Grand jury indicts Billy Clayton

HOUSTON (AP) — One of the most powerful figures in Texas politics, House Speaker Bill Clayton, faces arraignment next Friday on racketeering, conspiracy, extortion and fraud charges after the first indictments in the FBI's Brilab investigation were handed down.

Under court order not to talk about the charges, Clayton left the federal courthouse here, where he was fingerprinted and photographed, in silence.

"You are standing next to a man who wanted to be heard by the media," Roy Minton, Clayton's chief lawyer, said Thursday.

Clayton had appeared before U.S. Magistrate Frank G. Waltermire, who set bond at $10,000.

The veteran lawmaker had said he been expecting Thursday's grand jury indictments since he was caught up in the FBI's undercover investigation, code-named Brilab for bribery-labor, which became public in February.

L.G. Moore, a Houston labor union official, and Austin attorneys Randall D. Wood and Donald W. Ray also were named in the six-count indictment. Rusty Kelly, administrative aide to Clayton, was named as co-conspirator, but not as a defendant.

Moore also appeared Thursday before Waltermire, who set bond at $10,000.

The indictments were the first to be returned in a year-long investigation into political corruption, labor racketeering and organized crime in the Southwest.

They came almost five months after the grand jury began hearing witnesses and listening to recordings of conversations involving Clayton, Moore, Wood, Ray and FBI informant Joseph Hauser.

The indictment charges that Moore, aided by Wood and Ray, delivered $5,000 to Clayton during a meeting on the $70-million-a-year state employees' insurance plan. Hauser, while working for the FBI, said he posed as a representative of a national insurance company.

The indictment also charged Clayton with accepting a promise of an additional $600,000 if the state employees' insurance contract was awarded to the insurance company Hauser said he represented.

Clayton has acknowledged receiving $5,000 from Moore last November.

But he said he put the money in a safe place and planned to return it to Moore, regional director of Operating Engineers and International Union.

The three-term speaker became rich through his family farm and by investing in banks. Elected to the House in 1962, he became speaker in 1974 and won an unprecedented third consecutive term in 1979.

Clayton 'innocent until...': Clements

AMARILLO (AP) — Texas Gov. Bill Clements says it would be unfortunate if the news media pre-empted indicted House Speaker Bill Clayton's right to a fair trial on racketeering, conspiracy, extortion and fraud charges.

"I'm most sympathetic," Clements said in Amarillo Thursday. "I would remind you that everyone is innocent until proven guilty."

"His trial is yet to come and it would be very unfortunate if the radio, television or news media pre-empted our judicial system."

Clayton was indicted by a federal grand jury Thursday along with L.G. Moore, a Houston labor union official, and Austin lawyers Randall B. Wood and Donald W. Ray.

The indictments were the first to come from the FBI's undercover Brilab investigation. Grand jurors five months ago began listening to taped conversations involving Clayton, Moore, Wood, Ray and FBI informant Joseph Hauser.

Clements said he had talked to Clayton Wednesday and knew the indictments were forthcoming.

"I am very sad about it and disappointed. He's a nice human being and has been very helpful to me," said Clements. "We have a fine line of communication that has worked very well."

Grand jurors alleged Clayton accepted $5,000 during a meeting with the other defendants and Hauser in which discussions were held on the $70-million-a-year state employees insurance contract.

The indictments also charged Clayton with accepting a promise of another $600,000 if the contract was awarded to the company Hauser said he represented.

Clayton acknowledged receipt of the $5,000, but said it was a campaign contribution that he put in a safe place until it could be returned.

Whatever the outcome of a trial, the indictments alone may have killed his chances to win an unprecedented fourth term as speaker.

Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, and Rep. Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, are considered the two leading contenders in the speaker's race. Only Bryant currently opposes Clayton.

Friday the 13th unlucky for these black cats

"This is just sadistic. It's sick," said Animal Shelter employee Debbie Hill after three black cats were found dead this morning with their heads bashed in.

All were on Midkiff Street: one at Midkiff and Lockheed Drive, another at Midkiff and Fannin Street and a third at Midkiff and Storey Avenue. The cats were all black and all had their heads smashed, as if they had been held against the pavement and struck on the side of the head with a heavy, blunt instrument.

Ms. Hill and Steve Lair, who were sent out to retrieve the bodies, believe the killings are connected with today being Friday the 13th.

"Things like this don't happen usually," said Ms. Hill. "There's no way this can be a coincidence."

"It doesn't look like anything else was done to them."

Ms. Hill said she thought the cats had probably died quickly. "But I don't think it was very pleasant."

The cat at Midkiff and Storey "looked like someone had just pulled the collar off and laid it beside it," said Lair.

"Yea, it had a little yellow collar and flea collar," added Ms. Hill, "that looked like someone had just pulled it off. It hadn't been unbuckled or anything."

The dead cats were called in to the shelter this morning. The two workers sent to retrieve the bodies saw two of the cats lying beside the road. The third was off the road in someone's yard.

"So there may be one or two more that haven't been found yet," Ms. Hill said.

Because the cats were all within a 15-block area, employees at the Midland Animal Shelter feel that they were all killed by the same person or persons.

"The only thing we've had similar to this," said Lair, "is that every two or three months someone will kill a bunch of jackrabbits and throw them around town. And we have to go pick them up."

"But," added Ms. Hill, "the jackrabbits have been shot. This is just sick."

Family of fire fighters celebrates milestones

By KAY CRITES
Staff Writer

The Lands had their own mutual admiration society Thursday as father Doyle Land celebrated his 25th year with the Midland Fire Department and son Pat Land celebrated his first day of work Wednesday at the Odessa Fire Department.

"It's just another day to me," said Doyle about his anniversary. "Just means another $4 raise."

"Oh yeaaaaaaahhh," chimed Pat and Doyle's wife Barbara sarcastically.

For Pat, the day meant his first fire — at 4 o'clock Thursday morning.

"I didn't know anything. The guy next to me woke me up. I don't even know where it was."

In contrast, Doyle can remember the address of his first fire 25 years ago, 105 N. O St.

Doyle began work with the Midland Department June 12, 1955. He made driver in July 1958, captain in August 1965 and battalion chief in 1973.

"It's changed a lot," said Doyle. "We've got a lot more modern methods of fighting a fire now. We used to see smoke coming out of a house and go in with our nozzles open. Now we don't open the nozzles until we find a fire. We have new air masks. With the

Mount St. Helens goes again

Plume shoots 10 miles into air

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Mount St. Helens thundered into its third big blow during the night, shooting a plume of steam, volcanic ash and pebbles 10 miles high and dusting this city and neighboring Portland, Ore., with the heaviest fallout yet.

No deaths or injuries were reported, but, as Friday the 13th dawned, a million people were warned to stay indoors or wear masks if they ventured out. One tiny logging town, pelted with pumice the size of marbles, was evacuated.

Dustings of ash were reported as far north as Seattle and as far south as Salem, Ore., a 200-mile swath. It spread from the Oregon coast east to Pullman, Wash.

At dawn, observers said the ash plume over the crater — shattered by previous eruptions — had all but disappeared. The harmonic tremor that first was recorded when the mountain erupted was diminishing.

"It is diminishing but it has by no means died down," said Bob Norris of the University of Washington's Geophysics Department.

Mayor Connie McReedy declared a limited state of emergency in Portland, which lies just across the Columbia River and 40 miles southwest of the volcano, and imposed a speed limit of 15 mph. Winds from the opposite direction at high altitudes carried a light sprinkling of dust 100 miles north to Seattle.

Commuters in Portland struggled to work through a gray, muddy sludge following an all-night fallout of ash mixed with rain. Portland International Airport reopened at 6:15 a.m. after being closed most of the night.

"It looks like an atom bomb," an observer in a U.S. Forest Service plane radioed as the volcano exploded Thursday night for the third time in a month. "It's very, very black ... It's still booming, it's really booming."

Scientists said the eruption could become the worst since May 18, when the volcano blanketed six states with ash and claimed the lives of dozens of people.

In Vancouver, the Clark County sheriff's office halted patrols and was making only emergency runs. There were numerous reports of minor traffic accidents and vehicles stalling after ash clogged their air filters.

Pebbles of pumice up to an inch in diameter were reported falling in Cougar, a tiny logging town 10 miles south of the mountain. Cowlitz County sheriff's deputies said people were being evacuated from the restricted "red zone," an area within a 20-mile radius of the peak.

Twenty people at Cougar were evacuated, but another 20 at a sporting goods store just down the Lewis River from the logging town were forced to stay put until the ash fallout subsided.

"It's a major eruption," said Pete Rowley, a U.S. Geological Survey geologist. He said the plume from the southwestern Washington mountain, first reported at 8:45 p.m. PDT by an Eastern Airlines pilot, rose as high as 52,000 feet and was the greatest activity since a May 25 blast that stranded thousands of Memorial Day travelers.

By 4 a.m. PDT today, the plume had dropped to about 16,000 feet.

The Portland mayor's office said a slight trace of ash was found in the Bull Run Reservoir that supplies water to more than one million people in the area. Officials said it would make the water acidic but should not pose a major health problem.

Elizabeth Reese, who owns a roadside store south of Mount St. Helens, said the fallout appeared to be heavier than that from the May 25 eruption.

"We've got larger chunks, more sand and darker," she said.

Carter suggests new rationing plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's latest gasoline rationing plan, which would dilute the effects of an emergency oil shortage with a flood of coupons, is forcing Congress to take yet another journey across familiar but slippery ground.

The lawmakers will decide whether to embrace or reject Carter's proposal under rules that give the plan — sent to Capitol Hill Thursday — a much better chance for approval than versions that died there in past years.

Congress has been demanding a gasoline rationing plan for five years, but earlier efforts by Carter and President Ford died in a din of congressional squabbling over which states would benefit most.

If the new proposal is approved — more precisely if Congress fails to reject it — a 20 percent shortfall in U.S. oil supplies would set in motion a vast new bureaucracy in which thousands of workers would distribute billions of coupons to the owners of 153 million vehicles at a federal cost of $2 billion or more a year.

Theoretically, the set-up would spread the shortage fairly among all Americans. It would give extra weight to farmers and others in agriculture, to states whose drivers use their cars a lot in times of fuel plenty, to mass transit and to anyone else who could convince the government he or she deserved special treatment.

Anyone who didn't use all his coupons could sell them to anyone else for whatever the market would bear.

Most senators and representatives, preoccupied with budget and draft registration votes Thursday, gave no quick indication how they would vote on the new plan.

But Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa, said chances of defeating it under the new rules would be "slim at best," even if farm-state senators opposed it. And they won't, he implied, since it contains a provision they wanted — taking special farm fuel allocations out of the overall national pot rather than out of each state's share.

July draft registration seems likely

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's draft registration program, winning all-but-final approval from Congress, probably will begin in mid-July. When it ends two weeks later, an estimated 4 million young men will have signed up. By a vote of 58 to 34, the Senate on Thursday approved spending $13.3 million to renew mandatory registration for the first time since 1975. The House has passed practically identical legislation, but must act again because of a minor amendment the Senate added. That approval is likely next week. Then, only a court suit threatened by the American Civil Liberties Union would stand in the way of the stand-by registration program. The ACLU has said it would argue in court that the program's exclusion of women illegally discriminates against women. Carter had proposed including women, but that was rejected by both the Senate and the House. For his part, the director of the Selective Service System agrees with including women. "My own wish," said Bernard Rosker, "is that Congress would own up to it and change the law."

If there is a ruling against an all-male system, he said, "the courts could direct us to register women or simply declare the law unconstitutional" — meaning no one would register. As now planned, registration will be carried out over a two-week period at 31,000 post offices across the country. Men born in 1960 will be told to register during the first week; men born in 1961, the next week. Failure to register is a felony carrying a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine. Registration opponents predicted that massive numbers of young men would fail to register, either out of ignorance or in defiance. "I am convinced the president will find it was much easier to convince the Senate to fund draft registration than it will be to get 19- and 20-year-olds to submit to draft registration," said Barry Lynn, head of the Committee Against Registration and the Draft.

Odessan jailed on drug charge

An Odessa man was arrested Thursday night by Midland narcotics officers, who found approximately three pounds of what is believed to be marijuana. According to reports, narcotics officers with the Midland Police Department received information that a man would be coming into Midland from Odessa with three to four pounds of marijuana. Officers set up surveillance and when the man arrived about 11 p.m., they trailed him into Midland. He was arrested at the intersection of Rankin Highway and Stokes Street. When they searched the man's vehicle they found three large paper bags and four plastic baggies of what they believe is marijuana.

Ted Kennedy not ready to give up campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of Edward M. Kennedy say President Carter's appeals for party unity are a thinly disguised attempt to force the Massachusetts senator from the race for the Democratic nomination. "Obviously we will be for party unity when we get the nomination too," said Kennedy aide Steven Schlesinger after the Carter camp voiced repeated appeals for togetherness at the party's platform committee hearings Thursday. "That's their notion of how to push Kennedy out of the race," said Schlesinger, Kennedy's deputy issues director. Carter played host to several committee members at the White House Thursday night, saying he is "extremely eager to see rifts healed," but adding that there need be no "fear or consternation" if some disputes are left to the national convention to decide in August. The hearings, which continue through Saturday, are the last to be held before the platform is drafted. In testimony today, the platform writers heard support for tax reductions for a wide variety of purposes, especially to encourage business investment. Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., said tax reform aimed at encouraging business investment is the best hope to increase productivity of the nation's economy. The changes he said could include an increased investment tax credit or speeding the tax writeoff for depreciation of business equipment. "The important thing is to find the right formula for making investment in productive capacity more attractive than investment in non-productive assets or in consumption," Bradley testified. Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., also urged the committee to consider tax cuts aimed at encouraging investment and stimulating productivity.

Courthouse closed, flag at half-mast for Merritt

The Midland County Commissioners' Court, in one of its rare abbreviated sessions, on Thursday afternoon ordered the Midland County Courthouse closed Friday afternoon in honor of Constable Jack Merritt, who died Thursday at age 76. The court also decreed that the Texas flag at the courthouse would be flown at half-mast today in honor of Merritt. Merritt's funeral was to be at 1 p.m. today in Calvary Baptist Church. Burial was to be in Resthaven Memorial Park. Commissioner Durward Wright, who made the motion that the courthouse be closed as a tribute to Merritt, said the constable was a "first-class law-enforcement officer, a friend of all county employees and a citizen of our county extraordinary."

Fire fighting family celebrates

(Continued from Page 1A) old ones you couldn't breathe through them hardly. We've gone from 500 gallon per minute pumps to 1200 gallon a minute pumps. There are a lot of new things, like the Jaws of Life, which is probably the most valuable piece of equipment we have at a bad wreck. I don't know how we got people out without it. "Crowbars and stuff, huh?" prompted Pat. "Yeah, I guess." The Jaws of Life is a pneumatic cutting tool used to pry open jammed car doors or to slice through crumpled automobiles holding victims painfully in their clutches. Due to all these innovations, fire seldom completely destroys building these days, unless it's a trailer house in the county, Doyle added. Pat Land had really wanted to work at the Midland Fire Department, but there's a city policy against hiring anyone under 21 and against hiring relatives of anyone already working at the department. So Pat went over to Odessa to take his written exam. His dad went with him. Out of 14 men taking the test, only four passed. Those four took the agility test, and only two passed. Pat received a perfect score on the agility section. "I just went over to watch him. I knew he'd do good," Doyle explained proudly. Doyle said he certainly didn't "discourage" his sons from being firemen. In fact, he said, all three of his sons started by wanting to be firemen. "Since they were little bitty, when someone asked them what they wanted to be, they would say 'I want to be a fireman.' "I didn't encourage them then because our salaries weren't very good then." Of the three sons, only Pat actually fulfilled the childhood dream. One son works for a glass company and another is in college and wants to be a missionary, according to his father. A daughter is still in high school. "You know I never worried about Doyle, but I do about this one," said Barbara Land, pointing at Pat. Pat, a fully trained emergency medical technician before entering the fire department, is currently undergoing his roughest tests — those administered to "rookies" by the firemen. "They call me rook — answer the phone rook," said Pat. And they joke "about my tugboat feet and monkey arms." Pat wears a 13½ shoe and has long arms.

His father recalled the many stunts they had pulled on rookies — squirting them with hoses, turning their pants around backwards and switching their boots. The veterans would then sound the sirens in a false alarm so the new men, in the rush of their first fire, would hurriedly put their pants on backwards and be unable to pull the suspenders up because they were looped under their legs and have their left foot in the right shoe and vice versa. "It was very embarrassing for them," Doyle said. "We used to just sit there and die laughing. But the sooner they learn you can take it, the sooner they leave you alone," he told his son sagely. "That's all right," Pat commented. "I've listened to you and now I know all the tricks. I'll be prepared."

'Ghost gas' sought

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — After evacuating workers from the Southern Bell building, Gainesville firefighters searched for the source of a "ghost gas" that may be the cause of fainting spells among employees. But the search Thursday turned up no clues, and Southern Bell district manager Robert Coleman said environmental engineering experts were being called in to test the air in the building. All employees were sent home Thursday night some three hours after paramedics were called in to help four female operators who reportedly fainted on the job. At least six operators have suffered fainting spells during the past two days. Workers on Tuesday reported suffering sore throats and a burning sensation in their eyes and nasal passages, although they could detect no noticeable odor. On Thursday night, the mysterious ailment struck one person about every two hours. "I was dizzy... real weak and hot," said Pat Bouie, who was carried from the building by paramedics. She and other operators complained of numbness in their arms and hands. "Everybody's falling out of there like flies," said operator Marilyn Donaldson. The symptoms are viral in nature, said B.C. Pafford, county director of environmental health. He checked the building Thursday but could not identify the problem. "We cannot trace anything in the building. It could possibly be there, but whatever it is, it's a ghost gas," Pafford said. "It was unlikely the problems could be caused by toxic fumes," he said. "If it was gas, I think you'd think you'd find more than one person hit every couple of hours," he said. Pat Warren, president of the Communications Workers of America union local that represents the telephone workers, said he called the fire department Thursday night after he was alerted to the faintings. "The company puts a pretty low priority on employee safety," Warren said. Union requests that the building be shut down when the fainting spells first began were ignored by Southern Bell, he claimed. Coleman said action was not taken sooner because "we did not feel any pattern had developed until recently."

