Lobbying, hearings begin on budget plan

Carter's call for a balanced federal budget is getting its first congressional test as two panels open hearings that could give some indication of the task ahead. Even though Carter has not vet detailed how he wants to cut federal spending enough to eliminate the federal deficit, lobbying already has started to keep intact programs rumored to be in jeopardy.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D.W.Va., gave an indication of the problems ahead when he said over the weekend that special interest groups already were lobbying key cut favored programs.

"It's time that we learn to say no and say it loud enough that all these pressure groups can hear and understand we mean it," he said.

Carter's top inflation fighter, Alfred Kahn, was to be the major witness as the Senate Banking Committee opened hearings today on the president's plan to combat inflation.

The Joint Economic Committee also planned to hear about Carter's plans from Charles Schultze, chairman of the president's Council of bill.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — President Carter narrowly defeated Sen. Edward M. Kennedy in a Democratic presidential primary touted as a vote of confidence for Puerto Rican statehood.

But charges of stuffed ballot boxes and the margin of only 5 percent between the candidates raised doubts that there was a clear winner.

With almost all the vote counted in the Sunday primary, Carter had a 52 percent to 48 percent edge over the Massachusetts senator in the vote for delegate slates and also in the separate "beauty contest" - a non-binding popular vote.

That gave Carter 21 delegates to Kennedy's 20 and a 304-165 overall lead in the national delegate count. The 152 delegates at stake on Tuesday in Illinois is the most in any single primary so far. It takes 1,666 to win the Democratic nomination.

Kennedy, campaigning in Chicago, attempted to discount another loss calling the slim Puerto Rico defeat "very encouraging," adding "I think our campaign is on the move and we wait for the returns from Illinois.

Former Puerto Rican Gov. Rafael Hernandez Colon, who campaigned hard for Kennedy, said the Carter campaign had been guilty of voting fraud that would eliminate that final margin of about 35,000 votes. Hernandez Colon pledged to contest the outcome, charging that the Carter campaign had stuffed ballot boxes, gave voters already completed ballots and denied

Kennedy poll-watchers access to voting places. "If there is justice in the processes of the national a nominal campaign here, got 1,412 votes Democratic party, I have not the slightest doubt that we ing vote and 251 on the delegate voting. He won no shall prevail," the former governor said.

But Gov. Carlos Romero Barcelo, who stumped the island from end to end for Carter and urged Puerto Ricans to vote as a first step toward gaining statehood, applauded the outcome.

Although their proxies made statehood an issue, neither Kennedy nor Carter has taken a stand on Puerto Rico's future status.

The turnout of more than 830,000 voters on the island commonwealth was "a loud and clear voice saying we want to participate in the electoral process of the nation...a loud and clear voice for statehood," Romero

Less than half the island's 1.9 million registered voters took part compared with 86 percent participation in the last island-wide voting in 1976.

Puerto Rico is a Caribbean island with a population of 3.3 million. Its residents are U.S. citizens who participate in the selection of party candidates, but do not have a vote for president in the November election. As a U.S. commonwealth, it is largely self-governing. Residents are exempt from federal income taxes.

In the voting for slates of delegates which translate to convention delegates, with 98 percent reporting, Carter had 439,374 or 52 percent and Kennedy 403,888 or 48

In the non-binding or "beauty contest" popular vote, with 99 percent of the precincts counted, Carter had 445,-656 or 52 percent; Kennedy 416,103 or 48 percent.

Carter, Reagan hear good news as Illinois primary approaches

Carter and Ronald Reagan as they look for another big boost toward their party presidential nominations in the Illinois primary on Tuesday.

A poll published today by the Chicago Tribune showed Reagan moving ahead of Rep. John Anderson of Illinois, while Carter held a large lead over Sen. Edward M.

Carter also got a push by winning the popular vote in Puerto Rico's presidential primary Sunday, gaining 21 of the island's 41 delegate votes at the Democratic National Convention.

