourth straight for William & Mary, while Navy was winning its second game after a season-opening loss to Virginia.

Alabama rolls past Vanderbilt

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Defensive back Jeremiah Castille blocked a Vanderbilt punt, caught it on the bounce without breaking stride and scored to highlight No. 1 Alabama's 41-0 Southeastern Conference football victory over the Vanderbilt Commodores Saturday.

It was 50th consecutive victory for the Crimson Tide on its home field and the 29th victory for Coach Bear Bryant, who needs 16 more to set an all-time record of 315.

 Alabama held a 10-point lead on a 1-yard dive by Joe Jones and a 32-yard field goal by Peter Kim when Castille rushed in untouched to block Jim Arnold's punt in the second quarter. The ball bounced high and Castille grabbed it as it came down for a 43-yard scoring play.

The Tide, en route to its 24th consecutive victory and its 24th straight SEC triumph, made it 20-0 with a 45-yard field goal by Kim just before the half ended.

Vanderbilt's Mike Woodard missed on field goal attempts of 49 and 37 yards.

Alabama was unstoppable in driving 80 yards after the opening kickoff, with runs of 26 yards by Major Ogilvie and 13 yards by Jones the big gainers.

Vanderbilt, now 0-3 with 26 consecutive conference losses, hosts Tulane next Saturday, while Alabama, now 3-0, plays Kentucky at Birmingham.

With the game in control, Bryant played substitutes much of the second half and they added three touchdowns, on runs of 3- and 13-yards by Ben Orcutt and on a 15-yard sweep around left end by Jeff Fagan on the final play of the game.

Vanderbilt's most serious threat came with a first down at the Alabama 6 at the start of the fourth quarter. On fourth down from the 2, quarterback Van Heflin fumbled the ball. Alabama linebacker Thomas Boyd picked it off and rambled 52 yards to the Commodore 45 before he was chased down.

Terry Potter was the game's leading runner, getting 86 yards for the losers on 16 carries. Jones was the top Alabama runner with 72 yards on only five carries. However, Alabama's 114 rushing yards were divided among 43 backs.

KENNY REDIN'S

Fin & Feather

EDITOR'S NOTE: Kenny Redin is currently covering the BASS Masters Classic on New York's St. Lawrence-Thousand Islands region. As an invited press/angler of the Bass Anglers Sportsman Society, Redin will be alongside the professionals, who will be casting for a $30,000 prize. Highlights of this competition will appear in this column in the near future.

ALEXANDRIA BAY, N.Y. — The "I Love New York" tourism promotion is working — on southern bass fishermen, at least.

The Thousand Islands region of New York's St. Lawrence River is a favorite of the top-ranked professional bass fishermen in the country, according to a survey of qualifiers for the 1986 BASS Masters Classic, which is now in progress.

Before Thousand Islands was revealed as the site of the $70,000 world championship bass contest, the 41 pro anglers who will compete in the event were asked, "Where would you most like the Classic to be held?"

Of the 35 responding to the question, more than one-fourth picked Thousand Islands. No other body of bass water in the nation drew more than three votes.

"The thing fishermen like about the place is that they can catch so many fish and have fun doing it whether they win the tournament or not," believes Charlie Campbell of Forsyth, Missouri.

Campbell and 39 other professional anglers earned the right to compete for the $30,000 first prize (the richest in pro bass fishing) by catching the most pounds of bass in seven preliminary bass fishing contests in the Bass Anglers Sportsman Society pro tournament circuit.

When the Classic got underway at Capt. Thomson's Resort, the contingent of pro BASSERS, mostly from southern states, fanned out among the 1,834 islands in a 50-mile stretch of the St. Lawrence and eastern Lake Ontario in search of five bass, New York limits of smallmouth and largemouth bass.

"Limiting out won't be a problem," say anglers familiar with Thousand Islands, "even though they'll have only about eight hours to do so."

"Jimmy Houston caught his limit every day and finished in 80th place," recalls Campbell of one of the three national qualifying BASS tournaments held at Thousand Islands.

The chore in the world finals of bass fishing will be catching a limit of bass averaging four pounds apiece every day. That's what it will take to win the Classic predicts Roland Martin of Broken Arrow, Okla., who won the 1978 New York Invitational by doing just that.

"Thousand Islands is one of the richest and most productive bass fisheries I've ever seen," commented Ray Scott, president and founder of the 350,000 member fishing society. "It was a natural for BASS to pick Thousand Islands as the site."

More than 100 outdoor writers, photographers and broadcast journalists throughout the country are here to cover bass fishing's biggest event.

ABC's 20/20 News Magazine television program, which dispatched a crew for former fugitive Abbie Hoffman's Thousand Islands hideaway, has assigned staff members to cover a more upbeat story here — the competition among 41 of America's best bass fishermen for the $30,000 first prize.

Also recording the three-day fishoff are two nationally syndicated television shows — Jerry McKinnis' "Fishing Hole" and "Jimmy Houston Outdoors." Victory Films will have a documentary movie crew on hand. A dozen radio and television stations have sent crew members and the Classic is being covered by Master Control Radio Network of Fort Worth.

The rest of the 102-media press corps are staff members from national magazines and newspapers from major cities in 31 states and Canada.

Journalists are getting a first hand taste of competitive bass fishing, with each assigned to fish one or more days as the partner of a professional angler competing in the Classic.

Fry charges former football aide after loss to Nebraska

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — University of Iowa football Coach Hayden Fry has charged that one of his former aides supplied the University of Nebraska with volumes of information about Fry's coaching tendencies that helped the Cornhuskers in their 57-0 rout of the Hawkeyes last Saturday.

In a story in Saturday's editions, the Des Moines Register quoted Fry as saying that Jerry Moore, a former assistant on his staff at Southern Methodist, cooperated with Nebraska.

"I don't blame (Nebraska coach) Tom Osborne for using all the information he could get. But, I'm crushed about the source of his information," Fry said.

Fry did not claim there was anything illegal about the assistance Moore allegedly gave Nebraska.

Moore was an aide with Nebraska in 1972, then succeeded Fry as North Texas State head coach when Fry came to Iowa in 1978.

Fry said Nebraska, ranked No. 3 nationally, had "the book, the audibles, the whole thing."

"We came here so quick that we left six years of game film from North Texas State, plus the last two at Southern Methodist," Fry said.

"I'm an old coach who sticks with things that work. You break down eight years of films, throw the information in a computer, and you can get a pattern of tendencies in a hurry."

"The films are silent and you don't acquire audibles from silent films. I don't know the extent that North Texas cooperated with Nebraska, but Jerry spent a week at their last spring practice."

Fry said he and his coaches were suspicious during the game because Nebraska seemed to know so much about their team. He said his suspicions grew as he studied the game films "so we started calling around."

"I won't call Tom Osborne because Nebraska did nothing illegal in acquiring all the information possible," Fry said. "They beat us, 57-0. But with all the information they had, they're not as good as it seemed and we're not as bad."

Fry did say he planned to call Moore and North Texas Athletic Director Andy Everest, also a former Fry football aide.

Fry, who begins a term on the ethics committee of the American Football Coaches Association in January, says he may bring up such situations.

"As soon as this hits the paper, a lot of people are going to say, 'Fry's moaning,'" Fry told the Register. "There's nothing criminal about what happened but I just don't appreciate the ethics of the rascal who gave the information. When you help a guy get a head job and this happens..."

Neither Osborne nor Moore could be reached immediately for comment.

Missouri buries San Diego State

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Missouri quarterback Phil Bradley fired two touchdown passes, and running back James Wilder scored twice as the 12th-ranked Tigers buried San Diego State 31-7 in an intercollegiate college football game Saturday.

Missouri's fierce defense, which forced six turnovers and limited the Aztecs to minus rushing yardage until the fourth quarter, triggered a 17-point second quarter eruption with a fumble recovery and the first of three interceptions by cornerback Bill Whitaker.

Bradley, a 6-foot-1 senior, opened scoring with a 10-yard pass to tight end Andy Gibbler and added a 52-yard bomb to running back Terry Hill in the third quarter. Wilder led all rushers with 94 yards on 20 carries scoring on runs of 8 and 2 yards.

The unbeaten Tigers 3-0 permitted just 14 yards rushing. They entered the game as the nation's No. 3 team in rushing defense and have allowed just 91 yards on the ground. San Diego State, unable to stem the withering pass rush, dropped to 1-2.

Trailing 17-0 at half time, San Diego State stunned the Tigers with a 75-yard scoring pass from junior quarterback Matt Kofler to flanker Bobby Taylor.

On Missouri's next series, the Aztecs recovered a fumble at the Tigers 9-yard line, but Whitaker's third interception — and sixth in two years against San Diego State — kept the Tigers in control.

Hagler stops Minter

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — American Marvin Hagler won the undisputed middleweight boxing title by stopping Alan Minter of England in one minute, 45 seconds of the third round in their scheduled 15-round fight Saturday night.

Hagler, from Brockton, Mass., battered the Englishman around the ring for the second and third rounds and Minter's face was a mask of blood when Panamanian referee Carlos Berrocal called a halt to the bout.

The American forced Minter to trade punches from the start and opened two cuts around the champion's left eye in the first round.

Hagler twice rocked Minter in the second and opened another nasty cut under the English fighter's nose.

Minter's corner could do nothing to stem the flow of blood and as Hagler hammered away relentlessly the referee had no option but to stop the fight.

CHUCK DAVIS OUTDOORS

Pecan Bayou proves great for family outing

Greg Davis, using his usual mixture of one per cent skill and 99 per cent luck, caught the first fish and won the two-bit bet.

"I've got another," Greg shouted to me victoriously. With that exclamation my fish-catching son set the scene for our excursion to Pecan Bayou near Brownwood.

Hot, humid and overrun with mosquitoes large enough to mate with turkeys, the bayou affords the fisherman and his family a change of pace. It is a good spot for a leisurely family outing.

After learning that Greg caught his bass on a blaze-orange colored spinner bait, his siblings were scouring my tackle box for replicas which they found and used.

My wife snapped a brightly colored spinner onto her rig, then went to the spot vacated by Greg's brothers, who were now shouldering Greg for action at his hot spot.

Joy immediately hooked a feisty largemouth which battled into the shallows near an overhang of mesquite. The pound and a half bass battled strongly and made repeated runs into the murky water to escape.

It gave Joy a tussle on her ultra-light spinning tackle. Finally, it was landed. Holding the fish firmly with her thumb and index finger, she proudly hoisted it to shoulder height and exclaimed triumphantly, "There."

We caught enough bass—with a few catfish added for quality—for a fish apiece with corn bread and fried potatoes. The fish were deep fried to perfection in a No. 14 dutch oven. The corn bread, with jalapeno pieces added, as baked in another dutch oven. Mesquite coals were fuel.

The late evening fish—feast was prelude to an evening of relaxed catfishing.

CATFISH are night feeders, even in usually muddy or murky water. Some of the water is the color of a chocolate malt, but the fish that come from them are delicious, even though it's hard to figure how they can find your bait to get from there to the frying pan. Luckily, cats are fish that feed by sensory organs, rather than sight. The Fu Manchu whiskers that channels sport are not there for beauty. They help the catfish find his food. It follows that the stinkier the bait, the easier it will be for the fish to find it—and that's exactly why there is no perfect bait for catfish.

Veteran anglers have secret recipes that are handed down from father to son with all the furtiveness and intrigue of a map of Lost Dutchman Goldmines.

Shrimp, chicken, livers, congealed blood, chicken guts, cheese, doughballs, plain old worms and even laundry soap are favored concoctions.

Out best catfish of the evening came about 9 when a three-pounder sucked up a chunk of chicken liver. A catfish this big is a real battler on ultra light tackle. One in the over-five pound class becomes a mighty tough opponent. They don't jump, but the deep, strong, boring fight they wage is a real kick.

Small waters, such as Pecan Bayou, are ideal for family fishing. Some of my children are too young and too small to fish more complicated or dangerous waters.

Lake, Pond or slow moving waters can give the simple, slow pleasure I often enjoyed as a boy. Rig a bopper three or four feet above your baited hook—cast and relax.

It's a remarkable way to soothe the nerves after a week of hectic activity. It's also a fine method for teaching youngsters to fish. They can learn to cast and handle bait without snagging $2 lures on the lake bottom.

Heart attack claims young football player

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A 17-year-old football player suffered a cardiac arrest during a high school game and died shortly before midnight at a suburban Pittsburgh hospital.

A spokesman for Saint Clair Hospital said Bruce Groomes of Donora, Washington County, died Friday night after doctors at the hospital tried for two hours to save him. The boy's mother was at his side. Groomes, a senior line-backer for Ringgold High School, was playing on Mount Lebanon's astro turf field when he suffered the attack mid-way through the third quarter.

"He stood up and fell right back," said Jack Saracco, who was manning the yardage markers on the sidelines. "The paramedics gave him electric shock, but he never regained consciousness. He didn't move an inch."

While doctors from both teams worked on the player at mid-field, his teammates and Mount Lebanon players knelt and were led in prayers by their coaches. Shaken fans watched from the stands and cheerleaders wept along the sidelines.

Doctors continued working on the youth for 30 minutes before he was taken to the hospital by ambulance.

The game was suspended.

Allen paces USC to 24-7 victory

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Marcus Allen rushed for 216 yards and two fourth-quarter touchdowns and Gordon Adams passed 29 yards to Kevin Williams as No. 5-ranked Southern Cal turned back stubborn Minnesota 24-7 Saturday.

The Trojans, who are unbeaten in 23 straight games dating back to 1978, only led 7-0 at halftime against the aroused Gophers, who were humiliated 48-14 by USC a year ago in the Coliseum.

USC, 3-0, had trouble getting untracked until Allen, a junior tailback, began taking advantage of the gaping holes created by the Trojans' huge offensive line.

Minnesota, 1-2, had cut a 10-0 lead to 10-7 on Marion Barber's 16-yard TD run midway through the fourth quarter. But Allen, the latest in a long line of great USC tailbacks, raced 20 yards for a touchdown with just 3:30 remaining. He also scored on a 37-yard jaunt with 1:02 left to silence the near-capacity crowd of 55,115 at Memorial Stadium.

Trojan safety Ronnie Lott intercepted three passes, the second of which set up USC's first touchdown in the second quarter.

Adams was sacked by the Gophers on a third-and-four situation at the Minnesota 29, but the Gophers were penalized for having 12 men on the field. On the next play, Adams hit Williams in the corner of the end zone for the wide receiver's, 23rd career touchdown reception.

Eric Hipp booted a 39-yard field goal late in the third quarter to give Southern Cal its 10-3 lead.

The Trojans, who also have beaten Tennessee and South Carolina, meet Arizona State next Saturday in Los Angeles. Arizona State was the last team to beat Southern Cal, a 20-7 upset in the third game of the 1978 season.

South Carolina downs Michigan

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — South Carolina's All-America tailback George Rogers ran for one touchdown and fullback Johnnie Wright plunged for another in the second half to lead the Gamecocks to a 17-14 comeback victory over Michigan in a non-conference college football game Saturday.

Rogers, the 6-foot-2, 220-pound Heisman Trophy candidate, gained 142 yards on 36 carries through a Michigan defense that was stacked to stop him.

Michigan, which lead 14-3 at the half, took the second-half kickoff and drove all the way to the South Carolina 8 where, on first and goal, fullback Stanley Edwards swept around his right side and fumbled the ball into the end zone where the Gamecocks' linebacker Walter Kater recovered.

South Carolina then drove 80 yards in 14 plays to score on a 2-yard plunge by Rogers and narrowed the score to 14-10.

Michigan took the ensuing kickoff, but tried a fake punt on a fourth-and-one situation on the Wolverine 29-yard line. Edwards was tackled for no gain and South Carolina needed only seven plays to strike for the go-ahead TD with Wright diving over from the 1.

Tennessee crushes Auburn, 42-0

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Quarterback Jeff Olszewski, blending passes and the slashing runs of Terry Daniels, guided Tennessee on four straight scoring marches in the first half Saturday as the Volunteers crushed 18th-ranked Auburn 42-0.

Olszewski, scoring once himself, hit 12 of 15 passes for 154 yards and one touchdown, and James Berry bulled for three more as Tennessee totally dominated the previously unbeaten Tigers.

Auburn, 2-1, left a record home crowd of 75,000 sitting in quiet frustration as Olszewski led scoring drives of 89, 46, 87 and 70 yards to post a 28-0 lead at the half.

Less than two minutes into the second half, it was 35-0 as Daniels roared for 20 and 19 yards and Berry scored on a short burst.

For the day, Daniels had 125 yards on 21 carries. Tennessee, now 2-2 with both losses coming in cliffhangers to ranked powers Southern California and Georgia, moved the ball virtually at will. It stifled the few Tiger drives with fumble recoveries and interceptions.

Olszewski, a junior from Parma, Ohio, who didn't get the starting nod until game day, was consistent on short and medium range passes. His scoring strike came on a dazzling one-handed grab in the end zone to Reggie Harper from 11 yards out.

Illinois, Air Force in deadlock

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Illinois' Mike Bass kicked a 37-yard field late in the fourth quarter Saturday as the Illini struggled to a 20-20 tie with underdog Air Force.

The feisty Falcons chewed up the Illinois defense with their wishbone, and snapped back from a 17-7 halftime deficit.

Ted Sundquist put Air Force back in the game with a 63-yard touchdown run in the third quarter, and teammate Charlie Heath put the Falcons ahead with a 1-yard plunge in the fourth quarter.

Illinois' last real chance to win the game fizzled with an incomplete pass in the end zone, and Bass came in to tie the game with his second field goal of the day.

The game, before 45,638 fans, gave Illinois a season record of 2-1-1, and the Falcons a record of 0-3-1.

Gary Farrell, right, was fatally shot while chasing an alleged mugger in Philadelphia Friday afternoon. His brothers, Michael, left, and William, second from right, who were on duty in the same precinct, responded to a call for assistance and

Officer killed in Philadelphia

Wife, brothers also on duty at time

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — As Patrolman Gary Farrell lay bleeding in the police van from a gunshot wound, his brothers were near. Officer Michael Farrell was at the wheel and Officer William Farrell was at his side.

His wife, Officer Stephanie Farrell, made it to the hospital just before he died.

Gary Farrell and his partner, Bill Mock, were on patrol early Friday afternoon when a crowd on a Germantown street corner frantically flagged them down. An old woman had been beaten and mugged, they said.

Farrell leaped from the police wagon and spotted a fleeing man. He followed him across a vacant lot and into some woods, police said.

Mock was following in the van when he heard shots.

"I'm shot, I'm shot," Farrell cried.

Mock ran into the woods and an exchange of gunfire erupted, police said. Mock and Chester Tann, a 33-year-old man with a history of eight criminal arrests, both fell wounded.

Michael and William Farrell, like their brother both assigned to the 14th police district, responded to Mock's call for assistance. They found their brother lying among the trees, bleeding from a chest wound, police said.

Stephanie Farrell, 26, also on duty in the district, sped to the scene, then to Germantown Hospital where her husband had been taken.

Shortly after 4 p.m., Police Commissioner Morton Solomon, accompanied by Mayor William Green, had an announcement for a group of reporters and police officers huddled outside the hospital.

"Officer Farrell passed away on the operating table," Solomon said.

Farrell was the third Philadelphia policeman to die in the line of duty this year.

Tann died at Einstein Medical Center at 3:30 p.m. According to police records, he had been arrested eight times since 1967 on charges ranging from juvenile delinquency to burglary and weapons offenses.

He was convicted only twice — for juvenile delinquency in 1967 and for aggravated robbery, larceny, and possession of a deadly weapon in 1972. He was sentenced to nine years probation on the adult charges.

Officer Mock was listed in stable condition Saturday in the intensive care unit of Germantown Hospital.

"Now we have two more policemen...one dead, another shot...by someone who had been arrested eight times," said Green, citing "just how miserably, in my judgment, the criminal justice system has failed...It's a disgrace and something has got to be done."

First national election since 1968 still important to Panama's leaders

By JOE FRAZIER

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Few here are writing off the importance of Panama's national elections Sunday — the first since 1968 in which political parties have participated — even though the outcome is known in advance.

There are no major personalities or issues as two government parties, two from the opposition and three communist free agents are contesting 19 seats for an executive council to the National Legislature.

Even a sweep by opposition candidates would leave the government's Revolutionary Democratic Party firmly in control, but political leaders here do not discount the importance of the elections.

"We consider it training," said Ricardo Arias Calderon, political director of the Christian Democrats. "People have been politically inactive for 12 years. There has been a fear of politics. We want to give them the sense that they can oppose, we want to involve as many people as we can."

By 1984, when Panamanians are scheduled to elect a president and all 50 members of the legislature, the opposition hopes to present a broad coalition. "But that cannot be done from a cold start," he said.

An effort to bind the opposition into one front this time fell apart when Arnulfo Arias, the leader of the Panamanista Party, refused to lead it.

The Panamanistas were ousted in a 1968 coup led by Gen. Omar Torrijos, and do not recognize the government. Since they did not register as a party and are boycotting the elections their strength is not certain — but it is said to equal or surpass that of the government party, which has about 150,000 members.

Nine splinter socialist groups also are urging people not to vote as a show of no confidence in the government, which officially is led by President Aristides Royo, said by Torrijos' front man. Torrijos denies that.

There are few hard issues in this election and Panamanian politics traditionally have been based more on personalities than on issues.

"The fact is that there are only two real leaders in Panama today, Arias and Torrijos, and neither of them is taking part in this," said a government official who asked not to be named.

Torrijos banned political parties when he took power in the coup. The current assembly was elected in 1978 but parties as such were not allowed to operate. The assembly is almost totally made up of government party members.

He agreed to democratize the country's political system in exchange for key U.S. Senate support for the Panama Canal treaties, which he wanted desperately. The treaties turned the former Panama Canal Zone over to Panama a year ago and will give Panama the canal itself at the end of this century.

The Christian Democrats, the opposition party that campaigned the hardest, accuse the government of being paternalistic and "statist" in approaching the nation's problems. They accuse Torrijos of basing foreign policy on "a melodramatic of Third World leadership" that drags Panama into areas where it has no interest.

Cleveland buses ready for full-scale integration

CLEVELAND (AP) — School buses are set to roll in Cleveland on Monday, and by the end of the week, officials say, they will have brought about full-scale integration in Ohio's largest school system.

All officials involved predict a peaceful and successful transition from the partial desegregation in effect for the past school year.

Last year, children in all elementary, some junior high and a few high schools in the 82,000-pupil system were bused from one part of Cleveland to another.

On Monday, the school system begins busing about one-third of the more than 40,000 students to be bused to achieve integration. By Thursday, full-scale implementation is to be complete in the system where two-thirds of the students are black.

The city is the most recent to employ systemwide desegregation. Los Angeles integrated its public schools with busing two weeks ago.

In Cleveland, all desegregation decisions are being made by a court-appointed administrator, Dr. Donald Waldrip, rather than by a school board. Waldrip — the hand-picked choice of U.S. District Judge Frank Battisti — took over the desegregation plan, now in Phase III, on Aug. 15.

Three weeks earlier, Battisti had found top school officials, including Superintendent Peter Carlin, in contempt of his 1978 order to end segregation of the city's schools. Battisti conducted 23 days of contempt hearings in April and May.

The desegregation of Cleveland schools has taken longer than expected because of administrative turmoil, court orders and appeals, some of which are still to be decided.

"In 1978, when this desegregation started, there was a great deal of hostility toward the idea. In 1980, the issue has shifted to one of competence and whether this school system can run the district," said Leonard Stevens, director of the court-created Office of School Monitoring and Community Relations.

The office was created by Battisti in May 1978 to observe progress of the desegregation order and help the public understand the process.

Stevens said his office, which includes 160 monitors, will concentrate on high schools and junior highs and spot check elementary schools. Monitors also will observe some bus pickup and dropoff points.

Police officials say 292 officers will be also assigned to monitor the situation. Cleveland has been free of violence in earlier integration efforts and none is expected Monday.

The strongest anti-busing group, Citizens Opposed to Rearranging Kids, has circumscribed busing by opening a "Freedom Academy," what it calls a "private public school." The organization says 500 pupils are attending classes taught in an old public school building purchased by the organization following the desegregation order.

In a news conference last week, Stevens spoke of the lack of violence in Cleveland.

"I have a hunch that after the episodes in Boston and Louisville, episodes that appeared on television screens and in newspaper photos, the message sent to parents was that this sort of ugly violence is undesirable," he said.

Refugee airlift to Fort Chaffee is continuing

FORT CHAFFEE, Ark. (AP) — An airlift to transfer 6,000 more Cuban refugees to Fort Chaffee continued Saturday with some potential troublemakers aboard one flight from Fort McCoy, Wis.

