Both sides claim to hold oil port

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq and Iran both claimed their troops were in control of Iran's major port of Khorramshahr today and Iran said it reopened a strategic railroad in the southern war zone that Iraq had reported cutting last week.

Tehran Radio said a train left the Iranian capital headed for Ahwaz as rail service resumed between these cities. The broadcast said the rail line had been closed because of a break in communications at the station at Andimeshk, a town just north of Dezful, which is 70 miles from the Iraq border where the war began 12 days ago. Early in the fighting, Iraq said its forces had penetrated to near Dezful and cut the rail link from Abadan to Tehran.

Iraq said its forces took over the port and were digging in after achieving their main objectives along an invasion front stretching 300 miles to the north. "There is no trace of any Iranian soldier left in Khorramshahr," Baghdad Radio said. "The town is under Iraq's firm control."

It labeled as "hallucination" Iran's claims it was crushing Iraqi troops in Khorramshahr and said: "What few so-called revolutionary guards are left in hiding are being flushed out and mopped up in Khorramshahr. That's all that's happening now."

But Iran's official Pars news agency said the Iraqi troops withdrew from Khorramshahr as late as midnight Thursday after abandoning tanks and other equipment, that water and electricity were cut off and that "the customs building and some other parts of the city set on fire by the Iraqis were burning out of control."

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said Iranian paratroopers were dropped into Khorramshahr Thursday, that Iranian warplanes launched attacks to support them and that "enemy-crushing" operations were under way in the port, near the refinery city of Abadan at the head of the Persian Gulf in oil-rich Khuzistan province.

Bani-Sadr said Iranian troops also routed Iraqi forces from Susangerd, 100 miles to the north, that the Iraqis were in retreat toward the border and that Iranian forces captured 170 Iraqi tanks and armored personnel carriers and "large numbers of Iraqi soldiers."

The Baghdad command dismissed those claims and said "unless the scale of fighting warranted, there will be only one military communique daily since Iraqi forces have achieved their main objectives and will concentrate on consolidation of their achievements." So far there has been no independent confirmation of any of the claims or any reliable information on the size and disposition of the opposing forces.

The Iraqi command said Thursday its naval units "inflicted serious damage" on Iranian military positions at Abadan, several miles from Khorramshahr, and that Iraqi MiGs attacked the Dezful area, 150 miles north of Abadan. However, it also said Iranian jets hit five Iraqi provinces, that five Iraqi civilians were wounded in air strikes on the southern Iraqi city of Amara and that two Iranian jets were shot down over Amara and Basra.

'Floating' gas tax proposed in Texas

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A "floating" gasoline tax, tied to increases in the cost of highway construction, looks like the best way to keep Texas' road system well-financed, Gov. Bill Clements' budget director says.

Paul Wrotenbery said the upshot would be a three-cent gasoline tax increase in 1981, followed by another two-cent increase in 1982 and continued rises for the next several years.

Wrotenbery appeared before the House Ways and Means Committee on Thursday to explain what he believes is the best alternative for dealing with a growing crisis in highway financing.

expected to decline because of greater use of downsized cars.

Meanwhile, he said, costs of highway construction materials, many with petroleum bases, are soaring.

Gene Robbins, head of the Texas Good Roads and Public Transportation Association, said 10 states increased their fuel taxes in the past year.

Texas, he said, now has the lowest gasoline tax in the nation, Nebraska has the highest, 13.3 cents a gallon, Robbins said.

The radio station in Ahwaz, capital of Khuzistan province 70 miles north of Abadan, claimed Thursday that "the enemy has been defeated and is making dastardly efforts in only a few places." But the broadcast conceded "a number of feudalists are giving shelter to atheist forces," meaning some ethnic Arabs in Khuzistan were aiding Iraq's Arab soldiers. Another broadcast warned Iranian Arab tribesmen they would be "condemned to death" if they helped Iraqi soldiers.

In a military communique, Iran claimed its jets destroyed an entire Iraqi column of tanks, armored personnel carriers and other military vehicles but did not say where the action took place.

Clements to make two visits to Permian Basin next week

Gov. Bill Clements will be in Midland Tuesday and Friday to participate in various events, including a campaign swing with Republican vice presidential nominee George H.W. Bush.

The governor is scheduled to arrive in Odessa Tuesday morning where he will attend 10 a.m. opening ceremonies at the Ector County Republican Party headquarters.

The rest of the day will be spent campaigning with Bush, according to a spokesman in the governor's office.

Gov. Clements also is scheduled to visit Plano and Houston on Tuesday.

Friday morning the governor will be in Midland to participate in an 11:30 a.m. ceremony honoring Stanley C. Moore for innovations in drilling technology. That ceremony is to be held at Drilco Industrial's division offices on the Garden City Highway.

At noon, Gov. Clements and his wife, Rita, will attend a luncheon in Midland Country Club in honor of Moore.

The day will conclude with a 5 p.m. reception for Associated Republicans of Texas. Location of that reception was not immediately known.

Hospital head named Oklahoman Ray Branson named

By SUE FAHLGREN
Staff Writer

Directors for Midland County Hospital District voted unanimously today to appoint Oklahoman Ray Branson as the new administrator for Midland Memorial Hospital.

The hospital has been operating with an interim administrator, Robert Bash, since June when former administrator Wayne E. Ulrich resigned after 12 years' service.

Branson, formerly a pharmacist, should be moving to Midland from Oklahoma City "in 2 1/2 to 3 weeks," according to board of trustees president Tevis Herd. Branson should be fully installed as administrator by Nov. 1.

"It wasn't a particularly easy task choosing among the candidates," board of directors president Ed Magruder said about 9:30 a.m. today. "But, we have a winner and that winner is Ray Branson."

Branson, 36, has been executive vice president of South Community Hospital in Oklahoma City since 1973, following seven years at the hospital. South Community is a 390-bed acute care community hospital.

"I'm very excited about being here," Branson told news media and hospital employees this morning.

"This is my first position as chief administrator," he said, adding, "I made the decision several years ago that I wanted to do this."

Branson has management experience in hospital finances, ancillary care and support departments, and nursing and personnel services.

"I like and am excited about the potential this hospital has," he told the group. "You have an excellent facility. I am very impressed with just the physical facility."

Branson has been involved with a $17 million construction program similar to the $10 million renovation of Midland Memorial Hospital.

During the construction, he was instrumental in producing patient revenue a year ahead of schedule and in reducing construction time by six months.

"He is really going to fit in with our hospital," Magruder said. "This institution stands to become a first-class health care institution."

Branson's financial background includes overseeing budget preparation and budget presentations to the hospital. He has also been responsible for hospital development, marketing and community relations, construction

Good economic news reported

WASHINGTON (AP) - The nation's unemployment rate declined for the second straight month and wholesale prices fell for the first time in 4 1/2 years, the government said today in two reports that reflected an overall improvement in the nation's economy.

The Labor Department said the unemployment rate declined to 7.5 percent in September, down from 7.6 percent in August and the lowest since April, when it was 7 percent.

It reported separately that the wholesale prices were down 0.2 percent in September, a sharp turnaround from a 1.5 percent increase in August and the first decline since wholesale prices fell 0.3 percent in February 1976.

The two reports could help President Carter's re-election hopes as they reflect an improving economy. They also are the last employment and wholesale price statistics before the Nov. 4 election.

However, even as statistics show the economy improving, the president on Thursday criticized the Federal Reserve Board for pushing up interest rates, an action that many economists fear could choke off the recovery from the recession.

The prime lending rate for some banks was increased Thursday to 14 percent, which raises borrowing costs to business and consumers and could discourage business activity.

The Labor Department said an additional 200,000 workers found jobs in September, mostly in the construction industry and on the nation's farms.

Total employment was 97.2 million. Unemployment climbed by nearly 200,000 workers to 7.8 million.

Deborah Klein, a Labor Department analyst, said the drop in employment for the second consecutive month "might be indicating a turn" in the economy. Although unemployment had declined in August from 7.8 percent to 7.6 percent, she said a one-month drop was insufficient to establish a trend in the minds of economists but a two-month decline is more convincing.

The biggest job gains were among women, whose jobless rate dropped to 6.1 percent from 6.5 percent in August, and teenagers, whose jobless rate dropped from 17.5 percent from 19.1 percent in August.

The unemployment rate for adult men increased slightly to 6.7 percent, up from 6.6 percent in August, while unemployment among blacks and Hispanics also rose, going to 14.2 percent and 11.3 percent, respectively. In August the jobless rate for blacks was 13.6 percent, and for Hispanics it was 10.6 percent.

