Klan's racist message will sweep northern states, leader says

NEW GENEVA, Pa. (AP) — Bearing a microphone and backed by a burning cross, Ku Klux Klan leader Bill Wilkinson has brought the Klan's racist message to rural Pennsylvania, a message he believes will sweep the Northern states.

"The Southerners and the Northerners are getting together and we're going to fight integration. We're going to push integration out," Wilkinson told a crowd of several hundred sympathizers and curious spectators in a muddy farm field near here Saturday night.

Wilkinson, a former electrical contractor from Louisiana who now leads the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, stood on the back of a pickup truck and railed against integration, forced busing, affirmative action programs and U.S. acceptance of refugees.

"The day we are finally able to mobilize millions of white American patriots such as you and get out on the streets and say 'no more affirmative action, no more forced busing,' Jimmy Carter will become as big a racist as any man or woman in this field today," Wilkinson said to cheers.

After the speech, Wilkinson traded his three-piece suit for a white robe with a dragon embroidered on the back to lead about 30 other robed, torch-bearing Klansmen in lighting the cross.

Wilkinson addressed about 100 people at a cross-burning Sunday night near Buckhannon, W.Va. Between 25 and 30 hooded and robed Klan members — armed with shotguns, rifles and pistols — handed out KKK literature and membership applications at the rally at a farm in a remote section of Upshur County in central West Virginia.

West Virginians also attended anti-klan rallies at the state Capitol in Charleston and in Uniontown, Pa., Saturday.

The Pennsylvania rally, the first open, major Klan recruiting event in the state in at least 30 years, was condemned by labor, civil rights, religious and political leaders who met in protest about 20 miles away in Uniontown.

Jury deliberations may begin on anniversary

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The jury in the murder trial of six Klu Klux Klansmen and American Nazis may begin its deliberations on the first anniversary of the confrontation that left five Communist Workers Party supporters dead.

The Nov. 3, 1979, faceoff erupted in gunfire after a motorcade of Klansmen and Nazis interrupted a "Death to the Klan" rally sponsored by the communist workers.

Superior Court Judge James Long has advised jurors that closing arguments, scheduled to start today, would take a week. Long said the trial probably would go to the jury the following week, possibly next Monday — the anniversary of the shootout.

Still no decision on hostages' fate

By The Associated Press

Iran's Parliament, the Majlis, failed again today to reach a decision on the fate of the 52 American hostages after a debate of nearly six hours and will resume the discussion Wednesday, informed sources in Tehran reported.

A Tehran Radio broadcast said the United States was indulging in "wishful thinking" about the debate.

"They are now bragging about the imminent release of the hostages," it said after the session. "This is a rumor with which they want to gratify themselves."

Continuing the secret debate that began Sunday, the 228-member Majlis met for four hours in the morning, recessed for two hours for prayers, and then met again in the afternoon for nearly two hours.

No meeting will be held Tuesday because it is a religious holiday. But the parliament will meet again Wednesday to continue the debate.

Like today's meetings, it will be a special session since the regular meeting days are Sunday, Tuesday and Thursday.

"It is not clear when a decision will be reached on the hostage issue," a spokesman at the public relations office of the Majlis said before the morning session.

Tehran Radio reported the Majlis also discussed the war between Iran and Iraq at the morning meeting.

Two factors appeared to be extending the debate, which some reports had suggested would be resolved in a single day. One was the wave of optimistic rumors from the United States of imminent release for the hostages, which a Tehran radio broadcast today implied was a form of pressure on Iran.

The other was Iran's battlefield losses to Iraq in the 36-day-old Persian Gulf war. Iranian officials have accused the United States of siding with Iraq in the conflict.

A reporter for Pars, the Iranian news agency, who attended the opening session of the debate Sunday, said "most probably" the hostage issue "will be decided in the near future" because "it is a very important issue."

Majid Sajedi said in a telephone interview from Tehran the Majlis decision might "coincide" with the U.S. presidential elections Nov. 4. The date is also the first anniversary of the seizure of the hostages.

"Now the question of elections in the United States is very important," he said. "Who will come as the head of state and how will he deal with the question of Iran?"

Moosavi Tabrizi, a deputy contacted by telephone from Beirut after the first round of debate Sunday, predicted it might take a "week to 10 days" to decide the conditions for the release of the Americans, who today were spending their 359th day in captivity.

Mohammad Mohammadi, a deputy from a party closely linked to the young Islamic militants holding the hostages, said his faction would try to prolong the debate.

The Majlis voted Sunday to hold the debate behind closed doors for "security reasons." The first secret session lasted for two hours and 15 minutes, and the deputies reportedly heard a report from the seven-member commission that drafted proposed terms for the release of the Americans. No details were made public, but Mohammadi said the debate was contentious, and there was little common ground among opposing factions.

Before going into secret session, the deputies by a vote of 101-87 voted down a motion to postpone the debate indefinitely pending developments in the Iran-Iraq war. Pointing to the gallery crowded with foreign correspondents, many deputies asked why the Majlis should be concerned with 52 Americans when hundreds of Iranians were being killed in the war.

The speaker of the Majlis, Hashemi Rafsanjani, linked the United States to the Iraqi rocket attack Sunday which the Iranians said killed at least 64 persons in residential areas of the military garrison city of Dezful. Directing his words to the foreign press, Rafsanjani said: "You should pay attention to these important events happening in the region with the incitement of the same superpower whose hostages will be discussed in the session today."

He also accused the United States of feeding the Iraqis intelligence on Iranian troop movements gathered by the advanced American radar observation planes stationed in Saudi Arabia after Iraq invaded Iran.

The United States has denied it is helping either country in the war. It said it sent the planes at Saudi Arabia's request after Iran threatened to attack the Saudi oil fields if it sided with Iraq.

Iraq tightens its grip on Iranian oil center

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iraq said today it had tightened its hold on the Iranian port Khorramshahr and Iran's leaders acknowledged the city's situation was "critical."

Pars, the official Iranian news agency, said officials in the nearby oil refining city of Abadan had lost all contact with Khorramshahr, located on the eastern coast of the Shatt el-Arab waterway leading to the Persian Gulf some 400 miles southwest of Tehran.

After a meeting with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini in Tehran on Sunday night, Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai and Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani told reporters Khorramshahr's situation was "critical." Rajai said in a statement broadcast by Tehran radio that Abadan's situation was "somewhat better" than Khorramshahr's and said "the aggressors have superior firepower in this region." A broadcast Iraqi communique said a "desperate enemy attempt" to halt the advance on Abadan from the east and from the north was "destroyed in a quick and decisive battle."

A later broadcast by Tehran radio said Iraqi forces tried to cross the Khorramshahr-Abadan bridge behind a heavy artillery barrage but ran up against stiff resistance from diehard Islamic revolutionary guards.

The radio said residential areas in Abadan and Ahwaz came under Iraqi artillery and air bombardment at mid-morning and an Ahwaz government building was destroyed. Ahwaz is the capital of Iran's oil province of Khuzistan 75 miles north of Abadan.

The broadcast said 12 Iraqi tanks were knocked out of action by day-break hit-and-run raids mounted in the central and northern sectors of the front by Iranian tribal warriors.

Sheriff's race is drawing the most local interest

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one in a series of stories taking a close look at local races and candidates in the Nov. 4 general election.

By KAY CRITES
Staff Writer

The race for Midland County Sheriff apparently is drawing more interest from the public than other local races with incumbent Sheriff Dallas Smith trying for re-election against challenger Joe Carr.

Carr, a resident of rural Midland and veteran police officer, decided to run for sheriff two years ago.

"I was prompted by several citizens in Midland to seek the office of sheriff. I live in rural Midland, and I realize the needs of the rural area."

"I think that Midland County needs a change in our county law enforcement," said the Democratic challenger. "I believe more time should be spent with rural county residents, affording them more protection. I feel they are entitled to the best protection possible."

Carr outlined some of his plans, should he be elected.

"ONE OF THE main goals is to beef up the patrol and criminal investigative divisions and then to establish a full-time narcotics division with qualified and trained personnel."

He pointed out "there is also an extreme amount of money being spent right now" because of a high turnover within the Sheriff's Department.

"Every time you lose a man you have to train another. I would have the ability to staff the Sheriff's Department with personnel that are well-trained, and wish to remain in law enforcement in Midland County."

He also said some of these people would be chosen for their "vast knowledge of the oilfield business."

"Oilfield thefts need to be combated. These are great losses to the oilman."

Carr also promised that, if elected, all expenditures of the office would be spent in Midland County, "not in Ector County as in this last year where three patrol cars were bought in Odessa with Midland County taxpayers' money."

"...But I feel we should concentrate on the criminal and the deterring of crime in Midland County."

CARR HAS BEEN in law enforcement for 17 years, 16 of those in Midland as a patrol officer, traffic officer, detective, narcotics officer and canine handler with the Midland Police Department.

He moved to Midland in 1965. He is married to Trena Carr, and they have five children.

Sheriff Dallas Smith, who has seven years experience with the Texas Department of Public Safety, was elected in 1976.

Assuming he is re-elected, Smith said he plans to continue with the efforts he's undertaken the past four years to improve the Sheriff's Department.

Smith is proud of some of the things he has accomplished during his time as sheriff.

His campaign literature and advertisements center around "the man who kept his promises."

Candy 'competent' to finish trial

Judge rules after hearing from shrink

MCKINNEY (AP) — A judge ruled today that Candace Montgomery, accused of axing to death the wife of her onetime lover, is competent to finish her murder trial.

State District Judge Tom Ryan announced his ruling after hearing from McKinney psychiatrist Dr. Thomas L. Thornton.

Thornton said today he tested the defendant on her "mental status" at his office on Saturday and found her "fully competent to stand trial."

Ryan ordered the examination after a defense psychiatrist testified Friday that Mrs. Montgomery dissociated herself from the slaying of Betty Gore after she hit her at least 41 times with a three-foot pole ax in the Gore home last summer.

Mrs. Montgomery testified the victim had learned that she had an affair with Allan Gore and a fight resulted.

The defense unexpectedly claimed self-defense last Monday when the trial began.

Ryan appeared annoyed today at an article published Sunday in a Dallas newspaper which said Mrs. Montgomery had been judged competent.

"I wonder if it's even necessary to have this hearing," Ryan asked the half-empty courtroom.

He called defense lawyers and prosecutors, who are under a gag order, to his chambers prior to the trial's resumption in early afternoon.

The defense unexpectedly announced last Monday when jury selection began that Mrs. Montgomery, 30, would admit to the slaying but would argue that self-defense would be the issue.

Dr. Maurice S. Green, who said he has counseled Mrs. Montgomery since Sept. 2, testified she suffered a "dissociative reaction" to the slaying on Friday, June 13, at Mrs. Gore's home in Wylie.

Mrs. Montgomery "was aware she was hacking Betty Gore to death," he testified, but "everything seemed to be in slow motion ... almost like she was a spectator. ... At the present time, she still has some of the symptoms."

Green also said, however, a dissociative reaction is "not that unusual."

To convict Mrs. Montgomery, jurors would have to find she "knowingly and intentionally" killed her 30-year-old friend.

The petite, bespectacled defendant related a grisly tale of the slaying when she testified in her own defense Thursday.

Mrs. Montgomery said she twice tried to escape as the two women struggled and slid in pools of blood, but Mrs. Gore slammed her against a door to the outside.

Finally, Mrs. Montgomery gained control of the weapon and repeatedly struck Mrs. Gore — a fellow church choir member — on the head. The victim fell to the floor of the utility room and the defendant said: "I hit her and I hit her and I hit her and I hit her."

"I remember being so angry at her because she was messing up my life. And I remember being so afraid she would get back up again," she said.

In addition, he began a new quarterly physical fitness test, consisting of a 1.5 mile run, push-ups and sit-ups.

"I'M VERY PLEASED with the physical training program. Men over 60 are exempt, and men with any type of physical impairment where the doctor says it would be harmful are exempt," said Smith.

"That affects five or six people on my staff. Out of the rest of the men, we just lack a few having all of them qualified, and we've lost four or five men over the year as a result of this program."

"The programs I feel best about ...are the training programs."

Deputies are assigned on a regular basis to attend seminars at the Department of Public Safety School in Austin, where they receive training in such subjects as investigation, arrest, narcotics, traffic and communication.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Chaffin, left, watch as their wood-frame home is consumed by flames.

the Bureau of Land Management, which had ordered him and his family to clear off the land. The BLM had identified the house as a "trespassing structure" and threatened the Chaffins with jail if they didn't leave.

Family burns down own house

MIDWEST, Wyo. (AP) — As his wife stood by a camera, Gerald Chaffin poured five gallons of gasoline on his two-bedroom house, lit a match and watched 10 years of his life go up in flames.