And it appeared the president would pick up at least 64 delegate votes in victories over Kennedy in Democratic party caucuses over the weekend in Mississippi, South Carolina and Wyoming. The latest Illinois poll gave Reagan 36 percent, Anderson 34 percent and George Bush 12 percent among people who said they intended to vote in the Republican presidential primary. A week ago, Anderson led with 33 percent to 31 for Reagan and 20 for Bush. However, the Tribune poll carries an error factor of plus or minus 5 percent, meaning that Reagan's and Anderson's positions could be reversed or Reagan could be farther ahead. On the Democratic side, Carter had 56 percent and Kennedy 23 percent. Carter's precentage dropped from 61 a week ago while Kennedy's support was unchanged. With the exception of Carter, who is continuing off the campaign trail, the major candidates were in Illinois on the final day before this first test with the voters of a large industrial state. Reagan was addressing the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations, while Kennedy planned to March in Chicago's St. Patrick's Day parade. Bush and Anderson were to visit several cities across the state. With 98 percent of Puerto Rico's precincts reporting, Carter had 52 percent of the vote to 48 percent for CHICAGO (AP) — The news is good for President him 13 of the state's 18 delegates and Kennedy the other five. But since Wyoming actually will have only 11 convention votes — as opposed to delegates — this means something like 7.9 votes for Carter and 3.1 for Kennedy. While Reagan has opened a sizeable lead over the Republican field as a result of two primary victories in two New England and four in southern states, he is locked in a battle in Illinois with Anderson.

Anderson, whose views are in sharp contrast to other GOP candidates, has attracted support from independent and Democratic voters crossing over to vote in Republican primaries. But Anderson's reluctance to declare he would support any GOP nominee, including Reagan, has drawn fire for alleged disloyalty. Reagan told a news conference Sunday he thought Anderson ought to ask himself if he might be more comfortable as a Democrat. Reagan, himself a former Democrat, said he wasn't going to "read anyone" out of the party but noted: "An individual must take a look and say, 'Am I more sympathetic to the views enunciated by the people in the Anderson responded by saying at one campaign stop, "I am proud to be a Republican.

Reagan also got good news over the weekend when former President Gerald R. Ford announced he would not enter the presidential race. Ford had said he was considering running because he feared Reagan was too conservative to win the general election in November.

Ford's decision must have been a "very hard" one, Reagan said, adding, "He wanted to get in, I know

The California governor also hinted that he expects soon to have the support of John B. Connally, who dropped out of the race for the nomination after losing to Reagan in South Carolina.

At an appearance in Schaumburg, a questioner asked Reagan if he expected to have Connally's help in the Texas primary. "I believe 'Big John' is going to cooperate quite warmly," Reagan replied.

Reagan also won Alaska's GOP caususes over the weekend, gaining 166 of the 285 delegates to a state convention to 14 for Bush and 19 whose allegiance is not draft of goals for Midland to accomplish during the decade still in its infancy

The conferees — a group consisting of people from all types of backgrounds - retreated to The Inn at Turtle Creek in San Antonio Friday afternoon and began the first of numerous sessions on Objectives for the 80s. They came out of seclusion late Sunday with a rough draft that will now be readied for neighborhood meetings.

Discussion areas were divided into nine areas — design of the city, education, recreation and entertainment, spiritual, local government, economy, housing, health and welfare and culture.

The 100 participants were divided into four discussion groups with a leader designated. They reviewed suggestions made by task forces which had formulated their ideas over a two-month period.

Although each of the nine areas had been given an hour for discussion, often the groups ran short on time with still much left unsaid. Nonetheless, talk continued during coffee breaks, through the meals and sometimes late into the evenings.

Several ideas became apparent as they were repeated by several task forces - work to bring life into the south and east sectors of the city, upgrade and develop parks, construct a civic auditorium and develop more projects intended for the elderly and handicapped.

