Mohammad Reza Pahlavi

Shah undergoes surgery in Cairo

By MAGDA EL-SANGA
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The deposed Shah of Iran underwent surgery today to remove water and pus that have built up in his lungs because of pneumonia, a reliable source reported.

The informant, who declined to be identified, said the operation at the Maadi military hospital in suburban Cairo lasted about one hour and was performed by a team of French and Egyptian doctors.

A source close to the family said ex-Iranian monarch Mohammad Reza Pahlavi was "all right" after the surgery and hoped to leave the hospital in a few days. Egyptian President Anwar Sadat had said the operation would be of a "minor" nature. The hospital issued no official announcement.

The semi-official Egyptian newspaper Al Ahram reported earlier that the surgery would involve insertion of a tube at the base of the lung to draw out the fluid.

The 60-year-old Pahlavi was readmitted to the hospital Friday, three months after a team of doctors there removed his cancerous spleen shortly after his arrival from Panama.

Following the splenectomy, doctors said the lymphatic cancer from which he has suffered for years had spread to his liver and would be treated with chemotherapy.

But Al Ahram said the doctors recently suspended the anti-cancer drug treatments because they believed it weakened his resistance to infection and led to the onset of pneumonia two weeks ago.

Pneumonia is a common side effect while undergoing chemotherapy, according to one prominent Egyptian doctor. He said the anti-cancer drugs lower the blood's count of white cells — the body's chief defense against infection.

The presence of water and pus in the lungs was a further complication of pneumonia, Al Ahram said.

The Al Ahram report earlier today said two French doctors who arrived Sunday recommended the operation be postponed for at least 48 hours so they could make further tests on Pahlavi. The newspaper said an American chemotherapy specialist, identified only as

Dr. Coleman, also arrived in Cairo to assist in the treatment of the former monarch.

Sadat paid a visit to Pahlavi Sunday and later told reporters his condition had shown "great improvement." He said Pahlavi was strong enough to talk with him for an hour.

The Egyptian leader cut short a visit to Alexandria, on the Mediterranean Sea, to fly to Cairo and see the shah after being told Saturday that his condition was "very serious."

"As I stated yesterday I had great concern. Today, thank God, there is great improvement," Sadat said. "A team of French and Egyptian doctors are seeing to it that everything is under control."

The shah's wife, Empress Farah Diba, and three of the couple's four children have been keeping vigil at the hospital and have not returned to their residence since he was hospitalized. The Pahlavi family has been living in the Kubbeh Palace, a presidential guesthouse in a Cairo suburb.

Killer heat wave continues

Up to 42 deaths blamed on weather

By the Associated Press

A weeklong killer heat wave is still blistering the Southwest, decimating chicken farms and shriveling peaches, straining air conditioners and aggravating fires on tens of thousands of acres in the Colorado Rockies and Arizona.

Up to 42 deaths have been blamed on the triple-digit temperatures.

The heat killed millions of chickens at Arkansas poultry farms, and farmers were predicting losses as high as $5 million. Dairy cattle in Wichita County, Texas, reportedly were giving less milk.

Peaches dried on the trees in Texas, and as the sun scorched pastureland, some farmers were rushing to cut hay early.

More than 25,000 acres were blazing in Arizona brush fires, and firefighters from Oregon, California and Montana joined forces in Colorado to battle uncontrolled fires over 9,600 acres.

Kansas had a score of brush fires over the weekend and fire officials

Texans were urged to curb outdoor activities and to stay out of the blazing sun and keep their air conditioners or fans going. Dallas Power & Light said people who need air conditioning to stay healthy should not turn off the cooling units to save on electric bills. Spokeswoman Joan Hunter said the company wasn't encouraging "an electric-free-for-all" but would work out special payment plans.

were pleading with people to forgo Fourth of July fireworks after a long dry spell and seven straight days of 100-plus temperatures.

In Texas, temperatures soared to new records across the sun-baked state. Wichita Falls's 112-degree reading shattered a 56-year-old record by six degrees. The mercury soared to 108 degrees at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport, 106 at El Paso, 104 in Lubbock and Abilene and 103 in Waco. Heat stroke has claimed six victims, Texas medical examiners say, and the deaths of 28 other people may be related to the heat.

In the Texas heat wave of July 1978, 24 people died of heat-related causes.

In Arkansas and Oklahoma, at least four people died in each state over the weekend because of the heat.

The hellish temperatures pose the greatest threat to the elderly and poor, health officials say. But in Dallas County, a 6-month-old child was among those who fell victim to the heat.

Texans were urged to stay out of the blazing sun and keep their air conditioners or fans going. And Dallas Power & Light Co. said people who need air conditioning to stay healthy should not turn off the cooling units to save on electric bills. Spokeswoman Joan Hunter said the company wasn't encouraging "an electric-free-for-all" but would work out special payment plans.

Three "heat relief" centers that had been opened for elderly people without air conditioning were closed because few people showed up.

Texans were advised to curb outdoor activities, and officials in Wichita Falls were considering calling off a summertime boys' baseball program, because of the heat.

In Wichita County, scorching temperatures were wilting crops in the field. "Rain and irrigation is the only thing that will save us now," said county agent Don Decker. "Fruit crops are severely damaged and peaches especially are turning into little knots."

In Oklahoma, where weekend temperatures climbed as high as 111 degrees, the concrete-slab roadway on a portion of Interstate 40 "blew up" as searing temperatures caused it to expand.

Groups want PUC to stop cut-offs of people's power

AUSTIN (AP) — Two consumers' organizations say they will ask the Public Utility Commission to ban power shut-offs when such action would be harmful to health, like during this week's blistering heat wave.

"One-hundred degree plus temperatures throughout the state this month brings home the reality that electric service is a necessity and, in many cases, is vital to a healthful environment," said a joint statement from Texas Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now (ACORN) and Texas Consumers Union.

"We want to ensure that no one goes without electric services during times like these just because someone is too poor to pay his or her entire bill."

The organizations said they would file a petition with the commission on Tuesday requesting it adopt rules which would prohibit electric utilities from cutting service to customers under certain conditions.

Dallas Power & Light said Friday, when temperatures there reached 112 degrees, customers with heavy bills will be allowed to pay them off in installments.

Carol M. Barger, attorney for the Consumers Union Southwest regional office, said the rules being asked are based on standards recommended by the U.S. Department of Energy.

She said the proposed rules also provide:

— All customers be provided with a statement of their rights as customers.

— Customers be given the opportunity to pay their bills on a deferred payment plan if their bills are delinquent and they are unable to pay the entire bill.

— Utility service may not be terminated until the customer has been given prior notice.

— Any customer requesting the opportunity to dispute termination of service shall be given a hearing before an impartial judge.

GOP conservatives fret over No. 2 spot on ticket

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the certainty that their longtime favorite will head the Republican ticket, some conservatives are threatening to sit out the election unless they can have Ronald Reagan — and his running mate, too.

Though none of the men on Reagan's list of prospective vice presidents differs with his philosophy to any remarkable degree, party hard-liners want a perfect matchup. And they're growing increasingly loud about it as Reagan nears his decision.

