War and peace

REAGAN: "To maintain ... peace requires strength. America has never gotten into a war because we were too strong. We can get into a war by letting events get out of hand as they have in the last 3½ years."

CARTER: "Habitually, Governor Reagan has advocated the injection of military forces into troubled areas when I and my predecessors ... have advocated resolving those troubles peacefully and diplomatically."

Energy

CARTER: "He (Reagan) wants to put all our eggs into one basket and give that basket to the oil companies."

REAGAN: "I just believe private enterprise can do a better job" of spurring energy development. "I'm suggesting there are literally thousands of unnecessary regulations. ... I would like to see us a little more free, as we once were."

SALT treaty

CARTER: "When a man who hopes to be president says, 'Take this treaty, discard it ... do not finally capitalize on this long negotiation,' that is a very dangerous and disturbing thing."

REAGAN: "We have been out-negotiated for some time." He said his call for reopening negotiations with the Soviet Union was "hardly throwing away a treaty and being opposed to arms control."

Social security

CARTER: "As long as there is a Democratic president in the White House, we will have a strong and viable Social Security system free of the threat of bankruptcy."

REAGAN: "The Social Security system was based on a false premise with regard to how fast ... the number of retirees would increase. It is actually out of balance ... trillions of dollars out of balance."

The future

CARTER: "Our nation, to stay strong, to stay at peace, to raise high the banner of human rights, to set an example for the rest of the world ... is my plan for the future."

REAGAN: "This country doesn't have to be in the shape that it is in ... I would like to have a crusade today ... to take government off the backs of the great people of this country."

Both candidates claim the edge in big debate

CLEVELAND (AP) — President Carter and Ronald Reagan emerged upbeat from their dramatic debate and charged into the final six days of the 1980 presidential campaign, concentrating on the big-state prizes. Each claimed the edge from his performance in their head-on confrontation.

Reagan was heading for Texas and Carter for Pennsylvania, two of the journalists and had the opportunity for rebuttal and counter-rebuttal.

The moderator was commentator Howard K. Smith, who played the same part in the first televised presidential debate between Richard Nixon and John F. Kennedy in 1960. The forum was sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

Moments after the debate began, Reagan moved to deal with the war and peace issue that has dogged his campaign.

"I believe with all my heart that our first priority must be world peace and that use of force is always and only a last resort when everything else has failed," said Reagan.

Voter concern that Reagan might get the nation involved in a war played a role in prompting the Republican nominee to change his position and agree to a one-on-one debate with Carter.

Before that shift, Reagan had insisted that independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson have a role in any debate format.

Anderson was out in the cold Tuesday night, participating only on the fringe of the main event. The Illinois congressman watched the Cleveland debate from a stage in Washington and responded to the same questions.

On the issue of nuclear war, Anderson said he saw no difference between Carter and Reagan.

"I have become convinced there really is no significant difference between them on whether we can fight a limited nuclear war," said Anderson. "There is no such thing as limited nuclear war."

Carter and Reagan started slowly like two boxers warily testing each other out in the opening round of a championship bout. But the action began to heat up when the second question from the four-person panel dealt with inflation.

Responding first, Carter blamed OPEC increases in oil prices which he called "oil shocks" for the high inflation rates, particularly during the first quarter of 1980, and said his policies for dealing with the economy are "very sound and very carefully considered."

major states still judged a tossup in most surveys.

With most public opinion polls saying the presidential race is too close to call, Tuesday night's debate was viewed as a potentially decisive event, and each candidate played what he believed were his strongest cards.

An AP poll said most of those who watched the debate leaned toward Reagan even before the debate, and that each candidate gained about 6 percentage points after the debate — mostly from the ranks of the undecided.

Carter lashed out at his Republican challenger as "dangerous and belligerent" on foreign policy. He described Reagan's positions on domestic issues "ridiculous" and "heartless."

Reagan — in quieter, but biting language of his own — blamed Carter for inflation and unemployment and said he couldn't describe his differences with the president on the uses of American military power "because I don't know what Mr. Carter's policies are."

Repeatedly, Reagan said his positions on issues were being distorted by the president.

After the 90-minute debate, the two men shook hands briefly and then joined their wives and supporters in pre-midnight rallies.

Carter said he "felt very good," but he cautioned supporters that "we've got another week to go. Next Tuesday the decision will be not in the hands of debate judges or the League of Women Voters or the press. The decision will be in the hands of millions of Americans like you."

At a similar rally a few blocks away, Reagan said, "I seemed to do all right. I've examined myself and I can't find any wounds ... It gave me an opportunity to raise some issues about the failures of this administration."

"We had the offensive; Reagan was on the defensive," said Gerald Rafshoon, the advertising chief for the Carter campaign. It was a reversal of the usual relationship between incumbent and challenger.

The debate yielded to tens of millions of television viewers — pre-debate estimates ranged from 60 million to 85 million — and many others who tuned into radio broadcasts. The candidates answered questions from four

City again says no to school board

Midland City Council held firm to its earlier decision to change the zoning on land contiguous to Midland High School, despite the appearance of several Midland school board members at the council's Tuesday meeting.

The council, meeting in regular session in City Hall Council Chambers, approved on second reading an ordinance to change the zoning on blocks between C and G streets on the north side of Illinois Avenue and between D and G streets on the south side from MF-2, multiple family, to O-1, office.

Mayor G. Thane Akins advised the school members that the public hearing on the subject was closed at the last council session when the request came up for a first reading.

The request had been made by Ron Boerm, who is wanting to turn one of the houses in the area into a real estate office.

Akins said the council considered the request "strictly on the merit of good planning and zoning. We don't look at what it will do with property values. That street (Illinois Avenue) carries 10,000 or so vehicles a day, and that takes it away from residential use as we think of it."

The present MF-2 zoning allows for high-rise apartment buildings and this would generate more traffic than already is on Illinois, he claimed. The mayor also pointed out that most of the residents in the area were in favor of the zone change.

But Councilman Gordon Marcum II disagreed with Akins, charging that the zone change is being done on a speculative basis.

"We just did the same thing on Texas Avenue," retorted Akins. "Are you going to tell me what's going to be happening on every lot in that zone change?"

"But there are more plans on Texas than what we have now (for Illinois)," Marcum answered.

Akins charged he could give Marcum "a list of every place you've voted in favor of change in similar circumstances."

Part of what Marcum objected to, he answered, is the fact the zone change would be continuing the strip office zoning the city started on Wall and Texas streets "and now it's going to spread to Missouri (Avenue)."

Midlanders' reactions are varied

By SUE FAHLGREN

Tuesday night's debate between President Jimmy Carter and his opponent Gov. Ronald Reagan may have sparked some controversy in the Washington press corps, but reactions in Midland could have been written before the debate took place.

Harris Kerr, a member of the State Democratic Executive Board for the 25th senatorial district, summarized Midland's reaction in his statement this morning.

"I think that people who were committed to a candidate were not swayed (to the other candidate) by the debate," Kerr said. "However, he felt 'the undecided voters were swayed to Carter.'"

Kerr added that he felt the ABC network's phone-in straw poll on the reaction to the debate, which showed Reagan leading by almost two to one, was not a valid poll. "There are an awful lot of Democrats who couldn't afford to pay the 50 cents to make that call," Kerr said.

THE TWO TELEPHONE numbers were 900 numbers which registered as many as 5,000 calls a minute into the poll. The telephone companies were charging patrons 50 cents for each call, however.

Kerr said a "typical Republican would stay on the line four hours" to get his opinion in, whereas "most Democrats" would stop trying after 20 minutes of busy signals.

Kerr said he felt a more valid poll came from "the response that (the television) reporters picked up around the nation. In almost every undecided case," he continued.

'Moderate' opposes 'conservative'

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one in a series of stories taking a close look at the local races and candidates in the Nov. 4 general election.

A retired high-school government teacher who beholds himself as a "moderate" and who feels obligated to serve his community and a 46-year-old conservative, crusading woman who pledges that she knows the difference "between needed services and frills" are seeking the Midland County Precinct 3 commissioner's post in Tuesday's general election.

Alexandra Morris, the Republican candidate who senses a "need for a change," and her opponent, C. DeWayne Davis, a self-avowed moderate, are vying for the post to be vacated by Jack Leonard, 56, a one-term commissioner who lost his bid for re-election to another four-year term to Davis in the Democratic Party primary election last May 3.

Ms. Morris defeated challengers J.R. "Bob" Harris and Gordon Casbeer in the GOP primary.

"I AM RUNNING because I see a need for a change," said Ms. Morris, "and I have worked with the commissioners' court and with the governmental systems."

Ms. Morris is former executive director of the now-defunct Midland Community Action Agency and was first president of Permian Basin Planned Parenthood.

She was a board member of the American Red Cross's Midland County chapter, served on the board of the Booker T. Washington YMCA Branch and, among others, Casa de Amigos, and is a parishioner of St. Ann's Catholic Church.

She resigned from the beleaguered MCAA in 1979.

"I cannot in good conscience continue to be a part of an organization that is using tax money for so little, where there remains such great need," Ms. Morris said then.

DAVIS, WHO has taught far more government that he has practiced, is seeking the $19,500-a-year post, in part, out of a sense of duty, he suggested.

"I think I have somewhat of an obligation to do what I can and should do," he said, "(and) not to make a career of it, by no means."

"I've always preached that (government and politics)," said Davis, who recently attended his first commissioners' court meeting. "I've never practiced it."

Cold front sets records in Basin area

That cold front that swept into Midland Monday evening, dropping snow and sleet throughout much of the Permian Basin, definitely was a record-setter, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

In fact, it set at least three new weather records in Midland and no telling how many others throughout the area.

The cold front brought the coldest temperature so far this month to Midland. It also was the lowest temperature this early in the season. And this morning's "low" reading — 27 degrees — broke the previous record low for this date which had been 37 degrees, set in 1930.

Tuesday's "high" temperature was 46 degrees and that was set at midnight Monday. Record high temperature for Tuesday's date is 91 degrees, set in 1950. But that record wasn't ever in danger Tuesday.

Snow fell intermittently throughout most of the Permian Basin Tuesday, but weather-watchers noted the flakes melted as they hit the ground.

At Big Spring, an unofficial source reported that Tuesday's snowfall there was the earliest ever although it was not measurable.

Meanwhile, the forecast is calling for fair skies through Thursday. Temperatures should not be as cold and it will be warmer on Thursday.

Low temperature tonight is expected to drop to near 30 again and the high on Thursday should reach the middle 60s.

Winds tonight will be light and variable, but they'll become southerly on Thursday and blow at 5-10 mph.

The snow brought .02 inch of moisture to Midland Tuesday, boosting the monthly total to .12 inch. The total for 1980 so far stands at 15.83 inches.

The blustery cold front that moved through the coastal plains brought brisk winds and cloudiness to the area, while the mercury plunged in the Panhandle.

It was just plain cold early Wednesday in Dalhart, which posted a 23 degree reading. Amarillo had a slightly higher 24, and it was 25 in Lubbock. Abilene and Wink were slightly warmer at 30 degrees.

One dead, two injured in mishap

CRANE — An Odessa man died and three others were hurt Tuesday in a one-vehicle accident 12.6 miles south of Crane on U.S. Highway 385 at 7:30 p.m.

The car, driven by James Edward Ybarra, 27, of Odessa, was northbound on the highway in a construction zone. The car ran off the roadway and struck the rear of an earth moving machine, according to Department of Public Safety reports.

Ybarra was pronounced dead at the scene by Crane County Peace Officer Mary Teague. His body was taken to a Crane funeral home.

Three passengers in the vehicle were injured. Leo Nunez, 20, of Odessa, was treated at Odessa Medical Center for scratches, head and facial injuries and later released. Oscar Rodriguez, 27, of Odessa was in stable condition this morning in Medical Center with head injuries, and Greg Paredes, 25, of Odessa was also in stable condition in Medical Center with pelvic and leg injuries.

Iowa State University freshman Tim Schwartz was among the many central Iowans who found themselves in the middle of the season's first snowfall on Monday. The record-breaking October snowfall measured 2 inches in Ames, where the ISU campus is located, and 7 inches in Des Moines, 30 miles south, where accident, fires and power outages were reported. (AP Laserphoto)

Council considering formation of lake in Wadley-Barron Park

By LANA CUNNINGHAM Staff Writer

Wadley-Barron Park has posed a problem for months for the Midland City Council and city officials. The problem is standing water which has seemed to defy all methods to get rid of it.

The city has tried pumping it out; they've tried to let Mother Nature dry it out. But the water is still there.

So, on Tuesday the City Council looked at turning the park, located at A Street and Cuthbert Avenue, into just exactly what it is becoming — a lake.

City Manager James Brown told the council the water isn't the remains of rains about a month ago. Parks made out of playa lakes, such as Wadley-Barron, are used to catch runoff rain water. But the water usually evaporates after a few days of sunshine. Or, the city can pump it out.

The situation at Wadley-Barron is caused by ground water surfacing into the bottom of the playa lake, said Brown. "The pump is still running and the water level is higher than before," he added.

The city can take its pick of three solutions, he said. The council can excavate the park and make a lake out of it; the lake can be filled in; or the park can be left just the way it is.

"It's a disgrace the way it is now," said Councilman Tom Sloan.

Wayne Kohout, director of parks and recreation, said he is talking with Lubbock officials to see how they resolved a similar problem with playa lakes located around the Texas Tech University campus.

The problem areas in Lubbock were transformed into "very attractive water features," said Kohout. Depth of these playa lakes was deepened to achieve the right effect.

Kohout related that Ed Reed, a local hydrologist who has looked at Wadley-Barron Park, said the water table in that area is rising because of the residents who irrigate their lawns and the lack of water wells. This water table is building up above a limestone layer and "it looks like it's permanent," said Kohout.

What concerned the council Tuesday, however, was how would they be held liable in case of an accident, such as a drowning, at the lake.

Kohout said Lubbock posts No

Swimming signs around the areas. A security fence suggested by the council would "take away from the aesthetic value," said City Attorney Joe Nuesse.

The council instructed Kohout and Brown to take a closer look at how the park could be turned into a lake.

Sloan chided the council that "here we have a situation that is unique and you're talking about filling it up or fencing it off. Potentially, it could be a real asset to the community."

City again turns down school's zoning request

agreed with Marcum, "but when people in the neighborhood want the zoning changed, we should do it."

The vote on second reading went the same way as on the first — five for and Marcum against.

After listening to a suggested amendment on the freight loading zone ordinance, the council decided to adopt the recommendation. After the city adopted the first ordinance, Mike Rhoden said he and several other businessmen who objected to it came up with some ideas for change.

The recommendations call for each business applying for permits for their vehicles to park in the freight loading zones. Each permit will be $10, and the vehicle must display a 7-by-11 inch sign in the window. If a business is found to be violating use of the zone, the permit will be forfeited.

A business vehicle parked there more than 30 minutes can be fined a minimum of $25 and no more than $200. And the vehicle can be towed away.

After hearing a presentation from Richard Hennessy, director of planning and community development, on changing the fee schedule for electrical and building permits, the council decided to look at combining all fees into one.

Hennessy said some cities are charging one building fee and this will cover the cost for building permit, electrical and plumbing fees. Called a construction permit fee, it is paid by the general contractor and reduces the amount of paperwork for the city.

Hennessy said it still would require the plumbers and electricians to take out a permit to make sure they are qualified.

The council postponed setting a public hearing on devising standards for Texas Electric Service Co. and Pioneer Natural Gas Co. The state Railroad Commission and Public Utilities Commission will be setting statewide standards and the council will look at adopting these when they are made public.

In other action, the council approved purchasing baggage carts for use by the public at Midland Regional Airport, changed the cycle of lights at Garfield and Industrial streets, approved an ordinance limiting and regulating portable and temporary signs, granted a franchise on first reading for Tall City Cab, and settled a claim by Robert D. Wright of Hurst against the city of Midland.

After an eight-hour operation, doctors at Bellevue Hospital said the hand "appears to have taken very well," according to a spokeswoman.

NEW YORK (AP) — A severed hand that flew out a 16th-floor window after an electric saw accident has been successfully attached to the 44-year-old Manhattan man who lost it, hospital officials report.

After an eight-hour operation, doctors at Bellevue Hospital said the hand "appears to have taken very well," according to a spokeswoman.

appears to be the only clearly definable Democratic-controlled precinct in the county. Precinct 3 takes in extreme south and southeast Midland and south central and southeast Midland County and includes the Midkiff area.

Davis indicated that his politics wouldn't serve him well in at least one of the other three precincts.

"I WOULDN'T RUN in the northwest part of the town, unless I was an avowed Republican," he said.

Davis' "classroom politics" have taken him to the campus of Midland High School, where he taught for 17 years; to Odessa College for nine summers; to Midland College; and to Sul Ross State University in Alpine for one summer. He holds the bachelor's degree (1941) in political science from North Texas State University and the master's degree (1979) in public administration from Sul Ross State University.

Over the years, Davis has developed theories about governmental service.

"I believe that public office is a trust and not a position," he said. "You can stay too long sometimes. I just do not believe in perpetuation of a person in public office."

HOWEVER, HE NOTED that "Some people have to have that job (for a livelihood)," and indicated that he doesn't. Nor does Ms. Morris.

"I'm a pretty independent person in action, thought and words, really," he said.

One action which Davis had contemplated should he be elected commissioner was to revamp the county roads and grade and pave the dirt ones. But he revised his thoughts on that once he learned that the county's road and bridge department's budget allows for the paving on only two miles of roads per year in each of the four commissioner precincts.

"If that's the case," he said, "we're in bad trouble. That's what the people really need to know."

Davis indicated that he would become a scholar of another sort — that he would learn practical government. And since he'd be open to public review as a politician, he'd be precise in words.

"You had better keep your mouth shut until you know what's the score," he theorized.

If elected, Davis said he would spend tax dollars wisely and would advocate more pay and effective work by fewer employees, rather than less pay and ineffective work by many employees.

"I had rather have less people — quality people — and pay them well, rather than have a bunch of people doing shoddy work."

Though Davis said he is a "registered Democrat," he said he's not a straight party-lever puller.

"I've crossed the party lines and will continue to cross the party lines."

MS. MORRIS said she is not opposed to change if it is for the public good.

"Just because a law is a law doesn't mean that it's right," she said.

"There are laws that need changing here. The county and the country are in constant evolution. And just because something is a statute doesn't mean that it's right."

"I think because something has been the same since 1492 doesn't mean it can't be changed."

In her campaigning, Ms. Morris is advocating "better budget planning...to stop wasting your hard-earned tax dollars." She is pushing for better county roads which she became familiar with in growing up on a ranch. And she is promoting expansion of the Midland County Public Library and Museum and is pledging to effect "better county services" for the people.

"This county has a phenomenal projected growth, and it's developing some problems," she said.

The Republican candidate, who, if elected, would be the first woman to hold the commissionship in Midland County, also suggested that the pay for commissioners should be re-evaluated.

"I question that they might not ought to be on salary," she said, "or on a token salary, like the city councilmen." With a salary, "commissioner's job should be full-time," she said.

Though Ms. Morris might be labeled a conservative, she promotes social programs which benefit people and which help people help themselves.

"I don't believe in government give-away programs," she said. "I'm against soup lines" and against child slave labor, but she is for repeal of the minimum wage for teen-agers in order to increase the employment rate for minority youths who are out of jobs.

Public vote on hostages set

By The Associated Press

After failing to agree in a third day of secret debate, Iran's Parliament will meet Thursday in a public session to discuss and vote on proposed terms for the release of the 52 American hostages, sources in Tehran close to the debate reported today.

The Majlis, Iran's 228-member parliament, scheduled the public meeting after a stormy, four-hour debate behind closed doors today, the sources said.

They said the report of the special committee set up weeks ago to propose conditions for freeing the Americans would be read, the report would be debated and a vote would be taken.

Observers in the Iranian capital said it appeared that the public session, decided on after nearly 12 hours of secret debate failed to produce a consensus, would bring the hostage crisis to a head after nearly a year.