While some ideas could be un-

Approximately 900 north Midland residential and business telephones may be affected by a cable cut somewhere in the vicinity of Wadley Avenue and Garfield Street, according to Penny Young with Southwestern Bell Telephone

"We think the break is somewhere between Wadley Avenue and Haynes Street, and that it will affect primarily Chaparral Apartments, Midland College and homes and businesses north of Wadley," Miss Young said.

"The problem is, the cable is called pulp cable, and it's very difficult to splice - very difficult to match.

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Afghan rebels today claimed to have inflicted considerable losses on Afghan government troops in fighting in three provinces

A statement by the Afghan National Liberation Front issued in Islamabad, Pakistan, said the government forces and the Soviet troops helping them suffered 50 dead and an undisclosed number of wounded in a rebel attack on a military base at Barri in the eastern province of Paktia on the Pakistan border.

The statement said the base was still under siege and claimed rebel losses in the fighting so far were two killed and nine seriously wounded.

Another squad of National Libera tion Front rebels attacked the military base at Kufry in the eastern province of Kunar, also on the Pakistan frontier, the statement said.

Many economists regard this highly industrialized nation as a model of the anti-inflation war. The cost of living rose by only 4.1 percent last year, in contrast to 13.4 percent in the United States, and is currently running at 5.5 percent, against 18 percent in the United States.

Two major reasons that prices have risen as much as they have in West Germany are the increase in the cost of imported oil and a boost in the sales tax. That they have not risen higher is attributed to a great extent to the tight rein Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's government keeps on the growth of the money supply.

BRAZIL

Runaway inflation is an ever-present reality in this South American giant. Consumer prices soared 77.3 percent in 1979, and at an annual clip of 62.4 percent in the first two months of this year.

The price surges are a product of the economic growth of fast-developing Brazil and the burden of oil price hikes. Brazil imports 80 percent of its oil. Government-controlled gasoline prices were jacked up 58 percent last November, for example, pulling overall inflation up by 4 percent.

The military government has tried a myriad of inflation-fighting tactics over the years. Currently it is trying to hold the growth of the money supply and cut its own spending and budget deficit. Recently it reached agreements with the biggest supermarket chains to freeze the prices of some essential products for up to four

Brazil has not had across-the-board wage and price controls, but the military men who lead the country can and do pressure unions and companies into restraint.

BRITAIN

The recent rise in consumer prices has paralleled U.S. inflation - 13.4 percent for 1979 and 18.4 percent currently. The 1979 inflation was spurred by such factors as richer wage settlements, rising oil prices and almost a doubling of the sales tax to 15 per-

Britain is nearing self-sufficiency in oil, but because the price of domestic oil generally follows international trends the consumer does not benefit directly.

The strategy of Prime Minister government is to attack inflation at what it believes are the roots - too much money in circulation, too much pay for too little production, too much government spending. But wage-price controls would appear to be anathema to Mrs. Thatcher's strong belief in free-market forces. In 1972-74, another Conser- has not put teeth in its loose wagevative government tried controls. In- price "guidelines."

flation was running at 8 to 9 percent before the controls and at 13 percent when they began to be dismantled by a new Labor government. Within 18 months of the lifting of the controls, the inflation rate shot to 27 percent.

CANADA The Canadians have had a more recent experience with wage-price controls, in 1975-78. At the outset the inflation rate stood at 10.6 percent, and the government of Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau predicted it would fall to 4 percent by 1978. Instead the 1977 rate was 9 percent and the government lifted the controls six months early Economists said the program was a success in limiting wages but not in holding down prices. The rate remained steady at about 9 percent last year but is expected to rise over 10 percent this year.

Inflation is lower than in the United States in part because energy prices are kept low — a gallon of gasoline is still under a dollar.

Many economists say the key problem with the economy in resourcesrich Canada is that so much of its industry is owned by foreigners, primarily Americans. The flow of profits out of the country weakens the Canadian dollar, which in turn makes imports from the United States costlier.