There are at least some signs that Reagan may be moving their way. One source, who asked not to be identified, said over the weekend that moderates George Bush and Sen. Howard Baker Jr. of Tennessee are no longer the hot prospects they were a month ago, while Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York have moved into serious contention along with Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana.

The strategy of conservative groups includes plans to lobby the Reagan camp right to the last minute, if necessary, from a van parked outside the convention hall in Detroit.

Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., who heads the American Conservative Union, says it boils down to the "political game of drawing lines where we don't want people to step."

"This really is, in a way, a struggle for Ronald Reagan's political soul," says Baker, a mope moderate Republican who is the target of much of the conservative unrest.

Though he has been prominently mentioned as a No. 2 possibility, many conservatives have never forgiven him for voting for the Panama Canal treaties.

And Reagan, now riding high in the saddle of public opinion, can ill afford to have conservatives do to him what liberals did to Hubert Humphrey in 1968.

Humphrey lost to Richard M. Nixon in 1968 when liberal Democrats, angered at Humphrey's support for President Lyndon B. Johnson's policies in Vietnam, sat on their hands.

Selection of a non-conservative running mate "doesn't mean conservatives are going to take their marbles and go home," Bauman said. "This is not a contest for ideological purity. It's a contest for the president of the United States."

Federal job program employs 194 in Midland

By SUSAN BAKER
Staff Writer

Congress is often blamed for a lot of this country's problems, but one of its measures designed to ease the unemployment situation has certainly been a success in Midland.

Thanks to the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA), 194 Midlanders are now receiving job experience and on-the-job training opportunities they may never have had otherwise.

The program is funded through grants from the U.S. Department of Labor.

According to Donna Harrison, assistant manpower director for the Manpower-CETA Regional Office in Midland, CETA is designed for those persons who are economically disadvantaged, unemployed, inexperienced or otherwise handicapped in the job market.

Lack of education is one barrier that many CETA applicants claim. "A lot of our participants don't have high school diplomas," said Harrison.

"The real purpose of CETA is to get participants into unsubsidized employment by giving them the skills they need to get a job," she said.

Financial need and unemployment are the two criteria considered when applicants are reviewed for the program.

Persons from about 14 years old are accepted for the program, Harrison said. There is no upper age limit.

"We work with several public agencies, private businesses and local training groups such as Midland College. The program consists of either vocational training in a classroom or on-the-job training in a worksite," she said.

Participants are placed in jobs either with private firms or non-profit public service groups. CETA provides the salaries (minimum wage) for participants in public service jobs, while salaries for workers in private businesses are paid by the businesses themselves, with reimbursement from CETA of about half the expense.

Some public service groups who hire CETA workers include the Midland Center for Mental Health and Mental Retardation, Big Brothers-Big Sisters, United Way, Casa de Amigos, Multiple Sclerosis Foundation, the Texas Employment Commission, Department of Human Resources, and the Midland County Library.

"Participants receive training in all kinds of fields — clerical work, auto mechanics, nursing, welding, machine work, cosmetology, and drafting are just a few," Harrison said.

Upon enrollment, participants are assigned to counselors who assess their needs and abilities and work out training plans for them, while at the same time developing jobs for them to enter when the program is completed.

"Unfortunately, we can't guarantee that everyone who completes their program will be able to get a job," said Harrison. "Our purpose is to give the participant the tools he needs in order to find a job."

Barbara Timm, mother of an American hostage being held in Iran, leaves a press conference at Dulles International Airport near Washington Sunday. Mrs. Timm was returning from a trip to Paris where she abandoned plans for a second trip to Iran. (AP Laserphoto)

Hostage's mother returns to U.S.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Barbara Timm, mother of the youngest American hostage in Iran, criticized the State Department when she returned home after abandoning a second trip to Tehran.

The trip was canceled in Paris because the State Department refused to allow her and attorney Carl McAfee of Norton, Va., to present a resolution seeking a discussion of the hostage issue between the Iranian parliament and the U.S. Congress, she said Sunday.

In Iran, the Foreign Ministry said that Mrs. Timm, 41, had been denied a visa to visit her son. No reason was given, but a ministry spokesman said McAfee would be allowed to visit Tehran.

He stressed that Iranian officials had given them clearance to come to Iran, but their decision to return home was based solely on the State Department restrictions. He did not elaborate.

In April, Mrs. Timm, her husband, Kenneth Timm, and McAfee defied President Carter's ban on American travel to Iran. Mrs. Timm visited her 20-year-old son, Marine Sgt. Kevin Hermening, youngest of the 53 American hostages, for nearly an hour. She is the only hostage relative to be allowed to visit with the captives.

The Carter administration declined to prosecute the Timms following their return, even though Mrs. Timm caused a storm of controversy by apologizing to the Iranian people for the aborted hostage rescue mission the United States mounted.

Mrs. Timm said she and McAfee had hoped it would be possible to make the latest trip without discussing the resolution. But she said they were not willing to risk the consequences if the Iranians brought up the issue.

However, they were told that under no circumstances could they discuss the resolution, she said. Fifty members of Congress have reportedly signed the resolution.

"We don't understand the reason why that restriction was put on," she said. "We were told our government wants to solve this hostage crisis."

The State Department did not give any reason for imposing the restriction, she said. U.S. citizens, though, are prohibited by law from conducting negotiations with foreign governments on behalf of their country.

She also objected to a restriction prohibiting McAfee from going to Iran without her. He called that an "unusual travel restraint."

Mrs. Timm left for Paris Thursday night after the Carter administration granted her a waiver from its 2-month-old ban on travel to Iran.

State Department officials said permission for the trip was granted on humanitarian grounds. A State Department spokeswoman declined to comment Sunday night on the latest developments involving Mrs. Timm.

Volcano belches steam following nearby quake

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — The strongest earthquake in several days has rocked an area northwest of Mount St. Helens, and minutes later the volcano belched a 12,000-foot plume of steam, scientists reported.

An earthquake registering more than 3 on the Richter scale occurred at 10:42 p.m. Sunday northwest of the mountain, said Steven Bryant, spokesman for the University of Washington seismology laboratory in Seattle.

The quake was picked up by earthquake monitoring stations across the state, said Bill Coble, spokesman for the Federal Emergency Management Agency. The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded by seismographs, and a quake of magnitude 3.5 can cause slight damage.

Minutes later, the volcano belched steam as high as 12,000 feet and then settled back into its pattern of intermittent blasts of steam to about 10,000 feet, Coble said.

Harmonic tremors — the tiny, rhythmic earthquakes associated with the subterranean movement of molten rock — abated Sunday after shuddering through the mountain on Saturday, Bryant said. Harmonic tremors were noted before eruptions on May 18, May 25 and June 12.

The devastating May 18 eruption killed 25 people, left 48 others missing and believed dead, spread a noxious layer of ash as far as Montana, destroyed forests and sent mud cascading into the Toutle, Cowlitz and Columbia rivers.