Bush plans Midland dinner as fund-raiser

WASHINGTON — Barely two weeks after ending his exhausting two-year quest for the presidency, George Bush is back on the road. This time, however, his goal is not votes, but money. Traveling alone, the former U.N. ambassador is on a coast-to-coast tour to help retire his $380,000 campaign debt. A series of private, $1,000-a-couple fundraising dinners is scheduled at the homes of wealthy Bush supporters over the next few weeks in an effort to raise about $150,000 of that amount. One of those dinners will be in his former hometown of Midland, Texas, where he got his start in the oil business. Plans for that dinner haven't been announced yet. The first was held in San Francisco on Thursday, Bush's 56th birthday. Others are scheduled for Atlanta, New York, Brewton, Ala., Washington, and five Texas cities — Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, San Antonio and Midland. "The goal is to erase the debt before the Republican convention in Detroit next month. George Bush is personally committed to raising every nickel of that amount himself," said campaign finance director Frederick M. Bush, who is no relation to the former ambassador. For that reason, Bush will not accept any money raised at a series of

Birth defects high in Agent Orange area

EAU CLAIRE, Wis. (AP) — A Hanoi doctor says studies of children of North Vietnamese soldiers exposed to the chemical herbicide Agent Orange have a high rate of birth defects, apparently justifying "the complaints of American Vietnam veterans."

The findings of the study by Dr. Ton That Tung, director of the Viet Duc hospital in Hanoi, were mailed to the Eau Claire Leader-Telegram. The French manuscript, portions of which were published Wednesday, was translated by a University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire professor and was to be offered to a medical journal.

Tung's previous statements about health problems caused by Agent Orange, including remarks made during a 1978 visit to the United States, were questioned and labeled unscientific by the U.S. Veterans Administration. In the U.S., veterans of the Vietnam War have claimed exposure to Agent Orange caused serious physical and psychological damage and birth defects in their children.

Tung said researchers studied Yen-Bai, a city in North Vietnam that was never exposed to herbicide spraying. Yen-Bai has a population of 10,000, including 700 men who fought in areas sprayed by U.S. troops with Agent Orange, Tung said. The wives of the ex-soldiers were never exposed to Agent Orange.

In the four years between 1975 and 1978, there were 3,058 births in Yen-Bai. Thirty of the children had birth defects. Fifteen of those were children whose fathers had been exposed to Agent Orange, said the study.

Six of the 30 birth defects were a condition called anencephaly, in which all or a major part of the brain is missing. Besides the anencephaly, defects included facial disfigurement, shortened arms and legs and missing limbs.

Tung said he also found a marked increase in a condition called hydrocephalus, an abnormal increase in the amount of fluid within the cranial cavity.

Researchers also studied births in Quy-Mong. In the three years of 1976 to 1978, 233 children were born in the North Vietnam district of 4,500 inhabitants. Among the 30 families of exposed veterans, nine birth defects were recorded in the three year period.

Two groups of Vietnamese soldiers in the Red River Delta region of North Vietnam were compared.

One group had 670 couples with a husband who was a veteran who had been exposed to areas sprayed with Agent Orange. The second group had 116 couples in which the husband was a veteran who had not seen service in sprayed areas. Mothers in both groups had never lived in sprayed areas.

In the group of exposed veterans, there were 43 birth defects in 1,187 births, said the study. In the non-exposed father group, there were no birth defects in 309 births.

The VA had no immediate comment on Tung's study, which it received Wednesday. The VA has refused to recognize Agent Orange as a cause of disability among veterans.

Baptists urge Congress to restore tax break

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Faced with a $1 billion income tax bill for their 3,000 overseas missionaries, Southern Baptists have urged Congress to restore a tax break.

There has been a "significant tax burden" on religious and charitable organizations providing relief, medical care, agricultural projects and other services among the world's needy since the loss of a tax exemption in 1978, the church said Wednesday.

The Southern Baptist Convention, which ends tonight, passed a resolution calling on Congress to restore tax exemptions for missionaries in the Third World.

The resolution criticized the inclusion of missionaries among the Americans overseas who lost an income tax exemption, saying their voluntary work was "in the foreign policy interests of the United States."

The church has a four-month extension on its 1979 tax bill, pending congressional action on proposed legislation to restore the exemption on $20,000 income per missionary.

Other religious denominations also have been affected by the loss of the exemption.

Soviets suffer shortage

MOSCOW (AP) — At cafeterias and snack shops, customers have to make do with tissue-thin paper napkins cut into strips about an inch wide.

Thousands of readers of one of the Soviet Union's most popular illustrated magazines are told they cannot renew their subscriptions because the press run has been reduced.

These are symptoms of a chronic paper shortage in the Soviet Union — a shortage that officials now admit has taken on alarming proportions.

With about 35 percent of its huge land area covered by forests, the Soviet Union possesses the biggest timber resources of any nation in the world.

Nevertheless, in 1979 Soviet paper production totalled 5.2 million metric tons — a drop of 5 percent from the year before. By contrast, paper output in the United States during 1979 climbed to a record 27 million metric tons. A metric ton is 2,204 pounds.

Many paper convenience products widely available in Western countries — such as paper towels, grocery bags, cups, plates and disposable diapers — are either scarce or unheard of in the Soviet Union.

Reports appearing in the government-controlled press indicate that the long route from forest to paper mill to consumer is now bogged down with a variety of serious production and transport problems.

Writing recently in Pravda, Gennady F. Pronin, first deputy chief of the Ministry of the Pulp and Paper Industry, sketched a gloomy picture of the industry's performance.

The official noted that as a result of shortfalls in paper and cellulose output, "the plans of publishing houses and poly-graphic enterprises have been spoiled. Due to a lack of artificial fibers, a fabric shortage has developed. A lack of packing materials is hampering the supply to retail trade of various food-stuffs and manufactured items. The situation currently remains extremely alarming," Pronin said.

Firm to pay damages

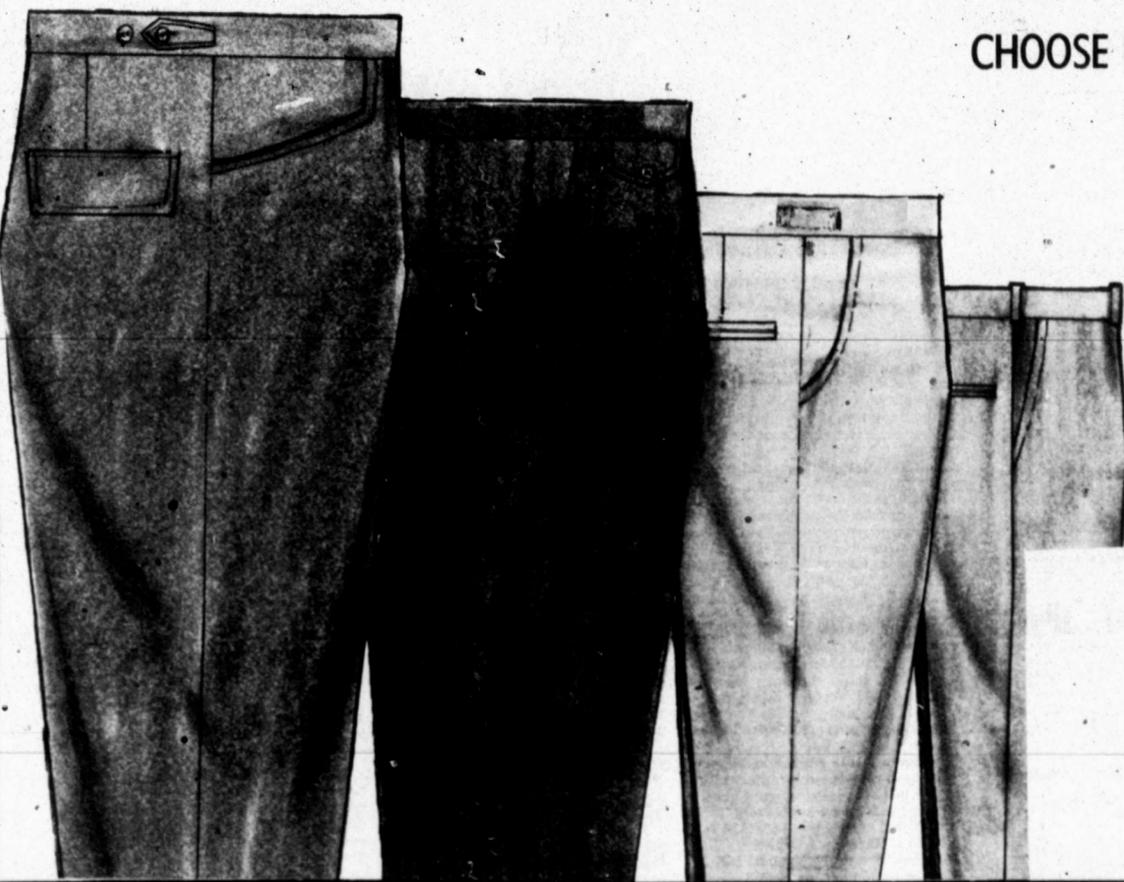

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A Superior Court jury has ordered two asbestos manufacturers to pay damages amounting to $1.2 million to a former shipyard worker who says he developed a serious lung illness from inhaling asbestos fibers.

The jury returned the verdict Tuesday, six days after beginning deliberations in the case of Richard C. Hogard, 40, who sued Johns Manville and Raybestos Manhattan Inc.

Closer look needed

We mentioned in a past editorial the apparent interest State Comptroller Bob Bullock displays for a payroll checkoff system for state employees.

Now, according to a recent Dallas Morning News editorial, Charles W. Simons, Russell Perry and other members of the Texas Right to Work Committee have filed suit to stop Bullock from setting up the payroll checkoffs for state employees' dues to labor unions.

The Morning News put it this way: "The right-to-work supporters feel that Bullock's approach is one that should have been debated by the Legislature, rather than set up administratively. They contend that the plan to set up a checkoff exceeds the comptroller's constitutional authority."

"It seems to us that they have a point. The voters of this state have indicated, in the right-to-work law and elsewhere, that they are not keen on the idea of collective bargaining, let alone strikes, for public employees. Experiences of other state and local governments that have militant public employee unions tend to bear out the wisdom of this view."

The Morning News' editorial concludes with the notation: "If Bullock thinks public employees should unionize, he has a right to that opinion. But the public is the employer in this case. If the unions want to change policy, they'd best be prepared to change a lot of minds, not just one."

We, too, believe that the unionization of the state's employees would not be in the state's best interest.

Bullock's interest in this matter, however, is one that should be of prime concern to every Texan. No group, of course, needs to unionize when management is sensitive to employee needs and concerns. That isn't to say that management in every case must — or even should — satisfy every employee desire.

The real key to the unionization issue is the word "fair" — fairness on the part of management and on the part of labor.

Due to Bullock's interest, perhaps the Legislature should take a closer look at the dues checkoff issue just to determine how deep the problem is, if there is one, truly extends. If there is a problem, it can be located and corrected, and, perhaps, the entire issue of a state employees' union resolved in one fell swoop.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, June 12, the 165th day of 1980. There are 201 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 12, 1856, Britain turned the Suez Canal over to Egypt after operating it for 74 years.

On this date:

In 1777, France's Marquis De La Fayette arrived in South Carolina to help the American colonists in their battle for independence from England.

In 1900, the Boxer Rebellion began against the Europeans in China.

In 1927, 750,000 pounds of paper fluttered down on aviator Charles Lindbergh during a triumphant ticker-tape parade in New York.

In 1967, the Soviet Union called for an urgent meeting of the U.N. Security Council to pressure Israel to return Arab territory seized in the Six-Day War.

Ten years ago: Brazil agreed to ransom a kidnapped West German ambassador by freeing 40 political prisoners.

Five years ago: Britain's inflation rate jumped to a record 25 percent,

Last year, a strike by independent truckers was gathering momentum as more truckers pressed for more diesel fuel and lower prices.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Justice Department a simmering volcano

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti, an earnest fellow with an air about him of legitimate purpose, is sitting atop a Justice Department that is rumbling like Mount St. Helens in its pre-eruption stage.

I have charged that Justice, far from blind, has been winking at powerful politicians who run afoul of the law. I have cited case after case of selective prosecutions and aborted investigations. Now the Senate Judiciary Committee is investigating more than 20 politically sensitive cases, which appear to have been mishandled.

Even the celebrated ABSCAM investigation has come under fire. This is the FBI's elaborate "sting" operation, which netted eight members of Congress and several other public officials in a phony Arab attempt to buy influence with cash on the barrelhead.

A month ago, I suggested that the Justice Department seemed more eager to pursue President Carter's opponents than his supporters. I reported that two of the ABSCAM targets, Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., and Rep. Frank Thompson, D-N.J., planned to support Sen. Ted Kennedy for the Democratic presidential nomination.

But in the case of Newark's Mayor Kenneth Gibson, undercover agents met with him in Atlantic City last November. They sounded him out about using his influence to help a phony Arab sheik. He was secretly videotaped handing an FBI operative a card and inviting him to City Hall.

The next month, Gibson endorsed Jimmy Carter for re-election and became one of the big guns in Carter's New Jersey campaign. The compromising tape, meanwhile, was sent to Justice Department headquarters, which never gave the necessary authorization for the agents to proceed with the Gibson investigation.

Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., is another who was offered a baited hook by the ABSCAM operators. Then last January, he came out for President Carter. The Justice Department seemed to lose interest in pursuing Florio, although the congressman says he simply refused to deal with the "Arabs."

Justice officials ordered the ABSCAM team not to pursue promising leads against at least seven members of Congress. This angered the people at the lower levels who leaked the ABSCAM story to the press, according to sources close to the investigation.

An indignant Civiletti ordered an investigation into the press leaks. Now Justice Department officials are trying to pin the blame on the only non-government member of the FBI undercover team, even though they have privately concluded that their own prosecutors were responsible for

CHARLEY REESE

Slumbering Westerners should recognize threat

The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan has been a success. It has cost the Soviets some casualties and will continue to cost them, but in the Soviet Union, life has a low value anyway.

President Carter's hoopla about the invasion was just so much hot air; the Olympic boycott, an empty gesture. What the Afghan rebels need are unity, which they cannot achieve, and guns which they are not getting and apparently are not going to get.

The Moslem nations are already preparing to make peace with the Soviet regime in Afghanistan; the Europeans are ready to pursue appeasement again (it's called detente in diplomatic language); and President Carter is off on the campaign trail with Afghanistan and the Iranian hostages put on the back burner.

Thus is repeated the pattern which, if it is not changed, will spell the doom of the West.

Since World War II, the United States and the West have accepted Soviet expansion in order to avoid a confrontation. The Baltic states and Finland; then Eastern Europe; the ruthless crushing of the Hungarian and Czech bids for freedom; then Southeast Asia and Cuba; now South-west Asia.

Whether the politicians call it containment or detente, the policy has remained appeasement. Appeasement leads to war. It always has and it always will and the American people need to face that reality.

The thinking of our leaders in the past decades has been based on false premises. One of those was that the passing of time would result in a change in the Soviet Union which would make peaceful co-existence possible. Anyone who still clings to that belief in the face of the past 35 years of Soviet history is a hopeless dreamer.

The other false premise was that nuclear weapons had made war between the superpowers unthinkable. Soviet writings, Soviet speeches, and Soviet actions prove that the leaders of the Soviet Union do not share that belief. They have, as quickly as their circumstances permitted, prepared themselves to fight and win a nuclear war.

Still another false premise was that the conflict was between nations and not between some nations and communism. The refusal to believe that the enemy is communism and not just the Soviet Union has led the West down many blind paths.

Thus, the West has been in a war with a unified enemy which has a grand strategy, definite goals, clear-cut objectives, and unity of purpose while the West, lacking all of these, has been reduced to reacting.

In such a contest, the outcome is inevitable. The West will lose and the world will enter a new Dark Age under Soviet hegemony. That the Soviet hegemony may one day be wracked with a civil war between the Soviet and Chinese communists is no consolation. That civil war will come long after freedom is dead and will determine only the brand of tyranny that is to dominate the planet.

It need not be, but if defeat is to be avoided, the American people must recognize that they are in a war. Unless they do that, they will not elect leaders who will fight, not just in the military sense, but in the wider sense of devising a strategy and of marshaling all of the great resources of the West to roll back communism until it has become too weak to threaten our existence.

The war being waged against us is a total war, utilizing not only military force and the threat of force, but also propaganda, subversion, espionage, assassination, economic measures, and science.

Yet, here we sit, fat, dumb and happy. We make excuses for the Soviet Union, accept their propaganda at face value, and go to such ridiculous extremes as deposing our own allies and strengthening those of the Soviet Union.

So pervasive is the liberal theology of false premises that most Americans would rather go to a White House reception with their fly unzipped than be considered an anti-communist.

Well, there is justice in the Universe. We shall surely suffer the fate we deserve.

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

The reality of the Reagan campaign is that his vice-presidential running mate should be a bit more moderate. Here are some suggestions for Deputy Gipper:

How about Ramsey Clark? Texan, former attorney general and 12th-round draft choice for ambassador to Iran, Mr. Clark is a man for all seasons — including Ramadan.

Or, perhaps, Barbara Jordan. As a black Texan female lawyer and one-time character witness for John Connally, Ms. Jordan would be indispensable as she tutored Reagan on big government and how it works.

Another running-mate for Reagan would be David Eisenhower. He has youth and still a magic name, David.

Reagan and Eisenhower. What a ticket! What box office! Okay, so I'm dreaming. Who did you have in mind — Richard Schweiker?

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan's Brock dilemma reveals Republican infighting

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Only days before the Republican "unity" dinner in Los Angeles today, Ronald Reagan faced advice from his oldest, most trusted political associates that he renege on his promise to retain William Brock as Republican national chairman through the 1980 campaign.

The unity dinner was billed as "a laying on of hands" in which Reagan and Brock, at the head table, would confirm each other's legitimacy. But Brock's fate is less important than the mess made of handling him. That Reagan as prospective presidential nominee neither firmly retained Brock nor cleanly severed him is evidence that his political operation is by no means honed to run against Jimmy Carter.

Simultaneously, Reaganites have been waging a poorly-coordinated, consistently unsuccessful campaign to purge anti-Reagan state party leaders. The causes are not policy disagreements but ancient feuds buttressed by cultural differences. Contrary to greatly exaggerated reports of the Grand Old Party united by a passion for victory, these look like the same old Republicans expert at snatching defeat from the jaws of victory. Perhaps fearful of losing to Carter in November, these Reaganites want to consolidate party power now.

