Heart valve gives Midland girl new contract on a normal life

By LANA CUNNINGHAM Staff Writer

Michelle Tyler already has her Christmas gift and it's one that's priceless — the precious gift of life.

Two years ago at the age of 11, Michelle became sick She spent six weeks in Midland Memorial Hospital and then was sent to Lubbock where it was found she had an enlarged heart and a bad valve.

A few years ago, there would have been no hope for Michelle. But a newly-developed operation in which a valve was installed has given her a new contract on living a normal life. The surgery was performed Nov. 11 and Michelle is back home with her mother, Marie Tyler, and 13-yearold brother, Steve Maurice Tyler, at 1720 E. Maple St. At her last checkup in Lubbock, the doctors reported her heart already had shrunk since the surgery.

"AND SHE'S ONLY on one medication now, a blood thinner," says her mother proudly. "She's progressing.

While Michelle flips through an encyclopedia's entry on heart to illustrate her problem by showing a diagram, Mrs. Tyler explains the "real valve was deteriorating. The left side of her heart wasn't getting

When Michelle was first taken to Lubbock, the doctors told Mrs. Tyler they couldn't do surgery until her daughter was 15 or 16. In the meantime, she was prescribed various heart medications. Surgery last summer pinpointed her heart troubles and she continued making trips to Lubbock for checkups

Then, Michelle began to "black out," said her mother. And the doctors decided to go ahead with the

The scar, which starts below the neck and extends almost to the waist, is only a reminder of what Michelle and her family have faced. But Mrs. Tyler, whose wide smile and sparkling eyes radiate warmth, claims God has given them the strength to bear what has happened and keep going each day

Although only 13 years old, Michelle accepted the operation without voicing any fears. "I just wanted to be well," she says softly. "I used to get tired easily. I didn't think-of anything else.

She makes no mention of the pain incurred by the operation. But she undoubtedly felt it...felt the stabbing of the needles and the slash down her chest.

While in MMH two years ago, nurses had difficulty inserting needles into her veins. And the operation at Lubbock required needles. "Sissy was a big girl, that she was," says Mrs. Tyler. "They had a hard time with the needles."

AFTER THE OPERATION, "she had a monitor here, a monitor there, needles in her chest and tubes coming out of here," Mrs. Tyler said, pointing to parts of the body. Instead of thread to stitch the two halves of her chest back together, metal staples clamped the wound shut until healing began.

To Michelle, there was no doubt in her mind about having the surgery and the fact she would come out of it alive. "I wasn't scared about the surgery," she says

But that tranquil outlook possibly came from an inner knowledge. "When we left for the hospital, she said she wrote a letter to God," her mother explains.

However, the thought of losing Michelle had been in Mrs. Tyler's mind. "I know God loans them (children) to us, and what He says is His will. But I still asked Him to please don't take Michelle. And I feel my prayers have been answered.'

The doctors have told Michelle that she will be able to have a normal life and raise children, according to Mrs. Tyler. And the valve should be good for 20 years. Until she is completely recovered from her surgery, she will have to be a homebound student.

For a while, Mrs. Tyler has stopped working in order to stay home and care for her daughter.

While a life has no price tag, the operation does: about $20,000. Mrs. Tyler says she has some insurance to cover it, but not enough.

"The bills keep coming in every day," she says. Flipping through several pages of one bill, she points to

Carter most likely won't defer hostage efforts

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Carter administration, frustrated in its efforts to gain the release of the American hostages in Iran, is considering deferral of further negotiations to the Reagan administration, a knowledgeable U.S. official said Saturday

But the official also told the Associated Press that a more likely option was to keep pressing for a settlement that would end the captivity of the 52 Americans who have been held for 413 days.

"With a month left, you keep trying," said the official who asked not to be named. Secretary of State Edmund S.

Muskie met Saturday with his deputy, Warren Christopher, who is directly in charge of the protracted negotiations. Then, Christopher met with members of his team, including Harold Saunders, the assistant secretary for the Near East, and Roberts Owen, the department's chief lawyer.

The subject of their deliberations was Iran's latest message, received on Friday, that includes demands that Iran's assets in the United States, frozen by President Carter more than a year ago, be handed over to the Algerian Central Bank for safekeeping and that the United States offer assurances of help in obtaining the return of the late Shah of Iran's wealth. Algeria is mediating the indirect negotiations.

"It's not been decided," he said. "But it may be that we can't do better than we've already said.'

The official reiterated the administration's position that while it wanted a settlement, there were legal and constitutional restraints on how far Carter can go in meeting Iran's

Muskie was expected to stress this point in a televised interview Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press."

If the administration decided to freeze negotiations, the official said, it "conceivably could say to Iran, 'All

However, he said, Iran also would be reminded that it should not expect better terms when President-elect Ronald Reagan takes office on Jan.

Officials here were extremely pessimistic that the hostages would turn home by Christmas. John H. Trattner, the State Department spokesman, Friday emphasized this point when he said the United Sttates was trying to arrange a Christmas observance for the hostages in Tehran.

Over the last several days, Iranian officials commenting on the situation have been remarkably more optimistic than the mood is here.

day that a demand for returning the late shah's wealth was the only potential problem among Iranian terms for release of the 52 U.S. hostages. Tehran radio said it was up to Washington to decide whether to accept the terms or "leave its Christmas tree unlighted next year, too.

In an interview with Iranian state radio, Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai said Iran had "no precise information about the exact amount" of the wealth of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. He fled Iran in January 1979 during the revolution and died at his Cairo home-in-exile last summer.

"Therefore, we have suggested the U.S. place a guaranteed deposit with the Algerian government and whatever amount of the Shah's wealth is cleared up we will take from that deposit," he said.

Rajai said Iran had demanded the amount of the deposit be held at a particular level which he did not reveal. If Iran claimed money from the deposit the United States would be expected to restore the funds to the minimum level, he said. Rajai said Iran had "stuck completely to the conditions set out by the Majlis and as long as a portion of these conditions are unfulfilled the hostages cannot go out from Iran." But he added "all the issues between us and the United States in relation to the hostages are solvable.

"He (Sadat) told me that the hostages would be freed before the year's end, that as far as Iran was concerned that was a closed chapter," Calderon Berti said without elaboration.

In the radio interview, Rajai said that among the Iranian proposals conveyed to Washington Friday by Algerian intermediaries, "the main outstanding problem is the wealth of the dead shah that we have asked to be returned to Iran." Iranian officials claim the monarch stole funds from the national treasury.

The prime minister indicated the United States should have no difficulty meeting the remaining three conditions: unfreezing an estimated $8 billion in Iranian assets from U.S. banks; dropping pending lawsuits against Iran and pledging non-interference in Iranian affairs.

Iran in the past has insisted the late shah took $32 billion out of Iran but a spokesman for the shah's family in September spoke of less than $200

Peace, good will are always there. The Christmas spirit never dies. The reason we celebrate Dec. 25 will live forever in the hearts and minds of people throughout the world.

Unfortunately, it is not the spirit that prevails in Iran, where 52 Americans have been held prisoners for more than a year. The Ayatollah Khomeini is a religious fanatic who does not understand the Christian ethic of forgiveness or compassion any more than the wildest and most primitive eign to the democratic principles by which we Americans live and which are spreading throughout the world. When the state's schoolchildren voted last month for a state animal, the white-tailed deer ran away with top honors despite a heavy write-in campaign for the skunk.

Stanton said a random check of 32 other schools in the state showed 25 had not conducted elections.

Education officials could not be reached for comment.

"This election is not like the Carter-Reagan election or the election for mayor," Stanton said Saturday. "If you don't like Mayor (Jane) Byrne, you can get rid of her in four years. But with the state animal, once you've got it, you're stuck with it forever.

Stanton also said he was upset because he believes taxpayers' money was wasted.

"This thing (the election) was supposed to be an educational program for the kids and it went right down the tubes," he said. "They (education officials) don't even know how to run a campaign. We've got more than 2.8 million schoolchildren in this state and under 700,000 voted.

"All I want to do is give everybody a chance to vote," he said. "And who knows?" he added. "Maybe this time the skunk will win."

Cold blamed for two deaths in Chicago

By The Associated Press

Winter officially arrives Sunday, but icy weather already was gripping much of the nation on Saturday.

A frigid mass of high-pressure air extending over the nation's midsection sent temperatures plummeting. By midday Saturday, tempeatures were in the low teens as far south as Kansas City, Mo.

At least two deaths from the cold were reported in Chicago, and nearly 50 people were injured when a bus slid off an icy Idaho highway early Satur-

Snow fell from central Colorado into southwest South Dakota and in the Idaho Panhandle. Snow also was reported along the eastern shores of Lakes Michigan, Erie and Ontario and in the West Virginia mountains. The unusually cold weather was expected to last through Sunday, and possibly for several days more, the National Weather Service said. Only Florida and the Far West escaped the influence of the cold air

"We've got a high that extends from the Yukon all the way down to the Gulf Coast," said weather service meteorologist Bud Dorr in Boston. "It's one of the largest high-pressure systems that you can ever get. This is a real cold one, and it's going to stay cold for the next couple of days.

The morning's lowest reading was minus-18 degrees in International Falls, Minn., as temperaturs fell below zero from New England across northern New York and into the upper Midwest.

The weather service said the reading of 6 degrees in Boston early Saturday was one degree colder than any temperature there last winter.

In Chicago, where temperatures dipped to near zero, two people were found dead on city streets Friday. Police said Allen Mickey Rowe, 40, of Perrysburg, Ohio, was found on the near south side after he apparently froze to death. The other victim, who was unidentified, was found on a busy street north of Chicago's Loop. Officials said the wind-chill factor made the temperatures feel as cold as minus-28 degrees.

In Mountain Home, Idaho, at least five people were admitted to a hospital early Saturday after a commercial bus and two cars collized with a tractor-trailer that had jackknifed on a fog-covered, icy highway, authorites said. An additional 43 people were treated and released, officials said.

Christmas depression rooted in her Jewish childhood

Guilt, confusion reigned supreme in her early Decembers

By FAYE MOSKOWITZ Special to The Washington Post

I get the blues at Christmas like a lot of other people, but I don't need any deep analysis to find the roots of my depression. Somehow the concept of separation of church and state hadn't trickled down yet to Jackson, Mich., when I was raised there in the late 1930s and early 1940s. At any rate, Christmas was a miserable time for a Jewish child in those days, and I still recall the feeling.

The pressure would begin in late November, after the new clothes for Yom Kippur and Rosh Hashanah, after the begging on Halloween, after the kosher turkey for Thanksgiving. One day Miss Lukens would strip the bulletin board of its brown and black gobblers and black and white pilgrims with their axes. Stacks of red and green construction paper jammed the supply cabinet, and I knew I was in for it. Oh, we had Hanukah, of course: great platters of steaming potato pancakes, and dreidels, and all the cousins lining up by age so the uncles could dole out quarters and half dollars and even dollars, maybe, to the older kids, but how could a homely latke compete with mince pie and plum pudding? I can remember the Christmas preparations so clearly and can feel, even now, my Gentile friends bubbling like seltzer water as the days were ticked off on the advent calendar that hung behind Miss

On the first school day in December we spread black numbers of The Citizen Patriot, the local newspaper, on our desks while whoever was Miss Lukens' current favorite doled out bobs of delicious smelling white paste, scooped from a large jar with wooden tongue depressors or dixie cup spoons. We smeared the cool, smooth paste on strips of red and green paper, formed strips into rings, then slipped rings into rings until each of us trailed a paper chain onto

It was on a paper chain day in Miss Lukens' class that I began to have my troubles with Christmas. There I was, threading a green strip through a red ring, when Peggy Lucille Harsch popped a glob of paste into her mouth and whispered, "You killed our Lord." "No, I didn't," I answered automatically. What child admits to anything the first time? But if my enthusiasm wasn't dampened already, that did it. I didn't know what she was talking about, but I was sure she was probably right.

The day passed; clean snow fell on soiled slush, thawed a little and then froze into treacherous ruts. Stores stayed open late and folks grumbled that shopkeepers were starting Christmas earlier than ever. Some night my parents and I walked downtown after dark, snowflakes whirling like moths in the streetlamps' halos and the packed ice hard as diamonds under our feet. In the town square, a creche appeared with a naked baby Jesus stretching out his little wooden arms. Thogh I didn't know if he was "Our Lord" or not, I suspected he was, and I felt guilty as anything.

Outside the shops, members of the Salvation Army stamped their feet and rang their bells energetically to keep the circulation going. I mistook their red uniforms for Santa Claus outfits and was more confused than ever when my mother dropped a dime into one of the kettles. If we didn't celebrate Christmas, why were we giving money to Santa Claus? Maybe

In Kresge's Five and Ten, coat unbuttoned, thighs jumping with the transition from axe-blade cold to down quilt warmth, I headed for the music department to listen to my ideal, the yellow-bobbed pianist, bang out the arrangements f sheet-music handed to her by prospective customers. Even here I was troubled. How could I grow up to be a piano player at Kresge's if I would have to play carols at Christmas?

Overnight, twinkling decorations sprang up like great jeweled mushrooms: Here a Santa climbed a chimney; there a front door was festooned COURT RECORDS with greens. I dreaded going home to my house, naked as an angleworm in all that glitter. More than that, I hated going to school where even Miss Lukens had to concede that her students were too keyed up to learn anything that wasn't sugarcoated with Christmas.

One day she announced we were each to bring in our favorite psalms to write out on the Christmas cards we were making. The stomach ache, part of my digestive system by then, intensified. OK, I give up, I told myself. I'll bring in my favorite psalm, but what's a psalm? My mother was no help. "Sahm?" she said in Yiddish. "Sahm is poison." I was ashamed to ask Ruth Mary, my best friend, and though I was already old enough to use a dictionary, hours of research yielded no "som" or "sam" or any other variant I could think up. We wrote letters to Santa Claus. What was I to do...write to Judah Maccabee? I crossed my fingers and wrote to Santa. Handmade Christmas presents were not a sin, I told myself, making up the rules as I went a would pretend tey were Hanukah gifts even if we didn't exchange gifts at home. So I sewed pen wipers for my dad and found a snowman in a magazine to decorate the holders for kitchen matches that were the gift for our mothers. The Christmas tree in our classroom grew more beautiful every day, draped with strung popcorn, cranberries and our paper chains. To me, it was like Snow White's fatal apple, more attractive than I could admit, but evil nevertheless When Miss Lukens read us the story of Christmas, my confusion was complete. If Jesus was a Jewish baby, like my brother, for instance, then what was all the trouble about? Why couldn't I celebrate his birthday the way my friends did? Still I knew there was a catch somewhere, a piece of the puzzle missing that nobody would help me find. Then Miss Lukens chose for bur me to be class representative in the choral group that was to sing carols outside the door of every classroom in the school.

I went home that afternoon and told my mother I felt sick. She put her lips to my forehead and said, "You have no fever. What's the matter with What was the point of telling her my troubles? The only time she had ever come to school was to register me for kindergarten and then she had answered, "Faygie," when the teacher asked my name so that even now in third grade I was still called Peggy, the closest match my kindergarten teacher had been able to achieve.

The worst of it was I wanted to sing the carols; they were the loveliest songs I had ever heard. I took to my bed, hid under the comforter and refused to go to school. No candy scent of cocoa, no image of oatmeal swimming in butter and cream could budge me from my self-imposed exile. My father sat on the edge of the bed in his work clothes, late for the shop, I knew, to give me what comfort he could. By Sunday, my parents were ready to call in Dr. Ludwig, a ceremony usually reserved for the terminally ill. I broke down then, and blurted it all out — the guilt, the envy, the anger — and my parents talked to me for hours, gently dealing with one more problem brought on by living outside the Jewish ghetto. In the end, my father softened and told me, "Sing the Christmas songs, but don't say Jesus' name." And I stood outside the classrooms, my voice blending with that of my friends in the glorious old carols, careful always to omit any forbidden words.

Decades later, I still feel left out at Christmas, but I sing the carols anyway. You might recognize me if you ever heard me. I'm the one who sings, "Lah lah, the lah lah is born."

For background checks

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston School District Superintendent Billy Reagan says he will ask the Texas Legislature for authority to do background checks on all job applicants.

Reagan said school district attorneys have warned against such investigations because of possible civil rights violations.

The superintendent prepared the request to lawmakers shortly after a teacher aide at Camp Cullen, an outdoor school operated by the school district, was charged with indecency with a child.

Young shoplifter says she learned art from TV

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) - A 15-year-old girl told police after her arrest that she learned how to shoplift by watching a television show, officers say. But a TV station official says the teen-ager missed the point. Police arrested the girl Wednesday shortly after the syndicated program aired on WSFA-TV. Sgt. V.H. Vicks said officers charged the girl with three counts of theft of property. She was accused of stealing a record album, an eight-track tape and designer jeans, each from a different store in a shopping mall.

Under questioning, the girl told police she decided to try to take the items after hearing a guest on the Toni Tennille Show" describe his shoplifting techniques. The guest, ex-convict Frank Abignale, is a consultant on shoplifting prevention.

After questioning, police released the girl to the custody of her parents.

"I didn't see the program, but it would seem to me it would be more helpful for television stations to air programs on crime prevention rather than how to commit a crime, especially this time of year," Hicks

"If she saw the same program I saw, she missed the point," Carl Stephens, the station's program director, said.

Stephens said the purpose of the program was to explain the consequences of shoplifting to the individual and the cost to society.

'It would seem the cost would have been obvious since the man being interviewed had spent years in prison for his crimes," Stephens said.

ALTHOUGH TRIMBLE has had no formal training in carpentry - which is the basic skill involved in Christmas in April - he began working on homes with his church. "At Alamo Heights Baptist Church, five of us men would meet one night a week for prayer and Bible study, then go work on a single (divorced or widowed) woman's home. We would put up fences, repair air conditioners and fix plumbing. Ironically, this served as a preparation for what was to come

In September 1973, he noticed an announcement about a meeting to draw groups together to work on houses. This was the forerunner of CIA, he said. Sponsored by the Park Center YMCA, the meeting attracted various organizations. Trimble "got real excited and selected two homes for our church."

Chuckling as he recalled the meeting, Trimble said he had to go back to the church and relate what he had volunteered them to do. "I went to the church with it and we raised the money for the supplies. The houses needed new roofs, screens, windows and painting.'

Another meeting was called by the Park Center YMCA the following spring, April 1974. And it was decided to do the program on a yearly basis in the spring. The name came from one of the women who had her house repaired.

"SHE SAID IT was like having Christmas in April," said Trimble, and the name stuck.

He didn't start out as coordinator for CIA. Trimble worked on different jobs and eventually took over all surveying of homes for the program. Then he became involved in purchasing all needed items to do the homes, and in 1976 he finally took on the title of coordinator.

Since the program's inception in 1973, there are two projects that stand out in his mind. One is building a small house for an elderly woman who was living in a storage building, and the other is remodeling an efficiency apartment for a blind woman who paid back CIA for the lot where the house now stands.

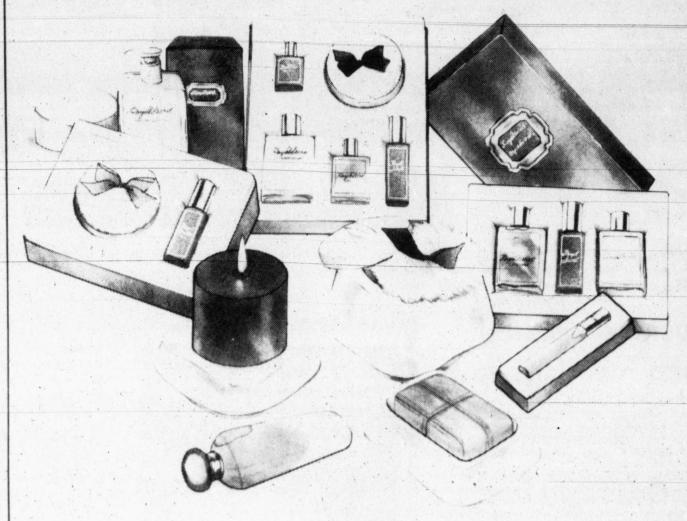

With Trimble's kind of friendly persuasion, the program keeps growing every year as the number of volunteers and money increase. This past spring, about 2,000 persons worked on 88 homes — a sizeable increase from the 17 houses that were involved back

The work is no longer confined to the last Saturday in April; it goes on year-round. The biggest problems are plumbing, sewer lines, gas lines and heating, said Trimble, that need to be fixed immediately.

"SINCE LAST APRIL, we've worked on about 30 homes, spending about $10,000," he added. In explaining the program's growth, Trimble said,

Trustees violated open meetings law

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) - The Wichita Falls Independent School District Board of Trustees violated a portion of the Texas Open Meetings Law recently when it met for a closed session without having a formal open meeting first, the county attorney says.

Wichita County Attorney Tom Schrandt said even through the Dec. 8 closed session was previously announced, board members first should have convened in an open session and announced it was going into a closed session.

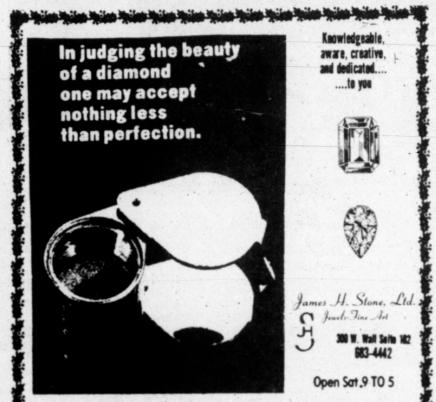

"They seemed to have followed the rest of it (the law) correctly," he said in response to questions from the Wichita Falls Record News.

"It doesn't take that long (to open the meeting) and I don't know why they didn't do it. It just makes them look like they have something to hide.'

Trustees complied with the law which allows them to discuss personnel matters behind closed doors if an announcement of the meeting has been posted 72 hours in advance, he said.

School District Attorney Roger Lee said if there was an error, it was inadvertent.

"Whether we did or didn't follow the law is your own opinion," he told the newspaper. "We may not have technically opened the meeting in the right way, but I think we followed the law - in both spirit

MORANBAH, Australia (AP) - Coal is king in this sweltering Queensland outback town - the forefront of the minerals boom sweeping Australia.

By PETER O'LOUGHLIN

Foreign investors lining up to invest in Australian mining developments have sent stock exchanges into a frenzy of trading unseen since the last great mining boom of the 1960s. A billion dollars worth of foreign investment poured into Australia in October alone, much of it into mining stocks.

Moranbah typifies the investors dream of striking it rich in Australia. A decade ago the sparsely timbered country was inhabited by cattle, kangaroos and emus.

Today it is a thriving town of 6,000 people, with neatly trimmed lawns, tropical gardens, swimming pools, sports fields and the Black Nugget Motel. The workers at the open cut mines in the area are among the highest paid in Australia, averaging the equivalent in Australian dollars of 29,000 U.S. dollars a year. Last year the company, called Utah, recorded a net profit of $161.39 million. But the success of Utah, which has a minority of 10.8 percent Australian ownership, has raised questions in Australia about ownership of the nation's

Much of the investment is coming from the United

The scale of the mining boom has stretched Australian resources to the limit, leaving foreign investment as the only alternative source of funding. Government officials have estimated that projects worth $35 billion to $46 billion are under way or planned for the next decade.

As the total deposits in Australian savings banks amount to about $45 billion even the most fervent nationalists concede that foreign investment is needed if the projects are to go ahead.

On the drawing boards are: —Coal: Australia is already the world's third largest coal exporter. The government expects to equal or overtake the United States by 1990. Australia has 2 percent of the world's coal, much of it obtainable by open cut methods.

-Uranium: Australia has 18 percent of the world's low cost uranium reserves and the government is committed to mining and exporting to countries which accept Australia's requirements for safeguarding waste material from reactors. Uranium enrichment is also being studied.

-Bauxite: Australia has 18 percent of the world's bauxite, from which aluminum is obtained. This resource has been developed mainly by U.S. companies. The availability of cheap electric power generated from new power stations on the eastern vacation a year and are asking for six weeks.

-Natural gas: Development of huge offshore gas reserves on the northwest shelf in the Indian Ocean is under way in what will be the country's biggestever resource development to date. The consortium developing the northwest shelf expects to export six million tons of liquified natural gas a year. California Asiatic Oil, Texaco and Shell are partners with Australian companies in the venture. -Oil Shale: Australia has several large deposits of easily accessible oil shale. Initial work is expected to begin in 1981 on a pilot plant at the Rundle Deposit in Queensland. The project will eventually cost $12 billion to develop production of 200,000 barrels of oil a day. The U.S. oil giant Exxon is one of the partners in the development.

Australia is already the world's largest exporter of iron ore, lead and mineral sands. It is one of the largest exporters of manganese, nickle, zinc, tungsten, silver, coal, bauxite and copper.

It also produces 60 percent of its own oil. There are problems, however, and one of them is the lack of skilled manpower. The profits generated by companies like Utah has led to some resentment by Australians and to tough demands by unionists for high wage scales and fringe benefits.

At Moranbah, the miners live in houses built by the company. The rent is $5 a week. They get five weeks'

Despite the high wages, Utah is plagued by strikes and union unrest.

To counteract charges that it is ripping off the country, Utah commissioned a survey by a leading accountant which found taxes and other government charges in Australia were higher than in any of the other five major coal-producing nations - West Germany, Canada, Indonesia, South Africa and the United States. The government's share of income after production costs was 65.7 percent compared with 54.6 percent in the other countries.

This cut little ice with unionists who have been picketing Utah's offices in Brisbane for two years demanding the company use Australian crews on its

Beautiful Mount Shasta could be deadly

By TOM EASTHAM Hearst Special News Service

WASHINGTON - Northern California's beautiful Mount Shasta is a symbol of mountain majesty - a snow-peaked picture of scenic serenity

But don't be fooled: it could be deadly. It is probable that Shasta will erupt again as it has in the past, according to a U.S. Geological Survey report to be re-issued this week. A new eruption will threaten four towns - Weed, Mount Shasta, McCloud and Dunsmuir — the report concludes.

There are no indications now of a new eruption, said the report's author, Dr. C. Dan Miller, nor is he predicting one. But he added:

"At the same time, the seemingly quiet mountain is certainly not dead, but merely dormant, and should be regarded as a potential hazard.

Like Mount St. Helens - now erupting in Washington - Shasta "has erupted repeatedly in the past and is likely to erupt intermittently in the future," he

If that happens, the eruption "certainly will affect human lives and health, property and agriculture in the vicinity of the volcano," Miller said, and en-

Mexico busy battling South American drug runners

CULIACAN, Mexico (AP) — Mexico claims it has virtually wiped out its once-huge, home-grown marijuana and heroin trade with the United States through the use of the latest in electronic surveillance and herbicides. Now, however, South American drug runners are using the country as a reshipping point to U.S. markets and Mexican officials say they are hard to fight.

"No sooner have we wiped out one than we are faced with this other business," said a drug-enforcement officer who asked anonymity. "All the Mafia that used to handle the Mexican product have now switched to helping the South American smugglers.

"It's an even tougher nut to crack than the old one," he added. "It's a business that runs into many billions of dollars annually." Some estimates put it as high as $9 billion last year.

The South American smugglers get their stuff into Mexico — occasionally to the Caribbean — by boat, then use airplanes, trucks and speedboats to sneak it into the United States.

Whichever of the various routes they take, they must have a re-shipping point, law enforcement officers

Distances are great between the United States and Colombia and other marijuana and cocaine-producing nations of South America. Increasingly stricter vigilance of U.S. seaports has also made it very difficult for the smugglers to conceal their wares in ocean-going freighters as they used

"It's not easy but we're doing everything possible and cooperating with the U.S. authorities," said Deputy Attorney-General Samuel Alba Leyva, who is in charge of coordinating Mexico's anti-drug campaign. "The smugglers have billions of dollars and all kinds of transportation and equipment.

"We recently intercepted and arrested a freighter from Colombia with 12 tons of marijuana in the Caribbean. It was painted battleship grey, which is illegal. They were trying to disguise it to look like a Mexican navy boat," Albay Leyva added.

"That gives you an idea of the volume and what we're up against."
Mexican weed is less popular since Mexican authorities started destroying fields with paraquat and other poisonous herbicides three years

"Thanks to paraquat the U.S. market for Mexican marijuana is dead," Alba Leyva said. "Fear alone was enough. Frankly, it's a market Mexico can well do without. They can have Used for a while as a defoliant by U.S. forces during the Vietnam war, paraquat and similar herbicides the Mexicans use causes lung pain and circulatory disorders in humans, and sometimes death.

After years trying to control marijuana and poppy growing through police informers, troops and harsh laws, Mexico three years ago switched to herbicide spraying.

A high-flying jet equipped with sophisticated gear specially designed by the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration photographs the country every few days. The special pictures are run through a computerized device called a spectrograph that pinpoints marijuana and poppy fields, some as small as 100 square feet, hidden in craggy ravines high up in the northern Sierra Madre of Durango State.

Armed with precise map coordinates, helicopters assigned to the attorney general's office fly almost daily from 13 secret bases and spray the marijuana and poppy fields, usually with paraquat or 2-4-D, another powerful herbicide.

"In a few hours, about 12 or so, the poppies will be dead. The marijuana will take a bit longer," said one of five pilots based in this northern Pacific coast city, until recently a crime and drug center of Mexico.

On that particular day, the pilot and his crew destroyed five patches measuring a total of 22,200 square feet.

"Spraying is surgical, clean and not violent," said another agent. "Before troops would take days on back trails hunting them out and you had occasional shootings, or chickens filched, and maybe a father farmer furious

because his daughter went off with one of the soldiers or some problem

Since the program started, 20 planes and 44 helicopters have destroyed 166,000 poppy and 50,000 marijuana fields, covering 50,902 acres. Agents have arrested 12,649 people on drug charges, 141 of them foreigners

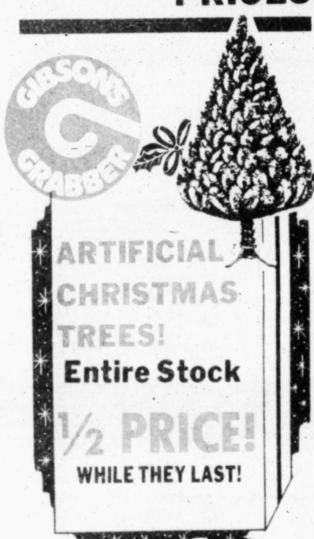

"In all that period, we have seized hundreds of automobiles and other vehicles, dozens of speedboats and close to 300 airplanes including two DC-3s and one DC-6, plus 1,320 pounds of pure cocaine," said Alba Leyva.

As a result, sales of Mexican marijuana to the U.S. have virtually stopped. Smuggling of Mexican heroin dropped from an estimated 7.1 tons in 1975 to less than three-quarters of ton last year.