The Labor Department said a normal decline in agricultural employment did not occur in September, which may have reflected the drought-throughout much of the country during the summer, although an analyst said the connection could not be fully explained.

The Labor Department said the nation's industries reported that manufacturing employment rose for the second consecutive month, up 55,000 to a total of 20 million, which was still 1 million below a year earlier. It said there were significant gains in metals manufacturing and transportation industries.

In its wholesale price report, the Labor Department attributed the

Voter registration table at Mall manned by LWV

Midland League of Women Voters has set up a table near the Sears store in Midland Park Mall and is registering voters until 9 p.m. today, according to a spokesman for the group.

This is the last day a new resident or unregistered voter may sign up to be eligible to make their mark in the November general election.

All residents age 18 and older can vote in the election. Persons who believe they already are registered should verify they have the white voter registration cards. A card of any other color means it has expired, and the voter must re-register.

The League spokesman said the last time the organization set up a table in the mall, they registered 208 voters.

The League also has scheduled a public forum featuring all the local candidates Oct. 16 in Midland Center. And a voter guide listing all the candidates will be published Oct. 26.

We over-paid for cereal, U. S. says

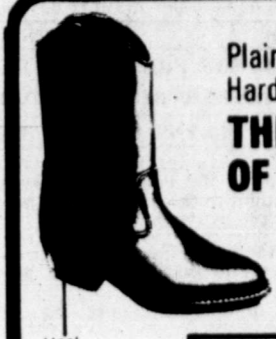

WASHINGTON (AP) - The government claims consumers paid more than $1 billion extra for ready-to-eat cereals over a 15-year period because of a lack of competition within the industry.

The Federal Trade Commission, in its summation of an eight-year-old antitrust suit against the cereal industry, said this week the extra costs show the need to break up the three largest manufacturers.

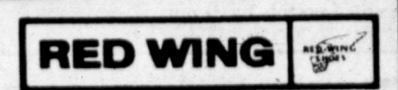

The commission said the overcharges amounted to $100 million in 1970.

"There is no evidence that these consumer overcharges have declined since 1970," the summary continued. The three major cereal manufacturers — Kellogg Co., General Mills Inc., and General Foods Corp. — will have the opportunity to respond to the charges made in the commission's four-volume summation.

After that the case will go to Administrative Law Judge Alvin J. Ber-

High court affirms appeals court ruling

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court has found no reversible error in an appeals court decision awarding damages in a Midland County wrongful eviction case.

Doris Johnson and two other persons leased Johnny's Barbecue from John W. Hackney in September 1976 and formed a corporation to operate the restaurant.

Ms. Johnson's partners and Hackney executed a release agreement, freeing them of the lease, in January 1977, and Hackney took possession of the premises over the objections of Ms. Johnson, who refused to sign the release agreement.

Ms. Johnson sued, and the trial court jury awarded her damages on grounds she was not in default of the lease agreement at the time Hackney resumed possession of the property.

Hackney appealed on grounds the release agreement was binding on Ms. Johnson, even though she did not sign it, because it was executed by her partners on behalf of the corporation.

The appeals court overruled that contention, stating the lease was in the name of the three individual partners, not the corporation and, therefore, the other two were not acting on Ms. Johnson's behalf.

The Supreme Court denied a writ of error sought by Hackney without issuing a written opinion.

Carter flying in smaller version of Air Force One

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's not what most people think of as Air Force One, but President Carter's flying more and more these days in an eight-passenger executive jet.

And that's just one of the cost-cutting rules as Democrats scramble to make the best of an overall warchest which looks more like a jewelry box next to the GOP's.

Although the VC-140, a military version of the Lockheed JetStar executive jet, is called Air Force One when Carter is aboard, it hardly evokes the image of the big, blue-and-white Boeing 707 known throughout the world.

Both the Republican and Democratic presidential campaigns are permitted to spend $29.4 million in federal campaign funds, a 36-percent increase since the 1976 campaign. But that doesn't mean financial equality.

Tim Finchem, staff director of the Carter-Mondale committee, says the cost of the three major budget items of a political campaign — advertising, communications and transportation — actually have risen much more than the cost-of-living index the Federal Elections Commission uses to determine how much to give each major party candidate.

He noted that alone would justify considerable belt-tightening on both sides. But the Democrats' problems are complicated by the Republicans' ability to raise an estimated $25 million at the state level, compared to less than $4 million raised by local Democrats. Those funds can be spent for voter registration and get-out-the-vote activities that benefit the presidential candidates but don't count as campaign committee expenditures.

So, among other steps, campaign strategists have pared the president's travel schedule to an average of two days a week and take what appear to be some rather indirect routes to avoid spending the night out of town.

On Wednesday, for instance, Carter took a 12-hour trip to Michigan and Niagara Falls, N.Y., returned to the White House about 8:30 p.m.

plained. Carter sometimes avoids that charge anyway by staying in the home of a local official or party loyalist. But when the president is spending the night, the presidential party has to be put up in a hotel and the campaign advance team must stay there, too. And the longer the visit, the longer the advance people must be in town ahead of time making plans and preparations.

Anderson borrowing plans get tentative approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Election Commission has given tentative approval to a plan by Rep. John B. Anderson to borrow several million dollars to keep his independent presidential bid going.

The commission ruled Thursday that Anderson's plan to borrow money from commercial banks, using as collateral his anticipated receipt of federal funds after the November election, was not illegal.

But the commission deferred judgment on whether any specific proposed loan was legal, saying that decision could not be made until all of the facts of the loans were available.

It cautioned banks that are considering making the loans not to read its opinion "as a legal sanction for any particular loan transaction."

The advisory opinion was issued on a 5-1 vote with commissioner Robert Tiernan voting against it. Tiernan said he didn't think the commission should issue any opinion on the subject.

Anderson wants to borrow between $3 million and $10 million to finance his cash-short campaign. He proposed repaying the loans with the federal reimbursement money he will receive if he gets more than 5 percent of the vote in the November general election.

Federal campaign laws allow the nominees of the Democratic and Republican parties to receive $29.4 million to run their presidential campaigns. But those funds are not available to independent candidates.

However, as a result of a commission ruling in August, Anderson can collect federal funds as a third-party candidate after the election if he receives at least 5 percent of the vote. The amount of funds he could receive varies, depending on the percentage of the popular vote he captures.

For example, if the Illinois congressman were to receive 15 percent of the popular vote, he would receive about $10 million in federal funds.

But Anderson needs the funds now — not after the election.

Anderson asked for the FEC opinion because some banks reportedly were concerned whether the novel approach might violate federal laws which state that such loans must be "made on a basis that assures repayment" and made "in the ordinary course of business."

The commission found that the principle behind the proposed arrangement — of using possible federal funds received after the election to pay off loans received before the election — did not appear to violate those requirements.

Commission supporters of the opinion noted that all they were saying was that such loans were not automatically illegal.

But Tiernan, noting the amount available for repayment depends on Anderson's vote-getting ability, said, "What we're doing is trying to turn bankers into gamblers."

On Wednesday, for instance, Carter took a 12-hour trip to Michigan and Niagara Falls, N.Y., returned to the White House about 8:30 p.m.

Graveside services for Mr. and Mrs. George D. Williams of Midland were to be held at 2 p.m. today in Resthaven Memorial Park with the Rev. Ed Kirkpatrick officiating. Services were directed by Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Nora A. Williams died Tuesday in Midland. George Williams, after being hospitalized for a month in Odessa Medical Center, died early today.

He was born March 26, 1907, in Burnett. The couple moved to Midland from Stanford in 1945. Prior to that they had lived in Alpine. They were members of the Christian Church. A retired carpenter, he was a member of the Carpenter's Union No. 1428.

Survivors include two sons, George V. Williams of San Antonio and Marvin L. Williams, who is serving with the United States Army in Germany; a daughter, Desma Yvonne Williams of Lake County, Calif.; and 10 grandchildren.

Soprano defects

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Romanian Soprano Nelly Miriciou defected today, only four hours before she was to return to her communist homeland from a concert tour in the Philippines.

The 28-year-old singer told a news conference here that she had requested political asylum in the Philippines, where, she said, she believed she will be "happy" as an artist.

Officials of the Philippines Foreign Ministry officials attended the news conference, but said they had received no formal request for asylum from the singer, and declined comment on the case.

The soprano refused to say whether there was any political motive for her decision and insisted she still loves her homeland. However, a Philippine government source quoted her as saying she did not feel she had a bright future as a singer in Romania because that nation's policy toward artists "is not liberal" and they are not well paid.