Federal officials are moving all the remaining refugees without sponsors to the Arkansas base and plan to close down other relocations centers in Florida, Wisconsin and Pennsylvania.

Not ticketed for Fort Chaffee were 244 refugees in prison at the McNeil Island federal prison in Washington state where about 40 dissidents were on a hunger strike to protest the slow pace of resettlement. They were among refugees — many of whom have prison records — weeded out during the early stages of the this year's exodus from Cuba.

A DC-8 carrying 149 male Cubans from Fort McCoy was the first plane to touch down Saturday at the Fort Smith Airport. Among them were nine Cubans designated by officials as "Level 2." The designation is for Cubans who are suspected troublemakers, but who have not been charged with a crime. They are kept segregated from the other refugees.

State Department spokeswoman Sylvia Spencer said they are not "hardcore troublemakers."

In the security plan approved by Gov. Bill Clinton, federal officials agreed that hardcore troublemakers would not be brought to Fort Chaffee.

The rest of the McCoy refugees were to arrive by the end of the week. Another 643 refugees were transferred from Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., last week.

After a one-week break, the refugees from Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa., will be flown to Fort Chaffee. The consolidation is expected to be completed by mid-October, increasing the refugee population here to about 9,500.

State Department spokesman Van Rush announced Friday that during the weekend, Immigration and Naturalization Service officials would deputize all of the Park Police so they can assist the U.S. Border Patrol in arresting any refugee who tried to flee Fort Chaffee.

Paul Michel, deputy associate attorney general in the Justice Department at Washington, said Friday that all Cuban refugees at Chaffee and other federal refugee camps are in the custody of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

"There isn't any question at all that they're in custody, and they are not free to leave," Michel said.

Ms. Spencer said the camp's Spanish-language newspaper recently carried an article about the McCoy refugees being afraid of coming to Fort Chaffee.

"We tried to show them that they are just alike," she said. "We tried to take steps to prevent any problems."

She said one step was eliminating a hierarchy of Cuban leadership that had been established at the camps to prevent a power struggle. Another step, she said, was carefully integrating the new refugees into the housing areas already occupied by Chaffee veterans.

Judge orders engineers back to work

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Southern Pacific Railroad service was halted in seven western states Saturday by a surprise strike by 2,300 engineers protesting a mandatory test for intoxication.

"We're effectively shut down west of El Paso, Texas," said Southern Pacific spokesman Jim Loveland.

The strike, which began Friday night, affected 6,500 miles of track and 20,000 employees in Texas, Utah, Nevada, Mexico, Arizona, California, Nevada and Oregon. Operations in eight other states were not affected.

U.S. District Judge William Ingram ordered the railroad engineers back to work Saturday, but there was no immediate indication from the union whether its members would comply.

In addition to granting the railroad's request for a temporary injunction, Ingram scheduled a hearing for Oct. 6 on permanent injunction.

Loveland characterized the walk-out as an "illegal wildcat strike" which came in reaction to a railroad "experiment" to ferret out any train engineers who may report to work under the influence of alcohol.

"No one who has taken the test has failed," Loveland said, adding that some refused to take the test and were sent home.

"We have tried to get in touch with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers with no luck," he added. "We think if we can get together we can settle this. We consider it a minor issue."

Union spokeswoman Amy Foster said the alcohol test constituted a change in railroad's work rules.

She said no talks were scheduled on the dispute. Ms. Foster denied that management had been attempting to contact the union.

The strike by 1,500 engineers and 800 firemen, also called assistant engineers, stalled 700 to 800 daily freight trains, all Amtrak passenger trains, and the daily commuter runs for 11,000 riders on the San Francisco Peninsula.

Loveland said commuter operations are light on Saturdays, but the disruption could cause serious problems on work days. Highways 101 and 280 are the only freeway arteries connecting San Francisco with its 40-mile-long peninsula.

Amtrak trains shut down included the famous Coast Starlight from Seattle to Los Angeles, and the Oakland-Chicago and the Los Angeles-New Orleans runs. The trains have been going at peak capacity since Pacific Southwest Airlines pilots went on strike last week. The strike started in El Paso shortly after 9 p.m. Friday and spread westward.

Picket lines went up at several Southern Pacific sites affected by the strike.

Loveland said the railroad decided on spot checks with an electronic alcohol-detection device called an "Intoxilyzer" because of "instances where engineers have shown up and been intoxicated."

TESCO president cites long-range planning to save customers money

Planning for the future is a tradition among Texas Electric employees — a tradition that continues to mean multi-million-dollar savings to its customers, TESCO President Bill Marquardt said last week.

This planning has brought about savings despite the many factors that are causing the price of electricity to increase, he said at the company's annual Quarter Century Club banquet honoring 25-year TESCO employees in the Permian Basin. The banquet was held in Midland Center Thursday night.

"Inflation, higher operating and construction costs, costly federal regulations and rising fuel costs — all these things have increased what it costs us to provide good service to our customers," Marquardt said.

TESCO can't do much, he said, about inflation and the wastefulness of the federal bureaucracy, both of which have raised the company's operating and construction costs.

"We at TESCO, like all citizens, can only work through the political process to try to change the government policies that created these problems," he said.

But, Marquardt said, the company has been able to do something to lessen the effect of rising fuel costs on customers' bills.

"Our low-cost natural gas contracts and our lignite coal have saved our customers more than $1 billion so far," he said, "and our use of these two fuels is no accident. Long-range planning by dedicated employees 10, 20 and 30 years ago made this happen."

Marquardt pointed out the company's Old Ocean natural gas contract, which was signed 20 years ago, will expire at the end of this year.

When the contract expires, the amount of gas it supplied will have to be replaced with gas purchased at today's far higher prices, and the result will be higher bills to customers.

But, Marquardt said, "Because of Old Ocean, their (customers') bills have been substantially lower, than they would have been. When that contract expires, it will have saved our customers more than $700 million."

Even after Old Ocean expires, he added, customers' bills will not be as high as they would have been if it were not for another example of long-range planning — the acquisition of lignite coal reserves, beginning 30 years ago, and the construction during the late 1960s and the '70s of new power plants to use it.

Through the end of 1979, customers saved about $250 million because the company was able to use cheaper lignite instead of natural gas to produce part of their electricity, Marquardt said, and those savings will continue through the life of the company's lignite-fueled power plants.

The Comanche Peak nuclear plant also "will provide a supply of electricity that people can count on," he said.

"The plant has been designed well. It's being built carefully, and it's going to be operated safely," he said. "And it will help hold down the price of electricity to our customers — just as lignite is doing today."

Government's gold medallion sale brings fewer buyers than expected

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Still for sale: More than one million gold medallions, minted by the U.S. government.

When the one-ounce and half-ounce medallions went on sale in July, the government was worried that it wouldn't have enough to go around. Sales were limited — three to a customer. The Treasury Department said orders would be accepted only until Sept. 30 and talked about an earlier sales cutoff if the supply of medallions ran out.

The gold rush didn't materialize, however. As of the middle of September, the Treasury Department had received orders for only 22 percent of the available medallions — 332,000 of the 1.5 million which were produced. Last week, the department announced an extension of the sales deadline through Dec. 31.

A 48-YEAR BAN on American ownership of gold was lifted in 1974, but until this year, consumers who wanted small amounts of pure gold — as opposed to the alloys used in jewelry — had to settle for foreign coins like South African Krugerrands, Mexican pesos and Canadian Maple Leafs.

Sales of the foreign coins boomed; according to one industry estimate, Americans bought 6 million ounces of gold bullion in the form of foreign coins in 1979 alone.

In 1978, Congress directed the Treasury to start selling small amounts of gold in the form of medallions honoring American artists. The ones issued this year — honoring painter Grant Wood and singer Marian Anderson — are the first of a planned series of 10.

THE PRICE of the medallions changes daily according to the price of gold bullion. It is based on the previous day's closing price of gold on the New York Commodity Exchange, plus a premium of $12 for the one-ounce medallion and $6 for the half-ounce medallion. The medallions must be ordered through post offices, with a special form. Payment must be in the form of a U.S. Postal Service money order, a certified check or a cashier's check.

George Hunter of the Bureau of the Mint said that 156,000 orders for 157,000 half-ounce medallions and 175,000 one-ounce medallions had been received as of Sept. 15.

"Why haven't sales been better? We really had nothing to compare it with," said Al Hattal of the Treasury Department, adding: "It (the medallion) wasn't something that Treasury originated. It was Congress."

including one coin dealer who asked not to be identified by name — said the complicated order system was to blame for the poor sales showing. "People were confused," said the coin dealer.

Hattal defended the system. He said it was designed to keep prices "as low as possible." Coin dealers, he said, might have charged a bigger premium than the government.

A new entry on the market, meanwhile, is the recently introduced Australian gold coin. The 22-carat gold coin has a face value of 200 Australian dollars — equal to a little more than $230. It weighs 10 grams — a little less than one-third of an ounce.

THE ROYAL Australian Mint has set up an office in New Jersey to sell the coin, which has a portrait of Queen Elizabeth II on one side and a koala bear on the other. It is available by mail order only and costs $295. The price of the Australian coin is fixed; it will not fluctuate with the price of gold.

If you are considering buying gold — in any form — it is important to understand a few basics. Gold is usually measured by the troy ounce which is equal to about 1.1 regular ounces. The purity of gold varies. If the metal is completely pure — with no traces of any other substance — it is usually referred to as "fine" gold. Twenty-four carat gold is 99.95 percent pure.

Arson suspect files damage suit

DALLAS (AP) — The City of Dallas and two fire department employees are named in a suit filed by a woman who claims she was coerced into signing a confession to arson.

Norma Louise Dawson's 1978 trial ended abruptly when prosecutors asked the judge to dismiss the charge Mrs. Dawson started a fire in her husband's apartment.

The suit says a tape recording of her interrogation shows fire investigator Leroy Abercrombie told Mrs. Dawson "if she did not sign a confession, she would go to the Dallas County Jail and would not be able to obtain bond and that her child ... would also be kept at the Dallas County Jail."

Mrs. Dawson, who seeks $50,000 in damages, also names as a defendant fire investigator Don E. Howard III, who she claims prepared the typed confession knowing its contents were false.

Mount St. Helens quiet again

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Mount St. Helens quieted down Saturday, exactly six months after the volcano ended 123 years of dormancy and began spewing ash and steam.

Though the volcano rumbled some Friday, Greg Johnson of the U.S. Forest Service said Saturday. "She's quiet today and visibility is good."

The volcano started the day Friday with two quick blasts of steam — reaching as high as 15,000 feet — accompanied by low-level harmonic tremors. But it remained silent the rest of the day, Johnson said.

A.B. Adams of the University of Washington geophysics center said no significant seismic activity was recorded overnight, though there were avalanches, which are common.

Ron Peterson of the U.S. Geological Survey said the plume, which began spewing at 7:47 a.m. Friday, was composed mostly of steam and gas, with very little ash.

Jim Brady of the Federal Emergency Management Agency said volcanic ash in the plume probably was kicked up inside the crater, rather than released from magma, or molten rock, rising within the volcano.

Another university earthquake monitor, Steve Bryant, said weak harmonic tremors were recorded between 7:40 a.m. and 8 a.m. Friday.

On March 27, Mount St. Helens began spewing steam and ash, ending a 123-year hiatus in activity.

The climax came May 18 with a shattering blast that blew away the top 1,300 feet of what had been a 9,677-foot peak, killing 31 people and leaving 32 others listed as missing and presumed dead. Later, there were major ash eruptions on May 25, June 12, July 22 and Aug. 7.

Until this week, the mountain had been virtually silent since a minor ash spurt and a harmonic tremor on Aug. 15.

However, glowing lava within the crater, swelling of the crater rim, harmonic tremors and steam eruptions all show the volcano should not be taken lightly, according to a six-month review and report by Dwight R. Crandell, a top USGS volcano expert.

The report said that by observing Mount St. Helens, geologists had gained a better understanding of Cascade Mountain volcanoes and had moved closer to being able to predict future eruptions.

"Although the volcano has been particularly quiet since a minor eruption on Aug. 15, we are not about to relax our monitoring," Crandell said.

A "lateral or high-angle eruption" could hurl rocks and debris up to six miles away, but there probably would be some warning before a lateral blast like the one May 18, Crandell said.

The potential to deposit as much as three feet of ash 20 miles downwind and to send pyroclastic flows of superheated ash, debris and gases down the Toutle River Valley.

Trying to figure out the situation, Jess Kozman, who plays Corban, questions Elizabeth, portrayed by Debbie Fell in the play "Catch Me If You Can." The play starts Saturday and will continue through Oct. 18 in Theatre Midland. (Staff Photo by Brian Hendershot)

'Catch Me If You Can' opens Friday at MCT

"Catch Me If You Can," the comedy mystery which won a special award from the Mystery Writers of America, opens Friday in Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. It is scheduled to run through Oct. 18 and is being directed by Midland Community Theatre executive director Don Bachmann. The play, which ran 103 performances in 1965 on Broadway, focuses on a tricky situation involving a newlywed groom whose wife disappears from their honeymoon cottage in the Catskills. A strange girl shows up and insists that she is the bride while the groom insists that she isn't. A local detective steps into the case and tries to figure out why a priest supports the girl's story. A caterer adds humor and suspense to the already bewildering affair. Appearing in the production are Jess Kozman, Debbie Fell, Len Caryl, Bill Shaner, Mary Anderson, Don Liscum and Bill Schneider. Stage manager is Oza Whitten, assisted by Gary Anderson and Bert Peterson. Reservations may be made by telephoning the box office, 682-1111.

She's trying to sell about two million assorted books

SHEPHERDSTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Fruit stands are a familiar sight along roads near this town in West Virginia's agriculturally rich Eastern Panhandle. But Mrs. David Hill has a monopoly on the farmer's market for the voracious reader. She's selling about 2 million books. They're stacked in rows, some of which are 20 feet high. And they're going at bargain basement prices. Mrs. Hill, who lives in Shepherdstown, said her father had been in the book-selling business for 50 years. He owned the Clifton Book Co., and his operations included the book exchange shops at West Virginia University, the University of Maryland and other colleges and universities in the area. His death two years ago left her to dispose of the books, which she said fill a warehouse and several buildings on her Jefferson County farm — including the cattle, sheep and horse barns. "Dad died first," Mrs. Hill said, "and eight months later, Mother died. They had planned to retire here and Dad was going to spend his time getting his books in order. "I had no idea what to do with all those books. It was unlikely we could sell them all to one company." But Ann Murphy, manager of the college textbook warehouse for Mrs. Hill's father, suggested that instead of trying to sell 2 million books to one company, they should try to sell 2 million books to 2 million people — one book at a time. So the books went on sale in January, and since then about 500,000 have been sold. The books include textbooks, works of fiction and non-fiction, and law books, Mrs. Hill said.

Trip sponsored to art festival

Midland College's art department is sponsoring a trip to the annual Santa Fe, N.M., Art Festival which will be Oct. 17-18. "We have a few openings for the general public on this trip," said art instructor Sara Gilstrap. The group will visit several galleries in Santa Fe, viewing paintings by such notables as Georgia O'Keefe and Fritz Scholder and photography by Laura Gilpin. Also on the agenda will be the First Western State Biennial Exhibition, which includes paintings and sculptures by 28 artists. The group will make a trip to the Shidoni Foundry and Gallery in nearby Tesuque to see a demonstration of bronze pouring, plus the wax room, mold room and sculpture garden. Cost for the round trip bus fare will be $20 for Midland College students and $35 for non-students. Hotel reservations also have been made; with accommodations for two, three or four persons to a room, at an average cost of $5 to $8 per person per night. The tour leaves Midland College at 6 a.m. Oct. 17 and returns about 7 p.m. Oct. 19. Reservations may be made with Sara Gilstrap or Warren Taylor in the Midland College art department as soon as possible.

Satellite television is on the horizon

WASHINGTON (AP) — A television network that will bypass local stations and beam its programs directly to your rooftop receiving station is not farfetched and could eventually divert audiences from established stations, a report says. According to a consulting firm, a satellite-to-home television service could generate a 30 percent profit by its seventh year if it obtained just 5 million subscribers. One catch, however, is that it will take $200 million to get the service off the ground. The analysis, prepared by the consulting firm of Kalba Bowen Associates Inc., was released last week. It was commissioned by the National Association of Broadcasters. Its conclusions provide independent evidence that the Communications Satellite Corp. (COMSAT), which announced a year ago it was planning a satellite-to-home service, could in fact succeed. COMSAT officials have so far refused to release economic projections or other details of their plan, saying such information will come when a formal application is filed with the Federal Communications Commission later this fall. The FCC is preparing to launch its own inquiry into how satellite-to-home broadcasting would work technically and how it should be regulated. While the idea of millions of American homeowners placing small satellite antennas on their rooftops might sound futuristic, the analysis conducted for the NAB concludes a direct satellite service could succeed initially by offering several channels of commercial-free programs for a monthly fee as low as $25. Cable systems already offer such pay programming, but the study notes much of the nation's population does not have access to such service. If a direct broadcast satellite system is established before 1985, it will have an excellent chance of beating the cable industry in the rush to attract paying subscribers, the analysis concludes. As for the effect on local TV stations, the study said, "To the extent that it is cost-effective, it threatens to replace local broadcast TV stations as distributors of national (network) program services." The study goes on to suggest, however, that the established networks are unlikely to abandon their affiliate relationships with local TV stations because of the "strength of the current national and local advertising structure." Thus the most likely immediate threat posed by direct satellite broadcasts is the same as that posed by the cable industry — the diversion of viewers from commercial television to pay television, the report said.

Mass concert set for UTPB gym

ODESSA — More than 300 singers from Midland and Odessa will combine voices for a mass concert at 4 p.m. Oct. 11 in The University of Texas at the Permian Basin gymnasium. The concert, open to the public at no charge, will be the culmination of a day-long choral clinic for area high school, junior college and university singers, as well as the Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale. UTPB is hosting the event. Participating in the event will be Lee High School choir directed by Walter Wright, Midland College choir directed by Dr. Charles Lawson, and the Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale. Other choirs will be from Permian High School, Odessa College and UTPB. Dr. Stanley Engbreton, assistant professor of music at UTPB, said the clinic and concert will include a variety of musical types ranging from Renaissance to classical, contemporary and spiritual. Guest conductor and clinician will be Dr. Fiora Contino, conductor of the University Symphony Orchestra and director of the opera at University of Texas at Austin.

Prize awaits poetry winner

A $1,000 grand prize will be awarded in the Sixth Annual Fall Poetry Competition sponsored by the World of Poetry, a quarterly newsletter for poets. Poems of any style on any subject are eligible to compete for the grand prize or 49 other cash or merchandise awards. "She won our grand prize last year with her poem, 'Pieta.'" Rules and official entry forms are available from World of Poetry, 2431 Stockton Blvd., Dept. N, Sacramento, Calif. 95817.

Thouvenel String Quartet begins season

The Thouvenel String Quartet of Midland will begin its concert season at 8 p.m. Oct. 11 in Midland College's Allison Fine Arts Center.

The quartet is sponsored by the Midland-Odesa Symphony and Choral Association and is the only full-time professional string quartet in Texas. In addition to their concert series performances, the quartet members teach privately and also are principal chair musicians in the Midland-Odesa Symphony.

Members are Eugene Purdue, first violin; Teresa Fream, second violin; Sally Chisholm, viola; and Jeffrey Levenson, cello.

The subscription concert series will be held this year on Saturday evenings, with the exception of the November concert. Tickets for the Midland series are $15 for adults for the six concerts and $7.50 for students.

Ticket information and brochures may be obtained by telephoning the symphony office, 563-0921. Last year, the Thouvenel Quartet's season included touring the United States. More than 150 concerts were performed last year in locales that included Boston, the Phillips Gallery in Washington, D.C., New York's Lincoln Center, and Bloomington, Ind. The quartet won the International Leo Weinter String Quartet competition last spring.

This 1980-81 season will feature a series of four concerts in Carnegie Recital Hall in New York. This cycle will feature the complete works for string quartet by one of the 20th century's most influential composers, Ernst Krenek.

Selected by Krenek in 1979 to perform his compositions at the Krenek Festival in Santa Barbara, Calif., the quartet gained national recognition for its "sensitive interpretation and incisive musicianship."

A world premier of a string quartet by Krenek will climax the New York cycle of concerts to be given by the Thouvenel Quartet in June 1981.

Picasso exhibit to end Tuesday

NEW YORK (AP) — The last of more than one million art lovers will trek through the Museum of Modern Art on Tuesday as the awesome exhibit of works by the late Pablo Picasso comes to an end.

The show was supposed to end Sept. 16, but was extended for two weeks by popular demand. Total final attendance is expected to rival the 1,266,437 persons the Metropolitan Museum of Art said viewed the treasures of King Tut during a four-month show last year.

William Rubin, the museum's painting and sculpture director and the exhibit's guiding force, said before the exhibit opened on May 22 that he wanted people to leave it "reeling, to have a sense of 'How could he do it?'"

Indeed, the nearly 1,000 works in "Pablo Picasso, A Retrospective" grabbed the fascination of countless critics, the cover of a national news magazine and the attention of President Carter and his family on a stop in the city.

James S. Snyder, coordinator of museum planning, said one of his most difficult tasks after setting up the exhibit was

Three Midland stations win Radio Merit Awards

Three Midland radio stations won 1980 Radio Merit Awards in five categories in the Texas Association of Broadcasters' annual competition at a TAB convention in San Antonio Wednesday.

The stations — KCRS, KNFM and KWMJ — together won first and second place awards in five of the competition's six categories in the 60-100,000 population division.

According to Bob White, TAB president of Corpus Christi, many of the entries in this year's competition were of unusually high quality. Bill Rhode of KKYX of San Antonio served as chairman for judging the radio entries.

Station KCRS won two first place awards in the competition: one in best local newscast and one in best creative news coverage, single event.

Station KNFM won two second place awards: one in best local spot (straight news) and one in distinguished local programming in the public interest.

Station KWMJ won a second place award in best local station promotion.

The other category in the competition was best local spot (in humorous news).

Other winners included station KBYG in Big Spring, which won a first place award in best local newscast for a population size of 25,000-60,000.

Crude talk may not help Myers in House

By GENE GRABOWSKI

WASHINGTON (AP) — The crude, tough-talking demeanor that won Rep. Michael J. Myers solid respect in his dingy south Philadelphia congressional district may not be much help in the more refined House chambers this week.

Myers, the first congressman convicted of charges connected with the FBI's Abscam probe, faces possible expulsion from Congress for behavior he claims may be acceptable to his blue-collar constituents.

"There may be a question of ethics, but it's not illegal. In this neighborhood it may not be even unethical," he told a reporter who recently visited the congressman's modest Philadelphia row house.

"On Society Hill they might say it's unethical at least. It seems to me it depends on what side of the tracks you're born."

The stocky former longshoreman, who grew up Irish Catholic along the grimy Delaware River side of the railroad tracks, said he will run for re-election Nov. 4 even if he is expelled for misconduct in a vote expected this week by the full House.

And Myers, who is appealing his conviction, has told friends that if re-elected he will insist Congress seat him as it did Adam Clayton Powell in 1969. Powell, convicted of misusing House funds, was re-seated after the Supreme Court ruled he could not be barred from his elective post.

But the Pennsylvania Democrat told the House ethics committee he will resign even if re-elected should his legal appeal fail. Myers could receive up to 25 years in jail should his conviction stand.

It was the House ethics panel that recommended Myers' expulsion for his conviction on charges that he took a $50,000 bribe from FBI agents posing as representatives of a fictitious Arab sheik.

Myers, who was secretly videotaped accepting the payoff, admits his action appeared wrong, but told the committee he was only "play-acting" to pick up "some easy money for myself." He said it was not a bribe.

On tape, Myers boasted of his influence in the gruff tone of street hustler, punctuating sentences with obscenities.

"Let me just say this to you. You're going about this in the right way. Money talks in this business and bullshit walks," he told undercover FBI agents.

"Where I can be of assistance is getting bills introduced. It's a tradin' game in Washington," Myers said.

Toughness has always been part of Myers' political image. As a machine-picked member of the Pennsylvania General Assembly from 1970 to 1976, he was a loyal member of the Philadelphia delegation.

With a wife and three children to support, he continued to work as a cargo checker on the city's waterfront to augment his $15,800 salary.

"For most of my life I've been in the low cotton. And people expect a politician to go to a lot of weddings, christenings and affairs and that comes right out of your pocket," Myers said.

When Philadelphia's longtime House member William Barrett died in 1976, Mayor Frank Rizzo picked Myers to replace him. That was a break for which the young lawmaker remains indebted. In Myers' living room today, an autographed photo of himself

But from the start, Myers, who left a vocational high school in the ninth grade, never quite fit into a national legislative body where more than half the members are lawyers.