Observers in planes spotted a red glow coming from rock on a dome of crusted lava that bulged up within the crater.

Geologists saw a 75-foot-long east-west crack glowing in the lava dome, said Carl Burgeson, a spokesman for FEMA. They first believed the glow was lava, but later determined it was rock glowing from the heat of magma below.

The dome was estimated to be 600 feet in diameter and about 220 feet thick, Burgeson said.

Arizona, Colorado fight to control forest fires

By The Associated Press. Fire-retardant chemicals rained down with little effect on brush fires raging over 25,000 acres in central Arizona, and firefighters from four states battled Colorado's biggest fire ever, a 9,600-acre six-day blaze in the central Rockies.

A 540-acre fire was burning in Colorado's Arapaho National Forest, but a 700-acre blaze in Gunnison National Forest was nearing containment Sunday night, Forest Service spokesmen said.

In Arizona, state firefighters called on New Mexico to help with airplanes and fresh crews.

"It's starting to look a little tense," said Jack DeGolia, spokesman for the U.S. Bureau of Land Management. "All the aerial tankers in Arizona are committed."

The tankers sprayed fire-retardant chemicals on a fire that began Sunday some 40 miles northeast of Phoenix in the Tonto National Forest. But the blaze quickly spread over 1,500 acres, approaching some desert homes north of Apache Junction.

"We lost control and the fire started spreading south on us," said Mitzi Heydt, Tonto National Forest spokesman. "There are several homes in that area. I'm sure they're out trying to save their homes."

Aerial tankers from New Mexico also were called in to fight a 600-acre fire started by lightning near Aravapo Canyon in eastern Arizona.

About 400 firefighters had just finished a two-day battle in 113-degree heat to contain a 7,000-acre blaze Sunday near Bartlett Lake, 25 miles north of the Apache Junction fire.

A three-day old fire that destroyed 15,200 acres near Wickenburg was contained Sunday.

"We've also got 17 new lightning fires," Heydt said. "We're almost drained but we'll handle it."

Daily lightning storms moving into Arizona from Mexico's Gulf of California have been igniting desert brush and grass that is tinder-box dry after nearly a month of 100-degree temperatures.

In Colorado, a planned 600-acre burnout jumped firelines Sunday on the southwest corner of the 9,600-acre fire near Emerald Lake in White River National Forest. The sudden 100-yard breach of the line forced firefighters to rush to a hilltop for safety.

The possible theft was reported to police about 4:30 p.m. Sunday from the parking lot of the new Midland Park Mall, FM 868 and Midkiff Road, by Pete Garza of Smithville. Apparently, however, police aren't certain whether the trailer and floor covering were stolen or whether the flooring was unloaded by workers and the truck returned to the owner, Texas Storage Rental of Odessa.

According to a police spokesman, thieves would have had to have hooked up a truck to the semi-trailer to have hauled it away. The flooring, he noted, would have been extremely heavy.

An estimated value of the flooring wasn't even given, although a police spokesman said it would be expensive.

Meanwhile, police are in the process of attempting to determine whether a theft did occur and, if so, whether any clues exist to the disappearance of the semi-trailer and marble flooring.

Midland woman injured in two-vehicle mishap

A 54-year-old Midland woman is in fair condition at Midland Memorial Hospital where she is being treated for a broken leg suffered in a two-vehicle accident Sunday.

Rosel S. Brinkley, an auditor who resides at Route 3, Box 349, was injured about 3:30 p.m. Sunday at the intersection of County Road 111 and Cottonflat Road when the car she was driving was involved in a collision with a pickup driven by John H. Findley, no address available.

Ms. Brinkley's vehicle was northbound on County Road 1203 at the time and was attempting to turn west onto County Road 111. Findley's vehicle was eastbound on County Road 111.

According to Department of Public Safety reports, Findley apparently was not injured.

The mishap was investigated by DPS trooper Hilan Priddy of Midland.

.357 magnum reported stolen

Midland police are investigating the reported theft of a .357 magnum pistol valued at $400.

Johnny Biggs of 1003 S. Midkiff Road, Apartment No. 122, told police early today that the pistol was taken from a table at the end of the couch in his apartment between 3:30 p.m. and 4 p.m. Sunday.

According to police reports, Biggs said he and his wife left the apartment about 3:30 p.m. The door was locked at that time, he said. About 4 p.m. Biggs' brother-in-law, Jerry Vodron, came to the apartment and found the door unlocked and the pistol missing.

An estimated value of the flooring wasn't even given, although a police spokesman said it would be expensive.

Meanwhile, police are in the process of attempting to determine whether a theft did occur and, if so, whether any clues exist to the disappearance of the semi-trailer and marble flooring.

Federal job program gives 194 Midlanders job experience

"I do everything — general office work such as filing, typing and running errands, I guess you could call me a girl Friday," she said.

Sheree discovered CETA while looking for a job at the Texas Employment Commission. "I was having trouble getting a job because I don't have any job experience. CETA appealed to me because of that, as well as for financial reasons."

"I was given a choice of worksites, and CETA set up the interview for me," she said.

Sheree, who has no high school diploma, said CETA will pay for her to get her GED certificate upon completion of her program. "They'll also pay for my first year at Midland College," she said.

Continued hot weather remains in the Tall City forecast for Tuesday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The weatherman is predicting the high for Tuesday should be near 102 degrees which is little relief for most Midlanders. However, tonight's low should be in the low 70s providing some relief from daytime temperatures.

Comparatively speaking, Sunday's high of 102 degrees was hot but it did not replace the record of 109 degrees set in 1947. Also, the 1954 low of 60 degrees remains in the record book even though this morning's low was a cool 69 degrees.

Winds tonight should be southerly, moving between 10-20 mph. As one might have guessed there was no precipitation recorded in the last 24 hours. The monthly total for June should wind up at 1.59 inches with the yearly total remaining at 5.08 inches.

Carter still opposed to tax cut

President said against 'hasty' action

NEW YORK (AP) — Treasury Secretary G. William Miller says the Carter administration remains opposed to a tax cut this year despite pressure from Democrats and Republicans in Congress.

Miller's statement, made Sunday on ABC-TV's "Issues and Answers" program, came amid renewed evidence of the recession's effect and a call from the head of the Ford Motor Co. to curb auto imports.

The National Association of Purchasing Management released a survey showing that 58 percent of its corporate managers reported a decline of new orders in June. In addition, 47 percent reported a decline in overall production.

Miller said Carter is opposed to any "hasty" action on tax cuts because he believes they should be decided "outside the heat of an election year."

The treasury secretary said he believed it is "unlikely" that congress would pass an acceptable tax reduction measure in the months remaining in the legislative session.

Instead, he said, the Carter administration's first priority is to hold down government spending and minimize the budget gap, steps viewed as necessary to fight inflation.

His statement was the most explicit to date from an administration official on the subject of a tax cut.

The purchasing management association said the decline in new orders reported by 58 percent of the 225 corporate managers surveyed is the largest number since the survey began.