Chaffin spent six months fighting an eviction order by the federal Bureau of Land Management, which owns the land and said the Chaffins — and their house — had no right to be there.

Chaffin said lawyers told him he had no case and after finding out that it would be impossible to move the home, he decided a fire was the only solution.

"We had to get it down some way," said Chaffin, 38, who runs a backhoe service.

Chaffin said he had dug an airtight hole to bury a whole house. "I'm very, very bitter," said Barbara Chaffin, 37, who took pictures of the house-burning Sunday.

The couple and their four children have a new home in an apartment they own in nearby Edgerton. Both communities are about 25 miles north of Casper in east-central Wyoming.

Chaffin said he bought the house 10 years ago from an oil company for $500. The house sat on land that the federal government was leasing to the company for oil drilling rights.

Chaffin said the company told him it would be all right to stay in the house, which had served for 37 years as lodging for oil workers.

Chaffin said he put $15,000 worth of improvements into the home, laying carpets, making cabinets and putting in new wiring.

The Bureau of Land Management identified the house in 1977 as one of the structures in the area that were "trespassing" under a 1976 law.

Robert Wilber, BLM district manager, said the Chaffin home was a low-priority matter that his agency "didn't get around to" until this spring.

Bureau officials said it was "common knowledge" that the house was on the "trespassing" list and Chaffin should have known.

Chaffin said he made unsuccessful appeals to bureau offices in Cheyenne, Denver and Washington.

"Why didn't somebody say something?" is what I asked the BLM," Chaffin said. "They didn't give me an answer."

$1,500 in oxygen equipment stolen

Midland police are investigating a $1,500 theft from Bill Smith Pumping Unit.

Smith, who met officers at the Bill Smith Service Yard at 2000 Rankin Highway, told officers he left the yard about 7 p.m. Saturday and locked the gate. He returned around 12:10 p.m. Sunday and discovered the chain and lock on the gate had been cut.

After making an inventory of the yard, it was reported that two oxygen regulators with gauges, two torches, two 50-foot oxygen and acetylene hoses, an oxygen bottle and an acetylene bottle were missing.

School trustees to hear reports on SAT and ACT

Test results from the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) and the American College Testing (ACT) program will be reported to school trustees during their Tuesday meeting.

Other school district items will be discussed at 1:30 p.m. in the school administration's Board Room on 702 N. N St.

Scores from the SAT is a predictive index which indicates how well a student might perform during the first year in college. The 2½-hour test measures verbal and mathematical abilities.

The ACT results cover subjects in English, mathematics, social studies and natural sciences. These tests measure a student's overall educational development and ability to perform college-level work.

Trustees will hear another report regarding membership, attendance and enrollment projections as well as elementary school plant utilization.

In other actions, the district will choose its textbook committee, which is responsible for selecting textbooks for all school levels.

Health courses in the district's secondary schools will be considered for grade points. In the past, health was taught as a part of physical education courses.

However, the state has required that health be taught as a separate course.

Gifts to the school district by the Midland Freshman and Jane Long Elementary Parent-Teacher Associations will be presented to trustees during the meeting.

More good financial news regarding football game receipts is expected. So far, the district has been pulling in a large amount in proceeds from Midland High School and Lee High School football games.

Following routine matters, trustees will go into executive session to discuss subjects relating to real estate, legal or personnel matters.

Productivity rose in third quarter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The productivity of the U.S. economy reversed a string of six quarterly declines to post a 1.4 percent annual rate of increase in the third quarter, the government reported today. It was the largest rise in two years.

The rise in productivity, which has a major impact on inflation, was the first in the private business sector since the fourth quarter of 1978, the Labor Department said.

Productivity gains in the third quarter were even larger when agriculture was excluded. Non-farm businesses showed a quarterly increase at a 2.6 percent annual rate, the first rise in three quarters and the largest in three years.

Productivity for the entire private business sector declined at a 2.7 percent annual rate in the second quarter, while productivity for the non-farm business sector fell at a 3.7 percent annual rate.

Productivity measures how many goods and services are produced in one hour of paid working time. As the productivity rate rises, businesses can offset higher labor costs from increased production, and the savings can help stabilize prices at the retail level.

The government said the increased productivity in the third quarter helped hold unit labor costs to an annual rise of 6.8 percent in the third quarter, much less than the 15.1 percent rise in the second quarter and the smallest increase in two years. For the non-farm sector unit labor costs rose by only 5.7 percent on an annual basis, the smallest rise since the second quarter of 1978.

The government said output increased by 0.3 percent in the third quarter, while paid working hours declined by 1.1 percent to account for the productivity increase.

In the manufacturing sector, however, productivity declined at a 2.7 percent annual rate, with both output and hours down sharply because of the recession.

The goldfish bowl

A lot of questions were being asked recently about the intent of the Iranians in taking up the hostage issue when they did, about a week prior to the American presidential election.

The hostage situation rocked along for months with virtually no developments, nothing significant from the American point of view at least. Then last week all that changed. Developments began to take place at a break-neck pace.

That made it tough on some individuals, particularly editorial writers whose work, completed yesterday, might well be ancient history today. In fact, when you read this it may be obsolete.

Are the Iranians trying to influence the outcome of the presidential election? Many have speculated on that possibility; most confess they do not know. But sneaking suspicions continue.

A decision in the hostage situation certainly could alter things for President Jimmy Carter and Republican nominee Ronald Reagan, the two leading presidential candidates. Their fates could depend on the action, if any, of the Iranian parliament. Their fates also could depend on a resumption of the inaction witnessed during the past year.

Why take up the hostage issue now? Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger offered the opinion last week that the hostages have served their purpose for the Iranians. Kissinger would not speculate whether the hostages would be freed prior to the Nov. 4 election, but did note he thinks they'll be released "in the relatively near future."

Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai said the timing of action on the hostage issue had "nothing to do with November or the American election." Well, believe that if you will. We probably all should be naive.

The harsh reality is that none of us can really say with confidence what prompted the Iranians to take up the hostage issue at this late hour. Most Americans have learned in the past year not to predict actions of the Iranians with any degree of confidence.

Why now? That's something we may never know.

But it really doesn't give one much confidence in the ability of Americans to determine their own destinies.

This really seems to be transforming into a goldfish bowl world we live in. Those of us on the inside looking out don't feel real comfortable about it.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Congressmen flare over subpoena service

WASHINGTON — The ABSCAM trials, which will resume shortly after Election Day, have already established the FBI's phony Arab caper as the biggest — and most controversial — congressional scandal in history.

Two members of Congress — Reps. Michael "Ozzie" Myers, D-Pa., and John Jenrette, D-S.C. — have already been convicted. Four others have been indicted and are awaiting trial. In addition, another congressman and a senator have been implicated in the ABSCAM operation, but not indicted.

The evidence provided by hidden FBI cameras proved persuasive to the first two ABSCAM juries. Whether the FBI's debatable tactics will stand up on appeal remains to be settled.

But while their courtroom fate is in the hands of judges and juries, there is one arena where well-tended friendships can be vital to congressmen caught in the FBI's trap. If, despite their soiled status, they manage to win re-election, it is their House colleagues who will decide whether they shall be allowed to retain their seats in the event of conviction.

Myers couldn't persuade his fellow representatives to let him stay in the House during the appeal process; he may make out better if his constituents vote to send him back next week. Meanwhile, another Pennsylvania Democrat, Rep. Raymond Lederer, may already have offended some of the colleagues whose support he'll need if his ABSCAM trial turns out badly next January.

Lederer's case is not as blatant as some, but the videotape evidence is still damaging. The still-secret tapes show Lederer accepting $50,000 from undercover agents after promising to help their fictitious Arab client with his supposed immigration problems. "I'm no Boy Scout," Lederer quipped to the G-men as he took the swag.

The indictment charges that Lederer later split the money with a middleman, a Philadelphia city councilman and the mayor of Camden, keeping at least $5,000 for his share.

Jack Anderson

The congressman listed the sum on his financial disclosure form as a "consulting fee."

Last month, Lederer's attorney had subpoenas issued for 14 members of Congress to testify at the upcoming trial. But according to reliable sources, the process server assigned to distribute the summonses got carried away by the spirit of ABSCAM and conducted his own modest "sting."

The process server showed up at the office of House Judiciary Committee Chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J., claiming to be a relative of Lederer. Out of courtesy to a colleague's kin, Rodino came out of his office to meet the man — and was slapped with a subpoena instead.

Rodino was reportedly furious at this uncalculated subterfuge, and let Lederer know it. So, I am told, did several other congressmen who were served in the same sneaky fashion. Shortly afterwards, most of the subpoenas were withdrawn.

Lederer acknowledged to my associate Gary Cohn that his attorney had subpoenaed several House members to testify as defense witnesses, but insisted they were all served in a "legal, upright, straightforward" manner.

SITTING DUCKS: Earlier this month I reported that unarmed American reconnaissance planes have been menaced at least seven times in recent months by trigger-happy Libyan jet pilots in international air space over the Mediterranean.

CHARLIE REESE

Political internationalism threatens sovereign nations

Charlie Reese

At the tail end of the one and only presidential debate Rep. John Anderson said he wished there had been more time to discuss really important issues like nationalism versus internationalism.

Anderson is right. It is an important issue. He deserves credit, too, for being the first candidate in recent memory who was willing to bring it up.

You see, there are many people in our government, including president Carter, and many people of influence out of government, who believe that sovereign, independent nations are obsolete.

Anderson and over 100 other Congressmen and Senators, for example, endorsed the Declaration of Interdependence in 1976. This document, written by Henry Steele Commager, expresses the ideas and ideals of those who believe some form of world government is desirable.

I disagree with them. I think most Americans will, too, if they understand what's at stake. Political internationalism is really the brainchild of international business. That should come as no surprise. If you have a business operating in 50 different countries, you might easily come to desire some uniformity in laws and currencies.

The catch is that what is convenient for big business is not necessarily good for the American people. The internationalists have done a slick selling job, but they have not been exactly honest about it. They have tried to create the impression that war is a result of nationalism and that "modern" conditions require interdependence.

That is very expensive baloney. Some wars are the result of intense nationalism, but some of the worst wars are the result of internationalism. The Soviet Union, for example, is not nationalistic, but internationalist in its ideology. It is more often the clash of international empires, rather than nations, which causes war. Both world wars, for example, were empire conflicts.

As for such matters as science, trade, and cultural exchanges, all of those things can be conducted, as they have been for the past 200 years in our case, without sacrificing our independence. Sovereign, independent nations, like individuals, can form advantageous associations for mutually advantageous purposes without merging their governments.

That is not enough for the internationalists. They know the American people will never willingly give up their independence and their constitution so they have been trying to suck it away surreptitiously by treaty and agreements.

The major vehicle has been the United Nations. In the United Nations charter, machinery exists for a world government backed up by a United Nations army. What has prevented it from happening has been the conflict between East and West.

In the meantime, there has been an incessant din of propaganda attempting to discredit the concept of nationalism and to promote the concept of internationalism.

Before you get carried away by idealism, you might ask the people of Katanga, the Congolese province which attempted to declare its independence, how it is to live under the rule of the United Nations.

I simply don't believe any thinking American would willingly give up the Bill of Rights for the United Nation's Declaration of Rights.

Finally, Americans must always remember the essence of government, national or international, is force. As Mao said, the power of government comes out of the barrel of a gun.

There will never be an effective world government until there is a world army to enforce its laws and, here again, I don't believe the American people would care to place themselves under the tender loving protection of a foreign army even if it were wearing United Nations arm bands.

Whenever you hear a politician, or anybody else, speak of a new economic order, interdependence, or world government, just remember that they are talking about scrapping your constitution and your independence and putting you under a foreign gun.

INSIDE REPORT

Iran holds the 'hole card' for Carter in Texas balloting

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WACO, Texas — The spectacle of Jimmy Carter barnstorming through the South two weeks before the election as foe of big government and defender of the oil industry reveals that campaign manager Hamilton Jordan's victory plan is off schedule, with time running out.

The president's men are still genuinely confident that, thanks to the return of Democratic voters and hopefully a break in the Iranian hostage situation, they will be on top Nov. 4. But they privately admit they had expected to be moving well ahead by now, with undecided voters flooding to Carter. The source of the shortfall is easily identified: the president's deteriorating Southern base.

Carter this election could not rely on a solid South, as in 1976, while concentrating on big Northern industrial states. Ronald Reagan leads in four Southern states and is no worse than even in four more. As Carter campaigned in Texas, the Democratic politicians who greeted him confided that Reagan has a clear lead for this state's 26 electoral votes.

The president's Southern chickens are coming home to roost. After voting in 1976 for a fellow Southerner they believed shared their ideals, rural white Southerners feel betrayed. In Texas and Louisiana, not only big oil moguls but small royalty owners were incensed by Carter's windfall profits tax.