During a January 1979 party to celebrate his second full term in Congress, Myers and his cousin scuffled with a barmaid and a guard at a Virginia motel.

As a result, the 37-year-old congressman was convicted of disorderly conduct and placed on six months probation. The $10,000 legal tab also left him looking for ways to make extra money.

"Anyone who comes off the streets like I did to become a success certainly has to hustle. I don't mean robbing some old lady's Social Security check. I mean working two jobs, seven days a week, and take advantage of every break that comes your way." Myers said after his conviction.

Even tho we're in the worst location... we fill many crafty orders...

Mayo Clinic's art selected with care

By GALE TOLLIN

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Paul Gauguin's cheery, bright portrayals of tropical life would be great gifts for the Mayo Clinic. The same goes for Thomas Hart Benton's 1920s Americana, and the down-home folksiness of Grant Wood.

But a depressing Edvard Munch painting of illness, mental torment or suicide? No thanks! Salvador Dali's surrealism can be unsettling and he's not on the approved list of artists whose creations would be welcomed at the clinic without question. Neither is Vincent Van Gogh, who took his own life and earlier practiced unlicensed surgery by slicing off one of his ears.

"What we try to do with art in the clinic is to make areas more pleasant and livable," stresses Barbara Callaway. "We want to give people a high rather than a low."

The owner of a downtown Rochester art gallery, Mrs. Callaway was hired three years ago to work 20 hours weekly as the Mayo Clinic's art program coordinator.

A goal of the clinic from its earliest days has been to create an environment esthetically pleasing to patients, employees and visitors.

The first clinic building, opened in 1914, was derived from Georgian architecture. The lobby suggested an outdoor court with a fountain and marble balustrade.

The Plummer Building, of Romanesque style, came in 1928. Drs. Charles and Will Mayo and Henry Plummer wanted a building attractive inside and out. Doors were cast in bronze. Artistic craftsmen carved the woodwork, ornamented the walls and painted intricate ceiling designs. A sandstone carving on a corner of the building is a caricature of Plummer, studying plans for the building.

In the 1950s, when the Mayo Building was added, artisans weren't as easily found and building costs had soared. The building board of governors didn't want it to appear cold and sterile. Chairman Samuel Haines, who had a flair for art, worked with the building committee and architects in establishing an art program. Minneapolis sculptor Warren Mosman was retained as a consultant.

They came up with the "Mirror to Man" theme, reflecting a philosophy of the dignity of mankind. Thirteen artists were selected and each painted a mural in patient waiting lobbies on 13 floors. In addition, sculptures decorating the building's exterior interpreted the themes of man and freedom, man and work, man and recreation.

While they await appointments, Mayo Clinic patients may view the works of famed artists. Brochures picked up at information desks guide visitors on walking tours of clinic art.

Part of Mrs. Callaway's job is to help the Art Program Committee decide which works shall be purchased, accepted as gifts or borrowed, and where they'll be displayed. Major works are placed in public areas.

The clinic buildings vary greatly in design, with little architectural cohesion. And Mrs. Callaway says the hundreds of art pieces represent "every medium, every style." Effort is made to display the art where most appropriate.

"The more contemporary a building is, the more contemporary the art we put in it," she says.

Monthly exhibits feature the work of regional artists. Also open to the public are monthly biographical movies on artists — Joan Miro, Victor Vasarely, Calder and others.

"We try to tie in the films with an artist whose works we have on display," says Mrs. Callaway. "Before they see a Calder film, clinic employees might look at pieces of hanging metal and wonder what it's all about. After they know something about the artist, they tend to become proud of what we have."

Many items come as gifts, and people sometimes have offered valuable art that the Mayo Art Committee had to reject.

Iraqi television stirs war fervor

By STEVE HINDY

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Until recently, residents of this socialist state were faithfully watching the American television serial "Dallas" and telling visitors how disgusting they were by the antics of its capitalist hero, J.R.

Today Iraqis are glued to their tubes around the clock for the latest news of the six-day-old border war with Iran.

Since Monday a somber Iraqi in a black mustache and suit has read dozens of communiques on Iraqi television at frequent intervals detailing Baghdad's gains and losses in the war.

"In the name of God the most merciful," begins each communique, prompting Iraqis to drop whatever they're doing and listen to terse accounts of Iranian attacks and the boys at the front.

Television is still a novelty in Iraq and Iraqis are avid viewers even during peacetime.

There are tubes in most hotel lobbies and in the offices of all ranking government officials. Newspapers frequently announce that President Saddam Hussein has presented color television to all the residents of a remote Iraqi village.

Wartime programming consists of children wearing native Arab dress or Saddam Hussein T-shirts, soldiers in combat fatigues or helmeted pilots, all singing patriotic songs against a colorful studio backdrop or a military training film.

Wildly expressive poets recite patriotic verse and satirical rhymes taunting what is known here as "the racist Persian regime of (Ayatollah Ruhollah) Khomeini" and others considered to be enemies of Iraq.

The television most frequently shows color film of young Iraqi soldiers training in the snow-covered hills of the north and Soviet-made MiG jet fighters firing rockets and bombing practice targets.

The evening news has shown many violent scenes of the conflict, including the conflagration at Iran's Abadan oil refinery on the disputed Shatt al-Arab waterway. Much of the same footage has been shipped to America by Iraqi television for use by the major networks.

For a foreigner, it's an unnerving background to a city that has been bombed six times in six days.

But the Iraqis don't complain about either the bombing or the programming.

Hussein this week was shown meeting with Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat, the Jordanian prime minister and the Cuban foreign minister. To see this, one would never suspect that the airport has been closed to commercial traffic for six days.

Street interviews with wealthy and poor Iraqis, Christians, Moslems and Kurds alike, revealed universal support for the war and accounts of the fighting that echoed verbatim the television reports.

Don't say 'Frisco' for it's illegal now

Historical Review and Appeals.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Some argued that only uninformed tourists call the City by the Bay "Frisco," while others said only snobs and nit-pickers insist on calling it "San Francisco."

But the judge presiding over a mock trial raucous with laughter and hardnosed opinions ruled with those who find "Frisco" an insult.

The decision by Judge Dorothy von Beroldingen met thunderous applause in the packed chamber of the Court of

She ruled it is "not appropriate" to nickname a city named for St. Francis, saying:

"It was the intent of the people that nothing should be permitted to demean that nobility or to offend the high purpose inherent in the adoption of the name of so beneficent a patron saint."

Since decisions of the court have no legal standing, it's hard to say what, if anything, will come of the ruling.

Hauser so suave defense refused to cross-examine him

By ROB WOOD
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP)— Joseph Hauser is a short, squat man who probably could have been anything he wanted to be — rich, poor, influential, unknown, big-time, no-time.

But the Jewish emigrant from Poland decided to go into insurance and he felt the best way to go about it was get the labor union contracts. And, as he told a jury here, if that meant some bribery or kickbacks, so be it.

For 10 days, Hauser was on the witness stand in the Brilab trial of Texas House Speaker Billy Clayton and two Austin attorneys, Donald Ray and Randall Wood.

Hauser was the perfect witness. He was never flustered. He was aggressive when it was time to be aggressive. He was humble when it was time to be humble.

HE WAS SMOOTH on the stand, and crude on the tapes, using all the four-letter words he felt necessary to communicate with labor leader L.G.

Moore, another central figure in the federal court trial.

Each day, Hauser came to court with a different dress suit, blue, brown, beige, black.

He put on and took off his horn-rimmed glasses before each question.

And when he was through with his testimony and the playing of scores of tape recordings he had made with Clayton and Moore and Ray and Wood, the defense team refused to put him up for cross-examination.

Earlier, the defense had questioned Bruce Kelton, a U.S. Justice Department lawyer who said that Hauser "is a central figure in insurance fraud in the United States."

His jowls droop and his mouth seems to have been cut across his face with one swift swipe of a sharp knife. And he was brought here to testify from the unnamed federal prison where he is serving a 30-month sentence on bribery charges.

KELTON SAID HAUSER may have taken in some $5 million in his insurance deals and that the Justice Department wasn't sure where all that money is today.

Before joining the FBI in the Brilab probe, Hauser, a fast-talker with a heavy Polish accent, had talked his way into millions of dollars and finally before a U.S. Senate investigation committee and then to prison.

Born in Barnov, Poland, Jan. 1, finish high school because of it.

He then attended schools to help him become a rabbi, but after three years all of that fell through. He became a part-time insurance salesman and a part-time butcher.

WITH ONLY A FEW dollars, he left for California to sell insurance.

With his fast, sweet talk, he became representative's commission to sign a contract.

"If you made a $10,000 commission," he said, "then he wanted $9,000 and you got $1,000."

The facts of life, he said on the stand, were that if you didn't kick-back to union leaders then you didn't get any union insurance business.

Hauser is and was a chameleon.

The Rev. Peter Keegan, a Roman Catholic priest, once said Hauser was instrumental in raising funds for orphaned children in Ireland.

He also was described once as a "loving generous man who was determined to keep his promise to his family — that they would never be hungry or afraid of the future again."

But, Richard Kleindienst, the U.S. attorney general under President Nixon, said Hauser looted insurance companies and wiped out savings of hundreds of thousands of pensioners and insurance holders, many of them union workers.

A SPOKESMAN FOR A Senate committee that investigated Hauser said, "Individuals without financial means were hurt the most. Over 20,000 holders of Hauser company policies face, not only loss of coverage, but loss of premiums they paid in to keep policies in force. Many of these policyholders are elderly and infirm and may never be able to replace those policies."

On the witness stand in Houston, Hauser said every single policy was paid in full and not one person lost any money.

Hauser now is serving a 30-month sentence on four counts of bribing labor union officials. He pleaded guilty to misusing insurance funds earlier this year in Phoenix, Arizona.

One friend of Hauser described him as a "hustler, a sharpie, semi-tough. He liked to think of himself as a high roller, a big name dropper. The kind of guy who knows everybody in the world. If he saw (former Soviet premier) Leonid Brezhnev on the street, he would say, 'Hey Leonid baby.'"

Striking actors are evaluating tentative pact

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Leaders of striking film and television actors spent Saturday evaluating a tentative pact with producers that has been criticized by rank-and-file members who vote next week on whether to end their 69-day walkout.

Ed Asner of "Lou Grant," Howard Hesseman of "WKRP in Cincinnati," Henry Winkler of "Happy Days" and Alan Alda and Mike Farrell of "MASH" were among about 400 actors who met behind closed doors Friday at the Writers Guild Theater to discuss the new three-year contract worked out with producers early Thursday.

Friday's emotional meeting produced arguments for and against the contract that would raise minimum salaries, currently $235 a day and $785 a week, by 32 percent. The pact also gives actors a share of home video program sales, increases in overtime allowances and higher residuals for movies shown on television and TV reruns.

"I signed a petition in there that called for redress on the cable portions of the settlement," Asner told reporters outside the meeting. The petition asked chief Screen Actors Guild negotiator Chester Migden and SAG President William Schallert to attend a meeting at the Hollywood Palladium next Friday to hear complaints about the contract.

"The petition is to convince them of the seriousness of our request and the seriousness of the issue," said Hesseman, adding he is not pleased with the contract.

Asner said most of the questions at Friday's meeting concerned the contract's home video provisions. He said there were mixed sentiments among the actors about the contract, but that there was a "very strong realization that they want to go back to work."

Speaking in favor of the contract was actress Jennifer Warren.

"I'm in favor of the settlement," she said. "If we push too much more, we're going to hurt the industry."

Asner said he told the actors meeting that the Screen Actors Guild-American Federation of Television and Radio Artists negotiating committee had gone too far in compromising their original demands.

"If they (the demands) were reasonable, can we in all conscience accept this settlement as reasonable?" Asner asked rhetorically.

Asner countered charges that this was a "rich actors' strike."

"I don't regret one penny I lost in this strike," he said, "and I lost a lot of pennies."

The musicians union, meanwhile, planned to renew their negotiations — postponed until after the actors' settlement — next Wednesday.

"If we hit any snags with the producers, we plan to picket around the clock at every studio," said American Federation of Musicians Local 47 President Max Herman.

Ballots are expected to go out to 48,000 members of SAG next week.

SAG leaders hope to avoid a showdown with the striking musicians, who have vowed to picket the studios until they settle their contract with producers. Many stars have said they will not cross those picket lines.

School boards want feds to pay for aliens

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — If the federal government wants free education for the children of illegal aliens, the federal government should pay for it, a Texas Association of School Boards official said Saturday.

"These delegates have to go back home and levy taxes to pay for the education of non-citizens, something they're not really excited about doing," TASB governmental relations director David Thompson told a reporter at the annual convention here.

The controversy over paying for the education of illegal aliens will be a key plank in TASB's legislative platform for the upcoming session in Austin. The program was to be voted on later Saturday.

"Primarily our position is that the children of illegal aliens really should not be provided free public education at all," he said. "We feel state education dollars should best be spent on citizens of the state."

A federal judge, however, has said illegal alien children are entitled to free education in Texas schools.

"If the federal government orders this done, then the federal government ought to pay the additional cost it will generate," Thompson said. The illegal aliens, he said, are the responsibility of federal officials, not local or state officials.

Break in levee threatens water supply

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — Water poured through a 300-foot break in a San Joaquin River Delta levee Saturday, inundating thousands of acres of cropland and threatening the major water supply for 30 communities.

More than 200 people were evacuated after the break appeared in the levee around the Lower Jones Tract shortly after 6 p.m. Friday. No injuries were reported.

The water, 15 feet deep in places, was rising toward the base of a barrier holding the main east-west line of the Santa Fe Railroad, which divides Lower from Upper Jones Tract.

On the other side of the barrier, which was reported seeping some water, are three aqueducts which carry about 95 percent of the water for 1.1 million residents in the greater Oakland area.

"They're endangered in the sense that the only thing that's between them right now and the flooding on Lower Jones Tract is the railroad right of way," said Brian McRae, a spokesman for the utility district. But he said the district has a 150 to 200 days supply of water stored in reservoirs.

The water buried homes, laborer's barracks, a duck club, an elementary school and about 5,500 acres of corn and tomatoes just a week from harvest. Farm equipment, hastily moved from the fields below after the break, was parked atop the levee.

"I don't think we're in any immediate danger right now," said San Joaquin Sheriff's Lt. Fred Wilson.

Californians should 'learn to survive' earthquakes

By ROBERT LOCKE

ALTADENA, Calif. (AP) — Charles F. Richter, whose name is linked like none other to the study of earthquakes, says Californians have no place to hide from the earth's tremors so they'd better learn how to survive them.

But the 80-year-old seismologist, who devised the Richter scale that's used around the world to gauge the size of quakes, has little patience with newcomers who become obsessed with a fear of nature's trembling.

"One can only ask why, if they feel this way, do they come here in the first place?" he said in an interview. "The state is over-populated already. We don't need people out laying the groundwork for panicky behavior in an emergency."

Richter, who has studied earthquakes for half a century at the California Institute of Technology, retired years ago although he remains a partner in a local consulting firm.

He said he's often asked where you can go to escape the risk of earthquakes.

In California, he said, the answer is simple: "Nowhere."

Nationally, Richter said, "the least earthquake risk in the 48 states is Florida and the Gulf Coast of Texas. But then I have to ask them how they like hurricanes."

"Every area has its own risks so the only alternative is to go somewhere else and accept some other risk."

But if Californians must accept the inevitability of earthquakes, they must also make careful preparations to limit their damage. Richter said recent years have seen a growing recognition of the risks.

This new concern, he said, is reflected in Los Angeles' official Earthquake Awareness Week, which begins Sunday and includes a series of disaster drills and public education projects. Richter, an outspoken advocate of earthquake planning, is prominently listed as a sponsor of the program.

His primary concerns are skyscrapers and old masonry structures that predate modern building codes.

About skyscrapers, he said, "The problem has improved with better engineering, but personally I'd rather see fewer of them."

About old structures, he said, "These old and unsafe buildings are our outstanding risk problem in earthquake country, and there is a pretty fair concentration of them in every older population center in California."

Sitting in his modest home on the edge of this foothill suburb of Los Angeles, Richter conceded that on a personal level, "even those of us who are professionals sometimes neglect things."

He motioned toward a giant grandfather clock and said, "That clock should be anchored to the wall a little better and I really shouldn't stack those books so high."

His small living room-office is spectacularly cluttered. An ancient typewriter rises above newspaper clippings and scientific papers filed in boxes that once held brown-and-serve rolls. A seismograph that hasn't worked for several years stands against a wall. Cardboard boxes resurrected as file cabinets hide the fireplace and books are scattered everywhere.

Richter says he's slowing down.

New Jersey governor orders water rationing

OLD TAPPAN, N.J. (AP) — Gov. Brendan T. Byrne issued an executive order Saturday imposing a mandatory water-rationing plan for 114 North Jersey communities because of a severe drought in that part of the state.

The plan orders residential and commercial water customers to reduce water use by 25 percent beginning immediately.

Byrne extended the mandatory ban on outdoor water use to all remaining communities not covered by rationing in Bergen, Essex, Hudson, Passaic, Union and Morris counties.

Residential customers will be restricted to using no more than 50 gallons of water per person per day, and rationing will be enforced through spot checks of water meters and water bills, Byrne said.

People who use excess amounts of water will be ordered to pay a surcharge and could face fines and possible criminal penalties.

Since May, rainfall in North Jersey has been more than 10 inches below the normal amount of 43 inches, which is based on an average over the last century.

The governor said the mandatory rationing plan will last indefinitely until "significant rainfall" alleviates the drought.

Speaking from a site on the empty Lake Tappan Reservoir, which would contain 3.2 billion gallons of water if full, Byrne said he is counting on the public's cooperation to get through the crisis.

In the six-county area, outdoor use of well water also is prohibited because public water systems often are interrelated with well water systems and ground water levels also are dropping in North Jersey.

Department of Environmental Protection Commissioner Jerry F. English said the reservoirs of the Hackensack Water Co. were full as late as June. "A beautiful tourist season has led to an unhappy fall," Mrs. English said.

Hackensack Water Co. Vice President George Haskew said, "We need 10 to 12 inches of rain by the end of the year to stay out of trouble. We need 23 inches of rain to be at full capacity by next spring."

Plant's sewage blamed for 14 beach closings

CHICAGO (AP) — Pollution discharges from a Hammond, Ind., sewage-treatment plant caused 14 of 18 closings of Chicago's Lake Michigan beaches this past summer, officials of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency have determined.

EPA officials said Friday the Justice Department and the State of Indiana are expected to file suit against Hammond on Monday to ensure that the city corrects the problem.

Hammond already faces federal court suits filed by the State of Illinois, Chicago's Metropolitan Sanitary District and former Illinois Attorney General William J. Scott.

'Insignificant' radiation detected in Nevada town

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A "very insignificant" amount of radioactivity released in an underground nuclear test has been detected in a small town bordering the Nevada Test Site, a spokesman for the Environmental Protection Agency said Saturday.

Don Eisman said evidence of low levels of xenon 133 were discovered in Lathrop Wells, a town just west of the test site and about 90 miles northwest of here.

Eisman stressed the levels were so minute that they pose no health hazard and only amount to about as much radiation as a person would get every three minutes in everyday life.

"It is not a significant amount," he said. "There are no known health effects and no detectable levels other than at Lathrop Wells."

Meanwhile, radiation monitoring teams and two EPA airplanes continued to watch for further signs of radioactivity from the accidental release of small amounts of radioactive gas from a nuclear test on Thursday.

Eisman said the EPA airplane detected low levels of xenon 133 directly over ground zero where the blast was detonated. The xenon 133 has a half-life of two days, meaning that half the radioactivity released Thursday had dissipated by Saturday.

The leak was detected Thursday evening nearly 12 hours after the morning "Riola" test, one of two fired Thursday.

Carter's advisers recommend increased plutonium production

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's top advisers have recommended that the United States increase plutonium production for use in nuclear weapons, an administration spokesman said Saturday.

The spokesman, who did not wish to be identified by name, said no final decisions have been made yet.

At a meeting Thursday, high level national security and foreign policy advisers approved a proposal to expand the production of plutonium and other bomb-grade materials at government nuclear plants, the spokesman said.

Defense Department officials have maintained that current plutonium stockpiles may not be enough to produce new nuclear weapons. Plutonium production hasn't increased since the early 1960s. The Congress agreed this summer to authorize money for restarting plutonium production at government nuclear reactors that were closed in the 1960s.

Handler distributing venom-based serum

Miami Serpentarium clinic defies FDA orders

MIAMI (AP) — Defying orders from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, snake-handler Bill Haast began Saturday to distribute a venom-based serum to desperate victims of multiple sclerosis, arthritis and other incurable diseases.

Backed by a legal opinion from Miami lawyer Ellis Rubin, Haast handed out the drug "PROven" to dozens of patients from all over the United States who gathered at his Miami Serpentarium clinic.

"We're giving out the serum this morning and we hope it will be on a permanent basis," Haast said. "We don't know if it's legal, but we're doing it," said Haast.

Rubin quickly told the crowd, "Everything we do is legal." In Washington, FDA spokesman Wayne Pines said "the FDA is looking into the press reports we have had about Mr. Haast's actions."

"Our intent is to prohibit distribution of a product that is being sold as a drug but that is not shown to be either safe or effective or even to be uniform of quality and purity."

On Sept. 19, FDA agents hand-delivered a letter calling the mixture of krait, cobra and water moccasin venom potentially dangerous. The federal agency cited Haast for 16 alleged violations of federal laws and regulations and claimed he and his late partner, Dr. Ben Sheppard, deliberately provided investigators with misleading information about PROven and hid the death of one patient.

But Rubin called the letter nothing more than a letter "pointing out certain discrepancies in the manufacture and processing and distribution of the product. These are legal technicalities that should not interfere with health, safety and welfare of the victims of these diseases."

Rubin went to court Friday, asking a federal judge for an emergency order to prevent the FDA from interfering with the manufacture and distribution of PROven. But U.S. District Judge Joe Eaton denied the request. Rubin said he would refile his lawsuit Monday.

On Saturday, patients who lined up for the small vials of the snake venom sang the praises of the substance and credited it with improving their health.

One of the patients was 9-year-old Suzanne Toney of Abingdon, Va., who suffers from a rare inflammatory eye disease, Pars Planitis, that usually causes blindness.

The drug normally used to treat the disease has numerous side effects, and her parents brought her to Haast's clinic as a last resort, they said.

"In a desperation move, we came down here and after five shots (of PROven) the ophthalmologist said her eye has cleared up except for some scar tissue which she will have her whole life," said Suzanne's father, David Toney, 33.

"I think everything is going to be OK," said the blonde, blue-eyed little girl, who said she hasn't suffered any side-effects to the venom, except for a "sore arm."

Other sufferers said PROven had also helped them. "I had lost total control...I had no bladder or bowel control before I began taking PROven," said Joan Riggs of Miami, who suffers from multiple sclerosis and is confined to a wheelchair.

"After I began taking the serum, I have regained almost total control. I've regained some of my coordination and balance. I've been able to raise my legs and take a step for the first time in 15 years."

Heddy Recht of Miami Beach said she was contemplating suicide because of severe arthritis pain prior to receiving the injections.

"I was about to give up life until I began taking the serum," she said. "After that I had almost no pain..."

Haast, owner of the Miami Serpentarium, is an acknowledged snake expert who since the late 1940s has survived more than 100 strikes by deadly snakes, including cobras and kraits. Most of the strikes came as Haast extracted venom for processing into anti-venom at the serpentarium's lab.

There was no immediate comment on Haast's actions from the New York-based National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Nine-year-old Suzanne Toney of Abingdon, Va., rubs her eye as she stands with Bill Haast of the Miami Serpentarium clinic Saturday. The girl was treated with PROven, a venom-based medication banned for human use by the FDA. (AP Laserphoto)

Tampon maker OKs warning campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — The maker of Rely brand tampons, already facing multimillion-dollar legal claims, has agreed to an unusual, expensive media campaign warning of the product's link with sometimes fatal toxic shock syndrome, the Food and Drug Administration announced Saturday.

Procter & Gamble, the manufacturer, signed a consent agreement with the FDA which binds it to one of the largest consumer product recalls ever undertaken, FDA spokesman Wayne Pines said. The company withdrew Rely from the market voluntarily last week after two studies showed a closer association between that tampon and the rare ailment than that between other tampons and the disease.

It issued a statement Saturday saying the agreement confirms "the steps which the company is taking in connection with the voluntary withdrawal from the market of Rely tampons."

"We believe the agreement...marks the first agreement by a tampon manufacturer to join the FDA's education effort to inform women about toxic shock syndrome and the link between this disease and tampons," the statement said.

According to Pines, the media campaign is to begin about Oct. 6 and will be conducted with ads on 600 television stations reaching virtually all American households, 350 radio stations and 1,200 newspapers.