In addition, the number of managers reporting lower employment climbed to 40 percent from the previous month's 39 percent, the highest in five years.

"When the final tally is in," the report concluded, "the second quarter should be a real loser."

With that note echoing as a reminder, President Carter is to consider a report from the Department of Transportation sometime this week on steps to be taken to revive the ailing American auto industry, which has now laid off about a third of its workers.

Phillip Caldwell, chairman of Ford Motor Co., has asked that the first step taken should be to limit Japanese imports to less than what they were in 1979.

Currently, imports account for about 28 percent of the much-depressed market, with Japanese cars being about 80 percent of that figure — leaving the possibility that actual Japanese sales in 1980 could be about the same as in 1979.

Crippled oil tanker reaches port after spilling its cargo

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — The crippled oil barge Domar 118 was tied safely to a fuel dock at Port Manatee today, three days after it spilled 1,600 gallons of oil into Tampa Bay.

The 350-foot barge had been refloated late Saturday from a sandbar where it was intentionally grounded after the leak was discovered Friday. It was anchored for the night, then accidentally ran aground again Sunday morning while under tow.

No oil was spilled in the second incident, said Lt. Jg. Don Zelazny, a Coast Guard spokesman.

Much of the oil that washed ashore wound up along St. Petersburg Beach, where up to 70 workers spent most of Sunday piling up the goo and hauling it a landfill dump.

A Coast Guard anti-pollution team had to unload some of the Domar 118's oil cargo — originally about 3½ million gallons — to free the barge.

Three tugboats late

Sunday ushered the barge to its dock at the Becher Oil Co. facility at Port Manatee, near Bradenton on the south side of Tampa Bay.

The barge first ran aground on the edge of the busy Tampa Bay shipping channel, closing the port to shipping for the third time this year. The channel was cleared when the barge was refloated late Saturday.

The channel was blocked for several weeks beginning in late January when the Coast Guard Cutter Blackthorn sank with 23 crewmen after colliding with the tanker Capricorn.

It closed again in early May when the phosphate carrier Summit Venture slammed into the Sunshine Skyway, a bridge that soars over the mouth of the bay.

Pat Walker's really works for a working woman like me. I lost 51 pounds!

Ray Barnwell's True Story:

Running an auto supply store means being on the job six days a week, doing everything from selling to handling the books. At home, I have two children and a husband to take care of. So I don't have much time to think about myself. Maybe that's why I hadn't done anything worthwhile about my weight problem. I'm embarrassed to admit that I weighed 167 pounds (I'm 5'5").

A friend of mine — who was always going onfad diets with me — decided to try Pat Walker's. When she began to see results, I thought I'd try it, too. Luckily, I could go before or after work, and I didn't even have to change clothes to use the Symmetricon passive exercise unit.

The counselors at Pat Walker's are so encouraging, and they have a great plan for eating right that's a lot more flexible than those "strict diets" I'd tried.

Within a month, I could see that Pat Walker's was working for me. And now I've lost about 10½ inches from my waist, 7 inches from my tummy, and a total of 51 pounds! So you see, even if you're as busy as I am, you can still look as good as you should. Pat Walker's is the secret.

Make an appointment now for a free, no-obligation consultation at Pat Walker's. We'll explain how our program works, from the no-muss, no-fuss passive exercise treatments to our belief in your right to privacy. We'll tell you how much you need to lose, how long it will take, and the total cost of your complete figure correction, based on four dollars per thirty-minute treatment.

Sybil Bickley

STANTON — Services for Sybil Emily Bickley, 66, of Stanton and formerly of Midland, were to be at 10 a.m. today in the First United Methodist Church of Stanton with the Rev. Davis Edens, pastor, officiating.

Burial was to be in Evergreen Cemetery, directed by Gilbreath Funeral Home.

Mrs. Bickley died Saturday in an Odessa hospital following a brief illness.

She was born Dec. 3, 1913, in Donie and moved in 1954 to Midland, where she worked for the U.S. Postal Service for 21 years. In 1979, she moved to Stanton in retirement.

She was married to A. J. Bickley on Oct. 6, 1934, at Big Spring. Mrs. Bickley was a member of The First United Methodist Church of Stanton. Her husband died in 1971.

Survivors include a daughter, Jean Phillips of Ruidoso, N.M., four sisters, Velma Haynie of Midland, Gladys Chambers of Madison, Wis., Polly Nichols of Stanton and Gay Nell Weaver of Valley Mills; three brothers, Doyle Watson of Abilene, Marvin Watson of Pine Top, Ark., and Jack Watson of San Angelo; and two grandchildren.

Bob C. Sherrard

ANDREWS — Services for Bob Clark Sherrard, 68, of Andrews, were to be at 3 p.m. today in the Downtown Church of Christ with Daryl Collins, former church minister, officiating. He was to be assisted by Jack Miller, assistant minister.

Burial was to be in Andrews Cemetery, directed by Singleton Funeral Home.

Sherrard died Friday in an Andrews hospital following a brief illness.

He was born in Nardin, Okla., on Sept. 6, 1911, and moved to Andrews 43 years ago from Blackwell, Okla. He was a retired welder for the Andrews County maintenance department.

He was married to Elnora Price on Aug. 24, 1939, in Wink.

Survivors include his wife; a son, Jay Sherrard of Rosewell, N.M.; two sisters, Mary Clark of San Angelo and Grace Ramsey of Rankin; a brother, Harlan Sherrard of Illinois; and two grandchildren.

Pat Nixon

BIG SPRING — Services for Pat Nixon, 41, of Cisco and formerly of Big Spring, were to be at 2 p.m. today in Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home Rosewood Chapel. Burial was to be in Trinity Memorial Park.

Nixon died Saturday in a two-car accident three miles west of Cisco.

He was born March 4, 1939, in Big Spring. He was married May 15, 1967, to Barbara Cupp in Lawton, Okla. He grew up in Coahoma and received his bachelor's degree in mathematics from Southern Methodist University. He moved to Cisco from Midland two years ago and was a drilling superintendent for Enre Oil Co. there. He was a Baptist and a veteran of the U.S. Army.

Survivors include his wife; five sons, Shelby Nixon and Jay Nixon, both of Cisco; Marty Nixon, Michael Nixon and Joey Nixon, all of Coahoma; a daughter, Teresa Nixon of Coahoma; his father and stepmother, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Nixon of Coahoma; his mother, Erma Rich of Coahoma; and a sister, Marcia McGee of Naranja, Fla.

Earnest Fulcher

LAMESA — Graveside services for Earnest Fulcher, 68, of Kerrville and formerly of Lamesa, were to be at 4:30 p.m. today in Lamesa Memorial Park directed by Branon Funeral Home. Officiating was to be Gordon Gower, associate minister of the North 14th Street Church of Christ.

He died Friday in a San Antonio hospital after a brief illness.

Fulcher grew up in the Midway community and was a longtime Lamesa resident before moving in the late 1940s. He was a member of the Church of Christ.

Survivors include two sisters, Lucille Riggan and Marie Batson, both of Lamesa; and two brothers, Dalton Hogg of Sanderson and Jimmie Hogg of Weatherford.