When Brock journeyed May 3 to Reagan's California home, such blood-letting seemed likely to yield to good sense in the interest of defeating President Carter. Nobody had ever accused Brock of pro-Reagan passions, but now he conceded Reagan's nomination.

A deal was struck on the Pacific shores. Brock, highly esteemed in the party's non-Reagan establishment, would be retained as chairman through the national election. Reagan would assign his own operatives to Republican national headquarters.

But nobody pinned down the fate of Ben Cotten, the tough Washington lawyer who is Brock's deputy chairman and far less an admirer of Reagan than even his chief. The Reaganites thought Cotten would go; Brock recalled no such commitment. Returning to Washington, Brock began to feel like a figurehead at national headquarters with Reagan's agent, New Hampshire Republican leader Jerry Carmen, in real control. Oddly, now, included Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada, national chairman of the Reagan campaign, in the deal. Laxalt was outraged that Reagan would not have a national chairman of his own choosing. Carmen last week sent the candidate a secret report urgently recommending that Brock must go in order to remove an anti-Reagan aura at national headquarters. Old Reagan hand Lyn Nofziger, just returned to the inner circle, enthusiastically concurred. So did veteran Reagan adviser Edwin Meese.

Against this array, Reagan is told by the party establishment that the purge of Brock will shatter the gossamer of Republican unity. That view was once supported by Reagan campaign chairman William Casey, but he has quietly bowed to the insistence and persuasion of Laxalt. That is to be made clear to Brock by Casey when they meet in Los Angeles just before the unity dinner.

This is being played out against a comic opera background of victorious Reagan legions reaching for power around the country and falling flat on their faces. The Reagan-high command asked that one of Iowa's two national committee members be a Reaganite; that produced a fitful effort to purge former Republican National Chairman Mary Louise Smith, which collapsed when Lt. Gov. Terry Branstad and other conservative Iowans refused to cooperate.

A deal in Michigan to elect one Reaganite national committee member ended in double defeat when local Reaganites grasped for two seats. They lost in Colorado and Mississippi, and were too weak to mount a challenge in Connecticut. These efforts were neither controlled nor advised from the Reagan high command in Los Angeles.

Thus, on the eve of the "unity" dinner, the Reagan political command showed itself divided, ineffective and irresolute in the Brock affair. Illogically, blundering efforts to purge anti-Reagan members of the national committee left a hard core so furious it might openly oppose the nominee's desire for a new chairman at Detroit. Only Bill Brock's sanity in agreeing to Reagan's wishes as a good party man would prevent such ultimate Republican madness.

That Reagan's political apparatus is not ready to run a national campaign is not surprising. What surprises is the priority on seizing the party machinery, national and state, now in the obvious fear that Reagan may not survive Nov. 4. That Republicans are acting like their old selves is the best political news at the White House in some time.

Screwworm nearly eradicated

MISSION, Texas (AP) — Statistics tell the success story of the battle to rid the United States of pesky screwworm flies that prey on livestock.

Last year, there were 90 cases nationwide, confined to Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada and California. In 1972, Texas alone recorded 90,980 cases.

The program's record means it will gradually phase out operations in this country and by 1982, it will be confined to Mexico.

"We've been very successful," said Dr. James Novy, director of the U.S. Department of Agriculture other programs but not all will find government jobs.

In the next two or three months, approximately 100 workers in the plant and distribution section will get pink slips. Only 20 employees will be absorbed into other offices by the end of the year, he said.

Another fly distribution center in Douglas, Ariz., closed in January although aircraft for Mexican flights are maintained there.

The phasing out of American offices means more work will be done in Mexico. The Mexico-United States Commission for Screwworm Eradication is headquartered in Mexico City.

"As the work moves south, we'll open distribution centers deeper in Mexico," Novy said. Programs in Hermosillo and Obregon, both in the northern state of Sonora, are being phased out.

New offices opened earlier this year at Mazatlan and Culiacan in northwest Mexico.

Cooperation of ranchers has been a big factor in the program's success, Novy said.

Veterinarians have urged ranchers to avoid branding, castration and other surgery in warm months.

Interest rate reduced by USDA on federal price support loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has reduced interest rates paid by farmers who plan to take out federal price support loans on their 1980 crops.

The loans will bear an annual interest of 11.5 percent, down from the rate of 13 percent that had been in effect since April 16, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said Thursday.

Bergland said the reduction took effect immediately.

A number of interest rates on other USDA programs, including several in the Farmers Home Administration, also are being reduced to reflect the reduced costs to the government of borrowing money to finance them.

screwworm laboratory. "The whole objective is to eliminate the screwworm from Mexico to the Guatemala border."

The fly larvae feed off wounds in warm-blooded animals, and can weaken or kill livestock if left untreated. Since 1962, the lab here in the lower Rio Grande Valley has grown flies, sterilized them and distributed them from airplanes. Sterile flies mating with wild flies will break the insect's life cycle.

The laboratory is located at a former Air Force base, which houses several other USDA programs.

"The original plan was that we would close down here by 1981, but in 1978 we had an outbreak in Arizona, New Mexico and far West Texas which set the program back," Novy said Thursday.

"It's conceivable that we could close by the end of 1981 but it's in the plans to continue to 1982," he said.

New figures confirm farmers' worst fears

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rising production costs continue to put a crimp in farmers' income prospects this year, according to the latest Agriculture Department figures.

The new figures, released Thursday, are expected to stir further calls among farm groups and members of Congress for the Carter administration to raise crop price supports and take other relief measures.

Net farm income in the second quarter of this year now is estimated at an annual rate of $20.2 billion, a drop of more than 40 percent from the 1979 annual rate in the second quarter of $34.1 billion.

If the annual rate in a three-month period held steady over the entire 12 months, that would be the net income for the calendar year.

In 1979, for example, the quarterly annual rates varied from about $36 billion in the first quarter to a low of around $29.8 billion in the third.

But farmers wound up having a net income of $33.3 billion, according to the latest USDA revisions, virtually matching the record set in 1973. The figures, however, do not take into account the effects of inflation.

Not all farmers share equally when times are good, nor do all of them fare badly when national income prospects are down. Dairy farmers, for example, are considered to be doing well because of rising production and higher guaranteed federal price supports.

Cash grain farmers and many livestock producers, particularly those who raise hogs, have been hurt severely by lagging prices and higher costs.

As an overall indicator, however, the figures do show how trends develop and how farmers nationally fare from one period to another.

For example, the new figures for the second quarter, at $20.2 billion, represented a further slide in farm profits this spring. A month ago, experts forecast the second-quarter income rate at $20.8 billion.

Three months ago, in early March, the forecast for the second quarter was $26 billion.

"Although the rate of increase in farm production input prices will slow in coming months, net farm income for 1980 will average substantially below 1979," the report said. "The 10 percent to 14 percent rise in 1980 production expenses will easily outpace the small gain in cash receipts."

Looking at third-quarter prospects for the first time, the report forecast some increase in the annual rate for farm income, a rise to $23.5 billion in July-September. No figures were shown for the fourth quarter.

Officials have predicted an overall decline in net farm income this year — the amount farmers have left over after paying production expenses — of around 25 percent. That would put 1980 income at around $25 billion, down more than $8 billion from last year.

USDA report forecasts record wheat production

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new government report indicates a record wheat crop may be possible this year. But that will depend on the effects of recent drought in the northern Great Plains.

The Agriculture Department said Wednesday farmers are expected to harvest a record winter wheat crop of 1.76 billion bushels this year, 9 percent more than the 1979 harvest and 3 percent above last month's forecast.

Based on field surveys June 1, the new estimate compares with last year's winter wheat harvest of 1.6 billion bushels and the May forecast of 1.71 billion bushels.

Winter wheat accounts for about three-fourths of total U.S. wheat production. It is planted in the fall and harvested the following summer.

Total U.S. wheat output last year was about 2.14 billion bushels, including the 1.6 billion bushels of winter wheat. Spring-planted wheat accounts for the remainder. It is the spring-planted crop that is open to serious question.

The department's first forecast of spring wheat production will be issued on July 11, which will provide the first total production estimate of U.S. wheat this year.

Severe drought has diminished prospects for spring wheat in much of the northern Great Plains, but officials say total output could possibly be around 500 million bushels, more or less.

Including winter wheat prospects, that points to a possible total U.S. wheat harvest this year of about 2.26 billion bushels, which could be about the amount that USDA experts say will be needed to meet domestic and export demands in 1980-81.

The new report included a winter wheat forecast of nearly 119.3 million bushels for Washington state this year. That was an increase of 5.3 million bushels from prospects on May 1.

'Dallas' security tight

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Who shot J.R.?" is a question heard around the world these days, but the producers of the hit CBS series "Dallas" are out to keep the answer secret.

J.R. Ewing, an oil-rich scoundrel played by Larry Hagman, was gravely wounded when he was shot twice in the stomach in this season's last episode. The audience doesn't know if he'll live or die, or who pulled the trigger.

Lorimar Productions is taking precautions to keep everyone guessing until the fall season. Probably no more than three people know who the assailant is — and the triggerman could be changed if the secret leaks.

Scripts are being issued with crucial pages missing. Episodes are being filmed under tight security in Dallas. Phony scenes fingering the wrong person are being filmed to keep everyone guessing — including the cast and crew.

"We're going to do everything in our power to mislead or keep the audience guessing and keep the identity of the real assailant hidden until the show airs," said producer Leonard Katzman, in a telephone interview from Dallas.

Katzman gave only one clue: "The assailant will be someone that the audience has seen or heard about. It won't be somebody that J.R. discovered robbing the Ewing office."

Here are the chief suspects:
— Sue Ellen Ewing, J.R.'s ill-used wife.
— Kristin Shepard, Sue Ellen's sister. J.R.

ended their affair by telling her to get out of town or he'd have her arrested for prostitution.

— Alan Beam, a devious young lawyer working for J.R.

— Cliff Barnes, whose father was ruined by the Ewings.

— Vaughn Leland, a banker who borrowed $20 million to buy J.R.'s share in oil land in Asia. A few days after the sale the Asian country nationalized the company.

— Marilee Stone, whose husband killed himself after losing all his money in J.R.'s oil scheme.

— Dusty Farlow, Sue Ellen's lover, also has been considered a suspect. Although his plane crashed four episodes before the shooting, Farlow's body was never found.

Besides the "whodunit" angle to the fall series, there's the question of whether J.R. will pull through.

Larry Hagman has not signed a new contract and reportedly is holding out for $100,000 an episode. According to one published report, Lorimar is offering $55,000.

"I think you can say both of those figures are erroneous. Let's say it's a little on the high side," Katzman said.

Linda Gray, who plays Sue Ellen, also has not signed a new contract. There was no indication of what she was seeking.

They are not due to begin work in Dallas for about a week.

Jordan back in New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Civil rights leader Vernon E. Jordan, Jr., has returned to New York, two weeks after he was critically wounded by sniper fire in Fort Wayne, Ind., and doctors say he could leave the hospital "in a matter of weeks."

"I think he is out of the woods, so to speak," said Dr. Melville Platt, associate director of New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center where Jordan is now being treated.

Meanwhile, police and FBI in Fort Wayne said the investigation of the May 29 attack on Jordan had produced "nothing promising."

Platt said the 44-year-old National Urban League president was healing satisfactorily "in light of the great seriousness of his initial injury."

Jordan, shot in the lower back in Fort Wayne, Ind., was flown aboard an Air Force medical evacuation plane Thursday to the New York medical center where the deposed Shah of Iran was treated for cancer last year.

Jordan was in "serious but stable condition," hospital Administrator Scott Margolis said Thursday night.

Before leaving Fort Wayne, Jordan issued a statement to the Parkview Memorial Hospital staff, saying: "I am well on the way to a complete recovery, to the full resumption of my duties as president of the National Urban League."

Dr. Andrew Adair of Chicago, regional director of the Urban League, said Jordan returned to New York because "he wanted a different environment. He wanted to go home."

He added that there was some concern about his security, but said he knew of no threats on Jordan's life during his stay at Parkview.

Jordan also told the hospital staff, "In my personal struggle for recovery and health, as in the social struggle for justice, I continue to believe we shall overcome."

Davis said FBI agents and city police detectives have interviewed 500 to 700 people about the sniper attack on Jordan.

Sub crew homosexuals probed

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — As many as 16 female sailors on the USS Norton Sound — one-fourth of the women aboard — could be discharged in connection with a Navy investigation of alleged homosexuality, officials said.

The inquiry reportedly began after a list of the women aboard the missile test ship was circulated, and female crew members checked the names of those they believed were homosexuals. Master Chief Petty Officer Jim McDonough declined to comment Thursday on that report in the Daily Breeze, a Torrance newspaper.

He said the inquiry began May 15, when the ship was at its home base in Port Hueneme.

Originally, 24 women had been investigated, but the number was reduced to 19 after initial screening for "mental disease," said Navy Lt. Cmdr. Mark Baker.

Three more were eliminated from the investigation Wednesday.

Some women have refused to undergo psychiatric examinations, according to the newspaper, and some have sought legal counsel, said Lt. Cmdr. George Maris, head of the Naval station's legal services.

All the women remain on duty, and no charges have been filed. All are second and third class petty officers and have been in the Navy for six to 20 years, the paper said.

Under naval regulations, grounds for discharge include homosexual activity prior to enlistment, a homosexual attack on someone, having a homosexual encounter while enlisted or exhibiting homosexual tendencies.

Baker would not reveal the specific grounds for the investigation of the women, but quoted Navy policy: "Homosexual activity will not be tolerated, and any member who is determined to have attempted, solicited, or engaged in homosexual acts shall normally be separated from naval service. The presence of such a member in a military environment seriously impairs combat readiness, efficiency, security and morale."

The decision on filing charges, or relieving women of their duty during the investigation, is up to the Norton Sound's captain, Jay Seebirt. He refused to talk to The Associated Press.

The "women at sea" program is two years old, and seven ships have female crew members.

In the last fiscal year, 142 persons received discharges for homosexual acts or tendencies, a Navy spokesman in Washington D.C. said.

Hance wants aid for Nicaraguans

WASHINGTON — A $75 million U.S. aid package has only a 50 percent chance of keeping Nicaragua a non-communist nation, U.S. Rep. Kent Hance said Thursday, but a five-day trip to the Central American country last weekend convinced him the money is a necessary "investment for the future."

Hance, a Democrat from Lubbock representing the 19th Congressional District, was one of four congressmen representing President Carter in appearing before the ruling military junta, Sandanista rebels, business and church leaders.

The others were House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth and Reps. Bill Alexander of Arkansas and Stephen Neal of North Carolina.

Both branches of Congress have approved authorizing $70 million in loans and a $5 million grant to the country. But Hance voted against it because "I was really skeptical of there being any chance to save the country from communism."

Hance changed his mind because of information gathered on his trip. "Our intelligence sources have thoroughly convinced me that if we don't participate in trying to save the government and keep it, if that country goes communist, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Honduras, Guatemala and Mexico will be having the same problems over the next 10 years."

As small as the world is today, Hance said, the fall of those countries to communism would have an effect upon the Southwest and the U.S.

The loans would be used to repair damage caused by the Sandanista-led rebellion against former President Somoza, said Hance, who added that Somoza "bombed every manufacturing plant he could."

About 60 percent of the money would go directly to private business. The government portion would be earmarked for housing, roads, water and health projects. No military projects will be financed, said Hance.

The congressional delegation met with the archbishop of the Catholic Church in Nicaragua, 50 business leaders, Costa Rican President Rodrigo Caza and the five-man ruling junta.

According to Hance, some of the Sandanistas are "hard-core Marxists" who would like the U.S. to refuse them aid so they can turn to Cuba and the Soviet Union. "But there are also Sandanistas who are hard-core free enterprise people," he said.

Hance became involved when Jorge Salazar, president of the National Federation of Coffee Growers in Nicaragua, dropped by his office in Washington several weeks ago. Salazar was accompanied by the executive officers of the Nicaraguan Chamber of Commerce.

The Nicaraguans wanted the Texas congressman included in the entourage selected by Carter "because I had a strong free enterprise and pro-business voting record," he said.

Peacetime draft registration questions answered

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has won all-but-final approval from Congress for the $13.3 million he needs to renew peacetime draft registration.

The funding legislation was passed by the Senate on Thursday. It already had been passed by the House but must be approved again — probably next week — because of a minor amendment added by the Senate.

Carter's plan will resume mandatory registration, halted since 1975 when then-President Gerald Ford signed an executive order putting the Selective Service System in "deep standby."

An estimated 4 million young men, aged 19 and 20, will be required to register at post offices, probably in mid-July. An exact date will be announced later.

Here, in question and answer form, is an explanation of how the program will work:

Q. Who must register?

A. Young men who were born in 1960 and 1961. Beginning next January, all 18-year-olds will be required to register, and the program will continue enrolling 18-year-olds each year.

Q. What about women?

A. Congress decided not to require women to register, although President Carter had proposed including them.

Q. Is the exclusion of women legal?

A. There's some argument about that. The American Civil Liberties Union says any registration program that does not include women is unconstitutional, and that it will file suit.

Q. How will I get details about when and where to register and what I have to do?
A. Selective Service is sending information to more than 7,000 radio stations, 700 television stations and 2,500 daily and weekly newspapers. It is counting on them to carry the material as a public service announcement, at no cost to the government.

You will not get an individual notice telling you what to do.

Q. Where will young men register?

A. Registration will be conducted at the nation's 34,000 post offices.

Q. What will I have to do?

A. Registrants will be asked to fill out a form, giving their name, address, date of birth, telephone number and Social Security number. The forms will be sent to the Selective Service System where the information will be stored in computers.

Persons who register will receive a letter confirming that they have been registered and asking that they notify Selective Service of any change in address.

Q. Will everyone register the same day?

A. No. The program will be spread out over two weeks — one week for 19-year-olds and one week for 20-year-olds.

In addition, your registration day will depend on your birth month. Persons born in January, February and March will register on Monday; persons born in April, May and June will register on Tuesday, and so on. Friday will be a makeup day.

Q. Will I have to take a physical and be classified as to my eligibility for service?

A. No. That is not part of the program.

Q. Will I get a draft card?

A. No.

Q. What happens if I refuse to register?

A. Failure to register is a felony punishable by a maximum penalty of up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Q. What about people who fail to register during the two-week period because they didn't know about it, or couldn't get to a post office?

A. Selective Service Director Bernard Rostker said they "technically would be in violation." He said, however, that post offices have been directed to allow persons to register late after the two-week period.