Pines said the message to be sent will be that women should no longer use Rely tampons because of the close association with toxic shock syndrome. The spots also will say that this association is closer than those recorded with other tampons, the FDA spokesman said.

The agreement also specifies how the company will provide consumers with refunds for the tampons, he said.

He said targets for the media campaign are women 18 to 34 years old, the same audience toward which the tampon advertising campaign was directed.

At least two lawsuits were filed against the company last week by women who said they had been harmed by using Rely. One in San Francisco is a class action seeking all the profits the company made on the product. Another in Tucson, Ariz., seeks $2.5 million in damages.

FDA will review the ad campaign components before they are used, Pines said.

Procter & Gamble notified retailers and wholesalers last week to return unsold supplies of Rely to the company. Both the company and FDA will conduct periodic spot checks to make sure the product has been removed from store shelves.

The agreement with FDA prohibits the sale of the tampons overseas or again in the United States unless FDA approves.

Tests by the Center for Disease Control and the Utah Health Department showed a significantly stronger association between Rely brand and the rare disease than other brands had with the ailment.

The CDC study showed that 71 percent of the women who contracted the disease in July and August used Rely. The Utah study found a 62 percent association among the women it surveyed.

Although some men and non-menstruating women are among the victims of toxic shock, 95 percent of the cases reported involve women 30 years and under.

CDC has learned of 344 cases since January and 330 of them have been reported in women. Some 29 deaths are attributed to the recently recognized ailment. Nevertheless, the disease is rare, striking three out of 100,000 women.

CDC and FDA scientists say toxic shock syndrome is caused by a bacterium, Staphylococcus aureus, not by tampons. There are several theories about why tampons are associated with the disease but no firm scientific proof to date.

Death on the Cross Bell remains unsolved after 10 years

By RON WORD

Quiet again dominates the Cross Bell ranch. The tranquility of the cattle empire was shattered 10 years ago by the unsolved slaying of millionaire rancher E.C. Mullendore III and the eventual bankruptcy of the ranch.

The hundreds of cattle that once dominated the 66,000 acres just south of the Kansas line north of Bartlesville now belong to someone else. Scores of people in cars and pickups hauling boats daily to nearby Hulah Lake hardly give the impressive Cross Bell entry a second look or notice signs on the barbed wire that most of the land is now under lease to the L-B Cattle and Land Co.

KATHLEEN MULLENDORE, the matriarch of the Mullendore estate, lives quietly in the impressive stone ranch home and raises horses. Both her son and her husband, E.C. II "Gene" Mullendore, were buried in the nearby family cemetery.

New Orleans Saints owner John Mecom Jr. and his beauty queen wife, Katsy, sister of the slain rancher, spend a few months a year on the ranch, located near Copan.

Mullendore's former wife married her attorney, John Arrington. But in the days, weeks and months after Sept. 26, 1970, the tranquility was broken by one burning question: who killed E.C. Mullendore III?

THE SLAYING of the 32-year-old land baron and the wounding of his bodyguard, Damon "Chub" Anderson, 10 years ago has spawned scores of theories, but not enough evidence to convict anyone.

Bill Mitchell, Osage County undersheriff, insists the case is still open and could still be solved.

"We are working on it when there are leads to be followed," Mitchell said. "A lead is being followed up right now."

Mitchell and Sheriff George Wayman have interviewed hundreds of witnesses and possible suspects in the Sept. 26, 1970, shooting of the cattle baron. But both law officers are tight-lipped about the controversial slaying.

"It's a question I wouldn't want to answer," the undersheriff said, when asked about a possible motive.

LARRY STUART, Osage County district attorney, said he doesn't believe the case will ever be solved.

"I have an idea, in my own personal opinion, who did it, but I don't have any evidence to support it," Stuart said.

The prosecutor reviewed the case after taking office two years ago. Stuart said a book published in 1974 by Wall Street Journal reporter Jonathan Kwitny, "The Mullendore Murder Case," which indicated the Mafia could have been responsible for the rancher's death, "makes a good book."

"I read it," he said, but he said from what he knows about the case the Mafia was not involved in the slaying.

"But you don't know for sure," he said.

"Most of the pertinent evidence is so garbled, I don't know if it will ever be unscrambled," Stuart said.

IT IS GENERALLY recognized that E.C. Mullendore III was in trouble. His wife, Linda Vance Mullendore, characterized as the Jackie Kennedy of Osage County, had moved to Tulsa with their four children and filed for separate maintenance.

Some $12 million in debts threatened to destroy the cattle empire his grandfather had established on the Osage County prairie.

Mullendore needed money — lots of money — and he needed it badly and he needed it fast.

The young rancher Mullendore had contacted money men — men who knew how to secure the large loans that would save the ranch established by E.C. Mullendore in the land run of 1893.

One of those men was Kent Green, a Kansas City man, who had been staying at the ranch with a girlfriend for several weeks before the slayings.

The night of the slaying, Green was staying in a Bartlesville motel. Besides Green, other professional loan seekers with whom Mullendore associated were Talmadge Kolb of Tulsa; George Aycock of Oklahoma City; David W. Taylor of Los Angeles and Jim Jackson of St. Louis, known as Geronimo.

A $12 MILLION LOAN commitment, signed by Green, was found on Mullendore's body by an Oklahoma Highway Patrol trooper.

Mullendore needed money to keep the ranch for which his father and grandfather had given their lifeblood, the ranch that he had been destined to control since birth.

"E.C. Mullendore III, 16-month-old heir to a family cattle empire, is already being groomed to take his place in business," the Sunday Oklahoman said in 1939. Before he was in his teens, E.C. III — donned in full cowboy regalia — was buying his own stock at auctions.

The baby feet that in 1939 sported "the tiny hand-made boots" had since grown into the feet of a troubled rancher with an empire too big for him to control.

The slaying of Mullendore and the wounding of his bodyguard shortly before midnight on Sept. 26, 1970, uncovered the saddlebag full of troubles.

The slaying occurred after Mullendore had returned after an evening at the stock car races in Caney, Kan.

ANDERSON TOLD AUTHORITIES he had gone upstairs to draw a bath when he heard a shot. He said he rushed down the stairs to find Mullendore seated on the floor, which his head slumped forward, bleeding.

The rancher had a .38-caliber gunshot wound between his eyes and had been beaten.

As Anderson approached Mullendore, he was shot once in the right shoulder.

The bodyguard, an ex-con, said he shot at two fleeing men, who ran out the front door. Anderson told authorities the men were dressed in slacks and sports coats and he knew they were not ranch hands or persons dressed like ranch hands.

Telephones at the ranch had been disconnected by the telephone company because of a dispute over an unpaid bill, so Anderson ran to the nearby home of ranch manager Dale Kuhrt. Someone drove five miles to another ranch to call an ambulance.

Anderson drove himself to the hospital.

A series of mistakes after that may keep officers from ever discovering who killed Mullendore.

FOR SEVERAL YEARS there was a running conflict between Washington County officials and Osage County officials on how the investigation was handled.

"We took exception to the way it was handled. There was a certain amount of disturbance at the crime scene," Mitchell said.

Any evidence of tire tracks or other physical evidence could have been obliterated by the numerous cars converging on the death scene.

Then the body was removed from the scene, cleaned up and embalmed before an autopsy could be conducted.

"There are so many conflicting stories, it is hard to tell exactly what happened," Stuart said.

After her husband's death, Linda Mullendore filed an $18 million lawsuit against United Family Life Insurance Co. of Atlanta, Ga., on three $5 million life insurance policies on the slain rancher. The suit was settled for $8 million in 1971 with a good portion of the money going to Mullendore's parents.

MRS. MULLENDORE TESTIFIED in a hearing on the insurance case one of the money men had threatened her, Mullendore and Green.

In the same testimony, Mrs. Mullendore denied suggestions that the Mafia was involved in either her husband's death or attempts to find money for the ranch.

In February 1972 a grand jury investigation of the Mullendore slaying was conducted. E.C. Mullendore II, his wife, Kathleen, and Mullendore's widow, Linda, all testified.

No one was indicted.

On May 15, 1972, U.S. District Judge Allen Barrow approved an $11.2 million bankruptcy plan that called for use of $5 million in insurance money; $1.2 million in the sale of livestock and other ranch property; $1.4 million from bank loans and $3.6 million for refinancing by Northwestern Mutual Life mortgage firm.

THE NEXT JUNE, Barrow approved a 30-year lease to the L-B Land and Cattle Co. for $4 million to make payments on an insurance company loan; pay taxes and leave an income for Mullendore's parents.

The judge was told the plan would also pay off all the debts of the ranch.

The serenity of the lavish Mullendore world shattered in the instant it takes to fire a gun has returned.

But the mystery of who fired those shots remains.

Refugees striking

STELACOOM, Wash. (AP) — About 42 Cuban refugees in custody at the McInland federal penitentiary remained on a hunger strike Saturday to protest the slow pace of their resettlement, the prison superintendent said.

"They want to be free," said Superintendent Darrell Gray. Gray said 31 inmates stopped eating after dinner on Thursday and 11 others joined them Friday night.

The protesters are among 244 refugees who were ordered detained after they arrived in this country in a boatlift that has brought 130,000 Cubans to this country since April. Federal authorities discovered many had prior prison records.

The fasting prisoners are "just sitting in their cells" refusing to eat or participate in any activity, Gray said.

"We have the responsibility after a certain length of time to stop the strike," Gray said. "We haven't elected to do that yet, but we have to ensure they don't become medically unfit."

Gray said prison staffs have a way to force prisoners "to take nutrition," but he would not elaborate.

"We'll make that determination in a few days," he said. "Meanwhile, the medical staff is seeing them every day."

Gray said Charles Mitchell, an immigration official assigned to the McInland proceedings, has explained the release process to striking prisoners. Gray said the prisoners chose to continue their strike anyway.

The Seattle-King County Bar Association is working with immigration officials in an attempt to expedite the release process.

Carter inks underwater farming bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter signed a bill Friday that authorizes the government to come up with a plan to establish a $70 million underwater farming program.

Two years ago, the president vetoed a similar bill, contending it was too expensive.

The current bill authorizes the departments of Agriculture, Commerce and Interior to identify various species of aquatic plants and animals that could be grown under water, along with their commercial potential.

They have 18 months to finalize their plan.

The bill makes grants available to companies and institutions interested in experimenting with the cultivation of aquatic plants and animals.

In a written statement, Carter said an expanded aquaculture industry "can help overcome a trade imbalance caused by the importation of some $2 billion of seafood each year. Since only 3 percent of our current domestic seafood supplies are produced through aquaculture, there is considerable potential for expansion."

"I believe that this legislation will greatly benefit the many farmers of this country who will be encouraged to grow fresh water fish in their lakes and ponds," Carter said. "At the same time, commercial fishermen will see larger stocks of wild fish as a result of increased commercial aquaculture."

More disaster relief sought

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has asked the U.S. Small Business Administration to declare six Texas counties disaster areas because of damage from Hurricane Allen.

The declaration would allow individuals and businesses in Brazoria, Calhoun, Hays, Refugio, Travis and Webb Counties to seek low-interest loans through the federal agency.

The hurricane brought high winds and heavy rains to the counties in August.

Empty Promises . . .

The Balance-The-Budget Scam

In January of this year President Carter revealed a proposed Federal budget for fiscal year 1981 that included a planned deficit of $16 billion. But because of unprecedented rises in prices of everything from apples to xylophones over the next few weeks, he announced a revised budget that, miracle of miracles, would be "balanced."

However, Colorado Senator William Armstrong has warned that "any idea that the 1981 budget is balanced is fantasy. It's balanced on paper and because we are using outdated economic assumptions." He warns that the '81 budget will run $25 billion in the red—Other estimates are that the deficit could reach $40 billion.

Robert C. Brown, executive vice-president of the Tax Foundation, Inc., points out that "the balance promised for FY 1981 has been done with mirrors—the 'cuts' were taken from upward 'revisions' of the costs for 1980 and 1981 given in the original January budget. The new budget, assuming predictions hold, will show a 15 percent increase in actual spending from FY 1979 through 1980, and a 7 1/2 percent increase from 1980-1981."

In short, many Congressmen with records as big spenders are currently mouthing all kinds of platitudes about a balanced budget simply to pull the wool over the eyes of unwary voters. Then, if they are still in Washington next year, the shearing of the sheep will continue.

Unless of course, the beleaguered taxpayer studies his Representative's voting record and insists that he truly work to put an end to the profligate ways of the Federal Government that are causing such economic havoc.

Can Government Spending Be Cut?

Of course it can! Courageous Congressmen and informed private citizens have been pointing this out on many occasions. Many have pointed out that the Department of Energy, for example, would be a good place to start. Even though it costs over 10 billion of your tax dollars each year, it does not produce a single barrel of oil, or so much as a bucket of coal. Instead it burdens our energy producers with so many rules and regulations that it hinders rather than helps energy production.

We did not have a Department of Health, Education and Welfare (now the Dept. of Health and Human Services) until 1952. It is a gigantic, unconstitutional, wasteful bureaucracy. The abolition of just this one agency would virtually do away with the need for the Federal income tax! It is most interesting to compare recent total receipts of the income tax with HEW budgets, with those receipts listed first and with the HEW expenditures second: 1976, $132 billion and $129 billion; 1977, $157 billion and $147 billion; 1978, $181 billion and $163 billion; 1979, $217 billion and $181 billion.

Recently United Press International correspondent Donald Lambro wrote a book called Fat City: How Washington Wastes Your Taxes (Regency/Gateway, Inc. South Bend, Ind., $12.95). In it he lists one hundred non-essential Federal programs, from the Alaska Railroad to the Youth Conservation Corps, which needlessly cost taxpayers over $100 billion each year. He states that the list "is in no way intended as a complete and exhaustive survey of the Federal Government. It is meant as a departure point for anyone wishing to conduct a more comprehensive examination with the purpose of sweeping out frivolous and highly dispensable agencies and programs."

In short, government spending could be greatly cut and thus create tremendous savings for overburdened taxpayers. But such cuts will come only if enough concerned citizens get informed and speak out. We urge you to join our crusade for "lower taxes through less government" as a step in that direction.

Who Profits From The Minimum Wage?

In 1978 Congress passed a law raising the minimum wage to $2.60 an hour and providing automatic increases for the next three years. Numerous studies pointed out that the law would wipe out approximately two million jobs, held mostly by teenagers and older workers.

The increase of the minimum wage earlier this year to $3.10 per hour has had just such a negative effect on the employment picture of both the young and the skilled, according to Professor Walter Williams, a black economist who teaches at Temple University in Philadelphia. Almost all economists agree that hundreds of thousands of people cannot obtain jobs because their work is not worth the minimum wage. Williams calculates that this year's 7% increase in the minimum wage will cause an employment among unskilled black teenagers to rise from 35% to at least 40%.

So then what happens? Why, the Federal Government comes along with special, tax-supported programs—always riddled with waste, fraud and abuse—to "help the disadvantaged." Look at just the $11,000,000,000 (11 billion dollar) Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) program.

First of all, CETA gives job preferences to ex-convicts and criminals over decent young people trying to get a start. And these CETA jobs are one of the biggest areas of corrupt patronage. In some areas, CETA positions are filled by persons fired from local city and municipal positions in belt-tightening moves by local taxpayers.

So who profits from a Federally mandated minimum wage? Black teenagers? Older workers? No, it seems rather that criminals, bureaucrats, and other Federal drones profit, at the expense of the beleaguered taxpayer.

If a government mandated hike in the minimum wage could really solve unemployment, why not make it 10, or even 25 dollars an hour? Obviously that's not the solution. What really needs to be done is to scrap the Federal minimum wage law so that black teenagers, other unskilled workers and anyone else willing to work can have a genuine opportunity for gainful employment.

It's time for lower taxes.

Because many "hidden taxes" are never seen by consumers, some people find it hard to believe that governments at all levels are now consuming over 45% of an average person's earnings. TAX REFORM IMMEDIATELY (TRIM) is a nonprofit, nonpartisan, nationwide network of educational committees founded by The John Birch Society to achieve "lower taxes through less government."

About The Votes On Page Four

TRIM selects final votes on bills involving a billion dollars or more of your taxes. On a few occasions we choose bills which do not have a precise dollar figure, but which nevertheless will have a significant economic impact.

We are convinced that the general public is especially interested in the fact that every year Congress votes to spend hundreds of billions of dollars. The final vote on any bill is especially important because that is the vote that determines how much money the Government will spend.

All 435 members of the House of Representatives are scored on the same bills. The TRIM Bulletin does not vary from one Congressional District to the next. We never select bills to make any Congressman look good or bad.

The TRIM Bulletin is published quarterly, so over the course of a year we will have reported on many of the final votes on major money bills.

The votes on page four involve 257.5 billion of your tax dollars. If your Congressman voted against all these bills, he saved your household $3,289. If he voted for all nine of them, he increased the tax burden of every household by that amount. Please study these votes to determine whether your Representative voted to increase or decrease your tax burden. After you have done so, let him know whether you approve of the way he voted, since he is there to serve you. After all, it's your hard-earned money that's involved.

What Causes Inflation? The American College Dictionary correctly defines inflation as the "undue expansion or increase of the currency of a country, esp. by issuing of paper money not redeemable in specie."

The Federal Reserve System has been increasing the quantity of dollars in ever-larger numbers for over 50 years. That is the cause of inflation. Remember, only the Federal Government causes inflation, so only the Federal Government should be blamed for it.

The total look

"The Total Look for Autumn '80" will be featured at the Junior Women's Association Third Annual Style Show Oct. 16 at the Midland Hilton Ballroom.

Ultra feminine to sporty fashions will be seen at the show, which benefits the Midland Memorial Hospital Pediatric Equipment Fund and a scholarship endowment to Midland College. The show is open to the public and social hour and luncheon is $20. Reservations must be made by Oct. 10 and can be made by calling 697-1004 or 697-2704.

The Shop for Pappagallo will provide the fashions while Mr. Toms Hair Designs provides the hair designs, Back Stage does nails and Christian Dior will be featured in the cosmetics. Consultations will be provided following the show.

Alexis Kirk, Coty Award winning designer of exotic, elegant accessories, will be at the show and at Pappagallo's that afternoon and the next day. Kirk's new belts, right for all fashions but especially so coupled with his snakeskin jackets and leather skirts and pants, will be featured at the show.

Kirk's leathers are dyed in colors ranging from warm raspberries and soft lavenders to mellow taupes.

Suzanne Brien, former Midlander now living in New York, is associated with Kirk and will be the commentator for the show.

Victor Costa's exhilarating holiday line with all of its flare and drama will finale the show. The fabulous evening costumes are rich in design and detail and they, along with other fashions and furs, will also be at Pappagallo's following the show. Libby Johnson of Christian Dior will also be at the shop to answer any questions concerning cosmetics.

Costa, who is from Dallas, has built his business on the philosophy of "fashion at affordable prices." A member of the Council of Fashion Designers of America, Costa has for the second time been chosen as a finalist for the Dallas Flying Colors Fashion Award for "Designer Dresses," an award voted by over 8,000 buyers who attend the Dallas Apparel Mart to the designer who they feel is best received by their stores and customers.

Officers of Junior Women's Association are president, Mrs. Allen Hitchcock; first vice president, Mrs. David Rogers; second vice president, Mrs. Tommy Dillehay; recording secretary, Mrs. Clarence Chandler; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Art Miller and treasurer, Mrs. James Johnson.

The final step to obtaining that total look is achieving lovely nails. Susan Suggs, owner and manager of Back Stage, will be manicurist for the models at the Junior Women's Association style show.

The "total look" is expressed in two moods by Mrs. Ted Collins, left, and Mrs. Don Poage of Midland. They are wearing original designs by Victor Costa and will be modeling at the upcoming benefit style show.

Midland Rape Crisis Center survives setbacks

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

It's had some setbacks, but the Midland Rape Crisis Center is still going strong.

The Center will be one year old Wednesday and is proud of its accomplishments over the past 12 months, according to director Nan Gordon.

She reported that the center has processed 35 rape cases to date, with 94 per cent of these reported to law enforcement officials.

Fourteen of these 35 cases (or 46 per cent) filed charges. Forty-six per cent of those who were filed upon were indicted and 31 per cent were convicted, she said.

"Many of the cases have involved teenagers and we have made them one of our target areas of concern," she said.

She went on to say that the Center has reached over 600 persons during the past year through public awareness programs with church groups, sororities and civic clubs.

Biggest problem in past months has been funding. The Center received a five year grant from the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) of the Criminal Justice Division. Last year the Center received $39,638, with funding to decrease 20 per cent each year.

However, the budget was threatened by the recommended elimination of these funds in an effort to balance the budget.

According to Ms. Gordon, however, funding has been provided for at least one more year. "Whether or not our funds are cancelled after that, we will still need financing from private individuals and sources because the grant decreases each year," she said.

The Center is planning a fund drive campaign, and is also looking into other foundation grants and a letter campaign.

Another problem has been volunteer recruitment, "although we have 23 trained and dedicated volunteer caseworkers" she said. The Center always needs more, though, according to its director.

Persons interested in volunteering can call the Center at 682-7273.

Victims of rape should report crime to law enforcement

The Midland Rape Crisis Center assists for victims of rape and sexual assault.

"The Center is committed to victims, their trauma, their courage and the resolution of their crisis, according to Nan Gordon, director.

"We encourage rape victims to report the crime to law enforcement officials and give details concerning their assailant," she said.

"It is very important to report the crime because rape has a high rate of recidivism, and the victim's information can be valuable in leading to the arrest of the assailant who may be connected with several cases," she explained.

Victims should report the rape to one of these three agencies: the Midland Police Department, 683-4281; the Midland County Sheriff's Office, 682-9774; or the Midland Rape Crisis Center, 682-7273.

According to Ms. Gordon, the Center also encourages victims to obtain a medical exam immediately after the assault. This exam may be obtained at the Emergency Room of Midland Memorial Hospital by three registered nurses trained especially in this area.

"The exam is important for two reasons," she said. "One, to ensure the victim's physical and emotional well-being, and, secondly, because of the collection of evidence to be utilized at the trial should the victim decide to prosecute.

"There is no absolute, 100 per cent effective way to prevent any crime from occurring," she said. "However, there are some very basic safety measures one can take to help insure personal safety."

The key word to rape prevention is awareness, explained the center director. "Awareness of yourself, those around you and your total environment.

"Often times, a rapist's best weapon is the element of surprise, so one should stay alert and aware."

"Because in Midland, almost half of all rapes occur within the victim's home, home security is essential," she explained.

Her advice? Keep doors and windows locked, don't leave notes on the door that advertise you are away or alone; do not enter your home in the darkness; leave a light on when you leave; keep the house and surrounding areas well lit; do not open your door automatically after a knock; be selective about who you let into your home; have a peephole installed; install deadbolt locks on all doors; and make sure children and anyone living in the house knows and follows these guidelines.

In the car, she gives this advice: Keep doors locked and windows rolled up; always check the back seat and floor of the car before getting in; make sure car is in good condition and has at least a half tank of gas; if you suspect someone is following you, go to the nearest lighted business district or police station.

Her words of warning to those on the street: Avoid walking alone as there is safety in numbers; don't hitchhike or accept rides from strangers; don't walk close to buildings, stairwells or doorways; walk only in well-lighted areas and familiar areas.

Plastic bubble cuts oil use

SECANE, Pa. (AP) — American ingenuity continues to work around the energy crisis.

A plant grower here enclosed one of its 60,000-square-foot greenhouses in a giant polyethylene bubble to keep heat in longer and reduce oil consumption, according to Energy User News.

The result was a 66 percent decrease in oil consumption for January and February compared with the same 1979 period. For February alone, consumption declined from 36,000 gallons in 1979 to 12,000 in 1980.

The double layer of polyethylene also lessened the "greenhouse effect" — the escape of hot air from the house at night when the outside temperature was higher.

BARROW, Alaska (AP) — Plastic pipe will help supply energy here next year in one of the coldest locations in the world.

This city is located at the northern tip of Alaska, more than 300 miles north of the Arctic Circle.

Halloween trick is to make holiday safe treat for kids

HACKETTSTOWN, N.J. (AP) — There's more than one way to pacify a ghost — and please a child — on Halloween. Instead of a kids-only holiday, with just a little imagination Halloween can be turned into a family affair, says home economist Karen Wimmer.

"The fact that family involvement also provides an extra measure of safety is a bonus the kids may not even realize, but parents will appreciate," she points out.

For openers, Ms. Wimmer explains, you can involve the whole neighborhood in a hometown version of the legendary haunted house. To haunt your own house, hang sheets over doorways and put jointed cardboard skeletons in the closets.

Put some eerie music on the stereo and dim the lights, or use dark-color bulbs. Provide thunder and lightning effects by flicking lights off and on and clashing pot covers together, and use your ingenuity in providing a background of moans and groans.