Pope on 12-day visit to Brazil

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Pope John Paul II flew to Brazil today for a 12-day visit to the world's largest Roman Catholic country and a society divided by the political activism of the Brazilian bishops and their priests.

The pontiff was due in Brasilia, the capital, at noon (11 a.m. EDT) after an 11-hour flight from Rome. Making the first papal visit to Brazil in history, he was to tour 13 cities, open a national Eucharistic Congress of the 318 Brazilian bishops and celebrate masses at 20 million of the country's 100 million Catholics, with many millions more watching on television.

It is John Paul's seventh foreign trip since he became pope 21 months ago and his longest — more than 7,500 miles — and most grueling journey.

The National Council of Bishops, which directs one of the most progressive churches in Latin America, expressed conviction that the pope would support its program of social and economic reforms for the millions of impoverished Brazilians. But the military-backed government and its conservative supporters in the upper and middle classes hoped he would forcefully restate the opposition to political action by the clergy which was one of his principal themes during his visit to Mexico 17 months ago.

The pope during that visit called repeatedly for improvement in the lot of Latin America's downtrodden and said church leaders should continue to fight for more equitable distribution of wealth and for human rights. But he repudiated politically militant priests, saying the clergy must stay out of the political arena and seek social justice through spiritual action.

The duties of the church, the pope said then, are "to preach, to educate individuals and collectivities, to form public opinion and to offer orientations."

The Brazilian church increased its struggle on behalf of the poor and oppressed after the army seized power in 1964. Since then the generals have defended a system which has produced rapid economic growth but which has also increased the power of the rich and reduced the economic share of the poor.

The Brazilian church has responded with vigorous support for the poor. It has organized tens of thousands of small grass-roots groups called base communities to educate and politicalize the peasants and workers. Catholic leaders supported striking metalworkers this year. The bishops produced several major position papers criticizing government policies and outlining alternatives.

Bishop Ivo Lorscheiter, the president of the National Council of Bishops, told a news conference the pope's visit was "proof of his support for the work" of the council. A major papal pronouncement was expected July 9 in Fortaleza, at the opening of the Eucharistic Congress. The congress is to focus this year on the plight of the millions of indigent peasants who move from subsistence living in the rural interior to the urban squalor of slum shanties, called favelas, in the coastal cities.

Another significant event on the pope's tour will be his visit to Archbishop Helder Camara in the northern city of Recife. Camara is an internationally known supporter of human rights and a champion of the poor whose name was banned from the Brazilian news media until recently by the government.

Other cities on the pope's itinerary include Rio de Janeiro, where he will celebrate mass in the huge Maracana soccer stadium.

Burglars rob 20 offices of jewelry manufacturers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police were attempting today to determine just how much gold, precious metals and jewelry burglars made off with over the weekend when they ransacked a downtown building housing jewelry manufacturers.

The burglary was discovered Saturday, said Los Angeles Police Det. Ray Moren, who noted that the robber or robbers had plenty of time to hit the 20 offices in the 12-story building.

"It could have been one guy or 20. They had all night long," he said.

A tenant who declined to be identified called the burglary "clumsy — not professional" because of the way windows were smashed and offices ransacked on all of the building's floors.

NEIL SOLOMON

Child needs plain toys, not gadgets

Dear Dr. Solomon: In trying to cut down on my consumption of red meats, I've been eating so much fish I'm beginning to grow fins. What I'm wondering is whether the fish is providing me with the nutrients—particularly the proteins—I need to get from meat.—Carl

Dear Carl: Seafood compares favorably with red meat in the quality of the protein it provides; moreover, fish contains less total fat, the exact levels depending on the species. The fat in fish is both saturated and polyunsaturated.

Seafood also contains small amounts of vitamins A and D, and minerals such as phosphorus, potassium and iron.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Ordinarily I do not have a "keep-up-with-the-Joneses" complex; for example, I don't feel the need for a new car every time my neighbor gets one. But it's a different story when it comes to my children. Many of their friends are sporting electronic toys that do everything but talk, and while I am not pleading poverty, I don't want to shell out that kind of money for a gadget unless I can be convinced that it would be in my child's best interests. But what do I tell my youngster when so many of his friends have these high-priced gimmicks?—Mr. V.K.

Dear Mr. K.: Gadgets and gimmicks are not the kinds of toys children need. A toy should be purchased on the basis of a child's abilities and stage of development, not because of what another child in the neighborhood may have.

Dr. Craig T. Ramey, professor of psychology at the University of North Carolina, advocates a return to basic educational toys such as blocks, puzzles and pegboards. He notes that complicated battery-operated toys that are able to engage in a number of activities do not necessarily stimulate a child's imagination or give the youngster anything constructive to do. An "educational" toy is one that challenges a child to think creatively and enhances his ability to solve problems and to reason.

Some inexpensive toys can be more stimulating for children than many of the more expensive items advertised on television. Spools, pots and pans, and boxes of various sizes fall within this category, as do beads, alphabet cards and dominoes, which can help a child learn arithmetical concepts in an interesting fashion.

Dr. Ramey suggests the following criteria for parents to follow in selecting a toy: It should encourage cooperative and competitive play so that the child can learn to share and compete with others; it should stimulate the imagination; it should be flexible so that the child can use it in different ways; it should be well constructed, durable and safe; it should be appropriate for the child's age; and it should appeal to the child.

If you are convinced that these criteria make sense, you will be able to stand firm against any arguments about what other children may have.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Allow mate, spouse adequate time to explain ideas fully. An artistic talent can help you earn more money. Persevere! A dispute may be resolved due to the intervention of a neutral outsider.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Ignore the depressing, negative comments of a "know-it-all." Greater personal effort will impress an influential acquaintance. Creative project could prove to be source of extra revenue.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Try not to get bogged down in details, trivia. Money earned on the side will come in handy. Offer your services to friends, neighbors. Affairs of the heart are apt to be somewhat tricky today.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Know where you stand with mate, romantic partner. Candid talk regarding finances may reveal new options, alternatives. Lecture or museum visit could lead to an unusual hobby.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Write important letters. Flattery can be a two-edged sword. Use diplomacy to overcome some family opposition. Emphasis is on knowing what you really want out of life.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take advantage of a financial proposition offered by a friend. Situation involving a younger person could require your personal intervention. Be willing to make concessions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Profits can be increased if you will keep your eyes and ears open! Close associates are exceptionally talkative now. Be diplomatic when discussing obligations.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your energy is at its highest level in late morning. Work matters should flow smoothly. Follow through on a travel idea that has an unusual slant. Be careful not to make any snap decisions regarding romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An excellent day for finalizing negotiations and signing contracts, forming a new partnership. A financial matter will soon be settled satisfactorily.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Seek advice of an expert when it comes to investments. Short trips are likely to be successful. Get the jump on competitors by completing assignment ahead of the deadline.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Attend to investments, stock portfolio. Family members will come up with some interesting vacation ideas. Issue spur-of-the-moment invitation to gentle, attractive newcomer.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Two heads are much better than one just now! Discuss finances, career with romantic partner.