Uruguay rebuffs plans for supervised democracy

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) - Voters in Uruguay have rejected an attempt by their military govern-ment to scrap the ideal of Westernstyle democracy adopted by South America's independence leaders more than 150 years ago.

This system, modeled on the U.S. and French constitutions, has remained a stubbornly held ideal on most of the continent despite a long history of political instability and military intervention.

Only Colombia and Venezuela among South America's 10 major nations have managed traditional parliamentary democracies without interruption over the past two decades. Both have strong two-party systems and civilian controls on military

But elsewhere, the constitutions set aside with each coup d'etat are usually restored intact when the soldiers retreat to their barracks. This happened four months ago in Peru and a year earlier in Ecuador, where longentrenched military regimes yielded power to elected presidents and independent legislatures

Even Bolivia, with 189 coups in 155 years of independence and again under military rule, has never seriously altered its U.S.-style constitution nor has Paraguay, even though that charter has been largely ignored during the 26-year-old dictatorship of Gen. Alfredo Stroessner.

It is only in the continent's "southern cone" recently - first in Brazil, then Chile, and now Uruguay - that the generals have sought something different, a military-supervised democracy aimed at achieving stability by permanently excluding the left. Such a system is often justified on "national security" grounds following military repression of armed guerrilla groups and legitimate dissi-

In Brazil 12 years ago, the armed forces ousted a populist president and imposed a constitution permitting rule by executive decree and relegating Congress to little more than a rubber stamp. A single presidential candidate is nominated every six years by his military comrades, then ratified by an electoral college made up of members of Congress and state legislators. Two months ago, Chile's electorate approved a consitution, written at the behest of President Augusto Pinochet, an army general, to legitimize his strongman rule. It permits elec-tion of a president and Congress if Pinochet chooses to step down in 1989, with some senators appointed by a military-dominated Security Council and legislative power reduced.

Pinochet, who led a 1973 coup against Marxist President Salvador Allende, convinced voters that a strong executive with military participation was needed to prevent a Marxist comeback power the same year after crushing a leftist guerrilla group, made the same argument against traditional parliamentary democracy.

-Their constitution, proposed Nov. 30 to the voters, would have barred pro-Marxist parties and set up a Security Council of armed services chiefs to share executive power. A president would have been appointed next year and elected every five years hence, along with a Congress lacking power to initiate laws on such matters as security, education and labor dis-

The proposal was rejected by 58 percent of the electorate.

Uruguay, like Chile, had long been a bastion of traditional democracy in South America. But Uruguay's voters, unlike Chile's, never accepted the far left. Their last election, in 1971, gave 82 percent of the votes to the traditional Blanco and Colorado Parties, challenged that year for the first time by a leftist coalition, the Broad Front.

The voting in Uruguay was viewed as an equally firm rejection of the far right - a vote of no-confidence in a military regime that has been accused of torturing and imprisoning thousands of Uruguayans and sought to banish the old Colorado and Blanco leaders from politics. It was a result, too, of the regime's failure to improve the economy the way Pinochet has in Chile, or to produce a charismatic visionary of Pinochet's stature and appeal. A rotation of military commanders has governed Uruguay behind a civilian figurehead president.

The regime permitted a fair election, even after sharply restricting the opposition's campaign. What the "no" voters won, however, is not clear. The military, apparently still committed to a conditional exit from power, withdrew silently to the drawing board, while the vindicated politicians demanded to be consulted about

Argentina's armed forces have drafted a "political plan" calling for "institutionalized" military intervention in "security affairs" of future civilian governments. But they might now have more trouble selling this plan to the moderate civilian leaders being consulted in a "political dialogue" on the country's future.

"The Uruguayan example should be taken as a very important element of analysis for all those who try to draw up governing projects while turning their backs on the popular will," said Ruben Rabanal, a leader of Argentina's centrist Radical

Red-tagged bands of borrowed busses head to New York

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

A rag-tag band of borrowed buses creaked out of Washington, D.C., Saturday on a 226-mile relief mission to New York City, where they will bolster a transit fleet depleted by defects in more than 600 new buses

The buses, each rented from the Washington transit system's mothball fleet for $20 a day, made the trip at slow speeds because of their age. Officials hoped to have them in service by Monday's morning

New York transit officials had contracted for 110 buses, but the condition of the aging vehicles took its toll and only 101 made the trip in groups of 10 to 15

The Washington buses, 12 to 15 years old and averaging 300,000 miles of wear, will be used to replace the 637 new Grumman Flxible buses that New York's Metropolitan Transportation Authority took off the streets Dec. 12 after cracks were discovered in many undercarriages.

The buses had been expected to begin arriving in New York about 5 p.m., but the first group showed up more than 31/2 hours late, said Bob Huber, a spokesman for the Metropolitan Transportation Authority. The last group — which left Washington at 5:25 p.m. - was exepcted to arrive about 3 a.m.

Huber said the buses were delayed in starting because "we wanted to check everything again bcause of the extreme cold." The buses were scheduled to undergo another inspection on Sunday.

The problems cropped up even though technical staff and National Guardsmen had gone to Washington earlier in the week to make minor repairs Several buses broke down en route to New York; even a tow truck accompanying the initial 21-bus entourage failed 22 miles into the journey.

"I'd hate to be bringing up the rear," quipped Joseph McNulty, driver of the lead bus for the second convoy. "They won't be home until Christmas."

The bus drivers were generally optimistic about the Washington vehicles, many of which have sat idle in an open field for the past six months.

"They can't be any worse than the buses we have in New York," said driver Bill Graham. "It's a shame we have to handle it this way, but if we

"She was pretty firm with them (potentially rowdy or idle students). She didn't take any guff," Frances Williams, former librarian at the Midland County Public Library, said of Poose.

Poose, the reference librarian, died last week "with her boots on." She was 77 and untiring.

"She had such a deep voice - she sounded cross, but she wasn't," Mrs. Williams recalled of her friend

And Poose had a knack for figuring out a person's question if it were vague and ambiguous.

Poose could get specific when it came to ferreting out the answers. Mrs. Williams recalled a couple of question posed to the reference librarian: "How do you 'fry' marbles?"

The word, perhaps, should have been "fire" as in a kiln, or "make" or "mold" or whatever.

"How do you make a papoose?" was another query. It should have been "papoose cradleboard."

Maurine Keefe, who beheld Poose as a dear friend, said she certainly was tenacious in her reference work 'She was like a dog with a bone.

"SHE JUST LOVED being down there," said Sarah Lew Grimes, another dear friend. "She knew so many people and knew what was going on in people's lives.'

Library clerk Peggy Thorsen vividly remembers her friend and co-worker.

'She knew everything," she said of Poose. "She was a character. She was an outstanding librarian. "She never minced words. She told it like it was."

Another co-worker, Dorothy South, described the reference li brarian as "marvelous. We'll never have anybody in reference as good as she was. She was something.

Tannie Pate, assistant librarian, was impressed by Poose.

'economic Dunkirk,' says treasury secretary

WASHINGTON (AP) - Treasury Secretary G. ately upon taking office. William Miller scoffs at claims by Ronald Reagan's advisers that the nation faces an "economic Dunkirk" and says "uncertainty" about the incoming administration's policies is fueling record-high inter-

'There is no economic emergency that I know of," Miller says, adding that the recommendation by some of the president-elect's advisers that an economic emergency be declared next month is 'dangerous" and "political theater.'

'That's like yelling fire in a crowded theater," the departing treasury secretary said in an interview Friday. He said it "may be creating an emergency" while masking the economy's basic strength.

The phrase "economic Dunkirk" was featured in a recent memo to Reagan from his designated budget chief, Rep. David Stockman, R-Mich., and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y. Later, Reagan's chief of staff, James Baker, suggested the pyesident-elect consider declaring an economic emergency and sending an economic package to Capitol Hill immedi-

The prime interest rate, which banks charge their best customers, jumped to a record 21.5 percent on Friday and analysts expect it to continue climbing a trend that threatens to send the nation's economy into another tailspin.

The government would be forced to borrow more money, crowding out many private borrowers particularly since the Federal Reserve plans to continue limiting the overall availability of credit, Miller emphasized.

"If we are to stimulate the economy with a tax cut and ask the Fed to control money, we have ... an inconsistency that won't work," Miller said. "Interest rates are reacting to those inconsistencies.

Miller said he remains very disturbed about December. That would be an improvement from the Reagan's pledge to cut individual tax rates by 30 0.9 percent yearly pace set during the third quarter, percent over three years, with the first annual HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) - A post office employee fired after he wore a "Bah Humbug" button to work says he'll fight to get his job back. And his regular customers are passing a petition in support of their favorite clerk.

The 12-year U.S. Postal Service employee said he removed the button, but then became upset.

"I showed Corbett my hands were shaking. I said, 'You got me so neryous and upset I'm going home." he said. He filled out a sick leave request form and departed.

Corbett gave him a "notice of removal" Thursday, effective Jan.

The notice said because of the increased work load during the holiday season, "cooperation and adherence to postal regulations are essential in order to maintain efficiency."

Corbett wrote in the notice that the clerk "emphatically refused" to remove the pin and walked off the floor without permission or authorization." Corbett refused to comment on the firing.

Dallas-area Christmas spending slumps after early season increases

DALLAS (AP) - Dallas-area Christmas spending rose slightly Thanksgiving week, then slumped two weeks in a row, according to figures released by the Federal Reserve here.

Holiday buying at 15 area retail stores through Dec. 12 was 7 percent below that of the same period of 1979. Sales reports were down 5 percent in the preceding week, after a 3 percent increase the week of Thanksgiving, the agency reported Friday.

Since Christmas purchases account for more than 15 percent of most retailers' annual sales, the decline is said to be significant.

Multiple handicaps don't inhibit woman's success

By PHYLLIS MENSING Associated Press Writer

JAMESTOWN, N.D. (AP) - Her limits were obvious at birth - the twisted legs, the short stubs for arms. But Anne Carlsen never has allowed such limits to stop her.

National leaders from the president on down have recognized her achievements. She was honored again recently with awards in Minnesota and North Dakota. And hers is a story that should be remembered, a story of Anne Carlsen was born in Grants burg, Wis., in 1915, the youngest of six children. But even in her very early years, being different did not mean being an invalid or an object of pity.

Miss Carlsen's mother died when she was 4, and her father, a native of Denmark, became the guiding influence in her life.

'My father always encouraged me and played up all my assets," the lively, silver-blond woman says now. He had a good, practical philosophy. I got reassurance from all members my family, and from my teach-

Her father moved to St. Paul, Minn., where Anne could be closer to medical specialists. At first, she felt strange at Luther Academy. But she made friends rapidly, and when she had surgery to be fitted with artificial legs, classmates visited her and helped her with homework.

Miss Carlsen attended the University of Minnesota and received her bachelor's degree in education. There was no doubt in her mind about a career. She wanted to be a teacher.

Jobs in the 1930s were hard to find, even harder if you were handicapped. Librarians refused to hire her, saying she couldn't lift books. A publishing company official told her she was too much of a risk because she might not be able to get out of a building during a fire. Another told her she was too young, but she knew better.

Then a friend told her about another job possibility at a church publishing company. Looking for a recommendation, she wrote Pastor W.F. Schmidt, who had moved from Luther Academy to Concordia College in Moorhead, Minn. What happened to your teaching dream? he replied. He knew of an opening at a crippled children's school in Fargo. The director, W.B.

Oil tankers may soon sail if Japanese study successful

By HIDESUKE NAGASHIMA Copley News Service

TOKYO - Imagine sailing oil tankers plying the major sea-lanes of the world in this age of advanced transport technology. That's not an anachronistic fantasy but a very real possibility, with an experimental Japanese-built sailing tanker already in successful commercial operation in Japan's coastal waters.

Research and development efforts are being continued in Japan with a view to building a 20,000-tonclass sailing tanker.

Unlike the good old clipper, the Japanese sailing tanker — the 669-ton Shin Aitoku Maru — is equipped with a higher-performance diesel engine for main power and uses a pair of sails for auxiliary power to save fuel oil.

The ship cost some 10 percent more to build than a regular tanker of the same size but was designed to use 50 percent less fuel oil.

The development of the modern sailing ship has been prompted, of course, by the high costs and short supplies of fuel oil - which are also spurring the comeback of coal-burning steamships.

The sailing tanker was designed by Nippon Kokan K.K. (NKK), a major Japanese steelmaker-shipbuilder, in cooperation with the Japan Marine Machinery Development Association (JAMDA). The ship, built at a small shipyard under NKK's technical supervision for Aitoku Shipping Co. of Tokushima, southern Japan, was completed in September. After undergoing sea trials in coastal waters, the ship recently completed its first overseas voyage, carrying 1,400 ions (10,000 barrels) of oil from China JAMDA, the coordinator of the research and develpment efforts, claims a big success in energy saving on the voyage. "The ship ran on 40 percent less oil than a comparable regular tanker, combining wind power, high engine performance and other technologies,' enthuses JAMDA official Osamu Sakai.

The ship, now in commercial operation in Japan's coastal waters after returning from the voyage, is designed to run on 50 percent less fuel than a regular tanker under optimum conditions. The ship cost $2.5 million to build, including $290,-

The idea of wind-assisted transport ships in itself is nothing new. In the 19th century, some of the early oceangoing steamships were actually equipped with sails. In the 1960s, major research was done on the subject in West Germany but it failed to attract attention because oil was abundant and cheap at that

The recent oil shortage has led to the revival of the technology. Research and development efforts on sailing cargo ships are also reported under way now in the United States, Britain and Belgium.

But the Shin Aitoku Maru is the first wind-assisted modern cargo ship to be built in the world, according to its backers.

The tanker, powered by a 1,600-horsepower diesel engine, is also equipped with a pair of synthetic-textile sails, 24 by 37 feet. The sails, unlike regular billowing canvas sails, are held tight by stainless

Suppose the ship is cruising at 12 knots with engine output of 1,200 horsepower in windless condition. The microcomputer-operated sails are automatically extended when suitable winds come and engine output is automatically reduced to maintain the same

If the output is reduced to 800 horsepower, that would mean a saving of power equivalent to 400 horsepower. When winds die down, engine output is restored to the former level.

The Shin Aitoku Maru is a brainchild of Noboru Hamada, president of the Japan Marine Machinery Development Association based in Tokyo.

Theoretically, a wind-assisted cargo ship would beeconomically viable if the cost of bunker oil exceeded $26 per barrel. With the cost now around $32 per barrel, such ships would have a promising future.

In fact, times since the days before the 1973-74 oil crisis. Meanwhile, the oil shortage is also spurring the comeback of coal-burning steamships to the seas of the world.

Mitsubishi Heavy Industries expects to build two 75,000-ton coal-burning bulk carriers for Australian National Shipping Lines.

Unlike old steamships, the modern coal-burning ships will be equipped with steam turbines rather than reciprocating steam engines.

Rangers receiving EMT training

By DEAN FOSDICK Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - A walk on the wild side can be good for the soul, but it leaves so many Tennessee park visitors injured that state officials are training rangers in emergency medical techniques

Bill Boswell, director of security for the Conservation Department's park system, said his goal is to have an EMT-trained ranger at every one of the state's 53 park and recreation areas.

"All of our rangers get a basic 40-hour emergency first-aid course when they join us," Boswell said. "What we're talking about here, though, is a full-fledged, certificated program simi-

"Our parks are no different, really, from a lot of cities," he said. "We had 17 million visitations last year. When you have that many people exposing themselves to situations that so often are new to them, you can expect to see some injuries. Most of the injuries involve broken bones, choking or heart

"Often one of our park rangers is the only thing between an accident victim and a hospital emergency room," Boswell said. "Things are so wild at Fall Creek Falls that we even have our

Driver apprehended

BIG SPRING — Joe Hernandez, a 15-year-old Big Spring High School student, singlehandedly captured a hit-and-run driver who was fleeing from the city's police this past week. Hernandez then held the man until police arrived.

Officers responded to a hit and run call after an orange U-Haul truck hit another car. Police began chasing the truck, which about five minutes later crashed into a car belonging to Dora Hernandez.

The driver and two passengers jumped from the truck. Officer Ira Harrison managed to catch the two passengers, but he driver got away. Joe Hernandez, Dora Hernandez' brother, gave chase, grabbed the driver by the shirt and threw him to the ground.

Hernandez "twisted" the man's arm a "for awhile," and held him until police arrived.

The permit authorizes the discharge of up to 125,000 gallons of wastewater daily from a water treatment plant located at 16th Street and Virginia Avenue in Big Spring.

Light-users 'pawns' in prawn market

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG Associated Press Writer

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Flip on a light switch in northern Nevada and help a giant prawn grow.

northern Nevada and help a giant prawn grow.

It sounds like the plot of a 1950s B-movie. But ever since 1977, Dr. Robert Taylor, a veterinarian at the University of Nevada-Reno, has been experimentally growing fresh-water Malaysian prawns in water taken from cooling ponds at the Fort Churchill power plant of the Sierra Pacific Power Co.

Taylor's experiments have been successful enough for his prawns — officially named Macrobrachium rosenbergii — to be sold commercially at an Asian foods market in Reno.

The prawns can reach lengths of three feet, about two-thirds of which is claw, and are reportedly more tender, if blander, than their salt-water relations.

But Taylor isn't overly optimistic about the future of prawns in Nevada.

"I'd like to say, 'Yeah, it's going to be tremendous,' but I think it's really going to be limited," he said.

It turns out there are problems with growing the tropical crustaceans in Nevada's high desert.

For one thing, Taylor said, hot water from the power plant 40 miles southeast of Reno just isn't hot enough to keep the prawns at their favorite temperatures of 80 to 85 degrees Fahrenheit in an area where the thermometer drops below zero on winter nights.

For another, the prawns are a favorite snack item for ducks and fish at their power-plant ponds. And, finally, the prawns have a disconcerting habit of eating each other.

Taylor said he'd solved the problem of predators by isolating the prawns in nets. And he can avoid cannibalism if he gives them plenty of room, raising no more than 4,000 pounds of prawns per acre each year.

Space flights not far from reality

By RICHARD DORE Copley News Service

Welcome aboard Pan Am's flight to space station R orbiting 300 miles above earth. Lift-off will be in

You and 73 other passengers are tucked inside special pressure suits and are seated within the space shuttle's two-deck passenger compartment.

While there probably won't be flight attendants aboard serving drinks, this scenario is not very far

The space shuttle Columbia, built by Rockwell International Corp., is now resting on its two booster rockets and massive external fuel tank inside a special building in Florida.

The spaceship is being readied in High Bay No. 3 of the 52-story-high Vertical Assembly Building, and is scheduled for its first launch March 14 from the Kennedy Space Center on Cape Canaveral.

If Columbia completes its space tests and lands successfully at Edwards Air Force Base in Palmdale, Calif., 54.5 hours after its launch, the United States will havethe first reuseable spacecraft system, setting the stage for an unlimited space adventure.

"Twenty years ago, Vanguard put up a 2.5 pound ball. Now shuttle will put up a 65,000 pound payload. What will happen in another 20 years?" said Thomas O'Malley, who has overseen the shuttle project as Rockwell's vice president in charge of launch operations.

"There is no limit to the potential of the shuttle."
Things haven't always looked so rosy. America's delivery van to space, the reuseable shuttle, was dying slowly, mired in government paperwork, management problems and technical difficulties.

In 1979, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration insisted that Rockwell, which builds the orbiter at its Downey and Palmdale facilities in California, bring in its top man to take over the beleaguered system.

Rockwell responded by sending in Charles H.

Feltz, a space pioneer whose work goes back to 1955 as project engineer on the X-15 hypersonic research aircraft that took man to the fringes of space and back.

"The program needed a troubleshooter and I'm pretty well known as that," said Feltz, who has set up temporary quarters near the company's space division in Downey.

Bringing the 65-year-old Feltz back into the program apparently had an effect, because the shuttle system that is $3 billion over budget and two years behind schedule is finally moving toward launch.

Feltz was with the system when the shuttle was designed in 1969, and from 1970 to 1976 served as vice president and deputy program manager. In 1976 he was named vice president of aerospace operations for Rockwell.

Feltz has witnessed many space milestones over the years, but he and other Rockwell officials believe the advent of the shuttle will be the most significant event in space history.

Initially, the 122-foot Columbia will make four test flights instead of the originally scheduled six, and 1,800 tests will be conducted during those flights.

1,800 tests will be conducted during those flights.

"We didn't cut back from six to four to save costs," Feltz said. "We got smarter. We built a better program. If we determine something is not right, then we will fly another. But I'm not sure we will even need the four."

Columbia will make the first eight shuttle flights, and is scheduled in late 1982 to carry its first space package, a tracking data relay satellite built by TRW.

TRW.

Also on that flight, the fifth in the series, will be the first inertial upper stage, the rocket attachment that will power the satellites to orbits 22,300 miles above earth.

Through 1991, the fleet of shuttles is expected to make 400 flights. Powered by rockets into space, the stubby delta-wing crafts glide back to earth at either the Kennedy Space Center, or Vandenberg Air Force Base in California.

"We will be able to cover fantastic distances through space," said Richard Schwartz, executive vice president of Rockwell's shuttle program. "And by the year 2001, we could have space stations."

Schwartz predicts the shuttle will help revolutionize many manufacturing processes because it allows scientists to work free of gravity in the weightlessness of space.

There is a potential, he said, for man to develop near-perfect crystals for lenses and ball bearings that would be so round they could practically last forever.

Scientists anticipate medicines that can't be developed on earth will become reality in space, and one of the best-known projects carried by the shuttle is Spacelab.

Developed by NASA and the European Space

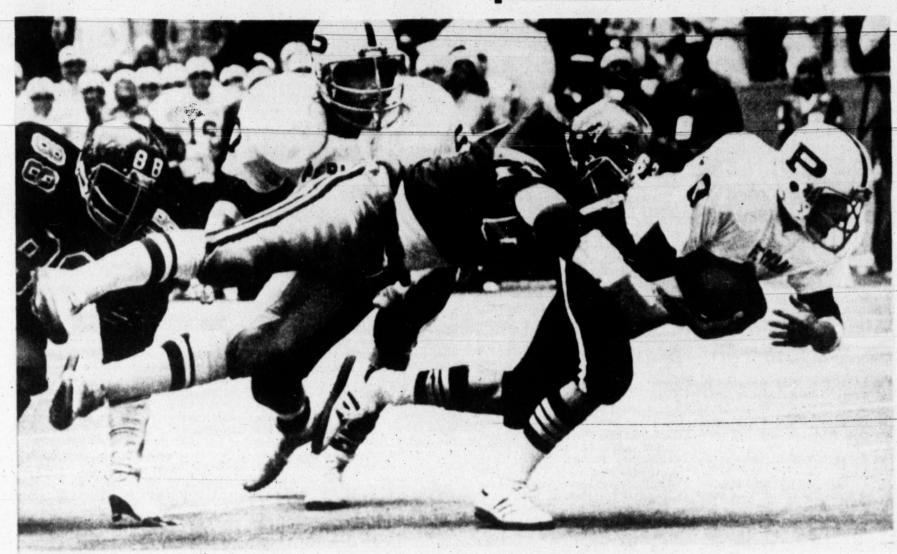

Developed by NASA and the European Space Agency, Spacelab takes up the entire 15-by-60-foot shuttle cargo bay, and will take researchers and scientists into space for experiments.

SUNLAND PARK, N.M. (AP) - Car-

SUNLAND PARK, N.M. (AP) — Carmoline, a hard-hitting mare who has already won more than $16,000 this year, rolled to an impressive neck win in Saturday's mile headliner at Sunland Park

Carmoline took command at the halfway point, then faced a prolonged attack from the 7-to-5 favorite, Yosemite Dancer.

Yosemite Dancer tried his best to overhaul Carmoline in the early part of the stretch, then tossed in the towel. He faded to third as Full Note made up much ground in the final half-furlong.

Carmoline, the property of the CS Ranch of Cimarron, N.M., returned mutuel payoffs of $14.40, $7,20 and $3.60. The win was her first in three Sunland outlings.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Henry Johnson flipped in 36 points - 18 in each half - as Texas streaked to a 103-82 intersectional basketball victory over North Texas State Saturday night.

Texas, starting two freshmen, zipped to a 9-0 lead and was never seriously challenged in what was a rugged, physical game. Tony Macalik, of North Texas, suffered an apparent leg injury early in the second half and sat out the remainder of the game. In two collisions under the basket, North Texas high scorer Kenneth

Lyons also hit the floor and had to rest briefly before resuming play. Johnson, a 6-foot-6 junior scored on a variety of shots, including jumpers from the corner and two slam dunks. The victory broke a two-game losing streak for Texas and raised the Longhorns' season record to 4-3. North Texas is 6-4, and the two teams will play again Jan. 19 at Denton.

Freshman Mike Wacker scored 18 for Texas and the Longhorns' other freshman starter, Ray Harper, scored 12. LaSalle Thompson, a 6foot-10-inch sophomore, threw in 13 points for the Longhorns but went to the bench for his fourth foul with just under 10 minutes left in the game.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Freshman quarterback Wayne Peace tossed touchdown passes of 24 and 21 yards to Cris Collingsworth and set up two other scores with passes to the senior wide receiver as Florida capped its rags-to-riches season with a 35-20 victory over Maryland in the Tangerine Bowl Saturday night.

The victory boosted the Gators to 8-4, a remarkable turnaround from their 0-10-1 record of a year ago in Coach Charley Pell's first season at the Southeastern Conference school.

Maryland also closed the season with an 8-4 record. Peace, who completed 20 of 34 passes for 271 yards, brought the sluggish Florida offense to life late in the first quarter and hit Collingsworth with the 24-yard scoring pass on the third play of the second period to complete a six-play, 68-yard drive which boosted the Gators into a 7-3

Maryland place kicker Dale Castro, opened scoring with a first-period field goal of 34 yards, kicked two from 27 yards away within a five-minute span of the second quarter as the Terrapins moved out to a 9-7 advantage with 4:28 left in the half.

Peace directed an eight-play, 69yard touchdown drive which gave Florida a 14-9 halftime lead. The key play in the march was a 33-yard completion to Collingsworth which set up a 2-yard scoring run by fullback James Jones.

Maryland took command of the game at the outset of the second quarter when Florida's Roger Siebbald fumbled the opening kickoff and the Gators were forced to start their possession from their own 4-yard line. On the next play, Maryland safety Ralph Lary stepped in front of a Peace pass intended for Collinsworth at the Florida 15 and returned it to the

The Terps' Charlie Wysocki, who rushed for 159 yards on 39 carries, plunged into the end zone and quarterback Mike Tice ran for a two-point conversion to give Maryland a 17-14

Coach pulls team off court

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) - District of Columbia Coach Wil Jones pulled his team from the floor in the last five minutes, forfeiting a nonconference college basketball game to Wright State Friday night. D.C. trailed 76-63 when Jones instructed his team to leave the floor.

After the game, District of Columbia athletic director Orby Moss and Jones issued this statement: "The situation in regard to the officiating became intolerable. The officials obviously lost control of the game, and our student-athletes were taking too much abuse with no physical protection.

The officials, assigned by Mid-American Conference Commissioner Fred Jacoby, were Buhl Roach and Sid Rodenheffer.

Rodney Benson had 22 points and Eddie Brown 15 points for Wright State, unbeaten in seven games this season. Freshman Earl Jones and Michael Britt had 21 points apiece for the Firebirds, 5-5.

Elon captures NAIA crown

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Placekicker Phil Renn booted a 37-yard field goal early in the fourth quarter to lead Elon College to a 17-10 victory over Northeastern of Oklahoma and the NAIA national football championship on Saturday.

Tailback Bobby Hedrick rushed for 198 yards and scored one touchdown late in the first quarter, but Renn's kick provided insurance for the Fightin' Christians as they withstood a last-gasp effort by the Redmen in the final period.

Hedrick's only score came on a 7-yard run with 40 seconds left in the first period and erased a 3-0 Northeastern lead taken on a 47-yard field goal by Arthur Garcia earlier in the period.

The Fightin' Christians extended the lead in the second period after the defense pinned the Redmen deep in their own territory. From the Northeastern 42, Elon scored in five plays when quarterback John Bangley scored from 6 yards out on a sweep.

Northeastern narrowed the deficit to 14-10 in the third period when quarterback Lynn Pattillo completed a 12-yard scoring strike to tight end Jerry Wichert.

With less than three minutes remaining, Northeastern marched its own 23 to the Elon 25 on five consecutive Pattillo completions. Following two incomplete passes, Pattillo's final effort was deflected by linebacker Stanley Tootoo.

Northeastern finished the season at 11-3 in making its second appearance in the NAIA championship. Elon finished the 1980 campaign at 13-1.

Chicago Bears turn mistakes into win

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) - Quarterback Vince Evans took an interception and a fumble - gifts from Tampa Bay and turned them into touchdowns on runs of 6 and 1 yards as the Chicago Bears held on to beat the Buccaneers 14-13 in the season-ending National Football League game for both teams

The winning score came with 1:48 left in the third quarter after the Bucs' Jerry Eckwood fumbled at the Tampa Bay 2, and Bears safety Lenny Walterscheid recovered. Three plays later, Evans dove over from the 1 for the go-ahead touchdown.

THE BUCS had a chance to win in the final minute, but-a 32-yard field goal attempt by Garo Yepremian was short after being tipped by defensive end Al Harris.

Earlier, Evans capped a 64-yard scoring drive by scrambling 6 yards after linebacker Otis Wilson picked off a pass by Tampa Bay quarterback Doug Williams at the Chicago 32.

Evans touchdowns gave him a total of eight rushing scores this season, top in the league for quarterbacks. The Bears closed out the season with a 7-9 record to escape last place in the NFC Central Division. The Bucs dropped to 5-10-1 and a possible lastplace finish, depending on the outcome of Sunday's Detroit-Green Bay

On their next possession, a 57-yard bomb from Williams to rookie Keven House set up a 27-yard field goal by Yepremian. Yepremian added a 26yard field goal in the fourth quarter to bring the Bucs within one point.

Tampa blew another opportunity to take the lead with 6:40 to play when Williams connected with House on a 61-yard pass, but Bears defensive back Terry Schmidt knocked the ball loose at the Chicago 18 and Doug Plank recovered it.

WALTER PAYTON gained 130 yards on 29 carries, replacing Joe Perry for fifth place on the NFL career rushing list with 8,380 yards.

For the mistake-prone Bucs, it was the sixth game they had led 10-0. However, they have won only one of those six games. In 11 games this season, Tampa was unable to score in the third quarter.

The Bucs jumped off to a quick lead behind the passing of Williams, whose 26-yard pass to Ike Hagins preceded the long-scoring pass to Jones.

With Tampa Bay ahead 10-0, Bucs defensive back Mark Cotney picked off an Evans' pass at the Bears 44 late in the opening period and returned to the Bears 37. Williams then took the Bucs to the Chicago 21, only to be sacked on the next play. Wilson then intercepted Williams at the 32, changing the complexion of the game.