Q. Is there going to be a draft?

A. President Carter says he hopes a draft will not be necessary. Before the country could return to the draft, it would have to be authorized by Congress.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., and other critics of registration charged that registration was the first step toward a return to the draft. Sens. John Stennis, D-Miss., and Sam Nunn, D-Ga., supporters of registration, said they would support renewal of the draft.

Q. If there is a draft, what about exemptions and deferments?

A. Congress in 1971 eliminated many of the broad categories for deferment or exemption, such as family or occupational status.

The student deferment was replaced by a postponement, whereby a student would be permitted to finish the semester in which he was enrolled. A senior would be allowed to complete the year.

High school students would be permitted to stay in school until graduation or until reaching the age of 20.

The primary grounds for exemption would be for hardship or for conscientious objectors, according to Selective Service. The law also provides an exemption for "regular or duly ordained ministers of religion."

For those who complain about a little oil and tar on their car, take heart, things could be worse. Don Waltol Jr., right, has to remove the muck from manhole covers for the Water and Sewer Department. Tank trucks applying the sticky oil to Midland's streets, followed by another truck spreading gravel, are common sights during summer. After the oil and gravel, heavy rollers mash down the hot tar and form a smooth surface before traffic completes the task. For easy cleanup, Waltol recommends covering the area with heavy brown craft paper and the job will be easier. Now, where to find a paper bag large enough for a car? (Staff Photos by Edward McCain)

Sons held hostage

BURNS HARBOR, Ind. (AP) — A man held his three sons hostage at gunpoint for nearly three hours Thursday before surrendering to Porter County police after he was allowed to talk to reporters. No one was hurt. Authorities say David Berndt, 31, who was armed with a shotgun, had only one demand, to be allowed to talk with reporters. No charges were immediately filed against him. Berndt said he was evicted from his trailer park home two months ago, but said he didn't leave because he had nowhere to go. Holding one of his children while state police officers assisted with the other two, Berndt cried as he told reporters he had been laid off from his job at U.S. Steel about eight months ago. "I've got no place to take the children," Berndt said. "I've got no money, there's nowhere else to go."

Midland street paving underway

By SUE FAHLGREN Staff Writer
If you've noticed more tar on your automobile, or more gravel roads on the way to work lately, you're not alone. Again this summer, Midland's Operations Department has begun its "road repaving" program. Apolinar Lara, street superintendent for the city, said more than 1.25 million square yards of road will be repaved this year. The process is called "sealcoat," and involves laying an oil base on the road at a temperature of 340 degrees and covering it with gravel. Lara explained that "in the hot weather, the oil starts to cover the gravel and eventually, the road becomes paved. The purpose," Lara said, "is to cover the cracks in the pavement to prevent water damage to the old pavement." The new layer fills in the cracks in the old road and seals the road "to prevent so many pot holes." Pot holes are formed when water seeps under the streets, breaking down the even composition of the road. Because the street crews put down 2,200 gallons of oil per square yard, an excessive amount of gravel needs to be used. After some is displaced by automobiles and pedestrians, enough gravel must be left to absorb into the oil and penetrate into the cracks in the road. The Operations Department can make these repairs only during the summer, Lara says. "In the winter, the pavement is cold and the gravel won't stick." The streets are each re-done every five years, according to Lara. So if you live on a street being graveled this summer, it will be 1985 before the goopy mixture will be on your street again.

Census Bureau launching local review program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Census Bureau is launching a program that could dwarf its initial head count in controversy: local review of what the 1980 census turned up. Over the next few weeks preliminary census results will be reported to local governments, which are to review the figures and advise the bureau if they think any errors have been made. The basic count has been plagued by problems, a situation anticipated in so massive a program. But the widespread publicity of local problems, ranging from lost forms and overlooked neighborhoods to workers not being paid, could pale beside the reaction of local officials with a serious need for the largest headcount possible. "If you think you're hearing screams now, wait until the counts go out for local review by communities," observed Bryant Robey, editor of American Demographics magazine. Because dozens of federal aid programs are based on census numbers, the count can mean millions of dollars to hard-pressed local governments, and communities will be searching for any possible undercount. The same is true of minorities and special interest groups, many of which have already criticized the bureau's efforts and called for the final numbers to be adjusted to cover people who may have been missed. The question of adjustment is still being hotly debated and no decision is likely before fall. "There is so much more at stake than each group, everyone, is trying to cover themselves. The cities, the special interest groups, they are all trying to say 'If you count less of us than we think there are, it isn't because we're not there, it's because Census did a lousy job,'" said Robey. It is just that problem that the upcoming local review program is designed to correct. It is being tried for the first time this year, and stems from complaints of undercounts in many areas in 1970. But the bureau will require some evidence that it has overlooked people, not just a feeling that the number is too low. For example, communities could support their challenges by using such things as building permits, electricity, water and sewer connections, aerial photos, field surveys and tax records. "Even if every report of a foulup is true it doesn't mean the census is a failure, it just means the census is going to have to keep scrambling," Robey said. "When you mount an operation on this scale every 10 years you have to start from scratch. It's like D-Day, some landing craft don't make it to the beach."

Wreck kills Odessa woman
KERMIT — An 18-year-old Odessa woman died early this morning near Kermit after her car was involved in a head-on collision and then burned. A Kermit man was injured. According to a spokesman for the Department of Public Safety, the accident occurred at 12:30 a.m. today 4 8/10 miles east of Kermit on Texas Highway 302 in Winkler County. Rebecca Louise Seabolt, 18, of Odessa was eastbound on Highway 302. A van driven by Steve Everest, 33, of Kermit was westbound. The van reportedly crossed the white stripe and the vehicles collided. Ms. Seabolt's car caught fire and both vehicles burned. She was pronounced dead at the scene by Peace Justice Lee Rutledge of Kermit. The body was taken to Cooper Funeral Home in Kermit. Everest was listed in stable condition in Winkler County Memorial Hospital in Kermit with deep cuts on his head and leg. The accident was investigated by DPS Troopers Dale Stehle and Sammy Prieto, both of Kermit.

Bathroom explodes

DETROIT (AP) — A bomb exploded in a public bathroom at the Hart Plaza in downtown Detroit early today, and a police bomb squad was checking a box found in the same restroom for more explosives. No one was injured in the blast and there was no fire. The explosion at about 4:50 a.m. blew a hole 6 feet in diameter in the wall of a bathroom adjoining a downstairs restaurant in the complex on the Detroit River, police said. The explosion occurred hours before the scheduled start of the Detroit Yugoslavian Ethnic Festival at Hart Plaza.

Residents report mail being stolen

A number of complaints have been received by the Midland post office about mail stolen from resident mail boxes, according to Postmaster D.E. Holster. Holster said residents have noticed a person going from mailbox to mailbox, and mail is being found opened in yards and alleys with some of the contents missing. Residents should remove their mail as shortly after delivery as possible and should not leave mail to be picked up by the carrier until shortly before he is due, as there have been several instances of mail stolen after being left on the box for the carrier, he said. Holster suggested that persons planning on being out of town should have a neighbor collect their mail, or instruct the carrier to hold their mail until they return. Strangers that have been observed looking in mailboxes should be reported to the police, including a good description of age, dress and physical appearance.

'Doc Adams' dies at 75

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Actor Milburn Stone, known to millions of television viewers as Doc Adams in the long-running Western series "Gunsmoke," has died of apparent heart failure at the age of 75. A close friend, producer A.C. Lyles, said the actor died early Thursday at Scripps Memorial Hospital. Stone, who had a coronary bypass operation in 1971, had been ill for a few days. "He was one of my very dear friends and associates and just the ultimate professional actor," said Dennis Weaver, who as the perpetually complaining deputy Chester joined Doc Adams in numerous checker games. Doc — along with Chester, James Arness's Marshal Matt Dillon, Amanda Blake's saloon keeper Kitty and Ken Curtis's Festus — became one of the most beloved figures in television as "Gunsmoke" played out week after week for 20 years. In 1968, Stone won an Emmy for best supporting actor. John Mantley, who produced "Gunsmoke" in its final years, called Stone "a marvelous mag, a close friend and a splendid actor." "What a legacy all of the people in 'Gunsmoke' will leave behind," Mantley added. "It was seen by 80 million people in this country and in 100 countries around the world. Doc Adams is a figure of love and legend." By the time the series ended in 1975, Stone once said, the character of the gruff but fatherly medic had become almost a real identity. "Except for my immediate family, Milburn Stone no longer exists," he said. "To everyone else, I'm Doc. Good old Doc Adams. Getting so I have to restrain myself from making house calls." Viewers found the distinction between actor and physician hard to make, too, and in those days before Dr. Kildare and Marcus Welby M.D., many wrote in asking him for prescriptions for their ailments.

After retiring from the railroad, he came to Big Spring to work in the Cosden Refinery. Cummings retired from Cosden in 1962. He was married to Ada F. Denler July 22, 1920, in Baird. He was a member of the Methodist Church. Survivors include his wife; two sons, Charles Ray Cummings of Big Spring and Durwood O. Cummings Jr. of Midland; three grandchildren; a step-grandson; and a great-grandson.

Pentagon may gradually increase Mideast air operations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first deployment of U.S. F-4E jet fighters for training exercises with Egyptian warplanes next month may signal a gradual and cautious increase in American military air operations in the Middle East.

This was indicated Thursday by Gen. Lew Allen Jr., Air Force chief of staff, in an interview.

His remarks came in conjunction with a Pentagon announcement that a squadron of F-4 Phantom jets will fly to Cairo for about 90 days of joint training to "give the pilots and crew members of both countries additional experience with regard to operating sophisticated equipment in the area."

The twelve planes and about 400 U.S. Air Force personnel will travel from Moody Air Force Base, Ga., and will live and work in temporary shelters and maintenance shops during the unprecedented exercises, which will include live firing on Egyptian ranges.

As Allen pictured it, the operation will be beneficial for both air forces: The Egyptians will be able to sharpen their skills in flying 35 U.S.-supplied F-4s, while "it's in our interest to learn to operate in that region."

Looking at the F-4 deployment in a broader context, Allen spoke of "a cautious U.S. effort to project force into that area in ways that do not exacerbate tensions."

He made it clear that U.S. strategists hope to expand such periodic U.S. air operations into the Middle East-Indian Ocean-Persian Gulf areas, possibly to include similar joint exercises with the air force of Saudi Arabia, which already is partially equipped with American planes and which is buying 60 F-15 jets.

Further, Allen said, the United States would like to expand its recently agreed access to Oman, which is strategically located on the approaches to the Persian Gulf, to permit some U.S. air operations around that country.

U.S. naval power in the region was built to major proportions last fall after Iran's seizure of U.S. hostages and the later military move into Afghanistan by the Soviet Union. Apparently because the U.S. fleet stayed well to sea, this caused only minor political ripples in the area.

But the presence of U.S. military aircraft, even on a periodic basis, at air fields in some Persian Gulf-Indian Ocean nations apparently would be more politically sensitive because, U.S. officials said, such a U.S. presence would appear to tie some countries closer to the United States.

Allen left no doubt that Saudi Arabian security is considered by U.S. strategists to be the key, so far as U.S. objectives in the area are concerned. Saudi Arabia is the biggest source of U.S. oil imports.

Speaking of the Persian Gulf and the neighboring Mideast region, Allen said, "What we'd like to do is obtain experience in operating in the area and, by so doing, increasing tolerance of nations in that area to our operations."

This, he said, would be done "by gradually increasing deployments," subject to approval of the countries concerned.

"From a military point of view," Allen added, "our interests are to expand our activities (in the Persian Gulf region) as the political realities will permit."

He said "the most limiting factor to our operations in the Persian Gulf area" has been the lack of bases to provide fuel, water and a variety of support for U.S. air and naval units.

Allen conspicuously avoided mentioning Israel in his scenario for increased U.S. military air operations in that part of the world. Under questioning, he conceded that there were "overwhelmingly political" restraints against joint U.S.-Israeli operations, which he said would "cause concern to some neighbors" of Israel.

Former interrogator says American soldier was expert in torture

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — An American expert in torture, whose specialty was forcing needles under his victims' fingernails, was one of the men who taught Hugo Walter Garcia Rivas his craft, the former interrogator for the Uruguayan military said.

Garcia told reporters shortly before boarding a flight to an unnamed destination in Europe Thursday that he didn't know the American's name and had no indication he was from the U.S. military. There was no immediate comment from American officials on the claim.

Garcia said he joined the Uruguayan army in 1975 and a year later was assigned to the Counter-Information Company where he learned "interrogation methods" from the American and others. "Interrogation means torture. I tortured people when I was in the army in Uruguay," he said.

Garcia said he and other trainees practiced on live prisoners, and learned to use electric shocks and the "submarine," a technique he called "very effective." He said applying the "submarine" means "a hood is put on the prisoner, whose head is held under water."

Garcia said there were 90 soldiers in his company, and that the team was headquartered in the same building as the army command in Montevideo, the Uruguayan capital. He said the company was under the command of Department II of the Chiefs of Staff.

Garcia, 23, a private, said he helped interrogate prisoners for three years, then became a photographer for the counter-espionage team. He said he got a discharge from the army Dec. 31 by claiming he had family problems, but the real reason was "it was something very awful to a lot of people."

Garcia said after getting his discharge he was warned to flee Uruguay because of what he knew. After arriving in Brazil, the International Secretariat of Jurists for Amnesty in Uruguay and the Association of Latin American Lawyers for the Defense of Human Rights arranged his passage to Europe. He was accompanied on the flight by his wife and 15-month-old son.

Garcia said the last time he tortured someone was in 1978 and that he could remember the name of only one victim: Humberto Pascarella. His voice broke and he covered his face with his hands when he said, "I took part in his interrogation in 1977" and that Pascarella died a few days later.

Garcia said four majors and five captains are still in his former company torturing political opponents of the Uruguayan regime. He said his feelings of revulsion were shared by other enlisted men who were in the company, but that his denunciation of their activities will make it harder for them to leave.

Garcia said Uruguay, a country of 3 million which borders Brazil, has unleashed a ferocious attack against the left-wing opposition which is battling the military-dominated government. He said torture is still going on unabated in Uruguay and that it was impossible to estimate the number of victims.

"There are so many security organizations and all of them use torture, I can't tell," he said.

It was a decade ago that Uruguay's Tupamaro guerrillas kidnapped and killed Dan A. Mitrone, 50, a police expert working for the U.S. Agency for International Development. The guerrillas said the American was training Uruguayan secret police.

Rival political factions said fighting in Kabul

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Rival political factions in Afghanistan's Marxist leadership are reported "fighting like two crazy dogs," as Soviet and Afghan army units tighten security around Kabul, a city awash with rumors of an impending coup and possible new attacks by Moslem guerrillas, according to reports reaching here.

An Afghan scholar who arrived here Thursday reported the power struggle in the Afghan capital between the government's rival Parcham and Khalq factions.

He said five Parchamites, supporters of President Babrak Kar-mal, and four Soviet citizens have been killed in recent days at the Mikrorayon apartment complex used by Soviet advisers in Kabul. One of the Russians was hacked to pieces, said the scholar who asked not to be identified.

Another source said 23 Parchamites have been assassinated in their homes, on roads and near their offices.

The usually reliable informant said the Parcham faction also is a major target of the Sama rebels out to avenge the death of their leader, guerrilla chieftain Abdul Majid Kalakani. Kabul Radio reported last week that Kalakani, captured early in the year, had been executed after being convicted of terrorism by a revolutionary court.

Several sources said rumors of coming leadership changes in Kabul or a possible new coup have intensified in recent days.

Junior Scouts head down the highway on a bicycle excursion.

Good times keep on rolling at camp

Photos and Text
By Bruce Partain

Dance partners Boni Allen, left, and Amy Robbins kick up some new moves.

The Brownies, Girl Scouts and a few "tag-along" brothers and sisters were about done with their tour of the small aircraft at Air Park when a small voice piped up from the back.

"How long does it take for one of these little ones to grow up to be a big one?" she asked.

A good question, and not out of line, since the group is part of the annual one-week Girl Scout Day Camp, a fun-and-learning experience which ends today.

"We have about 150 girls, 25 tag-alongs and boys and a volunteer staff of 40 adults," said camp director Gerjann Green.

"One reason we get so many volunteers is they are allowed to bring their own kids, boys or girls, as tag-alongs to camp," said Carol Ann Hunt, the other director.

"We're doing a lot this summer," said Green. "There's dramatics, knife safety, gravel mosaics, lashings, bird feeder construction, quilting, dance, the hike to Air Park, swimming for some and outdoor cooking skills. One unit spends part of every day on bicycle tours and older Cadets had an aerobic workout. This is the third year the scouts held day camp at their new center on West Bengar Avenue, but the camp has been a tradition for at least 20 years in Midland, with Hogan Park, Camp Winnie southeast of town and the Barney Grafa ranch northwest of town hosting the campers in times past.

"This is sure nicer here, though," said Ava Jane Warren, executive director of the Midland facility. "For one thing, we've got enough bathrooms."

Although the week-long camp breaks up this afternoon, the Girl Scouts are far from through for the summer.

"We start our summer program June 17," said Warren. "Juniors will have activities from 9 a.m. to 12 noon each Tuesday, Brownies who just finished first, second and third grades will meet Wednesday at the same time and incoming first graders meet Thursdays from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m."

Summer session activities are similar to day camp, "but there are more indoor things planned," said Warren.

"The fee is a dollar a day or five dollars for the entire six-week session," she said.

Girls Scouts and non-scouts are invited; for more information call 684-6222.

"Let's eat!" invite hot doggers Shelly Partain, Jennie Rogers, Michelle Patton and Brandi Grigsby.

Sad-looking, silent clown brings laughter to children

STRUTHERS, Ohio (AP) — Alfred Suppan is a real clown.

Being funny, he said, is hard work. He has been, off-and-on for 28 of his 70 years, a retiree who occasionally dons ridiculous makeup, a "Not Neat But Sweet" T-shirt, baggy trousers, and an "ALL I WANT IS LOVE" pin for Shrine parades, benefits or a chance to visit a children's hospital.

That's when the tramp, otherwise known as Soupy Suppan, really shines.

Soupy never speaks. The black lines through white makeup that exaggerates his mouth, elongated eyebrows and baggy clothes speak for him.