Joan Breeden

Graveside services for Joan Breeden, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T.E. Breeden, County Road 140-East, will be at 10 a.m. Saturday in Resthaven Memorial Park directed by Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home. Officiating will be the Rev. Bob Porterfield, associate minister of the First Baptist Church.

Survivors include the parents; grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Arley Owens of Midland; and a great-grandmother, Mrs. J.E. Stephens of Odessa.

Escapees sought in East Texas

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — Law officers using helicopters and dogs swept across Nacogdoches County for two men who escaped from jail last weekend, according to a sheriff's department spokesman.

Michael Lynn Lyons, 22, who deputies say has escaped on three other occasions, and John Alvin Herrera, 24, of Houston, were apparently spotted Wednesday near Douglas.

Balloon pumps implanted easier

NEW YORK (AP) — The implantation of heart balloon pumps to aid people with cardiac problems has been made simpler with the development of a new version of the device, a scientist says.

The pump, which looks like an inflatable plastic finger at the end of a flexible tube, is inserted in a heart to help it push blood through the body. The device aids heart attack victims or people recovering from open heart surgery.

McQueen's lung cancer in remission

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Steve McQueen, who waged a secret six-month battle against a rare and generally incurable form of cancer, is gradually improving under a nutrition-based treatment developed by a one-time dentist, doctors and spokesmen say.

McQueen, 50, who was not revealing his whereabouts, asked his fans and friends Thursday to "keep your fingers crossed" for a full recovery.

The screen star was told six months ago that he had terminal mesothelioma, a cancer of the lining of the lungs and other organs, according to a statement issued by his publicist, Warren Cowan.

McQueen, who appeared in such films as "The Great Escape" and "Bullitt," had been keeping the illness a secret so that he could keep his "sense of dignity" as he died, the statement said.

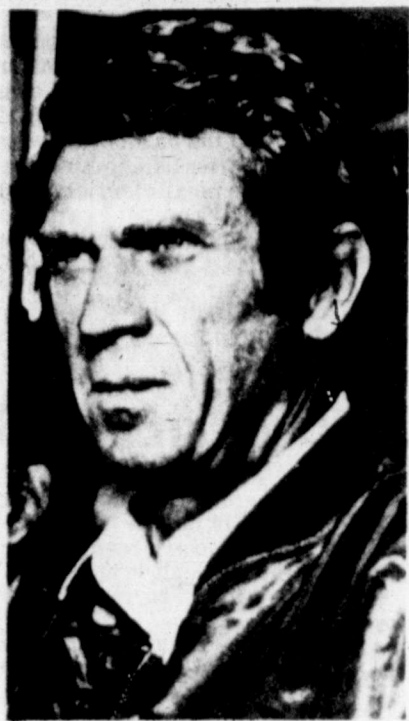

But six weeks ago, after a month of the nutrition-based treatment, he began to show improvement and has been gaining weight while the cancer, which had spread to his neck, chest and abdomen, has gone into remission, doctors said.

Dr. William Kelley of the International Health Institute in Dallas, who is helping guide McQueen's treatment, said, "We have been able to prolong the patient's life beyond earlier expectations."

"I believe that Mr. McQueen can fully recover and return to a normal lifestyle," said Kelley.

A colleague at the center, Paul Whetstone, said Kelley developed his treatment after recovering himself from what had been diagnosed 18 years ago as a terminal case of cancer. He was a dentist at the time, but has since given up practice, Whetstone said.

Kelley's treatment, which supplements traditional medical care, tries to build up the body's immunity system so it can resist cancer. The method regulates diet and employs mental exercises to encourage "positive thinking," Cowan said.

"Our whole concept is not to treat the disease but to build health to the extent that disease cannot exist in the body," said Dr. Philip Johnston of the institute.

The treatment does not include use of Laetrile, the controversial drug made from apricot pits, he said.

In the statement, McQueen expressed "a sincere belief in my own recovery."

"I say to all my fans and all my friends, keep your fingers crossed and keep the good thoughts coming," McQueen said.

McQueen would not say where he was undergoing treatment. "Hopefully, the cheap scandal-sheets and curiosity seekers will not try to seek me out so I can continue my treatment," McQueen said.

Dr. John Costanzi, director of the cancer center at the University of Texas Medical School in Galveston, said that an important part of cancer therapy was keeping the immune system intact.

"Vitamin therapy and new forms of immunotherapy are excellent when they are used in conjunction with more specific types of treatment," he said. "But I think the majority of us feel they should not be used in place of routine treatments."

Cowan said doctors agreed that surgery, chemotherapy and radiation therapy would not be able to reverse the actor's condition.

McQueen, who was nominated in 1966 for an Oscar as best actor in "The Sand Pebbles," was absent from the screen for about six years before returning to make "Tom Horn" and "The Hunter," his latest picture made about a year ago.

His career first took flight in the 1950s TV series "Wanted Dead or Alive." The ruggedly good-looking, blue-eyed McQueen became one of Hollywood's sex symbols in such movies as "The Magnificent Seven," "The Cincinnati Kid," "Soldier in the Rain," "The Towering Inferno" and "Papillon."

Cubs scoreboard in city auction

For the person who likes to keep score but has no way to do it, the city of Midland is offering the perfect solution: the Midland Cubs old scoreboard. Of course, there's one problem, and that's squeezing the 8-foot by 30-foot scoreboard into the house or apartment.

The scoreboard and "scores" of other items will be up for sale in the city's annual auction that starts at 10 a.m. Saturday at the Municipal Garage, South and Carver Streets. And this year, Midland County and Midland Independent School District are getting in on the action by including a few of their own items.

Riley Brooks, purchasing agent for the city, explained the county and school only have a few things to sell this year, and there wasn't enough to warrant a separate auction for each entity.

The school district is including 40 Royal manual typewriters, 50 to 75 school desks and miscellaneous cafeteria equipment. The county is selling some used manual typewriters and used adding machines while the Sheriff's department is throwing in a few other miscellaneous items.

But it's the city that will have the lion's share of used equipment and machinery, including the scoreboard which adorned Cubs Stadium until two seasons ago.

There will be about 34 bicycles picked up by the Police Department, office machinery, furniture, mowers, surplus auto and truck parts and animal cages. In the line-up of vehicles will be 14 automobiles, four Cushman trucksters and a Cushman truck.

All items will be sold on an "as-is" basis, Brooks said, "and there are some good buys."

Last year, the auction rendered $43,985 for the city's general fund, which is a bit of cushioning not included in the city's budget. This year, since the number of items is down, the city isn't expecting as big a haul moneywise, according to Grant Walton, finance director.

Instead of trading in the used equipment when purchasing new, Walton said the city prefers to hold on to the items for an auction. The primary reason is that very little is allowed on trade-ins and more money can be obtained by auctioning the items, Walton explained.

The garage will be open at 8 a.m. Saturday for inspecting the items before the auction, said Brooks. Payment must be in cash, cashier's check, money order or bank letter of credit.

Auctioneer will be Rene Bates of McKinney, who conducts city auctions throughout the state.

Laymen shouldn't discipline doctors, says panel

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Sunset Advisory Commission has said in unmistakable terms it does not think non-doctors belong on local committees that discipline physicians.

Commission members voted, however, to recommend that the 1981 Legislature add three lay members to the State Board of Medical Examiners and give the board power to punish doctors for overcharging patients.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, sought to give the general public a voice on the district review committees that receive complaints against doctors.

But Doggett got only his own vote for the motion.

He recalled that lawyers objected loudly in 1979 when the Legislature put non-lawyers on local grievance committees. Now there is "nothing but praise from the State Bar," Doggett said.

"Doctors' district committees do not just deal with questions of competence but also with many other matters dealing with the relationship of the physician with his patient," Doggett said. The Texas Medical Association had accepted the commission staff's recommendation of lay members on the Board of Medical Examiners. It also had recommended empowering the board to discipline physicians for "persistent and flagrant overcharging and overtreating."

"I feel this is an area they (the doctors) want to do some policing of themselves," said Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texas.

Doggett also cast the only vote for requiring local medical groups to report to the board each time they discipline a physician.

"To reject this staff recommendation is to assure this board will not be able to do as capable a job for the public as it ought to," he said.

In a lighter moment, Doggett asked Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris, R-Dallas, if he would be "amenable to my proposal to add one Democrat" to the board.

"No," Harris said.

"I just wanted some balance," said Doggett.

The commission also recommended putting two lay members on the nine-member Board of Dental Examiners.

It said the Legislature should make clear that the board may not issue any rules prohibiting advertising by dentists — something the board tried to do earlier this year.

"Of all the agencies we have reviewed this year, this board has had more abuses than any other," said Howard.