Wilson ran 2 yards and fumbled, but Teammate Gary Campbell recovered. The Bears then marched 64 yards with Evans capping the drive early in the second quarter.

Louisville loses again

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Danny Vranes scored 28 points, including 18 in the second half, as undefeated Utah routed a cold-shooting Louisville 78-59 Saturday night, breaking the 20th-ranked team's 26-game home-court winning streak.

After Louisville had trimmed a 16-point Utah halftime lead to seven at 44-37 early in the second half, Vranes got 10 of Utah's next 12 points as the Utes pulled back ahead 56-39.

Louisville could get no closer than 11 points the rest of the way as Utah ran its record to 7-0. The loss dropped Louisville to 1-4. It has lost more games than it did in all of last season during a 33-3 campaign and is off to the worst start ever by a defending NCAA champion. Utah never trailed, jumping to an 8-0 lead and scored the final 11 points of the first half for a 40-24 halftime lead.

No words needed for New York Jets

Miami fullback Steve Howell (in white) gets some rough treatment from New York Jet linebacker Stan Blinka (54) after a five-yard gain Saturday in the Orange Bowl. The Jets went on to win their fourth game of the year, 24-17. (AP Laserphoto)

miracle," said quarterback Jim McMahon, the saviour in Brigham Young's astonishing 46-45 comeback victory over Southern Methodist in Friday night's remarkable Holiday

"Incredible," muttered losing Coach Ron Meyer, whose club was overtaken with four touchdowns in the last 4:07.

Directing the wildest comeback in bowl history, McMahon propelled 12th-ranked BYU from a 45-25 fourth quarter deficit with a 315-yard second half passing performance.

Passing for 250 yards in the last 12 minutes, the junior quarterback climaxed the rally with a 41-yard touchdown bomb to tight end Clay Brown with no time remaining. Kicker Kurt Gunther added the winning extra point to cap the highest scoring major bowl in history McMahon produced three touchdowns in the final 2:33 to shock the 19th-ranked Mustangs, who had roared to leads of 19-0 and 35-13.

The spectacular finish outdid the granddaddy of them all - the 1979 Cotton Bowl between Notre Dame and Houston. Trailing 34-12 going into the final quarter, the Joe Montana-led Irish rallied for a 35-34 victory over Houston in windy, 20-degree cold that computed to six below zero with a wind chill factor. McMahon, the nation's passing leader, completed 32 of 49 passes for 446 yards. In 1962, Wisconsin's Ron Vanderkelen completed 33 of 48 for 419 yards in a whirlwind rally for a Rose Bowl record that still stands. However, Wisconsin lost 42-37 to Southern California.

The 91 points Friday bettered the previous all-time bowl high of 89 set in the 1969 Tangerine Bowl when Toledo smashed Davidson 56-33.

It was the second straight year that the Holiday Bowl produced one of college football's most exciting bowl endings. Last year, Indiana edged BYU 38-37 when the Cougars missed a 17-yard field goal with 11 seconds remaining.

"It's called the 'save the game play," said McMahon, referring to his game-tying bomb to Brown.

"It's been in our offense ever since Doug Scovill (BYU's offensive coordinator) has been around, but we've never had to use it before," said McMahon.

"I told everybody to run to the middle of the field and I would throw it up and hope for interference," he

MIAMI (AP) - Richard Todd set up a pair of 1-yard touchdown plunges by Scott Dierking with sharp passes to Wesley Walker, and rookie safety Darrol Ray raced 71 yards with an interception return for the clinching score as the New York Jets defeated the Miami Dolphins 24-17 Saturday.

The National Football League triumph came before a national television audience which watched the season-finale game without commentators in an NBC-TV experiment.

The victory, New York's sixth straight over Miami, helped partially offset last week's humbling loss to previously winless New Orleans. The Jets finished 4-12 after being touted as a top contender in the American Football Conference's East Division by many observers.

The Dolphins completed a rebuilding season with an 8-8 record. Rookie David Woodley, who took

Panthers, Rebels dominate 5-5A All-District selections

Permian secures seven slots while Lee lands six positions

By BOB DILLON

Champion Odessa Permian placed seven players on this year's talented District 5-5A All-District team following a meeting in Odessa, Nov. 18, with the coaches and sports writers.

Permian placed three on offense and four on the defensive unit in some of the closest balloting in recent years. Midland Lee landed three gifted athletes on the elite team and all three were named both ways on the offensive and defensive units, giving the Rebels six slots. They include junior Calvin Riggs along with senior linemen Irl Conally and Keith Brown. Riggs, a 195-pounder, was named at a running back slot and defensive end while Conally and Brown were the two offensive guards and they also were named at defensive tackle poisitions. Conally and Brown both tip the scales at 220 pounds. This is the second year for Brown to make the team. He was chosen at a guard slot as a junior.

MIDLAND HIGH'S Michael Feldt was named in the seconadry on defense for the only Bulldog on the first team.

Abilene Cooper landed three players on offense and one on the defensive unit while OHS, which tied Permian, 14-14 in the final game of the season, landed two players on offense and three on defense. Permian quarterback Jerry Hix and OHS signal-caller, Johnny Subia, were named co-winners as Offense Player of the Year in 5-5A. Mike Williams, Permian's fine middle linebacker, was named Defensive Player Eight coaches and four sports writers cast their ballots with the Abilene Reporter News failing to send a scribe again this year.

PERMIAN TAILBACK Kent Sager was named in the backfield along with tight end Jimmy Morris and tackle Roy Dunn. Sager is a hard-running 165-pound senior who had scored 10 touchdowns going into the state playoffs while Morris is a 175-pound senior. Dunn, a 6-foot-4, 240-pound senior, was also named as the top field goal and extra point kicker. He had tallied 49 points going into the bi-district game with Sherman to go with his 43 points last year as a junior.

On defense, Permian landed Williams along with Brett Barham, a 180-pound senior at a defensiv end. Jack Kenner, 175-pound senior and Terry Rice, a 160-pound senior, were the other Panthers named in the talented seconadry. They join Feldt and Subia of OHS

Besides Brown and Conally at the defensive tackle slots, OHS' George Acosta was also chosen as a down lineman. He is an 180-pound junior. Joining Williams at the other two linebacker positions were Mike Stills, an 185-pound junior from Abilene Cooper and Mike Nunnlee, 165-pound se-

Lanny Dycus of Cooper along with Barry Corley of Midland Lee and Feldt of MHS were named to the honorable mention team. Wade Johnson MHS' 242-pound tight end also made honorable mention.

TWO WIDE receivers were chosen in OHS' Hector Sanchez and Cooper's Mike Flores. Jeff Cleere, 200-pound senior from OHS joins Dunn at the tackle slot while Jim Cooke, 220-pound senior Trom Cooper was named

Pirates celebrate AAA grid crown

By The Assolcated Press

The Pittsburg Pirates were wearing black Friday night, but it wasn't because the team and their fans were in mourning

Quite the contrary, they were celebrating a victory in the Class AAA Texas schoolboy football title game. Pittsburg beat Van Vleck, 13-2, for the championship.

Top-ranked Pilot Point and Tidehaven battled to a 0-0 tie and settled for a co-championship in Class AA.

Pittsburg coach James Rust says the mostly black uniforms are a good luck charm for the team.

'We wore black starting three years ago and we've been a winning team since then. We were unscored on wearing black until Friday night," Rust said. "We wore gold in the playoffs last year and we lost to Van,

"The kids are kind of superstitious," Rust added. Rust will lose 22 seniors from the championship team. Asked if that gives him any concern about next year's team, Rust proudly pointed out that the school's eighth grade team, ninth grade team, junior varsity and varsity lost one game between them.

Asked what he was thinking when he saw his team's center heave the football over the punter's head in the direction of the end zone, Rust said he was more concerned about it turning into just a safety than he was losing the team's scoreless streak.

"I said to myself, 'Dear Lord, please let him grab it and throw it out of the end zone or something," the coach recalled. Byron Linwood covered the ball in the end zone, allowing the safety, but denying Van Vleck a cheap touchdown.

Pittsburg held a 7-0 lead in the second quarter when Van Vleck scored the safety, ending a string of 42 consecutive scoreless quarters for the Pirate defense, a state record.

Tailback Gary Hashaway scored both Pittsburg touchdowns, the first on a 7-yard run in the second quarter and on a 4-yard jaunt in the fourth quarter. Linwood kicked an extra point for the Pirates, but missed a 32-yard field goal attempt on the final play of the first half. Pittsburg ended the season with a perfect 15-0 record. Van Vleck was

Pilot Point came close to scoring one time in the scoreless tie with Tidehaven for the Class 2A title. Pilot Point moved to the 4-yard line, but three tries yielded only two yards and a field goal attempt failed on fourth Tidehaven had a chance to win the game in the final two minutes, moving to the Bearcats' 32 yard line before a quarterback sack and an interception ended the threat.

Pilot Point ended the season with a 14-0-1 record. Tidehaven was 13-0-2.

CHUCK DAVIS OUTDOORS Camping requires right preparation

Let's go camping! You hear that around Texas homes about as often as those other All-American standbys like--"How come the $%&*# checkbook never balances", "Which one of you kids. left his bike in the driveway" and "How do you like it? It was on sale.'

You can ask any of thousands of Texas families if they enjoy camping and they'll say "Oh yes--we sure do." But each will mean something a little different when they say "camping". It's an inexact term in this era of specialization, maybe that's is why it is so popular.

Camping can mean anything from a simple overnight camp at the side of the raod to a $40,-000 motorhome on a six month trip. If can mean roasting a fish on a stick and eating it with your fingers to preparing a seven course dinner to be served by Most of us fall somewhere between these extremes and camping simply means the opportunity to get away for a few days and relax in the desert, at the lake or in the pines A chance to cool off and calm dowm. To relax and remember and renew. To unwind and unworry.

MANY TIMES a camping trip is made in connection with some other activity, like fishing or hunting, rockhounding or prospecting for Indian ruins. Why you make your camping trip and where you go has a lot to do with what sort of gear you'll have

You probably already have a pretty good idea of the sort of camping you like. Maybe you are an old-timer at it but are thinking of up-grading your gear; to be a little more com-fortable.

Like most human endeavors. camping can be whittled down to basics. What sort of camp gear you choose will be determined by four major things: money, portability, sleeping arrangements and eating facilities. In other words, within the limits of your pocketbook, you'd like to have th most comfortable, practical outfit you can.

You can go camping for nothing by using some blankets from home, sleeping in the back of your car and cooking over an open fire. Unfortunately, all too many campers begin their relationship with the outdoors > to what should be a pleasureable experience.

NORMAL sized humans are not designed to spend eight hours curled up on the back seat of a car-sometimes covered with a blanket, but more often not. And cooking over an open fire is a skill that takes years of practice-else you'll end up with burned food, burned hands and blackened pots. Not exactly the way to fall in love with the outdoors.

So spend some money. Buy at least a sleeping bag, a camp stove and a lantern. You can still get along with the cooking utensils from home for awhile. How much should this bareminimum camping outfit cost?

The stove and lantern will cost about $40 to $50 for both. The sleeping bag can run anywhere from the high teens to several hundred dollars. We'd suggest something in the $50 range. Still with a brand name and a filler material you are fimilar with, Dacron 88 is a good snythetic filler and a bag in the two to three pound range is perfectly adequate for almost all Texas camping.

People are different, however, and if you have the reputation of being a cold sleeper-happy only when the heat's up high enough and the blankets are piled high-better invest a few more bucks and get a four or five pound bag. The two, three, four pound designations mean that there is that much filling in the sleeping bag. The this way. It's a tough introduction more filling, the warmer the bag.

Continuing with the monofilament fishing line columns after my latest trip to Wilmington, Delaware to visit the Du Pont Stren Research Station, we've learned more about monofilament than we'll ever know or expect to know. It was interesting that so much research goes into its manu-

By the time we finish these series of fishing line articles, you'll know why you're fishing with monofilament and what you can expect from it.

Breakoffs in fishing. That's the number one problem. Why do breakoffs occur while battling a big fish? John Hansen, a Du Pont Stren researcher with fishing line for 20 years, termed the breakoff problem 'the phenomenon of random breakage" in a paper he wrote called "Better Chemistry for Better Fish-

DU PONT demonstrated a new test which proved Dr. Hansen's findings.

Dr. Hansen described the "continuous shock loading test" which evaluates the capacity of a fish line to absorb stress without breaking. It simulates the peak s tress exerted on a line when an angler sets the hook, or when the fish runs hard. "Stren" and competitive line are soaked, then stretched between wheels spinning at different speeds. The nylon alloy line with excessive tensile strength will usually break several times, while the "Stren" rarely ever breaks. Now, this is not a commercial for "Stren" line, but these are some of the hard facts we learned and witnessed while at the Stren Research Center.

Du Pont also tested the theory in actual fishing conditions with professional fisherman Bobby Murray. In a hook-setting experiment, M'urray found the high tensile strength alloy line broke on several occasions at stress level well below its rated pound test. Murray attributed the problem to shock resistance sacrificed for the excessive tensile strength.

"GODD, tough competition helps advance the state of the art," Murray said. "Shortcuts which improve performance in one area but reduce it in another give the industry a black eye. It's a shame, because the angler is the loser in the long run."

The potential weakness of any line made with blends or alloys is compounded when the line is overdrawn to increase tensile strength and reduce diameter. There are seven basic properties that the angler can expect in a balanced fishing line: tensile strength, shock resistance, toughness or abrasion resistance, limpness, visiblility, controlled stretch, and knot strength. Drawing the line excessively during manufacturing does increase the tensile strength, but it also cuts down on its ability to stretch or "give" when a big fish strikes or the angler sets the hook. As a result, the overdrawn line has an increased tendency to break off.

Two of the most important asked questions, other than why does my line break when battling a fish are: Does my line break at the knot and is high visibility line better or worse for catching fish? To answer the knot question, top fishermen are well aware of the importance of a line's knot strength, but the occasional holiday angler should take note too. In many lines, a bad knot can cut down pound test-test rating by up to 50 percent. Combine this with the slippage or cutting action from poorly$tied knots, and your line won't hold the lure, let alone a fighting fish.

Dr. Hansen said, "A good line ought to maintain a high 'knot efficiency' (for example, a 10-pound test line ought to hold up to eight pounds) even with bad knots in it. A top performing premium line with properly tied fishing knots should retain its full poundtesting rating.'

FINALLY, visibility is important to many fisherman. Fluorescence, the case of "Stren", improves the visibility of the line and allows the angler to see his strike before he feels it. Some anglers worry that high visibility might spook a fish, but fishing experience has shown that this is not the

As Dr. Hansen says, "Striking the right balance of properties, to provide toughness, durability and overall performance in a variety of fishing conditions, is the challenge we face. But the angler is the ultimate authority: he tests the line under constantly changing fishing conditions." Experience in te field is the best proof of a line's solid personality. In future columns, we'll look at tackle tips and knots, tell of professional anglers opinions of various fishing lines and what they expect from their line.

Oak Creek? It's just like a Polaroid camera

Oak Creek and a Polaroid camera are similar in many respects. The button is pushed, the film rolls out and you wait to see what the quality of the picture will be.

The button was pushed with the September rains. The film rolled out when millions of bait fish were hatched and its just going to take tune for the good fishing to develop.

Fishing was good until the cold weather came in late October and early November. The water was in the mid-60s and in just a few days was down nealy 50 degrees, killing the fishing in cold areas. It effected bass and trotline fishing. This could change if the current warm trend hangs on. The warm weather will help fishing in the cold water areas, but it hurts it in the warm water where you expect the best fishing this time

Warm weather will help as long as it remains, but a cold front would likely change all that the warm weather has done in a matter of hours. Cold weather will get the fish going in the warm water and if you can handle disagreeable conditions, this is the time to fish the area.

Celebration proves cost

Four Houston men celebrated Pearl Harbor Day at regular intervals during the winter. by shooting up the countryside in Kerr County, but in the end they lost the war.

Acting on a tip from a landowner, Texas Parks and Widlife Department game wardens stopped the quartet as they drove into Mountain Home. A search of the vehicle turned up six white-tailed deer, two exotic axis deer and a turkey hen.

GAME WARDEN David Sinclair had observed shots being fired from the vehicle outside Mountain

Home before the arrest. A total of 32 cases were filed against the men in a locat Justic of the Peace court. Fines were assessed totaling $6,000 on charges ranging from discharging a firearm from a public road to taking deer and turkey illegally

Rainbow releases in full swing

For Texas fishermen who never have caught a rainbow trout, now is the time.

The TPWD's annual winter stocking program was in full swing last week with the release of 21,000 rainbows in the Guadalupe River below Canyon Reservoir Dam.

The most recent releases began Dec. 2 and continued through Dec. 5. Additional releases will be made

Last week's stocking was larger than most with an extra 11,000 rainbows purchased from a commercial firm in Missouri augmenting a group of 10,000 Arkansas fish reared in the San Marcos hatchery. Missouri fish are larger than usual, some up to 10 inches long, while most Arkansas trout measure eight inches.

THE GUADALUPE fishery, like the three other areas in Texas where trout are maintained, is operated on a "put and take" basis. The trout do not reproduce in the river and most of the stocked fish are caught by anglers.

Hatchery trout are not particularly wild, and can be caught on a variety of small lures and natural bait. Earthworm, cheese and canned corn all are productive for Guadalupe rainbows.

Other rainbow fisheries being stocked are the Brazos River, just below Possum Kingdom dam, Boykin Springs near Lake Jasper and Foster County Park Lake near San Angelo. There is no closed season on rainbow in Texas, but most of the fish are caught during the winter stocking period. The statewide daily limit is five with a possession limit of KINGMAN, Ariz. (AP) - Blanche Streeter must have hundreds of beer cans in her home. They're all over the house.

But unless you look closely, you may not notice any beer cans at all. They're made into objects of art and utility — mosaic pictures, lampshades, umbrellas and an assortment of other items.

There's a big, shiny, beer-can mosaic mural of a pouncing tiger over the fireplace. A wall cabinet is decorated with peacocks - beer cans again. When she and her husband, Jim, retired in Riviera, before moving to Kingman about two years ago, Mrs. Streeter was discontented with having so much time on her hands. To have something to do, she started making beer-can cowboy style, fireman's style and even berets.

also needed new lamp shades, and the idea of making them of beer cans had scarcely come to mind before she had the project under way. From there she went on to making a purse, a cigarette case, an umbrella and the roof of a dog house.

It's difficult, time-consuming work, she says.

After-washing the cans, she begins by cutting them apart with metal shears. The tops and bottoms are cut off, and the remaining piece is folded over so the beer trademark shows on both sides.

Mrs. Streeter then punches holes in the flattened cans with an ordinary paper punch - she says the tool remains adequate for a while but eventually becomes dull or its spring breaks.

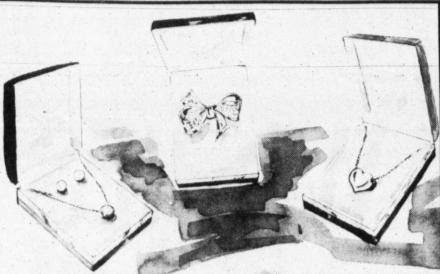

Once she has a supply ready, she crochets the cans together with colored yarn in the pattern she designs.

"Sometimes it takes me a couple of days to figure out how to put something together," she says.

She hangs the pull tabs around the bottom of her lamp shades as orna-And the tiny circular pieces of painted aluminum left over from punching the holes become the bits she pieces into mosaics. She glues them to a piece of cardboard on which she has outlined in pencil the Canadian plane found; but officers still missing

PHOENICIA, N.Y. (AP) — A search helicopter following a distress signal found a missing Canadian Air Force plane in this Catskills village Saturday, but there was no sign of the four officers aboard, state police

Steven Bender, a Civil Air Patrol captain based in Albany, said the plane, which disappeared Friday, appeared to be intact. He said the condition of the plane improved chances of finding survivors, but he noted temperatures would be well below zero for the second consecutive

A party of state troopers and state Department of Environmental Conservation officers using snowmobilies started for the site after the plane was spotted on the slopes of rugged, 4,204-foot Slide Mountain. But an effort to direct the party to the scene by radio from a state police helicopter ended at nightfall. Authorities said air support would resume at dawn Sunday.

A Canadian Air Force helicopter from a base in Utica had attempted earlier to lower in a paramedic, but that try was foiled by wind-blown snow. State police aviation officers said it was impossible to determine from the air if there were any survivors.

The plane, a single-engine DeHaviland Otter equipped with skis for landing on snow, was reported missing shortly after taking off Friday from Stewart Airport in New Windsor, N.Y., on a two-hour, 45-minute flight over the Adirondack Mountains to Ottawa.

Capt. June Simpson, public affairs officer for the Civil Air Patrol at the Orange County Airport in Montgomery, N.Y., said an intensive air search was launched by the Civil Air Patrol and state police at the request of the Authorities said the plane was on a flight from the Norfolk Naval Air Station, Norfolk, Va. The aircraft left there Friday afternoon with two Americans and four Canadians aboard and made a stop in Maryland before putting down at Stewart.

Simpson described the airplane as silver-colored with red wing tips and said its registration number was R9047.

The plane dropped off one of its American passengers in Maryland and the other at Stewart Airport and was to drop off one Canadian in Ottawa and fly to a base in St. Hubert, Quebec, east of Montreal, with the others, according to Capt. Walter Chipchase of the Canadian Defense Department in Montreal.

He identified the men aboard the aircraft as Lt. Col. D.R. Lawrence of Ottawa and Capt. Jean Petit, Capt. Gilles Dessureault and Maj. Eugene Ross, all of St. Hubert.

Course prepares students for career

By DAVID CAMPBELL Staff Writer

There's another way to teach English and it's practical.

A new English program at Midland High School teaches students the rudiments of reading, writing, grammar and vocabulary, in addition to preparing them for a career.

Simply entitled "Career Composition," the course gives students English communication skills and an insight to their life's work. Students say they feel the course is more beneficial than the traditional English literature and composi-

And if the students' enthusiasm and willingness to skills work are indications of the program's success, then it is possible this approach would make more al skills are incorporated into the study students want to learn English.

"They are doing something that relates to their career and that motivates them," explained Mary Anderson and Jane Wisener, MHS English teach-

"Our overall objective is to view English as a communication tool which is very practical," said Mrs. Anderson. The program emphasizes listening, reading, speaking and writing skills in a career context. These same skills could be learned in a traditional English class where it is treated as an art form. However, most of the students in the program will be going to work immediately after graduation from high school and they need the essential job market At the beginning of the program, students are

"The test is only as accurate as the students are honest," said Mrs. Wisener regarding the test's library or off-campus. validity in selecting the student's final area of study for the rest of the semester.

Also, the student is required to sign a contract detailing the terms required to get a particular grade in the course. "It is not our goal to direct them to a career," said

Mrs. Anderson. "Our goal is to teach English Although English is emphasized, other life surviv-

And these life skills are usually discovered in vocabulary studies.

'We try to introduce words ahead of schedule so that when the student encounters them in an exercise, he will have a better understanding of what is happening," said Mrs. Wisener.

Some of these exercises include business letterwriting, income tax forms and business forms. Additionally, students learn what behavior an employer expects of them while on the job. 'Most employers are complaining more about an employee's behavior rather than the job skills he or she has," said Mrs. Anderson.

Activities such as written character sketches provide students with the insights to job attitudes and behavior, said Mrs. Wisener.

The students are grouped with other pupils having similar career interests and given activities to complete within that week.

Sometimes the completion of an activity requires students to leave the classroom to go to the school's Arrangements are made through the principal's office to allow the student to go off-campus, noted Mrs. Anderson. And that feeling of independence through the freedom of movement is another attraction of the program.

"Allowing the kids to have that amount of freedom is something the kids pick up on," said Sara Macina, MHS English department chairman. "The room is a focal point for most of the activities.

Inside the room is audio-visual equipment for the students, as well as books, files and pamphlets regarding career information.

A computer terminal linked to Region 18 Education Service will quickly provide information about career fields.

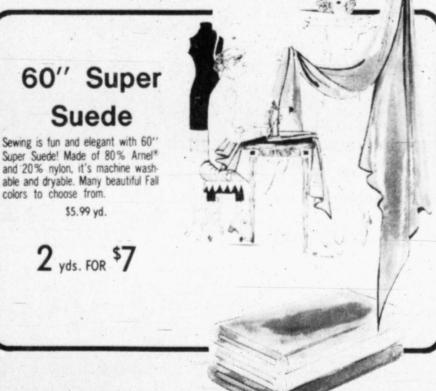

Career education has been a state objective for some time, said Mrs. Anderson. Andrews and San Angelo are among several area schools which have incorporated career education into other courses, such as home economics, she said. But this is the first year Midland schools have combined career studies with English, she added. And as one student noted, the program is designed for her needs in the job world.

"Everything I learned in here I'll be able to apply on my job," she said,"and I don't feel like learning

Diet? No, 'live it,' says fat-fighting therapist

Copley News Service

Thinking of entering your body in a parade as a float? Or perhaps your fat has driven you to the point where you're thinking of throwing your body under a Sara Lee delivery truck.

The shame. The embarrassment. The FAT. "All you have to do is stop feeling sorry for yourself and 'fess up to being overweight," says weight therapist Richard Simmons. The road to slim has been well-traveled by this guru of thin, this Donahue

'I once weighed 268 pounds, but that was 112 pounds ago," Simmons said.

Soap opera addicts might recognize this dynamo as the young man who operates the gym for all the doctors and nurses on General Hospital. He plays himself. Simmons also has a syndicated television show where he preaches pound prevention and reduction.

Simmons, 32, was born Milton Teagle Simmons ("a crummy name, in addition to flat feet, asthma and hay fever - it was enough to drive anyone

He spent his adolescense and puberty fat. ("My father had a tough time explaining the facts of life to me. How do you explain it to a kid who only relates love to cookies and milk?")

But back to the now, the "'fessing up" that Simmons emphatically believes is the ONLY first step a fat person should contemplate. He has written down his philosophy and takes the reader step-by-step in his new

"Never-Say-Diet Book" (Warner Books, $14.50).
"Let me hear you say it: 'I'm fat,'" he demands. "'I'm pudgy, I've let myself go a bit. I don't have the body I used to have.' Shout it out.

"Now then, don't you feel better?" Simmons feels that once you've got that off your chest, you can start taking it off your hips, legs, arms, tummy and bottom. His next step is for you to take a good, hard look at yourself sans Omar

"Take a felt-tip pen to your bod and circle all your real estate that needs some work," he advises. "Let that fat know who's boss."

(There's still hope and salvation for those whose bodies look like a street guide to New York City after the felt-tip pen.)

Tons of Americans, if you will excuse the expression, suffer from being fat (mentally, emotionally and physically). Simmons said that one of the reasons so many Americans weigh so much is that they're always

"The diets never work - in fact, they have the reverse effect," he said. "After you've obeyed the strictures of the diet, you give yourself a treat - a 2,300-calories treat. And those who do manage to get down to their desired weight bask in the glory of new beauty for a week and then begin to Americans, too, he said, are brought up with a set of food antennae that would make a Martian proud.

("My food antennae were fully developed by the time I was 3," he said. "They would all but propel me to candy, cake and all the sugar products of inconsequential splendor.")

Pep talks and words of sympathy are abundant for the serious weight loser who picks up his book but, as in real life, Simmons has little patience for fatties looking for excuses not to take their bulky bodies seriously Simmons' past career in Italian films and television commercials keeps his sense of humor near the surface. "You're talking to a man who got the part of a pat of margarine," he said. "I did commercials for husky jeans, candy bars, soap and tires. I even appeared as a dancing meatball. I know the pain of only getting attention when someone's joking about your fat. I know what it's like to be

'And I know what it's like to make sure that it never happens again. I'm thin and healthy, and I intend to stay that way, no matter how much work it takes.

He talks about the importance of eating a good breakfast and suggests starting the day off with a drink consisting of 8 ounces of warm water. the juice of a freshly squeezed lemon, and one teaspoon of honey

"If you have irregular bathroom habits and want to keep your insides spick-and-span, mix this drink and continue on to your meal.")

He thinks fresh juices are best and has a warning for those selecting one of the frozen varieties:

"Please, please read the label. There are orange juice products these days that have never seen the inside of an orange - or the outside of Anita Lunch, too, is important. But...

'Remember, you are what you eat," he said. "And in these modern times if you're eating like a pilgrim, you are a turkey. Americans don't need hearty midday meals unless they're planning to spend the afternoon toiling in the fields, clearing land or driving

How about dinner? "More weight damage is done at dinner than at any other meal," Simmons said. "Most people just sit around after the big meal, leaving that food with no place to go but your hips."

Not that he suggests celery leafs and parsley. He justs reminds the reader to eat lightly.

And then comes the exercise: 'Breathe, take in some air through your nose," he said. "That's not my idea of a good sniff. Try it again. Think of Mark Spitz. Now blow it "That was pitiful. How do you expect that air to get inside your whole body when you are imitating a guppy in heat? I mean, really!

Obviously, Simmons doesn't own a pair of kid gloves. He doesn't think a fat person who owns up to being fat wants to be patronized. He's not insulting either, just emphatic.

At an outdoor restaurant one afternoon, Simmons observed two ladies ordering a third portion of Bearnaise sauce. Simmons to the rescue, he

"I walked over to the table, excused myself, picked up the bowl and poured the sauce all over myself. My only words, were something like 'I'd rather have this sauce all over me than in your insides.

I don't pull stunts to make fun of someone. Fat kills, I care about people who haven't learned yet to care about themselves.

The Intoxilyzer: Bad news for drinking drivers

By ED TODD

Drunk again? ·

Beware. You could find yourself in one heck of a predicament and, in your sobriety, might wonder about the sanity of that fellow who came up with the adage "Never trust a man who doesn't drink."

Norma Trolinder, for sure, wouldn't trust a fellow or gal who's soused and slap-happy or miserably drunk, particularly if the imbiber is driving on the public roads.

That's a no-no. It could get you an overnight stay in jail. More than that, your first misdemeanor conviction of driving while intoxicated could get you two vears in jail.

Your driver's license could be suspended, your job could be jeopardized, your reputation and self-esteem might be damaged, you might have to do some "tall taking" to the church deacons, and you might curse yourself and "the drink" for getting into a bind.

Don't cuss out the arresting lawman who "caught" you. Likely, he's just doing his job.

AND TO HELP PEACE officers do their job in getting collaborating evidence on DWI cases, law-enforcement agencies are replacing their older Breathalyzers with Intoxilyzers. Theoretically, both machines are equally accurate, but the Intoxilyzer approach lessens the human error factor in testing.

"This (Intoxilyzer) is a direct analysis," said Ms. Trolinder, a Midland Collegeinstructor who teaches law-enforcement officers the theory of the machine and how to operate it. The machine's infrared system "interacts with alcohol molecules in a particular. way," she explained.