YUGOSLAVIA

President Tito established a unique system of "market socialism" in his communist land - in effect a kind of capitalism without capitalists, complete with competition among worker-run enterprises and pricing according to market forces.

But it is not a capitalism without inflation. Last year consumer prices rose 24 percent, and currently they are rising at a 36 percent annual

A severe imbalance in trade - too Margaret Thatcher's Conservative much imports, not enough exports and the dependence on imported oil are two factors blamed. Western economists also say workers' councils, which have almost complete control over wages, have in many cases ignored ceilings suggested by the government. But the labor unions complain that the government

Monahans man dies in accident

MONAHANS - A Monahans man died early Sunday after his car ran into a brick wall approximately 3.3 miles south of Monahans.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Abel Polanco, 23, was westbound on FM 1233 about 1:25 a.m. Sunday. He failed to stop at a stop sign at the intersection of FM 1233 and Texas Highway 18, crossed Texas 18 and hit a brick wall, the DPS spokesman said.

Polanco died on impact, according to DPS reports.

The accident was investigated by Trooper Hector Hernandez, assisted by Trooper Sammy Prieto.

Pensions, Social Security stay ahead of inflation

many Americans watched their buying power dwindle in the 1970s, those receiving Social Security benefits and government pensions actually kept ahead of inflation

A check by The Associated Press showed that increases in Social Security benefits totaled 140 percent and military and civil service pensions were raised an average 126 percent in the last decade. At the same time, the Consumer Price Index increased by 106 percent in the decade, meaning that prices a little more than dou-The inflation-beating increases were the result of congressional decisions to boost Social Security benefits considered too low and to to give catchup raises to the military and civil service retirees. Social Security beneficiaries, whose receive cost-of-living raises once a year, are due an increase of at least 13.3 percent and probably closer to 14 percent in July. That will bring the total increment since 1970 to 172 per-The 126 percent increase for military and civil servants, who receive cost-of-living adjustments twice a year, includes the 6 percent pension boost on March 1. They will get another, probably larger hike on Sept.

Those figures include retirement benefits as well as disability and other special payments. For retired workers only, average benefits climbed even faster. Social Security benefits for 19 million retired workers averaged $340 a month in 1979, almost triple the $118 a month payment in 1970.

The average annuity for 1 million retired civil servants jumped from $306 a month in 1970 to $1,010 a month 1.1 million retirees grew from $326 to an estimated $800. Social Security benefits are lower because they were intended from the start 45 years ago to supplement other pensions and savings. For civilian workers, the retirement and health benefits are meant to provide enough income to live on.

The military pays retirement benefits only for 20 or more years' service, and the half-pay provision after 20 years long has been a reward of military life.

Congress approved a string of big Social Security increases in the late 1960s and early 1970s, including 15 percent in 1970, 10 percent in 1971, a record 20 percent in 1972 and 11 percent in 1974. In 1972 it also tied Social Security to the CPI, starting in 1975.

Government pensions passed inflation because retirees got an extra 1 percent with each of 10 cost-of-living raises from late 1969 to 1976 as compensation for an average five-month lag between a rise in the Consumer Price Index and a raise in their checks.

A 49-year-old Midland man was transferred to Odessa Medical Center Hospital Sunday after being injured in a motorcycle accident about 1:45

Gene S. Holcomb of Route 1, Box 171-A1, was listed in stable condition this morning in Medical Center Hospital with head and internal injuries. His wife, Joyce Maye Holcomb, 50, was treated and released from Midland Memorial Hospital Sunday. According to the Department of Public Safety, the Holcombs were on a motorcycle eastbound on Interstate 20, approximately five miles west of Stanton. A car driven by Jerry L. Slates of Terrell also was eastbound

A DPS spokesman said Slates' vehicle was in front of the motorcycle and attempted a U-turn. Holcomb "laid the motorcycle down" to avoid hitting the car. The two vehicles did not collide, according to the DPS.

The accident was investigated by Trooper Tim Baker.