"Keep the party on one level of your house and station adults near doors that lead to any stairways to prevent mishaps," she cautions. For the more ambitious, Ms. Wimmer suggests that the haunted house be the last stop of a progressive dinner party. The four-stage meal can begin with apple cider at the first house, move to hot dogs and hamburgers and the trimmings at the second, and ice cream and a candy hunt at the third. Your haunted house is the grand finale.

Ms. Wimmer, home economist of M&M-Mars Co., also has some tips for safer trick-or-treating. She urges adults to get together to supervise the neighborhood, with parents taking turns in keeping an eye on the block while other parents escort the youngsters to the houses.

Questions about the home

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I have read several times about taking out white spots on furniture, but never about black spots. One of them is in the center of our living room coffee table and I cannot seem to get it out no matter what I use. Unfortunately, I do not know what caused the spot, which is the question a hardware man asked me when I sought his advice. Anyway, what he sold me did not work. Any ideas?

A. — Only that it seems you will have to remove the entire finish. If the blackness still remains, use a commercial bleach, the kind you buy in hardware and paint stores. Apply the bleach over the entire table top so that whatever refinishing material you use will "take" uniformly. Read the remover container's label carefully to be sure that you rinse the surface in the recommended manner after the bleaching is completed.

Q. — Somehow one of the wire strainers on a gutter outlet became dislodged. Now the rain does not go into the downspout and spills over the gutter down the side of the house. I tried flushing the downspout with a hose, but no water comes through. Can you suggest a solution?

A. — Try using an auger or plumber's snake of the kind used for clearing out obstructions in drains. If you don't have one long enough and don't wish to buy it for a single job, attach something like auto-tire chains to a long rope and dangle it up and down in the downspout.

AT WIT'S END

A woman is like Texas

By ERMA BOMBECK

I watched four hours of television commercials the other night and didn't see a single face — just fannies.

Hour after hour, jeans-covered rumps marched across my 21-inch screen. They swayed from side to side, twirled around, karated, bent, stretched, rode horseback, discoed, kicked and breathed. They all had two things in common: all the fannies were signed and the pants fit tighter than the skin of a clenched fist.

Frankly, I cannot believe my luck. For years, I've killed myself working at being "just another pretty face" and now no one cares. All the emphasis is on the part that leaves the room last.

Not only have the back of my knees never been my "best side," I have yet to find a pair of jeans that fit like the ones worn by the models on TV.

Those four hours of fashion shock have prompted me to write an open letter to Gloria Vanderbilt.

Dear Gloria:
I hope you do not feel that out of all the jeans designers, I am singling you out. The truth is, I like you. I bought four of your one-size-fits-all wine glasses and they fit wonderfully.

When you came out with jeans designed for the full-figured woman, there were tears in my eyes as I called my friends and said, "Rejoice, sisters! Gloria has just discovered a cure for the overblouse."

Gloria, the woman who went with me to the fitting room the day I tried on your corduroys... went temporarily blind.

Maybe I could shed some light on what constitutes a "problem figure." Imagine, if you will, that women are not built long and narrow like the state of California, but rather like the state of Texas. Envision our head as Amarillo and our bust like Lubbock. The boundaries for our waist, hips and thighs are the same — spanning the Mexican border on the west to the Louisiana border on the east. The legs extend from Laredo to the Gulf of Mexico.

You can see that we are talking about an ample area.

Now, look at your jeans and try to thread San Antonio through Corpus Christi. Trust me, Gloria, there isn't a zipper in this world strong enough to hold all of that in.

I know you are sincere about wanting to bring fashion jeans to the wide screen, but know the hazards. Never sell corduroy jeans to a full-figured woman. When she walks, she could start forest fires. Never assume because waists are "in" that everyone has one. Jeans made to "hug" hips often get carried away and cut off blood supply to the kidneys.

Under separate cover I am sending you a topology of a full-figured anatomy. Do not become discouraged.

— Full Figure in Phoenix

People drink radioactive water

EMMAUS, Pa. (AP) — People everywhere are drinking radioactive water, according to an environmentalist who has just completed a study of drinking water.

Carol Keough reports in her book, "Water Fit to Drink," that not all of this is due to nuclear development. She says nature provides cosmic rays and radioactive elements in the earth's crust and atmosphere.

"This natural radiation, called background radiation, is unavoidable," she says. While exposure to radiation is harmful and should be avoided, people have always been exposed to background radiation.

Seawall still stands

NORTH MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — Hundreds of feet of beach were eroded, streets washed away and beachfront houses were damaged when Hurricane David struck here last year, but one seawall, protecting a condominium development, remained in excellent condition after the 15-foot waves.

"The base of the barrier hardly shifted, which is the key to a strong seawall," said

Robert Waldron, the condominium builder.

The 300-foot-long, 12-foot-high seawall was constructed of riprap, irregularly-sized granite stones, reinforced by a water-permeable fabric which was used to cover the sand.

The fabric keeps sand from "pumping up" into the stones and allows water to drain down without blockage so that the stones are held in position, Waldron explained.

When to apply for Medicare

Copley News Service

Q. I will be 65 years old Jan. 1, 1981. What are the open enrollment months for me to apply for Medicare before I reach 65?

A. Also, I would like to know how much money I would have to earn to be eligible for a minimum Social Security benefit since I only have 18 quarters as of now up to date? — A.L.

A. Since your birthday is Jan. 1 you will attain age 65 in December 1980.

You can enroll for Medicare anytime from Sept. 1, 1980 through March 31, 1981. However, if you want your Medicare coverage to begin in the month you attain age 65 (December 1980) you must enroll between Sept. 1, 1980 and Nov. 30, 1980. Otherwise, your entitlement to Medicare benefits will be delayed.

To be eligible for Social Security benefits you would need a total of 29 quarters. This year you earn a quarter of coverage for each $290 of earnings.

Q. I lost my husband six years ago and, one year ago, at age 60 I started collecting my widow's benefits. It's not very much and I wonder if I remarried what effect that would have on my check. Also, could I collect SSI? — M.D.

A. Remarriage would have no effect on your check since you are over age 60.

To qualify for SSI (Supplemental Security Income) you have to be age 65 or blind or disabled with limited income and resources.

For more information on SSI call your local Social Security office.

Q. I lived with my husband for eight years and then we got a divorce. I never got married again, and I was wondering if I could collect his Social Security. He has passed away now. — M.S.

A. You would not qualify as a divorced widow unless you were married to the deceased for the 10 years just before the date the final divorce became effective.

Only gold coins made

In 1838 a branch mint at Dahlonega, Ga., began striking coins from gold mined in Georgia. It minted only gold coins. The Confederates seized it in 1861, and except for producing a few gold coins, it remained idle. After the war, it was used as a college building for a while, was destroyed by fire in 1878 and rebuilt as a college administration building.

Bar owner uses buzzer lock on restroom door

NEW YORK (AP) — Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig. "Sure, they all came in here," Fritz hollered. "This was their hangout, their neighborhood joint. Sure, they lived around here then. Whattaya, crazy? Harlem had the best apartments in New York."

Fritz, whose given name of Gaspar was quickly forgotten when he immigrated from Italy at age 15 and went to work for a Dutchman, also had an Italian menu that attracted many 1920s mobsters.

"Frank Costello, Lucky Luciano, Dutch Schultz, all them," Fritz said through one of his 10 daily stogies. "Capone? Sure, he was in here once in 1926."

Fritz said he always seated the gangsters at a quiet rear table and then left them alone to talk.

"Whattaya, crazy?" he demanded. "If I had heard their business, they would have offered me a free ride and I wouldn't be here today."

His only other secret of longevity in the bar business was to avoid drinking himself.

"I never did," he shouted. "If you drink it, you can't sell it."

In the Roaring '20s, he allowed bookmakers to operate rent-free out of his upstairs.

"Rent? Whattaya, crazy? They brought in a lot of business."

Fritz, a widower, has given his grandchildren heads of 14 deer shot by the baseballs Babe Ruth gave him, but trophy shot are still mounted on the walls.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Lemon oil freshens oil paintings

DEAR HELOISE:
I need some advice on how to clean oil paintings which have become dull and covered with a smoky film. Can you help? — Mrs. Irene Evans rubbing, no scrubbing and the pan will be shining clean. — C. Snyder

I checked with an expert on oil paintings who said he used nothing but lemon oil furniture polish to clean his.

You can buy this polish in any supermarket, etc. Just look for the aisle where furniture polishes and waxes are sold. It comes in a bottle, and is plainly marked, "Lemon Oil Furniture Polish."

To use, MOISTEN a small clean soft cloth with the polish and go over the painting carefully, changing cloths as necessary. Wipe off the excess polish with a dry, soft cloth.

This will revitalize the painting and give it that fresh, just-painted look. Do this every few months and it will prolong the life of the canvas and oils — keeps them from drying out so badly.

While you are at it, go over the frames, too, with the lemon oil polish. They will take on new beauty, also.

You can use a mild soap and water, or a mild detergent and water to clean the paintings, but you should use a retouch picture varnish afterwards.

Or, if the painting is completely dry — takes about a year I'm told — then you can use a product called damar varnish (comes in several brands) to freshen and seal the painting after cleaning.

Check with an art supply store for further details if you decide to follow this route. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:
Many men do not wear a tie clip and it drives me slightly nuts to see the small end of the tie hanging askew from behind the larger end.

On the back of most ties there is a label. Simply slip the smaller part of the tie in through it and you'll have no more tie playing peek-a-boo. — Ruthanne Elkins.

DEAR HELOISE:
Did you ever have to just make a stitch or two to mend something or other and after finding the thread, you can't find a needle?

I solved this little problem by making a built-in pin cushion in the spindle hole of the spool of thread, by stuffing it with cotton.

Pushed the needle right into the cotton where it is ready to be used any time it is needed. — Martha Peach

DEAR HELOISE:
You don't quit exercising when you grow old; you grow old when you quit exercising! — Jean Houston

DEAR HELOISE:
When my sister and I were in college, we made use of minimal closet space with this trick. We bought the vinyl window shade and handbag caddies to store our sweaters in. Now, I use one in the closet my sons share.

It is easy to get them to fold their sweaters in half and slip them in the windows. One such hanger bag I bought will hold 18 sweaters, thus freeing precious drawer space.

You can also use the shelf-type plastic wardrobes which zip up for sweaters. I like the kind that has windows that are open at each end as it takes so little time to slip a sweater in and out.

Large sweaters may hang out both ends, but they still won't fall out. — Pat Langa

DEAR ABBY

Wife's plans cause husband's reservations

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a happily married woman, married 15 years and have two children. I have a dream. I want very much to go on a vacation with no husband, no children—just me alone! I want a week of doing whatever I want to do, with no pressure from anyone, without worrying if everyone else is happy and content. I would dearly love freedom from all home responsibilities—to sleep as late as I wished, eat when I want, go to sleep when I like, and not have to explain why. A place at the beach would be my idea of heaven!

My husband thinks my "dream" of a one-week vacation all alone is "unnatural." He thinks a happily married woman who has this kind of dream is crazy.

Well, do I see a psychiatrist, or go to the beach?—NEEDS A BREAK

DEAR NEEDS: Assuming your children will be properly looked after, I see nothing unnatural about your dream. And surely there is nothing "wrong" with anyone (male or female) who wants freedom from all responsibility for a week. Go to the beach, and send your husband to a psychiatrist if he thinks you're crazy.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 26, female, black, single, ready, willing and able. There is a new teller at the bank where I deposit the company checks, He's black, too, about the right age for me and totally dreamy. I observed that he doesn't wear a wedding ring, which may or may not mean anything. After I made the deposit this morning, he touched my hand when he handed me the receipt. Then I looked up and saw that beautiful smile, and my heart melted.

One of the girls who works at the bank told me that HE asked her if I was married or going with anybody, so he must be interested in me, too.

How can I let him know that I would like to know him better without appearing too forward?—LILLIAN

DEAR LILLIAN: Just keep making those deposits, and watch the interest grow!

DEAR ABBY: My grandma came to me for advice. She's 75 and has been married for 58 years.

I'm 21, and I've been married less than a year. Grandma says Grandpa (he's 76) is impotent, and he blames her. He says if she were "more of a woman," he would be more of a man. He told Grandma that if she didn't cooperate more he was going to find himself another woman. (They live in a senior citizens' complex and he wouldn't have to look far.) Pool Grandma is so upset I feel sorry for her. What advice can I give her? (P.S. I am serious.)—CONCERNED IN EUGENE, ORE.

DEAR CONCERNED: Tell Grandma that the University of Oregon Medical School in Eugene has an excellent human sexuality program. She and Grandpa should look into it. It could save their marriage. (P.S. I am serious, too.)

CONFIDENTIAL TO ANYONE FOR WHOM IT IS NOT YET TOO LATE: The gestation period of a mother's advice is anywhere from one hour to 50 years. Losing one's mother before having thanked her for the many precious things she taught you is one of life's greatest tragedies.

Women warned about tampons

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — U.S. Surgeon General Julius Richmond has urged women to avoid using tampons while researchers try to discover how they are linked to toxic shock syndrome that has killed at least 29 women in the last five years.

Procter & Gamble earlier this week recalled the product from store shelves.

Doctors are confused by the relationship of the disease to tampons, Richmond said.

Speaking this week before giving an address at the Upstate Medical Center where he had served as dean before accepting his current position, Richmond said women who insist on using tampons should shorten the time they use the product.

The Center for Disease Control has received reports of 299 cases of toxic shock this year and the Food and Drug Administration has warned women to avoid using Procter & Gamble's Rely brand, which has been linked most often to the

Avoid Dalkon shield, warns Robins Co.

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Women still using the Dalkon Shield, an intrauterine device that has not been marketed since 1974, should have the device removed, the A.H. Robins Co. says.

The company's recommendation was contained in a letter mailed this week to obstetricians, gynecologists, internists, family practitioners, osteopaths, pathologists, hospitals and birth control organizations throughout the country.

Robins began marketing the device in 1970 and sold 2.2 million in the United States and 1.5 million abroad before taking it off the market, said company spokesman Roscoe E. Puckett Jr.

The Dalkon Shield was removed from the market because women who were using it had unusually high incidences of spontaneous abortions due to serious bacterial infections in the uterus.

Puckett said 4,460 lawsuits were filed against the company alleging various injuries from the device.

Dr. Fletcher B. Owen Jr., the company's director of medical services, said until now Robins had concurred with a majority of medical opinion suggesting that women who continued to use the Dalkon Shield without problems need not have it removed.

CONSUMER TIPS

Tips on Christmas shopping by mail

By LINDA TRUITT
Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin Inc.

Hundreds of thousands of consumers shop by mail. To meet the demand, there are now more than 6,000 firms that share the U.S. mail order market. Their annual sales are estimated at more than $40 billion.

Mail order companies also account for the largest number of complaints handled by Better Business Bureaus across the country. The most frequent complaint is non-delivery of ordered merchandise. Since the Christmas season is approaching and many people will soon be ordering gifts by mail, suggestions for ordering by mail are appropriate.

The following precautions should be taken when ordering by mail:

1. Beware of exaggerated claims for products or unrealistically low prices for merchandise. If possible, investigate the advertiser's claims by comparing similar merchandise in local stores.
2. Read the catalog descriptions carefully. Warranty information such as fiber content and construction materials must be included in the description.
3. Find out the company's policy for returning merchandise before you order.

4. Be sure all forms are completely filled out, including your name and address and, when appropriate, where you wish the gift to be delivered.

5. Always place an order at least four weeks before you want the merchandise. Pay special attention to cut-off dates for ordering holiday merchandise.

6. Never send cash through the mail. Pay by check or money order and keep the checks when they are cancelled.

7. When your order arrives, check it promptly to make sure you received the right merchandise in satisfactory condition. If there is a problem, notify the company immediately.

In February of 1976, the Federal Trade Commission put into effect a trade regulation rule for the mail-order industry. Briefly, here is what the rule requires: A mail order company must ship ordered merchandise within 30 days from the time it receives an order, unless it clearly states another time frame when making the offer. If the company cannot ship within the 30-day period, or within the time it advertises, it must notify the customer of the delay.

This notice of delay must be accompanied by a free means of reply, such as a postage-paid postcard, by which the customer has the right to cancel the order or agree to the delay. If a customer chooses to cancel rather than wait longer for the merchandise, the company is required to give a full refund of any money paid within seven business days from the date it received the cancellation notice. If the money has been charged, the company must provide a copy of a credit memorandum which shows the customer's account cleared of all related charges within one billing period.

If you do not respond to the notice the company has the right to assume that you agree to a delay of up to 30 days.

The FTC's rule does not apply to all the mail-order industry. A few of those products which are excluded are photofinishing, seeds and growing plants and magazine subscriptions. The rule also does not apply to c.o.d. (cash on delivery) orders, orders with which you send no advance payment or for which you are not billed nor your account charged until shipment is made.

For more information write for the free pamphlet "Consumer Tips on Buying by Mail" from the BBB/Permian Basin, Box 6006, Midland 79701.

The Better Business Bureau keeps files on thousands of local, state and national businesses. If you are considering ordering a product from a company you have not used before, call the BBB for information. The number is 363-1880.

Police put down student riots

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Riot police chased 200 anti-government demonstrators who blocked traffic in a main Manila street Friday, arresting 26 including several who mistakenly sought cover in a policeman's house, authorities said.

and E. Marcos. Ten students were arrested in another protest march Sept. 17.

Police said that after a brief march, the students deployed at an intersection blocking traffic on all sides for about 20 minutes during the morning rush hour. The demonstrators carried placards reading "down with U.S.-Marcos dictatorship" and chanted revolutionary slogans while waving their fists, according to police.

Prison must hire holyman

DETROIT (AP) — An Islamic holyman must be hired at Southern Michigan Prison in Jackson to lead religious services for Moslem inmates, U.S. District Judge Philip Pratt has ruled.

Employment of an imam was one of several conditions outlined in a settlement of a suit against the Michigan Department of Corrections by several Jackson prisoners who said they had been discriminated against because of their religion, court clerk Morley Wittus said Friday.

About 3.5 percent of Jackson's 6,000 inmates follow the Islamic faith, prison spokesman Louis Utess said.

New GI bill passed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has been sent a bill by Congress that provides for veterans using the GI bill to go to school to get a 10 percent cost-of-living increase in their educational allowance.

The Senate approved the bill by voice vote Friday, one day after it was approved by the House.

COURTESY OF
BY LARRY CRAWFORD

It is possible to be insured by a participating or non-participating company. In a participating company, one "participates" in the profits of the company through dividends. This can be a great advantage, if, indeed, the company earns dividends and continues to be profitable. In a non-participating company, the cost of the policy is sometimes somewhat less, but one does not have the possibility of sharing in the company's profits. At the outset it is wise for every insurance buyer to discuss all possibilities with his insurance professional.

As representatives of many large insurance companies our agents at MIDLAND INSURANCE AGENCY, 3324 N. Midkiff, 697-4108 will place your policy with the one that offers the most coverage for the least amount of money. ## Storks evade Lebanese anti-aircraft gunners

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The storks are winging their way south on their annual migratory route, but they appear to be flying well out of range of Lebanon's outlaw anti-aircraft gunners, who shot them down during the spring migration north.

"They fly in small flocks and very high in the autumn, unlike in the spring when their masses are a temptation for those who like to kill these beautiful birds," said Dr. Abdellatif el-Sein, head of the Animal Sciences Department of the American University of Beirut. "I think they should be safe this time."

El-Sein said in an interview he saw hundreds of storks starting their annual return flight to North Africa during a recent visit to Hungary and West Germany, where many citizens prepare rooftop nests for storks, believing they bring good luck.

Last spring's slaughter of the legendary bearers of newborn babies drew a letter of protest to Lebanese Premier Selim el-Hoss from the West German Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Angry West German lovers have been writing to President Elias Sarkis and other Lebanese officials to protest the killings, and the English-language weekly magazine Monday Morning has been publishing the letters.

"Since my family and I spend every holiday on the North Sea and enjoy every stork there, we, like many nature and animal friends, would like to appeal to you to put an end to this sad 'sport,'" wrote Rosemarie Burmeister of Tannusstein, West Germany.

Others point out that the number of storks breeding in West Germany has dwindled to about 3,000, a fifth as many as there were 30 years ago. They stress that of all the hazards facing storks — telephone lines, pesticides and the draining of their swampy nesting areas — anti-aircraft guns are the least excusable.

In reply, Lebanese officials face the task of explaining to someone thousands of miles away the impossibility of controlling the 30 private armies that were loosed here by the 1975-76 civil war.

Faculty-student exchange begins in spring in Odessa

ODESSA — The first part of a faculty-student exchange between The University of Texas at the Permian Basin and Universidad Autonoma Del Noreste in Torreon, Coahuila, Mexico, will begin this spring as the result of a recent visit from the vice rector of the Mexican university.

Vice Rector Pedro Hector Rivas from Universidad Autonoma Del Noreste conducted a series of lectures in Midland and Odessa during a recent visit to UTPB. During his visit, he met with UTPB officials concerning the U.S.-Mexican exchange.

Dr. Thomas Wolf, UTPB assistant to the president, noted Dr. Thomas E. Schaefer, associate professor management, will go to Torreon this spring for a lecture series.

"Because of the strong emphasis in business administration at Universidad Autonoma Del Noreste, and because of Dr. Schaefer's bilingual experience and experience in Puerto Rico, we thought him an excellent choice," Wolf said.

"We also plan an exchange of two or three students in the summer. Our students will be enrolled in courses here, but will be living with Mexican families, studying there and working in a Mexican firm in the area of business administration."

"We hope to get a couple of Mexican students here, as well. We are now looking for host families and businesses here who will participate in an internship program."

"In addition," Wolf said, "we are contemplating offering a course of Spanish for business people."

Schaefer, who spent eight years in Puerto Rico before coming to UTPB in 1979, served as a professor of the Graduate School of Business, Inter-American University of Puerto Rico and as a professor and director of the School of Business Administration at Colegio Universitario del Safrado Carozon in Puerto Rico.

In addition, he has been the recipient of a Fulbright Research grant for study at the University of Barcelona, Barcelona, Spain. He has written numerous publications in both the Spanish and English languages.

Forum des Halles is still controversial

PARIS (AP) — Few urban renewal projects have aroused as much public emotion as the vast Forum des Halles, an ultra-modern shopping center of concrete and glass that has displaced the teeming, rat-infested central market Emile Zola once called "the belly of Paris."

The Forum — a massive underground mall distinctly lacking the sights and acrid smells of the 800-year-old market — celebrated its first birthday in September. But the controversy sparked by its conception does not appear to have abated.

The old Les Halles, where denizens of Paris night-life in search of a quick bowl of onion soup often crossed paths with early morning shoppers, had been an institution on the Right Bank of the Seine River since 1135.

Down and out tramps known as "clochards" carted vegetables there to make enough money for an evening meal. Meat merchants in blood-stained aprons wheeled carts with calves' heads through cobblestone streets. And Paris housewives waited for the sound of the bell that signaled the end of wholesale buying and the beginning of the period when they could enter.

Two decades ago, city planners decided to banish Les Halles to the suburbs and replace it with the Georges Pompidou Cultural Center, the Forum and other yet-to-be-built structures in a complex designed to be a tribute to the 20th century.

To its admirers, the Forum has become the new heart of Paris — an architectural masterpiece with nearly 200 shops on four levels beneath the congested streets of the City of Light.

To its foes, the heart-transplant failed and the Forum is nothing more than a sterile, common shopping mall devoid of soul and character and patronized by bands of rowdy teen-agers too young to remember the sprawling, ancient market it replaced.

The end of Les Halles began in 1971 when demolition crews started carting away the market's elegant cast-iron and glass pavilions despite a demonstration by 10,000 people.

The old market's memory is mourned by many. "They killed part of Paris when they moved it," said retired taxi driver Jean Collot as he looked up from his afternoon glass of wine and out a cafe door to the new Forum.

"In the year since they opened that new shopping place, I have been there only once," the 67-year-old Collot said. "I didn't feel at ease there. The place was full of kids and loud music. It is a big disappointment. I feel like I have been cheated."

In its summation of the Forum's first year, the news weekly L'Express gave this description of the Forum. "What tears your eyes out at the Forum is its absence of personality, its cleanliness without soul. During the first few months of its existence, though, it had a certain character, but not the kind its promoters were expecting. Punks, hoods, rascals and guitar players who were thrown out of the area around Beaubourg (the Georges Pompidou Center) tried to find their place there. At the Forum, they met several dozen bums, homosexuals and prostitutes who had gone there to pass the winter."

Extra security guards and 50 cameras that electronically survey the underground streets have helped disperse some of those who gave the Forum its rough image.

Anne de la Noue, a public relations agent for the Forum, contends its critics have misunderstood the purpose of the shopping center.