No politician can abruptly alter his tone more easily than Jimmy Carter. In the oil-producing states, the windfall tax whose passage he boasts of so much elsewhere goes unmentioned. It is as if Carter's greatest energy triumph had been repealed mysteriously.

In two days of oil-state campaigning, he referred to the tax just once (without the pejorative "windfall" description): his speech to an airport rally in Waco began by promising next year to "eliminate the tax on the small royalty owners of Texas and Oklahoma and Louisiana." Here, at Beaumont and in New Orleans, he congratulated himself for oil decontrol — a feat never mentioned by the president elsewhere.

The familiar theme of branding Reagan a nuclear-happy warmonger is muted in the hawkish South, where the president claimed he had restored the nation's defenses, which actually are considered by non-partisan experts to be in deplorable condition. Carter improbably took credit for the Trident missile, the air-launched cruise missile and the new battle tank and armored personnel carrier. Even more improbably, Carter declared: "Defenses were weakened under Republicans, but under Democrats we're putting (sic) our nation strong."

Everywhere, Carter stressed his credentials as a Southern conservative. "I'm from the Deep South, from Georgia," he said in Beaumont. "My philosophy in government is probably about the same as yours. I don't believe ... that government ought to stick its nose in the minds and hearts and jobs of people in the private enterprise system."

But two weeks from Election Day may be too late to keep Carter's Southern chickens away. The deaf ear the president turned to pleas from Texas Democratic leaders to stop scapegoating the oil industry is well-remembered. In the South especially, Democratic politicians truly dedicated to Carter's re-election are hard to find.

His campaign chairman in Louisiana, former Gov. Edwin Edwards, has assaulted Carter's energy policy and not concealed personal contempt for the president. Introducing Carter at a fund-raiser in New Orleans, Edwards could not resist calling the president "a little hard-headed." The $500-a-plate dinners were there for Edwards, not Carter.

Carter's men are counting on Edwards to carry Louisiana, but insiders say he is just going through the motions to mend fences for a run at governor in 1983. The wily Sen. Russell B. Long believes Carter's organization is inadequate to carry the state, and not enough time remains to build one.

The organizational problem is even worse in Texas, where the Republican Party figures to turn out all Reagan voters. The same cannot be said for the Democrats. Although defections by local Democratic politicians are rare, so are aggressive efforts to turn out voters.

If the president cannot be re-elected without carrying Texas and if prospects look grim in Texas, why then are Carter's men smiling? They are looking for Iran's release of the hostages to blot out poor organization, inadequate dedication and nearly four years of resentment. The decision of a religious fanatic in Central Asia is counted on to save Jimmy Carter's presidency from the revolt of his fellow Southerners.

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

On Nov. 5 we'll be so eager to forget about the election that all of us will gladly turn our thoughts to significant matters — like "J.R." Remember him?

Compared to the candidates, all of a sudden he seems like a nice guy.

According to Carter, Reagan shot him.

Reagan said he didn't shoot J.R. but that he would like to be armed in case he had to.

Carter said you can't go around shooting every scoundrel who comes along and that if Reagan had been president, he would have shot not only J.R. but also Frank Smith on "General Hospital" and Asa Buchanan on "One Life to Live."

I hate to reduce these serious matters to the simplistic dictates of television, but the candidates themselves do, so why shouldn't we?

Indian nails self to cross in protest

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — A Miwok Indian who nailed and wired himself to a cross and stood on an attached platform for four hours to protest destruction of 5,000-year-old burial grounds says the experience was not painful.

"It doesn't even hurt," said Jonathan LeDeux, 49, of San Leandro. "There wasn't even enough blood to drip off my hand."

As about three dozen people, including six policemen, watched on Sunday, LeDeux drove a sterilized, 16-penny nail through his left palm into a wooden cross, tied his other hand to the cross with barbed wire and stood on the platform.

LeDeux, also known as Swift Turtle, said his spiritual beliefs kept the pain away. He described himself as a healer and said he has studied with a shaman — a priest or medicine man — at Yosemite National Park.

The tribal burial ground was discovered several months ago on 17 acres in Stockton when utility company crews began laying cables for a residential construction project. The Miwok tribe and other groups failed in legal attempts to stop construction, officials said.

James Deitz, an archaeologist at the University of California, called the area "a major cemetery site." It was reported that 1,500 skeletons, some 5,000 years old, had been found.

Community Construction Co. of Bakersfield was working on the site, according to Ruth Copenhaver of Stockton, a member of Friends of Early Horizon, which is fighting to preserve the burial ground.

Company officials could not immediately be reached for comment.

The Miwok tribe originally was based near Stockton, but most Miwoks now live north of Stockton, Mrs. Copenhaver said. She said she did not know how many members the tribe had.

Feisty woman, 72, can't foil robbery

DALLAS (AP) — A feisty 72-year-old Dallas church employee who is missing one leg and gets around by wheelchair wasn't able to fight off three gunmen who robbed her church — this time.

Aida La Belle managed to fight off three knife-wielding robbers last November by hitting them over the head with a frying pan and faking a heart attack.

But she was shoved into a utility closet with another priest in the Catholic church by three gunmen Saturday, and the robbers escaped with the pastor's wallet and car keys.

"That gun was a little bit too close to my head, and the two men were big," Miss La Belle said. "They said they were going to shoot my head off. I've lived through enough of these things. I don't know if the next time is going to be the charm to do me in or not."

The two men and one teen-ager surprised 82-year-old Monsignor John Brady when he returned to the church and tied him up, after having locked Miss La Belle in the closet.

The men had accosted her in the rectory kitchen and demanded money, locking her up when she told them money was not kept in the rectory. The men rifled through the church office, freed Miss La Belle, and left.

After being shoved in the closet, she said she was "so frightened for the monsignor because he didn't know they had a gun. I was afraid he would be hurt."

She said the robbery was the fifth in two years.

"I just wish they'd quit coming when I have so much work to do," she said.

Brady punched one of the assailants during the November robbery, but was taken completely by surprise Saturday.

Last year, Miss La Belle charged out of the church kitchen and attacked a robber with a frying pan. She then faked a heart attack when one of the men pulled off her artificial leg while he was yanking her out of her wheelchair by the hair.

Tremor shakes El Centro

EL CENTRO, Calif. (AP) — An earthquake measuring 3.8 on the Richter scale jolted the U.S.-Mexico border area Sunday, but the mild tremor caused only minor damage, Imperial County authorities said.

No injuries were reported.

Seismologists at California Institute of Technology in Los Angeles said the tremor was the strongest since the Oct. 15, 1979 jolt that injured 100 people and caused $18 million in damage in the area.

The 12:56 p.m. tremor was centered six miles southwest of Mexicali, Mexico, the Cal Tech scientists said.

The quake came about four hours after a 60-pound dynamite charge was exploded in downtown El Centro in an unsuccessful attempt to demolish the five-story county administration building which was badly damaged in last year's quake.

Two dynamite blasts failed to bring down the condemned building. A crane with a wrecking ball will be used to complete demolition.

'Wolf packs' hit Philadelphians

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The city is taking steps to halt a growing number of attacks and robberies by "wolf packs" — gangs of marauding youths who roam through crowds, single out their victims and assault them, police officials say.

Teen-agers, sometimes two dozen or more, assault pedestrians and transit riders and take jewelry, pocketbooks and other valuables, police say.

Last week, Police Commissioner Morton Solomon took steps to curb the problem, primarily increased undercover surveillance.

"What we're doing is to assign extra plainclothes policemen in the Center City area — people who can blend into the scene, so to speak," said Don Fair, spokesman for Solomon.

Last Wednesday, 17-year-old Patricia Hart was on her way to her waitress job during a World Series victory celebration when she was attacked by 25 young men and women who stole her purse and ripped gold chains from her neck.

"I was walking alone," she said. "My coat was closed. I don't how they knew I had chains. There were about 22 boys and three girls. As they passed me, one of the girls pointed at me.

"I got scared. ... They came after me and started punching me — all of them. They knocked me down and started to kick me while I was down. They grabbed my handbag and tore the chains from my neck."

Doctors said Miss Hart suffered a broken nose. Several arrests were made after Wednesday's celebration. One youth was wearing one of Miss Hart's chains and had others in his pocket.

Two weeks ago, when a downtown fall festival drew thousands to Benjamin Franklin Parkway, a gang roamed through the crowd, breaking into smaller packs to attack at random.

"Every person in front of them they mowed down," one officer said. "Some of them got robbed. But they all got knocked down."

At its height, the mob numbered 250, police said. Most of them appeared to be in their mid-teens. Seven people, aged 15 to 21, were arrested.

Atlanta's grim search involves thousands of city's citizens

ATLANTA (AP) — This city's crusade to find its missing children and punish whoever killed 10 black youngsters is quite unlike the tracking down of a Son of Sam killer or a Hillside Strangler.

Such inquiries usually are left to the police. Here it is a community project, involving thousands.

A second major search for bodies or evidence Saturday was joined by 3,000 men, women and children who scoured a neighborhood where two boys, among four still missing, were last seen. Unlike the previous weekend, when a girl's body was found, the search turned up nothing.

The searchers will try again this Saturday. And this time, the location of the search will not be divulged until volunteers are bused to the site, said City Councilman Arthur Langford. He said the added volunteers will allow searches of more than one area.

There is much more to the effort than the weekend searches.

Pictures of the four missing boys — three age 10 and one age 11 — smile from leaflets distributed throughout the city, along with a flyer for youngsters which shows a sinister figure lurking in the shadows and warns, "Beware the stranger."

And Police Chief George Napper went before the 57,000 fans at the Atlanta Falcons-Los Angeles Rams football game Sunday to stress caution for children, already subject to an overnight curfew.

Despite these efforts and a reward fund of over $100,000, police Sunday seemed no closer to solving the killings and disappearances.

"We continue to get a lot of leads but there is nothing new at this point," Napper said.

Meanwhile, a New Jersey housewife who claims psychic powers has returned home after spending Tuesday through Saturday in Atlanta sharing revelations about the case with police.

Mrs. Dorothy Allison, 55, said in a telephone interview from Nutley that she resented critics who accused her of seeking publicity to sell her book. She said others expected results too soon.

"I've never seen it fail," she said. "A policeman can have a case that isn't solved for two years, but the minute I get in on the case, they want the killer, body and scene solved right away, like instant potatoes."

But Mrs. Allison said she will return to Atlanta.

"Your case is a biggie," she told the Atlanta Constitution. "It needs help. You tell him (the killer or killers) I'm coming right back. I'm not running out on anything."

Often in a string of homicides, there is some kind of a link, a motive or a mode of death. In New York, the Son of Sam killer generally used a .44-caliber pistol. Southern California's Hillside Strangler picked young women as his victims.

Psychic points way to body of youth missing three months

DALLAS (AP) — Diantha Dickens almost had despaired of learning what had happened to her 18-year-old son, only to have a man claiming psychic powers confirm her worst fears and point police to the youth's body.

Enis police detective Ron Roark and two other detectives found Michael Dickens' decomposed body Sunday under a pile of brush and shrubbery at a site John Catchings, a Dallas man who says he has psychic powers, described in detail a few days earlier.

"I'll say this, we went right to the body within 10 to 15 minutes of the time we got there," Roark said Sunday. "He (Catchings) told us we would find a shoe first and we did. We found a pile of tires and boards and everything and then I located a foot."

The detectives found the young electrician's body in an area volunteers had searched repeatedly since he disappeared Aug. 1.

"From several days after Mike's disappearance, I had a very strong feeling he was dead," Mrs. Dickens said. "At least now we know."

A friend told her to call Catchings and, when she did, he told her her son was dead, she said.

"He just said very calmly, 'I get very bed feelings about this. I think your son has been killed,'" she said. "He told us exactly where to go to find the body and he said Detective Roark would be the one to find it. And he did."

Catchings, who has aided several police investigations, said he learned late Sunday that he was right.

"It's not really what you'd like to be congratulated for. You want to be objective and give somebody hope ... But the vibrations I had were very strong from the beginning that he was dead."

Dickens left for his job at Ferguson's Electrical Shop in Ennis about 7:15 a.m. the day he disappeared.

Pope disappoints Catholic bishops

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II's reaffirmation of traditional Roman Catholic teachings on birth control and divorce without any hint that they are open to discussion has disappointed bishops calling for a new look at the issues.

"Even before he sits down to study the proposals, he's pre-empting the field," said one high-ranking Rome-based priest who asked not to be identified. "A cynic would say you didn't need the synod for that. Some of the bishops are pretty disappointed."

The 216 bishops who ended their month-long closed meeting Saturday reaffirmed the church's ban on contraception but asked for what one bishop called a "more compassionate approach" to Catholics who defy the ban, and what another called "a much deeper study of sexuality."