Today was the 361st day of captivity for the Americans.

Informed sources said the Majlis was still deeply divided over the terms to be proposed to the United States and the debate today was extremely heated. At one point, several deputies walked out.

The parliament met for its third day of secret debate at 8:10 a.m. after a one-day suspension Tuesday for a religious holiday. It met for a total of eight hours Sunday and Monday, but some of the time Monday was spent on discussion of the war with Iraq.

Reports from sources close to the debate indicate that two things are delaying agreement: demands for conditions in addition to the four listed last month by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the leader of the revolutionary regime, and demands that some of the hostages be tried as spies.

A spokesman for the U.S. State Department reiterated earlier this week that putting any of the Americans on trial "would have grave consequences for Iran." But sources in Tehran said a number of the deputies favor prosecutions for espionage and are determined to extend the debate as long as they can.

Khomeini's four conditions were the return of the fortune which the Iranian government claims the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi invested abroad, the release of the billions of dollars in Iranian assets frozen by President Carter after the hostages were taken, abandonment of all legal claims against Iran by American firms and private persons and a pledge from the U.S. government of non-interference in Iranian affairs.

ued to say, the voter had selected Carter as a candidate. In addition, Kerr said sharp distinctions were drawn between the candidates' attitudes. "Carter was very serious," Kerr said. "He showed he was serious about the issues, whereas Ronald Reagan was almost pretty flip about them," he said, pointing to Reagan's aside remarks, such as "There you go again."

HOWEVER, BILL Shaner, Republican county chairman for Midland, had a different opinion of Tuesday night's confrontation. "Well, of course, I think that our man won," he said. "Reagan did very well on all the issues — especially foreign issues." He continued, "I feel that Mr. Reagan had an opportunity to speak to several of the items that Mr. Carter has been saying about him (Reagan). He was able to speak to several of the issues that I think he's been misunderstood on — or misrepresented by Carter."

"HE SCORED points not only because his answers were good," Bush said, "but also because Carter never answered some of them." Bush said Carter did not adequately address the increase in inflation. "He's ruined the economy for us and he didn't explain why," Bush said.

Overall, Bush said, "as in any debate, and especially this one, it worked to solidify support — and to swing the undecided vote our way." As for the telephone poll, Bush said he "would hope that it was (valid). But, as you know, there is only one valid poll and that's on Nov. 4."

"I DIDN'T SEE any debating," Smith added. "I didn't even see people answering the questions." He said the debaters "probably drew their lines of distinction with a contrast — one of them was Republican and one of them was Democrat," but otherwise, he said nothing new was brought out in the debates.

Midland County Attorney Les Acker, a Democrat, echoed Smith's feelings somewhat, saying, "both of them avoided some of the questions." Acker said, "I think that in overall assessment — as far as performance is concerned — that Reagan was probably superior to Carter. Carter did appear to be uptight." However, Acker added Reagan probably came across better "because of his background being in the movie industry and being an actor."

ACKER SAID, "I doubt the overall debate is really going to change or make up the minds of the undecided voter. It might even work to John Anderson's advantage." Acker, too, expressed doubts over the validity of ABC's poll on the debate. "It could be manipulated many different ways," he said, "particularly if they (the callers) knew ahead of time (about the call-in poll)."

Republican Mayor G. Thane Akins said, "Of course, I'm heavily biased, but we (Republicans) won it going away. Both candidates are very smooth and good debaters, but when you've got the truth on your side, you're hard to beat." Akins said he thought Reagan's political beliefs were "clarified better by his stating his own position" rather than Carter stating it.

REPUBLICAN CITY Councilman Gordon Marcum II said he had a "very positive" reaction to the debate. "I felt like Gov. Reagan was able to show the American people that they had a clear choice," he said. Marcum said the choice was between four more years of inflation, unemployment and bad foreign relations, and "the opportunity for a change in the ways things are going." Or, in other words, between "bigger government and less private enterprise" and "free enterprise with limited government intervention."

Voters may still be undecided

But experts say Reagan 'narrowly won'

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The long-awaited debate may have left undecided voters still unable to make up their minds, even though Ronald Reagan scored a narrow forensic victory, according to a panel of debate experts.

Seven of the country's leading speech authorities, marking the same scorecards used to judge scholastic competition, gave Reagan 161 points to 160 for Carter in the Tuesday night debate.

"Of eight questions I had four for Reagan and four for Carter," said Barbara O'Connor, a speech professor at California State University-Sacramento. "This was one of the closest debates in political terms which I've ever witnessed," said Dr. James Unger, director of forensics at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C. "If you wanted to call it anything, I would call it a dead heat."

"If there was a disappointment, people were watching this debate to make up their minds," said Unger, who was chairman of the panel. "I suspect this debate may make it more difficult, rather than less difficult, for them to make up their minds." Professor Melissa Wade, Director of Forensics at Emory University in Atlanta, favored Carter by two points on her ballot, but said the performance did nothing to help her decide how to vote next Tuesday.

"I haven't made up my mind, and tonight didn't make it any easier," Mrs. Wade said. Three judges favored Reagan's debating performance, while two gave Carter higher scores and two others called it a draw. The cumulative scores for the two candidates totaled 321 points out of a possible 420, indicating both debaters did extremely well in the eyes of the experts.

The overall scorecard reflected the judges' conclusion that neither man made a major mistake and that both gave the kind of performance that had been expected. A former actor who is used to the cameras, Reagan received 30 points in the "presentation" category, the highest score either candidate achieved. Carter got 27, a high score except in comparison to Reagan's polished delivery.

Reagan also outscored Carter 28-25 in refutation, another category which favors someone at home under the spotlights.

Carter, by comparison, beat Reagan 28 to 26 in the quality and authority of evidence he presented, in the judges' view. And he outscored Reagan 28-25 in analysis.

In the reasoning and organization, categories the candidates scored 26-26 ties. Here is how each of the experts scored the debate on a scale which allowed a maximum of 30 points for each candidate from each judge over six categories.

- Unger: Carter 22, Reagan 22.
- Miss O'Connor: Carter 26, Reagan 26.
- Professor James Copeland, Marquette University High School: Carter 23, Reagan 21.
- Professor Jack Rhodes, University of Utah: Carter 22, Reagan 23.

—Professor Donn Parson, University of Kansas: Carter 23, Reagan 26.

—Mrs. Wade: Carter 22, Reagan 20.

—Professor William Southworth, University of Redlands (Calif.): Carter 22, Reagan 23.

In a Sept. 21 debate between Reagan and independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson, the same panel judged Anderson the winner by a score of 169 to 154. Carter did not participate in that debate.

Parson said Reagan performed better against Carter than he did against Anderson. "I think Reagan was much more responsive than he was in the first debate," Parson said.

Southworth said that after watching Reagan and Carter debate, he is leaning toward a vote for Anderson.

Mrs. Jack Merritt Supports Tom McGinnis for County Constable

Hattie Merritt, wife of the late Constable of Midland County, supports Tom McGinnis for the position of Constable in the 1980 campaign race. Mrs. Merritt and her family feel Tom McGinnis has continuously proven his ability to perform the duties of Constable in the same strong tradition that the people of Midland County have come to expect. Mrs. Merritt sees Tom McGinnis as an active and educated law enforcement officer willing to devote long hours and hard work to keep Midland a good place for citizens to make a home. Finally and most important, Mrs. Merritt sees Tom McGinnis as a man dedicated to the preservation of the honesty and integrity within the Constable's office that her own husband spent many years in building. Therefore, Mrs. Merritt and her family ask you to elect Tom McGinnis as your Constable on November 4.

Wallace endorses Carter candidacy

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Former Alabama Gov. George Wallace, who sought the presidency four times, on Tuesday endorsed President Carter's bid for re-election. Wallace's announcement came shortly after the nationally televised debate between Carter and Republican presidential nominee Ronald Reagan.

"I was impressed by the president and the statements and answers he gave during the debate," Wallace said in a statement released by spokesman Elvin Stanton. "I am reassured that he is the best qualified candidate to lead our nation through the difficult times ahead."

"Therefore, as an Alabama Democrat, I do plan to vote for the president and support him in next Tuesday's elections." Wallace voted for Carter in the Alabama presidential preference primary in March, but did not formally endorse Carter's re-election efforts.

Wallace, who ran unsuccessfully for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1976, endorsed Carter that year in a move that was seen as assuring the Deep South vote for the former Georgia governor.

The former Alabama governor also ran for the nation's highest office in 1964, 1968 and 1972. Wallace, now with the University of Alabama, was crippled by a bullet wound in 1972.

The Golden Bulldog

A letter recently arrived at The Reporter-Telegram informing us that U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock has earned the "Watchdog of the Treasury Award."

The award — the golden bulldog — has been presented since 1964 by the National Associated Businessmen to recognize senators and representatives who compile voting records favoring economical government spending.

During the 96th Congress, Rep. Hance had an "economy" voting record of 72.7% which qualified him for the "watchdog" award, according to George W. Koch, president of the Grocery Manufacturers of America, Inc.

While notification of the award was a pleasure for us, it really came as no great surprise. It probably won't surprise Rep.

Hance's constituents here in the 19th Congressional District, either.

That's because since he took office Hance has maintained the high standard of representation to which the people of this district have become accustomed.

Economy in government is a principle the hard-working, freedom-loving people of this area understand and strive to preserve.

So presentation of the award really is no more than reaffirmation of something we had already realized: Kent Hance is serving his constituency well as an extension of the values and principles embraced by the people of this district.

For that we are glad and Rep. Hance has every right to be proud.

Tougher bond laws

Federal narcotics agents are chagrined, with reason, at the number of Latin American drug dealers who thumb their nose at U.S. laws.

True, the Drug Enforcement Administration is making plenty of arrests and seizing large shipments of illicit drugs.

But the wealthy "cocaine cowboys," a name coined by Florida police after a series of drug-war shootouts, rarely stand trial. They simply post the bond demanded by the courts as a condition of release from jail and skip blithely back to Bolivia or Colombia, where they are safe from prosecution.

And the drug-smuggling profits are so great that it is not unusual for the cash-loaded criminals to forfeit as much as $1 million in bond.

Under present laws, judges cannot hold the smugglers without bond until after conviction.

A bill introduced in the Senate by Sam Nunn, a Democrat, would give the courts more leeway in tightening bond standards. They would be allowed to consider the probability of the accused committing another crime — or skipping the country.

The bill is stalled in Congress. It deserves a healthy push.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 29, the 303rd day of 1980. There are 63 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Oct. 29, 1929, the New York stock market collapsed, leading to the Great Depression of the 1930s.

On this date: In 1923, the Republic of Turkey was proclaimed.

In 1956, Israeli troops invaded the Sinai Peninsula.

In 1961, Syria seceded from the United Arab Republic and formed the Syrian Arab Republic.

In 1962, the United States lifted its Navy quarantine of Cuba at the request of U.N. Secretary-General U. Thant, who flew to Havana for talks with Fidel Castro.

Five years ago: President Ford said he was prepared to veto any bill to rescue New York City by having the federal government guarantee the availability of funds to prevent a default.

One year ago: New York City police arrested 959 anti-nuclear demonstrators who tried to close the New York Stock Exchange on the 50th anniversary of the stock market crash.

Today's birthday: Actor Richard Dreyfuss is 33.

Anti-Semitism charge dirties Illinois congressional race

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — There's a nasty campaign in this district where incumbent Congressman Paul Findley, described by a Jewish House colleague as a "fine human being," fights charges in the Jewish press that he is a "practicing" and "ardent" anti-Semite.

This heavy accusation is based on Findley's dalliance with PLO leader Yasser Arafat and actions in Congress interpreted as "anti-Israel." Findley's young, two-fisted, Jewish opponent, David Robinson, trying to raise funds in several Jewish communities outside Illinois, hit Findley with slanderous ads and appeals.

His effort brought an outpouring of contributions and forced Bob Hope, nominally a loyal Republican, to cancel a fund-raising appearance for Findley. But Robinson's ambition also caused many thoughtful Jews to anguish over deciding what is anti-Semitic, or anti-Israel or valid criticism of the Jewish state. Fortunately, wiser heads are cooling this acrimonious situation.

The assault was the work of Jimmy Klaber, a Robinson staffer, describing himself in the ads as a former official of the Anti-Defamation League (ADL) of B'nai B'rith. Klaber wrote that "Paul Findley is a practicing anti-Semite ... One of the worst enemies that Jews and Israel have ever faced in the history of the U.S. Congress. NOW is the time for us to rise up and help David slay the PLO Goliath. Please contribute generously NOW!"

was fired after the ruckus started, but not before mailgrams were sent urging attendance at fund-raisers to "help defeat ardent anti-Semite" Findley.

One recipient, a top aide to a Democratic senator, wrote Robinson that the solicitation was a "shameful display of political hyperbole," and that while Findley could be faulted on issues, the "anti-Semitism charge debases our politics."

When officials at the ADL's Washington headquarters saw the ad, they wrote Robinson that it was wrong for Klaber to cite his former tie to ADL. "We were aghast with that ad," said David Brody, director of ADL's national office. "However opposed we are to the PLO, it is sinful to characterize Findley as an anti-Semite. Jews disapprove of these tactics."

Myer (Mike) Feldman, listed as co-host for a Robinson fund-raiser in Washington, also disassociated himself from the "anti-Semite" charges. Feldman, a senior partner in the prominent law firm Ginsberg, Feldman and Bress was once a top hand in the Kennedy White House. He regrets that he didn't know the mailgram's

Sadat and Qaddafi playing a deadly game

WASHINGTON — A deadly two-man game has been going on for years in the Middle East — and both players are men who should know better. The participants, President Anwar Sadat of Egypt and Libyan strongman Muammar Qaddafi, have been trying, by one means or another, to remove the other from the playing field "with extreme prejudice" — by assassination or violent overthrow.

This updated version of "The Most Dangerous Game" has been followed with some nervousness by the American intelligence community. U.S. hopes for peace and stability in the region would blow sky-high if either Sadat or Qaddafi succeeded in rubbing out his rival.

The seesaw struggle between the two leaders is chronicled in U.S. intelligence files. The falling-out began nearly a decade ago. Qaddafi, a young pan-Arab zealot, was an admirer of Sadat's revolutionary colleague and predecessor, Gamal Abdel Nasser, the charismatic military man who masterminded the ouster of Egypt's playboy King Farouk in the 1950s. Nasser at one point tried to unite Egypt and Libya as a first step in creating one great Arab nation.

Qaddafi — who even lived for a time in Sadat's home — came to believe that Sadat had betrayed the Nasser dream and the pan-Arab cause. Even before Sadat solidified this suspicion by making peace with Israel, the two Arab rivals indulged in what State Department analysts described in their reports as "bizarre adventures" aimed at each other's throat.

In actual numbers, Qaddafi has probably planned more violence against Sadat than the other way around. But Sadat has done his share.

Jack Anderson

In public, Sadat has called his desert neighbor crazy, childish and suffering from a Napoleonic complex. In private, he has planned Qaddafi's assassination.

"President Sadat," says one of several top-secret CIA reports, "has ordered the Egyptian intelligence service to draw up plans to overthrow Libyan President Qaddafi ... Sadat reportedly stipulated that the coup should appear to originate within Libya, and that care be taken to conceal Egypt's hand ... Sadat is apparently going about the planning with some caution."

One of many Qaddafi plots against Sadat is described in a top-secret State Department report. It tells of a meeting between the Libyan dictator and George Habash, a member of one of the Palestinian terrorist groups Qaddafi has bankrolled to the tune of some $70 million a year. Habash was promised all the money he needed to engineer Sadat's overthrow, according to the report. The plot was to involve leftist Egyptian army officers, Palestinians and communists, and was to include "a plan to assassinate the Egyptian leader, using non-Arab terrorists to avoid damaging the Palestinian position in the Arab world."

ART BUCHWALD

FBI won't make big time with cut-rate productions

WASHINGTON — It is obvious that the FBI is not ready for prime-time television. I plan to discuss the ABSCAM tapes today, but not the moral and ethical questions of whether they should have been played or not. I will deal with the quality of the show as it pertains to show business.

The ABSCAM production values were the worst I've ever seen. The tapes in many cases were out of focus, and the sound made most people think they were hearing "Shogun."

The acting, except for Congressman Myers, was way below professional standards. The FBI men who played the parts of those offering bribes were stiff and showed no emotion. The director, whoever he was, did nothing to encourage his cast to move around the room and bring some life to this listless drama.

As for the set in the hotel suite, it is evident that the FBI was scrimping on its budget, hoping that no one would notice how cheap the furniture was. Even the costumes were badly chosen; you couldn't tell the difference between the people who were pulling off the sting operation and the congressman who was being stung.

If this wasn't enough, the FBI went with a cliché-ridden script that we've seen on television time and time again. The lines sounded as if they had been written by someone in the fingerprint department, and it comes as no surprise that the writer chose to take his name off the credits.

As a hard-hitting who-done-it AB-

Art Buchwald

SCAM was one of the biggest disappointments of the year, and the FBI better get its act together before the show is canceled from the air.

The first thing I believe the bureau will have to do is get in someone who knows television. If the FBI expects to stay in show biz, they should appoint Freddie Silverman of NBC as the new director of the FBI.

Then they will have to move their headquarters to Hollywood where all the studios are equipped to handle this kind of series.

They're going to have to cast their show with professional actors. You can't risk putting amateur FBI agents in key roles when millions of dollars are at stake. You need a Peter Falk, Lloyd Nolan and Angie Dickinson to play the parts of the undercover agents. The congressmen can play themselves, since they seem to have their hearts in their work more than the FBI actors.

In order to keep up the interest of the audience, you can't stage the entire sting operation in a hotel room. You have to go outside and show shots of automobile chases and work in a few hot love scenes. That may not have anything to do with ABSCAM but will keep the people from turning the dial.

Lee Remick could play the frustrated wife of one of the FBI undercover men who takes to drink because her husband keeps going out every night dressed as an Arab sheik and won't tell her what he's up to.

She could be having an affair with a labor leader who she doesn't know is also an FBI undercover agent. The possibilities are endless to make ABSCAM into another "Dallas."

The American people deserve more for their tax money than scratchy tape with unintelligible dialogue. You either produce a sting operation with class or you don't put it on the air. We can't have a law enforcement agency that thinks all it needs to get an Emmy award is a hand-held Sony camera and a cassette of half-inch tape. Anyone can catch a crooked congressman taking money, but it takes talent to put it on the screen and persuade the TV audience to tune in for next week's episode.

Border bridges given OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Mexican government has given the go-ahead for two bridges to be built between Mexico and Texas at Los Indios in the Lower Rio Grande Valley and at Presidio.

Bob Krueger, U.S. ambassador-at-large for Mexico, announced the decision Tuesday, hailing it as "kind of a breakthrough."

He noted that trade between the U.S. and Mexico has more than tripled in the past four years.

"It's something I think very important to South Texas," the former Texas congressman said about the two bridges.

Krueger said Mexican foreign ministry officials told him about the decision at a Washington meeting.

The State Department had issued U.S. permits for the bridge at Los Indios in 1974 and for the Presidio bridge in 1976.

U.S. permits also have been issued for bridges at Donna, Pharr and Mission.

Krueger said proposals to expedite procedures for issuing permits were discussed at the meeting.

Representatives of the General Services Administration will meet with Mexican officials in December to discuss federal staffing requirements for the new bridges, he said.

The U.S. staffs each bridge with customs, immigration, public health and agriculture inspectors.

The bridge between Los Indios and the Mexican state of Tamaulipas would be a new route. Cameron County, Texas, has agreed to take care of the American share of construction costs and will be repaid by tolls.

The bridge between Presidio and Ojinaga, Mexico, now is a privately owned toll bridge built in the 1920s.

The operator of the wooden bridge, the Presidio Bridge Co., went as far as the Supreme Court trying to scuttle plans for the new bridge, arguing that it would be put out of business by the publicly owned competitor.

The Mexican government had announced it would close its side of the existing bridge when a new bridge opens.