"We're creating a new style of life that some people may find difficult to adjust to at first," Miss de la Noue said. "But we attract millions of shoppers and 92 percent of the Forum floor space is rented. I think that says something about its popularity."

About 80,000 shoppers visit the Forum each day, 43.5 percent of whom are Parisian, making the shopping center one of the city's most frequented sites. Forum statistics indicate 75 percent of its customers are under the age of 34.

"Fifteen shops have opened up in the last year and only seven have closed — some of them because they were just too exclusive," she said. "For example, there was a Pierre Cardin high fashion shop that closed. But it was selling dresses that sold for about 9,000 francs ($2,250) each."

Architecturally, the Forum is a concave pyramid, of glass and aluminum that has been admired as "a crater of light."

Search continues for pain killers

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine recently died from cancer, and was in some pain near the end. In view of what I understand are differences of opinion among physicians about when and how much drugs should be administered to these patients, are there any efforts under way to develop new methods for the relief of pain? — Carey.

Dear Carey: There are continuing efforts to try to find methods of dealing with the problem you describe. For example, one approach that has been investigated involved destruction of the pituitary by injections of alcohol. The technique was first introduced by an Italian physician, Dr. Guido Moricca, in the 1960s. According to Dr. Moricca, more than 80 percent of the 884 patients he treated over a 12-year period obtained some lasting relief from pain, usually within hours of the injection. No one understood why the method was effective.

In the United States, Dr. Guenter Corssen, chairman of the department of anesthesiology at the University of Alabama in Birmingham, used the technique on 25 cancer patients who had not been helped by other methods for the relief of pain. He reported that 12 of the patients achieved lasting relief after only one treatment, while two others obtained relief after a second injection. On the remaining patients, the condition of 10 improved to such an extent that non-narcotic painkillers were sufficient for their needs. Only one patient could not be helped by the treatment.

Other researchers have reported similar promising results with the procedure. Dr. Jordan Katz, professor of anesthesiology, and Dr. Allan B. Levin, assistant professor of neurosurgery at the University of Wisconsin, treated 13 cancer patients, 11 of whom had reached the point where they were no longer being helped by large doses of narcotics. The alcohol injections resulted in marked relief for 11 of the 13. One month after treatment, two patients no longer had to rely on medication for the relief of pain; in five others, non-narcotic preparations were sufficient. Two patients received second injections, resulting in greater relief.

Some time later, the Centre for Pain Relief in Liverpool, England, reported on 92 patients with inoperable cancer whose pain could not be alleviated through traditional methods. When alcohol was injected into the pituitary, 38 patients obtained immediate and complete relief from pain, while 28 others achieved partial relief. However, four patients died.

Other complications as a result of the procedure were noted. Some patients had heavy nasal bleeding, and others suffered from eye problems that usually disappeared spontaneously.

Another method for relief of pain was studied at Churchill Hospital in Oxford, England. Instead of alcohol, researchers used liquid nitrogen to freeze the pituitary. They reported using this method on 22 patients with breast cancer who were experiencing generalized pain. More than half the patients were free of pain for at least three months, while two-thirds were free of pain for most of the rest of their lives.

While any conclusions drawn from these studies must be considered tentative, the efforts reflect the medical profession's concern with the need to relieve intractable pain.

Pecan growers search for queen

The Midland County Pecan Growers Association is searching for Pecan Queen candidates.

The Pecan Harvest Festival, slated Dec. 1-2 in the downtown Midland Center, will feature a queen pageant, but the festival still needs queen candidates.

"The sponsors are plentiful, but we need more candidates for queen," said R.B. Henderson, a spokesman for the festival. Deadline for entering the queen contest is Wednesday, although Henderson indicated the deadline may be extended.

Girls and women ages 16 to 22 interested in vying for the county pecan queen may contact Henderson at 682-6744 or Cathy Harris at 684-6031. Contestants will be judged on the basis of pecan interest and knowledge, beauty, poise and personality.

Pecan Queen will represent the county in the 1981 Texas State Pecan Queen Pageant. The pageant will be held Dec. 2 at 6 p.m.

Any company or individual interested in sponsoring one of the queen candidates should send $50 per contestant to the Midland County Pecan Growers Association, Queen's Scholarship Fund, 2001 W. Missouri Ave., Midland 79701.

DIRT, SQUIRT, QUIRT Windbreaks can help reduce energy costs

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent — Agriculture

Rainfall amounts received last week have brought soil moisture reserves to field capacity and more over much of the area. The overall benefits of the moisture are good for agriculture, with rangelands and winter annuals for cover crops gaining immediate benefit. The cotton crop, near harvest status, will not gain much from the moisture from the standpoint of yield. And continued wet, cloudy weather could cause producers some problems associated with delayed harvest and lowered quality and turnout.

RIISING ENERGY COSTS have made windbreak plantings real assets to rural and suburban, as well as urban, homeowners. Fringe benefits of windbreaks can be protection for livestock and a refuge for birds and other wildlife. A well-designed windbreak will reduce wind speed, prevent drifting snow and lower heating bills.

Even a small windbreak can make outdoor living and working conditions more enjoyable during the winter. Plant screens also help reduce noise pollution from busy thoroughfares.

The location of the windbreak is the key to its effectiveness. Evergreen windbreaks on the north and west sides of the house can cut 10 to 30 percent of winter fuel bills. Junipers and pines provide the best protection.

WINDBREAKS SHOULD BE planted four to six times the height of the windbreak away from the house. It is best to grow species that will mature to about one to one and one-half times the height of the house. Large trees should be located 100 to 150 feet from the north or west side of the house. For maximum protection, three to six rows of trees are needed on farmsteads and one to two rows in suburban or urban areas. Six- to eight-foot spacings are appropriate for most evergreen plants used for windbreaks.

Trees for windbreaks are available from the Texas Forest Service and should be planted in late winter or early spring. This year evergreens are available in containers and include the Austrian pine, Ponderosa pine and Arizona cypress. Bare-root hardwood species (honey locust, mulberry, native plum, Russian olive and sawtooth oak) are also available.

Order blanks for ordering windbreak tree seedlings are available from the Countt Extension Office, 218 W. Illinois, Phone 682-9481. To insure choice of species, orders should be placed now. Midland County residents will pick up their orders at the USDA Big Spring Experiment Station, Interstate 20, on March 12, 1981.

RECENT HIGH CALF PRICES in the 80-to-90-cents-a-pound range are delighting cattlemen, but they're not making too many trips to the bank. Why? Because with rapidly increasing production costs, they're barely breaking even.

"While current calf prices are up substantially over the 1975-78 period, producers are not recording big profits," says Dr. Ed Uvacek, livestock marketing economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

He points out that production costs have increased steadily in recent years, as shown by a recent U.S. Department of Agriculture report on cow-calf operation costs and returns.

According to the report, 1978 production costs per cow totaled $295.25. These costs then jumped to $371.73 per cow in 1979, and projections for 1980 show production costs at $420.64 per cow. Costs in terms of actual pounds of feeder calves sold are even more startling since every cow does not have a calf, some calves are held over until they are yearlings before being sold, and other factors such as death losses. For 1978 the cost per feeder calf sold was $67.32 per hundredweight. The comparable 1979 figure was $75.67 per cwt. and the estimate is $86.75 per cwt. for 1980.

THESE FIGURES SHOW the cost of producing a feeder calf increased 17 percent from 1978 to 1979 and is expected to rise another 15 percent this year.

This USDA report shows that production costs vary widely in various regions, with costs highest in the north-central states and lower across the Great Plains. It also points out that herd size is another major factor in determining production costs. As the number of brood cows in the herd increases over 300, costs decrease substantially.

Bull plays havoc with china shop

LONDON (AP) — A bull escaped from a cattle auction at the northern English village of Otley and charged into a china shop, destroying lamps and china ornaments, according to the London Daily Telegraph.

Store manager Peter Jordan looked up to find a snorting 18-month old bull in his china shop, trampling the displayed merchandise before it found its way out and was captured, the paper said Thursday.

Federal pay commission to begin work Oct. 1

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pay commission will begin work Oct. 1 to recommend salary levels for the vice president, Cabinet officers, members of Congress, Supreme Court justices and others, a White House statement said Friday.

The commission is expected to submit its recommendations to Carter in December. The president will make his recommendations in his budget message to Congress in January.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TO-DAY:

Cowboy star Gene Autry, who owns the California Angels, shares this birthday with you. In the months ahead, you will gain a reputation for being clever with money. As income rises, it is important that savings do the same. Daydreamers may try to distract you from practical goals. Stick to what you know! A deep love of knowledge has resulted in your being informed about a wide range of subjects. A romantic wish could become reality.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be alert to deception on the part of others, and let mate know where things stand financially. Now is a good time to lay the groundwork for obtaining new funds to meet basic obligations. An old friend lends a hand at a crucial moment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Resist an impulse to risk savings, security. This is a caution. Talking things over with a close friend could give you a fresh perspective on an old dilemma. Romance takes an unexpected turn.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Pay more attention to details and financial transactions will be highly successful. It is now easier to adjust to the views of an influential higher-up. Keep an eye on expenses when making entertainment plans.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Involved with their own concerns, associates may be less helpful than usual. Tackle those projects that you can handle on your own. A new inner strength makes a loved one feel more optimistic. Offer encouragement!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Someone may catch you in a weak moment and try to borrow a sum that you can ill afford to lend. Keep a close eye on current monetary trends. Romance will be happy but distracting! Make sure to meet all business obligations.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take stock of personal financial situation. Jointly-held funds contribute to your sense of well-being. Get details in writing. The date of a deadline may be changed with very little notice. Be prepared to work long hours.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Mate tends to take a more serious view of the economic situation now. You can profit from paying attention to what the experts have to say. Secretive dealings will prove counterproductive and could cause serious trouble.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Private conferences accomplish more than public confrontations. Be willing to make intelligent concessions. Payroll strings may have to be tightened if you are running a business. Keep any diet, exercise resolutions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Events now taking place at work should be a source of satisfaction. It may be necessary to stay in at lunch hour and tackle a backlog of mail. A temporary sacrifice will have long-term rewards.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): News related to career advancement could be announced today. Try to spend every hour in worthwhile pursuits. Make sure that a change is correct before signing an agreement. A wish may soon come true for mate, spouse.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A friend's remarks can help to dispel an aura of gloom. Gourmet food may undermine dieting efforts. Try to resist temptation in all forms! A new piece of furniture could make home much more attractive.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may have been unrealistic when setting a deadline. If necessary, revise it. Extra care should be taken around electrical and mechanical equipment. A neighbor could be feeling very sociable. Be kind to someone who is clearly lonely.

Jaworski, others defend Garwood

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski says Texas would "have only paupers" on the bench if State Supreme Court candidate C.L. Ray's view of judicial wealth prevailed.

Jaworski, two retired Texas Supreme Court justices and a retired law school dean defended Justice Will Garwood last week against criticism by Ray, Garwood's Democratic opponent in the Nov. 4 election.

Garwood, the only Republican on the court, was appointed 10 months ago and is running to keep the job.

Ray, an associate justice of the Texarkana court of civil appeals, says Garwood should sell his corporate stocks or get out of the race.

Ray contends Garwood's extensive holdings will involve him in repeated conflicts of interests or require him to disqualify himself so often he would be a part-time judge.

"There has been some bit of demagoguery exercised here. ... I am shocked. I am amazed that charges of this kind were made," Jaworski said at a news conference.

Also speaking were retired Dean Page Keeton of the University of Texas Law School and retired Justice Robert W. Calvert and Ruel Walker.

Calvert said Garwood has had to disqualify himself from only 11 out of 802 cases because of possible conflicts of interests.

"The code (of judicial conduct) does not state, and never intended, that judges and their families cannot have private investments and should dispose of them as a prerequisite for service," he said.

Ray contends it is not enough for judges to step out of cases involving companies in which they own stock because a case involving one corporation might set precedents benefiting others.

"It would be ridiculous to disqualify a judge on that kind of basis. You wouldn't have any judges," Keeton said.

"The alternative would be, you would have only paupers on the court," said Jaworski, a Houston lawyer. "You would disqualify the finest, best, most experienced talent."

Calvert said Garwood sought his advice before accepting Gov. Bill Clements' appointment to the court.

Woman, 73, lives alone in Minnesota's wilderness 60 miles from nearest grocery

By CHARLES HILLINGER
The Los Angeles Times

ISLES OF PINE, Minn. — She has lived alone on three tiny islands in Knife Lake in the northern Minnesota wilderness for 50 years.

She has no electricity and is three hours by boat from the closest road and 60 miles from the closest grocery.

Dorothy Molter is 73.

To do her laundry she heats water in a wood stove and uses an old-fashioned scrub board. Her refrigerator is an ice house filled with chunks of ice that she cuts from the lake with a chain saw. For heating and cooking, she splits logs.

Her mode of transportation in summer is canoe, in winter, snowshoes and snowmobile.

Normal winters on the Isles of Pine see temperatures as low as 57 below zero.

Molter lives in a log cabin on a larger island in winter. In summer she moves to a "tent cabin" on one of the smaller islands.

"It's nicer on this little island in summer," Molter says. "It's more breezy, not so warm. There are fewer mosquitos here. My flowers are here."

Every day her friends from the forest come by to be fed — wild ducks, mink, martin, moose and deer. Bald eagles nest in the trees on her islands. Black bears swim to her shores for food.

Knife Lake is part of a 6,000-square-mile wilderness that straddles the U.S.-Canadian line and is called the Boundary Waters Canoe Area in the United States and the Quetico Provincial Park in Canada. It is a canoeists' paradise, with thousands of crystal-clear lakes and no roads leading to them. Travel is restricted to canoes except for a handful of lakes, where power boats are permitted.

Every summer thousands of canoeists penetrate the wilderness. Molter is a living legend to many of them. She keeps a log book of all who stop by her islands, and last summer 6,900 signed it.

On a tent is a sign: "THE BREW THAT MADE KNIFE LAKE FAMOUS. IT MADE MILWAUKEE JEALOUS." The tent is where, since 1952, she has been making root beer for the canoeists. She brews eight gallons at a time with water from the sparkling lake.

"About the middle of summer," Molter said, "I yearn for the quiet time — fall, winter and spring. About mid-winter I yearn for summer and visits by the canoeists."

From October through May she is alone, except for occasional visits by relatives and a few adventurous ice fishermen and snowmobilers.

Once each winter, a snowmobile club at Babbitt, Minn., 80 miles away, has an annual Dorothy Molter Day when snowmobilers bring in the supplies necessary to sustain the island woman through most of the year.

"But I never get lonely in winter when I am alone," she insists. "I have an extensive library of books to read. I snowshoe over the frozen lakes and through the snow-covered forests each day for several miles. I fish through the ice and shoot partridge and other game birds for food."

"My animal friends visit me every day. I cut wood from fallen trees and carry the logs back on a sled pulled by my snowmobile. I don't have time to get lonely."

She first came to the Isles of Pine in June 1930, when she was 23, as a result of her father's love for fishing. "Cap" Molter, chief of police for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, was always looking for new fishing grounds, she said.

"Someone told him about a primitive fishing camp built by a Finn 40 miles northeast of Ely, Minn., on the Canadian border," she said. "My mother, dad, uncle and I came up to spend a vacation here in one of the four cabins built by Bill Berglund, the Finn who owned the three islands of Knife Lake."

The biggest island is nine acres and the other two, separated by narrow channels, are half an acre each. Log bridges, constructed by Berglund in 1928 when he built the cabins, connect the three islands.

"I was an RN (registered nurse) at Auburn Park Hospital in Chicago that year. The depression was on. Work was slow," she recalled.

"Bill Berglund was a logger and a game warden. He was away much of the time and needed someone to run his primitive camp. He asked me if I would consider staying on."

"I figured, heck it beats sitting by the phone at home. It was a real adventure for a young woman. I've been here ever since and have no intention of ever leaving."

When Berglund died he willed the islands to Molter. The few private holdings in the area were bought up by the U.S. Forest Service after World War II. Molter's Isles of Pine were among the last parcels acquired.

"The government was after me beginning in 1948 to sell the islands," he said. "I didn't want to sell; I wanted to stay here as long as I live."

"The government finally got control of the islands in 1967 through condemnation proceedings. Part of the agreement was that I can live on the islands until I die."

Davis Mountains Cycle-Fest is set for next weekend

FORT DAVIS — Cyclists who want to ride in the Mile-High Country and to challenge themselves and their machines to some hill-climbing and two-wheel sailing in scenic country may join in the third annual Davis Mountains Cycle-Fest next weekend — Oct. 4 and 5 — at Fort Davis.

The ride begins at 9 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 4, on the Prude Ranch just northwest of Davis Mountains State Park off Texas Highway 118 and covers a 74-mile route along the Scenic Loop — Texas 166 and Texas 118.

The Fort Davis Tour follows a route which was approved for qualifying Olympic cyclists in 1974.

All riders in the Cycle-Fest will receive Davis Mountains monogrammed T-shirts.

A sag-wagon, provided by Peyton's Bikes of Midland and Odessa, will follow the cyclists to render aid if and when needed. A picnic lunch will be held for the bicyclists at the ride's midway point. Previous lunch stops have been at the Rock Pile.

Later that day, at 6:30 p.m., a barbecue supper will be held for the cyclists, their families and guests at the Prude Ranch.

The next day, the Cycle-Fest will host the two-mile endurance ride up the 17-percent grade of Mount Locke, which is site of the McDonald Observatory. Patches will be awarded to those who "make the grade." The ride up Mount Locke will begin at 9 a.m.

Also on that Sunday, the Prude Ranch will sponsor a Bicycle Rodeo for boys and girls 12 years of age or younger.

Cyclists wishing to participate in the weekend ride should write John Robert Prude at the Prude Ranch, P.O. Box 1431, Fort Davis, Texas 79734 or call the ranch at 426-3347 or 426-9006. Entry fee is $12 per cyclist; the fee covers the lunch, barbecue feed, sag-wagon conveniences, T-shirts and patches.

The annual ride is sponsored by the Lubbock County Wheelmen of the American Wheelmen and Prude Ranch, in cooperation with Peyton's Bikes of Midland-Odessa and Hutchinson Cycles of Lubbock.

Entry forms for the ride may be picked up at the bicycles shops in Midland, Odessa and Lubbock. Those wishing additional information may call David Ham at Peyton's Bikes at 684-5984, Tom Hutchinson in Lubbock at 806-744-4189 or Prude.

Last year's ride drew scores of cyclists from across the state — from Houston to El Paso and also including riders from Midland, Odessa, Lubbock, Dallas, Alpine, Fort Davis and other towns and cities.

New hotline established

ODESSA — A new toll-free hotline has been established to provide information for Texas Adults interested in finding out more information about free adult basic education courses in the state.

With more than four million Texas adults with less than high school diplomas, special classes are offered throughout the state to teach the basics of reading and writing, as well as to prepare adults for taking GED exams.

Odessa College sponsors adult basic education classes throughout the Permian Basin and, in Ector County, students not only can study for GED tests, but can also earn high school diplomas through one of the city's three high schools.

The hotline can be used from 8:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. Mondays through Fridays by dialing 1-800-772-0867, according to Amy Hebestreit of OC's adult basic education program.

NEWSPAPER BIBLE

Shall we get a divorce?

Now, for those who are married I have a command, not just a suggestion. And it is not a command from me, for this is what the Lord Himself has said: a wife must not leave her husband.

But if she is separated from him, let her remain single or else go back to him. And the husband must not divorce his wife.

Here I want to add some suggestions of my own. These are not direct commands from the Lord, but they seem right to me. If a Christian has a wife who is not a Christian, but she wants to stay with him anyway, he must not leave her or divorce her.

And if a Christian woman has a husband who isn't a Christian, and he wants her to stay with him, she must not leave him.

For perhaps the husband who isn't a Christian may become a Christian with the help of his Christian wife. And the wife who isn't a Christian may become a Christian with the help of her Christian husband. Otherwise, if the family separates, the children might never come to know the Lord; whereas a united family may, in God's plan, result in the children's salvation.

But if the husband or wife who isn't a Christian is eager to leave, it is permitted. In such cases the Christian husband or wife should not insist that the other stay, for God wants His children to live in peace and harmony.

For, after all, there is no assurance to you wives that your husbands will be converted if they stay, and the same may be said to you husbands concerning your wives.

Nobody flees new Venezuela prison

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Nobody breaks out of El Junquito, Latin America's first low-security prison. Instead, people break in.

The compound — which houses 400 inmates serving time for every crime — is flanked by hillside slums, rows and rows of brick box-houses and wooden shacks.

"Hill people" have been breaking in to steal eggs from the prison chicken coop and tools from the workshops. In places where the shanties almost overhang the prison walls, children climb over to play inside.

"Most of the inmates come from there," said warden Luis Augusto Sayago, sweeping his arm in an arc to take in the surrounding hillsides. "They can't get away from it."

El Junquito is an experimental low-security prison that selects its inmates on the basis of personality tests, not crimes. The first of its kind in Latin America, it has attracted some attention from prison officials in Argentina, Colombia and Guatemala. The reaction so far, according to Sayago, has been positive.

Part of what keeps the inmates inside the compound, said one of the few guards outside the low walls, is the fear of being transferred to the nearby Model Prison, known among the prisoners as "The Other Face of Hell."

But another reason is that the prisoners can learn trades and study up through university level while they serve time — things they had no chance to do when they lived on the hillsides.

"They come here sometimes not even knowing how to eat with a fork and knife," Sayago said.

The warden's current project is setting up a program at El Junquito to teach neighborhood people how to read and write. He said he believes adults who would feel humiliated by Ministry of Education instructors would not mind learning from inmates.

When Sayago took over El Junquito five years ago, he tore down the solitary confinement cells and let prisoners who could get outside loans start small businesses. Now there are rows of tiny shops that sell paintings, pottery and jewelry made by the inmates, as well as two large garages for fixing cars.

Work is mandatory, as is the three-hour study period most evenings.

In their spare time, prisoners take part in cultural activities. Recently they put on a play — "To Do Away with the Judgment of God" — at a downtown theater.

On Wednesdays and Sundays, visiting days, the little shops are filled with inmates' children. "They bring them here, where they can say, 'This is where Daddy works,'" Sayago said. "They don't like to go to the cells on family days. It makes them feel like prisoners."

The warden encourages the inmates to talk things over with him, even perceived problems with the system that put them behind walls.

Tankers held up; storage tanks full

By MAX B. SKELTON
AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — William C. Douce says it is easy at times to understand why people have a hard time believing the nation has an energy problem.

The chief executive officer of Phillips Petroleum Co. adds that right now, for example, it appears last year's oil shortage has turned into this year's oil glut.

"In the Gulf of Mexico, tankers loaded with foreign oil are being held offshore because all the storage tanks ashore are full," he said.

"Petroleum fuels are in adequate supply throughout the country and competitive conditions are pushing prices down in some cases. Petroleum imports are down to less than 40 percent of total oil consumption, the lowest level in several years."

At the same time, Douce said, domestic oil production is inching upward the third time in a decade and natural gas output also is increasing.

"There's no doubt that right now there's plenty of oil and natural gas to go around," he said.

"Demand for oil and gas products has dropped dramatically this year in part because of the recession."

Writing for the October edition of an employee-shareholder publication, Douce said energy and industrial activity go hand-in-hand.

"When plants and factories close and employees are laid off, energy use naturally declines," he said.

"Energy consumption also has declined because of higher fuel prices, stemming in part from a 130 percent increase in the price of imported oil over the past year and a half."

Douce said domestic oil and gas output is on the upswing because of a spectacular resurgence of drilling operations brought on by the gradual decontrol of crude oil prices and because of higher prices for natural gas.

"But we should not let the current comfortable situation lead us to thinking we are over the hump in solving the energy problem," he said.

"Some authorities say the worldwide oil surplus could last as long as three years, but others predict it will vanish within the next few months."

One reason for such widely different predictions, he said, is the current unpredictability of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

"Regardless, as the American economy regains its strength, energy demand will rise," he said.

"And as energy use increases, our dependence on imported oil is likely to rise once more."

Douce said reducing dependence on imported energy by emphasizing the development and use of the diverse domestic resources remains the key to a secure energy future.

"And that key is within our reach," he said. "Studies have shown the United States could produce 90 percent of its own energy and cut oil imports by up to one-half between now and 1990."

To meet such a 1990 goal, he said, there is need to open federal lands to energy development, double the domestic use of coal, triple the contribution of nuclear power, and increase significantly new production from synthetic fuels and renewable sources such as solar and wind power.

"These are realistic objectives, and we are making some progress in reaching them," he said. "But more will have to be done."

Douce said balanced energy-environmental policies, especially in relation to energy exploration in wilderness areas, would help speed the pace of progress.