The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Blackwood is probably the most misused convention, but not on this hand! Since partner must have at least two aces for his opening bid and jump raise, you are safe in investigating slam possibilities via four no trump. If partner shows three aces, settle for six hearts. We would go all the way, however, if he shows four.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold: ♠AK5 ♥KQJ105 ♦AKJ105

The bidding has proceeded: South West North East 2 ♥ Pass 3 ♥ Pass 3 ♦ Pass 4 ♥ Pass 4 ♦ Pass 4 NT Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—You have not yet agreed upon a suit, so partner's bid of four no trump is not acceptable! It is natural, and should show a reasonably good club suit, a spade stopper (probably QJx) and no particular support for either of your suits. If this is the case, you are as high as you want to go. Pass!

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold: ♠AJ ♥KJ6 ♦KQ5 ♣AQ762

The bidding has proceeded: West North East South 1 ♠ 2 ♠ 3 ♠ ?

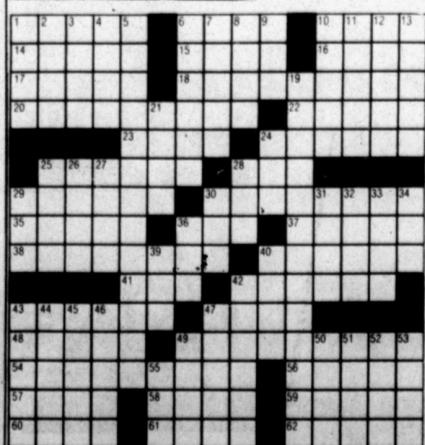

What do you bid now?

A.—This truth shall be self-evident—West is lying through his teeth. There just aren't enough points in the deck for everyone to be honest, and partner surely isn't fooling around at this vulnerability. To make a small slam, partner needs no more than a decent heart suit and an outside card. Bid six hearts or, if you prefer a more scientific approach, cue bid four spades to cater to the possibility that you might have a grand slam.

Answer On Market Page

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠9832 ♥K5 ♦7 ♣AKQ872

The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♦ Pass 2 ♠ Pass 2 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—If you rebid three clubs, you probably need some tutoring—that shows a sub-minimum two-over-one response and asks partner to pass. Ditto if you chose to jump to four clubs, because you cannot be sure that you can make an eleven-trick contract. In the modern style, partner's rebid of two no trump shows a balanced hand that doesn't qualify for a one no trump opening, so your action is clear. Raise to three no trump.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠J1074 ♥QJ92 ♦AQ5 ♣Q8

The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♠ Pass 3 ♥ Pass 3 NT Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—You have arrived. Partner knows you have four-card support, yet he has chosen three no trump over four spades. You have stoppers in every suit and your values are "soft"—queens and jacks rather than aces and kings—and so are ideally suited to no trump play. Pass with alacrity.

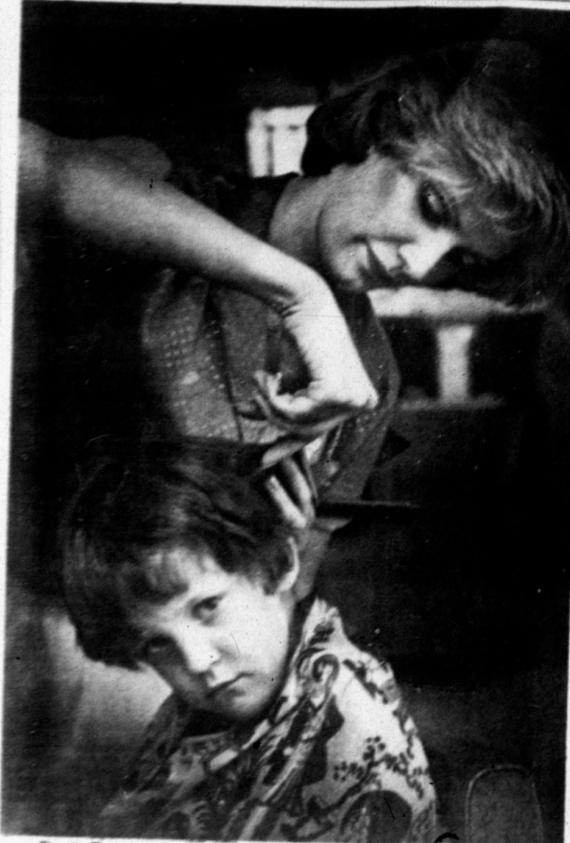

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold: ♠QJ1076 ♥8 ♦762 ♣Q652

The bidding has proceeded: South West North East Pass 1 ♠ Dbble. Pass 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—By first doubling and then bidding a suit, partner has shown a fairly strong hand. Don't punish him for that by leaving him to struggle in what is probably an inferior contract. Bid two spades. No, this does not announce extra values. It simply shows a distaste for hearts and a reasonably good five-card suit of your own. At hearts your hand might not produce a single trick; at spades it's good for three or four.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠7 ♥KQ985 ♦KQ52 ♣K87

Tourabi doesn't conform to image

By IGNACE DALLE
Agence France-Presse

KHARTOUM — Hassan El Tourabi, 48, a master's degree from London, a doctorate in law from Paris, justice minister in the government of Grafar Nimeiri, does not conform to the usual image that is projected by the Islamic fundamentalist Moslem Brotherhood.

And yet El Tourabi, with his well-trimmed beard, is the leader in Sudan of this mysterious sect that is in the vanguard of hardline Moslem activism in a number of countries in the Middle East.

For El Tourabi, the Moslem Brotherhood in Sudan "is a special case." He explains how most of its members belong to the intelligentsia and received their training in Western universities.

He notes that in Sudan, the movement, "for so long elitist, has only recently extended its popular following."

This articulate, enthusiastic, lively, pleasant man is today a source of concern to a large number of his fellow Sudanese, liberal Moslems and, in particular, Christians in the south of the country.

The reason is his plan to make Koranic shari'a (law) the only basis for Sudanese law, a plan which, according to El Tourabi himself, should be debated in parliament before the end of the year.

The Sudanese justice minister is quick to attack fears that his bill will lead to the Islamization of the country's Christian minority.

The plan, he said, would not interfere with the way they educate their children. Christians, if they wanted, still would be allowed to drink alcohol in public and would not be forced to conform to Islamic tradition along with the country's Moslem majority, he added.

The committee drafting the bill had even consulted Coptic and Christian lawyers, he said, adding that he and his supporters were more interested in religious behavior than in the law. "The most important thing for us is Islamization of society and the Islamic state will be only the result," he said.

El Tourabi is guarded about the extent of support for the brotherhood within the country. "We are under a single-party regime (the Sudanese Socialist Union) at the heart of which there are different sensibilities the respective importance of which is difficult to gauge," he said.

Current estimates put the number of Moslem Brotherhood members within the 360-seat national assembly at 50 with between 20 and 30 other assembly members expressing support for the movement.