The Supreme Court turned down the bridge company's bid for an appeal on Oct. 6.

Presidio County would issue revenue bonds to pay the U.S. construction costs, and the bonds would be paid off by charging tolls.

Cris Aldrete, federal co-chairman of the Southwest Border Regional Commission, said the Mexican government had suggested that a new approach was needed for issuing bridge permits.

"The Mexicans came up with a temporary restraining order, you might say," he said.

Reaction reveals no winner in TV debate

By JIM ADAMS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy Carter just smiled, Ronald Reagan found no wounds and supporters of each man said they were happy. Judging from the political reaction, there was no loser in Tuesday night's presidential campaign debate.

Republican senators and House members scattered across the country said Reagan handled the issues well. "This should assure the election of Governor Reagan," said Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., a national debater himself as the 1976 Republican vice president candidate.

Similar words in Carter's favor came from Robert Strauss, the president's campaign chairman, who declared, "This ought to be the lift we need to put us on over."

ON NBC-TV'S "Today" show this morning, Strauss said: "I don't think either one won or lost. It's always in the eye of the beholder."

Reagan's chief of staff, Edwin Meese, interviewed with Strauss, said the president "had distorted some of his (Reagan's) positions during the campaign and this gave him (Reagan) an excellent opportunity to accurately portray his true positions as far as the public was concerned."

Democrats generally praised Carter's performance, Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley saying Carter clearly established he favors diplomacy while Reagan favors a military buildup.

One exception was activist Tom Hayden, a Carter supporter, who said he thinks Reagan won because Reagan "is a better actor."

"And I think that's an extremely dangerous legacy of television," Hayden said. "I just think that it's extremely dangerous to equate a television debate with making presidential decisions."

AN ASSOCIATED Press poll of 1,062 persons who watched the debate, most of them professed Reagan supporters, found 46 percent saying the Republican nominee did the better job in the debate and 34 percent saying Carter won the confrontation.

ABC News reported that telephone callers nationwide judged Reagan the winner 2-to-1, 469,412 to 227,017. The network cautioned, though, that many city switchboards jammed up so it was easier for Reagan's rural supporters to get through.

Carter told supporters at a rally that the debate was "a very fine opportunity for me and Governor Reagan to sharply draw a distinction between the Republicans' and Democrats' history and distortion of history, the control of nuclear weapons and an absence of commitment to control nuclear weapons."

Reagan, heading for a post-debate rally, said, "It seemed to go all right."

As to whether he won, he said: "That's a decision for others to make, but I feel very good about it. I thought it was an opportunity to answer many of the false charges and accusations he (Carter) has been making throughout the campaign."

VICE PRESIDENT Walter F. Mondale watched the debate in Philadelphia and said he thought it "has been very helpful."

"The difference between the two candidates, and the sharp contrast, was very clear to me," Mondale said.

Reagan's running mate, George Bush, said the debate "won't do anything but strengthen Governor Reagan's position."

Bush said Carter tried to distort Reagan's views on nuclear arms and social programs, and looked like "a little fella pressing it. I believe the debate will be a big plus, but who knows."

Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., one of Reagan's early challengers for the Republican presidential nomination, said, "Reagan was in command of his facts and logic and was the clear victor on virtually every question."

ANOTHER FORMER Reagan challenger, former Treasury Secretary John Connally, said he was pleased with Reagan's performance.

"I thought President Carter tried to personalize the debate and flow over the issues and make Reagan the issue, but he (Reagan) responded effectively."

Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., said Reagan came across not as belligerent but as "poised, confident and a man of peace."

MS chapter begins its 'Stay at Home' parties

The Multiple Sclerosis National Permian Basin chapter will be holding its annual "Stay at Home" party today through Sunday, according to Sharon Owens, MS program director.

Members from Kappa Kappa, a Midland College fraternity, and other MC organizations will deliver bottles of wine to local residents in exchange for donations.

Invitations and wine are expected to be delivered to about 1,000 Midlanders. Once the wine has been delivered to the resident's home, donations in the range of $25 are sent back with the invitation to the MS office at 2101 W. Wall Ave.

All invitations must be sent back by Nov. 10 to be eligible for the Nov. 11 grand prize drawing for a trip for two in New Orleans.

Other prizes include watches from Krueger's Jewelry and gift certificates from Gibson's, Grammar-Murphy, Johnson Tire and Supply Co., Julian Gold, Knorr Furniture Co. and Mid-Tex of Midland.

Winners will be announced on KMID-TV at 10 a.m. Nov. 11.

The first MS "Stay at Home" party started in 1974, Mrs. Owens noted. Persons wishing to participate in the party can call the MS office at 683-5444.

Reagan is 'defendant' to Carter's 'prosecution'

By WALTER MEARS

CLEVELAND (AP) — President Carter played the fiery prosecutor, Ronald Reagan portrayed the unjustly accused defendant. The jury returns its verdict next Tuesday.

And the winner gets the White House.

In 90 minutes of televised, confrontation politics Tuesday night, Carter was the candidate on the attack, Reagan frequently the defender, saying with a philosophical smile that he really couldn't recognize some of the positions the president claimed were his.

Neither candidate ventured any new proposals, neither blundered. They'd done their homework, and they remembered the political price Gerald R. Ford paid for asserting four years ago that the Soviet Union did not dominate eastern Europe and never would while he was president.

So they argued familiar positions, often in familiar words, in their one campaign debate, with Election Day one week ahead. Now six days ahead.

Carter said afterwards that he had succeeded in drawing sharply the differences between his views and Reagan's. There was more to it than that: the debate etched even more sharply the difference in their styles.

"There you go again," Reagan said to the president at one point, a weary, long-suffering smile creasing his face as he denied Carter's statement that he (Reagan) opposed the idea of medical benefits for the aged.

As he has in scores of campaign speeches, Carter sought to depict Reagan as a potentially dangerous president, although he added his standard disclaimer, saying he didn't mean to suggest the Republican candidate would want war.

For his part, Reagan tried to keep the focus on matters economic, accusing Carter of leading the country downhill. Reagan delights in statistics, and he had one handy for the debate: if every jobless American stood in an unemployment line, two feet apart, it would stretch from New York to Los Angeles.

To Carter's advantage, his stress on the threat of war and of nuclear weaponry made for more dramatic debating than Reagan's emphasis on economics. Whenever he could, the president turned back to his chosen subject.

"Inflation, unemployment, the cities, all very important issues," he said. "But they pale into insignificance in the life and duties of a president when compared with the control of nuclear weapons."

On that, and on the potential use of U.S. forces abroad, Carter said Reagan's attitudes are dangerous, disturbing, belligerent, careless, radical.

Not so, said Reagan. He said he wants to negotiate a better strategic arms limitation treaty with the Soviet Union, regards the use of American forces as "always and only a last resort" when the national security is at stake.

"I know the president is supposed to be replying to me," Reagan said at one point, "but sometimes I have a hard time in connecting what he's saying with what I have said or what my positions are."

"I sometimes think it's like a witch doctor who gets mad when a good doctor comes along with a cure that will work."

That didn't divert the Carter offensive. He said Reagan was insensitive to the needs of deprived Americans, called his tax cut proposal ridiculous, his criticism of the minimum wage heartless.

Reagan steered away from that kind of harsh language. He'd clearly decided that if soft words wouldn't turn away Carter's attack, they might turn on voters.

Hostages play small role in Tuesday's debate

CLEVELAND (AP) — When the 52 American hostages held by Iran finally come home, Ronald Reagan says, he'll want to know "what did we have to do in order to bring that about."

But, overall, the hostage question — which appeared in the last few days to loom so large in the presidential election — played only a small role in the debate here Tuesday night between Reagan and his Democratic foe, President Carter.

Carter did not defend his handling of the situation.

But he did defend his decision to release to Iran, once the hostages are freed, the millions of dollars of undelivered arms purchased by the late shah. The delivery was frozen after the hostages were seized Nov. 4, 1979.

Both candidates were asked what they would do to prevent a similar situation from arising. Neither answered directly.

Reagan said he wanted Congress to conduct a complete investigation when the hostages are released — and to find out what terms brought their release.

Said Reagan: "What I do think should be done, once they are safely here with their families and that tragedy is over — we've endured this humiliation for just lacking one week of a year now — then I think it is time for us to have a complete investigation as to the diplomatic efforts that were made in the beginning: Why they have been there so long."

"And when they do come home, what did we have to do in order to bring that about, what arrangements were made."

Reagan implied that the crisis could have been averted.

BBB warns against caller

The Permian Basin office of the Better Business Bureau is alerting area companies that a man going by the name of Purcell is telephoning various firms in this area.

The man says he is an employee of La Bodega Restaurants or an employee of an advertising firm for La Bodega Restaurants out of Dallas. Companies have been approached to buy advertising for placemats that will be used in the La Bodega Restaurant, according to a BBB spokesman.

The spokesman said the manager for La Bodega Restaurant informed the bureau he doesn't use advertising of this type and hasn't given approval to any advertising firm to solicit placemat advertising for the restaurant.

No Year for Pulling "Straight Party" Levers!

Of all years in Midland County's recent history, conscientious Republicans in 1980 need to vote for the BEST MAN in the race for District Judge...and the BEST MAN in that race is the Democratic nominee, PAT M. BASKIN, a fine lawyer and citizen and a PROVEN CONSERVATIVE:

Just as Republicans welcome the support of many, many Democrats for Ronald Reagan, Judge Will Garwood of the Texas Supreme Court and other Republican nominees, we should and must vote for the outstanding candidate for District Judge...and there can be no question that PAT M. BASKIN is that man! He is far and away the best qualified candidate, and his election is extremely important to the future stability of the justice system in Midland.

Governor Reagan recognized that the judiciary MUST be non-partisan: as Governor of California, he appointed approximately FIFTY judges who were Democrats. He has pledged to follow the same non-partisan policy for judges when he is elected President of the United States.

WE, AS GOOD CITIZENS CONCERNED WITH THE QUALITY AND EXCELLENCE FOR OUR JUDGES AND OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT, SHOULD SUPPORT THE BEST MAN IN THE RACE FOR DISTRICT JUDGE. WE WILL HONOR OUR COUNTRY, OUR COMMUNITY AND OUR SYSTEM OF JUSTICE BY VOTING FOR AND WORKING FOR THE ELECTION OF PAT. M. BASKIN FOR DISTRICT JUDGE.

MENTAL HEALTH UPDATE

Alcoholism, mental illness can occur together

By KENNETH H. WOLF
MSSW, SW

QUESTION: A relative of mine has been treated in the past for a mental illness. He was a heavy drinker then and still drinks heavily. Does alcoholism and mental illness often occur together? Does one ever cause the other?

ANSWER: As you have observed, alcoholism and severe mental problems (such as schizophrenia, manic-depressive disorders, and other psychoses) do sometimes occur together in certain individuals. When these conditions do occur together, they each require treatment. One problem will not go away by treating only the other one.

An example may help clarify this point more fully. Since an alcoholic loses control of his drinking once he starts and since he is addicted to alcohol, he will remain alcoholic even if a mental illness he may also suffer from is successfully controlled. He cannot safely return to drinking under any circumstances.

There are also some individuals who abuse alcohol in an effort to medicate themselves in order to control the symptoms of a mental problem. If these individuals do not reach the point of actual addiction to alcohol they may, and I emphasize the word "may," be able to return to normal drinking behavior once their mental symptoms are under control other means than alcohol.

There is also a definite danger that an alcoholic or a person who is almost at the point of being an alcoholic will use any excuse that is available to him to justify his past drinking behavior. If the professional gives him an additional excuse of "mental illness" having caused him to drink, many such individuals may continue to drink buy deny any personal responsibility for the drinking as well as deny any ability to ever abstain completely, or may think it is safe to drink "socially" after their mental symptoms are brought under control.

In some instances, alcohol does produce or cause signs of mental illness. Taken in large enough quantities, alcohol becomes a poison to the human body. The term "intoxicated" is derived from "toxin" which means a poison. When the body is poisoned by sufficient quantities of alcohol or any other toxin, mental disturbances such as hallucinations, delirium, disorientation, confusion, agitation, impaired judgment, convulsions, tremors or depression may occur.

If consumed in large quantities over many years, chronic disturbances of mental functioning may occur. These disturbances are due to the effect of alcohol on brain and nerve tissue over many years. A person may become permanently disoriented, confused and forgetful. He may come to require constant supervision and care by family or nursing personnel. There are presently no cause-effect links known between alcoholism and the so-called non-organic mental problems.

Comments or questions from our readers are invited. Although the Update cannot give personal replies or give specific advice, we will use as many comments and questions as possible in our future columns.

Please address them to: Mental Health Update, 3701 North Big Spring Street, Midland Texas 79701.

Improvements needed to raise SAT scores

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Staff Writer

Although the Midland school district scored above the national norm in the Scholastic Aptitude Test taken by high school seniors last year, more improvement is needed to raise the SAT scores to a comparable level to those from 1979, school board members concluded Tuesday.

The SAT, as well as the American College Testing program, are considered by many as indicators of a school district's overall performance. But, SAT's stated purpose is a "predictive measure of academic performance in college, particularly during the first year," according to a district report.

The 2½-hour test examines verbal and mathematical skills using multiple choice answers.

Two scores reflecting verbal and mathematics sections are reported separately. The SAT scoring scale ranges from 200 to 800.

English, mathematics, social studies and natural sciences are covered by the ACT assessment.

ACT scores usually reflect a student's overall high school education and ability to do college-level work.

Results from one of the two tests and high school grades are used by college admissions officers as a means to predict how that student will perform in college. But, it was noted that most colleges and universities accept SAT scores.

Midland schools scored 446 on the verbal tests and 489 in math while the national norm showed a verbal score of 424 and a math score of 466.

Last year, the district had scored 454 and 493 on the verbal and math scores with a national norm of 427 and 467 respectively.

However, the district was well above this year's state norm of 416 on the verbal section and 455 in math.

Midland High School did well in the verbal portion of the SAT, scoring 458 while Lee High School exhibited a score of 437.

But in mathematics, LHS topped MHS with a score of 496 compared to 479.

This led Dr. Joseph Baressi, assistant superintendent, to suggest that the district examine the two high schools' English and mathematics programs to discover those points which tend to give them higher scores and apply them to the schools' weaker areas.

Observations made by the report showed that students taking courses in foreign language and advanced math had higher SAT scores than their counterparts not in those classes.

At MHS, those taking foreign language scored 497 on the verbal and 533 in math, while those not taking foreign language exhibited scores of 453 and 478, respectively.

Those in advanced math courses at the high school scored 493 on verbal and 526 on math as compared to 432 and 425, respectively, for students taking regular math courses.

The LHS scores using the same criteria demonstrated scores of 460 on the verbal and 533 mathematical compared to 410 and 480, respectively, in the foreign language category.

Students taking advanced math studies showed scores of 460 on the verbal test and 530 in math compared to their regular math counterparts exhibiting a score of 370 in both tests.

Another study showed that male SAT scores were higher than those for females. Dr. Baressi said one possible explanation is that male students take more math courses than female students.

Trustees discussed various methods to raise the district's SAT scores. They agreed that if more students take the pre-SAT test during the junior year, it is likely their SAT score would be higher.

However, student apathy regarding the PSAT was cited as a reason by Baressi for the lack of participation.

ACT scores for MHS and LHS were somewhat lower than national averages, the report noted. Students at MHS scored 16.7 while Lee students showed a score of 18.2. The national ACT score was set at 18.5.

Baressi noted that the reason for the lower ACT score is that students with lower academic abilities take the ACT whereas higher achieving students take the SAT.

Trustees discuss crowded classes

Predictions indicate possible shortage of 66 rooms

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Staff Writer

Predictions of overcrowded elementary school classrooms within the next five years furrowed many trustees' brows during Tuesday's school board meeting.

By the 1985-86 school year, Midland Independent School District could possibly face a shortage of 66 regular elementary classrooms with a projected enrollment expected to reach 10,434 elementary students should present conditions continue, according to projections made by Payton Cook, director of pupil and community services.

And the kicker is that Cook's projections are "conservative" figures.

The district has 382 classrooms utilized by 19 elementary schools, the report noted. Of that total, only 296 classrooms are designated for regular classroom use.

The other 86 rooms house libraries, music education, enrichment, art, learning disability, special education, migrant, Title I and bilingual programs.

Elementary enrollments as of Oct. 22 were recorded at 8,370 students in kindergarten through the sixth grade.

This year, the report noted most elementary schools are fully utilizing their available classroom space with five schools reporting a total surplus of eight classrooms.

Those surplus rooms house physical education classes, strings programs, resource and media centers.

However, next year school officials are projecting an additional 14 regular classrooms will be needed as the district faces a possible classroom deficit of 18 rooms.

And elementary school enrollments at that time are expected to reach 8,961 students, according to the report.

Only two elementary schools during the 1981-82 school year, Washington and Bonham, are expected to have a surplus of two available regular classrooms, the report continued.

Trustees approved taking bids on four portable buildings for Burnett, Jones, South and Bowie Elementary schools.

Estimated total cost of the buildings was undetermined. However, a ballpark figure in the $35,000 to $45,000 range was mentioned by Mailey.

Budget money to pay for the buildings will be discussed at the next board meeting.

However, several trustees noted that it could come from the district's reserve fund, leftover money from the $3 million repair and maintenance bond issue or from tax roll corrections.

Currently, the district has four portable buildings with three located at Rusk Elementary and one at Bowie in addition to The University of Texas of the Permian Basin trailer at Bowie.

Solutions to the projected situation ranged from constructing a new elementary school to resetting boundaries, in addition to the portable buildings, several trustees noted.

Construction of a new elementary school would require another bond issue and approval by voters. If such a bond issue was approved, said Trustee President Ed Runyan, construction would probably not be completed until 1983.

Last year, Midland voters shot down the $10.2 million bond issue Oct. 23, 1979, which included provisions for a new elementary school.

Eliminating several district programs through the trustees' evaluations might provide some classroom space, board members suggested.

Trustee Parker Humes brought the possibility of re-drawing several boundary lines. However, most trustees agreed changing boundaries would be a short-term measure that would not address the problem.

Another solution briefly mentioned by Mailey would be to redefine classroom space.

So far, total school enrollment has been recorded at 15,726 students as of Oct. 22.

Last year at this time, enrollments totaled 15,308, and in 1978, the district recorded 15,517 students attending elementary and secondary schools.

Mailey noted that the projections were based on trends set by past enrollment figures. Since the district is at the top of an enrollment curve, he added that making accurate projections is difficult.

Sex education embarrasses Peking teachers

PEKING (AP) — Some Chinese teachers of personal hygiene purposely advance slowly through the course book so that the school year ends before they come to the section on sex education, which they consider embarrassing to teach, the China Youth News says.

In an article published Tuesday, the newspaper said Chinese teachers should not be embarrassed and noted that some Peking schools had found it was an easier subject to teach if the course was taught separately to boys and girls.

Trustees to investigate new tax appraisal board for local school district

School trustees decided Tuesday to investigate the district allowing a single tax appraisal board to provide assessing and collection duties for the school district.

In a letter from Gilbert C. Tompson dated Oct. 20, he stated that the Tax Appraisal Board would offer assessing and collection services in addition to the state-required appraisal function which sets property values for local property owners.

Trustees expressed uncertainty with the terms of the taxing board proposal as well as dissatisfaction with the district's agreement allowing the city to perform its taxing operations.

Don Furgeson, district business manager, noted that tax collections using the city's computer were "adequate." But, the time when the school district could receive its tax dollars were considered less than adequate.

Apparently, the city takes its tax money first and the interest on the school tax money which is collected through the city's computer goes to the city, board members charged.

Trustees agreed to see if it would be feasible in the future to perform its own assessing and collection duties.

In other actions, board members are very pleased by the financial fortunes of the two high school football teams.

The District 5-5A opener between Permian High School and Midland High School brought in total receipts of $22,410, with MHS taking $10,771.

Also, a 16-member textbook committee headed by School Superintendent James Mailey met trustee approval.