"So would streamlining the time consuming government-permitting processes that are required of new or expanded energy projects," he said. "What it boils down to is government, private industry, and consumers, you and me, need to join together in a strong alliance."

Douce said that despite the current surplus it is important that such steps to augment future supplies be taken as soon as possible.

"We can make logical decisions free of the emotionalism of shortages or skyrocketing prices," he said. "Hopefully, we'll take advantage of this breathing room."

No big shortage seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top U.S. official says that even if the Iran-Iraq war continues, no serious oil shortages are foreseen, but President Carter is nevertheless seeking discussion on ways of keeping the oil flowing through the Persian Gulf.

Energy Secretary Charles Duncan told leaders of the 21-nation International Energy Agency on Friday that no serious shortages should occur, even if the war between the two Gulf nations does not end soon.

Carter spokesman Jody Powell said tanker traffic through the Strait of Hormuz at the mouth of the Gulf "is virtually normal," except for a lack of oil from Iraq and Iran.

Carter, Powell said, has offered to convene a meeting of key U.S. allies to talk about ways of keeping the oil flowing.

"I've been in touch with the leaders of allied nations, both in the western world and the Islamic countries directly concerned," Carter told a Milwaukee television station Friday, "and whatever is required to keep the Strait open will be done."

Powell declined to be specific Friday about Carter's offer to mediate a discussion on how to keep the oil flowing. "I am not going to get into the details at all about what's being discussed. The general nature of those consultations is positive."

The Energy Department, meantime, said petroleum stocks in the United States are at an all-time high, hitting 1.36 billion barrels last week. That total doesn't include the 91 million barrels in the U.S. strategic reserve.

Merger in making

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Phoenix Resources Co., an Oklahoma City-based oil exploration and production firm, will merge with Texas International, which is Phoenix Resources' majority stockholder, TI directors voted here Friday.

Phoenix Chairman James A. Kishpaugh said he has called a board meeting for Oct. 4 at which the merits of the proposal will be considered.

Under terms of the proposal, each share of Phoenix class B stock would be exchanged for one share of TI common stock.

There are 5.4 million class B shares outstanding, of which TI owns 2.8 million shares, or about 52 percent.

Officers and directors of TI hold three of the five seats on Phoenix's board.

Slight increase logged on Permian Basin count

According to the Reed Rock Bit Co.'s weekly survey, a slight increase in rig activity was seen in the Permian Basin Empire of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico last week.

Last week there were 331 rigs making hole, while two weeks ago there were only 329 units in the two-state area. Last week the county was 282 units.

Lea County, N.M. continued as the leader among the West Texas and Southeast New Mexico counties covered by the survey, with 47 rigs going Friday, the same as the previous count.

Eddy County, another New Mexico county, with the second most active area with 33, also the same as the previous count.

Pecos County, the West Texas leader, was in third place overall with 21 rotary tables turning — four more than the previous count.

Other counties with 11 or more active rotary rigs included Andrews and Dawson with 12 each, Crockett 12, and Hockley 11.

Ector, Martin and Winkler counties each reported 10 rotary units working.

Soviets work on mass-produced nuclear reactors

By DAVID MINTHORN

VOLGODONSK, U.S.S.R. (AP) — The Soviet Union is completing construction of what it calls the world's first mass-produced nuclear reactors at the "Atomash" factory in this southern city.

"Reactors are normally assembled from parts produced by various factories," said Atomash director Valery Pershin. "Ours is the only factory in the world building all the equipment for nuclear reactors."

Four nuclear reactor vessels, each with an electrical power capacity of one million kilowatts, are being built. The $4 billion plant, still three years from final completion, is in massive hangar-like buildings on dusty fields near the Volga-Don shipping canal.

The production is reminiscent of an aircraft assembly line, with the reactors pieced together at stationary work areas along 200 yards of the cavernous main building.

The heavy steel components are spread along the factory for fitting into the reactor vessel. Heavy-duty hoists span steel girders overhead to transport the components from work station to work station.

Although work proceeds slowly, Soviet officials describe the reactor factory as mass production because of the standardized technology and centralization of all production at the factory.

The project is a key part of plans to boost nuclear power plant construction in the 1980s to preserve this country's oil and coal reserves.

About 25 nuclear power plants are in operation in the Soviet Union and 10 others are under construction. So-called "fast-breeder" reactors fueled by plutonium are playing an increasingly large role in the ambitious development plans, Soviet officials have said.

"The Soviet government has a long-term plan to concentrate on atomic energy," Pershin told 60 foreign reporters given a tour of the plant Thursday. "We don't lack conventional energy sources, such as brown coal, but sometime in the future this may be different."

The plant's first water-cooled reactor is scheduled to be completed in February, more than a year ahead of schedule, Pershin said.

The top half of the reactor vessel was completed recently after weeks of intricate welding together of steel collar components. "It was the first time the workers did the welding, and they completed the job without one single defect," the stocky, middle-aged engineer said proudly.

Pershin said the Atomash reactor components are shaped from individual pieces of forged steel for increased strength.

Sheet steel welded together in layers is the normal reactor construction material in the United States and elsewhere, he said, and indicated he thought the Soviet technique was stronger.

"We give a 30-year guarantee on all reactor parts we build," Pershin said. "Testing and control, including X-rays and ultrasonic tests of welding seams, constitutes 11 percent of the work."

Some 7,000 workers are employed at the factory within walking distance of blocks of new high-rise apartments in the city that has quadrupled in population to 135,000 in four years under state sponsorship.

Workers directly employed in reactor construction earn an average of $464 a month, well above the plant's average wage of $268 a month, Pershin said.

"Atomash works for peace" proclaims a Communist Party slogan in block letters atop the town's new hospital. Another downtown sign gives the daily countdown to the national party congress starting Feb. 23 in Moscow — the deadline for completion of the local factory's first reactor.

"There is no public resistance to nuclear power in the Soviet Union," Pershin told the reporters. "It isn't like the West where some of the resistance comes from energy monopolies, such as oil companies."

In reply to a question, he said the issue of disposing of radioactive nuclear reactor waste was not an urgent problem in the Soviet Union. "Our scientists are working on this," he said. "Some of it can be recycled. And we have a big country with plenty of room to store used fuel."

Pershin insisted that safety has top priority in Soviet nuclear plant construction, and the risk of an accident was almost nil.

Warring nations to be hit hardest

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Any oil pinch caused by the war between Iran and Iraq will be felt first and hardest in the two warring oil-rich nations themselves, analysts say.

Observers agree the fighting could eventually dry up the current oil glut on the world market, but Iran and Iraq stand to suffer the most and the soonest.

The governments of the two nations, in broadcasts by their state radio stations, already are urging their people to conserve fuel.

However, a leading Middle East oil analyst said Friday he did not foresee any immediate crisis for the Western world as a result of the war, which has not only halted shipments of crude from Iranian and Iraqi ports, but has slowed exports from other oil-producing nations in the Persian Gulf.

The analyst said he did not anticipate any supply crisis in the immediate future because "production recently has been way ahead of consumption."

Some oil officials predicted it would take as long as 100 days to wipe out the glut on a world market deprived of Iranian and Iraqi crude and hampered by slow shipments from the other Persian Gulf states.

In Washington, the director of the 21-nation International Energy Agency said no serious shortages are expected for the rest of the year, even if the Iran-Iraq war continues.

"At the moment, there is no reason for any drastic moves," said director Ulf Lantzke of West Germany after meeting with Energy Secretary Charles W. Duncan Jr.

Duncan's British counterpart, David Howell, also in Washington, said the war has prompted the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to shelve temporarily its agreement to cut crude oil production by 10 percent. The Briton said he learned of the postponement from oil officials of Venezuela, an OPEC member.

The gulf countries — including Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates as well as Iraq and Iran, provide more than 10 per cent of the oil imported by the non-communist world.

President Carter has offered to convene a meeting of key U.S. allies to discuss ways of safeguarding the flow of oil from the Persian Gulf and keeping open the strategic Strait of Hormuz at the mouth of the gulf, White House spokesman Jody Powell said.

A long-term shutdown of Iran and Iraq's oil installations, which together exported about 3.8 million barrels a day before the war, could create problems. One analyst said there is no way of knowing yet what has been damaged or how long it will take to repair.

Destruction at the Iranian port of Abadan and the Iraqi port of Basra could be critical in terms of the two countries' domestic needs, one expert explained. He said the primary purpose of refineries at the two sites was to produce petroleum products for use at home.

Battlefield reports Friday indicated both the Iranian and Iraqi oil centers had been set ablaze by artillery.

OPEC meeting spokesman urges more understanding from media reporters

By MURRAY SEEGER
The Los Angeles Times

VIENNA — Midway through the recent confusing, acrimonious conference of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, an official spokesman for the 13 members urged more understanding from the many journalists in attendance.

The reporters made a mistake in emphasizing the differences among the delegates, he said. If the reporters could have been in the meeting room, they would better understand the warm feeling of "brotherhood" that binds the delegates together.

There was nothing the reporters wanted more than to sit inside the gold-and-cream-colored ballroom of the old Hapsburg Palace to witness an OPEC meeting, instead of standing for hours in a cobblestone courtyard adjacent to the famous Spanish Riding Academy.

If they had been allowed to share the imperial atmosphere of gilt and crystal, it is hardly likely the impression would have been of brotherhood or solidarity, however.

Instead, the OPEC sessions, which brought together finance and foreign ministers in addition to the countries' oil executives, struck a new peak for dissension.

Although subcommittees had been working on some issues for two years, the ministers could find no agreement on the most important subjects facing them — setting a long-range price program and a strategy for dealing with the issue of economic development for themselves and other less-developed countries.

They suggested no new way to start a real dialogue with the industrial world on the issues that united the Third World — investment, transfer of technology, freer trade, monetary stability.

Although the sharp rise in oil prices is a major cause for the heavy borrowing by many oil-poor underdeveloped countries, the OPEC members could not offer any clear proposals to help those nations. While the vast majority of OPEC members — 10 of 13 — are agreed on a formula for fixing a steady, automatic rise in oil prices for years into the future, the minority blocked approval because of the unanimity rule the organization follows.

What made the Vienna meeting different was that personal and political animosities came clearly to the surface despite the barriers OPEC erects to keep its fights private.

The organization has usually been characterized by the overworked hawk-and-dove analogy — the members who want to raise oil prices higher and higher to discipline the industrial world and fatten their own accounts against those who feel they have a true stake in the health of the developed world and believe they can win cooperation with it through a moderate attitude.

That difference has now been aggravated by the presence of the revolutionary Iranian delegation, which sees within the ranks of OPEC enemies like those it finds in the Western world.

Under the shah's regime, Iran played the role of a dove in OPEC politics while acting as a hawk on prices.

Iran was influential because it was a major oil exporter whose influence in the world market was second only to that of Saudi Arabia. Tehran's delegations were led by competent experts.

Now Iran is a minor producer engaged in a dangerous border war with its neighbor and fellow OPEC member, Iraq.

Before the Vienna meeting convened, the current head of the Tehran delegation, Ali Akbar Moinefar, fired off telegrams to both the Iraqi and Saudi delegates accusing them of serving the interests of "imperialism" and profiteering from the Iranian revolution by stealing the country's oil customers.

"Saudi Arabia is exploiting the market shortage by overproduction and underselling," Moinefar repeated in the meeting room. "I calculate roughly that Saudi Arabia is making a profit of $100 million a day."

Prince Saud al-Faisal, the Saudi foreign minister, retorted that the Iranian had uttered "insults against the Saudi people."

"I think we understand English in this room," added Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi oil minister. "When the OPEC Algiers meeting said the (price) ceiling is $32, that means it's the ceiling, and that's where the problem lies."

While the June session in Algiers did set down a $32 ceiling for Arabian light-class crude, none of the members who were charging more for their oil reduced their prices to that level. Iran has held its price at $35 a barrel even though it has few customers and desperately needs hard currency.

The Iraqis hope to sponsor a lavish, congenial celebration in Baghdad on Nov. 4 in honor of OPEC's 20th anniversary. Moinefar raised the possibility that the gathering of 13 heads of state should be postponed. "Who knows who will even be in power in Baghdad in November," he reportedly asked.

The Iraqi response to the Iranians failed to leak out of the Hapsburg Palace but Tayeb Abdul Karim, the Baghdad head of delegation, rushed from the final night's meeting in a state of high agitation.

At the Algiers meeting he also left a session and explained to reporters: "I am going to my room to get an aspirin — Moinefar gives me a headache."

The Vienna meeting finally ended just before midnight Wednesday with a hastily carpentered agreement on current oil prices. Apparently on the supposition that it should make a move that might help bring a future agreement on its indexation concept, Saudi Arabia agreed to raise its oil price from $28 a barrel to $30.

This price was also set as the marker price instead of the $32 agreed to in Algiers. As a result, the spread between the high and low sellers — Algeria and Saudi Arabia — was reduced, since all other producers agreed to a freeze until the end of the year.

Meantime, Saudi Arabia will maintain its high production along with Iraq to keep the world market well-supplied with oil, and pressure the OPEC radicals to reduce the surcharges that put their selling prices so far above the marker or ceiling price.

It appears the Iranians will not attend the November gala if it goes ahead on schedule. Celebrating brotherhood would be easier without them.

War rescinds gentlemen's agreement

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The war between Iran and Iraq apparently has forced several members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to rescind their recent gentlemen's agreement to cut oil production by 10 percent, Western and OPEC energy officials said Friday.

In fact, continued fighting between the two Persian Gulf states could prompt OPEC members to increase their production to meet any significant oil shortfall, according to the vice president of Venezuela, an OPEC member.

In Bahrain, oil experts confirmed that OPEC members were shelving plans for production cuts later this year to tighten a slack oil market, and they said Saudi Arabia had suggested the postponement.

In New York, Saudi Foreign Minister Prince Saud al Faisal denied that Saudi Arabia had agreed to any production cutback plan in the first place. So far, the Iranian-Iraqi warfare has had little effect on world oil supplies, and oil experts generally were expressing optimism that a market shortage would be avoided.

British Energy Secretary David Howell, visiting Washington for talks with U.S. Energy Secretary Charles Duncan, told reporters that OPEC's informal decision at its Vienna meeting earlier this month to trim production 10 percent had been shelved for the time being.

"My understanding is that that agreement is now on ice," Howell told reporters.

Howell said he reached this understanding after a visit to Venezuela Wednesday, where he was told that the Vienna agreement had to be reconsidered because of the Iranian-Iraqi war.

The Iraqi National Oil Co., meanwhile, reportedly has told foreign buyers it has stopped all its oil exports, apparently meaning deliveries through pipelines to Mediterranean Sea terminals as well as from its own battle-ravaged Persian Gulf outlets. Before the fighting inflicted heavy damage on both countries' oil facilities, Iraq had been exporting about 3 million barrels of oil a day and Iran an estimated 300,000.

In Paris, International Energy Agency officials confirmed that Iraqi pipelines to Turkish and Syrian terminals have been shut down, halting the flow of between 800,000 and 1 million barrels of crude a day for export. The officials said they did not yet know whether the pipelines had been damaged by the war or Iraq had closed them as a precautionary measure.

While the loss of Iranian and Iraqi exports in effect exceeds the planned 10 percent OPEC production cut — the organization has been producing about 27 million barrels a day lately — Western stockpiles are so high that shortages should be avoided even if Iraq and Iran are unable to resume oil shipments through the Persian Gulf for the rest of the year, according to energy officials.

Ulf Lantzke, the executive director of the International Energy Agency, told reporters after conferring with Duncan that, "at this moment, there is no reason for any drastic moves."

However, Lantzke said he was basing his assessment on the assumptions that other oil-producing nations would maintain current production and that Iraq would continue to ship oil by pipeline to the Mediterranean. It was not immediately clear what effect the closing of Iraq's pipelines would have on Lantzke's optimistic assessment.

Oil specialists in Bahrain, privately confirming Howell's understanding that OPEC is shelving its production cutback, told Washington Post correspondent Stuart Auerbach in Manama that the cutback and its goal of price stabilization already had been achieved by the Iranian-Iraqi fighting.

The sources in Bahrain said Saudi Arabia had initiated the move to end the cutback. The Saudis reportedly told OPEC members that, coming on top of an estimated 12 to 17 percent OPEC production loss from the Iranian and Iraqi cutoffs, the 10 percent cutback would cause chaos in the world oil market.

The Saudis said this would aggravate inflation throughout the world and harm the economies of the oil-producing nations, according to the Bahrain sources.

Leading OPEC members, including the Persian Gulf States of Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates, back the Saudi position, the sources said. However, there was no immediate word on the positions of Libya and Algeria, two other major Arab oil producers.

Venezuela indicated it supports the postponement of OPEC production cutbacks. Howell said Venezuelan Oil Minister Humberto Calderon Berti told him that he thought "in the present situation it was very important for all sides to act in a moderate way and not seek to exploit the situation."

In Strasbourg, France, Venezuelan Vice President Godfredo Gonzalez went even further.

Gonzalez, attending a meeting of the European Council, told reporters, "All OPEC countries including Venezuela will increase as far as possible their oil production to cover any eventual shortfall brought about by the Iraq-Iran war." He did not elaborate.

Venezuela produces about 2.3 million barrels of oil a day, most of which is exported to the United States.

U.S. Energy Department officials indicated they welcomed but were somewhat puzzled by Gonzalez' remarks. The Iranian-Iraqi fighting "still hasn't really tightened the market" and is not now expected to cause an oil crisis, one official said.

In Mexico City, the Mexican government said it could not increase its oil production in response to the Iranian-Iraqi war. However, Mexico, which is not an OPEC member, has no plan to cut back production either.

Waste regulations get final approval

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — New industrial waste management regulations have been given final approval by the Water Development Board, as Texas continues its effort to receive delegation of the new federal regulatory program from the Environmental Protection Agency.

EPA is required to begin regulation of hazardous wastes under the 1976 Resource Conservation and Recovery Act as of Nov. 19. Dick Whittington, deputy director of the Department of Water Resources, notes.

Texas' regulations attempt to meet the three major goals in the EPA program — determining who is handling hazardous wastes; implementing a manifest or "trip ticket" system for transportation of wastes; and establishing technological and administrative standards for owners and operators of treatment, storage and disposal facilities.

Delegation of the program to the state will prevent a dual state/federal licensing and regulatory system.

At public hearings on the proposed regulations, industry officials urged adoption of an exemption for small generators of industrial waste, noting the EPA provides an exemption for firms generating 1,000 kilograms (about 2,200 pounds) or less per month.

However, the WDB voted to continue regulation of small generators, while approving exemptions for wastes from utility plants and recycled or reclaimed materials.

State Board of Insurance has rescheduled its hearing on worker's compensation matters from Oct. 22 to Oct. 14, when it will consider elimination of the $300 per week payroll limitation in favor of use of total payroll.

Several groups, including the Texas Association of Business, Associated General Contractors (Texas Highway-Heavy and Texas Building Branch), Texas Chapters of the National Electrical Contractors Association, and several individuals representing labor unions have indicated they plan to appear.

Also to be considered at the hearing are revision of experience provisions and a new worker's compensation manual.

Meanwhile the special advisory committee named by the SBI to assess worker's compensation rate-making methods has met twice, spending "literally three days out of four days asking questions," one member reports.

Thus far, the committee has been unable to agree on any proposals, and has spent some time discussing whether, and how, investment income should be applied to rates.

Another meeting of the panel is planned for early November.

And the House Employment Practices Committee is completing work on its report on worker's compensation, which the committee staff reports now is in its initial draft; no time for the committee to consider the recommendations has been set.

Texas Credit Union League reports the number of share draft accounts at Texas credit unions rose 40 percent during the first half of 1980, with participating credit unions having 380,390 share draft accounts compared to some 200,000 at the end of 1979 — an average of 2,549 accounts at the 110 credit unions offering the service.

The number of credit unions offering the checking account-like share drafts was up 20 percent from the start of the year.

TCUL has set up the nation's first share-draft clearing program, which is due to take over manual processing functions Oct. 1 from First National Bank, Dallas, (the bank will continue performing capture and transmittal functions.)

TCUL notes that the share draft program is "truncated" — with the actual share drafts, when cancelled, being recorded on microfilm, with only a monthly activity statement going to the account holder.

That, the League says, saves time and mailing costs for the processors; the account holder balances the account using carbon copies made when drafts are written.

Jack A. Clymer, former vice president of the Dallas Federal Reserve Bank, is head of the TCUL program, and says banks "would love to adopt" the same system — but bank customers have resisted the change.

Clymer anticipates the number of credit unions offering share drafts and using the League's program will rise during coming months.

Texas Credit Union Commission plans to hold a meeting in Austin Oct. 9, to review the chapters of the Texas Credit Union act dealing with powers, management, capital and investment powers of credit unions, with a view towards possible legislative changes.

The Credit Union department is beginning to canvass state-chartered credit unions, Commissioner John (Pete) Parsons reports, since the National Credit Union Administration is in the process of determining if reserve requirements should be waived for another quarter.

That matter may be considered by the commission at a special session, Parsons says.

Persian Gulf chaos

Wars are unpleasant experiences at any time and, yet, for all we detest the field of battle, it seems that humankind is destined to remain there.

The fighting in Iran and Iraq, which began this week full-scale, holds sobering repercussions for the world if it progresses much further. The two nations have experienced a running border dispute for some time. It seemed the war was inevitable.

Iran, of course, has been ripped by two years of revolution. The internal strife has left that nation in a shambles. Iran's armed forces have suffered the consequences of revolution, including mass desertions, indiscipline and the cumulative effects of the Western embargo of arms and spare parts.

Iraq merely decided to take advantage of this situation to settle its border disputes and to punish the ayatollah for his efforts to spark a Shiite Moslem revolt against Baghdad's ruling Sunni faction.

As everyone undoubtedly knows, the involved region is important for its petroleum production. Already Iran and Iraq have cut their exports through the Persian Gulf. But that cutback really won't impact U.S. consumers initially.

The United States imports very little oil from Iraq and none from Iran. But the fighting in that far corner of the world still holds energy repercussions for the United States since the Strait of Hormuz is located there in the midst of the fighting. That straight is the world's main oil artery and cutting it would create chaos worldwide.

Even bleaker for the United States is the prospect that the Soviet Union might want to "exploit" the current conflict to move into Iran and take control. It has been pretty clear for some time now that the Kremlin "has designs on Iran."

Already the Soviet Union holds a "friendship and cooperation" treaty with Iraq that provides, among other things, for military assistance should the need arise.

If the Soviet Union chose to make such a move to gain control of the strait, there's little doubt what the American response would be. The prospect is ominous.

This isolated "border dispute" war has all the potential to engulf the entire world. But there is a chance that won't be the result.

The United Nations has called for a cease-fire. That step must be supported if the world is to remain at peace.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

U.S. military alliance with China is risky

WASHINGTON — In the high-stakes foreign policy poker game Jimmy Carter is playing with the Kremlin, China is the wild card. But there is disturbing evidence that Carter may be overplaying his China card, a risky bluff which could, in the long run, escalate a spiraling world arms race.

Carter partially inherited his hand from Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger, and is playing it out under the guidance of the resident hardline anti-Soviet expert — his Polish-born national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski.

Brzezinski — like Nixon and Kissinger before him — is so concerned with the Soviet threat to American security that he is willing to provide sophisticated arms and technology to the Chinese. The backfire potential of this rapidly escalating strategy is causing concern in Capitol Hill and in the U.S. intelligence community.

The concern isn't that the China overtures don't have merit, but rather that Carter's lieutenants may be stumbling down a thorny path which hasn't yet been fully explored, and which could have dire implications among the Big Three of East and West.

There's no doubt that the Carter administration is willing to back up its diplomatic friendship with China with expensive military hardware. The recent visits to Peking of Defense Secretary Harold Brown and his deputy, William Perry — each bearing a traveling salesman's list of attractive technological items — make this clear.

Secret Pentagon documents and congressional testimony show that President Carter did not formulate the "China card" policy, but has followed leads begun as long as eight years ago during the Nixon administration. The knowledgeable China watcher, Banning Garrett, of the University of California, recently told congressional investigators for Rep. Lester Wolff, D-N.Y., that U.S. plans for arming the Chinese have been one of the best-kept secrets in Washington. This is despite the fact that one expert, according to Garrett, estimated the ultimate cost of arming the Chinese at a minimum of $50 billion.

Not that the Chinese are helpless militarily, by any means. "China has only a limited ability to project force beyond its borders," according to a Joint Chiefs of Staff report labeled "top secret." But "the People's Republic is developing increasingly capable strategic nuclear and general purpose forces... Its conventionally-powered submarine force is strategically situated to interdict (shipping) on the East Asian coast," concludes the study.