Shah leaves hospital; Surgery delayed for weeks

Dr. Michael DeBakey, the famed Texas surgeon and a key member of the shah's medical team, said Sunday the surgery would be delayed "for weeks." He said the deposed monarch 'was no worse than he was in January" but "any man with lymphoma is severely ill.'

The medical team of 15 Panamanian and five American doctors said that after extensive tests on the shah, they decided to put off any surgery until his condition was "optimal. This indicated they were waiting until he was stronger.

The shah was brought to the Paitilla Medical Center on Friday because it was thought the lymph cancer he has had spread to the spleen, a lymphatic organ that helps regulate the compo-

"He was not feeling well and it was first thought his primary disease, the cancer, was the problem," said one of the Panamanian doctors. "This was a false alarm, but he will eventually undergo surgery once his condition is stabilized.

The doctor, who declined to be identified, said tests determined that a mild case of pneumonia coupled with a bad sore throat were to blame for the shah's lack of strength. But Mark Morse, a spokesman for the shah, denied this.

Other medical sources said the shah was examined with the aid of radioactive materials to determine the scope and spread of the cancer in his system.

The shah and his wife, Empress Farah Diba, returned to Contadora Island 35 miles southeast of Panama City Sunday afternoon. The shah, who fled Iran during the Islamic Revolution there 14 months ago, moved to the resort island last December after leaving the United States, where his gall bladder was removed and he treatment for the cancer.

The incident occurred Thursday, according to Bernard Glassman, a member of the hospital's law firm, Blank, Rome, Klaus & Comisky.

"I don't think there's anything else to say," Glass-man said in a telephone interview Sunday night. He declined to confirm the details published Monday in the Philadelphia Inquirer. The paper identified Annie Robinson, 58, of southwest Philadelphia as the woman who was to get the back surgery and got the gland extraction instead. The paper did not identify the other woman.

The parathyroid glands, which were removed, produce hormones and are adjacent to the thyroid

"It's something that will be looked into and appropriate actions will be taken so that it doesn't happen

Levin said he did not know the nature of the surgery and that no organs had been removed from either patient.

"But nevertheless it's embarrassing and we'll do what we can to rectify it to the patients," he said. Mrs. Robinson's mother, Carrie Stevens, 76, said that her daughter was not wearing an identification tag on her wrist when she saw her in the hospital, according to the report. Such tags usually are given to all patients at hospitals.

Contemplating the past at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum and Hall of Fame where he serves as trustee, Martin Allday, candidate for Mayor of Midland in the April 5th election, states, "Maintaining our status as the 'Headquarters City of the Permian Basin' for the oil and gas industry is one of my goals for Midland." Martin Allday has been a Midland resident for the past 28 years.

Fort Bliss youth latest victim of rare disease

By JACK STILLMAN

ATLANTA (AP) - Doctors and researchers are puzzled by a rare disease, caused by microbes found throughout the environment, which has killed only about 20 persons in the United States in 32 years.

The latest victim is a 21/2-year-old boy who lived on the Fort Bliss Army reservation at El Paso, Texas, the national Center for Disease Control

The disease, a rare form of amebic meningoencephalitis, is caused by amoeba, organisms which are found in lakes, ponds, the air and soil, The microbes are ubiquitous, occurring throughout the world, but the infections are exceedingly rare, said Dr. G. Alexander Carden, a medical

Carden said it has not been proven, but a brain biopsy indicates that the child somehow was infected with the rarer of two forms of amoeba. He said tests indicate that the 2½-year-old boy is believed to have been killed by Acanthamoeba, listed as the cause of death for only 20 persons in 32

A more familiar kind of amoeba, known as Negleria, has killed more than 100 persons in the same period, he said.

The microbe which causes Negleria is generally found in lakes and ponds, including many recreation areas, and is ingested into the system through the nose, Carden said.

The history of the boy's illness is reported in the CDC's Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

The child first became ill in January 1979, while living at Fort Bliss. He died about nine months later at Children's Hospital at Pittsburgh.