It is difficult to gauge how much they benefited from an election boycott by the Ansars, another important Moslem group in the Sudan, but observers here point out that the brotherhood tends to recruit in urban areas and, in particular, in the universities and a number of trade unions, while Ansar support comes from rural areas.

Tourabi, who himself spent seven years in prison, described relations between the brotherhood and the powers-that-be in Sudan as "good" given progressive liberalization, the virtual elimination of communist elements and a favorable attitude to Islam.

He added that sometimes things evolved too slowly but added that compared with other parts of Africa and the Arab world Sudan enjoyed real freedoms.

The Moslem Brotherhood here is evasive on its relations with Saudi Arabia and Libya. Observers noted that Tourabi virtually refrained from making any comment on the attack on the Grand Mosque in Mecca at the end of last year.

Sources close to the brotherhood said that the only financial help it receives from these two countries comes from private individuals.

Tourabi's view of Iran, where the Islamic revolution has made the shari'a the basis of the country's law, appears to have changed from enthusiasm over the overthrow of the shah to a certain bitterness in the face of current anarchy.

"We have tried to make them understand that the seizure of the (American Embassy) hostages is contrary to the fundamental principles of Islam," he said.

"Everything that is happening there is due to a total lack of organization and preparation for power. It's a great pity," he added.

Helen G. Douglas, 79, dies of cancer

NEW YORK (AP) — Helen Gahagan Douglas, a former state star who never forgave Richard M. Nixon for the bitter U.S. Senate campaign he waged against her 30 years ago, died Saturday of cancer. She was 79.

Mrs. Douglas died at about 3:35 a.m. at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center after a seven-year battle with cancer, a disease she had urged the federal government to fight during her three terms in Congress.

Her husband, actor Melvyn Douglas, and daughter, Mary Helen, were near her bedside at her death, said Mrs. Douglas' secretary Nan Stevens. Her son Peter had visited Friday.

The 1950 Senate campaign in California between Mrs. Douglas and Nixon — on the eve of both the Cold War and the McCarthy era — was one of the most bitter ever waged for American elective office.

representative.

The leaders of Sierra Leone, Ivory Coast, Guinea and Togo visited Monrovia Friday and met with Doe for three hours. The four are monitoring the new Lierian government's domestic policies with an eye toward ensuring that harsh military rule is not instituted.

As incoming chairman, Sierra Leone's president Siaka Stevens is expected to preside over a somber summit also dominated by such issues as the war between Morocco and Western Saharan guerrillas, the bitter civil war in Chad, the continuing friction between Ethiopia and Somalia and the Arab-Egyptian split on Egypt's troubled peace treaty with Israel.

Stevens has proposed a 15-member body within the OAU to deal with both trans-African and domestic conflicts. The body would resemble the United Nations Security Council.

Sierra Leonean Foreign Minister Abdulai Conteh said the council would be empowered to act immediately, instead of "waiting between scheduled sessions to address (Africa's) crises," as the OAU now must do.

This week's discussions were held up for two days while Libya and Algeria sought unsuccessfully to deny Egypt its turn to take a vice chairman's seat on the organization's council of foreign ministers.

"Ever-since the peace treaty with Israel," Conteh said, "the Arab members (of the OAU) have tried to isolate Egypt." Last year Arab members also failed to have Egypt expelled from the organization.

The Polisario guerrillas of the Western Sahara, who have been engaged in a four-year, hit-and-run battle with Morocco, touched off another furor this week by applying for admission as a member state in exile. Morocco has been battling the guerrillas since Spain ceded its former colony to Morocco and Mauritania in 1976.

Mauritania dropped out of the war last year and Morocco took over its portion of the territory.

Morocco has threatened to withdraw from the OAU if Polisario application is approved and has begun intense lobbying to block its consideration. Although more than 20 African states have recognized the Polisario, "their application is unlikely to be completed at this summit" because of Morocco's objections, Conteh said.

A high point of the summit will be the seating of Robert Mugabe, leader

Detroit will be big surprise at Republican convention

The Los Angeles Times

DETROIT — The biggest surprise — and the biggest star — when the Republicans gather here in two weeks for their national convention may be Detroit itself.

It was once written off by critics as a terminal case of urban decay. Only five years ago it was branded "the murder capital." It is remembered as the scene of the bloodiest urban American riot in this century.

But now Detroit appears to be on the rebound. The civic movers and shakers of this generally Democratic, blue-collar town unabashedly plan to use the presence of the Republicans — and the thousands of reporters and television announcers they will attract — to show off the changes to the world and to sell Detroit.

"This is the big look-see that we've been after. It's our chance to show the country what we've done and what we can do," said Carol Gies, executive director of the Detroit Host Committee, a civic organization formed for the convention, which will bring more than 20,000 persons and up to $40 million into the nation's sixth-largest city. General Motors Corp. Chairman Thomas Murphy heads the host committee.

Even the city's warts will be on display. "People are going to see the good and the bad," Gies said. "We have nothing to be ashamed of."

"We're one of many aging Midwest and Eastern cities. But we've come a long way. All the country has ever seen of Detroit is the bad. Now we're really the model of urban renaissance."

"Detroit will be on trial" during convention week, said Wayne S. Doran, chairman of the Ford Motor Land Development Corp., developer of the city's architectural showpiece, the gleaming $357-million hotel-office-shopping complex on the city's waterfront.

Indeed, Doran, Murphy and the other moguls of business and industry here are personally involved, hard at work writing a meticulously detailed scenario for what they believe may be a textbook example of how to stage a national convention. Their hope is not only to change the city's image but to show that Detroit is capable of being more than a one-industry town.

Doran said that a successful GOP convention could have a dramatic impact on the city's future economy, putting Detroit in competition with other major cities for big-dollar convention business, and in competition with Chicago and Cleveland as a location for corporate offices.

"Everybody on the (host) committee has something at stake, has a vested interest. A vested interest (in the success of the convention) keeps their feet to the fire," said Doran, who has a reputation for being a tough corporate leader with a talent for getting things done.

"This could move us ahead five years or behind five years," Doran said. "It is exposure you could never spend money to get. If we do a good job we should prosper."

Kanss City, where the Republicans met four years ago has moved from 23rd to 7th in the nation in terms of convention business — and much of that is credited to hosting the GOP convention.

Hopes for a successful convention are being threatened by possible strikes by Detroit municipal workers, including policemen and firemen. Contracts for 20,000 of Detroit's 22,500 government employees expire at 11:59 p.m. Monday, and as the week-end ended there appeared to be little hope for settlement. Mayor Coleman Young, confronted with a $60-million deficit in his current budget, said last week, "This city is absolutely broke. We do not have the money to offer city employees a pay raise."

In addition, the city's general economy is in a recession slump worsened by the closings of auto manufacturing plants and the financial woes of the Chrysler Corp. The jobless rate exceeds 14 percent and among blacks it may be three times that figure.

And a number of relatively small groups have asked permission to demonstrate at the convention, but police do not expect the kind of violence that marked Miami in 1972 or Chicago in 1968.