One of the new machines, which, at this very moment is primed for use, is in the basement of the Midland County Courthouse. It has replaced the Breathalyzer, which was introduced

Ms. Trolinder recently lauded the virtues of the machine's computerized Intoxilyzer.

'So, it's foolproof?" asked the inquisitive County Judge Bill Ahders. "We never say absolutes, judge,"

Once picked up on "probable eause," a DWI suspect is handcuffed, hauled off the highways and into a cubicle at the entrance to the jailhouse, and held for 15 minutes before he or she is requested to inhale deeply and to exhale - blow - for five seconds. The exhaled breath is blown probably without gusto - into a tube leading to the computer. An analysis via infrared energy is made, and the computer prints the reading. If the "drunk machine" registers 0.10 percent of alcohol by weight, the subject is booked, fingerprinted, photographed, and possibly, thrown into jail for a night's stay to "sleep it off." Sometimes, the alleged "drunk" is allowed to bypass the overnight stay and goes home. Afterward, the defendant can contemplate a solution to his problem. He can plead guilty or nolo conten-dere and take a chance of getting a two-year probated sentence and fined from $50 to $500 on the misdemeanor offense. His driver's license is automatically suspended for a year. Or he can plead "not guilty," get a lawyer, and fight the case.

RECENTLY, A 27-year-old Midlander did just that, recalled County Attorney Robert Rendall, He lost.

Prosecutor Woody Leverett tried the case before a five-woman, oneman jury in Judge Ahders' court. The jury found the man guilty and, to the surprise of the defense counsel, prosecution and defendant himself, levied a six-month jail term and fined him.

It's a rare occasion that a jury will find a defendant guilty of DWI and even rarer to recommend a jail term, according to trial lawyers.

And a juror who might reason that he could be in the defendant's same 'pickle' may vote for acquittal. The juror may like an occasional beer, mixed drink or glass of wine.

And most any holiday celebrant who imbides and who drives on the public roads or highways is subject to getting a DWI citation

If a person gets subsequent DWI conviction, a felony, he could be sentenced to five years in the penitentiary. Too, the sentence could be probat-

A 0.10 PERCENT reading on the 'drunk machine" may tend to comfirm the arresting officer's suspicion - that the subject is intoxicated: The officer may deem that the person is "visibly drunk" if his eyes are dilated, if he is is staggering, or has slurred speech and his judgment is impaired.

"That (hindered judgment) is the main thing," said Ms. Trolinder. "Our (driving) skills don't do us any good if we don't have the right judgment.

The arresting officer's "probable cause" for checking out a potential DWI'er may be the proverbial 'weaving" down the highway, a traffic accident, speeding, running a stop sign or stop light, reckless driving or a myriad of reasons

HOW MUCH BOOZE does it take to get "legally intoxicated?"

"If you register 0.10 percent, you have drunk a heck of a lot of booze," said Ms. Trolinder.

But, there are many variables on how many bottles of beers, shots of whiskey, or glasses of wine are needed to make a person "drunk."

"When you go over three (beers or shots) in one hour, that's when you start having problems," Rendall

Variables include body weight, age, rate of metabolism, amount and types of food consumed, rate of consumption of the liquor, and other factors.

A "subject" may decline a test on the Intoxilyzer. 'If you refuse to take it (the breath-test), you're subject to having your license suspended," said Ms. Trolinder. She said about 30 percent of those arrested for DWI opt not to be

But DPS Capt. B.F. Wade said the breath-test could exonerate a person suspected of being intoxicated by al-

"IT'S A GREAT protection for the innocent. It really is," Wade said. Ms. Trolinder said that the Intoxilyzer should "get a pretty good workout during the holidays.

Sheriff's deputies and DPS troopers will take advantage of it. And Midland city police, who have two "drunk machines" and trained Intoxilyzer operators, likely soon will be writing DWI tickets instead of the more common "public drunkenness" citations.

And justification for the Intoxilyzer is just as clear:

'Its effect is to-try to cut down on people who get killed on the highway." Ms. Trolinder said.

HOWEY-IN-THE-HILLS, Fla. (AP) - This Central Florida community will play host next month to an Afghani official seeking money for the rebel cause in Soviet-occupied Afghanistan.

King Hassan I, pretender to the Afghan throne and son of the late Ohah Amanullah, will be the guest of honor at a fund-raising reception Jan.

The event was organized by Florida citrus producer William R. Hancock and Mitchell L. Werbel of Atlanta, who teaches anti-terrorist tactics to heads of state, bodyguards and law enforcement officers.

Hassan, whose father was overthrown in 1929, heads the Afghanistan Human Rights Commission in New York. He said the money he raises will be used to buy arms and medicine for rebel tribes and refugees. My goal is to raise money for the Afghanistan people," Hassan said. Mrs. Dole to advise on minority issues

WASHINGTON (AP) - Ronald Reagan on Saturday named Elizabeth Hanford Dole the assistant to the president for public liaison, making her the president-elect's chief adviser on issues affecting women and min-

Mrs. Dole is the first woman named to a high-level-post in the Reagan administration. The position does not have Cabinet status.

Mrs. Dole, a politically active Republican who is married to Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., had been mentioned as a leading contender for secretary of

In a statement released by his transition office here, Reagan called Mrs. Dole "one of the most qualified Republicans in the country." Marva Collins, a Chicago teacher who had also reportedly been considered for the education post, has taken herself out of the running, mean-

Mrs. Collins said in an interview published Saturday that she was not willing to leave the school she found-"My mission is still here ... It was really the children. They matter the most to me," she said. The appointment of Mrs. Dole to the liaison post does not require Senate confirmation.

Mrs. Dole posed for photographers but declined to answer questions about her new job, except to say she "delighted" with the appoint-

The liaison post attracted considerable attention during the Carter administration when President Carter's first appointee, Midge Costanza, resigned. She said she feared her commitment to women's issues could conflict with the loyalty she felt Carter had "a right to demand" from his

Ms. Costanza was replaced by Anne Wexler.

James Brady, a spokesman for the Reagan transition office, said Mrs. Dole would be working under Reagan's White House chief of staff, James Baker, but would have direct access to the president. He said the post would be expanded in the Reagan administration, and that Mrs. Dole would assume some of the duties of Carter's present chief of staff, Jack Watson. The statement said Mrs. Dole would be responsible for one of "the major out-reach functions" in the White House, and for ensuring that views of various interest groups are considered by the president.

Mrs. Dole, a former member of the Federal Trade Commission, is a key member of the Reagan transition

After her husband abandoned his presidential campaign earlier this year, she joined the Reagan "truth squad," which toured the country explaining his position.

New advisor helped draw rules that GOP attacked

WASHINGTON (AP) - Elizabeth Hanford Dole has a sympathy for government regulation that is unusual among those around Presidentelect Ronald Reagan.

For 51/2 years, Mrs. Dole was a member of the Federal Trade Commission, and she saw her position as an opportunity to defend the "vulner-- the elderly, the very young, the disadvantaged and the handi-

In her new role as adviser to the president for public liason, she will have a similar opportunity, as the job traditionally centers on issues af-the FTC's authority to police the marketplace, although passage came after she had left the commission to join the abortive presidential campaign of her husband, Sen. Bob Dole,

One of her last major acts as commissioner was a Las Vegas speech to a convention of homebuilders warning the building industry to reduce housing defects or face "hard-hitting regulation.

Even before she was named to the FTC, she was an advocate of federal action to protect consumers.

Mrs. Dole was a staff assistant at what used to be the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, where she specialized in education of the handicapped. She then became deputy director of the Office of Consumer Affairs in the Nixon adminis-

On the campaign trail, her North Carolina drawl and quick smile projected a friendliness that sometimes contrasted with her more conservative husband, who is known for his biting sense of humor and strong partisanship.

In 1976, when her husband ran for vice president on the ticket headed by Gerald R. Ford, Mrs. Dole took nine-week leave of absence from the FTC to participate in the campaign, which was unsuccessful.

She was criticized for holding on to her FTC position while campaigning for her husband.

But when Sen. Dole was considering whether he should seek the 1980 GOP nomination, she resigned from the commission before anyone could level charges of conflict of interest.

After Reagan's election, she became the most visible woman in the President-elect's transition team.

She was named director of the team's human services group, which made recommendations for the departments of Health and Human Services, Housing and Urban Development and Education, as well as AC-TION and the Community Services Administration.

Mrs. Dole's political views sometimes have contrasted with those of Reagan. For example, she has supported the Equal Rights Amendment, which Reagan opposes.

She was a political independent when named to the FTC, but registered as a Republican after her 1975 marriage to the Republican senator.

Polish families use rations to buy meat for Christmas

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Nearly a quarter of Warsaw's 1 million people have already used their Christmas rationing coupons to buy meat, the Warsaw government said Saturday.

There were long lines at meat shops on the third day that residents were permitted to use December rationing coupons for at least 500 grams - or 1.1 pounds - of choice meat for Christmas dinner.

Delegates from 135 factories in central Poland continued a protest over food shortages in their area and two dissidents were on a hunger strike, it was reported. Czechoslovakia's Communist Party newspaper, Rude Pravo, issued what appeared to be another warning to Poland that "the leading role of the Communist Party is irreplaceable" in a Soviet-bloc nation. The comment was made in an article about the situation in Czechoslovakia before the Soviet-led intervention there that ended a liberalization program in 1968. It served as a reminder of reports that the Soviets and their East European allies have deployed troops on Poland's borders for possible intervention if union-government confrontations in the wake of Poland's summer of labor unrest get out of hand. Communist Party Leader Stanislaw Kania issued a strong attack on dissidents Saturday at a party meeting in Warsaw preparing for the 1981 special party congress. He was quoted by the state news agency PAP as saying, "There is a sharp political fight going on in our country.

"There are people in Poland who not only have not reconciled themselves with socialism but who are not trying to hide their counter-revolu-

It was believed he referred to anti-communist dissidents, such as the tionary efforts.' two hunger strikers, and not the independent unionists. PAP reported he said Poland must resolve its economic problems "in accordance with socialist principles, using the experience of our fraternal countries and

Deputy Warsaw Mayor Izabela Karwacinska issued an appeal in the party newspaper Trybuna Ludu that people not flock into the center of the city for their meat and to use outlying stores as well.

Mrs. Karwacinska said authorities had agreed to boost the ration to 750 grams (1.65 pounds) if the meat included bones. The Christmas ration system, effective in December only, also covers hams, smoked meats

A more permanent meat and butter rationing system is expected to start and butter. in February. It will include poultry, a category excluded from the Christmas allotments. Chronically short supplies of meat and other foodstuffs have been increased for the holidays in past years, but the country has not had rationing since just after World War II. As in past years, the arrival of extra supplies is expected to end at Christmastime. Residents of areas outside Warsaw were issued different colored coupons to prevent them from entering the capital to seek meat. Officials said the city shops were having difficulty maintaining enough stock to cope with Warsaw residents alone.

Solidarity, the nation's largest independent trade union, said that in the central Polish district of Piotrkow, worker representatives continued their protest into a second day because the area only got 40 percent of the average Christmas meat allocation

The union, which was formed out of agreements ending the summer's labor unrest, said local authorities had agreed to increase the rations but the sit-in continued because officials had not issued coupons to match

Supporters of dissidents Zygmunt Golawski and Wojiech Ziembinski said the two were fasting to protest their detention, but did not elaborate. The supporters said they did not know when Golawski began his strike, but that Ziembinski started his fast earlier this month.

Details of Golsawski's arrest were not known. Ziembinski, who is openly anti-communist, was seized Nov. 11 at a demonstration at the Tomb of Poland's Unknown Soldier in Warsaw. It was not known if the two had been

Kremlin announces death of former Premier Kosygin

MOSCOW (AP) - The Soviet Union on Saturday formally announced the death of former Premier Alexei N. Kosygin more than 48 hours after he suffered a fatal heart attack and said he would be buried on Red Square, an honor reserved for the nation's favored top leaders.

Kosygin's death Thursday at the age of 76 while under treatment at a government clinic was confirmed by Tass, the official news agency, at midday Saturday.

It was also reported extensively Saturday evening by the government daily Izvestia and Soviet television, but was not mentioned by the party newspaper Pravda Soviet and diplomatic sources leaked the news to Western correspondents Friday.

Tass said Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev, who celebrated his 74th birthday Friday, and other Soviet leaders had decided to bury Kosygin "on Red Square near the Kremlin Wall" - a site reserved for top Soviet leaders who are in good standing when the die.

It was thought that the announcement of Kosygin's death was withheld so as not to detract from testimonials to Brezhnev. The announcement of the Red Square burial site ended speculation that Kosygin may have resigned in political disfavor.

Premier Nikolai A. Tikhonov, 75, who replaced the ailing Kosygin Oct. 23, was named to direct funeral arrangements but further details were not given. It was believed the burial would be Tuesday.

Izvestia said Kosygin's remains will lie in state Monday.

There were no outward signs of public mourning for Kosygin in downtown Moscow, which was thronged with crowds shopping for the New Year's holiday.

Soviets who heard the news Friday via Western radio broadcasts expressed sadness at Kosygin's death. One Russian said the former premier was widely respected as a man who had maintained his high posts without a pretentious life style. Stressing that Kosygin remained in favor after 16 years as the No. 2 man in the Communist hierarchy, Izvestia carried his death notice at the bottom of page one and devoted a quarter of page two to his portrait, obituary and final medical bulletin. In contrast, Nikita S. Khrushchev, the former premier who died in 1971 while out of favor, received only a one-line death notice in Pravda, the Communist Party daily. He was buried privately, without a state funeral, at a Moscow cemetery three miles from the Kremlin.

Kosygin was part of the triumvirate that ousted Khrushchev from power in 1964. Brezhnev gradually became the dominant figure, adding the Soviet presidency to his original post as Communist Party chief by shunting Nikolai V. Podgorny aside in

Kosygin, who was praised in the obituary for directing the Soviet economy and helping direct foreign policy, remained an influential force until his retirement two months ago because of what officials called ill-

Soviet television reported Kosygin's death extensively as the fifth item on the main evening national news program. His portrait was shown, bordered in red and black mourning colors, and a newscaster read the official obituary.

The newscaster did not mention that Kosygin's remains would lie in state Monday and there was no reference to the medical bulletin - which was regarded as unsually informative by Western observers.

The Soviet statement on his medical history showed his determination to remain in power, even with massive heart and circulatory ailments. The bulletin, signed by eight Soviet physicians, said Kosygin suffered "for a lengthy period from arteriosclerosis of the heart and brain arteries, complicated in 1976 by a suberachnoid hematoma (brain hemorrhage) and repeated, massive transmural myocardial infarctions (heart attacks) in October 1979 and August 1980.

The brain hemorrhage and two heart attacks resulted in Kosygin's long absences from public which wer not fully explained at the time by Soviet officials.

Shortly after returning from a state visit to Iraq and Syria in the summer of 1976, Kosygin dropped out of sight from July 22 to Oct. 18. From the medical bulletin, it was apparent that he had suffered a brain hemorrhage.

Following a trip to Ethiopia in the fall of 1979, Kosygin again disappeared from public view from Oct. 27 to last Feb. 21. This would conform with the October 1979 heart attack mentioned in the bulletin.

Kosygin's last public appearance was Aug. 3 at the closing ceremony of the 1980 Moscow Olympics. The medical statement also mentions a heart attack that month. Soviet sources had reported him ill Aug. 17.

The death notice did not reveal where or exactly when Kosygin died.

Colonel Harland Sanders buried in his white suit

(AP) - With more than 1,200 people attending in sub-freezing weather, fried-chicken entrepreneur Col. Harland Sanders was buried Saturday wearing the white double-breasted suit that he made famous. Entertainer Pat Boone sang "What A Friend We Have In Jesus" and "He Touched Me" during the funeral services for his friend at the Alumni Chapel of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. Sanders had asked Boone last year to sing at his funeral.

Boone said Sanders, who founded and became the international symbol of the Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant chain, was an ambassador of good will.

"All around the world there are people who don't speak English," Boone said, "but feel this little round man with a white goatee is their friend. And he is."

Also attending the services were Gov. John Y. Brown Jr., who made his fortune when he bought the Kentucky Fried Chicken business from Sanders, and Lt. Gov. Martha Layne Collins. Sanders, who was 90, gave generously to the Boy Scouts and numerous other charities. Sanders' body was taken to Cave Hill Cemetery were he was buried at a site he had selected in 1973. It lies in the shadow of a granite-columned monument and a bronze bust of his likeness sculpted by his daughter Margaret.

Sanders founded Kentucky Fried Chicken, with its secret recipe of 11 herbs and spices, 25 years ago after retiring from his restaurant business in Corbin, Ky Brown, then a young businessman, built the company into a worldwide multimillion-dollar empire after buying it from Sanders for $2 million in 1964. Brown later sold the company, which retained Sanders as a public relations spokesman and symbol, to Heublein Inc. for $250 million.

Fire officials said the blaze may have been caused by an electrical system "overloaded with extension cords, improper wiring and too many appliances." Officials said the fire had nothing to do with Christmas decorations

Fire Chief Inspector John Zamary said the fire apparently broke out shortly after midnight near the only door of the two-story home where Jessie Evans, 48, had lived for 10 to 15

He said the entryway was in flames when firefighters arrived, and it would have been "difficult if not impossible" for the victims to have escaped" without assistance.

Dallas suicide victim may have been 'Jogging Bandit' who robbed six S&Ls

ROCKWALL, Texas (AP) - A Dallas man robbed a savings and loan company at gunpoint, led police on a high-speed, two-county chase, ex-changed gunfire with pursuing officers, then killed himself when the officers surrounded his wrecked car, according to police.

But the suicide did not close the investigation. The FBI is taking a 'close and hard look" at the possibility that the dead man may have been the "Jogging Bandit," responsible for six other armed robberies at area savings and loan companies during the past year, said FBI special agent Tom Yanessa.

"His description matches that of the 'jogging bandit,' as did the car he was driving," he said.

Dallas-area police say an armed robber wearing a jogging suit has robbed at least six savings and loan institutions since March. The man who killed himself to conclude Friday's chase was identified as Richard L. Edgin, 35, of Dallas, a professional photographer.

The events that led to his death began when a gunman entered the Rockwall office of Greenville Mutual Savings and Loan, forced two employees to lie on the floor and scooped $901

Boll weevils 'over-wintering'

STANTON — The pesky, hardy and cotton-threatening boll weevil appears to be "success-fully over-wintering" in the Sand Spring-Coahoma and Vincent areas of Howard County, according to David Foster, entomologist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

No over-wintering beetles were trapped in Upton and Midland Counties in 1980, Foster re-

"Boll weevil activity over the last four years indicates that there are no suitable habitat for over-wintering weevils (in Midland and Upton counties)," he reported. Some boll weevils were trapped in October and November, he said. But he noted that those fall trap catches are "to be expected due to fall migration of boll weevils," he

In 1980, Howard County boll weevil trap records indicated that only 17 out of 90 traps caught the June, reported Foster, who serves Martin, Howard, Glasscock, Upton and Reagan counties. In 1979, 12 out of 64 traps caught over-wintering

Cotton prices hold firm

ABILENE — Cotton prices were "firm to slightly higher" last week and were 33½ to 35½ cents per pound over the Commodity Credit Corp. (CCC) loan values for Staple 31 or longer cotton. Staple 30 or shorter cotton sold for 28 to 32 cents per pound over the CCC loan values.

Cottonseed prices paid producers at gins were steady to $10 per ton lower and ranged from $110 to $130 per ton.

So far this season, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's cotton division in Abilene has classed on 72,000 samples of cotton. At this time last year, the division had classed 568,000 samples. The decline is due to the 1980 drought and to September rains which damaged what cotton was in the fields and ready for harvesting.

Feedlot use reduced

AUSTIN - Texas cattle feeders sharply reduced the number of animals placed into feedlots during November, reported Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown.

"During November, Texas cattle feeders placed 330,000 head into feedyards, a 19 percent drop from a year ago," the commissioner said. With the marketing of fat cattle from feedyards also down substantially, the total number on feed at the first of December remained unchanged from a year ago.

Wheat pastures in the Panhandle and on the Low Plains are generally in poor condition due to a lack of moisture. And with less grazing, beef producers will be forced to rely on heavy supplemental feeding or to sell off additional calves. Snowfall and scattered showers in late November helped improve some stands, but additional moisture is needed to promote growth," Brown said.

Livestock show slated

HOUSTON - The Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo will open with the horse show event on Feb. 21, and the "world's largest" livestock show will begin on Feb. 25 in the Astrohall. The rodeo will open Feb. 27 in the Astrodome.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) - Stacy Magowan has received a $1,000 reward for helping to catch two men who tried to break into a tool truck, but she says all the credit belongs to her infant son, Adam, who vasn't even born at the time.

David Magowan, a plumber for Precision Mechan-ical Corp., had parked a company truck outside their nome one night in October 1979. Inside the truck were several thousand dollars worth of tools.

About 3:30 a.m. Adam signaled his imminent arrival. Awakened, Mrs. Magowan heard the truck eing broken into and police were called.

Parvovirus serum may be released

By KAY CRITES

For those who have been faithfully taking their canine friends in for their Parvovirus shots every three months, a respite may be in the offing.

A canine Parvovirus serum, good for a year, has been developed, and is currently awaiting approval by the Food and Drug Administration. According to a spokesman in one Midland veterinarian's office, the serum may be released in the early part of

Currently, vets are using the feline distemper vaccine to battle the often fatal disease, but the distemper vaccine is extremely short lived — three months. Most veterinarians suggest that dogs be vaccinated, return in two weeks for a second vaccination and then return every three months for Those that don't return are subjecting their pet to the hazards of the disease.

Parvovirus was discovered in May 1978 by the Texas Veterinarian Diagnostic Lab at College Sta-

In that same year, it spread to the east coast, across the United States and even into the Austria-Belgium area.

Now the virus has spread world-wide. Hawaii is currently suffering a severe epidemic. The disease is caused by a virus that is very similar to the one that causes feline distemper thus the use of the feline distemper vaccine to battle the often deadly disease. Symptoms include vomiting, bloody diarrhea, depression, loss of appetite and rapid dehydration. Mortality rate is usually between 10 and 20 percent.

Puppies are very susceptible to the virus, which sometimes causes sudden death syndrome where dogs suffer heart failure.

"We have a lot to learn about it in terms of immunity," said a spokesman for the Texas Veterinary Diagnostic Lab late this week. "I guess we will probably never figure out how this came about. It's kind of like asking how did life come into Parvovirus, the smallest virus known to man, is extremely hardy. Whereas most viruses die outside the body within a matter of hours or maybe months, the Parvovirus can survive for three to six months and possibly a year depending on the conditions.

Once a dog has contracted the disease there is no specific treatment for the virus. Dogs are treated for the symptoms, such as dehydration and vomiting.

Midland has had several outbreaks of the disease, and Midland vets are still seeing several cases per week, although several said the number had de "It's quieted down," said Dr. Susie Chandler with .20 Solitaire the Animal Clinic. "We haven't been seeing quite as how much environment plays in this virus.' A spokesman at Green's Animal Clinic said the number of cases had let up some, "but we are still seeing some cases and some dogs are still dying from it in Midland." she said.

Tall City Veterinary Hospital has seen no appreciable decrease. "This week hasn't been too bad, but I would say we have been seing probably 10 to suspected cases a week and three or four definite

County expected to ponder Monahans Draw problems

Midland County commissioners may find themselves wading in a murky dilemma at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday, when they discuss problems possibly stemming from Monahans Draw.

The river-like-stream that winds from Odessa to south of Midland has been overflowing on occasion, breeding mosquitoes, sprouting salt cedar, harboring ducks and, possibly, polluting underground waters with effluent run-off from the Odessa Sewage Treatment Plant.

Jewel Smith, administrator of the Midland City-County Health Department, late last week reportedly drew samples of water from various points along the draw and was to test or to have tested the contents of the water. He is to report on his findings at the commissioners meeting in the Midland County Courthouse.

Midland County residents who live or work along or near the draw are to confer with the commissioners on their plight and/or concerns.

Commissioner Win Brown, who has been critical of Odessa's use of the draw, has termed the drainage basin an "abomination." The Texas Water Quality Board has deemed the draw a "navigable stream" and OK'd Odessa's dumping of treated sewage waters into the draw.

In other business, the commissioners are to: -Consider the county's revenue bonds for converting into home mortgage loans, -Consider a resolution honoring Jack Merritt, 76, long-time Midland County constable who died in office last June.

-Consider a resolution requiring the state to pay for court-appointed counsel in capital cases.

-Consider a $1 increase for the daily Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) program and state paid rates for foster homes institu-

The demonstrators, many members of the Eastside Coalition against

Baby born

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) - A woman gave birth on a sidewalk after being turned away by hospital officials who said they thought delivery was not imminent.

Nellie Flores, who speaks little English, tried to get a room Friday night at the county hospital because she thought she was ready to have her child. Officials said she had plenty of time and turned her away.
Within minutes a few blocks away, the Threadgill family heard a knock on their door while they were having an early Christmas party.

'This man began banging on the front door. He was shouting, 'Come quick — the baby!'" said Helene Threadgill.

Family members ran out and found Mrs. Flores on the ground and her husband nearby. There was no time to even bring the woman inside.

'We wanted to help her inside, but the baby was just born right there on the sidewalk," said Ms. Threadgill. "It was almost like the Christmas story," she said in reference to Mrs. Flores' being unable to find a room to have her baby. "The baby was so

Explosions injure three cal barge was rocked by two explosions when leaking naptha gas ignited early Saturday, authorities said. A crewman was critically burned in the first blast, and the second injured three firefighters, including one who was knocked into the chilly Arthur Kill waterway

Officials said two other firemen suffered minor injuries when they jumped into the water to rescue their colleague, who was burdened by an airpack

Deputy Fire Chief John Sheren said officials had not determined what set off the gas, which was leaking from a valve on the barge High Grade 42.

The first blast engulfed crew member Ted Campbell, 40, of Bridgeport, Conn., in flames. He was reported in critical condition at Bayonne General Hospital with third degree burns over most of his body

As firemen battled the fire on the 180-foot barge, a buildup of gas in the engine room exploded, knocking Robert Soloway, 40, over the side, authorities said. He suffered a dislocated and broken left shoulder and sec-

Also injured in the second blast their second safety investigation in were firefighters William Eng, 30, who suffered a concussion, and Richard Burroughs, 39, who suffered burns and cuts. Firefighters Austin McCabe and Darius Dziedzic, who jumped into the water to rescue Soloway, were treated for exposure and released.

Coast Guard Chief Warrant Officer Michael Fiorillo said the High Grade 42 was loading naptha, a volatile petroleum-based cleaning liquid, when the captain noticed a leak in the pump

"He then took the barge to Standard Tank. Cleaners on the waterfront to have the naptha removed. Somewhere in the removal process, there were multiple explosions," Fiorillo

Sheren said firefighters from Bayonne and two Coast Guard ships and two New York City fireboats flooded the barge's pump and engine room with foam and sprayed water to cool the exterior bulkheads.

The barge, with a capacity of 500,-000 barrels, was severely damaged by the explosion, he said.

Gas well filled with mud to diminish explosion threat

RANGELY, Colo. (AP) - Workers Manning Drilling Co, Hilkey said. were filling a leaking natural gas well with mud Saturday as officials stood by in case evacuation became necessary for the 2,000 residents of this oil town in western Colorado.

The danger of explosions and fires from the leak appeared to be diminishing as the mud-sealing operation progressed, said Sheriff Ron Hilkey of Rio Blanco County

On Friday, a trailer home exploded when gas originating from the well leaked up through a water well into pipes in the home, Hilkey said. The trailer home was destroyed but no one was injured.

Between 75 and 100 persons checked for gas concentrations in the town throughout the night as the well was filled with mud and water by the R.L.

Authorities believed the gas leak was set off when a drilling rig on the west side of town broke into a large, unmapped cavity of gas, said Rich Levengood, acting town manager. He said officials were afraid during the night that a fire might break out in the gas cavity and travel up any of hundreds of abandoned wells in Range-

Hilkey said that sheriff's deputies and crews checking for gas concentrations in the town were finding only "very minute escapes of gas, nothing at all to be alarmed about.

"We have plans in place for evacuation (but) I don't think there's going to be any evacuation," he said. "It looks like the gas is dissipating and if the levels keep getting lower, there's less and less alarm.

Despite war, Iranian oil continues to go to allies

By The Associated Press

Iran is exporting oil without difficulty through the Persian Gulf and selling it to its allies despite its 90day-old war with Iraq, Iran's deputy minister of oil said Saturday. He said Iraqi oil production had ceased.

Meanwhile, diplomatic sources in Damascus, the Syrian capital, reported a series of explosions last week in Iraq's oil center of Kirkuk had brought Iraqi crude oil supplies exported via Syria - to a total halt. There was no immediate comment

Hasan Sadat, who headed Iran's delegation to last week's meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in Indonesia, told w news conference in Tehran that Iran's first priority in resuming oil exports was to look after its friends "who have helped us during the war."

Sadat said the second priority was to supply countries who did not participate in the U.S.-sponsored economic embargo against Iran following the seizure of the 52 U.S. hostages 413

We will sell to countries that helped us during the U.S. sanctions," said Sadat. He has directed Iranian oil affairs since Oil Minister Monammed Jawad Bequir Tunguyen was taken prisoner in late September by Iraqi troops near Iran's oil refining city of Abadan.

Sadat mentioned no countries by name and refused to disclose how much oil Iran was exporting, saying the matter was considered a military

'The Iragis are ready to spend a lot of money to know the amount of oil we are exporting," he said. Asked about Iraqi exports, Sadat said Iran had learned through intelligence reports that Iraq was not producing oil at this

Sadat also indicated negotiations had resumed with the Soviet Union over the resumption of exports of natural gas. Gas exports were cut off nearly a year ago when the Soviets balked at stiff price increases imposed by Iran.

Mideast analysts in Beirut have said Iran was getting out some exports through the Persian Gulf oil terminals on the islands of Kharg, 120 miles southeast of the embattled Shatt al-Arab estuary, and Levan, 400 miles south of the waterway. The analysts said there were no firm estimates of Iranian exports but they were believed to be in the vicinity of 100,000 barrels daily compared to pre-war figures of 700,000 to 900,000 barrels a day Asked which countries Iran might be supplying at this time, the analysts named North Korea as a country that backed Iran in the war and might now be receiving Iranian oil.

They said countries which had not joined the U.S.-led boycott and might e receiving Iranian supplies could include India, Taiwan, the Philippines and Socialist Bloc countries like Romania and East Germany.

An East German tanker recently loaded up Iranian crude at a Gulf oil facility, the analysts said.

The diplomatic sources in Damascus said "explosive charges blew up at the electricity generating stations in Kirkuk," the Iraqi oil center 150 miles north of Baghdad in northeast

They said the explosions occurred last Tuesday and Wednesday and Iraq was no longer transporting oil to the Syrian terminal at Banias. Last week, sources in the Syrian capital reported technical problems may have stopped the flow of oil through a second pipeline to the Mediterranean port of Dortvol in Turkey.