Suppan, retired from a steel mill welding job, began clowning when the Al Koran Gorto was organized in nearby Youngstown. For two years he was a white-faced clown struggling for laughs until he met a professional who told him he would be better as a sad, silent tramp. He changed his costume, makeup style and quit talking, and says he has found the image that fits his personality.

Suppan comes from a family of European circus performers. His mother is a prima ballerina, his father a circus comedian in Yugoslavia.

One cousin is a tightrope walker and two others have an aerial act on wheels.

His bag of tricks includes a putty nose, endless effort at expression, a rubber hot dog and a handful of fake diamond rings. Occasionally he's a flirt, leaning across a child to encourage a woman to kiss his painted cheek. If she tries, he quickly jerks his head away.

But mostly he looks sad for the kids. When they ask him why he's so sad, Soupy throws up his arms, shrugs his shoulders and shakes his head to convey an "I don't know."

The most important aspect of clowning, he said, is knowing how to approach children.

He said some clowns approach them too fast and scare them. If a child seems afraid of Soupy, he moves away or goes to another child. If the frightened youngster indicates his curiosity is piqued, Soupy may come back, but if not he leaves him alone.

One way or another, he'll extract a laugh from most youngsters. Suppan, member of the Clowns of American and Circus Fans, has won a number of awards for his act at various national Shrine meetings.

Joan Nixon wins juvenile book award

Joan Lowery Nixon of Houston, formerly of Midland, has received the Mystery Writers of America's annual Edgar award for the year's best juvenile mystery.

Her book, "The Kidnapping of Christina Lattimore," a novel for young adults, is set in Houston.

Like the Oscars, Emmys and Tonys, Edgars are awarded for various categories. All must be in the mystery field. At times, special awards are given. This year, awards were made to Chester Gould for "Dick Tracy" and to Harriett Adams for her 50 years of Nancy Drew novels.

Ms. Nixon's book, "The Mysterious Red Tape Gang," won an Edgar scroll in 1975, and has been purchased by NBC for television. The newest title in her Holiday-Mystery series for younger readers is "The Thanksgiving Day Mystery." Another young adult mystery, "The Seance," will be out in 1981.

Two of her daughters inspired her first book. The result was "The Mystery of Hurricane Castle," published in 1964.

Ms. Nixon has published 38 books, all for children, except two, "The Grandmothers' Book" and "Writing Mysteries for Young People." Three books have been co-authored with her geologist husband, Hershell.

For many years, her column about the humorous aspects of the life of a writer-mother with four individuals children appeared in the Houston Post.

Among her honors are the Texas Institute of Letters Award for best children's book of 1974 for "The Alligator Under the Bed," a certificate from the National Science Teachers Association and the Children's Book Council for "Volcanoes," plus a plaque honoring her contribution to children's literature from the Bishop Byrne Chapter of Catholic Librarians.

Born and raised in California, Ms. Nixon received her bachelor of science degree in journalism from the University of Southern California, and has an elementary education certificate from California State College.

Committee hearings reveal elderly abused

WASHINGTON (AP) — "She told me I was senile and paranoid and my brain was all shriveled up."

The 79-year-old Massachusetts grandmother, identified only as "Mrs. X," told a House committee Wednesday that her 44-year-old daughter also abused her in other ways.

"Kicking me, pushing me, grappling with me, telling me to get out, at one time throwing a drawer down the stairs at me, calling me names, telling me I belonged in a nursing home and why didn't I go to one."

It was testimony like that that prompted two influential members of the House Select Committee on Aging to vow to gain passage of legislation that would help protect older Americans from abuse and exploitation by relatives and guardians.

William Jones, 86, of Washington, D.C., told how his son exhausted his bank account and otherwise mistreated him. "I had only one meal a day, and that was greens, turkey wings or noodles with maggots," he said.

Jones and Mrs. X eventually went to adult protective service workers to seek help. Mrs. X obtained a court order to keep her daughter from abusing her.

Delores Roberts, an adult protective service worker who accompanied Jones to the hearing said the man's son had "threatened to put embalming fluid in his food" if he sought help.

Mrs. Roberts told the committee "you would not believe the horror" she has seen in visiting homes to help the elderly.

"I saw an 84-year-old woman who was sexually abused by her son-in-law for six years... There was an old man lying on a bed that had springs through the mattress. The bed was so infested with roaches that it looked like a beehive."

The committee chairman, Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., estimated at the hearing that up to 2.5 million cases of maltreatment of the old occur each year.

However, he said many abuses aren't reported to police because of fear, embarrassment or loyalty to the people — often their own children — who committed the violence.

Pepper, 79, said abuses inflicted on the elderly include beating, rape, withholding medication or food, verbal assaults, robbery and forcing elders out of their homes or tricking them into nursing homes against their will.

Rep. Mary Rose Oaker, D-Ohio, said it is a "most serious national problem" that needs a legislative solution.

She introduced a bill with Pepper that would provide protective services and legal recourse for the abused elderly. It would offer protection similar to that now furnished to children under 18 who suffer abuse.

The new legislation, called the "Adult Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act," would create a National Center on Adult Abuse to fight abuse, neglect and exploitation of the elderly, women and the mentally and physically handicapped.

It would also set in motion federal aid for states to operate adult abuse prevention programs.

Vermont is environmentalist's dream

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — Called a developer's paradise a decade ago, Vermont now is considered an environmentalist's dream.

The law that made the difference turned 10 years old this month, and officials heaved a sigh of satisfaction that Vermont had survived the development boom.

"It has preserved the character of Vermont," says former Gov. Deane Davis, who risked his political reputation to get the law, known as Act 250, passed in 1970.

The law gave Vermont the mechanism to review and control development, and it is considered by many planners to be the toughest in the nation.

Supporters say it closed the door to quick-profit developers and converted even indifferent Vermonters into strong environmentalists.

"It eliminated the fly-by-nights who were coming in with 'big sale' development schemes," says Elbert Moulton, Vermont's commissioner of economic development.

"The growth that occurred has been of a higher quality." Opponents still grumble that Act 250 drives up the cost of development, but the opposition no longer is as strident as it was 10 years ago.

The act was a child of the 1960s, born of a fear that the lifestyle Vermonters cherished was being threatened by an increasing number of people who wanted a part of what the state offered. People flocked to Vermont during the 1960s as part of what Davis calls the decade's "escape mentality."

"They were looking for escape from the big cities and found it in what we offered in Vermont," he says, adding that owning a second home in Vermont became "a status symbol that people could brag about."

The push for environmental controls began in 1969 when International Paper Co. proposed to build 500 homes in Stratton. Davis talked the company out of the plan and decided the state needed more than just words as a weapon.

While Act 250 has made it tougher on developers by imposing regulations governing everything from air pollution to preserving natural beauty, state officials say it has not discouraged homeowners or industries looking to re-settle in the state.

Ghotbzadeh says 'The American hostages can go to hell!'

By The Associated Press

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolution plunged deeper into chaos today after his guardsmen opened fire on tens of thousands of leftists in one of the bloodiest clashes since the shah was ousted 17 months ago. Meanwhile, Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said, "The American hostages can go to hell!"

Moslem militants blasted the brawling crowd with tear gas and automatic weapons when it neared the iron gates of the occupied U.S. Embassy in Tehran, where at least some of the American hostages are still believed held.

THE OFFICIAL PARS news agency said "shots fired in the air" during Thursday's fighting left two dead and 10 injured. Leftists claimed about 300 persons were hurt and at least one killed during the three-hour battle between Khomeini loyalists and members of the People's Mujahedeen, or Warriors, Iran's largest leftist opposition group. Witnesses said the fighting began when Khomeini supporters, armed with sticks and stones, tried to force their way into a rally of some 100,000 Mujahedeen at Tehran's Amjadiyeh stadium, down the street from the occupied embassy.

Fighting between the two groups quickly spread into the street between the stadium and the embassy. Witnesses said Khomeini's revolutionary guardsmen opened fire in an attempt to disperse the rampaging mobs.

AS THE CROWD swirled near the embassy, Moslem militants within the compound put up sandbag barricades at the gates and others opened fire on the demonstrators from rooftops inside the complex.

Witnesses said most of the injured were hit by gunfire, apparently from the guardsmen and the militants.

Although the militants claim to have dispersed most of their 53 hostages to locations outside Tehran to prevent another U.S. rescue effort, they continue to hold the sprawling embassy compound and U.S. officials believe at least some of the Americans are still inside. The hostages today began their 223rd day in captivity.

THE MUJAHEDDEEN CALLED the rally to protest alleged intimidation of opposition groups by the Khomeini regime and the loss of human rights in Iran since the revolution that deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in January 1979. The leftists were a key element in the anti-shah revolution, but have since run afoul of Khomeini's Islamic regime.

Only last Tuesday, Khomeini went on nationwide radio and television to decry internal differences which he said were creating "chaos" in Iran and threatening his revolutionary regime.

Thursday's fighting was the worst clash between Khomeini's forces and the leftists since April 19, when leftists began a week-long revolt on Iranian college campuses to protest an attempt by Moslem militants to purge them from the embattled nation's universities. More than a score were reported killed in that week of fighting.

THE LATEST CLASH came as the government announced it had smashed a military plot to topple Khomeini and return the shah to power. Tehran Radio said the alleged plotters were from an army unit based in Piranshahr, a town near the tense border with Iraq. The radio said at least six army officers and enlisted men had been arrested and would be tried next week.

Meanwhile, Ghotbzadeh told an Austrian TV team that interviewed him in Oslo, Norway, that the deadlock over the U.S. captives "has taught me not to make statements about the freeing of the hostages." He was visibly irritated over the media's interest in the fate of the captives, and got so furious during the interview that he said, "To hell with the American hostages!"

He complained the hostage issue overshadowed everything in the media's eyes, including the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. "Afghanistan is bleeding, and all people think of is some American hostages," Ghotbzadeh said.

GHOTBZADEH ALSO HELD a secret meeting with Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua in Osevision audience earlier Thursday his office was preparing recommendations for the Iranian Parliament on how to handle the hostage crisis. Khomeini has empowered the Parliament to decide the fate of the hostages, but the legislature is not expected to begin its debate on the issue before July.

Ghotbzadeh was in Oslo to attend a conference of the Socialist International. He denied the socialist group was trying to mediate the release of the hostages, but Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky, a key member of the organization, said a tentative negotiating plan has been formulated.

KREISKY, WHO MET privately Thursday with Ghotbzadeh, told a Swedish news agency, "There is a plan for how we will act in the further discussions." He did not elaborate, and there was no immediate comment from Tehran or Washington.

Kreisky and two other socialist leaders visited Tehran last month but were refused permission to see the American captives.

In other developments:

U.S. legal experts said it was doubtful the Carter administration could successfully prosecute former Attorney General Ramsey Clark and the nine other Americans who visited Iran last week in defiance of Carter's travel ban. The scholars questioned the law invoked by Carter as the basis for his travel ban and some said Carter's statements about the case would make it difficult for Clark to get a fair trial.

Europeans boost Palestinian cause

VENICE, Italy (AP) — Western Europe's leaders are expected to defy President Carter and infuriate the Israelis today by urging a Mideast negotiating role for the Palestine Liberation Organization and endorsing official Common Market contact with guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat.

The declaration by the nine European Community heads of government will sum up their two-day conference on the Venetian island of San Giorgio Maggiore, heavily protected by security forces because of a threat by the Red Brigades, Italy's most feared terrorist gang, to disrupt the meeting.

European officials took pains to stress that their declaration, widely seen as the European Economic Community's de facto recognition of the PLO, is not intended to undermine the U.S.-Sponsored Camp David process.

But it appeared clear that America's European allies are determined to pursue their own avenue of mediating the Mideast peace negotiations. The document, among other things, would also propose the dispatch of a Common Market diplomatic mission to the Middle East for consultations with all interested parties.

The Western leaders sought to balance their initiative by reaffirming Israel's right to exist within secure and recognized boundaries and declaring that other Palestinian groups, including those under Israeli jurisdiction, are also interested parties to peace negotiations, conference officials said.

"The Palestinians are clearly an important part of any peace agreement and the PLO clearly represents some Palestinians," said a British official who asked not to be identified. "Our purpose is to carry forward the momentum of peace negotiations in the Middle East during a period when there is some danger that would otherwise be a hiatus," a reference to the U.S. presidential election.

Officials in Washington have disagreed that there would be a "total vacuum" during this period. "We are going to press ahead with the autonomy talks," one official said. But many European officials have expressed apprehension that the U.S.-led talks — aimed at granting the Palestinians some form of self-rule — would run out of steam because of the U.S. election.

The European Community includes Britain, France, Italy and West Germany — the four countries which will join the United States, Canada and Japan here next week for the annual economic summit of the seven industrialized nations.

The U.S. government has repeatedly urged its European allies not to issue too strong a pro-Palestinian statement, fearing it might prompt Israel — which refuses to deal with the PLO — to adopt a more intransigent attitude in the Camp David talks.

But the European declaration, as explained by diplomatic sources, clearly went further than any previous joint stand by the Common Market members.

Ohira mourning gets cut short for campaigning

TOKYO (AP) — Putting aside their rivalries, leaders of Japan's ruling Liberal Democratic Party donned black armbands and hit the campaign trail today, hoping to cash in on public sympathy over the sudden death of Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira.

Former Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda, Ohira's sharpest critic within the party, and Yasuhiro Nakasone, one of the chief candidates to succeed the late prime minister, said they would forget their differences and try to repay Ohira's contributions to the party with a victory in the June 22 parliamentary elections.

Many Liberal and opposition party leaders gathered in Tokyo today to pay their condolences to the Ohira family, and then returned to the campaign trail. Fukuda flew to Osaka, former Prime Minister Takeo Miki left by train for Fukushima in northern Japan and Party Secretary General Yoshio Sakurachi, an Ohira ally, went to the western island of Shikoku.

Opposition parties, anticipating their best chance in years of defeating the splintered Liberal Party and forming a coalition government, cautioned Japanese voters not to let sympathy for Ohira sway them into supporting the Liberal Democrats, who have dominated Japanese politics since the end of World War II.

The elections, expected to be one of the closest in the nation's history, were ordered by Ohira after he suffered a stunning defeat in a no-confidence vote in the Japanese Parliament, or Diet, on May 16.

The 70-year-old Ohira, prime minister since December of 1978, died of a heart attack in a Tokyo hospital early Thursday, 12 days after he was hospitalized for exhaustion and a mild heart condition.

Under Japanese law, Chief Cabinet Secretary Masayoshi Ito became acting prime minister after Ohira's death and will serve as caretaker until the new Parliament chooses a successor.

Pryor continues to show improvement

SHERMAN OAKS, Calif. (AP) — If critically burned comedian Richard Pryor continues his steady improvement, surgery to remove scorched, dead skin may begin Tuesday, with skin grafting starting three or four days later, doctors say.

Pryor remained in critical but stable condition Thursday, and was feeling more pain from the burns he suffered Monday in a freak fire at his home.

"It is normal for a burn patient to go back and forth between (degrees of) pain," Gary Swaye, spokesman for the burn center at Sherman Oaks Community Hospital, said at a news conference Thursday.

Pryor's 13-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, and the comedian's second ex-wife, Maxine, attended the conference.

Elizabeth Pryor, giving "yes" and "no" answers, said she had not seen her father, but that doctors have read him notes she wrote.

A few visitors have been allowed to visit Pryor, and doctors now plan to limit guests to actor Jim Brown, a close friend whom Pryor insists on seeing daily, Swaye said.

Brown said the comedian was in good spirits Thursday despite his pain.

"I don't talk to him too much when I'm with him because it tires him," Brown said. "I just walk beside him to help him — but he doesn't need it that much — he basically walks me."

Actor Dan Haggerty, the star of the now-defunct television series "Grizzly Adams," who once suffered burns, also visited Pryor.

"I saw him the first night in here," Haggerty said. "He was kind of unbalanced as to where he had been and he looked up at me and said, 'Grizzly Adams?' And I said, 'Yeah, Grizzly Adams,' and that was it."

The hospital, meanwhile, has been besieged with letters, telegrams and flowers for Pryor, which are sent home with relatives, Swaye said. Flowers are not allowed in the burn unit.

The hospital declined further comment on police allegations that Pryor was burned when ether exploded as it was being used to make a cocaine derivative known as "free base."

Police said Pryor told burn specialist Dr. Jack Grossman the ether had exploded and set his clothes on fire at his Northridge home.

But on Wednesday the doctors and Pryor's lawyer said they had never heard Pryor say that. They did not attend Thursday's news conference.

"It's more important to deal with the burn patients. That's their (the doctors') primary goal," hospital spokeswoman Nona Egan said.

Pryor's treatment Thursday included two whirlpool baths and two stints in the hyperbaric chamber, a tank containing a pressurized, oxygen-enriched atmosphere that speeds healing, Ms. Egan said.

Pryor was being fed intravenously and also was eating some soft food, she said.

Baptists taking firm anti-abortion stance

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Emphasizing its sharp swing to deep conservatism, the nation's largest Protestant body has issued a firm condemnation of abortion and demanded that its teachers believe in the infallibility of the Bible.

The positions, displaying a reaffirmation of tradition and the influence of conservative leadership elected for two consecutive years, were taken Thursday as the 13,800 messengers of the Southern Baptist Convention closed their annual meeting.

The delegates also urged voluntary prayers in public schools, denounced homosexual practice, disapproved the proposed Equal Rights Amendment, urged the election of public officials with Bible-based moral principles and re-affirmed their belief in "a literal biblical creation and a literal heaven and hell."

The anti-abortion stance, one of the strongest ever taken by a major American Protestant body, put the convention firmly behind the drive to overturn the 1973 Supreme Court decision permitting abortion.

Abortions should be prohibited by constitutional amendment or legislation "except to save the life of the mother," the delegates agreed.

"All medical evidence indicates that abortion ends the life of a developing human being," the convention said, opposing the use of public funds for "selfish, non-therapeutic abortion."

The call for an anti-abortion constitutional amendment or law represented a stiffening of an earlier, more qualified position of the 13.4 million-member denomination.

"It is intolerable that the lives of 1.5 million babies are being taken every year through abortion," said the Rev. Larry Lewis of St. Louis, member of a committee that pushed through the new Southern Baptist stand.

It was opposed in floor debate by a Baltimore physician, William D. Hillis, and Linda Maguire, wife of a Columbus, Ga., minister, who protested it did not allow abortion in cases of incest or rape.

The Rev. Joseph O'Donnell of Newnan, Ga., an official Roman Catholic representative to Southern Baptists, said the convention action means a "significant strengthening of the anti-abortion movement. It will also help dispel an erroneous view that only Catholics oppose abortion."