Other items which met approval included gifts from Jane Long and Midland Freshman schools, bills payable, cafeteria financial statement, the awarding of grade points for health courses at the secondary level and personnel resignations and appointments.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You have stated repeatedly that men can be sexually active at 80, and I wish you would cut it out! You are wrong, but you seem to have an obsession about this subject.

I am an honest 60-year-old man who begs to differ with you. A man is no stud at 60. In fact, most men are on the decline starting at about 40. Some even before that. I suppose there are a few exceptions, but very darned few. The men who write to you saying they are just as good at 70 as they were 30 are either lying or kidding themselves.

The next time you consult a gerontologist, please pick an honest one and make sure he's informed on sexuality.

The cemeteries are full of men who tried to prove they were just as good lovers at 60 as they were at 30. Thank you.—SIXTY AND NO STUD

DEAR SIXTY: I did say that men can be sexually active at 80, which is true. Much depends on their attitude, the state of their general health, and whether they have an interesting and interested partner.

I did NOT say that all men are just as good lovers at 60 as they were at 30. All are not, some are BETTER!

DEAR ABBY: The letter asking whether marriage between a Republican and Democrat could ever work interested me because my marriage was also "mixed." My husband was a devout Republican and I a dedicated Democrat.

Every election day we'd both go off to the polls and cancel out each other's vote. We talked about it, argued about it and even laughed about it. In spite of our political differences, we had a wonderful 40-year marriage.

He's been dead for three years, and I'm certainly going to miss him this November.—VOTING FOR CARTER

DEAR VOTING: So will Mr. Reagan!

DEAR ABBY: After a miserable marriage and traumatic divorce, I married a woman so wonderful that it made everything that had occurred previously seem like a bad dream from which I had finally awakened. She has given me faith in myself, joy beyond description, inspiration and the kind of love I thought existed only in romantic novels. My two little ones (I have custody) adore her as she does them.

Paradise, right? Wrong! She has one habit that drives me up a wall. She is never on time for anything. If she says "a few minutes," it can mean an hour. An hour can mean three.

Abby, I cannot count on her to be on time for anything. Nor can anyone else. She is always behind and running late. It is an exasperating fly-in-the-ointment of what would otherwise be a union made in heaven. Can you, or any of your experts, suggest a cure?—BEWILDERED IN BUCKS COUNTY

DEAR BEWILDERED: Not unless the lady wants to be cured. By your account, she has five virtues and only one fault—exasperating as it may be. Many "unions made in heaven" have worse tradeoffs. Nag her—but count your blessings instead of the minutes.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ARIES IN ASHTABULA, OHIO: It may sound shocking, but I believe it's possible to love several individuals at the same time with nearly equal tenderness, and we need not lie to assure each of our passion.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Heloise sends love

Today I just want to let each and every one of you to know just how much I really do love and appreciate you.

Some days my heart just overflows with love for you dear readers who write me and tell me about yourselves, or your families, and share your shortcuts and ideas.

I truly wish I had time to sit down and answer each letter personally, be it a question on how to clean a stubborn stain on your carpet, or just to let you know that I received your letter and how much it brightened my day.

But, there's just no way that I can ever attempt such a feat, and my only recourse is through my column.

So, dear hearts, I want you to know that I do get your letters and I treasure each and every one. I use them in the column whenever possible, and try to publish the most asked questions as often as possible, yet have a variety of hints and ideas that will be of interest to all.

What I'm trying to say is thanks from the bottom of my heart for letting me come into your homes and lives each day to exchange ideas that help make all of our lives a little sunnier. —Hugs, Heloise

CAKE MESSAGE
Dear Heloise: I baked a cake one day for my husband as a let's-make-up dessert.

Since I had gone over my budget at the store, I didn't have any decorating paraphernalia. But I did have food coloring and an artist's paint brush. Get the idea yet?

I "painted" my message on the frosting and it looked better than any decorating I could have done with icing tips.

If you're not good at writing with frosting — most of us aren't — you can really go to town with a paint brush. Try it next time. The limits are as boundless as one's imagination. — Jo Long

Was hubby impressed? After all, that's what really mattered, anyhow. — Heloise

Living Today

By SHARON A. HILLIS
County Extension Agent

One week from today we, as a nation of people, will have elected those leaders we expect to lead our country from home base through our national level.

Living today, creatively, in our world is exercising your American freedom to VOTE as an informed, responsible, individual — "a caring American", loyal to the red, white and blue.

WHAT IF.....

An American left home this morning, bound for work along the same old route. Rushing (as usual), thinking about ten days work that all must be accomplished today. And, of course, there is that special meeting tonight, Timmy's baseball game and Sarah's choir practice — all TODAY. And, oh yes, the church board meeting at 5:30, today. How am I going to find time to vote today, too? But wait. Why is all the traffic stopped? What is that soldier saying to the motorist? And why are all these foreign flags flying everywhere? Am I having a nightmare or did I just forget momentarily that I am on foreign non-free soil? Why am I feeling this sudden chill of terror?

It could happen — not in America, our good old USA, you say? Yes, it COULD happen in America, in our good old USA — if we allow it to. And the Americans' ten days of work to do, special meeting, baseball, choir practice, voting in elections and church board meeting would suddenly be insignificant. Why?

Because they are a part of America's way of life and a "free country's" activities where the individual chooses those he wishes to participate in.

How do we continue to have these few freedoms listed, and a million others we take for granted every day? (Flying Old Glory over our own roof top each day comes immediately to mind.)

We start by giving our immediate attention to the election day that is one week away — Nov. 4 — and VOTE as an informed, responsible individual.

INFORMED

Informed means: considering all the vital issues to our total country's well being, searching through all the information you can beg, borrow or find on all the candidates running that will enable you, the individual, to determine to the best of your ability how he or she plans to meet the many urgent issues that are vital to the well being of our free nation in these first years of the 1980's — to insure the coming years remain free and prosperous.

RESPONSIBLE

Responsible means: with every freedom you ever gained, from the crib on, a responsibility to be borne by you came with it. If you took the freedom, but not the responsibility, someone else is still bearing that load today, along with his own. Give away enough of responsibilities — and you lose your freedom, too.

INDIVIDUAL

Individual means: A created being with a separate individuality that is independent of all other in form, prepared to develop the potential within that allows one to contribute and interact with the total society, based on his own internal resource headquarters.

INVESTING IN AMERICA

When you leave the election booth, be ever more determined to be an informed, responsible individual on a continuing daily basis. And, most importantly, search for ways to invest your money, time, effort and full support into youth programs based on American principles — elementary through college age — that develop youth into American leaders we so desperately need and will need even more in the years to come. Be a "caring American" every day.

AT WIT'S END

Is romance dead?

By ERMA BOMBECK

Where has all the romance gone? I'm talking about the bits of poetry that were whispered in your ear. The subtle brush of a curl from your forehead. The strains of a melody that captured the moment. I figured out the other day the last time my husband had his arm around me at the dinner table was in 1969. I had a chicken bone caught in my throat.

When did sentimentality begin to crumble? Was it the first time men peeked under the long skirts and discovered we had legs and not pedestals? Was it the first time we looked over a man's shoulder and said, "You don't have to take the mower in for service, Ralph. All you've got is a clogged carburetor. Give me the wrench." Or was it the first time we slammed our own car door on his outstretched hand?

Romanticism has become so... so practical. Remember when a woman used to wear a gold heart around her neck etched in French, "Je t'aime plus que hier, moins que demain." ("I love you more than yesterday, less than tomorrow.") Now she wears a door key or a toothbrush, which is about as subtle as a pickup truck running over your foot!

I saw an ad awhile back for Cosmopolitan in which a girl with tousled hair was saying, "For my birthday, he brought me six boxes of blueberries and a Spanish shawl. On his birthday, he sent me Dom Perignon and his birth certificate with the message, 'I was born to be yours.'"

"On the first anniversary of our meeting we went to Bermuda, enjoyed the pink sand, the underwater caves and each other for five straight days (and nights). My favorite magazine says there's no thrill on earth like having a man in love with you."

Where did she find this man? In one of the underwater caves?

I tell you we've lost it. We've gone from the prose of Elizabeth Barrett Browning to Burma Shave to quotes from Peanuts and Paul Harvey.

Our sentiments are mass-produced by Hallmark. Our innermost secrets are transferred to bumper stickers. Our pet names for one another are shared with the world on license plates.

A friend said the other day, "Cheer up. Traditions are returning. Brides are no longer being married in a free-fall parachute jump or in a forest witnessed by chipmunks. They're returning to antique satin and veils of illusion tulle. The music has gone from 'Days of Wine and Roses' to 'We've Only Just Begun.' There are traditional receptions for the family, honeymoons and the throwing of bird seed."

"Bird seed!" I said. "What happened to rice?"

"It was impractical!"

See what I mean?

Queen snubbed by monarch

LONDON (AP) — British newspapers charged today that Morocco's King Hassan II had snubbed, insulted and humiliated Queen Elizabeth II and her husband, Prince Philip during their state visit to his North African nation.

The newspapers said the 51-year-old Moroccan monarch left the 54-year-old queen waiting while he rested in his air-conditioned trailer, delayed a state banquet without telling the royal couple and wrangled with them over seating arrangements.

"She has never been treated in this fashion in all her 27 years on the throne — never with such incivility," said one of the queen's aides, according to the Daily Mail.

But Buckingham Palace said the queen and her husband were "perfectly content" with their 10-day tour of North Africa and discounted reports that she was angry. The Moroccan Embassy in London welcomed the palace statement and accused the press of misinterpreting "certain aspects of Morocco's well-known hospitality."

The queen and her host exchanged compliments in speeches at a banquet at his palace in Rabat Monday night, and she and her husband have received tumultuous welcomes from huge crowds of Moroccans.

But the Daily Telegraph wrote of Hassan's "erratic behavior." It said a senior Buckingham Palace official, whom it did not name, reported that at one point the queen was left stranded by the king and seriously considered walking out.

Ann Morrow of the Daily Telegraph reported that the king "once or twice neglected the courtesies the queen expects."

"Members of her household were being pushed around by the king's bodyguards yesterday and they were not taking very kindly to it," Miss Morrow wrote.

The Guardian said a member of the queen's staff told it "that the impromptu changes of schedule, on which King Hassan has been insisting over the past two days, have amounted to something close to an insult to the queen." The newspaper spoke of "chaotic organization."

Other newspapers said the queen, after being humiliated and snubbed by the king, came close to losing her temper. Edward Vale of the Daily Mirror said Hassan turned his back on the queen to talk to aides, and a British official commented: "This is becoming impossibly rude."

"Bring the queen home today," said the tabloid Sun. "Why on earth should we expect her to put up a moment longer with the sulks and tantrums of this petty despot king?"

The British royal couple were visiting Casablanca today and were scheduled to fly home Thursday.

Gala farewell bid to Beverly

NEW YORK (AP) — Beverly Sills' retirement from singing was just what she wanted — a great big party. No tears, a minimum of pomp and $1 million raised for the New York City Opera.

And it was more: Ethel Merman in red, belting out "There's No Business Like Show Business," Leontyne Price singing "What I Did for Love," and a waltz with Walter Cronkite.

From the moment Carol Burnett walked pigeon-toed into Act 2 of Johann Strauss' "Die Fledermaus," shouting "Beverly! I know she's in here," opera was out and fun was in.

The party at Lincoln Center's New York State Theater was sold out. Those who attended the farewell for one of the nation's foremost opera stars paid $250, $500 or $1,000 for dinner and the show, and standing room was $75. The program will be televised by PBS on Jan. 5.

Miss Sills, 51, who will continue as managing director of the New York City Opera, has insisted Monday night's performance was her last on an opera stage.

The program, with Miss Sills in a sequined and feathered gown of navy blue as Rosalinda, brought a host of revelers — many of them new to opera roles — on stage for the Act 2 cafe party scene.

After Miss Burnett, who sang, "It's goodbye Donizetti, bring on the spaghetti. It's today," came Sherrill Milnes with "Maria" from "West Side Story," and pianist Bobby Short with a foot-tapping performance of "Nashville Nightingale."

Then came Eileen Farrell in "I've Got the World on a String" and Donald Gramm with "I Want What I Want When I Want It" and his words for Miss Sills: "She Gets What She Wants When She Wants It."

Some singers used microphones, others didn't. Some, like Mary Martin, didn't need microphones. She sang, to much applause, a coy-voiced "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" accompanied by an almost naughty dance.

James Galway entered tooting a pennywhistle, then played "Danny Boy" on his gold flute.

Some opera stars opted for popular tunes. Renata Scott sang "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" while tenor Placido Domingo's "Grenada" could make one forget all others.

Julius Rudel conducted it all with gusto, and ballet was not neglected — Cynthia Gregory performed a solo and Heather Watts and Peter Martins appeared in a pas de deux.

A highlight, introduced by Dinah Shore singing "Just one time, sing just one more time" was Miss Sills and Miss Burnett in a repeat of a duet first seen on their television special.

Television's Walter Cronkite waltzes Beverly Sills to the strains of the "Fledermaus" waltz as celebrities from show business, television and politics gathered at the New York State Theatre in New York Monday night for the final performance of Miss Sills. (AP Laserphoto)

Huge audience for series windup gives NBC boost

NEW YORK (AP) — The thousands of Americans who sat glued to their TV sets for the final game of baseball's World Series helped make NBC the winner of the networks' prime-time ratings race for the week ending Oct. 26, according to figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co.

NBC, which has now led the Nielsen ratings for four of the past six weeks, claims a lead of nearly four ratings points over runnerup ABC for the season to date.

However, NBC maintains the 1980-81 season began with "Shogun" week, Sept. 15-21, while ABC and CBS argue that the season, delayed by the recently resolved actors' strike, began Monday.

INDISPUTABLE IS NBC's dominance since mid-September, and the most recent Nielsen survey yielded figures to continue that trend. NBC won the week with an average rating of 19.6, to 17.6 for CBS and 17.1 for ABC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 19.6 percent of the nation's TV-equipped homes were tuned to NBC.

Key to NBC's latest triumph was the deciding game in the World Series, won by Philadelphia over Kansas City. The rating for the baseball game was 40, and Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 40 percent saw at least part of the game.

The pre-game show was runnerup in the ratings, with two CBS programs, "60 Minutes" and "Dallas," third and fourth and "Love Boat" on ABC in fifth.

Two other Top 10 shows were from NBC, "Real People" in sixth place and "Sophia Loren: Her Own Story," in seventh.

A good deal of prime-time in the most recent week surveyed was consumed by specials and movies, and 16 of the 73 programs broadcast were paid political spots for the presidential candidates.

THE HIGHEST-rated of the political ads was a Ronald Reagan commercial on CBS on Friday — 18th for the week, perhaps a result more of its place in the schedule than of viewer preference. ABC alone does not include political spots in its calculation of weekly averages.

Of the movies and specials, "The Last Song" on CBS finished 10th for the week, trailed by two animated shows, "Life's a Circus, Charlie Brown," 11th, and "It's the Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown," in 12th place, both from CBS.

A CBS movie, "Pleasure Palace," was 16th, with "A Cry for Love," an NBC film, in 17th place.

Four of the week's six lowest-rated shows were political spots, with "NBC Magazine with David Brinkley" 72nd and a "CBS Reports" production, "The Saudis," 73rd — last.

Here are the week's 10 highest-rated shows:

World Series, Game 6, with a rating of 40 representing 31.1 million homes, and World Series Pre-Game, Game 6, 27.4 or 21.3 million, both NBC; "60 Minutes, 26.4 or 20.5 million, and "Dallas," 25.8 or 20.1 million, both CBS; "Love Boat," 24.7 or 19.2 million, ABC; "Real People," 24 or 18.7 million, and Movie—"Sophia Loren: Her Own Story," 22.8 or 17.7 million, both NBC; "NFL Monday Night Football," Oakland vs. Pittsburgh, 22.7 or 17.6 million, ABC; "Dukes of Hazzard," 21.7 or 16.9 million, and "The Last Song," 21.6 or 16.8 million, both CBS.

THE NEXT 10 shows: "Life's a Circus, Charlie Brown" and "It's the Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown," both CBS; "That's Incredible" and "Fantasy Island," both ABC; "Little House on the Prairie," NBC; Movie—"Pleasure Palace," CBS; Movie—"A Cry for Love," NBC; Reagan for President, Friday, and "Father Figure," both CBS, and "Nashville Palace," ABC.

Mouse ears and memories at 25th anniversary party

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — It's been a long time since they last sang "M-I-C-K-E-Y M-O-U-S-E-E." But the former Mouseketeers and their fans haven't forgotten the words.

They all got together at a Disney Studios sound stage Tuesday to relive a part of their childhood — and a chapter of television history — at the Mickey Mouse Club's 25th anniversary reunion.

"It's like we've never been apart," said Annette Funicello, perhaps the most famous Mouseketeer, who along with 30 others donned black ears and a white T-shirt and gathered before a huge MICKEY Mouse backdrop for the celebration.

"It hasn't been 25 years for some of us," Miss Funicello added as she signed autographs. "We see each other all the time."

Many of the former Mouseketeers at the party were reunited at Disney's Burbank studio in July for a Mickey Mouse Club anniversary special to be televised in late November.

But the actors' strike intervened, Miss Funicello said, and rehearsals resumed only Monday.

Except for Miss Funicello, who went on to "Beach Party" movies and peanut butter commercials, many of the former Mouseketeers would not be recognized. As smiling, well-scrubbed kids, they kept millions of American youngsters glued to their TV sets five afternoons a week in the 1950s.

Some have built careers in show business. Cubby O'Brien is still playing the drums, Tommy Cole is a makeup artist, Sherry Alberoni does cartoon voices and commercials and Dickie Dodd has a rock band.

"A lot of us are still in show business," said Cole, who won an Emmy for his makeup work on "Backstairs at the White House."

"I guess we liked it so much that we didn't want to do anything else," he said.

But others now do everything from selling real estate, like Margene Storey, to managing a supermarket, like Charley Laney.

Those gathered remembered the childhood days they spent on the Disney set.

"We went to school here," reminisced Mike Smith, a home designer, decorator and renovator.

"I used to give the teacher the same assignment every day for months and she'd never notice," said Bonni Kern, a housewife and sometime dance instructor.

"My last residual check was 42 cents — I don't know how many years ago that was," joked Don Underhill, who sports a huge handlebar moustache and works as a credit manager for a tool company in Irvine.

But however distant the Mouseketeer years sometimes seem, every so often there's a reminder.

"I've been in front of audiences all my life," said O'Brien. "When I was on the road with Karen and Richard Carpenter, someone would always come up and say, 'Weren't you a Mouseketeer? I grew up with you guys.'"

Christian militias battle anew

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon's two major Christian militias fought with mortars, rockets, grenades and machine guns in the middle of Beirut for the fourth day today, and police reported nine killed and more than 40 wounded.

The warring factions battled each other in the low-income neighborhood of Ein Rummaneh, setting several buildings on fire and forcing hundreds of families to stay in basements and bomb shelters, police said.

The fighting pitted the Phalange Party, which fielded the largest Christian militia in Lebanon's 1975-76 civil war, against the Tigers of former President Camille Chamoun's National Liberal Party.

Both were allies in the civil war against an alliance of Moslems and Palestinian guerrillas. But they split afterwards and their struggle for dominance reached a peak last July with a massive Phalangist crackdown that forced the National Liberals to dissolve their military branches in most of East Beirut and the Christian heartland in Mount Lebanon.

Ein Rummaneh, which makes up roughly one-fourth of mostly Christian East Beirut, was one of the few National Liberal strongholds that survived the Phalangist crackdown, which was led by Bashir Gemayel.

A police spokesman said Gemayel's militiamen attempted to break through the Tigers' defenses in Ein Rummaneh during the night but were beaten back in heavy combat.

In the past 48 hours, the government of Christian President Elias Sarkis and newly-appointed Moslem Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan mediated several cease-fires that failed to take hold.

Ein Rummaneh is nominally controlled by the Lebanese army, which has been rebuilt since it dissolved along sectarian and ideological lines during the 19-month civil war.