"We do not know how he got the amoeba in his system, or even if it came from the Fort Bliss area," Carden said Friday in an interview. "We only know that that is where he lived when he became ill."

Both forms of the disease usually cause death, but unlike Negleria which can be fatal in 10 days, Acanthamoeba can drag on for months, Car-

The Long-held belief that American motorists would pay any price to drive is fast proving to be

In 1974, after the Arab oil embargo and the qua-drupling of world oil prices, many in the United States doubted that increasing prices at the American gasoline pump would do much to curb consumption. People would give up almost anything, so the argument went, rather than reduce their driving.

But six years later, those doubts are being dispelled. Americans have cut back their use of gasoline sharply below what analysis were projecting in the mid-1970s. Moreover, total percent last year and continues to drop in 1980, leading most experts to conclude that 1978 gasobillion gallons or about 16.4 gallons per week for each gasoline-fueled vehicle - will never be

Since 1973, average gasoline prices, including taxes, have risen to $1.19 a gallon (for leaded regular at a full-service station) from 38.8 cents a

Both women symbolize the maturation of a potent new political force that is reaching into nearly every American community: organized teacher power. The long-held notion that teachers and politics-shouldn't mix has been jettisoned. Like a giant suddenly awakened from slumber, America's teachers have undergone a radical conversion, all within the relatively short span of a decade. From a largely passive group of public servants, they have turned to the electoral process with a vengeance, winning for themselves a role as one of the key power brokers in presidential politics. The latest reminder came Sunday when the "You can't lobby effectively for teachers unless you 550,000-member American Federation of Teachers have friends" in government, from city hall to the endorsed Sen. And the NEA is not only big. With teacher affiliates in all 50 states and nearly 10,000 communities, it is

"I would say without doubt that the NEA has become the most politically effective union in the country," observes a top Labor Department official. "They're large and not just concentrated in urban areas like the United Auto Workers and other - White House that is scattered with presidential aides for President Carter's re-election effort in Tuesday's major industrial unions. They also tend to be communitites and representative of the population at large. They are a powerful, powerful group."

NEA officials say the rapid rise in teacher political power stems from the mid-1960s, when state legislatures first began granting teachers and other public employees collective bargaining rights When teachers got collective bargaining rights, gates.

Emphasizing her theme for this biennium, Virginia Morris, governor of District Nine, Altrusa International Inc., presented her three areas of major interest when she addressed the local Altrusa Club on her official visit Scene was a luncheon meeting at Midland Hilton.

"The Future is Now," chosen by Ms. Morris as her motto for her twoyear term as District Governor, also emphasizes Altrusa International's theme of "Rise to Human Needs."

Mrs. Reuben Schleifer, Chester,

What a wonderful letter, Mrs. Schleifer, thank you. Congratulations on becoming a grandmother.

There is a very easy way to convert slacks to maternity wear, but I'm afraid the process is irreversible. You can buy maternity stretch panels at most fabric shops. These can be stitched into the front of slacks or skirts. The only way the slacks could be worn later would be with overblouse-type tops such as long sweaters,

Second of Ms. Morris' goals is growth, which also means memberparticipation by securing new members of the club. She said that members who were aware of prospects who were qualified and classified, would present these persons as potential members of her club, thus promoting its growth and providing new impetus and new ideas. She also said that Altrusa would continue its fight against illiteracy, particularly on the adult level. She urged the membership to meet club problems by participation and cooperation with its projects.

Governor Morris, who is the mayor of Sherman, was introduced by Myrtlene Bearden, club president.

During committee reports, Beverly Dyer, chairman of community service, reported that the Astra Club for teen-age girls will complete its plans for organization.

She also reported that crime prevention block parties were continuing. She uged members to host these neighborhood parties and noted that it was not necessary for a person to be an Alrusan to host such a meeting but that members would be available to help if needed.

Roberta Wornell, chairman of vocational services, reported that the club will again participate in the Christmas in April project.