Before adjourning, the convention also told trustees of seminaries and other denominational institutions to employ only those who consider the Bible to be without error.

The Rev. Herschel H. Hobbs of Oklahoma City, a former convention president, opposed the measure, saying it smacked of a "creed which Southern Baptists never had." The Rev. William Brown of Wake Forest, N.C., said it indicated a "spirit of creeping creedalism."

But insistence on a Biblical infallibility has been a watchword of the election victories of the convention's outgoing president, the Rev. Adrian Rogers of Memphis, Tenn., and the new president, the Rev. Bailey E. Smith of Del City, Okla.

Conviction of Clark doubtful, say scholars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legal scholars says it's doubtful the Carter administration could successfully prosecute Ramsey Clark and nine other Americans for going to Iran.

But the academicians are divided about the extent to which the Constitution guarantees Americans the right to travel and speak in foreign countries without government interference.

Some of the scholars say President Carter's statements about the case would make it difficult for Clark to get a fair trial.

On April 17, Carter invoked the International Emergency Economic Powers Act of 1977 and banned financial transactions with Iran, where 53 Americans have been held hostage since last November.

Clark, a former U.S. attorney general, and his companions attended a "Crimes of America" conference in Tehran. Clark is expected to return to the United States Saturday.

"In an impromptu news conference, Carter said Tuesday that his legal advisors had told him his order 'was legal and that Clark and the others violated the order and therefore violated the U.S. law.' He said his 'inclination' was to order prosecution of Clark.

But law professors interviewed by telephone questioned whether the 1977 law provides a basis for prosecution.

For one thing, they said, Congress appears to have intended the law to cover things such as sales of computers and grain, not people paying for their hotel rooms and meals.

They also cited a 1967 Supreme Court ruling. In 1965, the court had ruled that restrictions on travel to Cuba were within the powers of the president and didn't violate a constitutional right to travel.

In 1967, however, the court ruled unanimously that penalties could not be imposed for violating the restrictions, because Congress had not authorized any.

The Emergency Economic Powers Act provides imprisonment for up to 10 years and fines of up to $50,000 for violators. But the legal authorities questioned whether the law could be applied to Clark.

"I think it is very doubtful that the courts would uphold the application of the act to a situation where individuals traveled for the purpose of communication and discussion rather than economic interchange," said Prof. Thomas Emerson of Yale Law School.

Norman Dorsen, a law professor at New York University who is president of the American Civil Liberties Union, said it would take a "tortured or unrealistic interpretation" of the 1977 law to cover the Clark case.

Policewoman back on force

DETROIT (AP) — A Detroit policewoman dismissed on the grounds of cowardice has been returned to the force by a board that determined there was no proof she had been afraid, officials said.

By a 5-0 vote, the Detroit Board of Police Commissioners on Thursday decided to reinstate Officer Katherine Perkins with back pay and benefits, including her three years' seniority.

Ms. Perkins was dismissed after an incident last summer in which she and another female officer, Glenda Rudolph, allegedly failed to aid Sgt. Paul Janness, who was being attacked by a naked man.

Both women denied the allegation but were fired in March. A trial board upheld the firings in May.

Ms. Rudolph appealed to an independent arbitrator, who was to hear her case Wednesday, said city attorney Geoffrey Taft.

After Thursday's decision, Commissioner Eugene Driker said the cowardice charge defined by the department was not "a model of clarity." An officer charged with cowardice must be proven to actually have been fearful, he said.

Condemned killer back in his death watch cell

ATLANTA (AP) — Condemned murderer Jack Howard Potts is back in his death watch cell near the Georgia State Prison death chamber today, waiting word from two judges who must set the date for him to die.

Prison officials said Thursday that Potts, 35, was moved back to his fifth-floor cell after U.S. District Judge William C. O'Kelley vacated a stay of execution Tuesday.

Potts was scheduled to die June 5 at 10:30 a.m., but the execution was halted 13 hours earlier when Potts filed an appeal.

On Tuesday, however, Potts appeared before O'Kelley in Atlanta, and saying he wanted to drop the appeal and accept his death sentence.

Judge James L. Bullard of Cobb County said Wednesday he and Forsyth County Judge Marion Pope, who must set an execution date, will discuss it as soon as they receive formal notice of O'Kelley's order.

Potts was sentenced to die for the 1975 kidnapping and murder of Michael Priest, 24, of Roswell. If the sentence is carried out, he will become the first person executed in Georgia since 1964 and the fourth in the nation since 1977.

Last fall, Potts halted his appeals, announced a religious conversion and said he was ready to accept the sentence.

Cracks in the ground around the Kermit crater continue to grow despite the pleadings of a hastily erected sign on the southwestern side of the slowly-widening chasm. In other places around the crater,

24-inch cracks have been reported. Most ground cracks are located in the southwestern side of the crater. (Staff Photo by David Campbell)

Kermit sinkhole continues to 'swallow up' more land

KERMIT (AP) — The giant sinkhole between Kermit and Wink devoured more land Thursday, swallowing portions of its east wall and the sagging southeast corner.

The seemingly insatiable hole, measuring about 380 by 400 yards, chewed up 90 square feet of the east wall and engulfed a piece of land that had sunk 15 feet over two days before finally falling in, Winkler County sheriff's deputy Jan Moore said.

The hole first appeared June 3 as a three-foot wide crack in the earth. Atlantic Richfield Co., which owns the land the hole is consuming, plans to build a fence around the crater as a safety measure whenever the sinkhole stabilizes, said Arco spokesman Bob Stephens. But, he said, Arco has no idea when that might be. Widening cracks — some measuring two feet across — continue to spread in the area. The cause of the sinking hole has not been determined.

Giarratano wins stay of execution

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Joseph Giarratano's scheduled execution today in Virginia's electric chair has been delayed by two state Supreme Court justices.

Justices Richard E. Poff and A. Christian Compton on Thursday granted a stay for 90 days or until the convicted rapist-murderer's case can be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

"It will probably be a matter of several months before the court responds" to Giarratano's appeal, said Charlottesville lawyer Richard Bonnie, who will handle the case.

The stay came 37 hours before Giarratano, 22, was scheduled to die for the February 1979 rape and beating death of Michelle Kline, 15, in her Norfolk home. He also was convicted of murder in the slaying of the girl's mother, Barbara Kline, 44.

Giarratano was on death row at the State Penitentiary here as the stay was announced.

Three bond forfeiture cases dismissed

Judge Perry D. Pickett of the 142nd State District Court in Midland has dismissed three bond forfeiture cases against the defendants and their bail bondsmen.

A fourth bond forfeiture, however, was lodged by 238th State District Court Judge Vann Culp against defendant Jimmie Carroll Savage, who failed to appear for arraignment, and his attorney-bondsman, Bobby Bearden.

Cases dismissed were against: —Johnny Royce Franks, defendant, and Odell Walker, bail bondsman who guaranteed Franks appearance in court via a $5,000 bond. Franks, who was indicted for and later convicted of burglary, had turned himself over to the sheriff on the day he was to appear in court.

—Joe Luis Granado, defendant, and Edward T. Garza, bail bondsman-attorney who had assured Granado's court appearance via a $5,000 bond to answer an indictment for illegal possession of amphetamines, a narcotic stimulant. The defendant was jailed in Odessa at the time he was to appear in court in Midland.

—Ronnie Van Meter, defendant, and Obert Morgan, bondsman, who guaranteed Van Meter's court appearance under a $7,500 bond. The case was dismissed, for the defendant failed to receive proper notice of his arraignment. Furthermore, the theft charges against him were dismissed.

In the other case, Judge Culp ordered that Savage, who has been indicted for unlawfully carrying a weapon on a premises licensed for the sale of alcoholic beverages, and Bearden forfeit the amount of the bond, $4,000, unless Bearden can show "good cause" why his client did not appear in court at the appointed hour.

Namibian guerrillas kill 16 soldiers

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Black nationalist guerrillas in Namibia have killed 16 South African soldiers, the South African defense headquarters said today. This was believed the largest single casualty toll in 14 years of fighting.

Circumstances of the deaths were not given in a communique issued by defense headquarters but it was rumored the troops may have died in a raid into neighboring Angola, haven for the guerrillas fighting in Namibia.

Meanwhile, Radio Luanda, monitored here, said Angolan anti-aircraft artillery shot down three South African Mirage fighter-bombers last Saturday during a South African raid on a Namibian refugee camp in southern Angola.

South African military spokesman said there would be no comment on the report of the Mirages, describing it as "obviously nothing but propaganda."

A guerrilla war has been simmering since 1966 between black nationalist guerrillas and South African forces in Namibia, also called South-West Africa.

South African military officials are reluctant to disclose information about the fighting, including casualty figures. "Our policy is not to give a head count on either side but to fight terrorism," a military spokesman said.

But military authorities have acknowledged that the casualty rate among South African soldiers has doubled this year, compared with the same period last year.

Train derails

DELHI, La. (AP) — Authorities began evacuating nearly half of this northeast Louisiana community today as a precaution so workers could place back on the railroad tracks a derailed tanker containing more than 16,000 gallons of liquid chlorine.

THE NEWSPAPER BIBLE

He'll never let you down

We are saved by trusting. And trusting means looking forward to getting something we don't yet have...

But if we must keep trusting God for something that hasn't happened yet, it teaches us to wait patiently and confidently.

And in the same way—by our faith—the Holy Spirit helps us with our daily problems and in our praying.

And the Father who knows all hearts knows, of course, what the Spirit is saying as He pleads for us in harmony with God's own will.

And we know that all that happens to us is working for our good if we love God and are fitting into His plans.

For from the very beginning God decided that those who came to Him—and all along He knew who would—should become like His Son, so that His Son would be the First, with many brothers.

And having chosen us, He called us to come to Him, and when we came, He declared us "not guilty," filled us with Christ's goodness, gave us right standing with Himself, and promised us His glory.

What can we ever say to such wonderful things as these? If God is on our side, who can ever be against us?

Since He did not spare even His own Son for us but gave Him up for us all, won't He also surely give us everything else?

Wave of Monroe nostalgia in Italy

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Italians are experiencing a wave of nostalgia for actress Marilyn Monroe 18 years after her death.

It has produced a "Friends of Marilyn" fan club, an opera based on her life and a flood of posters, T-shirts and cushions with the portrait of the blonde movie star.

The 300-member, Milan-based fan club recently campaigned successfully against the publication of pornographic pictures purportedly of the actress at the beginning of her movie career.

The club sued the Italian edition of Playboy and got a seizure order against the magazine nationwide by a judge in Tuscany.

Following up its success, the club filed a request to authorities in the United States to reopen investigations and give more details about Marilyn's death.

The actress committed suicide in her home on the outskirts of Los Angeles in 1962.

"Industry is exploiting the nostalgia for Marilyn," said Renzo Ballini, a spokesman for the club.

Teen-agers have put up Marilyn posters in their bedrooms and pasted her portrait on their motorbikes. Boutiques catering to young people are decorated with Marilyn's life-size wooden figures and giant posters.

Local film libraries are showing Marilyn's movies and a young Italian artist wrote a Marilyn Monroe opera, which was performed by the Rome opera company to mixed reviews.

The Milan club has organized an exhibition of Marilyn posters, pictures and documents.

"It is amazing that the myth of a great and unlucky actress is booming among young people who have hardly seen her movies but who have idealized her just the same," Ballini said.

Costa Rican realizes astronaut dream

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Franklin Chang left home with a dream, to become an astronaut.

When the 18-year-old high school boy got off a plane from Costa Rica 12 years ago, he had $50 in his pocket and spoke only Spanish. But he had his dream.

Today, at age 30, Dr. Franklin Chang is a nuclear physicist and an American citizen. On July 7, he starts training to fly on the space shuttle, one of 19 men and women chosen in the latest group of astronauts.

Chang, grandson of a Chinese emigrant, son of a Costa Rican gas station owner, says the secret of his success is simple. He owes it, he says, to the traditional American ideals: ambition and tenacity and hard work, things his folks told him make people prosper and get ahead in the United States.

"You have a dream, and if you really work at it, you can make it happen," he said.

Ever since he was a little boy, Chang wanted to be a spaceman. As best he can remember, the dream began in 1957, the day the Soviets launched Sputnik 1 and the space age began.

"When I was 7 years old, my mother told me one day that the Russians had put up an artificial satellite around the Earth, and if I went out in the yard in the evening and climbed up a tree, I could see it go by," he recalled.

"My high school classmates were into it as well," he said. "We had little teams of space cadets who were going to go into space. Slowly, my friends began to get interested in other things, and by the time I graduated from high school, I was the only one who still wanted to be an astronaut."

So he went seeking his dream. His father bought him a plane ticket to Hartford, Conn., where he lived with distant relatives and repeated his senior year in high school.

Teacher Allan Winter took it upon himself to teach Chang English. He started the teen-ager on Bertrand Russell's "History of Western Civilization."

"That was my first book in English," he said. "It took me about a year, but after I read it, I had pretty much learned English."

He finished at the top of his class, got a scholarship to the University of Connecticut and earned an engineering degree. Then he went to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he spent four years earning a doctorate in nuclear physics.

By then an expert in nuclear fusion, he got a job at the Draper Laboratory, a private research organization in Cambridge, designing controls for atomic power plants.

Last September, he took the step for which everything else had been preparation. He applied to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for the job of astronaut. He got it.

After a year of training, Chang will be a flight specialist, the scientist who conducts experiments, takes charge of the food supply and builds structures outside the spaceship.

The first experimental shuttle flight is scheduled for next March, and NASA hopes the crafts will be making 40 or 50 flights a year by late in the decade.

Chang seems delighted, but not really surprised, that he got his wish. His grandfather once lived in Boston, and he prepared him for America.

War will make Europe 'radioactive desert'

By HARALD MOLLERSTROM
Associated Press Writer

STOCKHOLM (AP) — The world is closer to a nuclear war today than it has been since the 1962 Cuban missile crisis, and if it erupts Europe will become a "radioactive desert," a leading researcher warned. He said world arms spending will pass the half-trillion-dollar mark this year.

The analyst, Frank Barnaby, director of the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, also said the United States is moving closer to a first-strike capability against the Soviet Union.

Barnaby warned that Europe's risk in a potential nuclear conflict is increasing because of new "Eurostrategic nuclear weapons" located in or targeted on Europe.

Often referred to as "gray area systems," these weapons are not covered by international arms control negotiations, Barnaby said. As a result, the prospects for the future are, in Barnaby's eyes, bleak.

"In case of a nuclear war Europe would be transformed into a radioactive desert," the British-born researcher said.

"There are presently some 60,000 nuclear devices of which 8,000 plus a large number of tactical weapons are targeted on European cities," he said. "As there are less than 1,000 cities, an average amount corresponding to 2,000 Hiroshima bombs will fall upon each of these places."

Barnaby's institute, established in 1966 to commemorate Sweden's 150 years of unbroken peace, is financed by the Swedish Parliament. Its yearbook, called "World Armaments and Disarmaments," is produced by an international staff of nuclear experts and analysts.

Barnaby said the yearbook has never painted a bright picture of the future. This year, however, the view is even dimmer because the east of the nuclear race has reached unprecedented heights.

Barnaby said world military spending will for the first time exceed the $500 billion level in 1980. NATO and the Warsaw Pact account for 70 per cent of the total, with Third World countries accounting for 15 per cent.

At a briefing for reporters Wednesday in advance of the unveiling of the 11th yearbook, Barnaby said he believes the United States will be able to achieve first-strike capability soon.

"With the deployment of new, very accurate U.S. weapons such as the Trident II, Pershing II and the MX missiles, all of which have distinct nuclear war-fighting capabilities, the United States may achieve a first strike capability through neutralizing the presently more vulnerable Soviet nuclear force, made up to almost 80 per cent of land-based delivery systems."

Although the Soviets are developing similar weapons such as the SS-20, a mobile land-based strategic nuclear weapon system, they still lag far behind the United States technologically, Barnaby said.

In terms of warheads, the U.S. land-based nuclear force only accounts for 20 per cent of the entire force, while other delivery systems such as bombers and submarine-launched ballistic missiles make up the remaining 80 per cent, the yearbook says.

Although the Soviets command a larger force of nuclear submarines, only six or seven are on active duty at one time. With about 30 U.S. nuclear submarines at sea simultaneously, the United States will probably be able to neutralize its undersea Soviet adversaries during a war, Barnaby said.

Hunt helping Smothers' bid

DALLAS (AP) — Nelson Bunker Hunt is giving a hand to black conservative Clay Smothers in his bid for Congress.

Smothers, who recently switched from the Democratic Party to the Republican Party, confirmed that Hunt has agreed to help him raise funds by mailing letters to influential friends.

Thieves take Clyde's stone

DALLAS (AP) — Thieves have carted away the tombstone from the grave of Texas outlaw Clyde Barrow for the fifth time in as many years, Dallas police reported Thursday.

Officers said the 500-pound tombstone that serves as the grave marker for Barrow and his older brother, Marvin "Buck" Barrow, was stolen from Western Heights Cemetery. The theft was reported by Barrow's sister, Marie Barrow.

In past years, the tombstone was stolen in early October about the same time as the annual University of Oklahoma-University of Texas football game played here.

HIPLEX chief hopes future turns cloudy

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — John Carr is hoping that his future will be turning cloudy soon — with big, single cumulus clouds.

Carr heads the Weather Modification and Technology Division of the Department of Water Resources, and is serving this summer, as he has in past summers, as project manager for cloud seeding operations in the Big Spring area.

Carr was back in Austin for a week recently, after having gone to Big Spring for the start of the High Plains Experiment (HIPLEX) work May 15.

The project is due to finish July 15, but Carr says "we are thinking about extending it for two more weeks" — if funding is available — because the weather hasn't cooperated.

What Carr wants are large, individual cumulus clouds, "because we can earn more from them than from others," but such clouds haven't shown up in sufficient numbers yet.

The HIPLEX work, now in its fifth year, is carried out with assistance from the Colorado River Municipal Water District, which leases two airplanes to the Department of Water Resources, which uses federal funding to conduct the cloud seeding work.

One aircraft flies into a cloud and seeds it with silver iodide, while the second aircraft flies 1,500 feet under the first — with both collecting data.

The work also involves collection of data using seven rawinsonde (balloon) stations, operated at Midland, Big Spring, Post, Snyder, Sterling City, Seagraves and Colorado City by teams of graduate students from Texas A&M University.