THE NEWSPAPER BIBLE

Here is good news for those that believe

Now let me remind you, brothers, of what the Gospel really is, for it has not changed—it is the same Good News I preached to you before. You welcomed it then and still do now, for your faith is squarely built upon this wonderful message;

And it is this Good News that saves you if you still firmly believe it, unless of course you never really believed it in the first place.

I passed on to you right from the first what had been told to me, that Christ died for our sins just as the Scriptures said He would.

And that He was buried, and that three days afterwards He arose from the grave just as the prophets foretold.

He was seen by Peter and later by the rest of "the Twelve."

After that He was seen by more than five hundred Christian brothers at one time, most of whom are still alive, though some have died by now.

Then James saw Him and later all the apostles.

Last of all I saw Him too, long after the others, as though I had been born almost too late for this.

For I am the least worthy of all the apostles, and I shouldn't even be called an apostle at all after the way I treated the church of God.

But whatever I am now it is all because God poured out such kindness and grace upon me—and not without results: for I have worked harder than all the other apostles, yet actually I wasn't doing it, but God working in me, to bless me.

It makes no difference who worked the hardest, I or they; the important thing is that we preached the Gospel to you, and you believed it.

Liquid diet supplements must carry warning label

Dear Dr. Solomon: A few years ago I was on the verge of trying the liquid protein diet until I read about its potential health hazards. Now I am surprised to learn that the product can still be purchased. If the liquid protein diet is as big a threat to health as I have been led to believe, why does it continue to be available? — Ms. A.C.

Dear Ms. C.: Although they have not been banned from the market, liquid protein and similar products that are offered for use in a program of weight control or as dietary supplements now have to carry warning labels. The Food and Administration requires the labels on food products with a calorie content that is more than 50 percent protein, and which are promoted for the purpose of weight reduction, to state that protein diets of less than 800 calories a day may cause serious illness and even death. The label also must warn about the importance of medical supervision for anyone using the product, and must state that it should not be used for infants, children, or pregnant or nursing mothers.

A different warning is required on protein products designed as part of a nutritionally balanced diet plan that provides at least 800 calories. These must carry a notice that they are not to be used as the sole or primary source of calories for weight reduction.

And products whose total caloric value is more than 50 percent protein, and which are intended for use as dietary supplements, must carry a warning that they are to be used as food supplements only, not as a means of weight reduction.

As I have noted in my books and in this column on numerous occasions, a program of weight reduction should not be based on fads but on a nutritionally sound, well-balanced diet that can be adapted to everyday use once a person's ideal weight is achieved.

Dear Dr. Solomon: At my annual physical examination, my doctor casually mentioned that my cholesterol level was high but that it was nothing to worry about. I don't understand this. From everything I've heard, a high cholesterol level is a cause for concern. Can you clarify this? — Peter

Dear Peter: The fact that a person has a high cholesterol level is relatively unimportant; it is the kind of cholesterol that is significant.

Cholesterol contains two main kinds of lipoproteins — high-density lipoprotein (HDL) and low-density lipoprotein (LDL). The more HDL a person has, the less the risk of heart disease. Conversely, the more LDL, the greater the risk. For example, Eskimos have high cholesterol levels but seldom experience heart attacks because their HDL is high. Apparently you are one of the fortunate persons whose total cholesterol is high because you have a lot of HDL.

posed systemwide increase to more than $12.7 million.

If approved, minimum monthly residential rates would increase from $5.83 to $6.25 for the first 30 kilowatt hours.

The increase for residential customers amounts to 10 percent, while the increase in commercial rates would be 5.4 percent.

The hearing will be held before the commissioners rather than a hearing examiner.

The hearing will be held at the PUC offices at 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Austin.

No protestors appeared to intervene against the increase at a pre-hearing conference held in Austin Monday.

Public hearing scheduled on proposed utility hike

Austin Bureau

The Public Utility Commission has set a public hearing for Dec. 8 on a $2.6 million rate hike proposed for West Texas Utilities.

West Texas Utilities is seeking the 8.3 percent increase in electric rates for residents of unincorporated areas of 52 counties including Brewster, Briscoe, Brown, Coke, Callahan, Coleman, Crockett, Eastland, Motley, Pecos, Reeves, Jeff Davis, Crane, Kent, Kimble, Donley, Edwards, McCulloch, Presidio, Reagan, Sterling, Schleicher, Sutton and Upton counties.

Similar increases are being sought in the incorporated areas of those counties, which would bring the pro-

Federal study says U.S. police are poorly prepared for riots

WASHINGTON (AP) — The potential for serious unrest in American cities remains high, but police officials across the nation are generally ill-trained to deal with disorders, according to a federal study.

The study, prompted by the Miami racial riot in May, also concluded that police should shift more emphasis to preventing outbreaks rather than simply controlling them.

The report released Sunday contended that because of poor economic conditions, high unemployment among inner-city residents and news media attention to alleged police abuses, "the potential for disorder is probably as great as ever."

Under a contract with the Justice Department's Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, the University Research Corp. here analyzed the Miami rioting in which 18 persons died, more than 1,300 were arrested and economic losses reached $100 million to $125 million.

Researchers then discussed their findings with police executives around the country.

The report urged police executives to go beyond the community relations programs that were born during the last major wave of urban rioting in America during the 1960s.

"The traditional approaches of newsletters, public meetings to discuss crime rates, tours and social events for neighborhood kids may improve the police image among some residents, but they do little to lessen tensions within many communities."

Satellites bypass television's censors

PUTNAM, Conn. (AP) — When Johnny Carson gets bleeped on the "Tonight Show" by the NBC censor, Mark Kulaga and Portus Barlow III don't have to read lips to know what he said.

While most Americans saw only snippets of the Moscow Olympics on television, Kulaga and Barlow watched for hours.

WITH A 12-foot-wide, dish-shaped antenna in their backyard, Kulaga, 21, and Barlow, 32, can hone in on a constant shower of microwaves beamed to earth by eight video-producing satellites parked over the equator.

Some of the satellite-carried programming is ready for public viewing, but some is unedited, such as taped shows and news film being sent from all over the world to New York network headquarters.

"Part of the glamour of this is to watch things you are not supposed to see," Barlow said.

Kulaga and Barlow own a company called Black and White Enterprises Ltd., among about a dozen companies in the United States that have jumped into the "earth station" market.

HOME EARTH stations — antenna, receiver and amplifier — are scaled down versions of the receiving systems cable TV companies use. But while cable companies primarily use just one satellite and provide an average of a dozen channels, home earth stations can catch signals from any of the satellites, which serve more than 50 channels.

The technology involved is not new. What is new is the price — it's now within reach of the consumer.

Black and White's lowest priced system is about $3,000, excluding installation which can be done by the customer, said Kulaga.

"Two people could put up the antenna and have pictures in a weekend," he said.

ABOUT THREE years ago the lowest priced earth station was about $20,000. Even a year and a half ago it was $10,000, Kulaga said.

"What has happened is that as products are mass produced, the price has slowly been coming down and this year the price has finally come down to consumer level," said Kulaga.

But legal fuzziness surrounds this fledgling industry, deregulated last November by the Federal Communications Commission.

FCC rules prohibit "unauthorized reception and use" of satellite sig-

Rich can't get free legal aid

BOSTON (AP) — A man with more than $250,000 in assets has been sentenced to six months in jail on charges he lied to get a free, court-appointed lawyer.

U.S. District Court Judge A. David Mazzone said he imposed the sentence Monday on Robert L. Kent, 54, of Lowell, Mass., to preserve the integrity of the free-lawyer program and to serve as a deterrent to others.

Court officials said it was the first time in memory anyone was sentenced for claiming a right to a court-appointed lawyer when he wasn't entitled to one.

Kent pleaded guilty to a charge that he made false financial statements in an affidavit to secure a court-appointed lawyer for representation in another case.

U.S. Attorney Edward F. Harrington told the court Kent had assets exceeding $250,000, including two apartment buildings in Berlin, N.H., 50 acres of land in Gorham, N.H., and half-interest in a Lowell apartment building.

Kent, a former U.S. Census worker, originally had been charged with submitting false statements on a passport application. He was sentenced to 30 days on that charge.

nals, but the industry is so new that "there's not a good set of legal precedents on what is permitted and what is not," said Ronald Lepkowski, chief of the FCC's satellite radio branch.

FCC regulations also prohibit the retransmission or relay of information received from the satellite signals — for example, taping a program and selling it. "That's piracy. It's definitely illegal," said Kulaga.

Also, cable companies pay for the right to relay the programming they receive via satellite, but the earth station owner's obligation to pay the programmer is unclear.

IN SOME cases, the programmers (who originate the material) "are not set up to deal with customers on a one-to-one basis," Kulaga said. "It would cost them too much to process your $3.50 per month."

"For the individual consumer, we will tell them how to contact all the programmers. ... We'll advise them as to the legality of it and that will leave it up to them whether to pay the programmer," he said. Programmers' fees range from nothing — religious programs usually are free — to $4.50 a month, he added.

Barlow said he believes, however, that regulating earth stations will be near impossible. The probable solution, he suggested, is a system to protect programming, using devices that would scramble transmissions. Paying customers would be given decoders to unscramble programs.

The big difference between earth stations and cable is the cost — cable TV's is much lower. In Connecticut, for example, basic cable service runs between $8.50 and $11 per month, and the customer gets a dozen channels. Services like Home Box Office cost an additional $8 to $10 a month, said Richard Hubbell, president of the Connecticut Cable Television Association. SATELLITE TV users, by comparison, might have to pay up to $4.50 per channel.

well as those where broadcast reception is poor.

Barlow said Black and White's recent advertising produced 400 inquiries during its first two weeks, about 60 percent from individual consumers and the rest from video equipment dealers.

"Four-hundred inquiries in 15 days is a good indication the public is ready," Barlow said. "It's strictly a matter of economics. I'm filling a void."

Cable is most profitable in densely populated areas but is not generally available in sparsely populated regions. Barlow sees satellite TV's market in those areas, as

Jastrow believes life on other planets

Scientific evidence indicates that forms of life far more intelligent than man may have visited the Earth from another older star on what we call Undiscovered Flying Objects.

That belief is expressed by Robert Jastrow, professor of earth science at Dartmouth College and professor of astronomy at Columbia University in the premiere issue of the new Science Digest.

"One hundred billion stars like the Sun surround us in our galaxy alone, according to solid astronomical evidence," Jastrow says. "Many planets made of the same ingredients as Earth. All the necessary elements for the evolution of life are present -- simple, unthinking life at first and complex, intelligent life later on.

"I believe that life is common on the many planetary systems in the cosmos," Intelligence, says Jas-traw, permits a flexible response to changing conditions and has a greater survival value than any other single trait. "This leads to the conclusion that life on other worlds is not only billions of years older than man but also billions of years beyond him in intelligence."

Noting that Dr. Allen Hynek has made a study of reported UFO sightings and concluded that several were unmistakably UFOs, Jastrow goes on: "Such extraterrestrial contacts are more probable today than ever before in the history of our planet. Since about 1960, television stations scattered across the Earth have been spraying their signals into space. The shell of signals, moving away from Earth at the speed of light, has now swept past more than 40 stars in the neighborhood of the Sun. "If any of those stars harbor intelligent beings, our presence is now known to them. As it took 20 years for our signals to reach these stars, it must take 20 years for their reply. Unless man is alone in the cosmos, we can expect a message -- or a visit -- by the end of this century." And, asks Science Digest, "Would these superior beings bother to talk

12-year-old girl recovering well from riot injuries

MIAMI (AP) — Five months ago, a car careening out-of-control from Liberty City race rioting smashed into 11-year-old Shanreka Perry as she played outside her home.

Her left leg was hopelessly mangled, her lungs were punctured and a gash in her forehead was so deep doctors at first thought she had been shot.

Miss Perry is still hospitalized, but the child has recovered her spirit and doctors say she'll be going home soon.

"If this happened to you, would you give up?" she asks. "I'm still in this world, I still have life and I'm thankful for that. I'm going to be just as happy as I was before."

At first, the youngster refused to look at her disfigured body. She begged her mother, Patricia Small, to move so she wouldn't have to go back to the neighborhood where she was injured. She spat out her medicine and refused to eat.

But now she zooms through Jackson Memorial Hospital corridors in her wheelchair, tickles her nurses on their knees and looks forward to getting an artificial leg. She celebrated her 12th birthday at the hospital Sunday.

The hospital, which treated three-fourths of the May riot victims, said she was the only such victim left there.

"She's remarkable," said her grandmother, Louise Small. "Look what she's been through as an 11-year-old kid. She's a fighter."

Miss Perry was injured May 17 as racial rioting claimed 18 lives following the acquittal of four white former policemen tried on charges stemming from the beating death of a black Miami insurance man.

As a cab driver rushed the girl to the hospital, a crazed mob dragged two young whites from the car that allegedly struck her and attacked them. One white died, and two blacks charged in his killing are now on trial.

The child had two major operations and countless skin grafts. A colostomy and a catheter enable her to excrete wastes, but doctors hope those measures will be temporary.

Doctors once told her that she might never be able to wiggle her toes, but she talks of walking and soon will be fitted with an artificial leg.

"Today I was exercising my leg and they gave me crutches and I walked," she said. "If I walk straight, I don't think people will ever know the difference."

"It's not going to stop me from doing what I want to do, just not having the leg," she said. "I care about it and I wish I still had it and I wish I was normal like the rest of the kids. But do you think I'm going to let that get me down?"

12-year-old Shanreka Perry exercises her arms while in a wheelchair at Miami's Jackson Memorial hospital where she has been recovering from injuries suffered during Miami's May riots. She was struck by a car and pinned against a wall when the car's driver lost control after his vehicle was attacked by an angry, brick-throwing crowd. Now Shanreka is looking forward to leaving the hospital. (AP Laserphoto)

FBI arrests Franklin

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A man wanted for questioning in the shooting of Urban League President Vernon Jordan Jr. and the killings of two black men in Salt Lake City was arrested in a blood bank in Lakeland, Fla., the FBI said Tuesday night.

In a statement released in Washington, the FBI said Joseph Paul Franklin, 30, was arrested on the basis of a warrant involving the Salt Lake City slayings.

FBI spokesman Otis Cox, in disclosing the arrest, said Franklin was also wanted for questioning in the wounding May 29 of Jordan in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Franklin is suspected of writing a threatening letter to President Carter and the arrest came three days before Carter was to appear in Lakeland.

Jack Warner, a spokesman for the Secret Service in Washington, said a threatening letter received in 1976 by then-candidate Jimmy Carter was signed James Clayton Vaughn, one of the aliases Franklin used.

Warner said the Secret Service recently went to Salt Lake and determined the letter was from the same man being sought in the current case. "We alerted our field offices to be on the alert for that particular person," Warner said.

The letter accused Carter of "selling out to the blacks."

Carter was to make a campaign appearance in Lakeland on Friday.

Warner said he did not know if Secret Service agents were involved in the arrest.

Cox confirmed that Franklin was also known as James Clayton Vaughn of Mobile, Ala.

Phillip McNiff, special agent in charge of Tampa FBI office, said, "We have many presidential candidates down here visiting. This man is a suspect in several snipings. This is the type of person you do not want around during a presidential campaign. Also we know he sent a threatening letter to President Carter in 1976.... We wanted to make sure he was not down here when they (the presidential candidates) were."

"It so happens that Carter is supposed to be in Lakeland," McNiff said. "We feel much better knowing where he (Franklin) is at this time."

McNiff said the Secret Service "was very much interested in knowing his (Franklin's) whereabouts." He said Secret Service agents interviewed Franklin after the FBI questioned him.

"He's also wanted for questioning in other incidents that have occurred," Cox said, while emphasizing that the only arrest warrant for Franklin at this time was in connection with the Salt Lake City slaying of Theodore Tracy Fields and David Loren Martin.

Cox said Franklin was transported from Lakeland to Tampa, Fla., "where he is presently incarcerated." Franklin will be brought before a U.S. magistrate on Wednesday, Cox said.

Cox said Franklin was charged with "civil rights violations" in the two killings.

Cox said Franklin was "apprehended at a blood bank in Lakeland. He was arrested without incident. He was there giving blood. Why, I really don't know."

Cox said he did not know whether Franklin was armed.

McNiff said Franklin had been in Tampa for several days and had gone to Lakeland Tuesday. He said the agents were tipped by an employee at the blood bank who recognized him from an FBI description.

One found guilty, one innocent in first riot slaying trial

MIAMI (AP) — The first murder trial stemming from bloody race rioting which rocked Miami in May has ended with a 20-year-old black man convicted of manslaughter and his 18-year-old co-defendant acquitted in the death of a white motorist.

Prosecutors had argued the men "excited the mob of some 200 people" who stomped, stabbed and shot Jeffrey Kulp, 22, on May 17.

A Dade Circuit Court jury of three men and three women, including one black, deliberated just over three hours Tuesday before convicting James McCullough.

Frankie James was found innocent of all charges stemming from Kulp's death.

Both defendants had been charged with second-degree murder.

McCullough was acquitted of charges of attempted second-degree murder and aggravated assault in the beating of Kulp's brother.

Judge Marco Goderich said McCullough, who faces a maximum sentence of 15 years in jail, would be sentenced in six weeks.

McCullough was taken to the Dade County Jail. His lawyer, Roy Gonzalez, said he would appeal.

In closing arguments, prosecutors who had accused the defendants of direct responsibility for the slaying said McCullough and James' guilt lay primarily in their participation in the mob action.

"Their actions aided, abetted, assisted, encouraged and excited the mob of some 200 people," said Assistant State Attorney Leonard Glick.

"Jeffrey Kulp died as a result of injuries inflicted by these defendants and the mob. One law says they must be held responsible for their actions and the actions of the mob," he said.

Kulp was pulled from his car and beaten, stabbed and shot on the first night of rioting triggered by an all-white jury's acquittal of four white former policemen tried on charges stemming from the beating death of black businessman Arthur McDuffie.

Witnesses in the five-day trial said Kulp suffered gunshot wounds and fractured cheekbones, had an ear cut off and had a rose jammed down his throat when a crowd of blacks pulled him and his younger brother, Michael, from their car.

Community leaders meet, take 'Preventive Medicine'

ATLANTA (AP) — Two dozen community leaders were called to a closed-door meeting today as "preventive medicine" aimed at dealing with tensions aroused by violence against blacks and the slayings of 10 black Atlanta children, a federal official said.

Ozell Sutton, regional director of the Justice Department's Community Relations Service, said Tuesday the meeting should provide an assessment of the impact of those events on the city's black community.

"There is some perception in the black community of a concerted attack on blacks," Sutton said. "We hope to get the community leaders in a position to allay those fears."

That perception, Sutton said, has resulted from the child killings in Atlanta, the May sniper wounding in Indiana of National Urban League Director Vernon Jordan and the slayings of six black men in Buffalo, N.Y.

Invited to the closed-door session were representatives of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith and other civil rights and civil liberties groups.

Sutton said the Justice Department hoped that involving community leaders in an assessment of racial attitudes in the city would head off any confrontation between blacks and whites.

The killings of the 10 black children since July 1979 have troubled the city's black community. Four other black children reported missing during the same period have not been found.

The Georgia State Patrol last week began patrolling the neighborhoods where the missing children were seen last or where the bodies of the dead were found.

Wind-fanned fires char 17,000 acres of California brush

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fanned by Santa Ana winds gusting to 50 mph, brushfires erupted throughout Southern California, charring nearly 17,000 acres and forcing the evacuation of some homeowners as firefighters battled for control.

The fires were concentrated in Ventura, Orange, Los Angeles, San Bernardino and Santa Barbara counties. The largest blaze, the Owl Fire in Orange County, was 50 percent contained Tuesday night after raging over 8,500 acres, firefighters said. But a fire in Ventura County was racing through brushland toward the Pacific Coast Highway after blackening 8,000 acres. It was not immediately known when the fire, in Sycamore Canyon near Point Mugu State Park northwest of Los Angeles, would be contained, according to Colleen Kenyon, spokeswoman for the Ventura County Fire Department.