But Julie was torn and troubled by the divorce; it made her doubt that love can endure, that anyone finds happiness. She says she has overcome those fears: "I'm more optimistic than Id have thought possible."

Her father, a psychologist, and her mother, a writer, were divorced in 1966. Mrs. List and her two young daughters stayed in their suburban Connecticut house. List moved into New York. His visits with his daughters were scheduled weekends, all of August.

"I missed my father, so I was glad to know there would be fixed times for me to see him. I couldn't have known then how disruptive this kind of life would be....From now on, seeing my father was to be a scheduled event. The spontaneity was gone."

That is why the rancher's face, weathered by decades of exposure to summer sun and winter cold, crinkled into a broad smile as he greeted Ronken.

At the minister's urgng, they went to the pasture to finish feeding the cattle, this time with Hespe driving the truck and Ronken handling the pitch fork. The chores done, they returned to the small ranch house to talk quietly, to pray and to celebrate Communion.

The ranch home of Clarence and Lois Hopkins, the second stop for Ronken this day, is located at the end of a driveway 71-2 miles long. "That's how far we have to go to our mail box," Mrs. Hopkins noted.

The nearest school or grocery store is in Ekalaka, a 120-mile round trip,

In contrast to his flashy plane, Ronken's personal approach is quiet and low-key. His pastoral calls last two or three hours, and often include a meal with the family. If there are chores to be done, he helps. If his cowboy boots are muddy, he takes them off before he enters the house.

He remembers the names of children and grandchildren, and asks about them all. He brings news from rural neighbors and from townsfolk. forgot about the power line." His plane's skis snagged the line, nor is 69 years old or 39. They dismiss snapped off the tops of three poles and dragged poles and line several hundred feet before he managed to land

POWER LINES are not the only hazard the 42-year-old Ronken confronts. As he flew back to Buffalo, S.D. where Rural Fishermen has its headquarters in a hangar alongside a gravel runway, he passed within 25 feet of a large eagle that was flying the opposite drecton at precisely the same altitude.

The eagle was big enough to rip a hole in the fiber-covered airplane, but the pilot was nonchalant about the close encounter. "Beautiful bird, isn't it?" he said to his somewhat rattled passenger.

Ronken came to Buffalo 10 years ago - "fresh out of the seminary in Minnesota" - to serve as pastor for three churches in Montana and South Dakota. Even though he was driving a 120-mile circuit each Sunday, Ronken said he became aware that his ministry was reaching only a fraction of the region's rural residents.

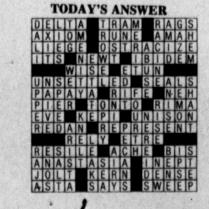

With the encouragement of several rancher members of his parish, Ronken began exploring the possbility of a broader outreach program. Rural Fishermen was the upshot. It began operations in 1977 and now has a $40,000 annual budget built around individual and church donations from as far away as California. He also has a five-minute radio show three times a week on a station in Sturgis, S.D., which donates the time.

"RURAL FISHERMEN has to still be considered an experiment," Ronken said. "As we try to find a way to mnister to these people, we live month by month. Our finances are a painful, sometimes precarious situation. My salary for February isn't assured yet," said the minister, who is paid $12,000 a year.

Churches, he said, traditionally try to reach the most people for their dollars, which means most of their money goes to urban areas or to support missions in heavily-populated countries overseas.

"I can understand that," he said, "but these ranchers, living both far from town and far apart, need to sense God's all inclusive love too ..

'We have no grandiose ideas. We're just trying to help these isolated people remember that God is aware of them, and that He cares."

Phil Crane finds voters shun 'younger Reagan'

the repeated suggestion by columnists and competitors that Reagan is just too old for the job.

A majority of the GOP voters in five of the recent primaries said Reagan's age made no difference in their judgments of his abilities to handle the presidency, Associated Press-NBC ews polls in those states showed. Of course, Reagan doesn't get the votes of those who think his age is a problem. But that group generally has been so small that it really hasn't hurt him.