Iraq had been pumping an average 300,000 barrels a day through Banias and 400,000 barrels a day through the Turkish port of Dortvol after its 3.2 million barrel-a-day exports were in-terrupted because of the war.

On Thursday, Iran claimed to strike a heavy blow to Iraq's southern oil installations at Fao with an artillery bombardment that cut the highway linking Iraq's main Persian Gulf oil terminal with the rest of the coun-

North Carolina won't retry Wilmington 10

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - North Carolina has decided not to retry the Wilmington 10, but the 10 may file civil suit against the state seeking compensation in the 1971 firebombing case that "shattered and disrupted" their lives.

"If the state had apologized, we would not even seriously consider taking civil action. But the arrogant attitude encourages us to take action against the state," the Rev. Ben Chavis said in New York.

Attorney General Rufus Edmisten and Wilmington's District Attorney Allen Cobb announced separately Thursday that they would not pursue new prosecutions.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Dec. 4 had set aside the group's 1972 conviction on charges related to the firebombing of a whiteowned grocery store in Wilmington during racial disturbances in 1971.

The state could have sought a new trial after that decision, but Edmisten said such a course "would serve no useful purpose for the citizens of our state.

He added, however, that he did not want his action "to imply that I agree with the federal appeals court."

The convictions had been overturned on procedural grounds, he contended, and the appeals court had not ruled on the guilt or innocence of the defendants - nine black men and one white woman. "The major reason for my conclusion not to pursue this matter further is that these defendants have all served active prison sentences and have long been released on paroie, Edmisten said. Cobb added that new prosecution would be "impractical if not impossible" since the state's principal witness had repudiated earlier testi-Charlotte lawyer James E. Fergupeople's victory. But he added that "in the first place we knew we were innocent and, secondly, the state never had an authentic case against us.

In the time between the conviction and its reversal, backers of the 10 had contended the defendants were political prisoners and victims of racial injustice.

Amnesty International, the London-based group that won a Nobel Peace Prize, once cited the Wilmington 10 as political prisoners.

The Soviet Union also had pointed to the group's conviction as an example of human rights violations in the United States

Machines making it big in Japan

TOKYO — Machines have taken over Japan. They have become the life support system of the current frenetic pace of Japanese life and the backbone of its industrial and economic success.

Japanese cars, for example, are currently enjoying worldwide sales success partly because much of their assembly at home has been automated.

Robots, really only industrial machines linked to a computer, now carry out almost all the assembly lines' welding work, and are gradually taking over in other areas like bodypainting, where perfection is demanded.

Greece sees slow signs change

Associated Press Writer

ATHENS, Greece (AP) - A few signs of social change are creeping into Greece with nude bathing on the beaches, sexually explicit plays in a few theaters and girlie magazines on the streets - unthinkable 10 years

But old traditions die hard. The powerful Greek Orthodox Church is striking back against what it sees as permissiveness in Greek society; and conservative attitudes about the role of women, premarital sex, abortion and adultery are still pervasive.

"I think nudity is fine, but if it were my wife or daughter I'd kill her," said one man in an Athens bar, reflecting the attitude of many Greek men toward social change and women's Nude bathing is popular on a few beaches, especially among foreign tourists, but police have cracked down and arrested many nudists.

Earlier this year, a Greek Orthodox bishop and supporters besieged a hotel which catered to nudists, mostly German tourists. A few threw rocks at the nudists and the group gave them a 24-hour ultimatum to get dressed or get out.

A Greek actress who appeared naked on stage in a production criticizing the morals of a bishop was arrested and given a five-month sentence, after the Greek Orthodox Church complained about the play.

Sexually explicit magazines were completely banned in Greece until the mid-1970s. Then they were allowed to be sold on the streets, but only if private parts were covered by black stars. Now the black stars are no longer required. Few people used drugs in Greece until 10 years ago. Now, partly because of the influx of foreigners and tourists, drug use is becoming more common

The penalties for drugs are extremely severe and no distinction is made between hard and soft drugs. Trading in drugs can bring a prison sentence of up to 20 years. Drug addicts are by no means as common in Athens as in other Western cities, but young people are becoming more adventurous in trying soft drugs, imitating their foreign contemporaries. Although abortion and adultery are illegal and condemned by the Church, thousands of abortions are performed clandestinely each year, and a new women's group, the Union for Women's Rights, is lobbying to make adultery merely grounds for divorce - not a crime.

Aliki Marangopoulou, a sociologist and president of the Union for Women's Rights, said that, despite the group's efforts, women in Greece still accepted their passive, second-

'Although professionally, Greekwomen are among the most adventurous, when it comes to the family situation they continue to accept being a second-class citizen," Mrs.

Marangopoulou said

Although there is no difference in the law on adultery between men and women, Mrs. Marangopoulou said that in practice women were accused and found guilty more than men.

Syria fires heavy shelling into southern Lebanese towns

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Syria fired nearly 1,000 shells into southern Lebanese towns Saturday and claimed to hit Israeli tanks 24 hours after an Israeli anti-guerrilla raid killed three Syrians. Israel denied its tanks were in the Christian-held

The shelling, which raised concerns about a possible direct Syrian-Israeli confrontation, was described by the Syrian military command in Damascus as retaliation for the Israeli strike against Palestinian bases in southern Lebanon

But in New York, a U.N. spokesman said United Nations peacekeeping forces in the area reported to Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim that they had no evidence of Syrian involvement in the shelling of the Christian militia stronghold. There was no explanation of the conflicting reports.

The shelling was the first time that Syria's 22,000-man "Arab Deterrent Force" has officially been engaged in the fighting between Palestinian guerrillas and the Israeli-backed Christian forces since Syrian troops moved into Lebanon in 1976 to quell a 19-month Christian-Moslem civil

The Israeli attack prompted a statement of concern Friday from the U.S. State Department, which said "any action by the Israeli defense forces involving Syrian forces represents a dangerous new element.

Israel claimed its forces killed 10-15 guerrillas, and one Israeli was killed and three wounded. The military command said all Israeli forces were withdrawn and denied Syrian claims that its tanks were in Lebanese towns held by Israeli-backed Lebanese Christian militiamen

The Syrian shooting at dawn Saturday drew fire from the Christian militia and 46 rounds hit encampments of U.N. peacekeepers from Norway and Ghana without causing injuries, U.N. sources said.

Sources close to the nine-nation, 6,000-member U.N. force that acts as a buffer between the antagonists said the apparently "intentional" shelling came from the direction of Palestinian and Syrian guns. And the U.N. spokesman in New York said the people," according to the broadcast. Syrian planes have scrambled in the past to confront Israeli jets, which are frequently seen over Lebanon. Ten Soviet-made Syrian MiG jets have been shot down by U.S.-made Israeli fighters since June 1979, the last one downed in southern Lebanon Aug. 24, 1980.

But Syrian ground forces have keep their southernmost positions well north of the Litani River. Israel said it would not tolerate Syrian forces' crossing the river which it considers to be a "red line."

The three Syrian troops killed by artillery fire Friday were at Rihan, the closest Syrian post to the border with Israel - about 12 miles from the

Meanwhile, a spokesman for United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, James Holger, reached at U.N. headquarters in southern Lebanon from Tel Aviv, said a "very strong protest" had been made to the Palestine Liberation Organization in Beirut after Saturday's shelling.

U.N. officials said 26 shells fell on the Norwegian camp at Ebel Es-Saki and 20 on the neighboring Ghanaian camp located about two miles east of Mariavoun

James Holger said "it is just short of miraculous that no one was hurt" but added it was not clear if Syrian forces fired the shells as Israel

In New York, Waldheim's spokesman Francois Giuliani said that according to UNIFIL, "Marjayoun was shelled from the north for 20 minutes this morning. However, UNIFIL has no evidence of Syrian participation in this action.'

The area to the immediate north of the UNIFIL sector is controlled by Palestinian guerrillas and beyond them are some 30,000 Syrian troops.

Giuliani said the rockets were from Palestinian guerrilla positions. The U.N. peacekeeping mandate was renewed last week for six months, but the antagonists have complained that U.N. forces have not

The Palestinian news agency said three Palestinian commandos were killed and another injured when a land mine exploded under a vehicle in southern Lebanon. The agency did not specify where the incident occurred but said it believed the mine had been planted by the Israelis during Friday's attack.

Tourist takes long look at TV

Bruce Beard is a se-nior at James Madison University in Harrison-burg, Va., who is spending a semester as an exchange student at the University of London.

By BRUCE BEARD Special to The Washington Post

LONDON - When I first came to London, one of the things I was looking forward to was British television. I meant to see all the tourist sights and not a few pubs, but I did intend to study the English version of the boob tube. This was England, where they watch "I, Claudius" instead of soap operas, and "Monty Python" instead of situation comedies.

The other night I watched Richard Strauss' "Salome." Not something one would be likely to see on ABC, but there it was, opera in prime time on Saturday night, a joint production from BBC2 and Radio 3.

With no commercials. But I have had a few disappointments. The biggest thing in British television is "Dallas." J.R. T-shirts and buttons are just as prevalent here as in the United

IN FACT, most of the really popular shows on English television are American imports: "Bo-nanza," "Starsky and Hutch," "Star Trek," "Tom and Jerry," "Buck Rogers," "M-A-S-H," "Paris," "Battlestar Galactica" and old movies, especially gang-ster movies and westerns. Throw in "CHiPs" and "Hart to Hart." Many of the British-made shows are similar to American series. There is a show called "The Gentle Touch," which is the British version of "Police Woman." Maggie Forbes is a slender brunette, but otherwise she's Pepper Anderson all over — a sweet, hard-working, conscientious cop who gets personally involved in every case.

"Monty Python" no longer runs, and the only time I've seen a member of the group was when John Cleese was on a "Peter Cook and Co." special. It was quite good, if you like tall, thin British comedians.

RIGHT NOW I'm watching a superbly corny Judy Garland (as a child) movie. And "The Muppet Show" with Tony Randall is also showing.

British stations don't start running shows until 8 a.m. and stop by mid-night. BBC1 and 2 have no commercials. Thames Television has commercials, but only one break in a half-hour show and two in an hour show.
Not all shows are multiples of 30 minutes. A show can be 50 minutes or 75. Once when a program ran over, instead of cutting into the next show, they merely an-nounced that everything else would be pushed back 17 minutes.

DAYTIME TV consists mostly of semi-educational variety shows geared to children, old movies and sports events - rugby and soccer mostly, with cricket, tennis, darts and golf. I have yet to see a soap opera, but I have seen a couple of ludicrous sitcoms and game shows. News about the United States isn't generally big here, although there was heavy coverage of the election and apparent "developments" in the Iranian crisis.

TV must benefit from the high cost ($7 and up) of movies here. Incidentally, they have commer-cials before and between movies, and most of the ads are really elaborate.

Commercials here run in 3- or 4-minute blocks. There are no cigarette, pipe or cigar commer-cials. There are alcohol commercials, and, sin of sins, they drink the alcohol on camera. And the commercials here employ scantily clad women, whether or not they have anything to do with the product. I've seen obviously braless women on watch com-mercials. There aren't as many musical jingles in ads here, but some of them are equally silly.

Reagan's think tank in place

By TOM EASTHAM Hearst Special News Service

WASHINGTON President-elect Ronald Reagan recently put into place a team of professionals — heavily weighted with Californians — who will help him formulate the agenda for his first 100 days as president.

Called the Office of Policy Coordination, the group of issue spcialists will function as sort of a transition think tank. Its primary mission will be to see how Reagan can carry out his campaign promises, said Darrell M. Trent — who was named director. A former campaign advisor, Trent is on leave of absence as associate director and a senior advisor in the Hoover Institution at Stanford University. Four other Californians will serve in top-level positions. The team's main job will be to take the masses of reports on dozens of issues, plus those from transition teams now winding up their jobs at federal agencies, and merge them into recommendations that mesh with Reagan's campaign statements. "We will cull the reports and make recommendations, and we will make sure the recommendations are consistent with commitments made by the presidentelect," said Trent, who said the emphasis will be on "what happens after January 20" — the date of Reagan's inaugura-

Though the announce ment was made this morning, Trent and others have apparently been at work for weeks, scanning volumes of papers received before, during and since the election campaign:

"We're taking it from the jungle, putting it into specifics and then carrying them toward the first steps for implementa-tion," Trent said.

Henry Rowen,a Stanford professor of public president of the Rand Corporation, was named a senior advisor to Trent along with Dwight A. Ink of Washington. Robert E. McCarthy, a partner in the San Fran-cisco law firm of Bohnert, McCarthy, Flow-ers, Roberts and Damir, will head an executive secretariat for implementation of the new policy initiatives.

Another Hoover Institution senior fellow, Richard F. Staar, was named an associate director for national security. Staar, who heads the institution's international studies program, is a former inetelligence officer.

Edwin J. Gray, a former Reagan press secretary now senior vice president of San Diego Federal Savings and Loan Association, was also named an associate director, Robert B. Carleson, head of a Sacramento public policy consulting firm, was named a special advisor for human services.

Trent said about 30 people will serve in the policy group - three of them paid, two detailed from federal agencies, and the rest dollar-ayear people.

The transition teams new working in federal agencies — numbering about 400 — are due to make their reports by December 22 and return to their homes. The new policy group will then take over the main transition operation.

ATHENS, Greece (AP) - The Alexander S. Onassis Foundation has given $35 million to build a 114-bed heart and chest hospital here, the foundation said Friday.

The Lichtenstein-based foundation was established in memory of the only son of the late Aristotle Onassis, the Greek shipping magnate. Construction on the surgical center begins in the fall and is expected to be finished in 1983.

AL STORES DRATION

Generosity unhurt by year's inflation

By TIA GINDICK
The Los Angeles Times

Christmas this year is that we're not letting those nasty words like inflation, recession or depression dampen our generosity to the people we love.

A horrified, or at least skeptical reaction is anticipated to that observation; but for proof, lean back and indulge in some other people's Christmas fanta-

Kenny Rogers, who enjoys a good party as much as anyone, invited friends to his Beyerly Hills home Saturday, then had them board a bus for brunch at the beach. There Rogers' wife received her Christmas present five days early - a house, completely landscaped and decorated.

For a more traditional gift, furs are always special. But how about the gentleman from Mexico who brought his wife into Edwards-Lowell on Rodeo Drive for some Christmas shopping earlier this month. They walked out, according to Grace Lowell, with a $5,000 red fox jacket, $12,500 floor-length dark mink wrap coat, $13,500 dusty rose horizontallyworked fox coat, and $13,500 floor length white fur. And since the wife already knew what she was getting, the man told Mrs. Lowell he may be back alone before Dec. 25.

Stories like that are enough to make you feel like a piker - or if not cheap, at least poor. But People Who Know About These Things (merchants, caterers, florists, restaurateurs) say they are not really exceptional, only surprising.

Business, most say, is different from last year when everybody came in and bought everything. This year, some merchants say, their stores have trimmed tree, you can buy a day of luxury and fewer customers, but the people who do come in are spending much more money. If they cater to the very affluent, this is the merchants' best Christmas ever.

Even in the areas where it's easy to cut back: like parties and Christmas decor. Party planner Marcia Lehr, for instance, tells of invitations running $25 to $30 each and placecards - like tiny jeweled Christmas trees placed on lucite or mirrors - averaging Flower Fashions' Harry Finley says his business is up 25 percent to 30 percent over last year with lots of people spending more than $7,500 for a party, sending out his $500 gourmet filled wheelbarrow and bringing the Flower Fashions crew in to decorate their Christmas trees. Decorating an artificial tree starts at $200, Finley says. But clients like Johnny Mathis, Elizabeth Montgomery, TV producer Douglas Cramer, Mrs. Porter Washington and the Robert Andersons of Rockwell International prefer their trees to be live. In fact, Kenny Rogers wouldn't even have his tree cut - it's nine feet tall and growing in an antique wood container.

As for gift-giving, here's a wistfully written-up tour of the little extravagances selling around

- Teddy bears are everywhere. But at Geary's North in Beverly Hills, you can get one made of ranch mink for $750.

- At Abercrombie and Fitch, several of the $2,000 rocking lions had sold by mid-December and the $800 cobra-skin-covered opera glasses were going like bananas, according to store manager Judy Martin. But really impressive was the woman who had an entire gym set up for her husband - at a cost of Normally buying a Rolls-Royce as a Christmas present is more of an impulse thing than you'd believe," says Anthony Thompson, president of Rolls-Royce of Beverly Hills, who adds that every year, two weeks before Christmas, two or three Rolls-Royces are sold this way. Usually the man is doing the buying for his wife, says Thompson, and wonders about such things as "is light blue a good ladies' 'color?" Then the buyer swears the Rolls people to secrecy, arranging for the car to be delivered to the family garage or brought around by a parking attendant after the family has gone out for Christmas dinner.

A new face is always desirable and George Masters has timed his visit to Beverly Hills to coincide with the holiday season. His clients, who in the past included Nancy Reagan, Audrey Hepburn, Bo Derek, and Rosalynn Carter, are willing to hand over $300 for a private makeup and hair consulta-

- Gucci is selling lots fur throws, perfect for a king or queen bed on a cold night, for $19,000. That's in addition to holiday clothes (June Allyson came in for a whole new silk wardrobe made to order in her petite size four), and smaller leather goods (Joanna Carson had some Christmas items especially made for her in Italy and Irene Dunne picked up a handbag

The staff of Life: food and wine. Jurgensen's BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. - The nicest thing about steak pack (10 filets or six New York cuts) is always a hot item at $55, but customers also are fond of passing out squab, Smithfield hams and wheels of Brie cheese. Ava Overstreet says purchases at The Wine Merchant tend to be last-minute impulse gifts. Which may explain why this year's biggie didn't sell as soon as it was offered. Entitled Best of the Decades, it includes 10 different bottles of Chateau Mouton-Rothchild's finest vintage, dinner for six with the Baroness Philippine de Rotschild plus a handcrafted wine cabinet for storing 120 bottles. The total price is $25,000. Last year, the Wine Merchant's top gift - five paintings of French wine chateaux with wines from each — cost $10,000. It sold, so the Overstreets are optimistic that the Rothschild gift will be just perfect for someone who is looking for that gift they can't buy anywhere else.

- At Lakin et Cie, I Magnin, personnel tell of the woman who bought herself one of Mary Pickford's star sapphire rings for just a little under $100,000. They're also waiting out two men who are vying for a pair of jade vases trimmed in gold, which were made by a workman in Carl Faberge's workshop. The pair

At the De Ville Galleries, television personality Phyllis George Brown, wife of the governor of Kentucky, made one of her art purchases for her 9-month-old son, saying that she planned to buy him a painting every Christmas until he's 21 - when he can choose his own.

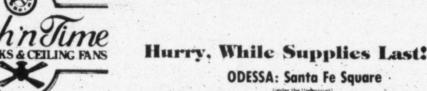

And last but not least, if you don't mind skipping the brightly wrapped package under the customservice at John Levine's "The Wonderful World of Fantasy." Included are limousine service to a hotair balloon for a ride with champagne and caviar brunch, a yacht cruise of the Los Angeles harbor, dinner with wine at a restaurant, orchestra seats at the theater, and finally, the night in a suite at a luxury hotel. Federal judge rules 'Death of a Princess' must be shown

m HOUSTON}$ (AP) — A federal judge says a Houston public television station was wrong not to air the controversial film, "Death of a Princess," last May and now must broadcast the drama within 30 days.

In a Thursday ruling, U.S. District
Judge Gabrielle McDonald said KUHT-TV must show the film because "censorship raises spectors of totalitarianism that must now be

The two-hour drama recreates the 1977 executions of a married Saudi Arabian princess and her lover. Despite strong protests from the Saudi government, the movie was seen in most of the United States, but not in Houston. The station, operated by the University of Houston, declined to air the program, despite a see-saw court battle.

Dr. Patrick J. Nicholson, former vice president of the university, said he dropped the show because "our long friendship with the Saudi government and U.S. national interests all point to the need to avoid exacerbating the situation.

Gertrude Barnstone, a former Houston school board trustee, filed suit against the station and won a temporary injunction May 9 to force the showing of the movie.

The Texas Attorney General's office - representing the state university - appealed and was upheld by U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals on May 12. U.S. Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell later upheld the circuit court and the movie was not shown in Houston. Ms. Barnstone returned to court and won the permanent injunction after a hearing Thursday.

Greg Wilson, an assistant state attorney general, said he would file an

Judge McDonald said in her ruling, "the court refuses to carve out an exception to the Bill of Rights. To do so would in effect encourage the planting of seedlings which, on attaining full growth, would install the State of Texas, through the University of Houston, as a kind of single ministry of truth as in George Orwell's '1984.'"

The judge also warned that "such absolute control over what people may see and hear will not be countan-

Lennon records top charts

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Ten days after his death, John Lennon is atop almost all American record charts with both a single, "Starting Over," and the album he recorded with wife Yoko Ono, "Double Fantasy."

'Starting Over' was the No. 1 single in charts released Wednesday by the three major music trade publications -Billboard, Cash Box and Record World. "Double Fantasy" took over the No. 1 album slot in the first two magazines but was No. 2 in Record World

Disc jockeys said they had expected the sales and were equally unsurprised - and in most cases unimpressed - by the first signs of what some predict will be an inundation of records about Lennon.

The only such song ing seriously is Bobby Vinton's "It Was Nice to Know You, John.'

Lennon's last No. 1 record in Billboard was "Whatever Gets You Through the Night, November 1974. The latest charts reported on the first full week of sales since Lennon was gunned down in front of his New York apartment

"I'm not surprised at all," Sam Bellamy, program director at Los Angeles rock station KMET, said Thursday of the chart-topping rec-

"I think people who may have been going to buy it anyway or figured they could always get it later went out and bought it right away," he said

Geffen Records re leased the single only two months ago and the album a few weeks later. Company president Ed Rosenblatt declined to give details on sales figures for the two records.

"Suffice it to say they were hits before what went down in New York last week went down, he said.

But Tower Records, a large Sunset Boulevard retailer, said that with sales of 1,126 last week, "Double Fantasy" far outpaced the second best-selling album, Stevie Wonder's "Hotter Than July," which sold about 250 copies.

Vinton's manager, Ken Martel, said Vinton wrote his song with his teen-aged son as a way of dealing with the sorrow both felt at Lennon's death.

Vinton went into the studio and recorded it Saturday and then gave several copies of the record to radio stations. However, Martel said, the record has not been pressed in quantity and Vinton has not yet decided whether to release it for commercial distribu-

If he does, the profits will go to Lennon's private charity foundation, Spirit Foundation, Mar-tel said.

He said Vinton's record is different from the other tribute songs, sung by unknowns.

Mike Cox shares life of Fred Gipson in his new book

By GEORGIA TEMPLE Staff Writer

One characteristic they shared — they were both morning people In talking about writing "Fred Gipson, Texas Storyteller," Mike Cox explained he, like Fred, was a "morning person... He (Fred) liked to get up real early, make coffee, pour a bottle of scotch into it and write all morning." Around noon, the scotch and coffee would catch up with Fred and he would take an afternoon nap, he added.

Cox was in Midland recently promoting his current biography of Gipson which in actual "physical writing time" took about two years to complete. But it was in the planning stages in his mind for many years

"Its beginning goes back to when I stood at his (Fred's) funeral in Austin in 1972," Cox said.

The book has now been on sale for two months.

Those not familiar with the name Fred Gipson perhaps know him by the books he wrote. His storytelling ability was, during his lifetime, compared to that of Mark Twain's. He was the author of 12 published books, 150 magazine stories and numerous newspaper columns. Four of his books were made into movies.

For all of this, one story stands out from all the rest.

Not only was it written at a low period in Gipson's life when the Texas drought was getting to him as well as the rejections of his most recent writing attempts, but it was to be a children's book. Ordinarily a slow, meticulous writer, this book took him a mere 90 days to write.

The year was 1955. As Cox explained in his book, "The prevailing standard for juvenile books was a sore spot with him. Gipson felt most children's books were too 'stickly sweet.' So much so, 'they'd gag a

"His juvenile book would be realistic. It would show life as it was and not as people thought it should be," Cox added.

Thus Gipson and Tommie, his wife, who edited all of his manuscripts and was, until their divorce, actively involved in his writing endeavors, sent a query letter to Ursula Norstrom at Harpers. It read, in part:

"Dear Miss Norstrom:

One of the most moving and powerful dog stories I ever heard was told by my grandfather. It was the story of a big yellow work dog who fought for two or three hours one night to keep a mad dog off of my grandfather on his way home on horseback. Since there was no known cure for hydrophobia, and since it was always fatal to human beings, and such a horrible death, there was nothing my grandfather could do but kill the dog that

Is this too strong for a boy's adventure story?..."

Thus, "Old Yeller" was born.

And it was published by Harpers, but as an adult rather than a children's book. Then Walt Disney bought the movie rights and produced a clas-

Cox describes in his book what cowboy cartoonist Ace Reid of Kerrville wrote to Gipson after he and his wife's saw the movie, "We...blubbered through the whole dang thing. Six people drowned in the first three And it rained in Texas.

This time in Gipson's life was one of contentment. But, it wasn't to last.

Cox, who writes for The Austin American-Statesman and used to report for the San Angelo Standard-Times and The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, said Gipson had deep "feelings of insecurity." He was always, conscious that his books were not as good as his first, "Hound Dog Man," and then when "Old Yeller" went "off the charts he really worried after that if he could do it again." The "what's next" syndrone "always kind of haunted him," Cox said.

This is Cox's second book. The first was a collection of stories published in 1970 called "Red Rooster Country."

As was true with his first book, Cox spent many hours researching Gip-

Tommie, who was married to Fred for 23 years, and their remaining son,

Beck, said to Cox, "We had made up our minds to cooperate with you And Cox said, "They were skeptical, but when they read the book, they really opened up. They told me that dealing with me had been a good psychological experience and had helped them come to grips with every-

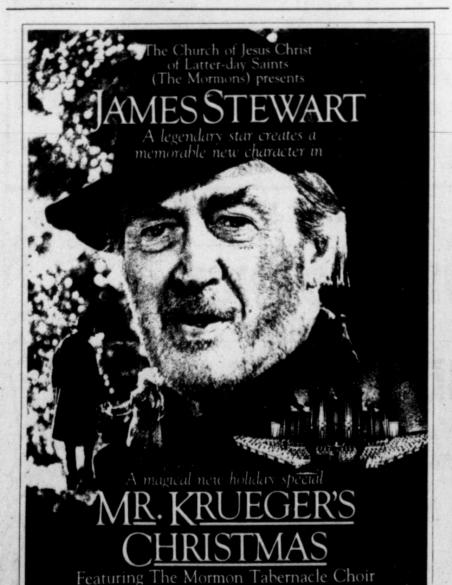

The 'everything' refers to the tragedies and paradoxes in and about Gipson's life. However, for more information about Fred Gipson see "Fred Gipson, Texas Storyteller.

It contains numerous family photographs, anecdotes and the story of a Texas country boy whose poignant humor made others laugh and cry, while he was constantly consumed by, even at the height of success, depression and a lack of confidence. He was a man never satisfied with himself.

Police recover $33 million in stolen ancient artifacts

- Police said Saturday they have recovered $33 million worth of ancient artifacts stolen from Pompeii and the Naples museum in 1975 and 1977. They reported one suspect under arrest. One of the treasures, a gold Roman medallion bearing a likeness of Emperor Augustus, is valued by art experts at $1.1 million.

With the help of Swiss and French police and the international police organizaton Interpol Italian authorities retrieved thousands of Roman and Byzantine coins and Roman necklaces from Zurich safe deposit boxes, a Paris hotel room and a Rome residence.

Police said they ar rested Walter Guarini 35, who had been seized two years ago in connec tion with the thefts but was acquitted for lack of evidence. They said they believed Guarini, of Pulsano Marittima, southern Italy, was the thieves' courier.

Authorities reported police also had recovered three ancient paintings and 3,586 gold, silver and bronze coins, all stolen by eight armed robbers who broke into the Naples museum the night of Feb. 20, 1977. The men tied up five night watchmen and made off with the paint-

Also retrieved were rare gold and silver necklaces stolen from a museum at the Pompeii archaeological site five years ago.

'We have regained possession of archaeological material whose loss had represented a huge blow to world archaeology," said Pozzi Paolini, an official at the Naples

Change changes teen's life

By DEBORAH SINGER Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) - While many 16-yearolds scramble for jobs that pay $3 an hour, Mark Chrans makes "well over" $1,000 a week. And while his mother drives a Chevrolet Monza, he tools around town in a $17,000 Mercedes 450SL.

Chrans is a soft-talking, hard-driving, coin-dealing whiz kid, and claims to be the nation's youngest professional coin dealer. He's been at it since his Mom gave him a $10 coin collectors' starter kit from Sears the Christmas he was 11.

In five years, Chrans says he's parlayed that kit and the odd coins he'd pick out of his grandmother's loose change - into what any other 16-year-old, and most older folks, would consider a fortune

He skipped homework to bury himself in coin books, and then quit school early this year when his weekly income topped $1,000.

But he sidesteps questions about how much he or his sizable inventory of rare coins is worth. And he refuses to be pinned down on how much he takes home from a newly opened retail coin shop.

He says, though, the monthly rent on his store is about $900, and it cost more than $20,000 to start the business. The money, he says, came strictly from his own work, his own profits.

'I never realized there was money in it like this when I was 10 years old," says Chrans. "They (coin dealers) put you in mind of rock'n'roll stars, the way they throw money around.

Chrans says he's not yet in a position to spend money with the same wild abandon as some other dealers. But he expects to.

Like many other success stories, Chrans has done everything the book of life tells you not to do. For starters, he quit school last January in the middle of 10th grade. He runs with a crowd that he says is "pretty wild." He's usually on the road six days a

Last month, for example, he was in Las Vegas, Hawaii, New York City, Los Angeles and St. Louis. But unlike many other teen-agers, Chrans is poised, articulate and worldly. He disclaims any hint that he's conceited.

'I guess I'm just confident," he says.

Chrans doesn't like sports, reading books, showing off his fancy blue Mercedes or hanging around at the local hamburger stand.

Houston has 'amusing' science class

By ROB WOOD Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) -Ask any youngster to make a choice between an hour at the famed Astroworld in Houston or an hour of studying science in a classroom

If you find one in a thousand that goes for take more science than tions of the nation, far the classroom, you're required. But now a three-member team of educators have combined the two - a trip to the giant amusement park and a gram to 85 amusement lesson in science at the same time

After a ride on the Texas Cyclone roller coaster, the youths are asked about wind velocity and movement and weightlessness

A ride on the loopcoaster, called Greezed Lightin', gives the youths the same G-force as a visitor to Mercury and a greater G-force than experienced by the crew of the space shuttle flight.

Dr. Howard Jones, a University of Houston professor and a member of the project team, said in a recent interview, 'too much theory is being taught in the classrooms. Kids need to learn how to apply it."