The commission did not act on a request by denturists that they be allowed to fit and make dentures without the patient having to go through a dentist. At a hearing before the commission, denturists said they could provide dentures for a third of what they cost when a patient uses a dentist.

Man indicted on capital murder charges

Mitchell Lee McDonald, 24, who was charged on two counts of attempted capital murder of two Midland police officers following a street shoot-out Sunday morning, has been indicted on those alleged offenses by the Midland County grand jury.

McDonald, who was wounded in the left leg and right foot, is being held in protective custody at Midland Memorial Hospital, where he was listed in satisfactory condition today. He was being held under $110,000 in bailbonds set by Peace Justice Robert Pine.

McDonald reportedly fired three shots at Midland Police Officers Walter Knight and Ricky Benton after the uniformed officers, with drawn pistols, identified themselves as lawmen and yelled for the man to "freeze."

Instead, McDonald reportedly fired at the officers, missed, and hit a bystander, Walter Hunter, 18, who was standing near the police patrol car. Hunter was wounded in the left arm.

Police returned fire, hit McDonald who fell, got up and hobbled to Red's Drive-In at 1807 W. Front Ave., where the policemen subdued and handcuffed him.

The shoot-out occurred after police initially responded to a call on an automobile burglary at the Koko Lounge, 1811 E. Front Ave. They encountered the pistol-wielding man somewhere between the restaurant and the bar.

McDonald is charged with two counts of attempted capital murder and one count of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon. Bonds on attempted capital murder are set at $50,000 each. The bond on aggravated assault is set at $10,000.

Rep. Bauman says he's alcoholic and facing sex charge

BALTIMORE (AP) — Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., a leading congressional conservative, has announced that he is an alcoholic and that he has been charged with sexual solicitation.

Bauman allegedly solicited a 16-year-old boy last March, according to the Washington Post.

In a statement issued to the Baltimore Sun and the Post, Bauman said he had agreed to enter a rehabilitation program supervised by the District of Columbia Superior Court, where a hearing was to be held this morning.

He also said he had been told he would be placed on probation.

Bauman, a key supporter of GOP presidential hopeful Ronald Reagan, is president of the American Conservative Union. He is running for reelection against state Delegate Royden P. Dyson, a Democrat who nearly defeated Bauman in 1978.

Bauman did not detail the charges against him, saying only that the U.S. Attorney in D.C. "informed me that allegations had been made concerning my personal conduct during the period of my heaviest drinking last winter."

"I strongly emphasize that this allegation involves only my personal conduct and has nothing to do with my office or duties as a member of Congress.

"Equally important I have confessed my sin, as my religion requires, and I am in the state of grace and will remain so with the help of God. (Bauman is a Roman Catholic.)

"For the first time in my life I have come to terms with my personal problem, admitted my faults and am trying to make amends," he added in his statement.

The 43-year-old Bauman could not be reached for further comment.

The charges, according to the Post, resulted from a Justice Department probe of accusations that Bauman solicited and then performed oral sodomy on the youth early this year near Capitol Hill.

The Justice Department declined comment on the Post report. A former Maryland state senator, Bauman took office in 1973, filling the vacancy left by the suicide of his predecessor, William O. Mills.

Bauman's statement said he had joined Alcoholics Anonymous and has not had a drink since May 1.

"In recent years I have had a serious personal problem with the consumption of alcohol," Bauman's statement said. "Last winter my drinking problem reached what I now realize was the state of acute alcoholism, although I didn't know it at the time."

The Sun quoted an internist who said he was Bauman's physician as saying "from a medical standpoint he's not an alcoholic."

Army joins fight to save railbed

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — While worried officials watched a large crack and evacuated a dozen families, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers joined the struggle to shore up a fragile railroad embankment separating floodwaters from a vital aqueduct and acres of farmland.

And the work will have federal financing now that the flooded San Joaquin River Delta has been declared a federal disaster area by President Carter.

Tons of rock and dirt were being heaped alongside the Santa Fe Railway embankment as authorities watched a 1,000-foot-long crack that appeared Thursday between the railbed and the aqueduct, which supplies water to 1.1 million Oakland-area residents.

"The appearance of the crack forced the evacuation of 50 people from the 45,000-acre Upper Jones Tract. The railbed separates the area from the Lower Jones Tract, which was inundated last week when floodwaters breached a levee.

"The crack represents ground movement, and ground movement there is serious business," said David Vossbrink of the East Bay Municipal Utility District.

"We are working to keep the crack from widening. More movement could lead to failure of the railroad embankment," he said.

The condition of the crack, which ran parallel to the railbed and was several inches wide, could change "very, very fast" and "nobody really knows what to expect," Vossbrink said.

The five-mile-long embankment was the area's only protection against the waters that had flooded Lower Jones Tract after an earth and stone levee gave way.

Residents involved in the evacuation, a precautionary measure, included school children and about a dozen families, said Cleo Jani, coordinator of the San Joaquin County Office of Emergency Services.

Some 250 people worked on the embankment Thursday in calm weather. Officials feared that wind would whip the waters against embankments and speed erosion.

Water was seeping through the railbed in dozens of places, Ms. Jani said, but the leaks were being capped.

It could take up to two months to repair the levee, and another two to three months to drain the tract, officials said.

Carter's disaster declaration Thursday will make residents eligible for low-interest loans. In Lower Jones Tract, the waters covered ready-to-harvest crops, and damages were expected to exceed $19 million.

Abscam tapes airing postponed

NEW YORK (AP) — The network broadcast of audio and video tapes played at the nation's first Abscam bribery-conspiracy trial has been postponed by a federal appeals court to give Rep. Michael Myers and his co-defendants time to appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals delayed the playing of the tapes until 4 p.m. Monday.

The action, which stayed its own order permitting broadcast of the tapes on television, came less than an hour after Myers was expelled from Congress. The Pennsylvania Democrat was the first person since the Civil War to be expelled from the House by his colleagues.

Myers was convicted Aug. 30 in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn, along with New Jersey State Sen. Angelo Errichetti, who is also mayor of Camden, Philadelphia City Councilman Louis Johanson and Philadelphia attorney Howard Criden.

Myers was found guilty of taking a $50,000 bribe from FBI undercover agents posing as Arab businessmen seeking political favors.

Television networks had sought permission to copy and broadcast the tapes during the trial. U.S. District Judge George Pratt approved the broadcast on Aug. 15, but the order was stayed pending appeal.

The appeals court upheld Pratt's ruling on Wednesday, but granted an additional stay Thursday after lawyers for Myers and other defendants said they were planning to seek a review by the Supreme Court.

The three-judge appeals panel said that if the high court agreed to hear the appeal, a further stay would automatically be granted pending Supreme Court action.

Texas Triangle most expensive

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government study shows the Texas Triangle, the longest of the new corridors proposed for improved passenger rail service, also would be the most expensive to implement.

The Department of Transportation's preliminary study released Thursday said capital costs for the 772.2 mile-long rail triangle between Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio would total $242.3 million.

The figure included stations, track, signals and grade crossings. The next most expensive for those capital costs would be the Chicago-Twin Cities corridor of 418 miles at $161.5 million.

The study said an additional $33 million would be needed for new equipment to operate three trains a day on the Texas Triangle, $8 million more than the second-most expensive route between New York and Buffalo, N.Y.

The Texas Triangle fell into the middle ground in a viability study on the proposed new intercity corridors, ranking eighth among the 29 corridors studied.

The rating placed the triangle well behind the four clear front-runners expected to receive most or all of the first $6 billion available for Amtrak marketing studies.

Those four are, in order, Los Angeles to San Diego, Calif., Philadelphia to Atlantic City, N.J., New York to Buffalo and Los Angeles to Las Vegas, Nev.

The final ratings of the proposed rail corridors are due by Feb. 15, but DOT spokesman William Johnston said he did not expect substantial changes between the preliminary and final lists.

Rep. Phil Gramm, D-Texas, said a meeting is planned at the Texas Transportation Institute in College Station, Texas, later this month to discuss rail passenger service in the state.

"The idea is to show local support for the emerging triangle in Texas and to give Amtrak an opportunity to talk about the feasibility of it and the whole setting of priorities and how we might move up — basically to generate interest on both ends," the congressman from College Station said.

State commitment was one factor used to determine the ratings. The Texas Triangle would move to sixth place, ahead of Chicago to Detroit and San Jose, Calif., to Reno, Nev., if that factor had been excluded.

Tom Gillespie of Amtrak said the $6 million available would be used for the corridors ranked highest on the preliminary list.

He said it was hoped there would be enough available to get as far down the list as the Texas Triangle.

Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., whose House subcommittee received the report, said he expected there would be a continuing scramble for funds to develop the new rail routes.