The synod, which presented a secret document of 43 proposals to the pope for his consideration, also reaffirmed the church's ban on divorce but asked for a "new and far-reaching study" to consider allowing divorced Catholics who remarry to receive communion.

The pontiff is not bound by the proposals and is free to ignore any or all of them. At a Mass in the Sistine Chapel at the close of the synod, he said divorced Catholics who remarry can receive the sacraments only if they agree to abstain from sexual relations and live together as brother and sister, restating the traditional church stand.

That constituted disapproval of the bishops' recommendation on divorced Catholics, said Archbishop John R. Quinn of San Francisco, who as head of the U.S. delegation to the synod was one of the chief advocates for new approaches to the issues.

John Paul also rejected the idea put forward by several bishops that the church ban on birth control is an ideal toward which people must work rather than a doctrine which all Catholics must accept immediately.

"There is not a question of a desire of keeping the law merely as an ideal to be achieved in the future, but rather of the mandate of Christ the Lord that difficulties constantly be overcome," the pope told the bishops during the Mass.

"He's going against the idea that 'Humanae Vitae' (Pope Paul VI's 1968 encyclical reaffirming the church's ban on contraception) is an ideal that you're working toward," the Rome-based priest said.

The pope also praised the "dignity" of woman's role "as a wife and as a mother" and said the bishops said "human society should be constituted so that women are not forced to engage in external work."

However, in their eight-page "Message to Christian Families," the only public document issued by the synod, the bishops said, "Husband and wife are certainly different, but are also equal." The message called on the church to "defend the dignity and rights of women."

Several bishops said the published message was bland and complained that none of the substantive proposals made by the bishops were made public.

"We are profoundly disappointed with this message," Cardinal Gerald Emmet Carter, the archbishop of Toronto, told reporters.

"The message is a great disappointment, especially because it is the only external image of the synod," said Cardinal Vincent Enrique y Taranco, the archbishop of Spain. "I don't understand why the proposals must remain secret. The message has no force, no guts."

'Leper Priest'

Ken Howard stars in a dramatization based on the true story of a 19th-century Catholic priest who risked his life when he moved to the Hawaiian island of Molokai in an effort to bring comfort and some happiness to the lives of the exiled lepers living there. The disease took his own life 15 years later.

The compelling two-hour movie, "Father Damien: The Leper Priest," will be broadcast today on NBC, Channel 2.

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AJ2 ♥K107642 ♦6 ♣KQ6
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
 2 ♠ Pass 3 ♦ Pass

What action do you take?
 A.—North's rebid should sound an alarm of the first magnitude. He probably has a sub-minimum two-over-one response with long diamonds. The hand has all the earmarks of a misfit. Get out of the auction before the opponents start wielding the axe. Pass.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠K5 ♥KQ952 ♦83 ♣K764
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 3 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
 A.—Slam is quite possible, but with no first-round control to show, you cannot be the one to press on recklessly. For the moment, be content with a bid of four clubs. Once partner learns of the double fit, he will become aggressive if his hand is rich with aces.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠85 ♥972 ♦AK73 ♣A874
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♠ 2 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
 A.—For his vulnerable overcall, partner should have a hand that can take about six tricks with hearts as trumps. You have three-card support for partner's probable six-card suit, three top tricks and a potential ruffing value in spades. Surely your hand is worth four tricks to partner. Since six plus four equals ten, bid four hearts.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠A74 ♥A62 ♦J3 ♣QJ1092
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♥ Pass 2 ♥ Pass
 3 ♦ Pass 3 ♠ Pass
 4 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Make no mistake about it—you are headed for slam. It is simply a question of whether you are going to play a small or a grand slam. For a grand, you must find partner with exactly the right holding. Nothing you can do at this moment will elicit that information, so simply continue to describe your hand with a cue-bid of four spades.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠873 ♥Q92 ♦QJ872 ♣A6
 Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
 A.—In theory, your hand is worth 11 points in support of hearts, so the normal action seems to be a two diamond response, followed by a heart raise. With a hand that contains one ace, no king, and only three-card support, however, that series of bids is much too aggressive. A simple raise to two hearts will suffice. If partner cannot move after this encouragement, it's unlikely that game will have been missed.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠Q7 ♥KJ9852 ♦K7 ♣AJ2
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♥ Pass
 4 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
 A.—We're off! There are all sorts of fine, probing bids you can make, but this is one time we would forgo science. We would trot out Blackwood, and should partner show three aces and a king, we would gamble on the grand slam. If partner happens to have the king of clubs instead of the king of spades, we may be forced to rely on a finesse. However, the grand might still be laydown, for A-Q-x of diamonds in partner's hand will give us a parking spot for our losing spade.

Arab official, oil industry sources sound new warning

By ALY MAHMOUD

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The United States would "precipitate a very grave oil situation" and alienate the conservative Persian Gulf states if it tilted the scales in the Iran-Iraq war by supplying Iran with military spare parts, Arab officials and oil industry sources on the Arabian peninsula warn.

Most Arab oil officials ruled out the more oil than they should, only to help the non-communist industrialized nations," he said.

"These governments have been raising their production levels against the wills of their peoples who do not see the United States worthy of assistance or sympathy by the Arabs."

Since the war began Sept. 22, Carter administration officials have maintained a neutral stance but in the past week have labeled the Iraqi attack an invasion and said they oppose the "dismemberment" of Iran. Those statements have led Iraq to charge that Washington is supporting Tehran. Iranian officials, however, charge America is backing Iraq.

As for the possibility of military equipment being sent to Iran, Vice President Walter Mondale said Sunday the administration was not negotiating any deal to exchange the 52 American hostages held in Iran for military equipment. But in an interview on CBS's "Face the Nation," he left open the possibility of delivery of $370 million in U.S. military equipment already bought by Iran if the hostages were freed.

"We would like to see the American hostages released, the Iraqi-Iranian war ended, and stability re-established in Iran," said one official in Bahrain. "But nothing of this should be done at Iraq's expense. The Arabs will not tolerate this."

"No Arab government can condone a U.S.-triggered reverse in the Iran-Iraq war without risking public re-orientation," said an oil industry official of the United Arab Emirates.

In addition to their inborn sympathy for the Iraqis as fellow Arabs, the leaders of the conservative Arab governments on the Arabian peninsula hold anti-Iranian feelings because of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's repeated threats and loud propaganda campaigns to export his Islamic revolution to their countries.

They also reject Tehran's claims to the island state of Bahrain as an Iranian province and they want the return to the UAE of the three tiny islands at the entrance to the gulf which the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi seized to give Iran control of the gulf shipping lanes.

With a market surplus of 2-2.5 million barrels of oil a day before the outbreak of the war, the supply position is not yet bleak and the industrialized countries are said to have enough oil for 100 days, according to sources here.

The oil ministers of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the UAE and Qatar reportedly held a secret meeting in Taif, Saudi Arabia, two weeks ago to discuss increasing oil production.

Saudi Arabia and Kuwait agreed to boost production by about 500,000 barrels of oil a day each while the UAE increased production by 50,000 barrels and Qatar, by 20,000, the sources said.

ENERGY OIL & GAS

possibility of another oil embargo, but they predicted Saudi Arabia and other Arab oil states would call off the production increases they are planning to offset the cutoff in exports from the two warring gulf nations.

"We would reconsider our oil production policy, with a view to exporting just enough of it to meet our financial needs for economic development, and not in any way to help those who deliberately hurt us," said an official in Kuwait.

Another high-ranking Arab official who refused to be identified said the Arab gulf oil states would be "intolerably offended" if Washington helped non-Arab Iran against Arab Iraq.

"Anti-American feelings already are brewing in the gulf region, with some Arab governments producing secretly on Sept. 18 with Saudi Arabia's oil minister in the culmination of what the newspaper says some government officials call a "bizarre episode in energy policy-making."

At issue, the newspaper says, was the acquisition of 2 million barrels of oil for the U.S. Strategic Petroleum Reserve, the stockpile designed to help the country withstand a long disruption of oil imports.

Congress had ordered the government to add 36.5 million barrels of oil to the reserve during the fiscal year that began Oct. 1. The Wall Street Journal says Duncan won the "grudging acquiescence" of the Saudis in the resumed stockpiling. The newspaper also quotes unnamed officials as saying Duncan promised that acquisition of foreign oil for the reserve would not begin until after a Sept. 15-17 meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, during which the Saudis were supposed to follow through on their plan to reduce oil production.

During the early part of September, the newspaper says, the administration was criticized for failing to move more quickly to fill the reserve. The Journal says Duncan was told that the Pentagon agency that acts as the purchasing agent for the reserve "seemed to be dragging its feet."

Actually, the Journal says, Duncan was misinformed.

"But at some point only days before the OPEC meeting... the department got word from the Pentagon that oil had been lined up," the Journal says.

There was concern among officials that the timing of the acquisition would make it look like the United States was in the world market, buying oil to stockpile, the Journal says. There also was concern that OPEC might take some retaliatory action or blame an oil-price increase on the U.S. action. "That, it was feared, could jeopardize President Carter's re-election campaign," the Journal says.

After the OPEC meeting, Duncan flew to Geneva and met with Sheik Ahmed Yamani, the Saudi oil minister, to explain the acquisition to him, the Journal says, adding that Duncan and Yamani "discussed the status of the strategic-reserve program, apparently without raising the hackles of the sheik."

Secret Saudi meeting told

Contest no help to city

By The Associated Press

A contest to see which of 11 communities could save the most energy turned into a festival of sorts, with community suppers and energy fairs in some places, but in at least one town officials say it did not save much power.

"Even with our best efforts, we probably used the same amount of energy as last week, or even more because of the cold," said Kenneth Sunderland, a selectman in Plymouth, N.H.

He said the central New Hampshire community may have pared its electric use by 3.3 percent.

The contest, sponsored by the Northeast International Committee on Energy, began at 12:01 a.m. Thursday and ended at noon Saturday. The figures on electric use in the 11 competing communities in the United States and Canada were to be reviewed today in Montreal.

Energy use figures were to be compared with those from the week before, with temperature changes taken into account. Prizes were also to be awarded for the best energy fairs and educational programs.

Israelis sending guards to Europe

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Fourteen former Israeli soldiers are to begin guarding Jewish schools in West Germany and Switzerland Nov. 1, a spokesman here for a member of the Israeli Parliament said Sunday.

Swiss officials said they had not been informed of the plan and thought it would be incompatible with Swiss law. There was no immediate comment from Bonn, but West German authorities reportedly harbored "mixed feelings" about the plan.

The self-defense measure was first announced by Samuel Flatto-Sharon, a member of the Israeli Knesset, or Parliament, after an attack on a Paris synagogue and other anti-Jewish activities in France this month.

Zvi Wilder, a spokesman here for Sharon, said the schools to be protected in West Germany are in West Berlin, Frankfurt and Munich. The Swiss schools are in Zurich and Geneva, he said.

He said 50 men were selected from 400 applicants to protect Jewish schools in Western Europe. Six will be stationed in West Germany for an initial six months and eight in Switzerland, he said.

In Bern, Ulrich Hubacher, spokesman for the Swiss Ministry of Justice and Police, said Sunday that Flatto-Sharon had not informed the government of his plan but it was "incompatible with Swiss law."

"We do not think it will be possible for Israeli soldiers to make such a protection on Swiss territory. Switzerland is responsible for the safety of persons in this country."

There was no immediate comment from Bonn. But Wilder said West German authorities had "mixed feeling" about the plan. They argued that police were responsible for security in the country.

"But like the neo-Fascists operate within the law — with few exceptions — we shall also respect the law when guarding our children," Wilder told The Associated Press.

Hubacher said there was no neo-Nazi violence this year in Switzerland.

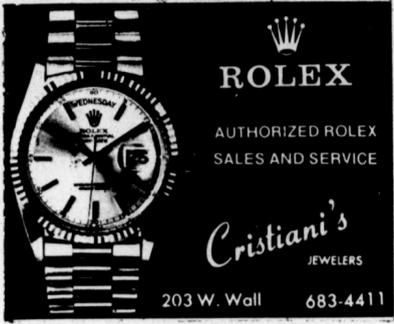

Neo-Nazis have claimed responsibility for several attacks in West Germany this year including the bombing of the Munich Oktoberfest last month which killed 14 tourists, and an August firebomb attack on a Hamburg refugee asylum where two Vietnamese were killed. There was no evidence either attack was specifically aimed at Jews.

Bypass survival rate high

BOSTON (AP) — The survival rate for heart patients who undergo coronary bypass surgery is about 96 percent — a rate higher than earlier estimates, according to a scientific survey.

The study examined the survival rate of 1,172 coronary bypass patients for five years after their operations, according to an article published today in the New England Journal of Medicine.