"If we allow them to discover science through things they use or do in their everday lives, it becomes more meaningful to them, they understand it, retain it and want to learn more

Control, a pro-controls lobbying group in Washington.

Controls activists note that the "gun-restrictive" nations have substantially lower rates of homicides by shooting. But the anti-controls camp contends this is more a result of social factors than of the availability of handguns.

"I'm inclined to agree that under certain circumstances people will kill and rob no matter what," said Mary Alex, a gun-control official with the Canadian solicitor-general's office in Ottawa.

But the basic point is that the majority of homicides are in domestic situations or between friends. The availability of firearms in those cases in more likely to result in homicides.

In 1975, handgun homicides in Canada totaled 88. In 1979, one year after the enactment of a tough new handgun law,

The Canadians believe statistics are beginning to prove the

In the United States, most states require a check only to ensure that an applicant for a handgun permit does not have a criminal record. Most states do not register all handguns. Some have no. restrictions on carrying handguns. An estimated 55 million to 60 million handguns are in circulation in the United States, one for

Here is a look at the handgun-controls situation in eight other

The 1978 law applied a stringent "needs" test for police permission to buy a handgun. Ownership is allowed in rare cases for protection of life, for shooting clubs, for gun collectors and in other narrowly defined situations. The legislation imposes mandatory minimum sentences for crimes committed with guns, as a result of which more and more robbers are reported using

The law essentially bans all handguns for private ownership, restricting them to state agencies and recognized sport-gun clubs. Illegal possession is punishable by up to five years in prison. Occasional press accounts of murders or criminal shootouts with police testify to the fact that illegal pistols are in circulation. Statistics are unavailable, but the numbers of handguns and shooting deaths are indisputably far below the AUSTRALIA In Australia's most populous state, New South Wales, there is only one licensed handgun for every 125 people. Would-be pistol owners must demonstrate a need for the weapon to local police, who conduct a background check. Licenses usually are granted only to banks or other businesses for security, and to gun clubs for target-shooting.

JAPAN

The Japanese have one of the world's toughest handgun control systems Private ownership of handguns is outlawed except for rare cases of antique gun collectors and a handful of target shooters who participate in major competitions. In 1979, there were 48 handgun homicides. That year in the United States, with twice the population, there were 200 times as many handgun homicides.

SWITZERLAND

The Swiss, who regard themselves as a land of militiamen, have a long tradition of keeping personal arms. For handguns, the law requires a demonstration of need, but the system is loosely enforced. Some shops do not insist that a license be presented. Tens of thousands of soldiers, ex-soldiers and militiamen have weapons ranging from handguns to automatic rifles at home

"We have a few cases of people cracking up and shooting their wives or themselves," Defense Ministry spokesman Hans Rudolf Strasser said. "But a Swiss militiaman using his weapon in a holdup - that just does not exist.'

Switzerland had only 34 homicides in 1978 - one per 200,000 population, compared with one per 10,000 in the United States. A breakdown by weapon was not available.

Brazil is another "frontier" country, and ownership of hand weapons is common. In rural areas virtually every man

The laws are similar to the U.S. system. State ordinances typically require only a check to ensure the applicant for a handgun permit has no criminal record. He does not have to prove need. Police say the vast majority of murders are committed with handguns, almost all of them unregistered.

Many years ago, a woman named Mary left her home in Nazareth and travelled into Judea, to the City of Bethlehem, where she bore a Child. That Child brought to earth God's promise of his love for all mankind, a message cherished through 2,000 years and passed from one generation to the next.

One year ago, another woman named Mary prepared to leave her home in Midland and travel to the ancient land of Palestine, not far from the Child's birthplace, to seek the meaning of the Child's message and carry it to a homeless people in the land where the Child's mother had found herself homeless on the eve of His birth

Mary Margaret Peterson McPherson had grown up knowing many homes-grandparents' homes in a small North Texas town, her own family's home in Tennessee, and then a home shared with her mother, back in the small Texas town after her father's death. Married just out of high school, she shared a tiny room in Denton with her husband and he finished college. Three babies made the young couple a family; as the family Prosperity came easily to the hard-working young people in West Texas during the early 1950's. They found friends in Midland, became involved in the work of the First Baptist Church, and began making their place in the community. Midland would be home they decided.

But, on Jan. 19, 1966, Robert Len McPherson died in an automobile accident, leaving his 32-year-old wife with three young children to raise and another home to make. She returned to Denton to earn her own degree and teaching certificate, simultaneously keeping up wih class proms, music lessons, and year-round athletic activities. The family thrived in a household of love, but somehow Denton never seemed to be home, Mrs McPherson said. Her children began growing into families of their own, and her lifestyle eased from Little League into grandmothering.

A visit back to Midland in 1977 rekindled warm, secure feelings in Margaret, and she decided to return here with her youngest child, still a high school student, hoping to find the peace and security she had known here as a young mother. Many of the old friends remained, many new ones appeared; the First Baptist Church was the same haven to Margaret she had known 20 years before, yet despite her full-time job in the education department of the church, something was missing from her life.

"I had thought about volunteer mission work for a long time," Margaret explained. "Then, one morning last October as I was driving to work, I decided the time had come for me to do something about it." Her two older children were married and the youngest child was away at college. For the first time in her life, this woman pleased, when she pleased to go.

unrest and trouble-I was so relieved not to be heading there that Brazil sounded great.'

During Christmas vacation, Mrs. McPherson and her younger sonplanned a skiing trip to New Mexico. Still asleep in their cabin one morning, they were awakened by the desk clerk wih a message to come to the office and return an emergency tele-The Mission Board was meeting at that moment and wanted to know if Margaret would accept an assignment to the Gaza Strip. She took 30 minutes to think about the offer and reassure her son that she was not afraid for her physical safety in the Middle East. "I would rather be there, in God's will," she told him, "than here out of His will."

They returned to Midland ahead of schedule and she began preparing for her journey to yet another home. Her assignment in Gaza was to the Baptist Mission Hospital and Nursing School where she would teach English to nursing students.

The Bible tells only briefly of the first Mary's journey; scholars and legend have enlarged upon the story.

A diary kept by the other woman tells of her journey, tracing not only her mission as a teacher but her search for the Child's message as Mrs. McPherson boarded her flight to Tel Aviv thinking she was bound for the Promised Land, the home of God's chosen people. Her students, she expected to be a demur group of traditionally quiet, young Muslim women.

Instead, she found a populace struggling wih age-old conflicts in the hair-trigger Twentieth Century and a class of 60 predominaantly male nursing students. Gregarious; "stiffminded," as they described themselves; and eager to know more aboutthe United States, some of the class members, she learned, were former members of the Palestinian Liberation Organization.

JANUARY 25, 1980. "I have been here nearly 24 hours. The word I hear continually is 'Welcome, Welcome!' The students are so very warm."

From the time she entered the mission compound and saw a group of her sheepishly curious students awaiting her arrival, Mrs. McPherson said, a love affair with the whole class blossomed. Since the compound where she lived contained the 48-bed hospital, nursing school, and residential areas for staff and female students, she found plenty of time outside the classroom to become better acquainted with her students. 'For the first several weeks, I spent no time in my room except to eat and sleep," she explained. The students were eager for English conversation with her and often invited her to their homes

"Dear Lord, help me to be what You want me to be. Help me to give myself to these young Palestinians. May they see the love of Jesus in my heart and I will be able to share it with them.

JANUARY 28, 1980. "This is my first day of classes... I really am beginning to feel at home here. Each day is better than the day before. Lord, please help my children not fear for me. Calm them. FEBRUARY 9, 1980. "I've had a tour of Gaza-not much here but heartbreak and dirt. I really shouldn't say that. So many of my students say they have such happy homes.' In an area approximately the size of Galveston Island, half a million Palestinians live, some as citizens, some as refugees; in resignation and frustration. But, Mrs McPherson explained, materialism seems to have no place in the Arab culture and the people seem happy with whatever they have. "And," she added, "what they have, they want to share.'

Mrs. McPherson stressed the Israeli-Palestinian issue was not the focus of her work in Gaza; however, she developed a new understanding of a people about whom she knew nothing a year ago. "The relationship between the Arabs and the Jews is, of course, an ancient one—they consider their people cousins," she explained. "I don't know the answer to their problems," she added, "but I do feel the situation in the Middle East must be resolved before peace can be achieved in the rest of the world."

I only pray that God will work through me to help. They must learn to love before they can win! Lord, I pray they learn to love. Help me to be what You want me to be so that I can be of service to You...Thank You, Lord, for all the answered prayers!'

MARCH 9, 1980. "The weather is finally warm. It seems it turns from winter to spring in one day. I noticed today my hands are much browner than the rest of my body because I've sat in the sun so much...The streets are full of children. They only attend school half a day. There are also lots of young men. Not much change of work. About all they can do is go north into Israel and work as day

Metric system madness

Copley News Service Time marches on. I pulled into a service station and filled the tank of my little Japanese bomb with 37 liters of gasoline. Then I had to check my calculator to see how much I had bought.

The metric system is here, and I have to carry the calculator in a little holster to find out much - or, rather, "how much" - of what is happening in the world.

What will be, whether strutting, pussy-footing or crawling, among the best dressed and pampered, gift-wise, on Christmas Day?

These could be the pets of the households, whether they be cats, dogs, fish, boa constrictors, or, don't forget, the hermit crabs.

Christmas gifts for pets, according to a survey of Midland pet shops, range from coats, vests, skirts, sweaters, collars and leashes for dogs and cats to a new supply of mice (and they don't have to be white) for the boa constrictor.

One shop has plastic duplicates of the familiar fire hydrant, which have removable lids. The hydrants can be filled with ice and used as ice chests at parties, when not "in use" by the canines

What about a gift for the hermit crab? Since the sale of turtles is banned, the hermit, crabs have become a favorite pet. Some pet shops have terrariums for the little critters. And for the favorite gold fish, what about a new bowl? Also, in the "fishy" line, there are ornaments for aquariums and "tasty" freeze-dried worms for Christmas dinner.

Among the newest gift items for pets, according to one pet shop spokesman, are coats for dogs. These are in all sizes, even for the St. Bernard, if the length from the base of his neck to tail is no longer than 30

No problem, because you can even obtain the equivalent of a Neiman-Marcus catalogue filled with gift suggestions for cats.

For instance, your cat will be "sittin' on top of the world" with a kitty perch, which fits on a window sill. Then, there ia a pillow shaped in the form of cat, a conversation piece for homes with cats.

There also is a device called "Step n' Dine," which keeps food fresh and sanitary. All the cat has to do is stepon a platform in front of the plastic feeding bowls, the lid raises, and away he or she can go.

If you want to take your cat away from home with you, there is a convenient over-the-shoulder denim carrier. The pouch controls the legs and body, but the cat is free to move his head. The only problem with this would be getting the cat accustomed to being placed in the carrier.

How about a cat "tunnel of love?" The tunnels are about 21 inches long and are carpeted inside and outside.

There is a cat cuddler bed which is cozy and comfy, or a scratching post (which, hopefully, will appeal better than the living room couch). And, just to give your feline a holiday boost, a fresh supply of catnip.

Now, if you have larger-sized pets, such as horses, there are the usual saddles, saddle blankets, cover-all blankets, bridles and martingales.

And, then again, if there happens to be an elephant or camel wandering around on your premises, Midland pet shops do not have "anything in collecting my Social Se-

Workers' children taken care of on the job

By LEIGH SHIRLEY Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) - Vickie Horne visits her 10-month-old son at least twice during a busy work day with the permission and even the blessing of her employer.

She doesn't dash home to have lunch with Kristopher. She doesn't fight rush-hour traffic to drive across town to a day care center to pick him up at night.

The blue-eyed toddler's mother is just a five-minute walk away from her son, who spends his weekdays at Zale Corp.'s child care center in Dal-headquarters, says having her son at the corporate day care center is convenient and "gives me peace of Death Syndrome) while I was away."

"I lost my first child, who was with a sitter, to crib death (Sudden Infant

"Though there wasn't anything the sitter could have done, what happened made me anxious about being away from Kristopher. But I didn't want to stay home, either.

Corporate child care is an idea that has finally come of age," said Dr. Mike Romaine, a psychologist in charge of Zale's child care center.

"There is a real need for good child care in this society," he said. Romaine said neighborhood groups or members of the business community should take the responsibility of providing child care for the working parent, rather than "dumping it on the government.

"The benefits (of corporate child care) are manifold," Romaine said. In-house child care "humanizes" a company, he said. "It sets the company in a certain image for the employees and gives them a new awareness of children and vouth," Romaine added.

Corporate child care also is a good selling point for companies trying to woo mothers out of the home and into available jobs, Romaine said.

"And the center really brings them back," he added, citing a two-year infant waiting list with the names of some Zale employees who had not even conceived.

In addition to helping a company keep its trained employees, having the child nearby improves a parent's attitude on the job, Romaine said.

"It gives me an emotional lift to know that he's there and accessible," Mrs. Horne said. "I have three extra hours a day with him, and they encourage me to visit during lunch or a break.

The child care center is not only a plus for parents, "it gets the entire Zale's staff involved," Romaine

The children trick-or-treated through the high-rise Zale's building on Halloween. In one department staff members dressed up in costumes to join in the fun, he said. Gail Chadwick, a Zale employee with two sons in the child care facility, said the center is a focal point for many family-oriented activities. "We had Thanksgiving dinner there," Mrs. Chadwick said.

Each day during the treatment, Mrs. Preston was given five capsules of concentrated Rh positive red blood cell membranes that dissolved in her intestines and diverted her antibodies from the triplets, her doctors said.

Her three daughters, Amy, Erin and Laura, were delivered by Caesarean section Dec. 2 and weighed 4.2, 4.6 and 4.8 pounds, respectively.

"All are doing beautifully," said Dr. Alan Beer, chief of obstetrics and gynecology at the university.

One infant required intensive care for one day, he said.

Each day's membrane dosage for the Grand Blanc woman was taken from one pint of blood, Beer said. The technique initially was proposed by Dr. Simone Birne of Tolouse, France, Beer said. The hospital did not reveal the cost of the treatment and said it "is not ready for widespread use ... because more research is needed and because of the great expense and difficulty of preparing the medication."

When Zachariah received an urgent call to go to his father in Tel Aviv, Mrs McPherson drove him and his friends there. "As we sat there in the police station and he realized his father was dead, he began sobbing. Because he was not a Christian, I didn't know what words to say to him about death. JUNE 6, 1980. "I certainly have not written in this book as often as I had intended. There seem to be so many more important things to do. Each day here is more extinct than the last... Much of my time the last few weeks has been spent in community health visits. I have been so many different places...Last Saturday, Usama and I spent four hours in Jabalya Camp. It was an extremely hot day. We went from one poor home to the next. There is only a wall separating the homes and a goats and pigeons were kept right on the patio. I was very depressed when I got home. Then Monday morning I saw two of the families at the hospital getting help. That made it all worth it... How can I me. Maybe because of what we went through They had been spatting and I was able to talk to together. But I've met his mother, sisters, and brother, and feel close to them, too. If anything every couldn't get home, I'd go to Zachariah home. I just wish I could speak Arabic... About my own decision, I really don't known where it stands. In a way, I'm relieved that I won't rush right in. But in another, when I think about leaving all these wonderful boys I really don't know what I'll do. God has certainly got to show me what to do. Maybe the decision is already made and I don't know it. I can't even pray about it for some reason. I feel like I'll know when the time

OCTOBER 21, 1980. "Well, all good intentions have been shot. I really meant to write more often. I would think about it, but never seemed to do it. Now I'l be home in a month. Can't believe it! But I can't wait to come back. It seems I'm only just now beginning to find out what it is all about. It's like God has had me in school all this time. I've learned so much about myself and my relation to Him...I've done some soul searching. Why am I here? I know I came to teach English, but as I have quickly found out, that is just a way for me to stay here. Not a real purpose...I wish I knew what the Lord was trying to tell me. It is like I am sitting on the very edge of something. I feel it deep in my soul. It is like I am reaching, but can't quite grasp it. Is it that I won't quite give myself up to Him? Is He asking something that I won't turn over to Him? Is it my loneliness that I have held onto for so long?... That longing to have someone love me?...I don't understand it all. I know that what we give to God he will return tenfold. Oh, I wish I knew what was going on. My mind won't con-

Perhaps the Child's mother too was confused as she saw God take events out of her hands and conduct them according to His own plan. It must have been difficult for her to leave her home and flee with a small child into a strange country when King Herod decreed that all male infants be killed. Yet she rushed in God in his mission for her and made a home for the Child wherever God

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) - Timothy Christmas, a newborn infant found abandoned at a church manger scene last year, is happy, healthy - and adopted. Beyond that, officials are revealing little about the baby, whose plight captured hearts nationwide after he was found by a minister next to the First Baptist Church's outdoor Nativity in freezing weather.

Problems with old varnish

Q. - I had a can of varnish in our basement for a couple of years. It had been opened originally when purchased, but the cover was put on securely almost at once and never opened again. Recently, I used the varnish on a wooden table I made. It seemed to be all right when I finished, but a short time later developed a kind of whitish appearance. What caused this and how can I get rid

A. - It seems likely that, as some times happens, the seemingly tight cover was not tight enough. If your basement was even the tiniest bit damp, some of the moisture probably got into the can. The condition you describe is known as "blooming" and it can often be removed by washing the wood and rubbing it with warm water and a clean cloth, being very careful to dry it thoroughly. There are a number of other possible remedies. but if the warm-water wash doesn't work, your best bet is to refinish the wood. Don't use the same varnish.

Q. - We have an outside deck on our house that seems to have mildew enough to cause us some concern. What's the best way to remove it?

A. — An ordinary household bleach and water should do the trick, but better find out what is causing the mildew or you'll have it back soon. Mildew is a fungus that grows where there is dampness and little or no

Q. - I expect to make a brick wall sometime in the next few months, or, as my wife says, more probably in the next year. Anyhow, is there some rule of thumb for estimating how many ordinary bricks will be required? A. - Figure seven bricks for every square foot. Q. - A friend of mine from a different part of the country was discussing lumber prices with me the other day. We found a very great difference in the prices. I thought lumber prices were the same all over, based on supply and demand. Isn't

A. — Supply and demand works in the lumber industry the same as it works elsewhere, but the starting prices vary greatly. Much of the cost of lumber includes how far the wood has to be transported.

available and no woods to speak of, he dug out the outside of a mountain to make a cave-like structure. He cut poles and fit them together for a front and roof and covered it with dirt.

"There were only 16 people in the entire county, and people took time about going shopping and picking up the mail. They took buffalo meat to Fort Griffin and hides to Fort Worth. I was born on that ranch, but we lived in a two-story house," she said.

When my grandfather had Christmas, he invited the family and everybody in the county (all 16 of them). I remember once we had sent all the wild turkey and buffalo off in exchange for cash, so we made a big washpot full of turkey gizzards and "We didn't have many Christmas trees. We could have had one because there were cedar trees, but I was 14 or 16 before I even thought of a tree.

"We always just hung our stockings by the fireplace and Santa came down the chimney. I always, always got a doll, and sometimes dishes. I remember my first doll furniture when I was eight or 10 years old. The boys got baseballs, tops-I remember my brother getting a fire engine once. We had a great time, probably more fun than kids nowadays.

Alph Mitchell of Kermit was born in Monahans in 1912. His father came to the Permian Basin in 1896.

"When I was a boy, we lived on a ranch about 10 miles from Monahans. We would hook up the team and go to Monahans to my grandmother's house for Christmas. Christmas was a big day because we went into town," he said

Mitchell said he was not able to go into town much until he was old enough to go to school. "I remember when my Dad would go into town, it would take about three hours to get there and he'd be gone all day. He would usually get some candy. Back then, horehound candy was great, but you can't get it much any

"We didn't have Christmas trees in the house. There's no cedar here, and the closest place to get one then was at the Pecos river. All we had was mesquite brush, so as a general rule, we just hung out stockings around the stove.

"In town-in Monahans-they'd get a Christmas tree for the community. Everybody knew everybody, so usually there was a dance or some kind of church entertainment, and there might be a tree

Michell said gifts were not so much a part of Christmas as the food and the getting together. "The best part of Christmas was getting candy, apples and oranges. If we could get that, that was great."

Odessa rancher Hence Barrow, who was born in the oldest ranch house in Ector county, recalls early trips to Midland to visit his grandmother, and later, he remembers a traditional community Christmas in

"My grandmother lived in Midland, and we'd go from here to Midland in a wagon and take all day. You'd prepare three of four days ahead of time...we had to cook dinner on the way going down there stop, build a fire and cook dinner. We'd have to arrange for one of the neighbors to milk a cow and feed the chickens and take care of the livestock and the like while we were gone, but it would take all day...There wasn't any roads, you just went across the turf from here to yonder. We'd spend two and sometimes three days before we came back, and that was always quite an event to get to go to grandmother's for Christmas.

One of my uncles would go out here on what we call the breaks...there was some cedar trees growing out along those breaks-little old scrubby cedar trees. They would go sometimes horseback, sometimes in a buggy, and it would take them as much as two days to go get a Christmas tree, and they would do this and they would cut down a little bitty tree, and they would cut limbs and wire these little limbs on to the main stem and just kind of make a tree,

She says her grandfather was a pioneer who because those poor little old scrub cedars had partitions in a pie shape, six or seven different settled in Jones county in 1878, before the railroad starved to death all their lives. "And then for our decorations, we'd take cotton of candy in each partition. And they'd buy a bushel balls and put on the tree for snowballs, and we had bucket of candy, and that would last us through live candles, and that was very dangerous...You Christmas...They ordered it from Montgomery Ward

Memphis police make movies on gun use

By MARIAN FOX Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) - Memphis police didn't much care for standard police training films on use of deadly force, so they made their own.

Now a 21-minute home movie starring city officers is helping train recruits how to make the most crucial decision they'll face in the field - shoot or

'I couldn't believe some of the things I was seeing in the standard films," police Director E. Winslow Chapman said. "In one a police officer approaches a kid on a bicycle and says, 'Hey kid, you're not supposed to be riding your bicycle here,' and the kid pulls out a gun and blows him away. Now that just doesn't happen in Memphis.

"What's unique about this film - actually there are three - is that they depict actual crimes that happen in Memphis and they will be revised and added to regularly," he said.

Chapman, 41, rewrote the department's deadly force policy in July 1979 and wanted to illustrate it without using the standard films. He asked Dr. Fred Klyman, academy director, and Lt. Clyde Keenan, police legal adviser, to develop the local films.

"We had never attempted anything like this," Klyman said, "but we all agreed it was needed. And we agreed it had to be representative of actual situations a Memphis police officer faces in his

Klyman, Keenan and several others pored over four years of files on police shootings. From 111 incidents, they developed categories in which officers most frequently fire their weapons: burglaries, robberies (particularly in convenience stores), assaults, auto theft, disturbance and drunk driver incidents that turn into aggravated assault

With a $40,000 federal grant for equipment, they went into the movie business, using homegrown talent and recreating actual incidents from the

"The films are the same length but the incidents are in different order.'

Finding the actors who fit the roles was no prob-"I remember one convenience store robbery we staged," Klyman said. "We had some of the scruffiest looking characters there I've ever seen. It was hard to believe they were police officers. Each film contains 12 opportunities for shoot-don't shoot responses, with a practice incident at the beginning. A perfect score is 99.6, with each response worth 8.3 points. Failure is below 70. Standing between wooden barriers, recruits hold standard .38-caliber police revolvers loaded with blanks and point them to the floor. Before each sequence, a narrator sketches the circumstances, just as a police dispatcher would in a real call.

The camera was positioned so recruits watching the film feel they are riding in a squad car or walking up to an apparently vacant vehicle or encountering two men fighting in a dark alley.

Making decisions based on the department's fivepage policy on use of deadly force, officers must decide whether to fire at the screen.

Chapman and his officers realize revamped policy and training such as shoot-don't shoot won't eliminate unwarranted use of deadly force by police.

"But we want to make the officer aware of the possible consequences each time he pulls his revolver from his holster," Chapman said. "Shoot-don't shoot is a response to the changing standards of society, which is looking closer at its law enforcement agencies.

Pigeon poisoning postponed

a group of Cajuns.

PRINCETON, Ind. (AP) - The city's plan for poisoning pesky pigeons has been delayed after the city attorney warned the proposal could turn out to be a

The idea was to feed the pigeons whole kernels of corn laced with a poison that would attack their nervous systems and kill them painlessly within eight minutes.

But ever wary of exposing the city to a needless liability danger, City Attorney Charlie Nixon said there was a possibility that a dying pigeon could fall out of the sky and hit someone.

Identification problems could provide a further snag. "If the city and the county both approve this, then a person would probably have a hard time proving whether it was a county or a city pigeon that did the damage," Nixon said. Nixon also challenged an assertion by city officials that only pigeons would be affected by the poison because other birds did not eat corn in whole kernals. He said cardinals also eat whole corn, or rather, portions of whole kernals, leaving large broken pieces for smaller birds to scavenge.

Since the cardinal is Indiana's state bird, officials decided they'd be better off postponing the pigeon extermination

Frivolity is out this Christmas season as shoppers try to find inexpensive presents or more costly gifts that are practical and will last, an Associated Press sur-

But Frank Rice, a spokesman for Bullock's department stores in California and Arizona, said, "We're finding there is an interest in diamonds and jewelry, the better merchandise, what we call collectibles, like crystal."

Some stores were reporting slow sales, and ers may have to resort to price-cutting to unload their costly inventories.

"It is going to be ex-tremely difficult for re-tailers to make a profit," heads a Chicago research concern bearing nis name. But he said hat a last-minute flood of emotional shopping nay save the day.

'Americans are a kind of inarticulate people. They have difficulty expressing their feelings in words. So when Christmas comes, they spend their money rather freely," Shapiro said.

Merchants offer a nixed picture of how sales are going com-pared with previous years. One difficulty is that the peak holiday sales period this year has five fewer days than last year because Thanksgiving, the unofficial start of the season, came later this year.

At Sanger-Harris in Dallas, sales during the first week of December were about 2 percent lower than at the same time last year. But since prices have risen about 8 percent in that period, the real volume of sales was off about 10 per-

Fire risk greater at Christmas

Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin, Inc.

Decorating for Christmas is an American tradition. Unfortunately, a greater fire risk is associated with the gaiety of decorating for the holidays due to the overabundance of flammable objects being present in the house.

James L. Roberts, deputy chief of the Midland Fire Department, states that carelessness with Christmas decorations will usually be the cause of at least one serious residential fire every Christmas season.

While many negligent acts can cause fires during this time of year, a common cause of fires is the improper use of extension cords. Many people, Roberts explained, do not realize that a cheap extension cord does not have the ability to throw the breaker if it becomes overheated. If a cord becomes hot it can cause combustible objects, such as drapes or overstuffed chairs, to catch on fire.

Coiling up the cord can add to the danger of using an inexpensive extension cord. In this case, if the cord becomes overheated it resembles a heating coil on a stove with the heat concentrated in a small space.

Fires started by extension cords can be avoided by using no more than three sets of lights per single extension. If the ornament requires a lot of electrical power, use a heavy-duty extension cord.

The abundant use of candles during the holiday season is another possible source of fires. Do not light candles surrounded by evergreeb branches, ribbons and paper ornaments.

Besides planning for safety when using candles and extension cords, Roberts states you should also be aware of the fire dangers associated with other Christmas decorations and activities. Use the following as a safety checklist:

-Christmas trees should not be placed near fireplaces, radiators or other heat sources. Heated rooms can rapidly dry out a tree, so continually monitor your tree's supply of water (as you would fresh flowers).

-Although tempting, wrappings from packages should not be burned in the fireplace. The sparks created from the intense heat of the burning paper could ignite something in the room or roof, if your house has wood shingles.

-Do not use lights or other electrical ornaments that have broken or cracked sockets, frayed or bare wires, or loose connections. A wornout string of lights plus a dry tree could equal a fire. -Buy yourself a Christmas present, a smoke detector. Place the smoke detector on a wall close to the bedrooms so the family will be alerted if a fire starts at night.

-After Christmas, dispose of your tree in a proper trash container; do not leave it in an alley. One year a group of children collected discarded trees and built a clubhouse, Roberts recalled. It was possible the hovel could have caught on fire injuring all the children inside.

Don't ruin your Christmas fun by being careless with Christmas decorations and activities. The fire dcpartment is expecting at least one major fire to result from the negligent use of Christmas ornaments. Don't let your house be the one

Don't be dazzled by model homes

By HERB LAWRENCE Copley News Service

There are a few builders around who try to dazzle the public with their footwork - but not with the quality of their work.

And that fizz-type dazzle takes place in the model units that are opened to the public - with the intent of deceiving people into buying their shoddy homes and condominiums

Sue Kelly, a tall blonde and former fashion model, makes her living decorating model units for a number of bigger and smaller builders.

She heads up Showplace Interiors, a firm in San Diego, Calif., she owns with her partner, Don

And she warns the public to practice the "let the buyer beware" admonition.

The public should beware of nicely furnished units which are deceptive and hide things that will unpleasantly strike the buyer once the detached home or condominium is purchased," she said.

According to Kelly, "most builders try to do a good job and furnish the models to give prospective buyers the feeling of how it would be to live in one of their products. But there are still some around who try to deceive. Kelly, who said that she has so much work now that she can hardly keep up with it, added that there are a number of things that people should watch for when walking through the models. "The public shouldn't take things at face value."

she advised. "A lot of things should be ques--tioned

She advises the prospective buyers to: - Determine exactly the number of things which are shown in the model that actually go with the regular home or condo.

The furniture normally doesn't come with it unless that is specially noted.

A builder is supposed to provide a notice of things that aren't included as part of the unit. So if a built-in bookcase isn't part of the regular unit there should be a disclaimer tag on it. Some builders put up a plaque listing the things that aren't included in the unit and this is the proper thing to do," Kelly explained.

If such a disclaimer notice isn't up, then the builder is misleading the public, she said. In case there are no disclaimer tags or plaques around, she advised the prospective buyer to specifically ask the salespeople there about it. "The salespeople ought to say whether something is included or not," she said. "If you want to know if the carpets, the special faucet in the kitchen or some special window are included, don't hesitate to If the builder or the salesperson won't answer such questions, then that is clear deception, Kelly said.

Take a close look at the furniture used in the model to see if it's miniaturized. Some builders have furniture such as tables and couches especially built small and put in model units. This makes the smaller units appear much larger and helps make sales.

"I recently saw one of these and it was a shock that this is still going on in some places," Kelly said.

Examine built-in shelves closely. In some models they are put in to spruce up the interior even though the depth of the built-ins is very narrow and won't hold most things. - Make sure that the upgraded ceramic tiles shown in some kitchens also actually are part of the standard equipment. Upgraded tile is used in the kitchen of some models to make them more attrac-- If you see a drape covering much of a wall, check to seeif behind it is a small window.