None of that has dampened the enthusiasm or slowed the preparations for what the host committee says will be the country's "biggest party." Indeed, the theme is "Detroit Loves a Good Party."

To prepare for the "party," city, county, state and even volunteer crews have been cleaning up the town like it has never been cleaned.

"You can't write a slogan on a wall without someone rushing up and painting over it," said Robert L. Pisor, a veteran local newsman and editor of the magazine Monthly Detroit.

Throughout the downtown area sidewalks are being repaired, streets resurfaced and buildings painted. The slopes of expressways leading into the downtown area have been planted with 14,000 shrubs and flowering trees for the first time since the roads were built more than 25 years ago. "We're using the convention as a catalyst to get things done," said David McKeenan, urban affairs director for the Detroit Chamber of Commerce, which "encouraged" the plantings. "We supplied the ideas and the political pressure to get it done."

Last week teams of neighborhood youths enrolled in a Keep Detroit Beautiful summer program were washing the trash baskets on downtown street corners. During convention week about 200 youngsters from various programs will be picking up litter in the central business district and the area around Cobo Hall and the new Joe Louis Arena, where the Republicans will meet. The owners of parking lots have been voluntarily planting flowers. The city's biggest billboard company is voluntarily putting up festive displays of balloons.

No effort, however, is being made to hide the urban sors.

Because the convention is likely to be devoid of the suspense, drama and battles that often mark a national convention, reporters who gather here are certain to venture into neighborhoods where there are blocks of boarded-up houses and unemployed youths standing on street corners.

"We expect that they (the national press) will all go back to 12th Street and start there," said Gies, referring to the area where the 1967 riot began. The riot left 43 persons dead and millions of dollars in property destroyed. "It's part of Detroit, part of Detroit's history," Gies said.

By contrast, the last time a national convention was held in Chicago, in 1968, the late Mayor Richard J. Daley ordered plywood facades erected to hide urban blight along the route to the convention center, and buses carrying Democratic convention delegates were assigned to routes that skirted rundown neighborhoods.

Daring treatment tried on brain tumor patient

By SUSAN OKIE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Two University of Maryland researchers this month tried a daring new treatment on a patient with a lethal brain tumor: they implanted an antenna in the man's brain and bombarded the cancer with microwaves.

The patient — a 28-year-old European executive whose cancer had recurred after surgery, radiation and chemotherapy — is up and around at the University of Maryland Hospital, with no apparent ill effects from the antenna or three brain-heating treatments.

"After months of worrying, it turned out to be remarkably easy," said Dr. Michael Salzman, the 34-year-old neurosurgeon who performed the operation.

The researchers' tests on animals had shown them that the waves can heat a portion of the brain to a temperature that kills tumor cells but leaves normal cells unharmed. If this first patient's tumor shrinks during the next few months, it will mean microwaves are a powerful new tool for treating one of the worst forms of cancer known.

"It's a promising area," said Dr. Allen Lichter, head of the radiation therapy section at the National Cancer Institute. "There's no question that heat kills cells. Whether it's going to have the selective effect on tumor cells, more than normal tissue, remains to be seen."

Microwaves have been used experimentally on a few other kinds of cancer, but this is the first time they have been tried on the human brain or delivered through an antenna, according to George M. Samaras, an electrical engineer and neurophysiologist at the University of Maryland who developed the apparatus with Salzman.

The two men had been testing microwaves for about two years on animals' brains, and had waited months to find a suitable patient to try their idea. Both said they were worried that the heating might cause the brain to swell and raise the pressure inside the patient's skull dangerously high. But no complications occurred.

The patient, a wealthy European who asked the doctors to keep his identity confidential, had a brain tumor called glioblastoma multiforme, which is so lethal that Salzman said none of its victims lives more than five years. He developed the tumor two years ago, and it recurred recently in spite of surgery, radiation therapy and chemotherapy that he received in Europe.

Salzman operated on the man on June 12, and was able to remove about half the tumor, which he said was the size of a tangerine. To cut out the rest would have destroyed a vital part of the brain.

During the operation, Salzman implanted in the tumor a fine-wire antenna designed by Samaras. The antenna contains a temperature-sensing device and a cable that can be hooked up to a microwave generator. Then, with Samaras at the controls, they delivered enough microwaves to heat the area of the tumor to 113 degrees Fahrenheit for 30 minutes — 13.5 degrees above the normal brain temperature, 99.5.

Later the same day they left the antenna in place, and heated the tumor again, this time for an hour. Two days later, on June 14, they performed a final hour-long treatment and removed the antenna.

Samaras said the man was fully awake for the final treatment and felt no pain. "He was talking a blue streak the whole time," Samaras said. "We were just tickled to death. There was just nothing (for the patient) to tolerate."

He said heating to 45 degrees does not "cook" the brain, but produces "a local fever state." "Up to 41 degrees Centigrade (105.8 degrees Fahrenheit), all cells including tumor cells are happy," he said.

Salzman said that so far the patient's condition is about the same as it was before the treatment, and that it will be weeks to months before the researchers know whether they have succeeded in retarding the tumor.

Samaras said the main risk of microwave is damage to heat-sensitive organs — cataract-formation in the lens of the eye, sterility from damage to the testes, deformities to the fetus from exposure during pregnancy — but that these effects do not occur at the temperature used in his treatment.

He added that the antenna delivers waves to a portion of the brain only 1 to 2 inches across. The microwaves are the same as those generated by a microwave oven, but Samaras emphasized that the brain is not heated to nearly as high a temperature as food in an oven would be.

Like visible light, radio waves, and X-rays, microwaves are a form of electromagnetic radiation. They and other kinds of radiation are being tried in a number of cancer centers to produce hyperthermia — heating of body tissues.

Samaras said hyperthermia has a long history. A papyrus dating from 3000 B.C. reports the use of a "fire drill," a hot stick that was pushed into tumors. Heat therapy was used by ancient Greeks, and in 1866 a Dr. W. Busch reported the disappearance of a patient's malignant tumor after an infection that caused a high fever.

He and Salzman are now developing a device like a football helmet, which could deliver microwaves to a brain tumor without surgery. They see the antenna as only a temporary technique.

Political stability big meeting topic

By LEON DASH
The Washington Post

FREETOWN, Sierra Leone — Africa's quest for political stability and the challenge of South Africa will dominate talks this week at the 17th summit of the Organization of African Unity.

Since last year's meeting at Monrovia, Liberia, the organization has been searching for mechanisms to deal with increasingly destructive inter-African conflicts and to halt the economic deterioration that is the root of so much strife across the continent.

Symbolic of the challenge facing the OAU is the absence at this summit of its former chairman, William R. Tolbert. The former Liberian president was assassinated when military officers staged a coup in April.

Last year, Tolbert spoke forcefully of the need for African governments to initiate broad policies to protect human rights and wipe away "narrow nationalisms" that hinder regional cooperation.

Tolbert's successor, Master Sgt. Samuel K. Doe, is expected to be accepted reluctantly by the OAU's delegates this week as his country's