All of this could change, as the nominating process drones along, moving into the Midwest this week. An incident that highlights the drawbacks of an older president or some other event could swing perceptions around before the convention four months away. But thus far, the "age issue" just hasn't been an issue.

In Florida, for example, 64 percent of the GOP voters said Reagan's age didn't make a difference. Fifteen percent said his age made him less able to handle the presidency, but 14 per-cent said it made him more able. The rest were not sure.

Republican voters in New Hampshire, South Carolina and Georgia

Only in Massachusetts, where Reagan came in a very close third, was the pattern even slightly different.

In the Bay State, 32 percent of the voters said Reagan's age made him less able to handle the job, while 56 percent said it made no difference.

The difference between Massachusetts and the other states probably can be traced to the influx of independents attracted to the GOP primary to vote for Rep. John Anderson. Voters in that category were not particularly friendly to Reagan on any issue. In each state, Reagan rolled up big margins among those to whom h age is irrelevant. He took that group by a 63-15 margin in New Hampshire, a 66-22 edge in Florida and similar majorities in the other states. Among those Republicans who were concerned about Reagan's age, Anderson and George Bush generally split the vote. But even if one candidate had gotten all those votes, he could not have overcome Reagan's lead among those who brushed aside

And how did Crane do in his effort to be the younger Reagan?

He got the votes of only 2 percent of the Republicans in New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Florida who said Reagan is too old to be president.

Bad books said corrupting China's younger generation

By VICTORIA GRAHAM

PEKING (AP) - Underground hest sellers like "The Maiden's Heart" are corrupting young people, encouraging criminal activity and illicit sexual relations, a reader has complained to the China Youth

He urged confiscation of the books. Reader Xiao Lun wrote that transcripts of "bad books" are circulating among middle-school students in Harbin, Qiqihar, Jinan, Chongqing and Zhengzhong.

"Comrade editor," he wrote in a recent issue, "these books have exerted a very bad influence. "The bad book, 'The Maiden's Heart,' was concocted by some people with extremely vicious intentions to poison our juveniles."

He said such books take advantage of young people's curiosity and thirst for knowledge "to stir up the base passions and flagrantly spread the germs of hooligan mentality."

The diatribe against "bad books" is part of a national campaign against books and songs which are considered immoral. The most popular song in Shanghai, "When Will the Gentleman Return?" currently is being denounced for its live-for-today attitude. Its popularity is undiminished.

Reader Xiao wrote that some students who read bad books - distributed in mimeograph or hand copied form - lose interest in study and even engage in courtship.

'In class they flirt with one another, pass notes and send gifts," he complained. "Some, immitating the characters in the book, had illicit sexual relations and some even embarked on the road of crime."

Some young people who read "The Maiden's Heart" fell into a trance and began to fail in school, he said.

Teachers, parents and cadres of the youth league are disturbed," he wrote, "and hope the department concerned will take prompt and decisivie measures to confiscate bad books such as 'The Maiden's Heart'.

He said he had received letters of complaint from various cities.

clean soon

FREDERICKSBURG, Va. (AP) -A state official said today the Rappahannock River should be cleansed of fuel oil within 10 days and the city could then resume using it as its primary water source.

The clearing of No. 2 heating oil from the river is proceeding on schedule, George Jones of the Virginia Of fice of Emergency and Energy Services, said in a telephone interview.

Fredericksburg City Manager John Nolan said earlier that conservation efforts had reduced the city's use of emergency water supplies by more than one million gallons per day and would enable it to stretch those supplies another 20 days.

About 63,000 gallons of heating fuel spilled from a ruptured pipeline March 6 near Manassas and into the Rapidan River, which feeds into the Rappahannock, the city's main source of water.

Although the Occoquan Reservoir was threatened by a simultaneous spill of more than 200,000 gallons from the same pipeline that contaminated Bull Run Creek, an Environmental Protection Agency spokesman said residual effects of that spill will be