Large drapes are used sometimes to camouflage small windows. - Determine whether the lights in the model also go into the other units. Sometimes special lights are put up to lighten otherwise dark areas.

K mart MERCHANDISE POLICY

By GRACE-MARIE ARNETT Copley News Service

WASHINGTON - Buzzard Point houses the most dilapidated federal office buildings in this city, but now one of the run-down buildings houses some of the most coveted items in the country - tickets to Ronald Reagan's inaugural celebration.

About 40,000 tickets will be mailed from the inaugural committee offices here. Only those who receive them may attend the ceremonies and dances. But the problem is that many more people believe they deserve a ticket than can be accommo-

"The invitation list is our most wrenching prob-lem," said Charles Z. Wick, co-chairman of the Presidential Inaugural Committee. "But then, everything we deal with seems to be a problem.'

Virginians, for example, are mad because the state is allocated only 250 inaugural tickets. Californians aren't likely to be much happier with the 1,000-plus tickets they will receive. Ticket allocations are decided by a formula based on the state's presidential vote

The tickets are only one headache.

Ordering custom license plates, inaugural medals and silk scarves, deciding which bands and floats

Perhaps the most expensive souvenir will be a set of gold, silver, bronze and copper inaugural medals, selling for about $1,500.

will participate in the parade, and financing the $6 million affair must be accomplished before Jan. 20 when Mr. Reagan takes the oath of office as presi-

Funds to celebrate the new president's inauguration must come from private sources.

Individuals and corporations consequently are guaranteeing funds to the inaugural committee to help finance the millions of souvenirs being ordered, rent entertainment halls, and pay a staff of about 200. An estimated 4,000 people, primarily volunteers, will participate in one aspect or another in the inaugural planning, Wick said.

AVON, THE COSMETICS firm, for example, sent a $10,000 check to the committee, which promptly used it as a down payment on a batch of silk scarves emblazoned with the inauguration seal.

If the souvenir sales are a hit, Avon and other companies like it will get their money back. If the inauguration goes into the red, the companies will be out their money.

Although corporate contributions to political campaigns are illegal, such gifts to the inaugural committee are considered legal.

The decisions of Barry Zorthian may determine whether the inaugural bash runs a financial surplus or deficit.

Any surplus would be contributed to charity, organizers say.

Zorthian, a retired vice president of Time Inc., is director of advertising, promotion, concessions and the inaugural program.

He placed the order for the silk scarves with Frankie Welch, a suburban Washington designer who was close friends with former first lady Betty Ford. The red, white, blue and gold silk scarves will cost about $100 each.

Perhaps the most expensive souvenir will be a set of gold, silver, bronze and copper inaugural medals, selling for about $1,500.

The gold medal alone will sell for $975. It is made of 14-karat gold and measures 1.25 inches in diameter. By contrast, President Carter's inaugural medal four years ago was 24-karat gold, measured 1.5 inches in diameter and cost only $200.

Zorthian said he may commission some limitededition arts and crafts items. There may be five or six items, in porcelain, silver or crystal, to sell for abour $1,000 each.

"WHATEVER WE DO, we want this to be the best," Zorthian said. "We know there will be plenty of junk souvenirs on the streets during the inaugural itself, but we are going to set the standard for quality with the official souvenirs we commission." So far, however, the only contract he has signed is for the $100 scarves. Prices for tickets to the several inaugural balls around town will be $100 each. Local hotels, with room prices averaging about $90 a night, are booked solid. And dress shops and furriers are expecting to do a big business in evening wear as the ceremonies draw near.

In the next month, thousands of decisions will be made on such details as who will appear at the Kennedy Center concert and who will sit on the inaugural platform.

The decision on whether the military will carry flags or guns already has been made.

Robert Gray, co-chairman of the committee with Wick, had decided he wanted to see one million flags streaming down Pennsylvania Avenue from Capitol Hill to the White House after the inauguration. Then he ran into the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines. They wanted guns.

'They convinced me you can have too many flags in a parade," Gray said, "and that a high wind would make the flags snap back and maybe take out somebody's eve.

Instead of Gray's "sea of flags," the soldiers will

Gray also decided to limit the parade to about one hour.

But to do that, he must shut out a lot of folks who want to march.

EACH BAND TAKES about four minutes to walk past the president, Gray said. If all 50 states send one band, that is 3 hours and 20 minutes -- just of bands. Then there are floats and, of course, the Army, Air Force, Navy and Marines.

'Most states were relieved of the pressure and expense of sending a band," said Gray of his decision. "We will have regional floats and bands in-

Then there was the question of whether the new president should follow Mr. Carter's lead and walk "To demonstrate his respect for the office," a recent press release announced, "the governor ... will ride in an automobile from the Capitol to the White House."

DIXON, Ill. (AP) -Members of the high school band in Ronald Reagan's boyhood town are ecstatic over news they will be marching in his inauguration parade after all, says principal James German.

Exercise, smaller calorie intake both help in weight reduction

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've been on a diet for the past two months, during which time I've managed to lose about nine pounds. My goal is to take off an additional 20 pounds to reach my ideal weight. Would exercise help me achieve this objective any faster, or would it just encourage me to eat more? If you recommend exercise, would running be better than walking, or is there something better than both? - Gus

Dear Gus: As I've noted on other occasions, weight loss results from the expenditure of a greater number of calories than a person takes in. This can be achieved either through a decrease in the number of calories ingested, an increase in the number expended, or a combination of the two. A nutritionally sound, well-balanced diet coupled with appropriate exercise and behavior modification is the best approach to weight control.

A common misconception is that exercise has little effect on weight loss or, worse, that it is counterproductive because it encourages people to eat even more than they ordinarily would. Neither of these claims is accurate. The only people who may be disappointed by a lack of weight loss through exercise are those who had unrealistic expectations to begin

SELL 'EM WITH A WANT AD! DIAL 682-6222 al weeks or months. This additional weight will not — and should not — be lost after a few days in a gym. The effects of exercise are cumulative, and its results eventually will become apparent.

The argument that exercise leads to an increase in appetite which, in turn, causes an even greater weight gain is not supported by the facts. Drs. Barry A. Franklin and Melvyn Rubenfire, writing in the Journal of American Medical Association, cite a study that showed that rats that were exercised for up to an hour a day had a decrease in food intake and body weight when compared with sedentary controls. When the rats were exercised for longer periods of time, their intake of food increased, but only in sufficient amounts to maintain body weight.

In humans, similar research has shown either no change in food intake with moderate exercise of extended duration, or a slight decrease in food intake with vigorous exercise of somewhat shorter duration.

The choice of an appropriate exercise should be determined in large measure by what a person enjoys. If the exercise is nothing but an unpleasant chore, chances are it will not be continued for any length of time.

In terms of caloric expenditure, running uses more calories than walking over the same distance, while bicycling expends fewer calories than either of the other two forms of exercise

Even if exercise did not promote weight loss, it would still be beneficial. Exercise improves cardiorespiratory and muscular function; it can provide a relaxing, enjoyable interim in what otherwise may be a tension-filled day; and it resutls primarily in loss of fat, rather than loss of water or lean tissue.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Democrat searches for reasons

What made the liberal philosophy fail?

By JAMES CARY Copley News Service

WASHINGTON -- Two years ago, Sen. Paul Tsongas of Massachusetts was as unquestioning, doctrinaire a liberal Democrat as ever walked the hallowed aisles of the U.S. Senate.

Today he is one of the chief critics and analyzers of his party and the crushing defeat it suffered in the Nov. 4 election, and particularly of the liberal dogmas he feels contributed to that debacle.

In assuming this role, he does not spare the Republicans, who he feels may prove to be as ideologically unrealistic as the Democrats in attempting to solve some of today's difficult prob-

But, for now, it is his purpose, and that of a gathering group of Democrats around him, to determine what made the liberal philosophy self-destruct and to define the new ideas that will be needed to bring the Democrats back to power. From this probing and searching he hopes a new philosophy will emerge. Some are already calling it "the New Liberalism," a term Tsongas has used himself, but for now he prefers to call it "Humanistic Realism."

What he is seeking, Tsongas said in an interview, is a new realistic set of ideas, designed to solve today's problems, not those of the 1930s, ideas that will still preserve the humanitarian value system that has become so deeply imbedded in the liberal movement in this country.

How did such a change in one man's thinking take place? It all began some two years ago, Tsongas said, when he and Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., put together legislation that would give the Chrysler Corporation the federal credit guarantees it needed to

"THE ORIGINAL version called for a wage freeze," Tsongas said. "I got clobbered by the unions and liberal Democrats. They said that's O.K. for Lugar. He's a Republican. You're a liberal. You give the idea credibility.'

Tsongas argued to no avail that it made no sense to provide for a huge wage increase if that could become the difference between the company's continued survival and its fall. "What good will it do the workers if they don't have a job?" he asked. His view that the corporation should issue stock to the workers in place of the wage hike was brushed aside.

That encounter with set dogma started a trend of thought. The questions it raised were intensified a short time later by a political scuffle with environmentalists in Massachusetts. Tsongas' view that nuclear power is needed to create and preserve the jobs of the workingman ran headlong into an unyielding belief that nuclear power can be bypassed, despite the nation's dwindling energy sources, with no harm to the economy. Again set dogma failed to yield to what Tsongas felt was pragmatic reason.

Then, in June, came a magnificent opportunity to air his growing doubts. He was asked to address the national convention of Americans for Democratic Action -- the Mecca of Democratic liberalism.

"Liberalism is at a crossroads," he proceeded to tell his somewhat bemused audience. "It will either evolve to meet the issues of the 1980s or it will be reduced to an interesting topic for Ph.D.-writing

HE RAISED SOME interesting questions, too. Liberals led the fight against a proposed, energysaving 10-cent-per-gallon increase in the gasoline tax, claiming they were protecting the consumer. the long run, to protect the consumer from thereality of the energy crisis is to destroy him," he

The applause Tsongas received was polite. There was also some criticism.

But his quest was on. He carried his questions into town meetings in Massachusetts and was surprised by the intense interest and understanding ordinary citizens demonstrated.

Then came the election and his warning to the ADA came true. The Democrats lost the White House, the Senate, 33 seats in the House - and a lot of their confidence that they had the answers to

Since then Tsongas said he has encountered even greater outbursts of interest. "What I'm getting now is a whole group of people who prior to the Nov. 4 balloting were saying I was a heretic. Now they are saying I am right. They are listening.

What, then, does the election mean? To borrow a cliche, he said, yes, it is the end of an era, a critical election in which a new base is formed and the country proceeds in a new direction, following new ideas that seem to be better tailored to problems of the times. Was it a repudiation of the old Democratic ideas, an acceptance of Republican ideas, or just an expression of a desire for change?

"All three," said Tsongas, "but more rejection

DOES THIS MEAN the conservative Republican ideas, with their emphasis on less government, more private enterprise, so-called supply-side economics, incentives for production, lower personal and corporate taxes and greater defense spending are more realistic and applicable to today's problems?

Yes, up to a point, he believes. What is the main lesson, particularly for the Democrats, if they are ever to recover? 'One lesson is they have to acknowledge the role of the private sector," Tsongas replied. "I know I always thought thesalvation of the blue-collar city from which I came would be through federal funds. I

gence that is going on there today is private sector Using the analogy of the goose that laid the golden eggs, the senator said he felt the Democrats had spent the last 50 years worrying about the distribution of the eggs and now "it is time to start worrying about the health of the goose." This is a very different approach. Actually, it is supply-side economics, an effort to improve the production process. The bottom line in all this, Tsongas believes, is that there are six great issues that will dominate the rest of the century, and whoever is president will have to deal with them realistically or will fail.

Tsongas, who is writing a book about the issues, lists them as energy, the Soviets, Third World nations, people and pollution, the economic pie and how it is divided, and international trade com-

"If we, as liberals, or President-elect Ronald Reagan as a conservative, attempt to apply dogma to those issues it is notgoing to work."

THE REAL DANGER for the Democrats, he said, is a rational Reagan, one who becomes almost totally pragmatic, dumps a lot of the emotional. ideological baggage he has picked up over the years. and in effect becomes the new Franklin Roosevelt who applies ideas, tailored to today's problems and thus founds a political era.

Does his record as governor of California indicate he will be pragmatic rather than ideological?

"I would think so," Tsongas says. Indeed, he thinks Mr. Reagan is already beginning to change. He has altered his positions on aid to New oil companies loose on a finite resource," he con-York City, opposition to the grain embargo of the Soviet Union and now knows that the Kemp-Roth tax cut bill he endorsed "is a dog." That bill calls for a 30 percent reduction in personal income tax rates over three years. So far there is no firm evidence Mr. Reagan will jettison the plan.

Tsongas says Mr. Reagan has "a remarkable mandate," and agreees with Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., that theRepublicans have become the party of ideas. Not all of those ideas are good, however, he believes.

"And how do you deal with inflation by following Sen. John Tower's call for 13 percent real growth in defense spending?"

Can the Republicans blow their mandate, as the

Yes, but it will probably take longer than four years of Mr. Reagan's term, Tsongas believes. In the meantime, he is calling for change within his own party, and urges its members to accept 'You can't solve the energy crisis by turning the Republican ideas if they prove to be good ones.

Israel to pay $6 million for attack on U.S. ship

WASHINGTON (AP) - Israel has agreed to pay the United States government $6 million in compensation for an attack on a U.S. naval vessel that claimed the lives of 34 American seaman at the outbreak of the 1967 Middle East war.

On June 8, 1967, Israeli jet fighters and torpedo boats attacked the U.S.S. Liberty, which the Pentagon described as a "lightly armed electronics ship" cruising in international waters 15 miles north of the Sinai peninsula.

The United States had asked for $7.5 million in compensation, but in a settlement announced by the State Department Thursday, agreed to accept $1.5 million less.

The attack on the American ship in the Mediterranean occurred at the start of what came to be known as the Six Day War between the Israelis and their Arab neighbors.

Seventy-five American seamen were also wounded in the attack

Cotton research, promo budget down 8 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland has approved a $20.4 million budget for cotton research and promotion in 1981, down 8 percent from the $22.2 million authorized in calendar

Officials said the reduction is mainly because of this year's drought-reduced cotton harvest. Producers pay an assessment of about $2.40 a bale to finance the program, which is administered by a 20-member Cotton Board appointed by the secre-

Soyburgers may soon be on the menus in nation's schools

WASHINGTON (AP) - If a new test by the Agriculture Department is favorable, millions of school children could be munching on government-donated hamburgers made partly from soybeans in another year or so.

The soyburgers will be included in an experiment in three northeastern states later this winter to see if the high costs of beef can be reduced in the USDA's school lunch pro-

A spokesman for the National Cattlemen's Association said producers prefer all-beef products in government purchases but that in these times of high prices, some might go along with the move if it saves some money.

No estimate of saving was available, however. Linda Greider, a spokeswoman for the department's Food Safety and Quality Service, said people closest to the program

"absolutely refused" to discuss price details. One reason for the refusal is that the agency buys food for donation under a bidding system and does not want to tip its hand on the kind of prices that it has in mind. Ms. Greider said, however, that the Defense Department reportedly has been able to save around 20 cents a pound by buying ground meat with soy added. The material also is called "textured vegetable protein," or TVP.

Reagan's incomplete Cabinet coming apart at seams

Another nominee withdraws; Reagan having 'second thoughts'

By OWEN ULLMANN Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ronald Reagan's plans for filling the rest of his Cabinet appear to be unraveling after a top candidate for secretary of housing and urban development withdrew and opposition has grown to the president elect's reported choice for interior secretary.

Philip V. Sanchez, a Mexican-American who had been considered Reagan's likely choice to head HUD, announced Thursday he was withdrawing because new ethics-in-government laws would force him to sell all his business holdings.

But a knowledgeable source in Reagan's transition office said Sanchez was quietly dropped because of information that had been learned about his personal background. The source declined to be identified or discuss the matter in detail

Sanchez, one of the few members of a minority group under consideration for a Cabinet post, is chief executive officer of a construction, property management and investment firm in Fresno, Calif. He told The Associated Press it was "financially impossible" to return to government because of the ethics laws, which require one to "give up everything he's involved in, plus his shorts and

Meanwhile, the transition source said, Reagan was having second thoughts about his expected appointment of conservative Colorado attorney James G. Watt as interior secretary.

Watt heads a legal defense foundation that has contested federal environmental regulations. The source said Reagan and his advisers were considering changing their minds about naming Watt because of complaints that "he's (Watt) too committed to one group and the philosophy for which it stands."

"We should not merely pick on smaller nations who may be friendly to us while ignoring the violations of human rights in much larger nations and in nations who are unfriendly to us."

"There is serious question about whether this (promoting human rights) is best done through quiet diplomacy or by well-publicized sanctions which may actually, in some cases, be contributing to unrest and instability in the countries concerned."

Environmental groups stepped up their attack Thursday. Watt has been criticized by environmentalists because of his pro-development views and legal work.

William Turnage, director of the Wilderness Society, and Rame Pomerance of Friends of the Earth both criticized Watt.

Of the five Cabinet posts Reagan still has to fill, only one appears to be firmly settled — energy secretary, which is expected to go to former South Carolina Gov. James B. Edwards.

Richard Lyng, former president of the American Meat Institute, is a leading candidate for agriculture secretary, but a final decision has not been made on that post.

The choice for education secretary has yet to be made, according to sources involved in Reagan's transition. Marva Collins, a black educator from Chicago, said Thursday she had been contacted by transition officials about the post. "They asked if I would consider it and I told them I would," she told WBBM-TV of Chicago.

Reagan's problems in filling his Cabinet have been compounded by his desire to find at least one woman or minority member with similar political views. The elimination of Sanchez was a setback in that effort.

As a result, Reagan aides said more announcements on Cabinet members will not be made until next Monday at the earliest.

The Washington Post reported today that Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, a political science professor at Georgetown University, is the leading candidate to be appointed U.S. ambassador to the United Nations. The 53-year-old woman is a Democrat who supported Reagan in 1980.

Meanwhile, Reagan's chief adviser, Edwin Meese III, said Reagan may declare a national economic emergency immediately upon taking office and follow with "major executive steps" to deal with the nation's worsening economic problems.

Among executive actions under consideration are controls limiting the amount of money the federal government can borrow, "which is one of the

Among executive actions under consideration are controls limiting the amount of money the federal government can borrow, "which is one of the things that happens to be contributing to (high) interest rates," said Meese. Reagan also may go ahead with his promised hiring freeze on federal employment and may take other steps to control federal spending, said Meese.

The idea is "to draw attention to the importance of doing something immediately about the economy...and so that Congress, in effect, would suspend most other work and concentrate primarily on the legislative measures that would be proposed by the new president," said Meese.

"We're not talking about some extra-legal or unusual legal thing like you'd declare a state of martial rule," added Meese, who will be Reagan's chier counselor in the White House.

Although the prime bank lending rate now stands at a record 21 percent, Meese said Reagan remains opposed to federal credit controls and wage-and-price controls.

Meese held the news conference at a hotel near Reagan's Pacific Palisades home, where Reagan has been remaining in near seclusion this week.

Meese also attacked the Carter administration's human rights policy, saying it has been applied inconsistently and has contributed to "unrest and instability" in some countries.

"We should not merely pick on smaller nations who may be friendly to us while ignoring the violations of human rights in much larger nations and in nations who are unfriendly to us," Meese said.

"There is serious question about whether this (promoting human rights) is best done through quiet diplomacy or by well-publicized sanctions which may actually, in some cases, be contributing to unrest and instability in the countries

Sedco quits Delhi deal

DALLAS (AP) - Sedco Inc. has ended months of speculation by announcing it will not buy Delhi International Oil Corp. at the current market price.

The announcement at Sedco's annual shareholders meeting Thursday came a week after directors of the Dallas-based Delhi said they would pursue a possible sale or merger. Sedco, a Dallas-based drilling and pipeline company founded by Gov. Bill Clements, fueled speculation a year ago when it said it wanted to buy

The gasification research, conduct ed by Griffin and Dr. Tom Pollock and supported by the Center for Energy and Mineral Resources, used a cyclone-type collector to gather "five or six gallon jugs of the most awful looking particles you've ever seen,' Griffin said.

The mechanical engineer said the system also produced "a foul-smelling" liquid.

"Some healthy size particles came up through the pipe, primarily silicates up to three millimeters in diameter and ash, some particles of which ranged up to five millimeters in size,'

Griffin said. Samples included mild steel, stainless steel, high grade alloys and others. They came out "black, cruddy and corroded," he said. Griffin showed scanning electron micrographs of some of the metal specimens "pockmarked like the moon."

Most efficient gasification of lignite occurred at higher temperatures. Griffin noted, with metal damage also increasing at higher temperatures.

He said additional research into the problems will be necessary. A graduate student is studying particle shape under Griffin's supervision. He said the field environment presented too many varibales to hypothesize in detail about materials degradation in in-situ lignite gasification, indicating need for lab research with lab con-

Basin rig count continues to set high marks for 1980

The Permian Basin rotary rig count continues to climb according to the weekly survey of activity in West Texas and southeast New Mexico conducted by Reed Rock Bit Co.

Friday, the company counted 374 rotary units making hole in the twostate area, the highest total since 390 rigs were at work in the Basin in May

In the survey a week earlier than Friday's count, Reed listed 371 rigs which was the highest total since June 1959 when 370 were recorded.

Although the 374 is the highest since 1959, the weekly count still is far below the record 790 rotary rigs which were drilling in January 1952.

The Reed count does not include cable tool operations. One year ago there were 315 active rotaries in the two-state area. Lea County, the perennial Permian Basin Leader, had 42 rigs going last week. Pecos County, the top county in the West Texas portion of the Basin, moved ahead of Eddy County, N.M., to take second place with 29 rigs, one more than was reported in Eddy.

The second most active West Texas county in Friday's survey, was Crockett, with 17.

Price tag said tremendous for domestic gas additions

By MAX B. SKELTON AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The estimated price tag is in excess of $200 billion but the potential return is literally hundreds of trillions of cubic feet of gas.

An 18-month industry study indicates such a potential for additions to domestic gas reserves may be held by such unconventional sources as coal seams and "tight" reservoirs with geologic characteristics that resist conventional production procedures.

The National Petroleum. Council study also included Devonian shale gas and geopressured brines.

The NPC's report, however, says the potential ultimate recovery from tight sands alone is in the range of 192 to 574 trillion cubic feet by the year

Such a range compares with an estimated 194.9 trillion cubic feet of domestic natural gas reserves at the

While saying unconventional gas could be a significant addition to the nation's future gas supply, the executive summary of the NPC five-volume report emphasizes caution. 'The report presents estimates of what could happen under certain assumed technical and economic circumstances and is not intended to represent a forecast of what will occur," the summary states. The NPC is a federally chartered, privately funded industry group. It was established in 1946 at the suggestion of former President Harry S. Truman and has served as an advisory committee on oil and natural gas matters to the Interior Department and, since 1977, to the Department of

The study of unconventional gas sources was requested in 1978 by former Energy Secy. James R. Schles singer who asked that it include the outlook for costs and ultimate recovery and how government policy can improve the outlook

The NPC says there is increasing recognition among all sectors of the nation's economy that oil and gas must continue to supply the nation with the majority of its energy requirements over the near term.

"The long lead time required for conversion from oil or gas to coal and for development of a synthetic fuel industry dictates this," the report

"In the interim period, the nation must seek a resource that can be developed quickly, incrementally, and with as few-environmental concerns as possible. One option which could potentially fit these requirements is to explore for, drill, and produce 'unconventional gas'

The volume on tight gas reservoirs highlights the report in that the potential annual production from such sands by the year 2000 is estimated at 10 trillion cubic feet, as opposed to 2 trillion from coal seams, 1 trillion from Devonian shale, and negligible output from geopressured brines.

Annual production from tight gas formations was estimated to have been as high as 800 billion cubic feet by 1978 but the NPC report says that, historically, most of these formations have been uneconomical to produce at

Contracts auctioned

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) -Alaska has auctioned off one-year contracts for state-owned crude oil -84,000 barrels a day - and may divvy up the proceeds among the state's residents, who would each get $193.

The oil-rich state took in $77 million Friday by auctioning its share of Prudhoe Bay oil to six companies.

Alaska gets one-sixth of all oil drilled on its lands under contracts with oil companies but sells it all because it has no refineries of its

Gov. Jay Hammond wants to split up the proceeds among the state's 400,000 residents, but the Legislature has yet to approve the plan.

The crude sold for an average of $23.57 a barrel, $2.57 above the $21-abarrel price Alaska now gets from North Slope producers.

The auction was the first of its kind in Alaska and apparently will be the last. Natural Resources Commissioner Robert LeResche said that early next year he will negotiate long-term contracts for the oil - with preference given to companies that plan to build or expand existing refineries in

The auction was bitterly criticized by the three major North Slope producers, Exxon USA, Standard Oil of Ohio and Atlantic-Richfield Co., which refused to participate. They had been getting the oil for $21 a Oasis Petroleum Corp. of Culver City, Calif., was the high bidder at $24.29 for a 5,000-barrel-a-day lot.

Shell Oil Co. won five lots on bids averaging $23.77. Alaska Petroleum Co., a subsidiary of Coastal States Inc. of Houston, got four lots, at a $23.83 average, as did Union Oil Co. at a $23.07 average.

Other winning bidders were Energy Cooperative Inc., a Dallas-based agricultural group, two lots at $24, and Tesoro Alaska Petroleum Co., a single lot at $22.91 — the lowest of the winning bids.

prevailing prices because of the low natural flow rates of the gas

The NPC group concentrated on 12 domestic basins known to contain tight gas formations and on which extensive data is available. The resulting detailed appraisals then were extrapolated to the remaining domestic basins outside Alaska.

The study listed several potential constraints to the development of 'Market demand at the prices necessary to produce the gas may not be available until the late 1980s," the report said. 'More operators will have to become convinced the production technology is dependable, the gas resources are available, and the economics are favorable before many tight gas plays are begun.

In placing capital needs in excess of $200 billion, the NPC said significant risk and capital requirements are associated with the development of the unconventional gas resources.

"Such projects will have to compete for available funds with other energy activities, including conventional oil and gas exploration and production as well as other other emerging technologies (such as) synfuels, shale oil, etc," the report said. "Gas will also have to compete with other fuels for its share of the mar-

PBPA president pleased with committee meeting

Arden Grover, president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, and Ed Thompson, executive vice president of the organization, attended a meeting of the Liaison Committee last week in Wichita Kan.

The committee, made up of members representing 26 independent oil and gas associations across the United States, met to discuss possible alternatives concerning the "windfall profits" tax, if any; changes in the percentage depletion allowance program, and handling of IDC's with the 65 percent minimum tax provision.

The Liaison Committee works closely with the Independent Petroleum Association of America which is headquartered in Washington, D.C.

Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, newlyelected chairman of the Senance Finance Committee, was present at the meeting. His committee handles all petroleum industry tax matters. Arden said he was pleased with the opportunity to meet and visit with the

Arden said the consensus of the group was to find out, so far as possible, just what position the Reagan Administration will propose, then offer specific ideas either to support or oppose such positions.

It also was the opinion of those attending that further such meetings should be held, both with those unfavorable to the petroleum industry, as well as with "our friends," Arden among major and independent oil and gas companies for professionals geared to the search for oil and gas will increase as demand for their services surges, Oil & Gas Journal says in its Dec. 15 issue.

As companies step up exploration and production activity around the world they are encountering worsening shortages of engineers, geologists, geophysicists, landmen, and others involved in the hunt for oil and

In order to cope, they are rapidly improving compensation packages for key personnel to hold those they have or attract new ones, the weekly buisness magazine says.

And there are virtually no signs that the scramble for qualified engineers, geologists, and landmen will abate antime soon.

Even an expected overall gain in the supply of petroleum engineers probably will be offset by additional demand created by the U.S. sythetic fuels development effort.

Meanwhile, industry sources say that supply of entry level engineers won't meet demand until 1986, if To oil and gas companies the shortage of trained exploration technicians means trouble not only in attracting workers with those skills but also in keeping them on the payroll in the face of increasingly alluring offers from other firms.

The attrition rate for one major company for exploration and production professionals is 7-10 percent per year. Such losses are critical in view of the soaring activity in exploration and production and growing demand for technicians in those areas, the Journal says.

So companies are paying the high salaries professionals can command in a seller's market and seeking new ways of making their compensation packages more attractive.

For example, base salaries for explorationists have increased about 12 percent since last year.

And some experienced personnel are drawing as much as 25 to 30 percent more than last year.

Compensation-package by independents include participation in revenue from oil and gas well production. Offering a "piece of the action" is the most powerful way to attract and retain professional personnel, industry sources say.

Liberalized moving policies, cars, and club memberships also are helping firms find and keep professional talent, the Journal says.

Wil Gas Co. of Midland, a Clayton W. Williams Jr. company, has put its new A&M Gas Processing Plant on stream.

The facility is in Burleson County, approximately 15 miles west of College Station.

The plant has a capacity to process 50 million cubic feet of gas per day. Clajon Gas Co., another Williams company headquartered in Fort Stockton, transports this gas to the plant from Austin Chalk fields through its 12-inch gas transmission

He said when a pipeline now being layed by MAPCO, Inc., is completed in mid-January the A&M Gas Processing Plant would begin producing a demethanized product at the rate of 300,000 gallons per day.

The design of the processing plant allows for a duplicate plant to be errected, thereby doubling the processing capacity of the facility, War-

"It's looking like the mud-sealing operation ... is probably working. There seems to be less gas than there was early yesterday (Friday) evening," Hilkey said.

'It looks like the gas is dissipating and if the levels keep getting lower, there's less and less alarm." The explosion Friday that wrecked the mobile home occurred after a

Yes! Santa does exist!

Eighty-three years ago, a little 8-year-old girl named Virginia O'Hanlon wrote a letter to the New York Sun questioning the validity of claims by her friends that Santa Claus does not exist.

The reply came in the form of an editorial written by Francis P. Church and published Sept. 21, 1897. It has become a classic of editorial writing. We reprint it today for your enjoyment.

"Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except what they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds. All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's are little. In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

"Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exists, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! How dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus! It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith, then, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

"Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas Eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world.

"You tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance, can push aside that curtain and view - and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding:

"No Santa Claus! Thank God he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood."

"You're too late. It says here that Prince Charies has already found someone.

Torture in moderation might not be all that bad

WASHINGTON - The Reagan administration has a new approach to human rights which, while it won't affect anyone in the United States, may have some important ramifications for political prisoners around the world. The philosophy of the new approach was expressed recently by Prof. Jeane Kirkpatrick of Georgetown University, who is a very influential Reagan adviser.

"If we are confronted with the choice between offering assistance to a moderately repressive autocratic government, which is also friendly to the United States, and permitting it to be overrun by a Cuban-trained, Cuban-armed, Cuban-sponsored insurgency, we would assist the moderate autocracy," Ms. Kirkpatrick was quoted as saying.