And there are 181 rain gauges operated by CRMWD in the rainfall target area.

Also working with the project are several representatives of Texas Tech University: Dr. Gerald Jurica, who flies in one of the aircraft; graduate student Eric Pani, who interprets satellite photographs for the project; and Dr. Colleen Leary, who operates the $1.5 million "Skywater" radar system.

This year, The National Center for Atmospheric Research, located in Boulder, Colo., has loaned, through A&M, the services of a Queenair Beechcraft equipped with scientific measuring devices, and a pilot, project director and instrument technician.

The month-long loan (through June 15) is valued at $47,000, Carr reports, adding, "They're all fine people...very cooperative."

A&M meteorologist Dr. James Scoggins serves as Carr's "relief" on the project when Carr returns to Austin to take care of office matters.

Carr says this season's work is intended to lead to a "proof of concept experiment" beginning next year, with such experiments to be conducted in 1982 or 1983, in order to test theories on cloud seeding developed from analysis of data gathered during this and past seasons.

"We hope to learn everything there is to know about clouds in West Texas," Carr says "...to know which will respond to seeding, and which won't."

With that information, the researchers hope to produce a manual showing how cloud seeding may be carried out, and what results may be expected.

State's raid shuts down reservation's food warehouse

PINE RIDGE, S.D. (AP) — Attorney General Mark Meierhenry says he'll ask federal officials to launch a major investigation of government food assistance on South Dakota's Indian reservations.

Meierhenry, who Wednesday led a raid that shut down a government food warehouse on the Pine Ridge Reservation, said he will give U.S. attorney Terry Prochaska evidence from a state investigation of an alleged $300,000 food theft scheme on that reservation.

The state attorney general cannot prosecute Indians on reservations.

Meanwhile, the raid was sharply criticized by a tribal attorney.

The shutdown of the Pine Ridge warehouse, which distributed free food under a U.S. Agriculture Department program to about 4,000 of the estimated 12,000 Indians on the reservation, showed "a very colorful attitude on the part of state officials," said Ogilala Sioux tribal attorney Jerry Matthews.

The state administers the federal assistance program.

"When the state stops providing services to Pine Ridge, which they provide to every other reservation in South Dakota, it violates federal law and is illegal," he said.

The shutdown will force needy Indians to buy food from stores at retail prices.

Meierhenry said a two-month state investigation found three warehouse employees and two outsiders were involved in large-scale thefts from the warehouse. He said the thieves would drive off in warehouse trucks and then sell government food at low prices to restaurants and other establishments.

On Monday, three or four Indians shot at a state employee sent to the warehouse as its new manager, Meierhenry said. The shots, also fired at the man's family, were meant to scare and not kill, Meierhenry said.

In the dawn raid, seven officials broke into the warehouse, took an inventory of food on hand and ordered it closed.

"The commodity program will remain closed at Pine Ridge until the tribe makes assurances ... that (it) will enforce its own laws and ordinances to prevent theft," James O. Hansen, superintendent of the state Department of Education and Cultural Affairs, said in a letter to Tribal Chairman Stanley Looking Elk.

"This program is run and administered totally by the state of South Dakota and yet every time the state has a problem running it they yell at the tribe," Matthews said.

Tenacious trio solves old crime

BOSTON (AP) — One night nearly five years ago, patrolman Dana Owen was in hot pursuit of a suspected gang of mail robbers when he was hit by two blasts from a sawed-off shotgun.

On Wednesday, just five days before the federal statute of limitations on the crime expired, Owen helped arrest two men in the case.

"He vowed that he was going to solve it and he did," said Lt. Thomas Kough of the Metropolitan District Commission police.

THE TWO MEN, picked up at home in Bedford, were among five people secretly indicted as a result of evidence gathered by Owen and two postal inspectors.

Owen has the tenacity of a bulldog, and so do the other two, said Kough. "It was never out of their minds. They just kept plugging and plugging. It's a long time to work on a case."

Owen spent six months recuperating from shotgun wounds he suffered during the chase on June 11, 1965.

"Since he returned, this has been foremost in his mind," said Kough. "He and two postal inspectors, William O'Leary and Fred Baker, have pursued the thing."

They arrested Joseph Capone, 37, and Joseph Binder, 39, who was a mail handler in Boston at the time of the heist. Binder retired last month after 33 years with the Postal Service.

The two face federal charges of conspiracy to assault a federal employee, assault on a federal employee, and possession of an illegal firearm, after a hearing in federal court, Binder was released without bail, and Capone was released on $5,000 bond.

THREE OTHER MEN are still being sought, Kough said.

In 1965, a U.S. mail truck was hijacked on a downtown Boston highway and later stopped by two policemen. A man who was holding a gun on the driver leaped out and sped off in a car that had been leading the truck.

Owen was hit twice during the chase, and the car eventually got away. Nothing had been taken from the mail truck.

The Postal Service has never said what was on the truck. But postal inspector Robert Moranville said the robbers believed it carried a payroll headed for White River Junction, Vt.

"We felt we knew who all the actors were, but we were never able to connect it together," said Kough. "Within the past couple of months, we uncovered the information we needed. Ultimately, it resulted in five secret indictments by a grand jury in Boston."

KEOUGH SAID the statute of limitations on federal charges would have run out on Monday. However, state charges were still possible.

Ford Motor Co. strikes back at government

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — The Ford Motor Co. says the federal government's "initial determination" of a defect in automatic transmissions of cars and trucks it produced is based on flawed engineering and accident data.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration on Wednesday told Ford it will hold a hearing July 21, beginning the process that could lead to an order to recall 16 million cars and trucks made between August 1972 and October 1979. NHTSA says the cars could lurch into reverse when drivers believe they are parked, and that 6,000 such accidents have injured 1,700 people and killed 98.

Roger Maugh, director of automotive safety for Ford, said Thursday such accidents "regardless of manufacturer" are likely to happen "once in three million shifts into park, or thirty lifetimes of driving," as far as Ford can tell.

Once the agency has confirmed a finding of a defect, it asks the manufacturer to propose a remedy, Maugh told reporters.

"If they ask for a proposal, we would ask, 'What is an acceptable proposal?'" Maugh said.

"If we were able to design a modification... that is cost-effective and reasonable, we would do it," Maugh said. "We would expect the same thing to be asked of other manufacturers."

Priests face arraignment in transporting aliens

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — After landing here with 423 Cuban refugees aboard the "God's Mercy," two Episcopal priests and six other Americans were arrested in connection with the outlaw boatlift.

The refugees arriving Thursday on the 112-foot converted World War II submarine chaser brought more than 113,000 the number of Cubans who fled the port of Mariel in the "Freedom Flotilla."

The Rev. Leo Frade and the Rev. Joe Doss, both of New Orleans, face arraignment with six others today on charges of bringing undocumented aliens into the country, said Florence Gabriel, spokeswoman for the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

She was unable to identify the other six persons.

* The eight were released on their own recognizance, she said.

Two small craft carrying a total of 15 refugees also docked Thursday night, pushing to 113,387 the number of refugees arriving since the boatlift began nearly two months ago.

At its height, the ragtag operation was ferrying 4,000 to 6,000 refugees a day to Key West.

The priests, who both serve at Grace Episcopal Church in New Orleans, organized the trip to fetch relatives of Cubans living in Louisiana, according to The Times-Picayune and The States-Item of New Orleans.

The party reportedly set out for Mariel on May 29, two weeks after President Carter banned U.S. vessels from traveling to Cuba to pick up refugees.

Coast Guard Petty Officer Mike Kelley said in Miami that the captain of God's Mercy reported he saw at least 20 U.S. boats remaining at Mariel.

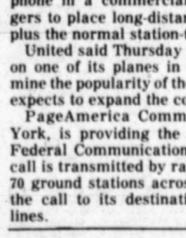

United has phone service

NEW YORK (AP) — United Airlines has introduced the nation's first air-to-ground public telephone in a commercial jetliner, allowing passengers to place long-distance calls for as little as $10 plus the normal station-to-station charges.

United said Thursday it has installed a "Sky-Tel" on one of its planes in a five-month test to determine the popularity of the service. The carrier said it expects to expand the convenience in the future.

PageAmerica Communications, based in New York, is providing the service to United under a Federal Communications Commission license. The call is transmitted by radio from the plane to one of 70 ground stations across the country, which relay the call to its destination over regular telephone lines.

Jack is Back with 63 to share U.S. Open lead

Jack Nicklaus orders ball into third hole for a birdie on way to 63 in U.S. Open to share lead with Tom Weiskopf. (AP Laserphoto)

By TOM SEPPY
SPRINGFIELD, N.J. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus and Tom Weiskopf, two Ohio natives, have fought for Buckeye honors since the early 1960s. They're battling again, this time in the U.S. Open.

Nicklaus and Weiskopf each shot a record-tying 7-under par 63 Thursday in the opening round of the 80th Open at Baltusrol, a demanding and long par 70 which can play from 7,013 to 7,076 yard depending on the tee placements.

And, in doing it, Nicklaus, who was four threesomes behind Weiskopf, matched birdies coming to the clubhouse.

"I wasn't conscious of Tom's score until the back nine," said Nicklaus, who explained that he put his whole game together in the round for the first time in a long while.

"Then I saw Tom was 4 under par. When he birdied 13 and we got to 13, Angelo (caddy Angelo Argea) kept saying, 'Answer him.' I never thought much about it but I almost knocked the second shot in the hole."

Each had a bogey early in the round but then fired eight birdies, matching on No. 13, No. 15 and No. 17.

Each had chance for a birdie on the 542-yard, par 5 No. 18 but Weiskopf put his third shot, a pitching wedge, into a sand bunker in front of the green and fortunately came out with a par while Nicklaus missed a 3-foot birdie putt.

"It's kind of unusual to walk off the 18th green in an Open shooting a 63 and being disappointed because you didn't shoot a 62," said Nicklaus. Although Nicklaus and Weiskopf matched the 63 shot by Johnny Miller in 1973 at Oakmont, there were 22 others who shot par 70 or better over Baltusrol's Lower Course.

Many predicted the course would yield few good scores to the field of 156, but it played easier because of rains earlier in the week.

Three strokes behind the leaders at 66 were Mark Hayes, Keith Fergus and Lon Hinkle while at 67 were Ray Floyd, Jay Haas and Calvin Peete.

Floyd, the former PGA and Masters champion who held the early for a couple of hours, put things in perspective when he said: "Any player who feels he has a shot to win the Open heels no pressure during the first or second day. I think the pressure starts in the third and fourth round," he said. "The first couple of rounds are like a 1 1/2-mile horse race. You're jockeying for position. You don't want to get behind but you want to be in there conservative and have a shot Sunday."

Lee Trevino, two-time Open winner whose putter was working in the first round, shot a two-under 68 and joined Mark Lye, Andy North and Isao Aoki of Tokyo who played in the Nicklaus trio.

J.C. Sneed, Mark Reid, Bill Rogers and Curtis

Strange were in the group of seven at 69 with relative unknown regulars Tommy McGinnis, Patrick McGowan and Jeff Mitchell.

Defending Open champion Hale Irwin, Larry Nelson, who won at Atlanta last week, Peter Jacobsen, Jim Simons and Tim Simpson came in at even par, one many predicted would be a good score by the end of the championship on Sunday.

Tom Watson, the pretournament favorite who has won five times this year, scored a hole-in-one with an 8-iron on the 156-yard par 3 No. 4 but came in with a 71. He joined Bruce Lietzke, Bruce Devlin, John Cook and Terry Dill.

Weiskopf was ecstatic over his round, which he said was probably the best he had ever shot. "It's a great feeling," he said. "Other than three missed shots which I hit solidly, it might have been one of the finest rounds of golf that I have ever played. It means that much more when you're playing in an Open championship."

"I drove the ball exceptionally well," he said. "I hit some iron shots as good as any I have hit in my life and I made every makeable putt there was to make. And that's the way you have to shoot to shoot 63."

Weiskopf, who attended Ohio State a few years after Nicklaus, said he was aware of presence of Nicklaus a few holes behind him by the roars of the crowd.

SAN ANTONIO—It started on Thursday and didn't end until today, but all four hours and 35 minutes were worth it when centerfielder Gary Krug delivered a run-scoring single in the 13th inning to give the Midland Cubs a 4-3 victory over the Texas League West Division leading San Antonio Dodgers in the opener of a six-game series before 2,422 fans at O'Keefe Field.

J.W. Mitchell singled, stole second and continued to third to set up Krug's late-hour, er, early morning theatrical. Krug, who entered the game as a pinch hitter and stayed on to play center, sliced a drive down the left field line. Dale Holman had a chance to catch it, but realized he couldn't throw out Mitchell at the plate, so he let it drop, hoping it would land foul. It didn't.

The Cubs forced the contest into overtime with a run in the ninth after falling behind 2-0 in the second inning.

Mike Wright, the fourth of five Midland pitchers, got the win after relieving Bob Blyth in the 12th to get the final out. Herman Segelke then came in to retire the Dodgers in the 12th to pick up his second save of the season.

The loser was Rick Hersischer, who pitched five-hit ball over the final 4 2/3 innings.

The Cubs and Dodgers got at it in single games tonight and then play a doubleheader Sunday to make up a rained-out date on the Cubs' previous visit.

It was a tough night on batting averages, but Scott Fletcher survived the ordeal with four hits in six trips while shortstop Jesus Alfaro was 3-for-4. Mike Marshall, the Dodgers' first baseman, went 4-for-5.

Blazeballer Henry Mack went the first six innings for the Cubs and then was followed by Kent Hunziker before Blyth came on.

Dodgers' Manager Ducky LeJohn was unhappy about the outcome. He had hoped to pick on Midland to "open some daylight over Amarillo."

Careful Krug made sure he didn't drink the water

Gary Krug...glad to be back.

When Gary Krug was demoted from AAA to AA ball by the Chicago Cubs, he didn't exactly come to Midland kicking and screaming. Nor was there even a hint of righteous indignation.

Krug, who had played for the Midland Cubs part of the 1978 and 1979 seasons, had been assigned to the AAA Mexican League last April, since the Wichita Aeros were overloaded with first basemen, incumbent Jim Tracy and Karl Pagel, the Minor League Player of the Year in 1979 as an outfielder, who was told to learn how to play first if he wanted to play in the majors.

Things weren't much better in Tabasco when Krug reported. They already had one first baseman and since he was one of the three "imports" permitted on the roster, it meant that he or Krug would have to play the outfield.

"But that wasn't the worst part," Krug recounted. "The Mexican League is divided in four divisions and we were in the one south of Mexico City. It was hot and humid, the ball wouldn't carry and the playing field was terrible."

What's more Gary and Chuck Rogers, the former Midland Cub who accompanied the former University of Oklahoma star South of the Border, heeding Carlos Palomino's warning to compatriots in this country, didn't dare drink the water.

And except for a couple of basic meals, like eggs and bacon, they didn't eat much either. "We were never really sick, but we always felt halfway like we were about to be."

Judging by the performances of Rogers and Krug, perhaps starvation rations are the answer to baseball slumps. Rogers was 9-1, Krug reported, and "I was hitting .350 when I left. I hurt my hand, but since I was one of three imported players, I was expected to play and I went into a slump."

Communications weren't the best. "Team meetings were a total loss for Chuck and I. We didn't speak the manager's language and there was no one to interpret."

The teams traveled the long distances between cities in hot, cramped buses over bumpy dusty roads and "Yes, the fans still pack gyms and in the late innings when the tequila begins to take effect, they can get very abusive."

Krug relates one fan was particularly insulting to one of the Tabasco pitchers. "The next night the pitcher showed up at the park a little bit drunk. He went into the stands after the fan and caught him on the roof. In the fight, the fan was knocked off the roof. Luckily, all he suffered was a broken arm."

Of course it wasn't all bad. "We were playing in Mexico City when I hit a grand slam homer on national tv. That was a thrill."

Krug points out that things weren't as bad in the northern divisions. "When we were in Monterrey, I got word of my assignment to Midland. The Monterrey team made a good offer and it took a while to make up my mind. It sounded good and the conditions were a lot better."

So his reaction to his demotion is, "I just want to play here the rest of the year. I don't care how much the wind blows."

As for Krug's role with the Cubs, he isn't sure. "I suspect they may want to platoon me and use me as DH. Joe (Joe Hicks) is hitting well and who have no expectation of replacing him. We'll just see what they want to do."

Huntsville to host LSC cage tournament
ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Huntsville will host the Lone Star Conference post-season basketball tournament for at least two more years, league officials said Thursday.

Brownwood also had sought the annual classic, but the conference's eight institutional representatives voted 6-2 Thursday to keep the tournament in Huntsville.

Following the 1982 tournament, a three-year bid will be accepted by conference officials, said Hal Lane, LSC president.

Zuniga wins by KO
STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — Carlos Zuniga, fighting before a hometown crowd, brought his record to 14-1 when he stopped Frankie Granaeas, in the eighth round Thursday night in featured bantamweight action.

Shuddering pros bring Baltusrol to its knees

By GARY MYERS
SPRINGFIELD, N.J. (AP) — They were shuddering at the mere mention of it, these 138 professionals and 18 amateurs. Baltusrol Golf Club, with its long, narrow fairways, glass-fast greens and deep rough that would bring golf's best to their knees.

But after Thursday's first round of the 1980 U.S. Open, it was quaint, old Baltusrol, hosting its record sixth Open, that was begging for mercy.

A record first round total of 19 golfers broke par 70 — the previous record was 14, also at Baltusrol, in 1936 — with Jack Nicklaus and Tom Weiskopf shooting record-tying 63s. Plus, Tom Watson managed a hole in one on the fourth hole, annually rated one of the best 18 in the country.

Why was Baltusrol such a push-over, such a mismatch, in the world's most prestigious golf tournament?

Because the greens were slowed to a crawl by recent rain, the fairways were in such good condition that if you kept the ball in play, you had a chance and the rough, after all, was not so rough.

"The fairways are perfect if you can control it," said Weiskopf, who controlled his noted temper to shoot a 31-32-63. "The greens are as soft and will hold the ball. They are at a good speed."

Weiskopf, however, played a tremendous round — chances are he would have scored well regardless of the course. He had his driver going, his fairway irons were superb and the magic touch returned to his putter. Baltusrol was just the victim of his assault.

"I did everything right," he said. "It happens once or twice a year, but you don't always know when it will happen."

But Nicklaus matched his Ohio State buddy stroke for stroke, wasting a chance to take sole possession of the lead into today's second round when he missed a short putt on 18.