A number of homes were threatened by the Sycamore Canyon blaze, but none was reported damaged. Several families from Camarillo Grove Park homes, directly in the path of the flames, were evacuated. One building near the Conejo Grade was destroyed by fire, and firefighters set a backburn to keep flames from Camarillo State Hospital, officials said.

In the Owl Fire, some 30 miles southeast of Los Angeles, two firefighters suffered second-degree burns, officials reported. Many others suffered minor injuries ranging from scrapes to smoke inhalation and heat exhaustion in both blazes, said fire information officer Linda Hill.

The cause of the Owl Fire, which destroyed one ranch house and two barns Tuesday, was under investigation, said Captain Fred Stoll of the Orange County Fire Department.

The fire, burning in a northwesterly direction, was concentrated in Telegraph Canyon and was moving toward Carbon Canyon, Stoll said. There was no further threat to residents in the fashionable Yorba Linda and Anaheim Hills, who had been asked to leave their $200,000 homes Tuesday as the inferno moved toward the Orange County communities.

Some 615 firefighters were using 135 engines, two helicopters, 12 hand crews and 15 strike teams to fight the blaze, Stoll said. But, "We haven't been able to use air tankers because of the winds," he added.

In San Bernardino County, a 1,500-acre blaze that began Monday was contained Tuesday. "The fire had threatened about 40 homes and was stopped virtually at their doorsteps," said California Department of Forestry spokeswoman Debbie Ottoson.

One firefighter in that blaze suffered second- and third-degree burns and was flown to the Sherman Oaks Burn Center.

In Santa Barbara County, a fire burned 250 acres of brush in steep terrain in Drum Canyon. No injuries or structure damage was reported.

Warren Dawson, spokesman for the Santa Barbara County Fire Department said it started as an oil company was blasting to search for oil. One blast "got away" and moved into the grass, he said.

"They will be charged for most of the suppression cost of the fire because of negligence, unless they can prove that it did happen accidentally," Dawson said.

Community keen on conservation

By The Associated Press

Top laurels in the New England-Canada energy contest went to St. Stephen's, New Brunswick, but No. 2 Monterey, Mass., hopes to power a long-term conservation program with its enthusiasm for the 3½-day effort. "Give us a chance to catch our breath, and we will be back at it," said Millie Walsh, a leader of the town's energy committee and owner of the only filling station in the western Massachusetts community of 700. "We are small enough and willing to work hard enough to become a model for the entire country as far as energy conservation is concerned," she said. Eleven New England and Canadian communities competed from Wednesday night to Saturday noon to see who could rake up the biggest reduction in electrical consumption, and St. Stephen's won with a 17.5 percent drop in its power use, the judges announced Tuesday. Monterey placed second with a 15.6 percent reduction, and Farmington, Maine, was third with 15.4 percent. Middlebury, Vt., had the best overall conservation program, and Canada's Grand Falls-Windsor won the "most innovative" honor by having a town crier walk through the streets, urging people to save power.

"We never expected to win anything. I'm so excited I can hardly think," said Tim Buskey, chairman of the Middlebury town selectmen. The Vermont town's entry centered around a high school football game Friday night that residents attended for free — if they brought in coupons showing they had turned off lights and electrical appliances at home before coming to the game. On Saturday, there was a fair featuring energy saving demonstrations. The contest, sponsored by New England governors and their counterparts in the eastern Canadian provinces, included one community from each state or province. Monterey had lost out on state grants for energy projects in the past. However, selectmen appropriated $1,000 on Monday to hire a professional grant writer to help them produce "more polished" proposals. Among projects under consideration are a small hydroelectric dam on the Konkapot River to power the library, a string of community-owned windmills on hills above town and a new solar-heated and wood-fueled firehouse for the volunteer company. Monterey's three days of near-freezing and dimly-lit homes was "worth it absolutely," said Mrs. Walsh. "Everyone gained a lot. Every single person in town learned something, and it is going to have a long-lasting effect."

St. Stephen's Mayor Douglas Hansen said the townspeople won because they turned down their thermostats, switched off their lights, abstained from television and ate cold meals. "It just goes to show that New Brunswickers are able to do the job when they have to do it," he said. St. Stephen's victory means Premier Richard Hatfield collects on a personal wager with New Hampshire Gov. Hugh Galen, who bet 10 gallons of New Hampshire apple cider that Plymouth, N.H., would win, against 10 pounds of New Brunswick-made chocolates. Other communities entered in the contest were: Burrillville, R.I.; Bridgewater, Nova Scotia; Summerside, Prince Edward Island, and Baie Comeau, Quebec.

New moons seen near Saturn

By WARREN E. LEARY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Voyager 1 spacecraft, still 12 million miles from Saturn, already is revealing mysteries of the golden planet, including two new moons and details of the shimmering rings. Scientists said Tuesday that the unmanned craft, rushing in on the planet at 45,000 mph, is uncovering details not noticed by Pioneer 11, the less-sophisticated craft that visited Saturn last year. Voyager 1 spotted the new moons — the planet's 13th and 14th — in pictures taken last weekend and found new details within the large rings, Dr. Bradford Smith said Tuesday at a National Aeronautics and Space Administration news briefing. The newly discovered satellites, as yet unnamed, are orbiting close to each other outside the most visible rings of Saturn and take about 15 hours to circle the planet, Smith said. One satellite is about 185 miles in diameter and moving in an orbit about 50,800 miles above the giant planet's clouds. The other, approximately 155 miles in diameter, is in an orbit 49,300 miles above the clouds. "These measurements are very approximate because the moons' images are just dots of light on the pictures, but as we get more data we will refine the numbers," Smith said. Voyager also has discovered new ring details, including dark, spoke-like features moving around inside the prominent B ring. The rings were named in order of discovery and the most visible are A, B and C. "It's getting harder to tell where the rings begin and end," Smith said. "In an area between the A and B rings we thought was relatively clear — called the Cassini Division — we now see a band in it and a line in that band." The one-ton Voyager 1, launched 38 months ago on a journey that first took it to Jupiter last year, is in good condition considering the rigors of traveling 1.3 billion miles through space, NASA officials said.

Boy's body found in wildlife refuge

HAM LAKE, Minn. (AP) — The body of a 6-year-old boy who had been missing for nearly six months was found Tuesday in a wooded, swampy wildlife refuge north of Minneapolis, officials said. Anoka County authorities said the badly decomposed body of Jason Wilkman, Roseville, was found by searchers in the Carlos Avery Wildlife Refuge. Authorities said clothes on the body matched those worn by the boy the day he disappeared. A portion of the skull was missing and an autopsy would be performed to determine the cause of death, officials said. Wilkman had disappeared May 16, the same day a Baptist missionary and her 8-year-old daughter were abducted as they left a Roseville beauty shop. Ming Sen Shiu, 30, was subsequently convicted of kidnapping Mary Stauffer and her daughter, Elizabeth, who escaped from Shiu's home July 7 after being held captive for seven weeks. Mrs. Stauffer told authorities that a boy named Jason was placed in the trunk of a car with her and her daughter the day of her abduction. She said the boy was removed from the trunk later the same day. Shiu, who was going to court for sentencing today in the Stauffer case, is scheduled for trial Nov. 10 on kidnapping charges in the disappearance of Wilkman. The discovery of the body ended long months of uncertainty for the boy's family. "We're thankful that God answered our prayers," said David Wilkman, the boy's father. "We know now that we can see Jason in heaven some day, even though he will be there a little earlier than we will."

Student editors facing 'trespassing' charges

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Two editors of the Michigan Daily student newspaper at the University of Michigan face trespassing charges after they tried to enter a closed athletic department meeting, the newspaper said. Editor-in-chief Mike Parrent, 21, and Joshua Peck, 23, editorial page editor, were arrested Tuesday and released on personal recognizance, an Ann Arbor Police spokesman said. The pair was scheduled for arraignment Nov. 4. Police said the two were trying to enter a closed section of Chrysler Arena where the University Board in Control of Intercollegiate Athletics was meeting. The Michigan Daily reported today that the hazing of freshman hockey team member J.T. Todd was among topics on the meeting agenda. Several hockey team members have been disciplined for their part in the Oct. 12 hazing incident. Todd quit the team last week, saying he wanted to devote more time to his studies.

Two men injured in 'botched' drug arrest in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — A botched drug arrest erupted into gunfire early today, with law officers shooting a man they mistakenly believed was a drug suspect and a Dallas policeman wounding a sheriff's deputy, police officials said.

The foulup began about 12:30 a.m., said police spokesman Bob Shaw, at the end of a series of drug arrests that had begun Tuesday night. Two Dallas patrolmen, police officers from Duncanville and DeSoto and a Dallas County sheriff's deputy went to a Southwest Dallas house to serve an arrest warrant, he said.

They knocked on the front door, said Shaw, received no answer and went to a side entrance. "When they knocked on that door, somebody inside the house yelled, 'Wait just a minute,' Shaw related. "Moments later this guy... appeared at the door with a pistol in his hand."

Shaw said police were not prepared to say who started the shooting, but said two officers fired at the resident, and he fired at them. Twelve shots were exchanged, he said, "all in the space of a few seconds."

Duncanville Police Officer Dan Robertson was wounded in both legs and the shoulder while the resident was hit in the stomach. "The other officers fell back," said Shaw, "taking their wounded with them, and they called for an ambulance and more assistance."

When a Dallas police patrol unit arrived to help, Shaw said, plainclothes deputy Steven Carrell was standing in front of the house, holding a pistol, "and when he turned toward the officer with a gun in his hand, I guess he (the officer) shot him (Carrell) once in the abdomen with a .44 Magnum. And he (Carrell) is in bad shape."

All three wounded men were in fair condition, Parkland Hospital officials said today.

Shaw said it was only later that they discovered they were trying to arrest the wrong man.

"Right then they thought they were dealing with a doper named (in the arrest warrant). It was only later in the morning we discovered the guy's name... he's lived there since early in the summer and is clean as a whistle — no prior arrests."

Duncanville Police Chief Michael Courville said the officers were trying to serve one of about 70 arrests warrants issued Monday on authority of a Dallas County grand jury. He said the issuance of 99 indictments and 70 warrants capped a nine-month investigation of illegal drug trafficking in the cities of Duncanville, DeSoto and Lancaster.

Courville said the investigation was carried out by a "tri-cities task force" that began work last February and presented its case to grand jurors on Oct. 21.

"This (arrest) was to be the last one of the night," Courville said. "We started about 6 p.m. Tuesday, and the others had gone without any problems. We had arrested about 30 people."

Montgomery murder trial likely to go to jury today

By SALLY CARPENTER

McKINNEY, Texas (AP) — Nine women and three men pondering the fate of accused ax murderer Candace Montgomery must decide if the petite housewife was defending her life when she hacked her former lover's wife to death last summer.

Mrs. Montgomery described the fatal struggle in brutal detail when she took the stand in her own defense last week, but said she killed her friend in self defense.

Closing arguments were scheduled for 9 a.m. CST today, followed by State District Judge Tom Ryan's charge to jurors, who were expected to begin deliberations this afternoon.

Jurors must decide whether the 30-year-old defendant "knowingly and intentionally" killed the woman who sang with her in a church choir.

Central to their decision is Mrs. Montgomery's testimony that Betty Gore attacked her with a three-foot ax after learning of her 10-month affair with Allan Gore.

In an attack pathologists testified was "a classic case of overkill," Mrs. Gore's arm was broken and her head split open by 28 blows. Describing the mangled body, a medical examiner said the victim's right eye had collapsed into a sinus cavity and one gaping wound left a clear view of brain tissue.

Despite Mrs. Montgomery's surprise admission to the slaying, Collin County District Attorney Tom O'Connell based his case largely on the affair and circumstantial evidence linking her to the Gore's Wylie home.

O'Connell has pointed out that Mrs. Montgomery did not leave the Gore home after knocking out Mrs. Gore and that she admitted the slaying only after a bloody fingerprint was identified as hers.

He also produced witnesses who portrayed the victim as a calm, quiet woman who had no violent tendencies. Defense witnesses characterized Mrs.

Gore as stand-offish, difficult to get along with and subject to depression.

Defense attorneys attribute the savagery of the slaying — in which in the 5-foot-6 former school-teacher was struck 41 times — to a "disassociative reaction" that caused Mrs. Montgomery to become detached from reality.

Flamboyant lead defense attorney Don Crowder maintains his client could not have planned the assault on Mrs. Gore because she told friends where she was going before she went to the Gore home the day of the slaying.

Crowder, who was cited for contempt of court twice during the two-week trial, also points to his client's 5-foot-2 frame and testimony from her husband, Pat, who said she is so opposed to violence she won't allow their children to play with toy guns.

The sandy-haired bespectacled defendant tearfully testified that Mrs. Gore struck her twice with the ax and hushed her when she pleaded to be let go.

After a frantic struggle on a floor slippery with blood, Mrs. Montgomery said she wrestled the ax away and "I hit her and I hit her..." She said she remembered being angry with the 30-year-old victim for "messing up my life."

A psychiatrist who hypnotized the defendant said an incident when she was four years old may have triggered a blind rage in the defendant. Dr. Fred Fason of Houston said she stopped swinging the ax only after that rage was spent.

He said Mrs. Montgomery's mother also hushed her when she began screaming while being treated for a head cut at a hospital emergency room.

The word association and sight of blood could have rekindled the anger she felt toward her mother, Fason said.

A polygraph examiner also said tests indicated Mrs. Montgomery was telling the truth when she said she was afraid of Mrs. Gore and did not intend to kill her.

Medicaid helps few children

DETROIT (AP) — Thousands of children are not getting the medical care Congress intended when it created Medicaid, according to a report by an American Academy of Pediatrics committee.

Roughly one in every five children is supposed to be covered by Medicaid, but a significant number receive no help and others get inadequate care, said Dr. Donald Schiff, a member of the academy committee that presented the report.

"The least fortunate are being hurt first and suffering the most," the committee concluded Monday at the group's annual meeting here.

Medicaid, designed to cover health care costs for the nation's poor, is financed by state and federal governments. Each state decides how money is spent and who may receive benefits.

The quality and amount of health care children receive varies greatly from state to state, said Steven Davidson, who coordinated the study Medicaid in 13 states.

Disparities in benefits have meant that fewer doctors are willing to participate in the Medicaid program and more children go without needed medical care each year, the study found.

Some states also impose arbitrary limits on the amount and kind of care children can receive and most are slow to pay for services and do not pay enough, Schiff said.

In New York, for example, the maximum income a family of four could earn and still qualify for Medicaid benefits was $6,000 when the program began in 1968. The income ceiling was dropped to $5,000 the following year, Davidson said.

But in Texas, a family of four cannot earn more than $2,000 and qualify for benefits, the committee said.

"It's practically impossible to get a newborn baby covered by Medicaid," said Thomas Robb, an AAP director. "It's as if Medicaid hasn't understood yet that the outcome of pregnancy is a new baby."

States faced with money shortages also are considering a reduction in the amount they will pay for services.

In North Carolina, a doctor's charge for an office call averages $10, but Medicaid will only pay doctors $4.50, Robb said. But Medicaid will pay $17 for a comparable visit to a hospital, he said.

Legionnaire's disease affects organs

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Legionnaire's disease, which can cause fatal pneumonia, also can infect and damage the kidneys, spleen and bone marrow, according to a study presented to a pathologists' convention.

"What we found was that the (Legionnaire's) bacterium spreads from the lungs through the blood... and causes damage to other organs of the body," said Dr. Dennis D. Weisenburger.

"Our findings suggest that cultures of blood samples from a patient suspected of having Legionnaire's disease may be useful to doctors in making a diagnosis," Weisenburger said.

The study was conducted on tissue samples from 21 Iowa victims and one victim in both Illinois and California, Weisenburger said. Spleen damage was found in 25 percent of the cases, bone marrow damage in 13 percent and kidney damage in 4.5 percent, he said.

The study, reportedly the first to document the disease's effect on organs other than the lungs, was undertaken after doctors found symptoms in victims that could not be explained by pneumonia, Weisenburger said.

The disease was discovered in 1976 after 29 people died following an American Legion convention in Philadelphia. The bacteria have been found in water and in air conditioning units, but doctors are not sure how it occurs or how it spreads.

The results of the study were reported Monday to a joint meeting of the College of American Pathologists and the American Society of Clinical Pathologists.

Influx of aliens responsible for TB?

NEW YORK (AP) — The influx of illegal aliens from countries where tuberculosis is still widespread may be one factor in an increase in TB in the nation's big cities, health officials say.

The bacterial disease, the nation's greatest killer at the turn of the century, has declined steadily through widespread testing and antibiotics.

It is still declining nationally, doctors reported at a conference on the subject Tuesday. But New York state had a 17 percent increase in cases last year, and some areas like New York City's Harlem report more than 50 cases per 100,000 people — four times the national average, officials said.

Dr. Matthew Locks, director of tuberculosis control for Los Angeles County, said TB has increased 10 percent there and many of the estimated 15 million TB sufferers in the nation do not know they have the disease.

"They're the source of new infection for the future," he said.

Part of the problem is illegal immigration from countries with higher TB rates, according to Locks and Dr. Charles Felton of Columbia University, chairman of a New York tuberculosis task force.

Volcano crater growing

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — New instruments monitoring Mount So. Helens show the crater of the southwest Washington volcano is expanding slightly, scientists say.

Reflectors used to bounce laser beams to sophisticated monitoring equipment were installed on the northern lip of the crater over the weekend. Scientists said Tuesday that the expansion, apparently from pressure within the volcano, was minor.

Comes the Revolution: Private schools get nasty

DALLAS (AP) — In 1938, the New Deal promised an end to the Depression, Adolph Hitler promised everything would be okay if he could just get a piece of Austria that he claimed belonged to him, and a couple of promising young actors named Spencer Tracy and Bette Davis won Oscars.

And Baylor, Rice and SMU won Southwest Conference football games, all on the same afternoon.

The latter happened on November 5, 1938 — and those three didn't win conference games on the same afternoon until October 27, 1980.

Suddenly the private schools — considered as recently as a couple of seasons ago by many folks in athletics to be in big trouble in big-time football — are not only bouncing back, they're bouncing higher than their big-enrollment brethren.

When SMU beat nationally second-ranked Texas 20-6 and Rice defeated Texas A&M 10-6 Saturday, while Baylor was winning its seventh straight by 21-6 over TCU, it gave SWC private schools a 5-4 lead on SWC state schools for the season.

And it marked the first time in 18 years that SWC private schools have led state schools in the won-lost column this late in the year. That year the private schools held an 8-7-1 advantage at the end, last time they've come out on the winning end.

THE SWIFT rise in the fortunes of the SWC church and private schools is all the more remarkable because of the trend that has seen state schools take over almost complete domination since the mid 1960s.

The state-vs.-private tables over the last three decades, listing state-school won-lost records, shows the shift from parity to state domination began in 1964 and was at its greatest from '75 through '79:

1950-1959: 1950, 6-6-0, .500; 1951, 3-7-2, .333; 1952, 5-6-1, .458; 1953, 5-7-0, .417; 1954, 4-7-1, .375; 1-55, 9-3-0, .750; 1956, 6-6-0, .500; 1957, 7-4-1, .625; 1958, 4-8-0, .333; 1959, 7-5-0, .583. TOTAL, 56-59-5, .488.

1960-1969: 1960, 7-7-2, .500; 1961, 11-5-0, .688; 1962, 9-6-1, .594; 1963, 7-8-1, .469; 1964, 11-4-1, .700; 1965, 10-6-0, .625; 1966, 11-5-0, .688; 1967, 12-3-1, .781; 1968, 11-5-0, .688; 1969, 13-3-0, .813. TOTAL, 102-52-6, .656.

1970-1979: 1970, 12-4-0, .750; 1971, 11-5-0, .688; 1972, 10-6-0, .625; 1973, 13-2-1, .844; 1974, 10-5-1, .656; 1975, 16-0-0, 1.000; 1976, 17-2-1, .875; 1977, 19-1-0, .950; 1978, 18-2-0, .900; 1979,

16-3-1, .825. TOTAL, 142-30-4, .818.