Nobody in his or her right mind would argue with that. The big question is, how far a moderately repressive autocratic government can go to keep the opposition down? New human rights guidelines will have to be written for the MRAG countries.

Right now the ambassadors of Moderately Repressive Autocratic Governments are being called home for Christmas to advise their juntas on what the new American government will expect of them in the human

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

U.S. looked away while East Timor died

OU PRANT

WASHINGTON - The ravaged people of East Timor have been largely forgotten by a world with weightier problems to worry about. But this does not lessen the horror of their plight - or the shame of the United States' role in their anguish.

It was five years ago this month on Dec. 7, then, as in 1941, a day of infamy - that the terrified, helpless inhabitants of East Timor awoke to the holocaust of a full-scale invasion by troops from neighboring Indonesia. The tiny nation, about the size of Connecticut, had only recently emerged from centuries of Portuguese colonial rule, and was struggling to maintain its independence from covetous neighbors.

It was East Timor's misfortune to be undergoing this struggle at precisely the moment in history when the United States had been humiliated in Vietnam and was desperately seeking allies in Southeast Asia. Indonesia seemed, to the global strategists in Washington, to be the ideal choice. For one thing, its anti-communism was incontestable: The militarybased regime had slaughtered 300,000 native communists a decade earlier. And Indonesia also had oil to sell.

Thus it was that the weapons used by the Indonesian troops in their genocidal carnage in East Timor had been supplied by the United States.

And the attack itself came a matter of hours after President Gerald Ford, on a visit to Indonesia, had given his tacit approval to what Indonesian leaders led him to believe was a police action to put down a rebellion.

I reported more than a year ago the gory details of the Indonesians' rape of East Timor. The virtually defenseless population was massacred and systematically starved. The Indonesians threw an iron curtain around the conquered nation, declaring like Hitler and Stalin before them that East Timor was now a province of Indonesia, and none of the outside world's business.

The United Nations condemned the Indonesian aggression - in a vote from which the United States shamefully abstained - and refused to let U.N. fact-finders get more than a rigged, Potemkin Village tour of East

Outsiders were either excluded entirely or rigorously supervised and restricted. Relief agencies had to surmount bureaucratic obstacles before they could deliver food and medical care to the starving, battered East Timorese. At the urgent request of refugee leaders, I tried to smuggle a reporter into East Timor to visit the ill-armed guerrillas still holding out in the mountains, but the ring of steel around the island was too tight to penetrate. I reported last year on the role that U.S. weapons played in East Timor's death agony, and on the puzzling hands-off attitude our government took on the diplomatic scene. Now, new documents have come to light that reveal the architect of the Ford administration's callous support of the Indonesian butchers. He was none other than that urbane practitioner of realpolitik, Henry Kissinger. The material is contained in an Australian publication, "Documents on Australian Defence and Foreign Policy, 1968-1975." Despite its dry title, the book is dynamite Down Under - so explosive that the courts have forbidden the media to do more than paraphrase parts of it. The Australian press is challenging the censorship - which, incidentally, was made possible by the same kind of official-secrets act that some of our own members of Congress have been enthusiastically pushing for. Meanwhile, my associate Jack Mitchell has seen a copy of "Documents," and I am not, like my Australian colleagues, forbidden to reveal the contents verbatim.

One of the most damning pieces of evidence is a secret cable from a high-ranking Australian diplomat to his superiors just a few months before the Indonesian invasion.

"The United States might have some influence on Indonesia ... as Indonesia really wants and needs United States assistance in its military re-equipment programme," the diplomat wired. "But (U.S.) Ambassador (David) Newsom told me last night he is under instructions from (Secretary of State) Kissinger not to involve himself in discussions on Timor with the Indonesians, on the grounds that the United States is involved in enough problems of greater importance overseas at present The State Department has, we under stand, instructed the Embassy (in Jakarta) to cut down its reporting on

In other words, Kissinger was too busy with global grand strategy to be bothered with the imminent extinction of a small, independent nation of 600,000 persons. And he didn't want to be shaken out of his see-no-evil-hearno-evil complacency by any discomfiting reports from his Foreign Service people on the scene.

There is, of course, dishonor enough for more than one administration. When Jimmy Carter, the self-proclaimed champion of human rights, moved into the White House in 1977, the Indonesians were still ruthlessly exterminating the stubborn East Timorese by bloody repression and the more time-consuming but equally effective method of starvation.

Yet Carter administration officials continued the disgraceful U.S. support for the Indonesians - and misled Congress about the military assistance we were sending to our far from noble Southeast Asian ally. American weapons were being supplied to Indonesia even while State Department spokesmen insisted that the arms

NICK THIMMESCH

Despite gains, equality still a dream for America's blacks

EDITOR'S NOTE: Nick Thimmesch is on vacation. His guest columnist for today is Herbert Nipson, executive editor of Ebony magazine.

By HERBERT NIPSON

I heard recently that the University of California Medical School at Davis, which was ordered by the U.S. Supreme Court to admit Allan P. Bakke in that famed "reverse discrimination" case, has no blacks in its firstyear class. Across the nation, black enrollment in law and medical schools is down. Large northern cities are having trouble integrating their public schools, and black colleges are facing severe financial problems and some may have to close The rate of unemployment among blacks constantly remains twice that of the nation as a whole, and black youth unemployment averages higher than 40 percent in some cities. Some 15 automobile dealers had to close their doors, and many found their gross incomes drastically reduced. In short, inflation, unemployment, and the energy shortage have had even more impact on blacks than on whites.

It was while I was contemplating all this that Nick Thimmesch asked me to do a guest column on the outlook for blacks in the 1980s. My first inclination was to say, "No, the picture is too grim." But it's hard to turn down an old friend, and, after all, weren't things really worse when I met

That was in 1947, and things really were worse for blacks than they are now. Black soldiers were being beaten and even lynched in uniform in the South. Jobs for blacks were almost non-existent, unless one settled for jobs in labor, service or possibly the post office. Many of the black G.I.s didn't even know the G.I. Bill would pay for college training, and others felt they could not take advantage of it because they hadn't even finished high school. There were no binding anti-discrimination laws then, no Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, civil rights legislation was years away, restrictive covenants were still in vogue, there were race riots in both the North and South, and the armed forces had not yet been integrated. In fact, it was only in the later stages of World War II that black troops were allowed to fight. And Jackie Robinson had become the first black baseball star to play in the major leagues.

It's an indictment of someone or something that the greatest gains for blacks in the '40s were an outcome of the war. The military draft took young blacks, trained them as truck drivers, clerks, supply sergeants and cooks, sent hundreds of thousands of them abroad, and let them see a world they never would have seen.

A second major gain was also tied directly to the war. War industries virtually wiped out unemployment, and black men and women, found good-paying jobs, offering special training and lots of overtime.

Blacks in the 1930s faced hard times. But even that decade saw gains. In helping citizens in need, the Roosevelt administration automatically helped blacks - particularly through the WPA and its associated federal works projects. Social Security provided many blacks with their first pension, and unemployment compensation and other federal welfare programs were introduced.

the degradation of slavery until today, there has been no time blacks could call "their own" - when a black person could say, "Everything's going my way." For decades, blacks have known they were on the bottom rung in almost everything. The '50s, '60s and '70s were a mixed bag for blacks. There were times of progress - the Supreme Court decisions outlawing racial segregation in

But come to think of it, black people have never really had it good. From public schools; Rosa Parks sparking the Montgomery bus boycott that brought Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. forth as the leader of the civil rights movement; the election of blacks to Congress: the election of a black senator; civil rights bills outlawing segregation and discrimination in housing, voting, education and public accommodations; black mayors of major cities; and growth of black pride and the black power move-

And there were also numerous minuses - the assassinations of Dr. King, Malcolm X, Medgar Evers, and President John F. Kennedy and Sen. Robert Kennedy; violent anti-school integration riots; the rise of the Ku Klux Klan and the American Nazi Party; race riots; and the continued treatment of blacks as second-class citizens.

Unfortunately, looking back, I can see little change. Looking ahead, each decade may push us a little closer to full and equal citizenship for all Americans, but, unless there are some surprising changes, it looks as if the year 2000 will be ushered in with business as usual and "Let's wait until next year."

The unemployment rate for blacks did not change in the late '70s, even when the federal government was supposed to be pushing "equal opportunity." You cannot expect any more when the unemployment problem is in the hands of private industry. 'Last hired and first fired" will continue to be a part of America's employment philosophy toward blacks. The growth of computerization and automation will constantly cut down the need for laborers and marginal workers. This will most likely have a more serious effect on blacks than on whites, for history has shown that a white laborer is promoted to supervisor much more quickly than a black. A two-tier minimum wage may help some high school graduates or dropouts find marginal jobs, but there is the great risk that they will replace older black workers with family responsibilities and no skills for other

On the positive side, black business growth should increase, particularly if the government continues to offer aid to minority businesses. New black. businesses started by young blacks who have experience working in successful white businesses are among those showing good growth patterns. There could also be more "crossover" black businesses - black-owned businesses whose products or services-are sold to both whites and blacks.

With regard to government appointments, it is highly unlikely that a Republican administration will match the number of blacks placed on the bench by President Carter. And while it is entirely possible that a black will be placed on the Supreme Court, it will be someone who agrees with the administration's philosophy. Blacks will increase their number in the House and perhaps send a senator or two to Washington, but the progress will be evolutionary rather than revolutionary.

The next two decades should see blacks somewhat better off, but, sadly, there will still be racial discrimination. Some blacks have been U.S. citizens since the Declaration of Independence, and all have been citizens since the end of the Civil War, yet white Americans still seem to look upon black Americans as something apart. Full and equal treatment of blacks by whites will not come about until white Americans cease to look upon blacks as an "outside" minority and can live with them as fellow Americans.

Corrections director joins many Texans in criticism of federal actions

THE MIDLAND REPORTER-TELEGRAM, SUN., DECEMBER 21, 1980

By BILL KIDD Austin Bureau

AUSTIN - Department of Corrections head J.W. Estelle, meeting with reporters here to talk about the implications of a federal court order instructing him on changes needed in his prison system, took a little swipe at federal judges as he closed out his comments.

He was glad, Estelle commented, to see that the Supreme Court "ruled for an increase for federal judges' pay.' "I'm grateful," he said. "It's going to encourage the appointment of competent jurists in the future and I'm

Was he, asked reporters, taking a shot at Tyler Judge William Wayne Justice, who had entered that order on the prison system?

On no; no, indeed, Estelle insisted

- it was just that he'd heard the federal government was having trouble getting good help these days...that sort of thing. Estelle may or may not have been taking out a little frustration on Judge Justice - but if he's not wholly pleased with the way federal courts have been operating, he's not exactly the odd man out in state government

In fact, one of the major activities of state government seems to be hassling with federal officials over various matters. Consider these items.

The same day Judge Justice was issuing his 248-page preliminary opinion, Attorney General Mark White was in U.S. District Court in Austin, filing a lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of the Seaggers Rail Act, passed this year in Congress, on authority to set rates on intrastate rail traffic

In a statement announcing that lawsuit, White called the new act "another attempt by the federal government to replace the states as independent sovereigns and to exercise regulatory control over every element of our lives.

And the day Estelle was meeting with reporters, White was issuing another statement about how glad he was that Texan's rights were being upheld by the Fifth-Circuit Court of Appeals in a dispute with the Interstate Commerce Commission on coal-

The state is in one major hassle, and another potentially major hassle, with federal officials on the highways front - with hundreds of millions of dollars being threatened in a disagreement over federal requirements that minority business firms be given preference on highway contracts, even if they're not the lowest bidder.

That dispute is to be resumed after the first of the year - perhaps just in time for another round in the continuing disagreement on how well Texas is doing in enforcing the 55 mile-perhour speed limit. (Not well enough, the feds say, threatening to whack off some $8 million in aid.)

In the environmental area, the long-running argument over implamentation of a state air control plan appears to have been resolved - except for the question of whether Harris County (at least) will have to implement vehicle emission inspections and controls.

Texas apparently will get approval to administer federal requirements on solid and hazardous waste controls

- after amending its laws to provide stiffer penalties as desired by federal authorities.

Arguments between the state department of health and federal officials over drinking water standards, including the amount of flouride allowed, have subsided temporarily but aren't yet over.

Disposal of radioactive wastes has yet to come anywhere near being resolved - and some state and federal clashes are more than likely again on that issue.

Texas welfare officials and Washington officials engaged in a protracted argument on food stamps earlier in the year - and the handling of the new contract on the Medicaid remains as tender as an ingrown toenail (with federal officials watching to see just how that dispute between competing bidders is resolved).

Then there are such matters as the resolution of the boundary between Texas and Oklahoma at Lake Texoma which bears on whether Texas utilities can be made subject to federal rate regulation. And there's the state's attempt to get into a federal lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of the Windfall Profits Tax. That list isn't, by any means, exhaustive - nor is it intended to indicate that Texas is right, or wrong, in every instance; most of these issues are much more complex than that.

Nor is there anything particularly surprising that the interests of Texas and the federal government don't always coincide - that's part of a pattern that goes back well past the Tidelands controversy, and which was the subject of a certain amount of unpleasantness during the 1861-1865

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR The best biking

To The Editor:

Being the victim of a van-bicycle collision, my friends questioned my sanity when I returned to bicycle commuting. I realize the very large risk involved in riding a bicycle on Midland's busy streets and attempt to be as cautious as possible. I wear a helmet, have lights and a mirror on my bicycle, and try to follow the traffic laws concerning bicycling.

There is another important element, though, the other fellow driving the car. My safety is in that person's hands as well as mine. In traveling over 4,000 miles from my house to the County Library I have made an important observation. The Midland motorists, in general, are very courteous and respectful of bicyclists. I feel that this Christmas time is a good opportunity for me to give thanks to those people who have yielded the right of way to me at intersections, who have allowed me some space when passing. and who have tooted their horns to let me know they were there.

I also wish to thank the many people who stopped to help me when I had my accident on Dec. 3 (near the Dairy Queen on North Big Spring Street). Now if the city could only clean the garbage from the sides of the road on Big Spring Street, perhaps my bicycling would be a little safer!

Real superstars

To The Editor:

I am writing this letter to the citizens of Midland because I am very disappointed and feel that I need to share that disappointment with Mid-

I ask myself why Chaparral Center can be filled with young people when some champions of the rock musicdrug culture are booked in or some headliners of the country and western-Saturday Night Fever group are performing, while only 500 or so show up for three dedicated bona fide superstars. Superstars even by the world's standards. The fact that these superstars are Christians probably is the major reason for the lack of interest, and if that is true, then the indictment for the poor showing has to fall on the churches.

I am inclined to think that if Paul, Peter or any of the early church leaders could communicate with us. their major message would be one of disappointment, and maybe even anger at what has evolved from the original church based on Jesus Christ. Christ started one church, man has split it, prostituted it and weakened it with his denominations. Denominationalization has given us a luke warm group of churches that Tack power, strength or conviction. Their lack of concern for the spiritual health of the young people is as sad as the lack of interest of the young people's parents.

I am extremely thankful for the 500 who were blessed by the music and the testimonies of some very gifted athletes who are totally committed to Jesus Christ. I am sad for the thousands who were not so blessed. I am sorry that coctail parties, dinner parties, stage and movie shows and/or shopping are more important than hearing young dedicated men share God's word especially at this time of year when His Son's birthday is to be celebrated.

Good as his word

While reading Jerry Low Almond's letter published Dec. 14, 1980, I was moved to anger and sadness realizing a whole generation of children are being taught "Today's Philosophy by word and example.

When I was a child I often heard my elders say, "A man is as good as his word," or "His word is as good as gold." This seemed to be one of the greatest compliments a person could

Today, it seems, the popular quote might be, "A person's word is as good as the signed and sealed legal agreement you have with that person," or, If you can't take them to court don't trust them." A person who simply takes another's word is considered a fool while the person who cheats without getting caught is considered shrewd and often praised for

Perhaps I am a bit backward but if someone tells me he or she will do something I expect them to do it: otherwise I figure that person, business, government or whatever must be dishonest.

Most favored?

Modernization is a step in the right direction, so thinks Red China especially when the U.S. pays for it.

The Carter administration has established diplomatic relations with Red China and has guaranteed $2 billion in foreign aid and other economic benefits. It also led Congress to give "most favored nation" trading status to the communists.

Can you believe you're living in America? Helping the enemy is something that was unheard of a few years ago. Doing such things was considered treasonous.

What most Amrericans do not realize is that the Red Chinese are no different in their Marxism-Leninism. than the communists ruling Soviet Russia. They are out to destroy us as they keep telling us. Why not believe them for a change, they have an excellent record on this point.

We need to insist that our congressmen rescind the "most favored nation" trading status to the Red Chinese. Take the time to do it today before you forget.

Still missing

To The Editor:

Although the whereabouts of our daughter still remains a mystery, we want to thank our many friends and relatives for their prayers and words of encouragement over the last ten and a half months that Kristy has been missing. We know that the law enforcement personnel are doing everything possible to find her. A special thanks goes to Lt. Ed Ward for his continued concern and caring.

We can only hope and pray that some day we will know what happened to Kristy on February 2, 1980. This season of the year is very difficult but with God's help we will make it. May God bless each of you and we ask your continued prayers in the future, whatever that may bring.

Thanks, Elmo

Among the many faces missing from the public scene next year will be that of Elmo Linebarger, Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector for the past 15 years. His has been a remarkable record, contending with the biennial tax changes which the Texas Legislature passes, in addition to the other duties required of the office. From his initial appointment to fill a vacated office, through contested races, and lately winning as an unopposed candidate, Elmo has grown to be a highly regarded institution, accepted by all factions of the political arena. His image is so great that his assistant, Mrs. Frances Shuffield, ran unchallenged to be his successor. Her abilities and experience with Elmo will surely help maintain the quality of service Midland County has come to expect.

It is with great regret that I witness his departure from public life. May God grant him many healthful years to enjoy his well earned retirement.

Justice, not revenge, is motive

By ABRAHAM COOPER Special to The Los Angeles Times

Recently Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti appeared before the U.S. Supreme Court to argue the U.S. government's case against an alleged Nazi war criminal, Feodor Fedorenko. Many public figures, led by Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D.-N.Y., chairwoman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on immigration, refugees and international law, lauded this move for both its symbolic and practical effect on the continuing attempts to bring Nazi war criminals to justice. But some people questioned the necessity and fairness of such a move. Fedorenko, a Ukrainian national, by his own admission served as an armed guard at the infamous death camp at Treblinka, Poland, where 800,000 people were murdered by the Nazi genocide machine. The Justice Department has argued that Fedorenko beat and shot Jewish prisoners and lied about his involvement at Treblinka when he entered this country in 1949. A recent Boston Globe editorial asked if such actions against a sick 76-year-old man, who claimed to be a 'mere perimeter guard' acting to "save his own skin," serve the interests of justice or revenge. It questioned whether this prosecution violated "principles of equity," and suggested that it would be in the American spirit to forgive and forget. After all, even Sirhan Sirhan and the followers of Charles Manson become eligible for parole and may again be free citizens. Echoing such sentiment, recent newspaper articles have questioned the need to continue litigation against Andrija Artukovic, 80, who is wanted for the murder of thousands of innocent Serbs and Jews during World War II. The articles portrayed him as a grandfather who seeks only to live out his years as a seaside bungalow, and who is prevented from going about "his normal life" by an attempt to deport him to Yugoslavia for having lied to immigration officials about his war crimes: But these sentiments betray a failure to comprehend the uniqueness of the Nazi genocide programs and of those who resist the "biological solution" - old age - for the faceless perpetrators of the Holocaust

Simon Wiesenthal, famous Nazi hunter from Vienna, has brought to justice more than 1,100 Nazi war criminals, including Adolf Eichmann and the officer who arrested Anne Frank. Wiesenthal lost 89 members of his family and survived 41/2 years of Nazi brutality, but has pursued his work out of a sense of justice, not vengeance. When asked if he would prefer to see Josef Mengele, the infamous "angel of death" of Auschwitz, extradited to West Germany for trial or shot down in the alleys of South America, Wiesenthal has said repeatedly, publicly and privately, that he would opt always for the trial, despite the fact that West Germany has no death penalty.

Why? Because the revenge option is not really a viable one. What could possibly avenge the killing of Anne Frank or the deaths of 200,000 innocent children who perished at the hands of Mengele? Wiesenthal's view is that only trials of such individuals can serve justice in society; it is the only choice for those who want to teach their young that justice has no

The Boston Globe pointed to murderers relased or soon to be paroled as justification for dropping these litigations. But even if Sirhan or other murderers are paroled, they have had their day in court, and have paid their penalty as society defined it.

But the crime of genocide created an environment for a calculated policy of ruthless murder. Killers could often return each night to the comfort of their homes. It encompassed tens of thousands of unrepentant and largely unprosecuted people from every society in Europe. What Wiesenthal has sought during the past 35 years - and what the U.S. government, through the head of the Justice Department, seeks - is clearly not revenge but a measure of justice.

Perhaps the most profound point, and the one most difficult for the post-Auschwitz world to grasp, is that the Holocaust was conceived, planned and carried out not only by "madmen" but also by lovers of culture and holders of doctorates. Their plans were executed often with the help of volunteers from captured countries who owed no allegiance to the German Reich - only to the philosophy of hatred and bigotry that characterized Nazi doctrine.

Those who would reduce the Holo caust and its implications to an issue of Jews and Germans are woefully mistaken. In fact, Fedorenko, Artukovic and most other Nazi war criminals in this country are not German nationals. Many of Artukovic's victims were not Jews: These individuals cannot even hide behind the morally bankrupt claim that they were "just following orders." They volunteered to help carry out the "final solution." For years they have successfully relied on time as an ally, but, if our society permits justice delayed to become justice denied, we will leave a sad and dangerous legacy for future

We should heed the words of Simon Wiesenthal that "we dare not forget those in death whom we forsook in life." As the Fedorenkos and Artukovics ponder their fate, let us ponder the fate of those who fell victim to their barbaric actions. They never lived to play with their grandchil-

POSITIVE THINKING

He could have been in court, but wasn't

The judge was properly decked out in his suit and tie. Predictably, he was smoking his characteristic briar pipe. He uses Sir Walter Raleigh tobacco.

Except for the black robe he wasn't wearing, he could have been ready for court.

He wasn't. He was partying.

The judge donned this funny, makeshift "Mud Dauber" straw hat that was adorned with a corn cob pipe, strike-anywhere matches, fishing flies and his name - Perry D. Pick-

"He looks distinguished in that," said an amused fellow judge, Barbara Culver of the 318th State District Court. "Nobody in the world could look distinguished in that but him."

The "party" was a farewell coffeeand-sweets affair for Pickett, who, after 26 years of serving on the bench, is retiring. He'll be going fishing.

"I'm going to wear this down on the

The get-together for Pickett was put together by District Clerk Madge Wallis and her crew. They and other Midland County Courthouse folks paid tribute to the judge, gave him a book of doodlings of the judge's own doing, a gold watch, compliments and jests, sentimental things and that corny hat, which clerk Maxine Hirth had concocted. She called the one-ofa-kind fishing hat a "Rewolf Top" flower pot in reverse.

'I've got every kind of hat on the river," the judge said.

Those doodlings which the district clerk's office gave the judge were, in truth, designed by the judge himself while he was on the bench. They were mostly nonsense, perhaps similar to Edward Lear's limericks. Clever nonsense.

The judge did his doodlings and left the art work in the clerk's office for the amusement of all. Others, too, doodled in turn. One caricature depicted a frazzled udge and was captioned: "Judge

YMCAs may be 'therapeutic'

By LINDA DUFFIELD Associated Press Writer

HAGERSTOWN, Md. (AP) - Most people think of the YMCA as a place to swim, exercise or just hang out. But Robert Shestack has another idea.

Shestack, a registered pharmacist and a physical therapist who feels that most people dislike a hospital environment, has come up with the idea of running a physical therapy department out of the "People have a psychological fear of hospitals," Shestack said. "They go to a hospital only as absolutey necessary. They have a fear of medicine and tests in a nospital.

Physical therapy is an area which lends itself to a private setting, he said.

'There are hundreds of cities in the United States with private physical therapy offices," he said. But until he opened his office in the YMCA several weeks ago, Hagerstown was not one of them.

In his rooms at the Y, Shestack offers a variety of physical therapy services such as hot packs, cold packs, massage, electrical stimulation and exer

"But," he said, "I am going to try to specialize in special types of techniques of massage."

Shestack, who once studied to be a rabbi, said that one of these techniques was Shiatsu, a form of acupressure - acupuncture without the needles.

The idea of acupressure is "to locate a trigger point" by using a special technique, and then work on that area with finger pressure, said Shestack.

Therapists in this country tend to rely too much on fancy equipment as opposed to natural techniques, Shestack believes.

"American therapists are more oriented toward various types of equipment," he said, "while Euro pean therapists use various types of natural remedies, various forms of water and various types of

Company' was watching, too

By ERIC NEWHOUSE Associated Press Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) - Federal officials who spent the last two years watching a huge drug smuggling ring began to suspect 'The Company'' was peering back at them.

But it, wasn't until they began busting the ring that they discovered how sophisticated that scrutiny had been.

"They had the secret (radio) frequencies of federal, state and local authorities," Dennis Moriarty of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration in St. Louis said. "They had mechanical programmers and night-viewing devices.

"They had electronic geniuses in their employ capable of making their own equipment or modifying it to meet their own

Officials now say that between 1976 and 1980, as many as 200 people conspired to import 150 tons of marijuana from Colombia into the United States, flying it in with a private air fleet to airstrips they owned or leased.

"In terms of indictments, convictions, assets and volume of traffic, this is the largest in our history," said Rolland Hughes, special agent in charge of the DEA's St. Louis office.

Seventeen alleged Company members have pleaded guilty to charges of racketeering; 11 others were indicted in Alton, Ill., on Nov. 13. Hughes said approximately 40 more suspects will be indicted before the operation is cleaned up.

Six of the 11 indicted in Alton are still at large. Now in custody are James Mitchell, 50, of Brighton, Ill., purportedly a "direction". tor" of The Company; Bryan O'Neal Sullivan of Clearwater, Fla., the ring's alleged paymaster, both of whom were arrested last week in Alabama; Marvin Zylstra, 50, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; James Dugan of Bethalto, Ill., and Ligia Viana-Salzedo, 44, a Colombian accused in the indictment of being the Company's major supplier of marijuana.

Hughes said the first trial involving The Company is scheduled to begin Feb. 9 in East St. Louis, Ill.

The Company was formed in Alton in 1976 when two former high school buddies, Dugan and Richard Thorp, now both 33, were discussing ways to make some fast money with Mitchell, then a supervisor with the Olin Corp. in East St. Louis.

The Company quickly developed along the lines of a classic economic text. Federal officials outline a table of organization headed by a four-man board of directors: Dugan, Thorp, Mitchell and William Greenwald, 26, of Stewart, Fla. Thorp and Greenwald are now believed to be in the Bahamas.

Thorp, the reputed president of The Company, is said to have directed day-to-day operations. Separate divisions had the following responsibilities: -Real estate. Mitchell allegedly bought an air strip in Missouri and leased or used others in Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina. He also bought seven warehouses in Missouri, Illinois and Georgia. -Source. Greenwald was reportedly in charge of buying the marijuana for $70 a pound in Colombia.

-Air operations. Zylstra allegedly managed the fleet of Company planes, including DC-4s, DC-6s, and DC-7s.

-Ground operations. Dugan, who lost both legs to a landmine in Vietnam in 1967, supervised the unloading of marijuana from airplanes from his wheelchair, agents say.

-Distribution. Mitchell allegedly oversaw sale of the marijuana for $400 a pound throughout Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Georgia and South Carolina.

A two-man Company security team is accused of arranging two contract killings - one of an East St. Louis underworld figure, the other a Company member suspected of preparing to sell out. According to the DEA, the contracts were made but not

In addition, Zylstra is accused of killing a DEA informant and another man by sabotaging a plane which crashed while landing at a Jacksonville, Fla., airfield in July 1978.

Officials say The Company drew heavily on former servicemen for recruits and used a lie detector to screen them.

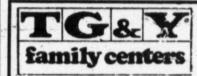

'The defendants would employ the services of skilled electronics experts who would employ counter-intelligence equipment to identify and remove electronic tracking devices from aircraft used in smuggling operations," according to the indictment. In four years, "The Company" allegedly smuggled in 25 marijuana shipments by air and one by sea, the latter an abortive venture in which 161/2 tons were lost in Louisiana. They also lost two air shipments, including 12 tons abandoned in a DC-7 near Thomson, Ga.

Officials have seized about $3 million in Company assets, but say they still don't have all the answers.

One question they are pursuing is whether The Company has links with another group in the Northeast called The Company, a collection of former servicemen who steal and sell secret

An FBI agent in Philadelphia has testified that an ex-Air Force officer from St. Louis is part of that group.

DEAR HELOISE

The most useful toy my children ever had was a large to put one of your return adblackboard. I bought a piece of masonite and put several coats of blackboard paint on the smooth side. Then, using door film. moulding. I made a frame and hung the board about 18 inches from the floor on one blank wall in their bedroom.

The little ones learned to write and draw, older ones did homework. During bad weather, it kept all of them entertained for hours (also their playmates).

FOR THE BIRDS DEAR HELOISE:

Pour off meat drippings into a dish and keep it in the freezer to save and feed the birds this winter.

I put the drippings on the shelf of the bird feeder. The birds love it and it's better for them than it is for us. They need it to keep warm! A.D.D.

SHOWING OFF CHRISTMAS CARDS DEAR HELOISE:

I've found a real neat way to display Christmas cards, or any other kind of greeting card.

DEAR HELOISE: I found that a six-pack one-liter soft drink carton could be very useful and colorful, too. My closet was getting very, very crowded, so I began looking for boxes and couldn't find anything but one of I noticed that the sections could hold shoes, so I put three pairs in and they fit!

Makes a pretty nice shoe rack, and it can be carried -Pretty inexpensive, huh?

Carmen White MONEY-SAVER DEAR HELOISE:

i had a bulky coat and seldom wore it as it was so cumbersome and heavy.

Out of desperation, I turned it inside out and clipped away the inner quilted lining (one between the coat and outer lining) close to the seams. The coat doesn't look any different, but it sure feels a lot more comfortable - not tight and bulky. I wear it so much now that it's practically worn Sometimes it pays to take a chance - especially when you haven't anything to lose, except a few pounds...

POLISH POINTER DEAR HELOISE:

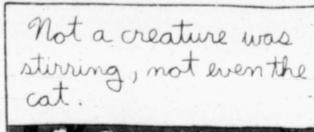

Here's a hint I use quite a bit. As we all know, fingernail polish bottles do not always come with stirring beads in the bottom.

Just drop three or four BBs in the bottle and shake away.

They really mix the polish in a hurry, especially the frosted Mrs. Frank Kraci