"Obviously, the politics of the thing is that everyone thinks his corridor is the best," he said. "But what we want to know is which ones give us the most for the bucks, and then we'll fight for the money to develop them."

Californian recommended for SMU

DALLAS (AP) — After a four-month search, Southern Methodist University may have found a new president.

If the SMU Board of Trustees accepts the nomination of a presidential search committee at their semi-annual meeting Nov. 7, L. Donald Shields will become the university's eighth president.

Shields, current president of California State University at Fullerton, would succeed James Zumberge, who resigned in June to become the president of the University of Southern California.

Search committee chairman Edwin L. Cox, who also chairs the board of trustees, said Shields, 43, meets the university's criteria in the areas of education, financial responsibility, fund-raising and "appreciation of the university's relationship with the United Methodist Church."

Shields was appointed acting president of Cal. State-Fullerton in 1970 and was named to the post officially less than a year later. He became, at age 34, the youngest president of a state university in the nation, according to an SMU release.

Clements says schools need more than teacher pay raises

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says improving the quality of public education in Texas involves a lot more than pay raises for teachers.

"There are a lot of things the people of Texas are terribly concerned about in our secondary and elementary schools that go far beyond the right of collective bargaining and 30 and 40 percent salary increases," said Clements, an outspoken opponent of collective bargaining for teachers.

At his Thursday news conference, Clements said Texans "are up in arms over the public schools." The governor charged that some teachers are more interested in pay hikes than quality education.

"The people of Texas are crying for someone to come forward and have a real sense of dedication and commitment to better quality education for our children," he said.

Clements, acknowledging that teachers do need more money, supports a pay hike package of 22 percent. However, the governor made it clear he would like to hear teacher organizations — specifically the Texas State Teachers Association — talk about other facets of education.

Clements favors competency tests for teachers and a certification process similar to the one lawyers and doctors face. He also strongly opposes "social promotions" of students.

"The people of Texas are demanding these kinds of things and I support them," he said.

The governor predicted the 1981 Legislature will block any attempts to put through collective bargaining for teachers. He said such efforts would lead to "negative legislation" barring such rights for teachers.

"On a good many of these issues it (the Texas State Teachers Association) has consistently aligned itself on the wrong side," he said, adding TSTA has again "made a stupid mistake of getting on the wrong side of the wrong issue."

Clements offered to give TSTA the "good advice and counsel" he said it needs. TSTA this week broke precedent and endorsed Jimmy Carter's re-election bid. Clements is in charge of the Ronald Reagan campaign in Texas.

On other matters, Clements urged Texans to vote in favor of all nine constitutional amendments on the Nov. 4 ballot.

He said he is "not surprised" at the findings of a Texas Research League report that said the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation is not meeting its goals. Clements said he was among those who asked for the report.

THE NEWSPAPER BIBLE

What happened to rights?

I AM an apostle, God's messenger, responsible to no mere man. I am one who has actually seen Jesus our Lord with my own eyes. And your changed lives are the result of my hard work for Him.

If in the opinion of others, I am not an apostle, I certainly am to you, for you have been won to Christ through me.

This is my answer to those who question my rights. Or don't I have any rights at all? Can't I claim the same privilege the other apostles have of being a guest in your homes?

If I had a wife, and if she were a believer, couldn't I bring her along on these trips just as the other disciples do, and as the Lord's brothers do, and as Peter does?

And must Barnabas and I alone keep working for our living, while you supply these others?

What soldier in the army has to pay his own expenses? And have you ever heard of a farmer who harvests his crop and doesn't have the right to eat some of it? What shepherd takes care of a flock of sheep and goats and isn't allowed to drink some of the milk?

And I'm not merely quoting the opinions of men as to what is right. I'm telling you what God's law says.

For in the law God gave to Moses He said that you must not put a muzzle on an ox to keep it from eating when it is treading out the wheat. Do you suppose God was thinking only about oxen when He said this?

Wasn't He also thinking about us? Of course He was. He said this to show us that Christian workers should be paid by those they help. Those who do the plowing and threshing should expect some share of the harvest.

YMCA has adult swim classes set

The Alamo YMCA is now taking registrations for adult and pre-school swimming classes which will begin Monday.

Day-time classes for adults begin at 10:30 a.m. and run through the morning. Beginner, intermediate and advanced levels are taught by Helen Cumble during the day. In addition, evening classes are offered from Martha Hunt on Tuesdays and Thursdays, 7:15 to 8:15 p.m.

If swimmers register before Monday, a friend, husband or wife can register for half-price. Members and non-members are welcome.

For 3- to 5-year-olds, the Y offers a gym and swim class on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 9:30-10:45 a.m. A gymnastics session is taught first, followed by swimming lessons.

For pre-schoolers who only wish to enroll for the swimming classes, there is a Moms and Tads class offered in which parents and their children can take swimming classes together.

For more information, call the Y at 694-2528 or come by 901 N. Midland Drive.

Napalm used to control forest

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Napalm, the jellied gasoline that American warplanes dropped on Vietnam, is being used in Western forests to control unwanted brush growth, U.S. Forest Service officials say.

Government researchers and ecologists say using napalm may be preferable to the slow and hazardous method of hand-torching the "slash" or residue left after timber harvests.

Napalm also shows promise as an alternative to herbicides in clearing unwanted vegetation from rangeland, environmentalists say.

"Everybody's so terrified of the herbicides that just about anything sounds good," said Art Downing, a member of the Oregon Environmental Council.

Researchers say napalm is superior to hand-held torches that use gasoline or diesel fuel because its slow-burning quality allows it to be ignited and dropped from several hundred feet.

One fire control officer said forestry officials tend to avoid the term "napalm" because of its wartime use, preferring the term "gasoline gel" or "jellied gasoline."

The Forest Service has bought 200,000 pounds of two chemicals used to make napalm, said Norman Anderson, a Forest Service liaison officer. Another 300,000 pounds are on order from Army depots, he said.

Fire control officials use a pump to drop flaming jelly globules of napalm from a helicopter at an altitude of 300 feet. Since its approval for use earlier this year, napalm has gained wide use in national forests in Louisiana and several Western states, including Oregon, Montana, Idaho, Washington and California, Anderson said.

Napalm got its name from aluminum naphthenate and aluminum palmitate, used to make gasoline gel for weapons in World War II. It has become a generic word for gasoline gels and similar compounds. Incendiary bombs used in the Vietnam War were made with napalm, which became a focus of anti-war demonstrations.

Cancer rate lower for pipe, cigar smokers

By NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I often read about the danger of smoking cigarettes. Are there similar risks for pipe and cigar smokers? — Andy.

Dear Andy: Cigar and pipe smokers generally have lower cancer rates than do cigarette smokers; however, their risk for cancers of the mouth and lip is approximately the same.

Dear Dr. Solomon: It seems to me people are not so much afraid of growing old as of being unable to take care of themselves in their later years.

I realize that older people are not going to be able to do all the things they did when they were younger, but to what extent are they generally able to function independently? — Carol.

Dear Carol: To many people, old age is associated with illness and an increasing inability to care for oneself, but the facts don't bear this out. In this country in 1975, for example, the large majority of older people — more than three-fourths — lived in their own homes. Only five percent had to live in institutions, and many of these were only there temporarily and were planning to return to the community at some later time.

Although there is no denying that the proportion of people with health problems increases with age, and that older people are more likely to suffer from disabling conditions, serious physical and mental decline is not an inevitable part of the aging process. Many of the changes we normally associate with old age are avoidable.

Many elderly people, of course, do have certain limitations on their activities. Some of these limitations are related to their mental functioning, but most are the result of such physical handicaps as heart conditions, arthritis and rheumatism, and defects in sight and hearing.

One of the most tragic and unjustified actions is to label older persons "senile" just because they no longer function as well as they did in their younger years. In my practice I have seen a number of older persons whose treatment had been neglected because they were considered beyond help, but who actually were suffering from nutritional deficiencies.

Bangkok flooding critical

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Flooding in this sprawling capital of 4.2 million residents reached the critical level today. Several low-lying areas were submerged in chest-high water.

The Education Ministry ordered schools closed for an indefinite period and many city dwellers in the worst affected areas resorted to boats as a means of transport. It took four hours for some motorists to inch their way through the 16 miles of traffic from the airport to downtown Bangkok.

Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanonda put on boots and toured the flood zone, then ordered army personnel and extra traffic policemen to help motorists whose vehicles broke down in the waters.