Nicklaus predicted the golfers will feel the wrath of Baltusrol's revenge before the tournament winds up Sunday.

"I think the course will get its own before the week is over," said Nicklaus, who broke out of a year-long slump with his 32-31-63. "I don't have an answer as to why the scores were so low."

Nicklaus, like Weiskopf, had relatively little trouble on the greens.

"I've had days when I've putted well, but I can't remember the last time I putted this well," he said.

Like old times with Lee in contention

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
SPRINGFIELD, N.J. (AP) — Lee Trevino bounced into the press interview room, clumps of thick raven hair sticking from beneath a white baseball cap — and a spark of fresh excitement swept through the U.S. Open Golf Championship.

"It's hot in here today," he said, immediately breaking the tension. "I told you yesterday I'd have something for you today, and here it is."

What Trevino had was three birdies on the last six holes, including a 40-foot snake on the 16th, for a 68 that put him in the thick of contention going into the climactic week-end.

"I like the heat, I like the pressure," he said. "God willing, if I keep putting this good, I have a chance."

Those words are like bubbling champagne for millions of golf buffs, to whom the loquacious, wisecracking onetime Texas driving range operator and links hustler is a folk hero.

It was here on the hoary Baltusrol course that the man they call Super Mex first came into prominence, signaling a career that was to include 23 tour victories, two U.S. and two British Opens, the PGA and personal prize earnings in excess of $2 million.

He came up with from El Paso with only a few bucks in his jeans, a lot of naivete and gall and no reputation. He stayed at a motor inn just down the pike and nightly walked another mile to eat at a Chinese restaurant because he wasn't allowed in the motel dining room without a jacket. He didn't have one.

Although the tournament became a duel between Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer, people quickly got to know the merry Mexican-American, who charmed galleries with his banter and awed purists with his raw shotmaking skill.

He picked up a $6,000 check for fifth and never looked back. He beat out Nicklaus for the Open crown at Rock-ester, N.Y., in 1968 and repeated the feat in 1971 in a playoff at Merion, Pa.

Success has left the stubby Texan (5-foot-7, 180 pounds) totally unspooled.

The difference this time, he said, referring to his 1967 venture, is that my caddy is staying at the Union Motor Inn now instead of me. I am staying at the home of a doctor friend.

Trevino explained that he had cured some of his putting ills with a new gadget — a piece of mastic tape that illuminates where the ball is struck.

"I found I was missing the 'sweet spot,'" he explained. "So Wednesday night I went to the garage, took out a hammer and knocked the goose out of my goose-neck blade."

"If this keeps up, maybe lightning will strike again Saturday."

Trevino didn't use the word "lightning" literally. It's something he speaks of in the most reverent tones.

He was honored by golf writers Wednesday with the Ben Hogan Trophy, which goes to a player who overcame great odds. Lee was struck by lightning at the Western Open in 1975 — and for months his career appeared in jeopardy.

"They say your life flashes before your eyes when those things happen," he said. "I didn't know I had been so bad. I saw a lot of girls."

Lee said his wife, Claudia, once saw the Hogan Trophy and thought it was beautiful.

"She said she hoped I would win it," he added. "I said, 'Hey, you know what that's for? What do you want me to do — get hit by a truck?'"

Trevino, who once hustled suckers by playing them with a pop bottle, related that one of his biggest thrills was playing with King Hassan II of Morocco on the royal course in Rabat.

China cracks down on 'harmful' books

PEKING (AP) — As China revives from a book famine, authorities now are cracking down on "corrupting" publications on everything from fortune-telling to lyrics of "decadent" songs.

"The situation was serious," said a provincial broadcast in Hubei, central China. It said a small number of people had distorted freedom of the press, printed harmful books and sold them illegally.

In the capital, the Peking Daily said market supervisors were sent out even at night to halt the selling of song lyrics, books on palmistry, fortune-telling, and pictures of childbearing.

Many of these books, it said, were mimeographed publications put out by unemployed residents of Peking and its suburbs.

74-year-old modern jazz pianist performed a legendary concert

As far as Midlanders are concerned, "Fatha" knows best.

Theatre Midland was the scene Wednesday night for a memorable one-night concert by the legendary Earl "Fatha" Hines, recognized as the "father" of modern jazz piano.

Hines' sense of humor was apparent from the start, with his introductory statement to the audience.

"May I say I'm glad to be here. In fact, I'm glad to be anywhere tonight."

The 74-year-old Hines, who has been playing for more than 50 years, explained that when he and his contemporaries began a "lot of the people didn't realize there would be any history in it. Jazz turned — bass player Jimmy Cox, drummer Eddie Graham, saxophone and clarinet player Eric Schneider and singer Marva Josie.

In fact, it's difficult with this group to decide who is having more fun, the audience or the performers. Their tasteful light banner and excellent solos made for a lively and enjoyable performance.

Twenty-five-year-old Schneider, who had a little difficulty with his clarinet, said, "We all have bad nights, but he's (Hines) very easy to get along with. The only two things he insists on are:

A. Be on time and,
B. Dress correctly.

"Sure enough, when Hines came on the stage for the second half, his opening remark began with, "In case you came late, which I don't want you to do anymore, always be on time."

That's "Fatha."

out to be commercialized. We never looked at it that way. We loved what we were doing.

"I play what I feel like. I don't have any piano arrangements."

In fact Hines' does not like piano arrangements. And his loose, relaxed style gives evidence, to that.

As his fingers fly deftly across the keys, he is truly a master at making a piano talk.

But he's not selfish about the limelight. He enjoys listening to his very talented and young accompa-

Consumption of pills booze, cigarettes up after TMI accident

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Many of the people living near Three Mile Island increased their consumption of alcohol, cigarettes, tranquilizers and sleeping pills in the two weeks following the accident at the nuclear power plant, says a state Health Department study.

The report, released Wednesday, also said that people who left the 15-mile radius around Three Mile Island during the accident spent $6.9 million and lost $1.4 million in income.

About 50,000 households or 150,000 people were evacuated during the two-week period following the March 28, 1979, accident, the department said.

Its report, called "Health-Related Economic Costs of the Three Mile Island Accident," analyzes short-term health-related costs of the accident.

Families that left during the emergency tended to be younger and larger, more highly educated, and more recent arrivals to the area, researchers found.

The evacuees included about two-thirds of those living within five miles of the plant, one-half of those living between six and 10 miles away, and one-third of those living between 11 and 15 miles from the plant, they noted.

An earlier study sponsored by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission estimated evacuation costs at $9.8 million, with $6.7 million in lost income.

But the Health Department said its figures are more accurate because they take into account the fact that most evacuees stayed with friends or relatives. Only 8 percent stayed at hotels or motels, the department said.

Both the NRC and Health Department reports estimated insurance companies paid out $1.2 million in benefits to people living within a 15-mile radius of the plant.

The Health Department study also found increased use of drugs in the two weeks following the accident. According to the report, 13 percent of the regular drinkers in the survey increased their daily consumption by four drinks.

Thirty-two percent of the smokers used an extra half-pack of cigarettes a day, and the number of people taking tranquilizers or sleeping pills doubled.

'Omnibus' returns for only two shows

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There is, in the desert of summer television, the occasional oasis. "Omnibus" is back. Only for two shows, at first, and only on a trial basis, but you take your oases when you can get them.

"Omnibus" is a reprise of one of television's class entries of the fabled "Golden Age," which was a sort of "Saturday Evening Post" of television. Alistair Cooke hosted the show, on CBS and then ABC, on Sunday afternoons, before the NFL claimed that territory.

The original "Omnibus" has been described as "a vaudeville show of the imagination," a happy, gentle mixture of poetry readings, drama, dance, conversation, an occasional adventure... "60 Minutes" tranquilized.

Hal Holbrook is just right as host of the new "Omnibus" (to broadcast by ABC this Sunday night and next), charming and calm, promising "a vehicle for many different passengers." It is that.

Sunday's show is comprised of six segments, ranging from a rousing "Peter Pan" number to a Hollywood fashion show. Actor Lewis J. Stadlen does a funny, warmly nostalgic bit from his one-man show, "Groucho."

'Urban Cowboy' a country-western similarity to 'Saturday Night Fever'

URBAN COWBOY restores John Travolta to box-office esteem after the blight of "Moment by Moment." As in "Saturday Night Fever" and "Grease," he plays a blustery, not-too-bright, young man with an electric personality that is fascinating to watch. Instead of discos, his hangout is Gilley's, a monstrous country-music establishment outside Houston, where he sucks beer, does an occasional hoedown and flirts with the girls. He takes a wife (well played by Debra Winger) but marriage turns sour, as does most of his meaningless existence.

Stock market gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market managed a modest gain today, responding to further declines in interest rates.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 60 at 873.21.

Gainers outnumbered losers by a 2-1 margin in the over-all tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Yields on bonds, meanwhile, continued to drop Thursday as Henry Kaufman of Salomon Brothers, whose interest-rate forecasts get considerable attention in the financial community, predicted that the prime would go below 10 percent this summer.

Stocks sensitive to interest-rate trends were mostly higher. Federal National Mortgage gained 1/4 to 17 1/4; Southern Co. 1/4 to 13 1/4; and MGIC Investment 1/2 to 26 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index picked up 14 to 66.06. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index added 1.14 to 288.26.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 19.18 million shares at noontime, against 21.17 million at the same point Thursday.

Stock market gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market managed a modest gain today, responding to further declines in interest rates.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 60 at 873.21.

Gainers outnumbered losers by a 2-1 margin in the over-all tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Yields on bonds, meanwhile, continued to drop Thursday as Henry Kaufman of Salomon Brothers, whose interest-rate forecasts get considerable attention in the financial community, predicted that the prime would go below 10 percent this summer.

Stocks sensitive to interest-rate trends were mostly higher. Federal National Mortgage gained 1/4 to 17 1/4; Southern Co. 1/4 to 13 1/4; and MGIC Investment 1/2 to 26 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index picked up 14 to 66.06. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index added 1.14 to 288.26.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 19.18 million shares at noontime, against 21.17 million at the same point Thursday.

Largest banks cut prime lending rate

NEW YORK (AP) — Two of the nation's largest commercial banks today cut their prime lending rates to 12 percent, the level established earlier this week by some smaller banks.

Chemical Bank, the country's sixth largest, lowered its prime from 13 percent, undercutting the 12.5 percent rates set Thursday by No. 1 Bank of America, No. 2 Citibank and some other big banks.

Irving Trust Co., ranked 14th by deposits, joined Chemical at 12 percent, possibly signaling the start of a widespread move to the lower rate.

Computers used as diagnosis aid

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine tells me that computers are being used to treat patients with psychiatric problems. I know there's no way he can know what he's talking about, but I promised to write. Will you please clear this up? — Franklin.

Dear Franklin: Your friend is just a trifle confused. Computers are being used to assist psychiatrists in arriving at a diagnosis of a patient's condition, but not in the active treatment process.

Dr. John H. Greist, of the department of psychiatry at the University of Wisconsin Hospital, explains that it is important to identify as early as possible patients who can respond to specific treatments. Dr. Greist believes that the use of computers obviates the need for psychiatrists to remember the many specific criteria needed to arrive at a diagnosis.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I can see where cancer research on animals may be helpful in expanding our knowledge of the disease, but it seems many scientists jump to conclusions too quickly. Suppose saccharin, for example, does cause cancer in rats; people aren't rats, are they? — Phil.

Dear Phil: If I may rephrase your question, what you are asking is whether a chemical that causes cancer in animals will also cause it in humans. Almost all cancer experts would answer "yes."

The Office of Technology Assessment has reported that all substances found to cause cancer in animals have the potential for causing cancer in humans. Along the same lines; the National Academy of Sciences has stated that animal studies designed to detect carcinogenic activity are predictive of how humans will respond.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I notice that in movies depicting life in the United States a hundred or more years ago, the actors never smoke cigarettes. Assuming that what the movies show is accurate, when did cigarettes become popular in this country? — Ralph.

Dear Ralph: People began using cigarettes with increasing frequency in the early 1900s; they became even more popular during World War I. Prior to the 1900s, tobacco was preferred in the form of cigars or used in pipes, for chewing, and as snuff.

Dear Dr. Solomon: As a father-to-be for the first time, I would like to know what restrictions there are on sexual relations between my wife and myself during the pregnancy. — Mr. G.H.S.

Dear Mr. S: A pregnant woman may have sexual relations during a normal pregnancy until four weeks before the scheduled delivery date. Of course, if your wife has contractions or bleeding afterwards, she should check with her obstetrician.

Guam residents get day in court

WASHINGTON (AP) — The residents of Guam who lost homes and property after the United States liberated the South Pacific island from the Japanese in World War II are about to get their day in court.

The cost to remedy the old injustice could be as high as $700 million, according to government officials. Guam's spokesman in Congress says the figure will probably be far less.

A little noticed provision of an omnibus bill enacted this year said Guam residents who successfully press their claims for compensation are entitled to interest from the time their land was taken.

The Justice Department said that measure could triple the cost of the compensation program.

When President Carter signed the law March 12, he said the interest payments are "inconsistent with settled law and practice." But he agreed to the measure despite his reservations since it covered a broad number of subjects besides Guam.

There have been 700 claim suits filed, many by sons and daughters of people who lost their land after the island's liberation in 1944. The United States took the property for Navy bases in the war against Japan and kept it afterward to maintain armed forces in the Pacific.

Jury trials are expected to begin later this year. To recover any money, the Guam residents must prove the property was taken unfairly.

Del. Antonio B. Won Pat, who speaks for Guam in Congress, said one-third of the island was taken over and there were many cases where natives surrendered their land for a fraction of its value. The appeals process at the time was of little help, since only the Navy reviewed its own decisions.

Located about 3,700 miles west of Hawaii, Guam has 255 square miles of land. It has been a U.S. territory since 1898, except for the 2 1/2 years of Japanese occupation during the war. It was administered by the Navy until 1951, when it was granted the right to elect a governor and legislature.

A federal commission that investigated the land claims of Guam residents said the natives often surrendered their property for less than it was worth because of "threats, coercion, appeals to patriotism and fear of military reprisal."

Won Pat said "we were in concentration camps when the Americans came. They took whatever land they needed for the prosecution of the war."

An aide to Won Pat, Roger Stillwell, said the Guam residents were among the strongest supporters of the U.S. military effort, welcoming their liberators with flag-waving and jubilation.

"But we still ripped them off," Stillwell said. "To put it politely, the deck was stacked." After more than a decade of trying, Won Pat succeeded in winning passage in 1977 of a law authorizing compensation for the lost land.

The current controversy is not over the justice of that act, but over the eventual cost.

A Justice Department official who asked not to be named said "I have serious doubts that anyone but a handful of legislators had an idea of the amount of money involved" when Congress agreed this year to grant interest on the claims.

But Won Pat said the department made its objections well known in hopes of defeating the measure.

He contends that since the prevailing interest rates at the time the land was taken were in the 3 percent range, the cost of compensation may be a lot less than the department's figures.

Won Pat, now 70, was a 35-year-old school teacher when the Americans recaptured Guam. "I didn't have any property," he said.

Those who did and are still around to file claims feel they are about to be rewarded with long-overdue justice, Won Pat said.

Publishers hear news products will survive

ATLANTA (AP) — American newspapers will survive the onslaught of new technology that brings news broadcast directly into the home via television and small computers, a communications lawyer predicted.

"The mass appeal of the newspaper — its low cost, its diversity and portability, its ease of reading, all of these features and more — ensure the continued viability of your product," Richard W. Wiley said Wednesday.

Wiley, former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, addressed the Production Management Conference of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Wiley urged newspaper executives to develop their own electronic information-distributing systems.

"It is incumbent on your industry to be involved with, and to take advantage of, a variety of new methods of electronic information transfer and delivery," Wiley said. That would allow newspapers to maintain their status as gatherers and distributors of information, he said. David Carlisle, head of a Canadian company now setting up a television-oriented information network, told the association that newspaper publishers must move quickly to head off challengers who want to take advantage of the new technology.

"The threat is, any entrepreneur can set up a videotext company and start calling on your advertisers tomorrow," Carlisle said.

Telecommunications experts speaking at the conference said television, along with increasingly inexpensive home computers and communications links to businesses, eventually will provide many educational and recreational services to private homes, as well as news and electronic mail.

The Associated Press announced this week it will take part in an experiment to provide news reports through home computers. Some media experts have predicted that such systems eventually will replace the home-delivered newspaper.

See-through pulpit highlight of convention

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Lively and impassioned preaching is a trademark of Southern Baptists, and a see-through plexiglass pulpit lets the 13,580 people at the denomination's convention here see every gesture and expression.

The "messengers," as the convention-goers are called, shouted "Amen's" as they listened to sermons from the stage of the Cervantes Convention Center or watched the proceedings on closed-circuit television throughout the center.

Besides lively debate on church policy and problems, the Southern Baptist Convention also featured a dim-lit Christian "nightclub" at a nearby hotel with late-night evangelistic singing by girls in old-time saloon costumes.

The convention, now in its final day, offered 46 exhibit booths with pictures, posters, video shows, books, church supplies, free trinkets, treats and a tic-tac-toe computer game.

Most conventions are good for liquor sales, but not the Southern Baptist Convention.

"Baptists don't drink," said Tim Hedquist, a planning official from Nashville, Tenn., "but they eat. We eat about as much as other people drink."

Other preachers dealt with the church's internal tension over "liberals."

The Rev. Landrum Leavell II, president of New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary, said Baptists should have better judgment "than one of my birds," when they feel inclined to "hunt out liberals."

'Blue flu' protest ends

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Police were back on the job Thursday after a four-day sick-out to protest the status of contract negotiations, but firefighters were threatening to come down with "blue flu."

Firefighters voted Wednesday on a job action, but a spokesman for the firefighters association said results of the vote would be withheld "until we feel it is a proper time to put it out."

Mayor Roger O. Parment said wage negotiations with the police now would center "on realignment of available city funds" and there would be no further action sought against police because of the "blue flu."

Police had defied a restraining order issued Sunday by Judge John Montgomery, who was scheduled to rule today on whether to make the order permanent.

Chief Michael Borkowski said 26 of 27 men returned at 10:30 p.m. Wednesday for the first shift and the absent policeman was "legitimately sick."

Parent announced amnesty for the protesters, with no loss of pay and no prosecution, if they returned to work. About 200 of the 250-member force had called in sick.