ONLY SEVEN private-school teams managed winning records during the decade of the 1970s—TCU at 6-4-1 in '71, SMU at 7-4, 6-4-1 and 6-4-1 in 1972-74, and Baylor at 8-4 in '74, 7-3-1 in '76 and 8-4 in '79.

Baylor assured itself of a winning mark a week ago, SMU needs just one victory in its last four games to go above .500 and Rice at 3-4 is in position to make a run at a winning season.

There doesn't appear to be anything resembling a fluke in the early 5-4 lead taken by the private schools: they've outscored the state schools 161 points to 141 in those nine games.

The state school winning margins have been 37, 13, 7 and 2 points, the private-school margins have been 41, 14, 12, 8 and 4—little to choose between.

NOT ONLY are the SWC private schools holding their own with the rest of the conference, they've branched out for some big wins. Baylor ended the '79 season with a convincing victory over Clemson in the Peach Bowl, 24-18. Then this season Rice outplayed LSU and gained a 17-7 victory over a Southeastern power that now has a 5-2 record that includes victories over Florida, Auburn and Kentucky.

So the automatic question — what's happening? Several SWC coaches trace the resurgence of the smaller schools to the scholarship limitations of 30 new scholarships and 95 total each year, a rule that went into effect before the 1976 season after being altered from a rule that was passed for the '74 season.

However, there's one notable dissenter and another who also sees other reasons.

HOUSTON'S Bill Yeoman is reluctant to give the 30-95 rule credit for the newly-found parity:

"The scholarship rule has nothing to do with it—it's who they put in uniforms. If some schools had bad records, evidently they didn't have real good programs. The 30-95 rule has helped people like Houston and Texas Tech just as much as it has helped the private schools," Yeoman said.

(See SWC, Page 2C)

Baylor linebacker Doak Field, left, and Rice quarterback Robert Hoffman are a couple of reasons why the private schools are staging a football revival in the SWC this year. Each has won SWC Player of the Week honors in recent weeks.

Bobcats, Bulldogs game, it wasn't all that easy

Since the Reporter-Telegram introduced its Saturday morning edition a few years back and they clamped a chain around our ankle and attached it to a desk on Friday nights, we haven't seen much high school football.

But Friday night, we managed to sneak out to Memorial Stadium. After all, San Angelo and Midland were squaring off and that always has been a lively rivalry. Unfortunately, if memory served, San Angelo in the past too often lived up to its reputation of favorite.

Friday, however, the shoe was on the other foot. The Bulldogs were not only favored, but some said they'd name their score. It's no secret that the San Angelo football program has suffered a decline in recent years. Still, for one who remembered the old days, it was hard to believe all we'd been reading in the paper.

ONE THING about it, the Bulldogs and Bobcats always drew a crowd. That was our first surprise.

No one expected the 0-6 Bobcats to bring much of a following to the Tall City. They'd already been here once and the outcome for the followers of the once Angry Orange hadn't been pleasant. But across the way, the MHS band and pep section appeared to outnumber the fans in the rest of the west stands, the Midland side, as they played the national anthem.

The obvious reaction was "Where is everybody? Don't they know this is San Angelo? Sure it's cold and even if it isn't supposed to be much of a game, how many times does a Midlander get to enjoy the spectacle of the Christians eating the Lions?"

Robert Young, former Midland High golf coach, who has seen all of the games we have missed in the last few years, was just as shocked at the crowd. "I've never seen a Midland crowd this small," he said. Other late arrivals only confirmed Young's observation.

MAYBE the prospect of a slaughter or perhaps the chill in the air kept the fans away. In any case, they missed a good game.

Denny McLain...does he belong in Hall of Fame?

By HARRY ATKINS
DETROIT (AP) — Denny McLain and Dizzy Dean each pitched for 10 years in the big leagues. Dean retired, got fat, and was enshrined in the Baseball Hall of Fame. McLain retired and got fat.

That's as far as the parallel goes — and that's a shame.

Now comes John Gasparetto of suburban Dearborn, Mich., who describes himself as a baseball fan and statistician, with a solid case for considering Dennis Dale McLain's qualifications for Cooperstown.

Jay Hanna Dean pitched for the St. Louis

Cardinals and Chicago Cubs of the National League in the 1930s while McLain had his salad years with the Detroit Tigers in the mid-1960s before backsliding to the Washington Senators and Oakland A's of the American League and Atlanta Braves of the NL in the early 1970s.

"Now that Mr. McLain is over eight years out of baseball I would appreciate someone examining his big league records in comparison to Hall of Famer Dizzy Dean," Gasparetto writes. "Mr. McLain with all of his faults and failures must be given fair consideration."

ARMED with the fourth edition of Macmillan's "Baseball Encyclopedia" and memories of McLain's brilliant 31-6 record in 1968, the last time the Tigers won a championship, we set forth to answer Gasparetto's request.

Starting with strikeouts, we found that McLain had 1,282 lifetime, 127 more than Dean. In 1968, McLain recorded a career-high 280 strikeouts, 81 more than Dean had in his best season, 1933.

In his best season, 1934, Dean won 30 games — one less than McLain's

Football, AFC style, takes over NFL

Los Angeles Times

Once upon a time, there was this funny little football league owned by a bunch of rich kids from Texas and Paul Brown, and the old established league thought they were quaint. I mean, they didn't do a whole lot of blocking and tackling, and they went around beating each other, 50-40.

The old, established National Football League tried not to look. They said to the new league, "Well, first, they got to get a football." But that was no problem. I mean, Lamar Hunt said to his Daddy, "I want a new football outfit for Christmas," and Daddy tried to buy him the Green Bay Packers. I mean, if your kid wants a set of trains, you give him the Chesapeake & Ohio, right?

When old man Hunt couldn't buy the Packers, he said, "Well, son, we'll just get a league of our own." So, that's how the American Football League was formed.

The NFL said, "Well, that young man can't go around losing a million dollars a year," and his daddy said, "No, not more than the next 280 years, he can't. On the 281st year, he's down to his last million."

THE NFL didn't associate with the new kids on the block. They said they couldn't get contaminated with the kind of football they played over there, that it wasn't football but some form of tennis. "Look," they said, "we build teams for defense and it takes years of experience. And you have all these young guys running around making touchdowns. In our league, we make tackles. Also, it's perfectly legal to intercept a pass every now and then. I mean, play what you want, only don't call it 'pro football.'"

SO, THEN the rich kids figured a way to get into High Society, the NFL, after all. The usual way. They bought their way in. They scattered money around to teams like the Giants and they got old established firms to join their floating crap game by promising to indemnify them with shovels full of money. But, they postponed the merger until a Super Bowl or two could be played.

The NFL said, "You know, you really can't play that zone defense, you gotta play man-for-man in real football, and you draft for the best athletes not need."

Well, the first Super Bowl was played and it ended up 35-10 in favor of "Dee-fense!" just as everybody figured, victory for the tried-and-true old methods. Nobody noticed how close the game really was — 14-10 at the half, for instance.

Nobody noticed that the victorious team was not just any old NFL team, it was the best one in history, and coached by the most certified genius of the art since Knute Rockne — Vince Lombardi, himself.

SUPER BOWL II was even closer. Green Bay won 33-14, but on four field goals, an interception for a touchdown, and a 62-yard bomb where a defender slipped. Hardly a juggernaut, but the NFL said "See! We told you! John Unitas will pick that zone of yours apart seam by seam."

Only the next year, Joe Namath picked the NFL defense apart man by man. The NFL thought it was a freak. They continued to ridicule the upstart league. "How can you get a pass rush with a three-man line? You gotta play grind-em-out, rock-solid football."

And, then, out of 14 Super Bowls, the NFL was able to win only two out of the last 12. Dallas and Green Bay are the only two old-line members of NFL society ever to win a Super Bowl.

Watching Dallas and San Diego play the other night, I was struck by how even stubborn pride finally crumbles. First of all, the score — 42-31.

Then, I looked around the league — 31-13, 24-23, 33-14. Games right out of the old AFL playbooks of the '60s. Three-man rushes, forward passes on downs other than third, no anxiety to "establish the running game," no "obvious pass plays." To the AFC, every play is an obvious pass play. There have been 43-28 games in the NFC this year, 37-21, 35-26, 48-26. There were 83 (!) passes thrown in the Cleveland-Pittsburgh game Sunday. There were 78 thrown in the San Diego-Dallas game. The NFC went to zone defense and three-man fronts eons ago.

The moral of the story? Remember, it's awfully easy to swallow your pride when that's all you've had to eat all day. And Confucius say, "Never laugh at 'funny little league' till you're sure you're not looking in a mirror."

Midland girls beat Cooper; AHS tops Lee

ABILENE — The Midland High girls volleyball team posted a 7-15, 15-9, 15-4 District 5-5A victory over Abilene Cooper here Tuesday night to give the Bulldogs a 4-2 second half record.

The 19-9 Bulldogs played their best defensive game of the year, according to coach Linda Jolly. Leading the way were setter Carol Blaschke and 6-2 Kathleen Teague, who turned in big spikes and blocks. Karen Collins and Landra Sisneros gave punch to the serving game.

Cooper won the JV outing, 0-15, 14-16, 15-9. The MHS junior varsity is now 4-2 in the second half.

San Angelo won the 5-5A championship Tuesday by defeating Odessa Permian. San Angelo won the first half and are now 6-0 in the second half with only one game against Big Spring left Thursday.

Abilene High defeated Midland Lee, 11-15, 15-10, 15-7, at the Lee gym Tuesday night in a District 5-5A volleyball tilt.

The loss leaves Lee with a 2-4 second half record with one game left in the season. Lee will travel to the Midland High gym Thursday for JV and varsity games, beginning at 6 p.m., to end the season. MHS won the first meeting of the two teams in the first round of district play at the Lee gym.

Lee won the junior varsity outing over AHS by a 15-3, 8-15, 15-11 margin.

Smith firing unpopular Astros fans, partners angered over changing of guard

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
HOUSTON (AP) — The changing of the guard in the Houston Astros president and general manager's office is going to be difficult both for departing Tal Smith and arriving Al Rosen.

Smith was fired Monday by General Partner John McMullen in an unpopular decision that aroused the anger of fans and many of the 25 limited partners that own the franchise. It will be hard to leave behind 20 years of dedication to the Astros.

Rosen, a former general manager of the New York Yankees, is stepping a hornet's nest created by Smith's firing. Rosen, after listening to a day of probing, often hostile questions on Tuesday, realizes he has a challenge.

"I feel every man has to walk in his own footsteps," Rosen said. "If the fans of Houston idolize Tal then I'm not going to try to change that. But if given the opportunity, I hope the fans may someday have the same kind of feeling for me."

ROSEN, hired by McMullen two days after the Astros lost to Philadelphia in the final game of the National League Championship Series, says the fan loyalty is a good sign.

"I respect the fans' feelings," Rosen said. "That bodes well for the future of the Astros. It means to me that they want to win."

Smith, interviewed Tuesday as he was cleaning out his desk, said part of the reason for his dismissal was McMullen's ego.

"He (McMullen) wants this to be his team," Smith said in the aftermath of Monday's unpopular decision. "He doesn't want it to be Bill Virdon's team or Tal Smith's team. It's a matter of ego."

Smith, given much of the credit for building the Astros from a last place team into the 1980 National League Western Division champions, also said he thought McMullen's decision to fire him was made in the emotion following their loss to Philadelphia in the National League championship playoffs.

"I find the timing most unusual that two days after we lost to Philadelphia in the championship series that he made a deal to hire Rosen," Smith said. "I think most people felt we had really accomplished something. Most of the baseball fans across the country really respected the Astros."

SMITH said the New York Mets had asked permission to interview him last January but McMullen denied the request without consulting Smith.

"I have no quarrel with that because at the time I had not thought of leaving the Astros," Smith said. "But in retrospect, if I had known what was going to happen, I would have been interested."

Smith said McMullen had told him a clause in his contract was part of the problem. Smith said his contract called for him to receive an incentive bonus for improved Astros attendance.

"Mr. McMullen represented to me yesterday (Monday) that my contract was a problem to some degree,"

Smith said. "But to me that was a lame duck excuse."

Smith said the clause netted him a nominal bonus in 1978 but it improved in 1979 and by 1982 "it would have been very substantial. I feel I've been damaged in a number of ways. This is the only club in town and unless I want to change careers, I'll have to go elsewhere."

"I'll also be denied a significant loss in income next year," Smith said under terms of his contract, McMullen is not bound to pay the incentive bonus if he is dismissed. Smith will receive only his regular salary.

NE La. hires Collins

MONROE, La. (AP) — Former offensive line coach Pat Collins was named head football coach at Northeast Louisiana University on Tuesday, succeeding John David Crow who resigned to go into private business, school officials said.

The appointment was made by a committee of the state Board of Trustees for Higher Education. The full board must go along with the appointment, but that is considered a formality, school officials said.

Collins, 39, is in his second year at Northeast after a 12-year tour at Louisiana Tech where he was defensive line coach and assistant athletic director.

He is from Shreveport, and is a graduate of Tech where he played linebacker.

Does McLain belong?

best season. McLain started 264 games lifetime, 34 more than Dean. McLain allowed 1,646 hits during his career, 281 fewer than the 1,927 hits Dean allowed. However, to be honest, Dean pitched 81 more innings than McLain.

"Hardly any difference when you consider one of them is in the Hall of Fame," Gasparetto argues.

The two right-handers both played at 185 pounds; Dean was 6-foot-2 while McLain was 6-1.

Dean's lifetime earned-run-average was 3.03, only a fraction better than McLain's 3.39. McLain had nine shutouts in 1969, two better than the high of seven Dean recorded in 1934. McLain also lead Dean in career shutouts, 29-26.

Dean was enshrined at Cooperstown after compiling a 150-83 record; more impressive, certainly, than the 131-91 mark posted by McLain.

Allstate adjusting auto insurance rates

Rates adjusted up or down according to loss experience

CHICAGO (AP) — Insurance rates on 41 recent automobile models will be boosted this year while 31 models will qualify for lower rates, Allstate Insurance Co. has announced.

The new rates for collision and comprehensive coverage, announced Monday, are based on actual loss experience, which reflects how prone the cars are to damage, how easily they can be repaired and how likely they are to be stolen, the company said.

The rate adjustment, the fourth in four years by Allstate, took effect immediately in 41 states. The Northbrook, Ill.-based corporation said the change was part of its effort to assess more accurately the risk of owning various automobiles. The revisions will be extended to other states when approval is obtained.

Based on the actual loss experience of 1979 and 1980 models, the adjustments were extended to 1981 models.

Rate reductions averaging 35 percent will be given for the first time to Dodge Aspen, St. Regis, Mirada and Diplomat; Ford LTD; Mercury Marquis; Oldsmobile Omega, Delta 88, and Custom Cruiser; Plymouth Volare and Grand Fury; Pontiac Bonneville, Grand Safari, Catalina and Phoenix; Toyota Cressida and Volkswagen Dasher.

As previously announced, Ford's new Escort and Mercury Lynx cars also will get a lower rating based on Allstate's analysis of damage and theft confinement features built into the new models.

Models with alleged poor loss experience that face an increase in rates of 10 percent to 30 percent include:

Alfa Romeo; Audi; Avanti; Buick Skyhawk; Cadillac Eldorado; Chevrolet Camaro; Datsun 310, 810 and 200SX; Dodge Colt and Challenger; Fiat; Ford Pinto and Mustang; Jaguar; Lancia; Lincoln; Lotus; Mazda; Mercury Capri; MG; Oldsmobile Starfire; Opel; Plymouth

Champ, Arrow and Sapporo; Pontiac Firebird; Renault; Saab; Subaru; Toyota Celica, Celica Supra and Corolla (excluding the Tercel) and Volkswagen Scirocco.

Increases averaging 35 percent to 45 percent will apply to BMW; Chevrolet Camaro Z-28 and Corvette; Pontiac Firebird Trans-AM; Porsche and Triumph, the company said.

Crowds line up early for hottest trial in town

MCKINNEY, Texas (AP) — The 100-year-old tan brick Collin County Courthouse sat vacant in the middle of this picturesque North Central Texas town for more than a year.

Now turnaway crowds are queuing up at its glass doors, hoping to be one of the lucky 200 people who get a seat to the hottest show in town — the ax murder trial of Fairview native Candace Montgomery.

Inside on the hard wooden benches, they haven't been disappointed. The trial has been full of more twists than a pretzel — and saltier too.

Lead defense attorney Don Crowder stunned an inattentive courtroom during jury selection by announcing that, yes, his client had hacked Betty Gore 41 times with an ax June 13, but it was in self defense.

The flamboyant Ivy League-ish attorney, who prods witnesses in a wide Texas drawl, contrasts sharply with methodical, subdued Collin County District Attorney Tom O'Connell, who often wears a rumpled suit to court.

O'Connell pleads the state's case quietly.

CROWDER HAS TWICE been cited for contempt of court by State District Judge Tom Ryan, who was O'Connell's predecessor in the district attorney's office.

One contempt charge ensued after Crowder heatedly shouted at Ryan, "I won't lay down for you" and told the judge not to interfere with his witness' testimony. The other came after the Allen attorney dropped his self-defense bombshell on an unsuspecting courtroom, and then violated Ryan's "gag order" by holding an impromptu press conference.

The people crowded on the steps of the courthouse seem embarrassed to be caught in the glare of the media spotlight. They seem ashamed of returning to the courtroom day after day. Most don't want to be quoted by name.

"I've read about a lot of murders in books and stuff, but I didn't know how a real murder trial worked," said a girl from nearby Princeton who didn't want to be identified. "I've been reading a lot about the trial too."

Mrs. Gore's father, Charles Robert "Bob" Pomeroy of Norwich Kan., sits patiently in the front row of the courtroom every day. An expansive, friendly man well over six feet tall, he proudly flashes pictures of his daughter and her two children.

HE SEEMS TO HAVE quietly come to terms with Betty's death.

But he speaks of how "broken-up" his wife Bertha is up on their Kansas farm and how his daughter would never harm anyone. He estimates he's spending about $2,000 to watch the woman who had an affair with his son-in-law stand trial for his daughter's slaying.

The older women who make up most of the crowd cluster in the cavernous courtroom in two's and three's, whispering fervently after particularly juicy revelations.

They stare at the Mrs. Montgomery's usually impassive face, waiting for tears, watching for any break in the staring countenance. One woman rivets her binoculars to the defense table, leaning forward in her seat.

The women knit or file their nails. The men sit with their arms around their wives. The domestic scenes are incongruous as the bloody testimony unfolds.

Judge Ryan has asked them not to bring sack lunches anymore.

'Only one explanation for mutilation — UFOs'

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Rancher Bill Heath says there is only one explanation for the recent bizarre mutilation and death of his Charolais bull — UFOs.

"That's what I believe," the South Texas cattle man said after finding the bull with its tongue and heart cut out. "Some people have said it was persons from the occult, devil worshippers, but they would have had to be using a helicopter to get around out there."

Heath said he is baffled by the desecration, which resembles a rash of similar mutilations two years ago in eastern Cameron County.

"It's very strange," he said Tuesday, after finding the body of his best bull Sunday afternoon. "There were no tracks around the animal. It was like he was hit and just fell over on his side."

"There was some blood coming out of its nose, but in the other carcasses, there was no blood at all."

The typical 1978 attacks involved clean incisions to remove some or all of the animals' tongue, lips, reproductive organs, heart and eyes.

Texas Ranger Bruce Casteel of Harlingen was one of several state and local officers who investigated the wave of mutilations in 1978.

"Most of the cattle I looked at I would say had been mutilated, if that's what you want to call it, by varmints, like coyotes," he said.

"I didn't go out and look at all of them. I didn't see the ones Heath is talking about," Casteel said.

Heath said he is convinced scavengers did not kill the animals.