In addition to Bangkok, the flood affected nearly 30 provinces throughout the north, northeast and in the central plains. Relief officials reported seven drownings in the provinces, 70,000 families affected by the flood and at least 88,000 acres of farmland inundated. The flood was caused by unexpected heavy rainfall coupled with high tides in the Chao Phraya River.

or some metabolic disorder such as thyroid or pituitary malfunction. Other causes of apparent senility — and I emphasize "apparent" — are drug interactions, emotional depression, certain tumors, and chronic infection. All these conditions are subject to treatment and reversible.

Sometimes all that is needed to help older persons become more alert and better able to function is to reduce their social isolation. The program of congregate meals now available in many communities is just one of many efforts directed towards this goal.

In short, older people are able to do many of the things they were capable of when younger, with a little help, they would be able to do many more.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21028. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in this column.)

Send recipes in for special section

It's time to dig up that favorite recipe for The Midland Reporter-Telegram's annual recipe contest and cookbook section, "Recipes '80." This year's edition will be published as a tabloid supplement to the newspaper Sunday, Nov. 16. It will feature scores of recipes submitted by readers. Valuable prizes and cash awards for winning entries will be given in each of eight categories. Watch the newspaper for details to be announced.

The categories of recipes will be: (1) Salads; (2) Meats, Fish and Fowl; (3) Casseroles, Vegetables and Side Dishes; (4) Breads; (5) Cakes; (6)

Pies; (7) Candy and other Desserts, and; (8) Miscellaneous. Winners will be announced in "Recipes '80" on Nov. 16. Deadline for entries will be Oct. 16. All entries will be judged by a panel of professional home economists not connected with the newspaper. The judges will select the best recipe in each category. Readers are asked to submit only one entry. Entries should be typewritten and all measurements and instructions clearly stated. Any recipes that are unclear will be disqualified. Each entry should be clearly labeled at the top with the entrant's name, address, telephone number, and the name of the recipe and category entered.

A brutal look at men

By JANET LOWE
Copley News Service

My husband and I have tried several times to talk about the book I've been reading. Every time the conversation progresses from a calm discussion to an argument to cold silence.

He's curious, but he can't stay calm long enough to find out what the book is really about, and maybe he's afraid of what it says.

I confess to some of the same feelings and feel sure that most men and women will have difficulty dealing with Phyllis Chesler's latest book, "About Men." (A paperback by Bantam Books.)

The book is a bold and brutal look at men and their roles in society, relationships with fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, wives, children and other men.

That statement alone is enough to make most men nervous. They seem to sense, though many have never heard of Chesler, that the portrait won't be flattering.

Chesler has a talent for tackling sore subjects and really going at them. In "About Men," Chesler uses four angles of vision, "a mytho-poetic point of view, from a visual point of view, from an autobiographical point of view, and finally, from a more traditional psychological or psychoanalytic point of view," she writes.

The book is painful even for me, perhaps because it's more pleasant for a woman if she can hang on to some of her illusions about men. But that's not the only reason.

In her examination of men, particularly in the autobiographical section, she described men who are like many men I've met. So for me, much of what Chesler writes rings true.

But she does present an incomplete picture. The violent, hateful, destructive side of men's art, literature, confessions and actions are fairly heavily emphasized.

The paintings of Goya and Jewish survivors of Nazi death camps are enlightening, but you can't completely ignore the French impressionists, the English pastoralists and the Early American landscape painters. That too is men's art, and even some of those men had unhappy father relationships.

What is disturbing about Chesler's book is the absoluteness she puts into what she writes. When she writes about father relationships, she talks solely about the negative, humiliating, brutal, failed relationships. There are many of those, but to name them entirely as the condition of men is wrong.

There are good mothers and fathers, and there are children who come from families physically whole and emotionally intact. But this is a book about the other kind... perhaps the kind of man and father nobody wants to examine too closely because you might see someone you know and have been able to forgive up to that reading.

Even though the book has what I consider to be weak point, I can't help but admire Chesler for writing it. It isn't going to be an easy book to take on to talk shows or into the male dominated universities.

Critics will mutilate it because of the subject matter rather than the treatment. And few will read the introduction and believe what Chesler says there.

"I write this book not as a tyrant over men," she wrote, "and not as a sycophant of men. I write without blinding contempt for men, and without any irrational fear — or worship of men."

"I write with compassion, with sorrow, and in prophecy. I write with despair at the spiritual and physical carnage that surrounds us. I write, always, in the belief that understanding can weaken the worship of death — that has dominated patriarchal consciousness and human action for so long," Chesler wrote.

DEAR ABBY Psoriasis problem not easily licked

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My mother had a bad rash on her ankle. It itched a lot and was driving her crazy, so she went to a doctor. He said it was psoriasis and gave her some medicine to put on it.

Well, the medicine didn't help much, but our dog started licking Mom's ankle, and then a funny thing happened. Pretty soon the itching stopped and the psoriasis went away. So I guess the dog did more for mom than the doctor.

Abby, please tell other people with psoriasis about this.—DEBBY
DEAR DEBBY: I checked your dog-licking theory with Dr. Eugene Farber, president of the International Psoriasis Research Foundation and head of dermatology at Stanford Medical School.

He said, "Moisturizing and gently removing the scales from a patch of psoriasis often brings relief, but I wouldn't recommend dog-licking because a dog's saliva contains chemicals that could do more harm than good."

So Debby, although man's best friend is his dog, and all dogs are licensed, they aren't licensed to practice medicine.

DEAR ABBY: I am happily married and the proud mother of two beautiful daughters, ages 4 and 1. My problem is that I am again pregnant, and my husband positively refuses to accept another child into our home. He wants me to have an abortion immediately, which is against my principles. (I am not Catholic.)

After our second baby, I persuaded my husband to have a vasectomy, but he cancelled the appointment the day before he was to have it. I reminded him that if I should get pregnant accidentally, we would have to have a third child because I do not believe in abortion. He said, "We'll cross that bridge when we get to it," and the subject was dropped.

Meanwhile he says if I don't abort this baby, he'll leave me. He means it, too. I had to beg him to let me have the second child. One would have been enough for him.

Should we discuss this with other family members and get a majority ruling? Please answer soon. Time is running out.—MOTHER-TO-BE-OR-NOT-TO-BE

DEAR MOTHER-TO-BE: A family discussion is totally inappropriate since this concerns only you and your husband.

Since you both agreed that there should not be a third child, you and your husband are equally responsible for the accidental pregnancy.

Feeling as you do about abortion, however, do not submit to one to please your husband; it's your body. And if he leaves you (which I doubt), you may be better off without him.

CONFIDENTIAL TO R. IN SAN DIEGO: Your mother was right. No matter how much a man likes roast beef, occasionally he wants chicken.

Look for sportswear on the "partyline" this holiday season...with lots of glittery details, glamorous fabrics and festive styling. Left, this sportswear look by Intuitions is softened this holiday season with perfect pastels. Like this swish half-circle skirt in creamy ivory, pistachio and pink tones. Top it with a tucked shoulder, maximum-soft angora cardigan over a ribbon-trimmed ruffle blouse. Right, the deep luxury of velvet is created by Intuitions in plum or black. An expression of absolute elegance in the easy cardigan jacket and refined, softly shirred pants.

Father no longer breadwinner

By ANN BLACKMAN Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — With more and more women going to work, fathers are developing fuller relationships with their children and marriages are stronger, writer S. Adams Sullivan says.

"In families where both parents work outside the home and are on an equal footing in terms of taking care of the house and kids, the partners understand each other's needs and pressures better, and that can make families stronger," Sullivan said Wednesday.

"There is a whole new generation of involved fathers," he added. "So many mothers are going back to work that the notion of the father as simply the breadwinner is changing."

"Women who have jobs are saying to their husbands, 'You have to be here to help.' And a lot of these men find they are pleased they were forced into more involvement with their kids because they end up having better relationships with them."

Sullivan, 42, a copy editor and father of two sons, works at his home in rural Columbia, N.J., while his landscape-artist wife is out painting, and he has more than a passing interest in changing family problems.

He has just written a book called "The Father's Almanac," a humorous, practical guide for men who want to learn how to care for and enjoy small children.

Written from a strictly male viewpoint, the book offers suggestions for an expectant father on how to get involved with his wife's pregnancy and some nitty-gritty details of what it's like to participate in his child's birth — "Don't let squeamishness cheat you out of the involvement."

He also counsels divorced fathers on what to tell their children about the broken marriage and what to do on weekends with the kids.

Sullivan offers details and charts on how to construct bunk beds, jungle gyms, swings, sandboxes and rope ladders, and how to child-proof the house, fix toys, wash hair, make Silly Putty sandwiches — with mozzarella cheese — and teach a child to give a back rub.