Nevertheless, military strategists started eight years ago to assess the possibilities of future military relations with the Chinese. An intriguing aspect of the budding game plan was

ART BUCHWALD

Ah so! H. & R. Brock crimping the Great Warr

WASHINGTON — It was inevitable that once the People's Republic of China opened its doors to the Western nations it would be corrupted by our evil ways. This thought occurred to me when I read in the newspaper that the National People's Congress had just passed the first income tax law "to safeguard China's economic interests." The leaders of the People's Republic have assured the populace that the law, in its present form, only affects 21 out of China's one billion population. The reason is that the bill provides for the equivalent of a $6,375 annual exemption, and except for 21 Chinese performers, artists and writers, no one else in the nation makes that kind of money.

Let the people of the People's Republic beware! You may be safe from the Chinese IRS this year and possibly next year, but there hasn't been an income tax bill ever passed that didn't eventually include a majority of the country.

I can see a meeting of the 1982 National People's Congress. The Communist Finance Committee is scratching for revenue.

"Comrades, it is urgent that we raise another billion yen to pay for our cradle-to-the-grave birth control program."

"The only way to do this is to lower everyone's exemptions and raise the rate of the income tax. We will assure the people that instead of 21 people being affected, only 100 million out of one billion will have anything to worry about."

Art Buchwald

"Of course, why didn't I think of that?"

Six months later, the deputy finance minister returns from a trip to the United States and reports to the party. "Comrades, I have seen a wondrous thing in America — a thing that no Chinese person would believe."

"So tell us, Wong Pu, what is this wondrous thing?"

"I have seen a machine that takes the income tax out of a person's salary before he receives his check."

"You are a capitalist toad liar, Wong Pu. No such machine could do that."

"I swear on — who's in power this week?"

"Jiang Xiang."

"I swear on Jiang Xiang's head that I am telling the truth. I went to a U.S. zipper factory and asked a foreman how much salary he made. He said $450 a week. Then someone handed him his check and it was for $200. THE HEAD OF THE FACTORY SAID A MACHINE TOOK OUT THE TAX AND MAILED IT TO THE GOVERNMENT."

"If we can get one of those machines," a worker in the finance department said, "we could lower the tax exemption and only 300 million people would have to pay any income tax."

"The treasury department gave me one as a gift," the deputy finance minister said. "We can start right away."

"Of course, there would be a certain uproar about the tax, so the Chinese IRS could throw in a few tax-deductible items. For example, if you had lunch with someone and talked about 'the gang of four,' it would be considered a business meal and could be deducted. If you took the head of your commune to the Beijing Opera in hopes he wouldn't make you clean out the horse barns, that would be a legitimate entertainment expense."

"And if you used your air raid shelter to store rice, it would be considered a tax shelter until there was an air raid."

Bureaucrats being bureaucrats and politicians being politicians, I predict that by 1990, one billion Chinese will be paying income taxes, except for 21 people who will be in the oil business.

It is not my place to criticize the National People's Congress in Beijing, but by starting an income tax in their country they have opened a Pandora's box that can never be shut. The moment you slap a personal income tax on your people, you invite H. & R. Brock to invade every commune in the land.

Our theory is, why go to the bother of having five numbers in a ZIP code when nine will do?

Let me explain it this way: With the five-digit code we were unable to find you. With the nine-digit code we still won't be able to find you — but with more efficiency.

NICK THIMMESCH

Whose ox is being gored in the Cardinal Medeiros affair?

BOSTON — No one is more dogmatic about how democracy ought to operate than the liberal who unexpectedly gets treated with a dose of his own medicine.

I am reminded of this verity on witnessing the ruckus over the Roman Catholic Cardinal who, just before the recent primary election here, warned his flock of the abortion evil. Liberals, who always smiled like cats when various divines spoke on their side of political issues, howled like hyenas after Humberto Cardinal Medeiros did what he saw as his duty.

Four days before the recent election, his eminence published a letter in the Boston Diocesan paper reminding Catholics that the Second Vatican Council declares that abortion is "an unspeakable crime." He also observed that, "Those who make abortions possible — such as legislators and those who promote, defend and elect these same lawmakers — cannot separate themselves totally from that guilt which accompanies this horrendous crime and deadly sin."

Now two Democratic congressional candidates who are regarded as pro-abortion — James Shannon, a Catholic, and Barney Frank, a Jew — were outraged that the Cardinal spoke out with the election only several days away. Frank's supporters charged the cardinal with an extra foul for publishing the letter on Rosh Hashana when Frank was attending services and unable to answer Medeiros.

Countless times in this republic, clergymen have stood in the pulpit a few days before elections and warned about the dangers of installing a Papist in the White House, allowing alcoholic beverages to be sold, permitting licentiousness to prevail, cutting aid to Israel, racism, the Ku Klux Klan, the barbarism of the Vietnam war, the nuclear weapons race, and the evil of abortion.

For generations, liberals have enlisted divines of their persuasion to the utilitarianism of practical politics, hence, pulpit pounding. No one complained, nor should have, when the great civil rights march on Washington in 1963 was led by a pack of ecclesiastics. Same for the anti-Vietnam protest, poor peoples' marches, and an unending assortment of vigils on behalf of victimized Christians or Jews living behind what we used to call the Iron Curtain.

But let one cardinal get up and remind his flock that many politicians were double-talking on abortion, and that the Roman Church regarded abortion as an evil, and you would think that Tomas de Torquemada was being visited on Boston by process of reincarnation.

Though Shannon and Frank won handsily, bellows of protest against the cardinal are still heard. At the least, he was charged with indiscretion, but other hysterics are yelling bigotry, interference of church on state, his obvious enlistment with Far Right forces, and other forms of perfidy according to certified liberal dogma.

Actually, Cardinal Medeiros follows a generally liberal political line along with other U.S. cardinals. In the same issue of the diocesan paper running his letter on abortion, there was also a statement he and other bishops signed urging voters to "look beyond campaign rhetoric" and try and understand issues dealing with the value of human life: abortion, capital punishment, energy, education, health, housing and the "right to eat."

Nor was the abortion letter the only he has ever issued. His record shows similar letters exhorting his flock to accept school busing for integration; guaranteed incomes for the poor; public funding of low-cost housing, and satchelful of other measures designed to help the poor, but not necessarily win the cardinal applause in all Boston parishes.

The cardinal exercised his First Amendment rights in those instances as well as in writing the abortion letter, and also regards it his duty to do so. But most liberals only cheer when the divines are on their side, and quickly label any deviation as "political interference." It's the old story of whose ox is being gored.

In Nazi Germany, Protestant leaders like pastor Martin Niemoller and Dietrich Bonhoeffer and Catholic Cardinal Michael Faulhaber courageously spoke out against Hitler's regime, as did Cardinal Josef van Rey in Belgium, and did so on moral principle. So did Cardinal Mindzenty in Hungary — against both Hitler and Stalin. Polish cardinals, including the man who is now Pope, were gutsy in going public against the Communist government in their nation. Throughout history, one cleric or another stuck his neck out for moral reasons, and sometimes had his head chopped off as a consequence.

Evidently, Cardinal Medeiros, keenly aware of Vatican feeling about the abortion issue, grew tired of what, in effect, is the pro-abortion position and voting performance of Catholic politicians like Shannon, Father Robert Dryan, S.J., the retiring congressman who campaigned for Frank, and the state's senior senator, Edward Kennedy.

When Kennedy and other officials who are Catholic get up and declare, in one breath, that they personally oppose abortion on moral grounds, but always vote to provide federal funds to support it — well, to me, that sophistry is equal to, say, Sen. Jacob Javits arguing that foreign aid should be granted to the PLO or Sen. George McGovern voting, a decade ago, to continue the Vietnam war. Neither Javits nor McGovern did any such thing, and should be commended for the integrity of their positions.

Perhaps Cardinal Medeiros should have started his letters of reminder months ago, so he wouldn't be charged with jumping in at the last moment. But no matter. He exercised free speech, and he did his duty. If he did neither, he might as well pack up his vestments and retire to some home for retired priests.

State Board of Insurance appointments among Texas' most sensitive

By BILL KIDD Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — In recent years, perhaps the most politically sensitive appointments by Texas governors have been their choices for the State Board of Insurance.

Still, it is to the SBI that people look when they want someone to do something about insurance rates — and it is to the SBI that the insurance industry must come to obtain rate increases on regulated lines.

According to Daves' calculations, stock companies showed an increase in net investment income from $1.6 billion in 1970 to $7.9 billion in 1979.

Perhaps the most striking example of that has been his effort to get the National Association of Insurance Commissioners to look at the question of costs and benefits in including treatment for alcoholism and drug abuse in all group accident and health policies.

Daves managed to get the NAIC to agree to look at the question (the first time for the group to make such a study) — and was appointed to head the task force on it.

Christie. The board has received considerable praise from consumer groups for its members' action in turning down the auto insurance rate hike request, with praise for the "courage and fairness" of the decision.

ROUSTIN ABOUT with Ed Todd

"WHO'S BEEN TAMPERING WITH MY SHEET!"

Population, like the wind, is relative. No matter which way or how hard it blows, the fickle wind is always shifting. So are populations.

No one, except creditors, keeps tabs on people. And even creditors don't care how many. Just how much.

Today, the Bureau of the Census is being hailed on by a barrage of biting barbs and snide sneers. It can do nothing right. Just ask city Big Wigs or chamber of commerce boosters.

Every town, from Podunk to the Big Apple, ought to keep its own running count on its denizens — living, stilled and laid to rest. After all, city planners are more familiar with their town's particular needs. And if they, and not the feds, are allowed to do their own demographical juggling and fixing, then their needs, wants and desires would be better met.

Now, there could be drawbacks in independent counts. The cumulative population of the United States might add up to 29 trillion, give or take a few billion, rather than the 200-odd million the bureaucratic count indicates.

Now, since bureaucrats, who always are looking for something for someone else to do, won't let go of the decadent decennial count, then they ought to try a little persuasion — incentives, such as legalized bribes.

Pay the folks to count themselves; the higher the count per family, city and county, the more generous gratuities the government could pay out.

Then, if the figures didn't jive, Uncle Sam's lynchmen always could scream graft and launch an investigation. It would only cost money and time, and the government's got lots of both.

And why should the government care which way the winds blow.

Conflict 'inevitable' in Iran's challenge of Iraqi integrity

(Keith McLachlan, chairman of the Middle Eastern department of the School of Oriental and African Studies in London, is the author of "Economic Development in the Middle East Oil-Exporting States.")

By KEITH McLACHLAN Special to The Los Angeles Times

LONDON — Conflict between Iran and Iraq was inevitable following the Iranian revolution. The regime of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and the Iranian clerics challenged the very survival of the ruling Baath government in Baghdad.

Increasingly, Khomeini appeared to be undermining the legitimacy of the Baath junta and the integrity of the Iraqi state. Iraqi responses to pressures from Tehran were those of a regime determined to ensure its own survival in a new and unpredictable environment.

The Baath Party's power base in Iraq is narrow. It has tended to become even narrower ever since the 1968 coup that brought the present ruling group to power as the Revolutionary Command Council. The Baath claims a distinct socialist ideology adapted to Arab society by the Syrian Michel Aflaq, whose ideas called for "Arab unity, freedom and socialism."

His Iraqi adherents have developed a party structure that penetrates all organizations of state and the armed forces.

But mass participation in the Baath's activities generally has been lacking and the party's ideals have remained irrelevant to the lives of most ordinary Iraqis.

Isolation of Iraq's ruling clique has been made more acute by the nature of the state carved out of the Ottoman Empire after World War I. More than 2 million Kurds in northern Iraq aspire to autonomy and have no real representation in Baghdad, nor sympathies with the Arab rulers of the country. Iraq's approximately 6 million Shiite (non-orthodox) Moslems, — half of the country's population — are mainly ethnic Arabs, but have long-standing social, economic and particularly religious grievances against the Sunni (Orthodox) Moslem government in Baghdad.

Alienation of two-thirds of the population on ethnic and religious grounds gives the regime an almost paranoid sense of insecurity. Events in neighboring Iran that have produced popular government with imperfect but nonetheless genuine political representation of the mass of people have highlighted the autocratic and entirely unrepresentative nature of the Iraqi Baath rulers.

The depth of the Baathists' insecurity was revealed recently when President Saddam Hussein embarked on an unprecedented campaign of propaganda and public relations to achieve an image as a "man of the people."

At the same time, Hussein had every reason to believe that the Iranian authorities were specifically seeking his overthrow through subversion among Iraq's Shiite Moslems. The attempted assassination of Tarik Aziz, an Iraqi vice premier and member of the Revolutionary Command Council, in April 1980 by the Iranian-sponsored al Da'wa guerrillas severely frightened the Baathists, and aggravated Hussein's apprehension for the safety of his regime.

Consequently, he began to adopt the tactics of attack as the best form of defense. By early this month, Iraqi forces had already seized 80 square miles of Iranian territory and the scene was set for an escalation of conflict.

While contending military and political strategies contributed to the Iraqi-Iranian dispute, personal antipathies were not far from the heart of the matter. Last April, the Baath put to death Bakr Sadr, Ayatollah Khomeini's close follower in the Iraqi Shiite community. Khomeini, too, neither forgot nor forgave the Iraqi government for their neglect of him during his long exile in Iraq and for his summary expulsion in 1978 at the behest of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

Descriptions of Hussein as "godless," "anti-Islamic" and "an agent of the CIA" have done little to endear Khomeini to the Iraqi president. Hussein's fear that Khomeini had decided to unseat him at any cost was probably not far from the truth and, given Khomeini's record at overthrowing heads of state, was unwarranted. Such personal animosities have been rationalized and mutually supported by nationalism in both states.

Other than fighting for its own survival, the Baath appears to have set two immediate targets for itself: First, Baghdad wishes to demonstrate on a parochial scale that it can punish the Iranians seriously, whenever it wishes. The military drive into Iranian territory, the bombing of Tehran and other cities and the gratuitous destruction of Iranian oil installations is intended to make this point and to deter the Iranian regime from further attempts of political destabilization in Iraq.

Second, an attempt is being made to re-draw the frontier. Reassertion of navigation rights in the Shatt al Arab, occupation of strategic heights in the border zones and seizure of lands encroached upon by Iranian forces will restore Iraqi sovereignty to areas in which the shah succeeded in pushing Baghdad back.

If achieved, these targets would remove many of the political stresses on the Iraqi regime arising from the Iranian revolution, consolidate the Baath position at home and reward the army for its attachment to a civilian president. Baath claims to leadership of the gulf region's Arab states and even to a wider Arab role would be enhanced.

Undoubtedly, there also are more far-reaching ambitions. Easy success would encourage Hussein to look toward supplanting Iran's revolutionary regime with rulers less hostile to Iraq. Demonstrable defeat of the Iranian armed forces would open the door to Arab hegemony in the Persian Gulf, symbolized perhaps by the return to Arab hands of the three islands of Abu Musa, Greater and Lesser Tumb in the eastern gulf, which were seized by the Iranians in 1971.

The Iraqi decision to make war is more calculated than precipitate. Hussein and his military commanders seem to have concluded that Iranian weakness was growing and that resistance to an attack would be slight. The Iraqi-sponsored campaign for Arab autonomy in the Iranian oil province of Khuzestan was waning and the initiative there being lost. At the same time, Iranian exile groups in Iraq were getting restive at inaction. Those situations could be remedied by an intensification of the border war.

It was vitally important, too, that Iraq's Baathist rivals in Syria were entirely preoccupied with their internal struggles against opposition groups led by the Muslim Brotherhood, as well as with the recent union with Libya and with the deteriorating situation in Lebanon.

The newly-founded political accord between Iraq and Saudi Arabia enabled the Iraqis to feel that they were not alone in their confrontation with Iran and would have powerful economic and diplomatic assistance at their elbows. On balance, Iraq was justified in believing that the time was propitious for an attack on Iran.

The implications of Iraqi success in the present conflict with Iran are far-reaching. A new power structure could emerge in the Persian Gulf region. Iraqi claims against Kuwait would be revived and the monarchs of the eastern Arab world would sleep less easy in their beds. Even a limited Iraqi success would curtail Iranian attempts to export its revolution, at least for the time being.

The outlook for the Syrian regime would become extremely poor if the Iraqis, flushed with victory, turned to force to solve their difficulties in that area, too. Should Iraq overthrow Khomeini's regime, then it would truly dominate the gulf and gain irresistible stature in the Arab world and beyond as the new arbiter in the region.

Tied up in traffic

To The Editor: As a concerned Midlander, I am disturbed about the traffic problems in our city. I've heard comments directed toward this subject in the past few months.

Getting to work has become the major accomplishment of the day and especially when the Tall City is blessed with an abundance of rain in the last two weeks. It is a shame for a city the size of Midland to be experiencing such traffic jams while traveling to the downtown area, Memorial Stadium or Midland College, to name just a few of the worse plagued destinations.

Is there no solution? How do we as citizens become involved in helping to solve this problem? I am ashamed of our city every time I sit at an intersection through four or five red lights before being able to continue toward my destination. The entry and exit to Midland College is also a discredit to the college itself.

Jackie Barrett Midland

Legitimate task?

To The Editor: Is a survey of the city's needs a legitimate function of the hospital district or a legitimate use of the taxpayers' money?

The board of directors are trying to hoodwink the taxpayers by saying this will be a purchase of goods rather than a budgeted item.

The bottom line is the taxpayers pick up the deficit.

The best of care

To The Editor: I recently spent three days in the Critical Care Unit of Midland Memorial Hospital. The staff of that unit was not only professional in everything they did, but their attitude was one of kindness, care and concern.

I do not think you could receive better care in any hospital in the country. This is one of the many reasons I'm proud to be a citizen in Midland, Texas.

Note of thanks

To The Editor: The Midland Council of the Knights of Columbus would like to extend their thanks to all of the businesses and individuals who helped to make their recent Drug Abuse Exhibit such a success.

Because of your generosity, many people are now more aware of the dangers of drug abuse.

God will bless each of you who helped in this endeavor by helping to prevent the death of any of our children by their use of drugs.

Such idiocy!

Recently, in the interest of improved traffic flow, the one-hundred block of North Big Spring Street was widened to allow for a continuous left turn lane.

After having gone to that time and expense, a protected left turn signal was not provided for north-south vehicular traffic at the Wall Street intersection!

Such idiocy is monumental enough to reside at the DOE or HUD! Since north-south traffic has been provided with protected lefts at Missouri, Texas, and Illinois Avenues, it seems only logical that the same should have been provided at Wall Street.

Maybe that's the problem, it's too logical.

POSITIVE THINKING

You can stop producing your own unhappiness

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Once some years ago enroute by train from Chicago to New York, I learned something that stayed with me.

I went to the dining car and was seated opposite a man and his wife. The woman was conspicuously well dressed. She was stylishly gowned, had a strikingly beautiful fur piece around her shoulders and was wearing very handsome jewelry. You didn't need unusual discernment to perceive that there must be money in her family.

This woman was not pleased with anything. She complained about the air-conditioning not being properly adjusted. She complained that the table cloth looked mussy and insisted on the steward's putting a new one. She complained about the food. She complained about the weather. Everything was wrong.

Her husband seemed to be an easy-going, genial sort of man. He didn't seem to be paying much attention to his wife's fussing. He and I got to talking. He asked what line of business I was in. I told him I was a minister. I asked what his business was, and he told me. Then he said,

"My wife is in business, too." "She is?" I responded in some surprise. "I didn't take her for a businesswoman."

"Oh, yes," he said. "She's in the manufacturing business."

"Is that so? What does she manufacture?"

"She manufactures unhappiness," he answered. "Her own unhappiness."

Well, the atmosphere at the table grew a bit chilly. But presently we were able to thaw it out a bit and finally draw the woman into an objective discussion of whether it can be said that unhappiness is, for the most part, self-manufactured.

The plain fact is, I think, that we ourselves are the cause of most of our unhappiness. To be sure, our physical condition affects the way we feel. So does the social climate, the way our personal plans are working out, local conditions, even the condition of the world.

—And much of the time the conditions are adverse, causing us irritation, tension, disappointment, depression, frustration of all kinds. But that is the way things are for everybody — always were and always will be. So it doesn't explain why some human beings have such happy dispositions and others are gloomy and low in spirit. When you come right down to it, happiness depends primarily upon an attitude of mind.

A man once told me of himself: "With me it used to be all negativism. There were a great many people I didn't like. Things rubbed me the wrong way. I was wearing myself out with depressing thoughts and I was full of anxieties. I didn't think humanity had any future, either, and I could have given you a long list of all the catastrophes which someday might overwhelm us."

Then I went to a Billy Graham meeting. The spirit of God got to working on me. I followed Billy's advice and committed my life to God. As a result I became filled with new hope and peace of mind. God led me into new ways of thinking. And the time came when I realized that I was happy, real happy.

"I don't mean my troubles all just disappeared. But many things that had eluded me seemed now to come to me of themselves. And what is more, I now actually take pleasure in the problems that previously got me down. At least I'm not afraid of them any more. All in all I have a sense of harmony in my living." One thing is sure — this man stopped manufacturing unhappiness for himself. By a new attitude of mind he became a happy person.

In the book of Proverbs we read, "Who so trusteth the Lord, happy is he." If you trust you have the secret of happiness at all times, anywhere, no matter what your circumstances are. But you have to practice remembering this and feeling it.

As we practice, so do we become. Practice unhappiness, and you will be an unhappy person. Practice happiness and you will be happy. It's just that simple. The royal road to happiness is the attitude: "Trust God and practice being happy."

hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:
Don't let anyone throw away garbage can lids again. Quick as you can drink a cup of coffee, they can be used to make a bird feeder. You'll need two lids, three sticks of wood 10 inches long and one inch square, and six long nails.

Make three holes in the lids, equal distances apart and close to the edge.
Hammer the three sticks between the two lids at the holes. The lid on the bottom should be turned handle side down (it will hold the seed) and the other lid should be turned with the handle on top. It serves as a cover to protect the seed from the weather.

Fasten your feeder to a tree limb with a piece of wire, or nail it to a tree stump or sturdy fence post — any place the birds will gather safely.

I know our little feathered friends will love you for this one. I sure do!

strument, so he asked me what on earth I wanted that for. To hold my knitting book, of course!
I put the three legs down at the lowest level, made sure the lamp throws good light on the book and, using a hair clip like used in beauty shops to give permanents, I keep my place marked and never have to pick the book up to figure out which row I'm on.

TOWEL RACK
DEAR HELOISE:
If you are short on kitchen space and have no convenient place to keep your paper towels, here's what I did.

I took the head off an old mop handle and cut the handle into the length, plus four inches, of a roll of paper towels.
After gluing one end of the stick to a square piece of wood, I secured it with a long screw through the bottom.

Sand it smooth and stain or paint it to match the decor of your kitchen.

I now have a vertical paper towel rack that can be placed anywhere.

A CLEVER CASE FOR COUPONS
DEAR HELOISE:

My mom said I could write this hint. For our vacation, she bought traveler's checks. As you know, they come in little plastic envelopes.
She found they are just the right size and very handy for carrying coupons.

A SHIRT FULL OF HAIR
DEAR HELOISE:

My mom was always getting upset with me because I would get my hair wet when I would take a bath, and then end up catching a cold.
I always wear turtle-necked shirts, and one night I was pulling my shirt off over my head when I stopped halfway. All my hair was now caught up in my shirt.
So I left the shirt on my head and took my bath in my "bathing cap." And I didn't get my hair wet, either.

CAR CADDY

DEAR HELOISE:

I'm sure that I'm not the only one who has pulled up to a drive-in window for a fast food establishment and ordered a cup of coffee, only to have them forget to bring cream and sugar.

Well, I've eliminated this problem. I simply took a pint milk carton, washed it out and cut off the top, leaving a small, square box. After cutting a round small hole in one side, I covered it with cloth on the three sides that would show.

Hanging on the car radio knob, this is the handiest little container for holding "extras" of cream, sugar, catsup and mustard.

Anyone who spends the greater part of the day in a car, like I do, will appreciate this, as it can be used to hold most anything — even toll change.

LOST 'N' FOUND
DEAR HELOISE:

When I lost my eyeglass case, I hit upon the idea of making one using a potholder. I folded it in half and stitched it up on the bottom and side, leaving the top open.
The glasses fit perfectly, and it makes a soft, protective and washable (great!) case.

If you don't have the facilities to sew it, you could glue the edges with a fabric glue. It's great for sunglasses too or as a novelty gift.

A COLD FACT

If you do this, you'll know when to put in that new box.

PANCAKE FUN
DEAR HELOISE:

I have enjoyed your column for years and have a hint for sluggish young eaters.
My grandchildren enjoy turtle pancakes anytime of day. I make regular batter, tint it if desired, and make dollar-size pancakes.

Using a spoon, I push the batter out to make the legs, tail and head of a turtle.
You will be surprised how fast they disappear.