London photographer Peter Bird rows back to the shores of Camalu, Mexico on the Baja California coast Thursday, after he was forced to return to shore after taking water through sprung hatches in gale-tossed seas. (AP Laserphoto)

Solo rower safe in Baja

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — London photographer Peter Bird, who has pledged to row 8,500 miles across the Pacific alone or die trying, has turned up safe in Baja California, his boat awash with gale-driven water that came in through sprung hatches.

His sponsor, Kenneth Crutchlow, reported Sunday that the British adventurer hoped to resume his voyage to Australia after making repairs, estimated to take about 10 days.

"He said he was glad to see us, after sitting on that boat for three days. He was fed up with waiting," Crutchlow said.

Bird came ashore Thursday at Camalu, a village about 80 miles south of Ensenada, but couldn't find a telephone. The town is about 150 miles south of San Diego.

Crutchlow, in a small search plane, spotted the 33-year-old Bird on Saturday. Bird left from San Francisco Bay Oct. 1 in his 35-foot "Britannia II."

Bird, who rowed across the Atlantic with a friend in 1974, figured it would take at least a year to make the crossing.

Crutchlow said Bird hit several gales during the 600 miles since he left the Golden Gate and water leaked through the hatches.

Flood fears eased

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — An unexpected sunny day has eased fears of workers watching saturated levees in the San Joaquin Delta for breaks that could lead to more flooding of valuable farmland.

Rain had been forecast Sunday in the delta, where young California Conservation Corps workers are keeping a watch over two large farm tracts that have been inundated since Sept. 26. Officials said rain could further weaken embankments protecting farmland adjacent to the flooded areas.

The floods, the latest of which occurred Thursday, have destroyed millions of dollars in crops and have threatened a pipeline that supplies fresh water to more than a million residents of the east San Francisco Bay area.

Officials said they plan to begin pumping acres of water from the fields today in an effort to reclaim the soaked farmland.

Part of a levee gave way Sept. 26, flooding the 5,700-acre Lower Jones Tract and pushing 15 feet to 20 feet of water against a fragile Santa Fe Railway embankment. As a freight train crossed the embankment early Thursday, the embankment gave way, sending water pouring into the 6,300-acre Upper Jones Tract.

"Conservation Corps crews are keeping a 24-hour patrol," said Donald Neudeck, chief of flood operations for the state Department of Water Resources. "It's been real quiet all over. We're going to watch that situation until we think it's stabilized."

Close to 200 people fled their homes in the wake of the flooding. No injuries were reported.

Pumps had been installed before the embankment rupture, and Neudeck said workers hoped to have them operating later today.

SECTION B

Should premature babies be kept on life support systems?

BALTIMORE (AP) — Born premature. Weight: 2 pounds, 8 ounces. At age one day, suffers massive brain hemorrhage.

It was clear. The baby almost certainly would not survive. And if he should somehow cling to life, the child stood an excellent chance of being severely retarded.

Within moments of birth, the boy was placed on a respirator in a Maryland neo-natal care unit; nurses monitored his every breath.

On the 13th day, the baby twice suffered heart attacks. Twice he was revived. Doctors met, talked it over, then went to the parents.

Together the parents and physicians decided that should the boy suffer another seizure, no further treatment would be given. He would be allowed to die.

One day later, he did.

Five months later, a psychologist who had guided the parents through their two-week tragedy still meets with the mother, helping her resolve her grief and guilt.

Four months later, the doctors remember, too. They still wonder whether they did all they could, whether they made the right choice.

"I try to stay away from cases like that," said Dr. Ronald Gutberlet, head of the neo-natal care unit at University of Maryland Hospital.

"They can be agonizing. They keep me awake at night...in utter frustration that in spite of all the techniques, all our knowledge and skill, we still can't affect the outcome."

University Hospital is part of a network of six Baltimore hospitals which cooperatively care for premature babies in the region. Last year, they handled 559 children from Maryland, Delaware, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia.

Many babies born too soon can be saved today because of medical breakthroughs. But the costs are phenomenal, and some people question whether the price might not be too high in the cases where only a few extra days of life are wrung from a tiny body or where years of retardation face those who survive.

Dr. Rupla Eshai of Baltimore City Hospitals said it costs from $20,000 to $100,000 to keep a premature baby alive for three to five months.

The room rate in the University Hospital neo-natal unit is $153 per day, excluding medication, lab tests and X-rays.

Most doctors said they don't consider costs. Their priority is to help the baby survive.

But one doctor, who asked not to be identified, said, "In the end, I suppose, costs do come into question."

"Certainly if you have a poor family that is going to be burdened with astronomical hospital bills the rest of the child's life, you think about it. It becomes a factor in determining the course of care."

If it's determined that little more can be done, the course of care is to wean the "preemie" from the life-maintaining machines. Or, as a child deteriorates, he may be allowed to die on his own.

Watching their baby's struggle is traumatic for the parents.

For the doctors, there are no guidelines, no one else to take the blame.

"Sometimes I wish there were criteria. Certainly it would be much easier for me if there were," Gutberlet said. "But I don't think the medical community would ever agree on guidelines. I'm not sure that we should even have guidelines. Each case is different, each has different circumstances. And perhaps having strict criteria would discourage you from trying a new technique, or from developing a new form of treatment."

Ms. Eshai said all decisions about a baby's care "are made with the parents. We explain to them the chances of survival. We explain to them the chances of morbidity."

"Parents are usually very reasonable," she said.

That a child will be retarded is one of the parents' greatest fears. And among very small babies, the chances of retardation are high — in the neighborhood of 30 percent, according to one doctor.

DEAR ABBY

Family affair may cause bad blood

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: After trying for five years to get pregnant, I went to a fertility specialist. He gave me some tests and everything checked out perfectly, so he suggested that my husband take some tests. At first my husband refused, but after much pleading and nagging, he finally consented. He found that his sperm count was very low, which accounted for my inability to conceive.

Now my husband wants me to have an artificial insemination using his brother's sperm. His brother, who has been married less than a year, agreed to be the donor on the condition that absolutely no one except the three of us knows about it. He definitely does not want his wife to know, he says if she's told, she might forbid it. And if we do it without her approval and she finds out later, it might break up their marriage.

Abby, I would feel deceitful and guilty not letting his wife in on these plans. And if she did approve, I'm afraid my brother-in-law might take a special interest in our child, or it might create a special bond between them. And what about the child? Should he be told that his "uncle" is his biological father?

I told my husband I would rather have an anonymous donor from the sperm bank, that way I'd never have to face the father, and I wouldn't feel guilty. My husband says if his brother is the donor, our baby will be a blood relative and seem more like his own.

I am terribly torn. What should I do? CHILDLESS

DEAR CHILDLESS: Don't go along with your husband's scheme unless you feel absolutely comfortable with the idea and have the unconditional approval of the brother's wife.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has heart disease among other things and can walk only a few steps without resting, so his doctor arranged for us to get a "Handicapped" sign for our car.

Abby, you would not believe the number of people who think special parking for the handicapped is only for people in wheelchairs. We have been cursed at, insulted, and on one occasion had garbage thrown at our car for using the special parking space provided for the handicapped.

My husband doesn't appear to be ailing, but believe me, he is a very sick man. Our neighbor, who has had a stroke, says he has had the same problem, so please explain this to your readers.—NO NAME, PLEASE

DNA venture considered

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The Harvard University faculty is considering a proposal to participate in a profit-making bioengineering company, a move that would reduce the school's dependence on income from fund-raising campaigns, a spokeswoman said Sunday.

"The proposal is on the floor for consideration," said Deane Lord, director of the university news office.

Mrs. Lord said she understood that under the plan, Harvard would hold a minority interest in a new genetic engineering firm, providing it with patents held by the university for the development of recombinant DNA, deoxyribonucleic acid, known as the basic building blocks of life.

A successful commercial venture would provide income for the operation of the university, where tuition and room and board for an undergraduate is about $9,000 annually.

Bok asked the faculty to discuss the proper role of academic institutions in commercial ventures and the role of professors who may be diverted from teaching and from research by their connection with such an enterprise.

Pat Walker's deserves a bouquet—they helped me lose 24 pounds!

Becky Hendricks' True Story:

Me, hiding in my oversized raincoat.

It seemed like everyone who came into my family's store asked me if I was putting on weight. That hurt my feelings, but I knew I had gained too much. Although I'm tall (5'10"), I couldn't excuse 164 pounds.

When I saw a newspaper ad for Pat Walker's salon close to my Stockbridge, Georgia home, I went in for a complimentary treatment. From my very first visit, I liked the encouraging attitude of the counselors. They taught me so much about how to eat sensibly, without denying myself my favorite foods.

I really like relaxing on Pat Walker's passive exercise unit, too. Those sessions (2 or 3 times a week) kept my figure smooth and firm while I lost 24 pounds and a total of 30 inches.

Now, everyone compliments me on how good I look. I tell them I couldn't have done it without Pat Walker's.

Make an appointment now for a free, no-obligation consultation at Pat Walker's. We'll explain how our program works, from the no-muss, no-fuss passive exercise treatments to our belief in your right to privacy. HINTS FROM HELOISE

In the Winner's Circle

DEAR READERS:

The fabulous fifties! Happy days are here a gain... but don't look for rewcuts, bobby socks or crinoline petticoats!

These fabulous fifties, the winning hints from my recent national contest, are from fifty fifty people who received a copy of my new book, "Hints From Heloise" (Arbor House).

From time to time over the next few weeks, under the heading, "Fabulous Fifties," you'll be able to see for yourself just how simple, yet practical, these fifty winning hints are.

One of our winners was Beatrice Gaddes from Tennessee, who writes: "When a baby is old enough to eat crackers, buy oyster crackers. They are just the right size for those tiny fingers to pick up one at a time, so there are no messy crumbs. Therefore, saving money, and there is less salt on them. My little niece loves them." See you tomorrow. — Hugs, Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE: Smugness: the feeling you get when you see in print a Heloise Hint you've already discovered! — Peg Wever Conrad

DEAR HELOISE:

I "package" my bedding. One fitted sheet, one top sheet and two pillow cases (one for twin size beds) are all neatly folded and slipped inside each other.

Now, when I grab a set of sheets to change the bed, no hunting for all the "pieces." — Helene Chase

DEAR HELOISE:

My 16-year-old daughter is always amazed at the tidbits of knowledge I possess. Recently, when dressing for a date, she found a snag in her knit pants.

When I quickly remedied the disaster with my trusty crochet needle, she remarked, "I always come to you because you know everything."

Of course, I basked in her praise, but had to confess my wisdom was acquired from Heloise, my wonderful Mom, and a lot of trial and error of my own. — J. McDaniel

Thanks, but maybe you should have let her go on thinking you know it all — kids seem to figure us out soon enough... — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I complained about the fact that the nosepieces on my reading glasses always left dark marks on my nose.

My clever husband gave me the solution. He asked me why I didn't coat the metal nose-pieces with clear fingernail polish.

So I did — it took three coats — and it worked! My only comment was, "Now why didn't I think of that?" — Virginia Rose

DEAR HELOISE:

Many of us, trying to conserve, collect bows from gifts, be it holidays, birthdays, or anniversaries, to be used on other occasions.

But all too often, when the time comes to use those bows again, they are no longer sticky on the bottom, and tape has to be added, or they are all stuck to each other and it takes patience and determination to separate them.

My solution is to cut small squares of waxed paper and stick them to the bottom of each bow.

Then, when it's time to use them again, I just remove the waxed paper and they're ready to go. — Angelia Denny

DEAR HELOISE:

Pleated skirts are back! When traveling to pack one, just cut the foot off an old nylon stocking.

Fold or roll your skirt long-wise and pull it through the stocking, making sure all the pleats are straight.

Upon arrival you'll find your skirt made the trip beautifully. — Mrs. F.B. Sprague

MG factory makes last car, then closes because of losses

ABINGDON, England (AP) — The last MG rolled off the assembly line and into a museum Friday, giving the aerodynamic little sports car an instant touch of the classic status enjoyed by its square-grilled predecessors.

British Leyland shut the plant, saying it was losing $48 million a year. A group of wealthy car fanciers had formed a corporation that took over Aston-Martin and continued production on a limited basis.

Employees at the plant were given layoff payments of between $7,140 and $14,280, depending on length of service.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

New developments are discussed

Dear Dr. Solomon: My first pregnancy ended unsuccessfully in a premature delivery. It was a very unsettling experience for me, and my husband and I have waited two years before deciding to try once more to start a family. Now I am pregnant again. Is there any reason to hope that I will have better luck this time?
— Mrs. C.L.G.