He also includes more than most mothers want to know about gathering worms.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Insulate your bank roll

DEAR HELOISE: To save money and conserve energy, insulate your home with clear, middle-weight plastic (polyethylene sheeting).

It comes in rolls of varied lengths and widths, but I was able to purchase a hundred-foot roll, fifteen feet wide for less than $30.

You can staple or tape the plastic (overlapping edges) in place over beams and studs in the attic or basement.

Use it before installing wallboard, ceiling blocks, or paneling and such.

Attics and basements become air-tight and walls lose no heat or air. Fast, permanent insulation at a small cost! — Elizabeth R. Baldwin +++ It's true! You can even staple or tape this type of plastic over your windows and screen doors this fall for temporary insulation through the winter months. Same goes for the summer to cut down on air conditioning costs.

Older homes are so expensive and hard to seal tightly against the weather. This is the cheapest and easiest way

I've found to conserve energy. I've seen this put on windows on the north side of a house, and on a really blustery day, the plastic would billow out, but no air was felt inside the house.

Now this plastic can be attached to the outside of the windows, or placed inside (hidden by the blinds or curtains). I prefer the inside as the elements aren't as hard on the plastic, and there's no chance of it getting blown off during a hard wind.

Vision is blurred a bit when looking through plastic at the view, but when you pay that utility bill at the end of the month, you'll be seeing clearly. — Heloise

+++ DEAR HELOISE: I make my own imitation bottled lemon juice by putting one envelope of unsweetened lemon-flavored powdered drink mix in one quart of water.

I keep the jar in the refrigerator to use in tea, recipes, or even lemonade. — Mrs. R.H. Helgeson baby is crawling now, and his fingers end up in everything and every place.

Here's where my folding baby gate comes in so handy. But, since it is collapsible, it can easily pinch little fingers when not in use.

For safety, I always stretch a large, fat rubberband around the top to keep it closed together. When I need to stretch it across the door opening, I just take the rubberband off. — Deborah Eades +++ DEAR HELOISE: My husband has a very slippery rod to hang his ties on, and they were always slipping off and landing on the floor.

I remedied that by wrapping some used, foam fabric softener sheets around the rod and taping them in place.

No more ties to pick up. — Mildred Grieve

+++ What did we ever do before they invented fabric softener sheets...? — Heloise

+++ DEAR HELOISE: Birthday party time, and you're frantically scooping ice cream to serve anxiously awaiting youngsters?

Do it ahead of time! One ice cream scoop fits nicely in a paper cupcake liner. Put each scoop in its own paper, put in muffin tin and store in freezer until serving time.

The ice cream is easily removed from the paper and everyone is served in "jiffy" time. — Nancy Pearson

DEAR HELOISE: Place an open egg carton in the bottom of a paper sack for a sturdy leakproof garbage sack. — Mrs. E.D. Garrett

A sumptuous blend of alpaca, wool and nylon distinguishes this sport coat styled by Hickey-Freeman for fall. The jacket is classically tailored with soft shoulders, flap pockets and a center vent. It's fashioned in a small, stylish check of soft camel and wheat shades. The coat is matched with dark brown wool slacks that feature a straight-leg and no belt loops.

Main trends to look for in fall fashions

In the fall fashion showings this year, all designers seemed to take special pains with tailoring and workmanship, many suggesting that the clothes they are selling can be worn for 10 years, with a change of hem up or down.

For the woman who shops carefully this fall, here are the main trends to look for.

— An emphasis on the shoulder and the neckline, with big bows and tidy little white collars vying for attention with great drifts of ruffles. Think pink and mix it with gray or black.

— Skirts that move beautifully at the hemline. Look for gores, pleats, A-line and slim skirts with a double pleat at front. Nothing is too tight or too short.

— Plaid in every variation and suit jackets that are shortened to the hipbone are news. Black velvet continues in everything from evening pants and dresses to jackets that will go day or night.

— Angora. It epitomizes the popular romantic look.

It is used for daytime sweater dressing and comes out at night topping the softest of chiffon pants.

— Short evening dresses, lots of sparkle at the top on blouses and angora sweaters, sometimes beaded to tuck into evening pants or skirts.

— Non-defined waistlines in tent dresses, A-line and princess styles are all good for fall. Tunics or chemises give the same waist-skimming effect.

If it's the year to buy a coat, the classics are back — especially in princess or belted styles — some with buttons closing to one side and usually with necklines that come high under the chin.

If you want to go a little more dramatic, consider the Bill Blass down-filled coats in rich colors and magnificent fabrics. Some of the fabrics are light enough to be accepted and worn on the West Coast.

Look for textured stockings to exactly match the grays, deep browns, forest greens and burgundy shades that will be seen.

No matter what the economists predict, American designers are following a theme of opulence and emphasizing the late-day wear in all its velvet, taffeta, satin and lace glamour.

Fewer separates are being shown. It seems the dress, worn either with a jacket or a coat, is going to save women from making the choice this fall as to what blouse goes with what skirt and jacket.

Choose carefully. These clothes are meant to last.

Campaign to start

By BILL VALE
Associated Press Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — After ordering its Rely tampons off store shelves, Procter & Gamble Co. is getting ready to launch a nationwide, four-week advertising blitz urging women not to use them.

The recall and warning ads stem from a link between the use of tampons and toxic shock syndrome, an illness that has resulted in 29 deaths since 1975.

Commercials and advertisements carrying the warning will appear on network television, radio and some 1,100 newspapers beginning Monday, said P&G spokeswoman Marjorie Bradford.

The ads, part of an agreement between the company and the Food and Drug Administration, appear in the same areas the company promoted the tampons. The campaign will last about four weeks. Ms. Bradford declined to say how much it would cost.

FDA Commissioner Jere Goyan in Washington praised P&G for taking the action but chided the Health Industry Manufacturers for failing to act when the problems with tampons and toxic shock syndrome first were revealed in June.

The Center for Disease Control in Atlanta on Sept. 25 reported 344 cases of the newly recognized disease since 1975, and 29 deaths. In most of the cases, most women used Rely tampons while some used Playtex, Tampax, Kotex and other brands, researchers said.

The symptoms initially resemble flu. They include high fever, vomiting and diarrhea. Later, a rash appears and there can be a severe drop in blood pressure.

One study indicated toxic shock syndrome attacks only about three of every 100,000 menstruating women.

Although Rely has been at the center of recent studies, there still is "a general advisory against all tampons in the center's report," said the CDC's Robert Alden.

No other tampon manufacturer has taken its products off the market. P&G, which began marketing Rely nationally in 1979, faces a growing number of lawsuits since the disease was linked with tampons in general and Rely in particular.

The company has been named in more than a dozen suits, filed by women who used Rely and contracted the disease or on behalf of women who have died.

Chemicals found in river

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Excessive concentrations of mercury and copper have been found in the Niagara River and part of Lake Ontario, the Great Lakes Laboratory reports. The level of pollution doesn't pose a direct threat to people, but the contaminants could build up in fish and enter the food chain, said lab director Robert A. Sweeney. The concentrations exceeded the limits of the International Joint Commission and suggest industrial discharge violations in both the United States and Canada, Sweeney said on Wednesday. Contaminants were found in the river and along the southern shore of Lake Ontario about 10 to 15 miles on either side of the mouth of the Niagara River.

Super-Skate contest scheduled

Area roller skaters will have an opportunity to compete for prizes and raise money for an organization this weekend.

A Super-Skate, co-sponsored by the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens and the Texas Association for Retarded Citizens, will be held from noon to midnight Saturday at Super Roll-A-Rena, 3920 W. Wall St. Registration starts at 11:30 a.m.

Participants will secure pledges for each mile skated during the event. Prizes include an AM-FM eight track stereo, a 10-speed bicycle, roller skates and T-shirts. These will be awarded the skaters that turn in the most pledges for the association. Skaters who won't stop rolling and have a long list of donors may compete for the statewide prize to be awarded the skater who turns in the most money in Texas.

Forms and details about the Super Skate may be obtained at the Super Roll-A-Rena or by telephoning Sharon Boyd, 684-3754.

Westside Lions hear McKinney speak

Dr. Charles McKinney of the University of Texas spoke to the Westside Lions Club Thursday at its noon luncheon on UT's Experimental Lands Program.

McKinney, who has been with the University Lands Office at UT since 1978, told members how the land is managed and how it is being commercially developed and cultivated. McKinney showed a slide presentation of the location of the university-owned lands throughout Texas.

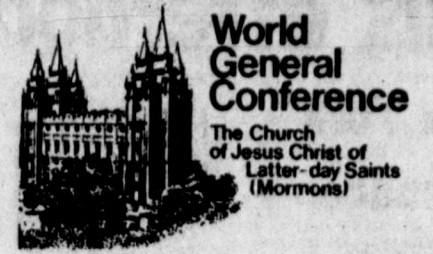

An Odessa resident since 1973, McKinney received his Ph.D. in 1969 from the University of Michigan. He did his undergraduate work on his B.A. at UT-Austin in 1964 and received his M.S. from Texas Tech in 1966.

In other Lions' news, the club accepted two new members: Lindsay McQuoid, associate pastor of St. Luke's United Methodist Church, and Laird Mueller, an accountant.

President of the Westside Lions is Tommy Miller. Bert Rankin is the program chairman for the group.

There is a $3 registration fee.

The Texas Association provides services for the 360,000 retarded children and adults in the state. Money raised by the association through donations and fund-raisers supports programs, such as residential care, vocational training, nursing care and community living facilities for retarded citizens.

The 150th semi-annual General Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is scheduled for Saturday, October 4 and Sunday, October 5, in Salt Lake City, Utah and will be carried live by TALL CITY TV CABLE on Channel 7.

Speakers at the Conference sessions will include President Kimball, President Ezra Taft Benson of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, and other general authorities of the Church. Speakers are expected to discuss such a topic as strengthening the home, building the individual, the family and the nation.

Police check armed robbery

Midland County Sheriff's deputies are investigating an armed robbery which occurred Thursday at the National Truck Stop on FM 1369. Although details of the 9:37 a.m. robbery were sketchy, reports said two men armed with a knife and a broken beer bottle robbed the truck stop of $150.

The two then fled in a 1965 or 1967 yellow Mustang that had extensive damage to the front end, officials said.

Doctor's dilemma: Where's the editor

By HUGH MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — The 50th anniversary of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's death, the arrival of a new Walker Percy novel and the publication of a fine W. Somerset Maugham bio-rays behind the closed door of his study while you thumb through National Geographic and whisper inanities to the six others stacked up ahead of you in the waiting room for a 10:30 appointment. Your consoling friend in the white our culture to have been satirized in the Moss Hart-George Kaufman comedy, "The Man Who Came to Dinner," which was revived on Broadway last season. You may recall that Dr. Bradley, called in to treat the fractured hip of the eminent critic Sheridan Whiteside (in real life Alexander Wolcott), was forever trying to get a reading of the manuscript his patient contemptuously retitled "Forty Years Below the Navel" in that riotous farce.

The case histories of physicians who pushed pens as well as pills show the symptoms developed early.

Trained in medicine at Moscow University, Chekhov began his literary career by writing comedy sketches for newspapers to augment the income of a never very lucrative practice. Walker Percy never got to practice at all. He began writing while convalescing from a bout with tuberculosis, contracted while cutting up cadavers in pathology class at New York's Bellevue Hospital.

Born in Cardross, Scotland and graduated from the University of Glasgow medical school, Archibald Joseph Cronin was a surgeon in World War I, a ship's doctor on a voyage to India when a smallpox epidemic broke out among the crew and almost lost his life treating a homicidal maniac in an asylum. He had a prosperous London practice until his own doctor, a Harley Street specialist, diagnosed a chronic duodenal ulcer and advised a six months rest. Dr. Cronin rented a farm in the Highlands of Scotland and made a startling announcement to family and friends: he was about to give birth to a novel.

Mulligan's Stew

raphy — all in 1980 — shed light on a nagging mystery.

I now have a suspicion why we have to wait so long in the doctor's office.

All the above mentioned celebrated authors had set out to become doctors and were trained as medical men. Like the playwright Anton Chekov, the poet William Carlos Williams, the novelist A.J. Cronin, the evangelist St. Luke — not to forget John Keats (a pharmacist) and Robert Browning (studied anatomy at Guy's Hospital in London) — they discovered somewhere along the line that the pen is mightier than the pill and cuts deeper, surer than the surgical scalpel.

Your doctor may not be going over your X-coat is probably back there rejiggering the third chapter, typing up some new dialogue from lines overheard last night at a cocktail party or getting a second opinion from his nurse on the raunchy dialogue in the big love scene. He may even be on the phone with his literary agent or a publisher, trying to nail down the TV soap rights to his daring, refreshingly frank view of life and death from behind the green operating room mask.

When doctors talk of scrubbing up in these days of million-dollar best sellers, they probably are referring to toning down the language a bit to oblige the network censors.

The phenomenon of the literary physician has been common enough in

Interstates needing work

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four percent of the nation's interstate highways need such "major improvements" as road reconstruction, while more than 30,000 miles require minor improvements, the government said Wednesday.

The Transportation Department said that only 7,958 miles of the nearly 40,000-mile system meet all federal standards.

Richard Reilly, a Federal Highway Administration spokesman, said that major road reconstruction is required on a "majority" of the 1,634 miles needing major improvements. He said other major needed improvements include widening to accommodate increased traffic loads and improving shoulders.

The minor improvements include lighting, fencing and landscaping as well as extensive repaving, Reilly said.

He said the stretches requiring the biggest improvements are more than 20 years old.

"It's not unexpected," Reilly said of the highway conditions. But he noted that state governments have been particularly hard pressed to pay for the repairs because of a number of restrictions on federal funds. He said some of those restrictions have now been eased.

Reagan acting differently as nominee

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — Ronald Reagan says he doesn't feel like a front-runner in the race for the White House, not up against an incumbent president. But the Republican presidential nominee acts like one, guarding his words, hedging his answers.

News Analysis

He's not even angry about the Panama Canal treaties these days, although he used to denounce them as a dangerous giveaway of American property. That was Reagan, the challenger, four years back. Reagan the nominee said he'd check on implementation of the treaties but wouldn't try to undo them and keep the canal.

Campaigning, Reagan regularly denounces draft registration, the Department of Energy, the so-called windfall profits tax. Interviewed in his Waldorf Tower Hotel suite, he affirms his opposition, but avoids any flat commitment to repeal or abolish any of them.

That's the style of a candidate who figures he is ahead and doesn't want to make many waves. The latest AP-NBC News poll, completed Sept. 24, shows Reagan preferred by 42 percent of likely voters, President Carter by 33 percent, independent John B. Anderson by 13 percent, with a handful for other candidates and the rest undecided.

"I know what the polls say and all that, but that's not all that decisive when you look at that uncommitted group and I find it very difficult to feel like a front-runner when you're up against an incumbent," Reagan said.

And later: "... The president has been pretty industrious in using the incumbency in this campaign, more so than any president that I could recall."

Reagan's strategy is to concentrate on the down side of incumbency, to focus his campaign on Carter's record in office. "He can't run on the record," Reagan said. "He has to retreat from it or hide from it... He, in an attempt to cover that up has been resorting to personal attacks, and I'm not going to answer them. I'm going to keep talking about his record."

That is why Reagan doesn't want to issue new commitments, break new ground, discuss in detailed terms what he would do in office.

Green announces write-in campaign

ODESSA — Ector County District Attorney John Green has decided to throw his hat into the district attorney's race without support of any political party.

During a Wednesday news conference held at the Hospitality Inn located between Midland and Odessa, Green read from a prepared statement to reporters that he would re-enter the district attorney's race as a write-in candidate.

And that was about the extent of the conference as he refused to answer any questions posed by reporters.

In the May Democratic primary, Green lost his re-election bid to Odessa Mike Holmes who won about 57 percent of the vote.

Former Texas Governor Preston Smith appointed Green to his post.

1973...1979...1980... How many warnings do we need?

For the third time in seven years, the outbreak of violence in the Middle East has imperiled the economy and security of the U.S. and its allies.

The fighting between Iraq and Iran has already shut off two to three million barrels of oil a day, increasing the competition among importing nations for the diminished supply.

The loss of Iranian production last year sent prices soaring and brought on spot shortages. This time, unusually high world inventories provide some short term protection, but a sustained cutoff would soon deplete surplus stocks.

By now the lesson should be clear. The U.S. must reduce its dependence on foreign oil and do so as quickly as possible.

Some steps are being taken. Both consumers and industry are using energy more efficiently, largely as a result of higher prices. The phased decontrol of oil and natural gas prices is stimulating the search for new supplies in the U.S. And the nation has made a commitment to synthetic fuels.

But we still aren't making enough use of our most powerful energy weapon—coal. America has enough coal to last for centuries, and three successive presidents have called for greatly expanding our use of these reserves. But we remain stymied by environmental constraints and other roadblocks.

How many warnings do we need?

For information on how the U.S. can use more coal, write to Ralph E. Bailey, Chairman, Conoco Inc., Box A, High Ridge Park, Stamford, Connecticut 06904.