Dear Mrs. G.: I'm not sure I'd call it luck, but there have been some new developments within the past two years. The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) recently approved a new drug — ritodrine — which it describes as "the first and effective drug approved to treat premature labor." It has been used in Europe, mostly in England, for the past 10 years. Premature delivery is probably the single biggest problem in obstetrics today. The cause is unknown and traditional remedies, such as bed rest or the use of sedatives, have not been very effective. In addition, various other drugs that have been used in an effort to treat the condition sometimes produced undesirable side effects, including diarrhea, vomiting, headaches and crying spells. Ritodrine, which is given by intravenous injection, inhibits labor by relaxing the muscles of the uterus. It was tested on 350 women in various parts of the United States, and was successful in prolonging pregnancy to the 36th week in more than half of them.

Dr. John W. C. Johnson, an associate professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the Johns Hopkins Hospital, has expressed the feeling that ritodrine is an improvement over other presently available methods of preventing or stopping premature labor; he points out, however, that only one of every three or four women can benefit from it. In general, the drug can be used only by healthy women with uncomplicated premature labor. For example, it cannot be prescribed for women with heart disease or high blood pressure.

Dr. Johnson reports using another drug, terbutaline, which has been approved by the FDA for the treatment of asthma, and which has been available on an experimental basis for the treatment of premature labor. According to Dr. Johnson, terbutaline appears to be even more effective than ritodrine, but has not been studied to the same extent. He does feel that for some women, the approval of ritodrine by the FDA should make an important difference.

If you place yourself in the hands of a competent obstetrician and follow his or her advice, there is good reason to believe that your chances of a successful are much improved over what they were two years ago.

Computer slows investigation

HOUSTON (AP)— Lt. Sam Merrill of the Houston Police Department's burglary division says a new computer system is leaving a "huge backlog" of case reports and is cutting down on work by investigators.

Merrill said Friday, "The citizens of Houston aren't getting the police services they are paying for. I'd say two-thirds of every day's cases are getting backlogged."

The computer operation was put into service to help speed up investigations of the growing number of burglaries and robberies in booming Houston.

Merrill said, "The essence of follow-up investigations is to get on it right away. But right now, most of these cases are at least a couple of weeks old by the time they get up here." that report is down there in records lost in the maze. We can't arrest somebody without something on paper. It's hard to make a citizen understand that."

Stumping no laugh barrel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The story you are about to read is about campaign humor. It is a short story.

It begins with Jimmy Carter worrying about the "Hollywoodizing" of Washington, should a certain ex-actor become president:

"I see every bill signing ceremony on the South Lawn taking place at night with huge spotlights," says Carter.

"I see Pennsylvania Avenue turning into the Avenue of the Stars.

"I see visiting foreign dignitaries putting their boot prints into cement on the South Lawn.

"I see the most important news personality in America is Rona Barrett.

"And then I wake up and I realize immediately it's only a bad dream."

Then there's Ronald Reagan's way of not making personal attacks:

"You know, it's something to have a brother who is obviously a bumbler and a buffoon and yet I have to give him credit. Billy Carter hasn't complained once."

And when Carter asks Americans to trust him, Reagan tells "the spoon joke." He is reminded, Reagan says, of the Ralph Waldo Emerson line: "The more he talked about his honor, the faster we counted the spoons."

Franklin Roosevelt gave us the New Deal, Reagan says, "Harry Truman gave us the Fair Deal. Now Jimmy Carter has given us a misdeal."

That's about as funny as it gets on the 1980 campaign trail, presidential version. John Anderson, by his own staff's admission, is a poor contributor to campaign humor. Anderson is so single-minded that he once failed to notice that 40 reporters were wearing lobster bibs while covering a campaign speech.

The best campaigner of the lot — by comedic standards — is Vice President Walter Mondale.

Ronald Reagan, he says, bears the same relation to the American working man as Colonel Sanders does to the American chicken.

He describes Reagan changes in long-held positions as "a strategy of selective political amnesia" and criticizes Reagan's admiring references to Franklin Delano Roosevelt with: "If Reagan wants to emerge from his cocoon, let him emerge as a hero of his own party — Coolidge, Harding and Nixon."

Mondale also thinks Republicans "are spending so much they are helping the economy" and lists the groups backing Reagan's election as "the Flat Earth Society, the Committee to Stamp Out Dancing, and Americans United Against Charles Darwin."

Along that line, the vice president comments Reagan for airing doubts about Darwin's Theory of Evolution, "thereby picking up a hot potato last dropped by William Jennings Bryan."

At times he comments "This wouldn't have happened if Reagan were alive."

Mercifully there are few examples of George Bush's attempts at campaign humor, but Reagan has a well-used (some think well-aged) supply of bons mots.

At a $100-a-plate lunch he said that "if our side doesn't win, that's going to be the regular price of lunch." And he told one audience, "I'm sure you ladies think when you go to the market it would be cheaper to eat money."

After Carter criticized Reagan for saying the country is in a depression, Reagan accused the president of hiding behind a dictionary.

"If he wants a definition, I'll give him one," said Reagan. "A recession is when your neighbor loses his job. A depression is when you lose your job. And recovery is when Jimmy Carter loses his."

Carter retorted that he has observed Reagan, muzzled in place, being led around by a group of senior advisers. "I must say they're all doing a good job," said Carter. "When he speaks you can hardly see their lips move."

Professional gag writers, such as they are, were at their best when Carter and Reagan appeared together last week, in white tie, at the head table of the annual Al Smith dinner in New York.

Carter, referring to Reagan's newly announced support of federal aid to New York City, said he had advised Mayor Edward Koch not to get too close to the Californian.

Said Carter: "The paint is still wet on his 'I love New York' button."

Why do they call it "adultery," when it makes them act like children?

White's fake punts, TD bombs sink Chargers

IRVING, Texas (AP) - The San Diego Chargers found themselves in a no-win situation Sunday night. They couldn't even be comfortable when they forced the Dallas Cowboys to punt.

Quarterback Danny White completed three touchdown passes and totally unsettled the Chargers by running for first downs twice from punt formation in a 42-31 National Football League victory on national television.

DALLAS UPPED its record to 6-2 to remain a game behind the Philadelphia Eagles in the National Conference Eastern Division, while San Diego dipped into a tie with Oakland in the American Conference West with 5-3 records.

"Danny White is just super," said San Diego Coach Don Coryell. "His scrambling and his making the big plays were the difference. Then on those two runs he made off the punts, well, they were great plays."

"We worked on the fake punts and always have a contain man. But White just beat us," Coryell added.

San Diego built a 24-14 halftime lead behind quarterback Dan Fouts, who had a wild 58-yard touchdown pass to John Jefferson that caromed off a Dallas defender and a 9-yard scoring toss to tight end Kellen Winslow.

But the Dallas defense victimized Fouts with four interceptions and the Chargers fumbled the ball away three times; twice running back Chuck Muncie was the victim.

Dallas struck for 21 points in the third quarter as White recovered his form after a first-half interception that Charger linebacker Woodrow Lowe returned 16 yards for a touchdown.

White's passing set up two touchdown runs of a yard each by rookie fullback Timmy Newsome and his second run for a first down from punt formation was responsible for a score.

THE TOUCHDOWN passes from White traveled 17 yards to Butch Johnson, 12 yards to Jay Saldi and 9 yards to Billy Joe DuPree. White finished the night with 22 completions on 34 attempts for 260 yards.

"Neither of White's running plays on punting downs was called," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "Whenever he runs with it, it is his own doing."

Dallas controlled the ball an amazing 41:52 to San Diego's 18:08 in holding down the NFL's highest scoring machine.

White said, "the runs from punt formation are never planned. I did it the first time because their contain-men turned their backs. The second time the snap was a little high. I thought it might be blocked and took a few steps to punt, then saw an opening. I know that had to be discouraging to their defense."

Fouts had some impressive statistics as he passed 44 times and completed 21 for 371 yards.

"We tried hard and stayed after them. We all played our guts out. You have to give them credit. They took advantage of their breaks," he said.

San Diego wide receiver Jefferson, who had eight catches for 160 yards, said, "I didn't feel comfortable at halftime even with us leading 24-14. I knew something was coming. Coach Landry will always do something to try to beat you."

Jefferson scored in the second quarter after a pass intended for Charlie Joiner skipped off Joiner's hands, hit defender Steve Wilson in the helmet, and bounced back into Jefferson's arms. He traveled 47 yards untouched on the weird play.

"Charlie got stuck pretty good, then the ball just bounced my way," said Jefferson, who celebrated the touchdown in his native Dallas with by spinning the ball like a top in the end zone.

"Usually I just pitch the ball to the referee but this was the first time to play in Texas since high school and I said if I got into the end zone I would do something special," said Jefferson.

San Diego sacked White six times and Dallas returned the favor with three traps of Fouts.

"We knew they were one of the best teams in the league and we knew we would have to give our best effort for 60 minutes and that's just what everybody did," said Dallas defensive end Ed Jones.

Earl still learning, Browner is quiet, and Oilers win

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston's 23-3 victory over Cincinnati was educational for Oiler Earl Campbell and Bengal Ross Browner. From now on, Campbell will run with his eyes open and Browner will play with his mouth shut.

"I'm reading my blocks better now," said Campbell, who pounded the Bengal defense for 202 yards rushing and touchdown runs of 55 and 3 yards. "I used to squint when I ran, but now I keep my eyes open."

Sunday's game, which catapulted the Oilers into a tie for the lead in the American Football Conference Central Division, also was an eye-opening experience for Browner, the outspoken Bengal defensive end.

Prior to Sunday's game, Browner said the Oilers had no class, that he disliked the Oilers from Coach Bum Phillips on down and that he would buy his fellow defensive linemen dinner if they defeated the Oilers.

After the game, Browner declined to retract his statements, but said he had learned a valuable lesson.

"Next time, I'll know just what to do," he said. "I'll keep my mouth shut and just go out and play the game."

side and outran cornerback Ray Griffin to the end zone.

The Oilers added a 46-yard field goal by Toni Fritsch, Campbell's 3-yard touchdown run and a 30-yarder by Fritsch to balloon their lead in the fourth quarter.

Fritsch also kicked at 33-yard field goal in the second quarter to match a 23-yard kick by Cincinnati's Ian Sunter.

"They used the nickel defense a little more than we expected," said Bengal quarterback Ken Anderson, who could not buy a touchdown drive the entire game. "They just took it to us in the second half and we managed to keep ourselves in the hole."

Anderson, who completed 23 of 33 passes for 185 yards, drove the Bengals to the Oiler 43-, 5-, 38-, 21-, and 33-yard lines in the first half and came away with only Sunter's field goal.

The stubborn Oiler defense quenched the drives, sacking Anderson four times and intercepting two passes.

The victory gave the Oilers a 5-3 record and a share of the division lead with Cleveland, which defeated Pittsburgh 27-26.

Sipe performs surgery on Steelers

By The Associated Press

Give Brian Sipe an opening, any little opening, and you're in trouble.

The Pittsburgh Steelers learned that lesson the hard way Sunday as Cleveland's passing star riddled their defense for 349 yards, a club-record 28 completions and four touchdowns in leading the Browns to an emotion-charged 27-26 victory.

"I can't express what this win means to all of us," said Sipe. "It feels like a million bucks. This is the greatest feeling we've ever experienced. It's just electric. It's been a long time coming, and I feel like enjoying it. I plan on having some fun tonight."

Not having much fun at all lately are the Steelers, defending National Football League champions who have now lost three in a row. The last time that happened was in 1976, and that's also the last time Pittsburgh didn't make it to the Super Bowl.

The NFL's 16-game regular season schedule reaches its midway point tonight when the New York Jets host the Miami Dolphins in the finale of the eighth weekend of action.

Despite injuries to quarterback Terry Bradshaw, running back Franco Harris and a host of other regulars, the Steelers appeared headed for victory when Sidney Thornton's 2-yard run gave them a 26-14 lead going into the final period. But Matt Bahr, who earlier kicked two field goals, booted the extra point after Thornton's TD off the left upright and it bounced away - and that was all the opening Sipe needed.

Sipe, who earlier had thrown touchdown passes of 5 yards to Calvin Hill and 6 yards to Greg Pruitt, hooked up with Pruitt on a 7-yarder with nine minutes to play. Don Cockroft missed the extra try, but Sipe gave him another shot when he lofted an 18-yard touchdown pass to Ozzie Newsome with 5:38 remaining.

This time, Cockroft kicked it through for the winning margin.

"I'm terribly relieved," said Sipe. "It's been so long since we've beaten these guys, it's nice to know it can be done."

"It's our biggest game, without question," said Browns Coach Sam Rutigliano.

Eagles 17, Bears 14

Tony Franklin kicked an 18-yard field goal with 2:02 to play and Louie Giammona, filling in for the injured Wilbert Montgomery, ran for 79 yards to help the Eagles raise their record to 7-1, best in the NFL.

"I'm really excited to be 7-1," said Eagles Coach Dick Vermeil. "A lot of people expected we would have a letdown this week, after beating Dallas, but we didn't."

Buccaneers 24, 49ers 23

Garo Yepremian's 30-yard field goal with 47 seconds remaining gave Tampa Bay its victory. It was the 198th field goal of his 13-year career.

Joe Montana completed 24 of 31 passes - including a club-record 13 in a row - for 200 yards for the 49ers.

Raiders 33, Seahawks 14

Jim Plunkett, who replaced the injured Dan Pastorini at quarterback for Oakland three games ago, threw three touchdown passes to Bob Chandler and Chris Bahr kicked four field goals as the Raiders posted their third straight victory.

Bills 31, Patriots 13

Joe Ferguson threw to Frank Lewis

for two touchdowns and Joe Cribbs ran for 108 yards and two TDs as Buffalo snapped a three-game losing streak.

"We try to go into each week like it's an important game - but in reality you've got to look at this one as being the biggest," said Lewis.

"This was a big game for us because the Patriots were leading the conference and we knew we had to win," Cribbs added.

Falcons 13, Rams 10

Steve Bartkowski fired a 54-yard scoring strike to Alfred Jackson with 1:15 remaining to enable Atlanta to break Los Angeles' five-game winning streak.

"Bartkowski just told me to give him a good route and to be ready," Jackson said. "He just made a perfect pass."

Cardinals 17, Colts 10

St. Louis tied an NFL record set by Dallas in 1966 by sacking Baltimore quarterback Bert Jones 12 times in beating the Colts.

"It's been a long time since I've seen an offensive team so dominated," said Cards tackle Dan Dierdorf. "Offensively, we didn't play all that well. It was the defense that did it."

St. Louis' defense had recorded only seven sacks in the team's seven previous games before breaking loose against Baltimore.

Chiefs 20, Lions 17

Nick Lowery kicked a 52-yard field goal in the first half and a 40-yarder with 1:14 left as St. Louis beat Detroit despite 155 yards rushing and two touchdowns by Lions rookie Billy Sims.

Steve Fuller completed three straight passes to J.T. Smith for 43 yards to set up the kick that gave the Chiefs their fourth straight victory.

Redskins 22, Saints 14

Mark Moseley broke out of a season-long slump with five field goals as Washington handed winless New Orleans its eighth loss. Moseley, 4-for-14 going into the game, connected on kicks of 52, 50, 38, 35 and 28 yards in his best game as a pro.

Packers 16, Vikings 3

Tight end Bill Larson, signed by Green Bay last week, caught a 4-yard touchdown pass from Lynn Dickey for the go-ahead score with 13:33 to play. Dickey later threw a 12-yard scoring pass to Paul Coffman for the winning margin.

Broncos 14, Giants 9

Otis Armstrong rushed for 106 yards and one touchdown and Jim Jensen gained 92 yards and scored the other Denver touchdown as the Giants suffered their seventh straight loss.

and outman cornerback Ray Griffin to the end zone.

The Oilers added a 46-yard field goal by Toni Fritsch, Campbell's 3-yard touchdown run and a 30-yarder by Fritsch to balloon their lead in the fourth quarter.

Fritsch also kicked at 33-yard field goal in the second quarter to match a 23-yard kick by Cincinnati's Ian Sunter.

"They used the nickel defense a little more than we expected," said Bengal quarterback Ken Anderson, who could not buy a touchdown drive the entire game. "They just took it to us in the second half and we managed to keep ourselves in the hole."

Anderson, who completed 23 of 33 passes for 185 yards, drove the Bengals to the Oiler 43-, 5-, 38-, 21-, and 33-yard lines in the first half and came away with only Sunter's field goal.

The stubborn Oiler defense quenched the drives, sacking Anderson four times and intercepting two passes.

The victory gave the Oilers a 5-3 record and a share of the division lead with Cleveland, which defeated Pittsburgh 27-26.

Teaff says Bears are in driver's seat

By The Associated Press

The unbeaten Baylor Bears, enjoying their finest football prosperity in the 81 years the school has been playing the sport, can toy with San Jose State Saturday while the remainder of the Southwest Conference jockeys for the stretch run.

Baylor is 7-0 overall and has its finest conference record (5-0) since 1922.

Houston is 3-1 and Texas is 2-1 while Southern Methodist, Arkansas, and Rice are 2-2. Texas Tech is still alive at 1-2.

While Baylor played well in the second half to beat Texas Christian 21-6, SMU shocked No. 2 ranked Texas 20-6, Houston downed Arkansas 24-17, and Rice nipped Texas A&M 10-6.

In games this weekend, Texas A&M is at SMU, Texas is at Texas Tech, Rice is at Arkansas and TCU is at Houston.

"We're in the driver's seat now," said Baylor Coach Grant Teaff whose team was inspired by the announcement over the loud speaker system that Texas had been beaten by SMU for the first time in 14 years.

"We were aware of the Texas score all along," said Teaff. "The conference race looks like it could go down to the last weekend, and I've got to consider SMU in the fight now along Arkansas, Houston, Texas and ourselves."

"But I have to like our position. We could go to the Cotton Bowl by winning the title outright or if there is a three-way tie for the title."

Baylor plays Arkansas, Rice, and Texas on succeeding November Saturdays in the rush to the Cotton Bowl.

SMU's victory over Texas was a shocker considering the Mustangs were starting a freshman quarterback, Lance McIlhenny, who replaced junior Mike Ford.

"This was a tremendous victory for SMU," said Coach Ron Meyer. "Lance McIlhenny isn't your typical freshman. He kept his head very well. I also want to say what a great impact Ford had. During the third quarter he was having valuable input in the selection of our play calling."

"McIlhenny was very poised," said Texas Coach Fred Akers. "I'm surprised they didn't have any turnovers as the result of him being in there. They just whipped our tails."

McIlhenny said "beating Texas is a great thrill. I thought personally we could do it and we just came out and did it."

Rice Coach Ray Ajborn received a fat lip in celebrating with his players and was dumped into the shower with his clothes on after the game.

Earl Campbell (34) of the Houston Oilers pops over the right tackle slot for 13 of his 202 yards against the Cincinnati Bengals Sunday in Houston. Dick Jauron (30) managed to trip up Campbell on the play. The Bengals had offered their defensive team a free steak dinner if they held Campbell under 100 yards. Some Cincinnati eatery lost a big tab. (AP Laserphoto)

Weisberg worked at losing marathon

NEW YORK (AP) — Barry Weisberg is proud of losing the New York City Marathon because he says anyone can run for two hours but not everyone can claim to run for seven continuous hours without collapsing.

"I felt I deserved losing and I worked hard for it. I'm a little cold now and I'm a little tired but it feels good," he said a few hours after crossing the finish line in Central Park Sunday in 7:37:42 hours.

How did he do it? "A steady diet of overeating and studious avoidance of exercise," the 29-year-old New Yorker said.

But a contributing factor was a complete absence of training since breaking an ankle last July, he said. "I wasn't able to work out, so I knew I couldn't run a serious marathon, so I decided to come in last."

Sporting a white T-shirt depicting King Kong atop the Empire State Building and a Santa Claus hat "because it was the warmest think I had," Weisberg also rationalized that of 16,000 runners, "only one could come in first and only one could come in last."

Weisberg, an assistant district attorney in Brooklyn, said his losing record would be hard to beat. "I don't think anyone will be able to do that for awhile."

His "achievement," he said, "is tougher than what Solazar did. I ran 3 1/2 times longer than he did. It's no sweat to run for two hours but to run for 7 1/2 hours, that's an achievement."

Referring to Bill Rodgers, the world's top-ranked marathoner who was unseated by Salazar Sunday, Weisberg said, "Anyone can win a marathon. Rodgers did it four times in a row. But no one has ever repeated losing a marathon. Next year, hopefully I'll try to repeat it."

But the young athlete, who says he's been running "on and off" for five years, admits that coming in last has its disadvantages too.

For example, he said he lost track of the other runners and ran most of the 26-mile, 385-yard distance alone.

"In Brooklyn, it was great because the crowds were still there but after about 10 miles, I lost the police escort and the crowds."

Alberto Salazar, left, pulls away from Rodolfo Gomez during New York City Marathon Sunday. Salazar won the event in record time of 2:09.41 and Gomez was second. (AP Laserphoto)

Salazar upsets marathon favorites

NEW YORK (AP) — In just one race, Alberto Salazar has thrust himself into a prominent position among the world's top marathon runners.

And he has the support of no less an authority than Bill Rodgers, the top-ranked marathoner in the world.

"It is shocking that he can beat this field," Rodgers said Sunday after the 22-year-old Salazar had scored a stunning upset in winning the New York City Marathon in his first race ever at the testing 26-mile, 385-yard distance.

"He beat a crackerjack field, a tough field. There were a lot of good runners here. But they all got nailed. It is phenomenal that he could win a race like this in his first marathon."

"I congratulate Al," continued Rodgers, winner of the prestigious New York City Marathon every year from 1976 to 1979 and the American record holder but a fifth-place finisher Sunday after falling shortly past the 14-mile mark. "Now I am going to train and beat him."

Not only did the University of Oregon senior destroy a record field of 14,012 competitors, but he broke Rodgers' meet record with a time of 2 hours, 9 minutes, 41 seconds — the seventh fastest in history and the second fastest ever by an American, behind Rodgers' 2:09:27 at Boston in 1979.

WHILE Salazar was proving his mettle in his marathon debut, Grete Waitz of Norway was continuing her domination of the women's field. In only her third marathon — all in the New York City event — she broke her world record for the third consecutive year, winning in 2:25:41. Her victory overshadowed an American record by runnerup Patty Lyons-Catalano of Boston. Lyons-Catalano cracked her American mark with a time of 2:29:33.

The Cuban-born Salazar's performance was even more amazing in view of two injuries he had suffered earlier this year, the most recent injury threatening his participation in the marathon.

In the spring, Salazar developed tendinitis in his left knee, nearly ending his aspirations to make the U.S. Olympic team. But he did a lot of swimming to maintain his cardiovascular fitness level, and when he recovered from the injury, he resumed training and finished third in the 10,000-meter race at the Olympic Trials at the University of Oregon.

Then, in late summer, he suffered a pulled hamstring, curtailing his training for the marathon.

"I thought I would have to pull out. After the injury, I didn't do any real training for the marathon until mid-October (about two weeks before the race)," said Salazar.

THE LACK of training was not evident Sunday. The confident Salazar, who had said prior to the marathon that he felt he was capable of running 2:10, stayed with his plan of remaining with the leaders for most of the race, then pulling away.

He made his break between the 21 and 22-mile marks, bolting away from runnerup Rodolfo Gomez of Mexico. Gomez said he made the mistake of stopping for a drink of water at that point, and he thought that was a factor in his losing the race.

Even so, he might not have caught the curly haired Salazar.

"I have confidence in myself," said Salazar. "I believe in what I can do."

"Since this was my first marathon, I was not going to force the pace ... I just wanted to hang with the lead runners ... I wanted to get to a point where I could pick up the pace."

"I was pretty confident with about six miles to go. I felt real good. But I was scared of Gomez. I thought he might be as fast as me."

"The last half-mile or so I really started to hurt. My stomach started knotting up. But I always thought to myself, 'Everybody else feels worse,'" said Salazar, a former scholastic All-American runner in Wayland, Mass.

One who admittedly felt worse — both mentally and physically — was Rodgers.

"When I fell, it was very frustrating," said Rodgers, while holding a cloth full of ice for his two skinned knees. "I said, 'That's the race.' I thought I might be injured."

Rodgers was not injured enough to stop running. But he couldn't catch the leaders, although he did get as close as third, some 60 yards behind Salazar and Gomez, between the 20 and 21-mile marks.

"I felt good at that point, but then the wind just tore me to pieces," added Rodgers, who finished in 2:13:20, behind Salazar, Gomez (2:10:13), John Graham of England (2:11:46) and Jeff Wells of Dallas (2:11:59).

Galindez dies Wildcats now eye Killeen

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Former world light heavyweight champion Victor Galindez and veteran road racer Nito Lizeviche were killed Sunday in an accident after retiring from an auto race in which they were co-driving.

The 31-year-old Galindez and Lizeviche, who had been in racing for about 30 years, were walking back to the pits at the 25 De Mayo track, 200 miles from Buenos Aires, when a car driven by Marcial Feijoo went out of control, spun off the track and slammed into the two pedestrians, police said.

Galindez, who lost his title on an 11th round knockout by Marvin Johnson on Nov. 30, 1979, had announced earlier this month that he planned to try his luck as a race driver. He was entered in this race as a co-driver and navigator.

Defending state champion Temple's annual clash this Friday night against Killeen will be more than just a football match between two long-time schoolboy rivals in Central Texas.

Temple, the winner of 47 consecutive regular-season contests, last lost a non-playoff game on the last night of the 1975 season.

On that night nearly five years ago, Killeen administered a 31-13 lathing to the Wildcats.

Temple, ranked first among Class 5A teams in The Associated Press schoolboy football poll, won No. 47 last Friday by running up 399 yards rushing, including 146 by running back Kenneth Davis, who dashed 52 yards for a touchdown.

While Temple's win wasn't really unexpected, unranked Duncanville's second win of the year tossed the North Texas schoolboy football scene into near-shock.

Quarterback Mark O'Briant threw two touchdown passes and ran for another score as Duncanville surprised seventh-ranked Euless Trinity, 38-27.

Duncanville's other win of the year came on an opening night triumph against formerly top-ranked Lewisville.

Euless Trinity was the only loser among the ranked teams. Fourteen other squads posted shutout wins.

Quarterback Tom Dodge threw three touchdown passes to lead No. 2 Port Arthur Jefferson to a 44-7 win over Beaumont Forest Park.

In other games involving top-rated 5A teams, No. 4 Odessa Permian blanked Abilene Cooper, 19-0; fifth-ranked Highland Park slipped by Mesquite, 17-8; and sixth-ranked Bryan trounced Waco Connally, 48-0.

Eighth-ranked Lubbock Coronado creamed Lubbock, 28-0; No. 9 Plano stormed Richardson Pearce, 49-0; and 10th-ranked Brazoswood ambushed Calhoun, 63-0.

No. 3 Conroe had the weekend off.

Coach resigns

NORMAL, Ill. (AP) — A search for a new football coach at Illinois State University will begin immediately, following the resignation of Charlie Cowdrey, school officials say.

Cowdrey has submitted his resignation, effective at the end of this season.

Quartermaster Mark O'Briant threw two touchdown passes and ran for another score as Duncanville surprised seventh-ranked Euless Trinity, 38-27.

Duncanville's other win of the year came on an opening night triumph against formerly top-ranked Lewisville.

Euless Trinity was the only loser among the ranked teams. Fourteen other squads posted shutout wins.

Quarterback Tom Dodge threw three touchdown passes to lead No. 2 Port Arthur Jefferson to a 44-7 win over Beaumont Forest Park.

In other games involving top-rated 5A teams, No. 4 Odessa Permian blanked Abilene Cooper, 19-0; fifth-ranked Highland Park slipped by Mesquite, 17-8; and sixth-ranked Bryan trounced Waco Connally, 48-0.

Eighth-ranked Lubbock Coronado creamed Lubbock, 28-0; No. 9 Plano stormed Richardson Pearce, 49-0; and 10th-ranked Brazoswood ambushed Calhoun, 63-0.

Foshee to speak at basketball clinic

GREENWOOD — Dean Foshee, girls' athletic coach for the Greenwood Independent School District, has been invited to speak at the 23rd annual Flying Queens' Basketball Clinic at Wayland Baptist College in Plainview on Nov. 15.

Coach Foshee will speak on his fast-break techniques, which the team will demonstrate on the court.

The Greenwood girls' team reached regional play-offs for two consecutive years. That feat may have helped line up Greenwood for the basketball clinic, the coach said.

"Whenever your peers think enough of you to ask you how you reached your present level of success, one feels a sense of pride and honor," Foshee said.

The clinic will include lectures, a free-throw contest, floor demonstrations, a talent show and three basketball games. The Greenwood girls will demonstrate their style of play at 2 p.m.

Greenwood girls participating in the clinic will be Greta Black, Missy Duke, Rita Garcia and Neri Ortiz, seniors; Karen Black, Elizabeth Busic, Teresa Dove, Sandra Ellis, Molly Handley, Lisa Mobley, Nancy Ortiz, Sylvia Russell, Shanna Taylor, Rainie Turnbow and Pam Rosser, juniors; Gina Britton, Renny Evans and Michelle Fletcher, sophomores; and Stephanie Binnion, Deborah Coffee, Belinda Duke, Dianne Gilchrest, Cindy Lea and Debbie Massey, freshmen.

Fastidious Filly wins Sunland Park race

SUNLAND PARK (AP) — Fastidious Filly, an overlooked successful stakes campaigner on the quarter horse circuit, captured Sunday's featured Savannah Swinger Distance Series at Sunland Park horse track.

The filly was made a 28-1 outsider in the 350-yard dash, but roared to a head victory in the closely-bunched field.

Fastidious Filly broke third, moved up a bit at the half-way point, then surged into the lead near the wire.

The winner returned $57.80 to win, $17 to place, $9.80 to show. The winning time was 17.66 seconds. The betting favorite, Rocket Jet Bug, finished ninth.

Brown Wind, a 15-1 outsider, battled Fastidious Filly down to the wire and didn't give in until the final jump. Brown Wind returned $14 and $10.20. The colt ended up only a head in front of Easy Maneuver, who paid $6.20 to show.

Mears beats Unser in Mexico Cup race

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Rick Mears outran teammate Bobby Unser to win his first championship car race of the season Sunday in the inaugural Indy-150 Mexico Cup.

The 28-year-old driver from Bakersfield, Calif., who won last year's national driving title, whaled his metallic-blue Penske PC-9 across the finish line seven seconds ahead of Unser's virtually identical car. He won $21,350 for his first-place finish.

Mears averaged 116.376 mph in the 150-mile race on the Magdalena Mixico Autodrome in the Mexican capital. The 60-lap event over a four-kilometer course was the first race for Indianapolis-type cars ever run in Mexico.

Mears, who took the lead for good with 15 laps to go as Unser ducked into the pits to refuel, said, "It was important for me to win the race."

Al Unser, Bobby's younger brother, was third and driving for Midland's Bobby Hillin, followed by Tom Sneva, Dennis Firestone, Jim McElreath, Sheldon Kinser, Bill Temperso and Larry Cannon.

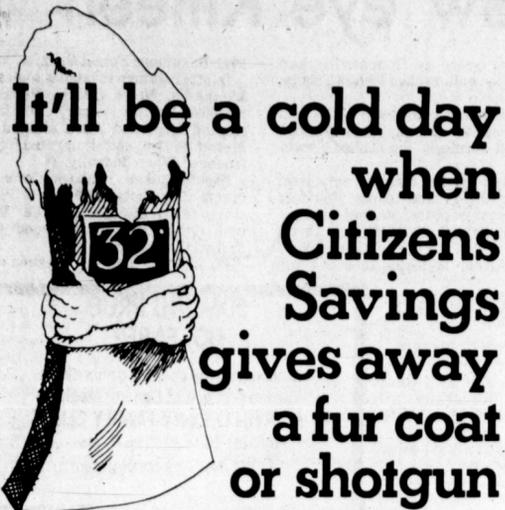

Indy 500 winner Johnny Rutherford, who already has clinched the national title for 1980, failed to finish a race in his Chaparral, owned by Midland's Jim Hill, for the first time this season. He retired on the 48th lap after scraping a security rail. Rutherford was not injured.

Intended bomb victim can't sleep

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The intended recipient of a package bomb with a "trick-or-treat" message that exploded, injuring nine people, says he hasn't been able to sleep since the bomb went off.

Jason Himelstein said he was listening over the telephone Friday as his friends unwrapped the package. "I just don't know how I'm ever going to stand living," he said in an interview. "I cry all the time now. I can't properly describe to you what my stomach feels like every time it hits me that my associates were maimed by a bomb that was meant for me."

In an interview with columnist Tom Fitzpatrick of The Arizona Republic, Himelstein said he could hear the rattle of the paper as 26-year-old Starlene Grimes opened the package.

The package had been mailed to Himelstein at Pacific Associates Inc., and employees opened it there after calling him to get permission.

Himelstein said the telephone line went dead before the explosion that followed when the wrapped jewel box tagged "trick or treat" was opened.

Ms. Grimes, who lost two fingers on her left hand in the explosion, was reported in satisfactory condition at John C. Lincoln Hospital.

Kathleen Corbett, 40, who had been standing next to Ms. Grimes, was in critical condition after surgery to repair a severed artery in her neck, said nursing supervisor Donna Walters.

Greg Riggle, 31, also was in satisfactory condition. A fourth employee of the accounting firm, Debbie Barkley, 31, was in serious condition at Good Samaritan Hospital with severe eye injuries and hospital.

The others were treated and released.

Himelstein, who had sold his interest in the accounting firm and moved out in January, said he first heard of the blast about five minutes later and rushed to the office with his wife.

"By the time we got there, everyone had been taken to the hospital," he said.

Investigators say he gave them the names of two or three people who might have wanted him dead, but added that the names were only guesses and that he had not been threatened.

City investigators and agents of the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms sifted through garbage cans of debris as postal inspectors joined Phoenix detectives in an attempt to determine who mailed the high-explosive bomb.

"It's going to be another one of those long, drawn-out investigations unless something breaks quick on it," said police Lt. Earl Chivington.

"I like to think of myself as a pretty honest guy," Himelstein said. "I know a lot of people. Most of them like me."

The 29-year-old said his former office-mates called him virtually every day after picking up the mail.

On Friday, Himelstein says he heard the women "sounded excited. I could hear them laughing."

"They told me they had this package with very funny wrapping. They said it looked like it might be an invitation to a party."

"I heard one of the girls in the background say, 'Tell Jay it has real neat paper,'" he recalled.

"So I told them, 'Sure, open the package.'"

New South Korean constitution in effect

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Chun Doo-hwan on Monday formally legalized South Korea's new constitution that dissolved Parliament and voided the constitution that had insured the late President Park Chung-hee's one-man rule.

Park, assassinated by his own intelligence chief one year ago Sunday, had written the "Yushin" (revitalizing reforms) Constitution in 1972 to maintain his grip on the nation. Chun, an army general, emerged as the nation's new military strongman after Park's death.

The new constitution calls for reduced power for the president in favor of the legislative branch and courts. It also limits the president to a single seven-year term.

"An old era has closed," Chun told a crowd of about 4,000 people at Seoul's Sejong Cultural Center. "A new historic era brimming with hope is dawning. The so-called Yushin Constitution, which served as the basic law for the old era, has passed into history."

The constitution through its supplementary provisions also allows legislation to purge persons considered "conspicuously responsible for political or social corruption or chaos."

Scores of noted politicians already have announced their retirements after being accused of corruption and other misdemeanors.

They include Kim Jong-pil and Kim Young-sam, both major presidential contenders until May 17, when there was a military crackdown on opposition leaders under an expanded martial law decree.

Kim Dae-jung, another presidential aspirant, was sentenced to death on sedition charges last month. His case is now being reviewed by a higher military court.

The new charter, proposed by Chun, was confirmed overwhelmingly in a national referendum

Wednesday. Of the record 95.5 percent voters who turned out, 91.6 percent cast affirmative ballots.

The 131-article constitution calls for a new administration to be installed before June 30 through new elections for president and Parliament.

Chun has promised a presidential election by March and a parliamentary election in late April or early May. He is expected to be the main presidential candidate.

With the promulgation of the new constitution, the National Assembly and all existing political parties were dissolved to clear the way for a new political alignment.

A 70-member Legislative Council for National Security was created Monday to assume the role of the assembly until a new Parliament is formed next year.

Chun, in his address, set the guidelines for a new political order "charged with the great historic mission of building a just and democratic welfare state."

"The new constitutional order that comes into force today solemnly commands that there shall be no further waste of national energies due to non-productive political strife and irrationality," he said.

Two Syrians hanged

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Two Syrians were hanged here today for assassinating a fellow Syrian who claimed political refuge in Jordan as a member of the anti-Syrian Moslem Brotherhood, the government said.

The pair were arrested shortly after the fatal shooting of Abdul Wahab Bakri on an Amman street last month. Bakri was described as a senior member of the Brotherhood, an Islamic fundamentalist organization opposed to the socialist government of Syrian President Hafez Assad.

A government statement said Subhi Ajaz and Mohammed Youssef Hassan Shaubi were tried and convicted of first-degree murder by court in Amman. Unofficial reports said they claimed diplomatic immunity during their trial but the court rejected their plea.

The Brotherhood, outlawed in Syria, has been running a campaign of bombings and political assassinations that have claimed more than 200 lives over the past 18 months.

The hangings underscored a growing rift between Jordan and Syria that broke into the open when Jordan's King Hussein declared his support for Iraq in its 36-day-old war with Iran. Syria is embroiled in a long-standing feud with Iraq and supports Iran in the war.

Long before the war erupted, the Syrians accused Iraq and Jordan of training and funding Moslem Brotherhood guerrillas for underground activity in Syria.