"You don't walk up to a bull like that one. He was wild," he said of the 1,100-pound animal. "And there were no puncture marks where a tranquilizer gun had shot him," he said.

"This time, they cut a perfectly round hole above the left shoulder, cut through a muscle to get to the heart. I have a degree in animal science and I've had to do animal dissections. There's no way a person could do that with a scalpel," he insisted.

His theory is that the wound was burned with a laser-like instrument.

"Nothing would touch that carcass. Usually you know a dog will run up to anything and sniff it. The dogs ran up to this and just turned tail and ran in the other direction," he said.

Heath said he has dragged the carcass to the middle of the pasture to decompose.

"It's too muddy out there to do much else and it's too wet to burn it," he said.

Other ranchers might want to keep an eye on their herds to see if other deaths occur, he said.

"Somebody ought to call 'That's Incredible' or one of those shows because no one has been able to explain this thing," he said.

Was mother insane when child was slain?

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — A jury must decide if Patricia Ann Frazier was mentally ill last February when she cut out her 4-year-old daughter's heart, a slaying the young mother's attorneys say took place during a brief period of insanity.

Mrs. Frazier has pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity in the Feb. 22 death of her daughter, Khunji Wilson.

Police found the toddler's body lying in a pool of blood in the front seat of a car. She had been stabbed several times and her heart had been removed and was wrapped in a bloodied wash cloth nearby.

Defense attorney Harold Lerew and Mrs. Frazier signed a consent document Tuesday, acknowledging that the child's death was caused "by blood loss due to the removal of the heart..."

The document was signed after attorneys selected a five-woman, seven-man jury to hear the case. State District Judge Keith Nelson ordered testimony to begin at 9 a.m. CST today.

Canadian natural gas will cost U. S. more

OTTAWA (AP) — The United States will be paying about 14 percent more for the natural gas it imports from Canada by 1983 because of new export taxes in the latest Canadian government budget.

The increase also is expected to bring demands from Mexico for similar increases in the price paid by the United States for Mexican gas. It is currently $4.47 per 1,000 cubic feet, the same price paid Canada. It was raised 84 1/2 cents in March to match the Canadian price.

The budget presented Tuesday in the House of Commons by Finance Minister Allan MacEachen set a new export tax of 30 Canadian cents effective Feb. 1, 1981, followed by 15-cent increases on July 1, 1981, Jan. 1, 1982 and Jan. 1, 1983.

The total increase will be 75 Canadian cents, the equivalent of about 64 American cents and roughly 14 percent of the present $4.47 base price.

MacEachen estimated the tax on exported gas will provide the treasury with an extra $350 million in the next year. But he anticipated a record $14.2 billion deficit on spending of $60 billion in the 1980-81 fiscal year.

The United States gets about 5 percent of its natural gas supply from Canada.

The budget also provides for an increase of nearly 100 percent in the price of Canadian crude oil, which the United States imports little of. There will be an

Airman sentenced

ABILENE (AP) — An Air Force sergeant who surprised attorneys by admitting he killed his mother-in-law after he was convicted in his wife's slaying has been sentenced to two 49-year prison terms.

Staff Sgt. Armando Bueutello Perez, 27, was brought to court Tuesday for formal sentencing on the Oct. 17 conviction in the death of his wife, Kathy. He waived his right of appeal and pleaded guilty to killing his mother-in-law — a move attorneys said took them by surprise.

A state district judge ordered him to serve the sentences concurrently.

EXTENSIVE OIL & GAS EXPERIENCE

Energy debate typical party issue

CLEVELAND (AP) — President Carter's debate clash with Ronald Reagan over energy policies reflected a typical Democrat-vs.-Republican dispute over the government's role in private enterprise.

To the Republican candidate, Carter's policies have thwarted energy development by locking up millions of acres of federal land, imposing unneeded taxes and regulations on the oil industry and insisting on overly stringent environmental rules.

Carter, for his part, charged that Reagan's trust in business to solve the energy problem represented a one-dimensional solution that would "put all our eggs in one basket and give that basket to the major oil companies."

The president said that, in contrast, his administration had passed a "windfall" tax on the oil companies and would use part of the $27 billion it raises to help the fledgling synthetic fuels industry and expand the use of solar power.

"Governor Reagan's approach to our energy policy ... is to repeal or change substantially the windfall profits tax, to do away with the Department of Energy, to short-circuit our synthetic fuels program, to put a minimal emphasis on solar power, to emphasize strongly nuclear power plants as a major source of energy in the future," Carter charged.

Reagan has attacked the so-called "windfall" profits tax for taking away funds oil companies could use in expanding production and has been critical of the government's massive

In the debate, Reagan returned to a familiar theme that while the Energy Department has a $10 billion annual budget it "hasn't produced a quart of oil or a lump of coal."

"I just happen to believe that free enterprise can do a better job of producing the things that people need than government can," Reagan said, stating at another point: "This nation has been portrayed for too long a time to the people as being energy poor when it is energy rich."

Reagan criticized the Carter administration for moving too slowly to open federal land, both onshore and off the coast, to oil drilling, singling out Carter's support for a bill to place 100 million acres of land in Alaska off limits to development.

The president, however, said the Alaska preservation bill he supports would leave open for exploration 95 percent of all Alaska land with a high potential for oil and gas deposits. He also said his new five-year off-shore leasing program would offer more areas for drilling than have been offered since such leasing began in 1954.

Reagan also charged that 22,000 miners were out of work, primarily because of environmental regulations on how coal can be mined and burned.

But Carter said his administration would not "cast aside" regulations protecting air and water quality in the push to develop coal and said even with those limits the country would produce 800 million tons of coal this year — more than ever before.

Mobile earnings increase 20 percent in quarter

NEW YORK (AP) — Mobil Corp., the nation's No. 2 oil company, says its third-quarter earnings increased 20 percent over the same quarter of 1979, to $721 million, despite a 2 percent drop in sales of petroleum products.

Mobil's earnings also increased despite a $42 million loss by its Montgomery Ward & Co. retail chain, the oil company said Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Ashland Oil Co., which ranks 18th among U.S. oil companies, announced that its net income for the quarter ended Sept. 30 fell 33 percent to $35.3 million.

Mobil said that gains recorded overseas enabled its energy earnings to climb $101 million — or 17 percent — to $712 million in the third quarter. Its domestic energy earnings fell 3 percent to $194 million, however, as U.S. petroleum product sales dropped 5 percent and the amount of oil pumped through its U.S. refineries declined 11 percent.

Montgomery Ward, the nation's 10th-largest retailer, widened its losses to $124 million for the first nine months as its sales rose less than 1 percent from 1979 levels, Mobil said.

Mobil, which ranks behind Exxon Corp. in size, said its third-quarter earnings were equivalent to $3.39 a share and came on sales of $15.6 billion. A year earlier, third-quarter earnings were $602 million, or $2.84 a share, and sales were $12.4 billion.

Ashland said its earnings in the fiscal fourth quarter ended Sept. 30 were equivalent to $1.12 a share, down from $52.9 million, or $1.66 a share a year earlier. Sales rose to $2.2 billion from $2 billion.

For the first nine months of 1980, Mobil said it earned $2.3 billion, or $10.61 a share, against $1.5 billion, or $6.93 a share, a year before. The 1980 earnings figure excluded a $459 million profit on Mobil's sale of Bellridge Oil Co. stock to Shell Oil Co. Mobil said nine-month sales rose to $46.3 billion from $33.5 billion a year before.

Ashland said its earnings from continuing operations totaled $196.5 million, or $6.49 a share, in its fiscal year, up from $186.4 million, or $5.31 a share, a year before. But its final net income for fiscal 1980 was $205.1 million, or $6.80 a share, against $526.3 million, or $15.55 a share, in fiscal 1979, when Ashland sold substantial amounts of oil and gas properties.

Mobil said its return on shareholders' equity was 24.3 percent in the year ended Sept. 30; Ashland's return on equity was not announced.

Business Week magazine has estimated that in the year ended June 30, U.S. oil and coal companies' return on equity was 25.7 percent, while that of all industries was 15.9 percent.

Return on equity is the ratio of net income to the book value of the common stock holders' investment in a company, plus capital surplus and retained earnings. The ratio allows comparison of one corporation's results with those of others.

Frontier announces end of flights between Amarillo and Liberal, Kan.

AMARILLO (AP) — Discontinued government funds and a phase-out of smaller airplanes are two of the reasons Frontier Airlines officials say they are ending flights between this Panhandle city and Liberal, Kansas.

"The move is strictly economical," said James Kolstad, Frontier's director of community and government affairs.

The Denver-based airline has served Amarillo for 26 years. The Amarillo-Liberal flight — which will be cut in June — is one leg in a flight that originates in Denver and stops in Liberal, Amarillo, Oklahoma City, Lawton, Okla., and ends in Dallas.

He said the loss of government funds that subsidize flights through Liberal and an airline phase-out of smaller Corvair 580 turbo-prop planes forced the company to cancel flights between the two cities.

He added that stopovers in Amarillo are not economically feasible with Frontier's current carrier, the Boeing 737.

Frontier was the only subsidized airline to Liberal, said Jim Eubanks, transportation director for the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce.

"The Federal Civil

Aeronautics Board will not allow termination of that flight without a sufficient alternative service," he said.

Eubanks said Air Midwest, based in Wichita, Kan., could pick up the Liberal-Amarillo route and added that the CAB is expected to start taking bids for service to Liberal in the next few months.

General Motors trying the real estate business

By KATHY HORAK
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — A faded Detroit neighborhood near General Motors Corp. world headquarters is drawing the kind of crowd the automaker would like in its dealer showrooms this fall.

The attractions are restored, decades-old houses like the one which serves as a model for the project.

Built in 1914, the three-story brick house has leaded-glass cabinets, burnished oak beams, four bedrooms and a completely remodeled kitchen.

The area four miles north of downtown Detroit earned the monicker

"New Center" during its 1920s construction boom. The New Center Community Corp., a GM subsidiary, bought the homes for $20,000 to $28,000 and so far has sold seven at the full asking price: $82,500 to $88,000.

"We had 2,000 people touring the models last Saturday and Sunday although it's hard to tell how many were just curious," said project manager Robert Gregory. "So far the response has been fantastic despite the general condition of the housing market."

Former GM Chairman Thomas Murphy announced the project in September 1978. At that time, Murphy estimated a refurbished home's market price at $40,000 and the total project cost at $20 million. GM declines to say whether the project's pricetag had doubled as the homes' prices have.

However, Gregory noted that each house needed at least $35,000 in plumbing, roofing and electrical work and kitchen remodeling. Walls were demolished in some houses to return cramped rental rooms or business offices to the original spacious living areas.

The buildings had been home to 325 people — a mix of the elderly, poor blacks and renters from Wayne State University. Small businesses occupied several homes; Detroit police say dope dealers worked out of at least two others.

At September's end, the city of Detroit had moved all but 17 families with $800,000 in federal aid. Most people received $4,000 to equalize new housing costs with New Center rents, which had averaged $140 monthly, says city housing spokesman Chester Allen.

The crime that induced some former homeowners to sell has decreased. Detroit Police Sgt. Marvin Hyatt says his officers give the area "special attention," and Pinkerton guards watch for vandals. The model home is locked with two deadbolts and guarded by an electronic alarm.

Detroit's much-criticized public schools probably won't concern most new owners, said a New Center appraiser for Calloway Realty Co. "People who buy in that area are able to send their children to any school they like, public or private."

GM is forthrightly proud of the project, which earns it government goodwill if minimal profit. Residents like 87-year-old Helen Stanec, one of 75 homeowners who chose not to sell, said they are pleased with the neighborhood turnaround and their increasingly valuable investment.

"GM has been fair with me. I can't speak for the people who had to move, but some of the ones who owned homes were happy to sell, and for cash!"

"I was going to sell at first, but then I decided I couldn't find another place like this, so I changed my mind. They gave me my full deposit back with no trouble," she said.

But the project still rankles people like attorney Michael Barnhart, who represents the former tenants. A lawsuit he has filed asks U.S. District Judge James Churchill for a guarantee GM will provide the low-income housing it has promised.

"GM's saying they have first right of return is ridiculous. Rents will be $400 where they were $150," he claimed. "GM has agreed to low-income housing in principle, but we've seen nothing in writing."

Gregory said GM plans to build a 200-unit senior citizens' apartment building. He mentioned 50 other apartments where rents would be federally subsidized, but said plans for those are tentative.

Ford reports $595 million quarter loss

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. lost $595 million in the third quarter of 1980, a loss that took the industry's worst-quarter-ever title from its top competitor. And Ford officials say their economic future depends greatly on the government.

It was the second in the industry's round of third-quarter reports. Chrysler Corp. will announce results soon and American Motors Corp. is to announce its figures in early November.

Ford's report Tuesday eclipsed the industry record loss of $567 million, reported the day before by General Motors Corp. for the same quarter.

As big as Ford's loss was, it was not a record for a U.S. company.

U.S. Steel Corp. holds that record with a $669 million loss for the fourth quarter of 1979. The loss for the quarter was first reported at $562 million, but the steelmaker revised it earlier this year to reflect accounting changes.

Ford's losses for the year so far set a record for any U.S. company's first nine months — $1.23 billion or $10.20 per share against a profit of $1.21 billion or $10.10 per share for the period last year.

For the third quarter, Ford's $595 million loss amounted to $4.95 per share, compared to profits of $103 million or 85 cents per share in the period last year.

Ford Chairman Philip Caldwell and President Donald Petersen said in a statement that the loss was caused by decreased sales, a smaller market share for Ford and higher interest costs.

Slowing economies in Europe, decreased sales, one-time expenses to trim costs, and the cost of launching new products helped cut into overseas results, they said.

Ford has closed two assembly plants and several other plants in the United States this year. The No. 2 automaker's share of the total U.S. car market slipped from 20 percent in the first three quarters of 1979 to 16 percent so far this year.

"How quickly Ford can improve its position in the U.S. market will depend importantly on how the government shapes the environment in which our customers live and we do business," Caldwell and Petersen said.

"High inflation, declining productivity, excessive regulation and damage to the United States industry caused by the sharp increase in sales of cars imported from Japan are serious problems that need to be dealt with responsibly and quickly," their statement said.

Ford's credit rating slipped a notch Tuesday for the second time in 1980. Standard & Poor's Corp. lowered Ford's rating from AA to A because of what it said was increasing uncertainty that strong profits could be restored soon.

"The bond market has been treating Ford as an A for some time," said industry analyst David Healy of Drexel Burnham Lambert, a New York brokerage firm. "Ford's job at the moment is to pray they don't fall to triple-B."

Healy said Ford should show "a much smaller loss" for the fourth quarter followed by profits in 1981. The July-September third quarter is traditionally the worst for automakers, coming at a time when buyer interest is low and money must be spent to retool for new models.

GM would take the record for pre-tax losses for a single quarter with a deficit of $953 million before tax credits in this year's third quarter and $1.53 billion for the nine months.

Ford's comparable pre-tax losses were $787 million for the quarter and $1.51 billion for the nine months. Tax credits account for the differences between those figures and the bottom lines. Reported profits were boosted by credits of $421 million at Ford and $121 million at GM for the third 1979 quarter.

Ford's worldwide sales fell by $1 billion or 11 percent from $9.02 billion to $8.01 billion in the quarter and by 20 percent for the nine months, from $33.5 billion to $25.3 billion.

Despite the losses, Ford said it was increasing by $1 billion its capital spending for 1981-1984, much of that for more four-cylinder engine capacity. Ford cut $2.5 billion in May from the $20 billion scheduled for investment in 1980-1984.

Despite loss, Ford plans to add to investments

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. has restored about $1 billion to its planned investments for 1981-1984 to expand the production and development of fuel-efficient cars, a company spokesman says.

The disclosure was made in Tuesday's third-quarter earnings statement reporting a loss of $595 million.

In May, Ford said it was cutting $2.5 billion from its $20 billion in investments for 1980-1984. At the time, the company said no major products were being dropped.

A Fordspokesman who did not want to be identified said the $1 billion would go toward "more fuel-efficient cars," particularly the expanded production of four-cylinder engines, and "fast-burn technology on our engines."

"Fast-burn" is Ford's term for adaptations of its development work on stratified-charge engines, which have been downgraded in the company's plans several times.

Ford has not declared its stratified-charge work dead, but company chairman Philip Caldwell has said engineers in the project "will have to work a little harder" to see their engine in production.

'Nobody' stirs excitement among campus politicos

AUSTIN (AP) — It was the strangest political rally anybody could remember seeing in the past four years — but then, the candidate was a bit on the odd side, too.

It was the Nobody for President campaign rally Monday on the University of Texas' Austin campus. Campaign coordinator Wavy Gravy tried to whip the crowd of 500 students into a frenzy over his candidate — Nobody — with rhetoric and demagoguery of the lowest sort.

It worked. "Who was president before George Washington?" Gravy asked. "Nobody!" the crowd chorused. "Who honored the treaties with the Indians?" he continued. "Nobody!" answered the crowd. "Who will lower our taxes?" "Nobody!" "Who will free the hostages?" "Nobody!" "Who do you want to run your life?" "Nobody!" "Who bakes chocolate pie better than your mom?" "Nobody!"

By now the crowd was pretty excited and Gravy began seeking testimonials.

"Anybody want to testify that Nobody has changed their life?" he asked, and a young man stepped forward to give witness.

"I've never voted for anybody," he confessed, but immediately repented: "This year I'm going to vote for Nobody."

Then Texas-country musician Steve Fromholz took the stage to pick and sing one of Nobody's campaign tunes, "Nobody Knows You When You're Down and Out."

"Just remember," Gravy reminded the students, "if Nobody wins, nobody loses."

He then officially opened the candidates' debate and self-styled independent "Aggie" contender, Col. Clay Cannon, stepped forward to conduct a head-to-head debate with Nobody.

During a lull, Gravy admitted his real name is Hugh Romney and the campaign parody was organized by a San Francisco-area commune that calls itself the Hog Farm. The members run a telephone answering service, children's camps and an organic grape farm — and organize street theater presentations, such as the Nobody for President campaign.

This is Nobody's second try for the presidency, Romney said. He was put forward as a candidate in 1976 and is the candidate again this year because there is potential for a landslide, he added.

Romney pointed out that Nobody drew a larger crowd than did Ronald Reagan's son, Mike, two weeks ago and pulled almost as many spectators as Vice President Walter Mondale last weekend.

Surrounded by evidence that his candidate was gaining popularity, Romney pointed to signs saying "Nobody Cares," "Nobody Is Qualified" and "Nobody Should Have That Much Power," listened to supporters chanting, "Nobody's gonna send me to war and I'm going to war for Nobody," and a choral rendition of "Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen."

Nobody, Romney said, has stirred such political excitement.

Debate asks whether Americans must sacrifice for economy

CLEVELAND (AP) — President Carter says Americans have had to sacrifice to help control inflation, but Ronald Reagan contends government is chiefly to blame and says Americans shouldn't have to bear the burden.

"Yes, we have demanded that the American people sacrifice and they have done very well," Carter said during his debate with Reagan Tuesday.

Retorted Reagan: "We don't have inflation because people are living too well; we have inflation because government is living too well."

On the whole, the 90-minute debate provided no new information about either candidate's economic program. In fact, both said considerably less about their proposals than they had before, despite being closely questioned about their plans for controlling inflation and combatting unemployment.

Carter said the oil price increases of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are partly responsible for inflation.

Reagan scoffed: "I think this idea that's been spawned here in our country that inflation somehow came upon us like a plague and is uncontrollable and no one can do anything about it is entirely spurious and it's dangerous to say this to the people." Carter said he had made considerable progress in both cutting inflation and battling unemployment, indicating his policies would continue along their present lines.

Reagan attacked Carter's statements as misleading, particularly his record in creating jobs, but for his part spoke only in general terms of strengthening the private economy as the answer to unemployment.

Carter scarcely mentioned his proposal to cut taxes by $27 billion next year, while he repeatedly attacked Reagan's plan for a 30 percent tax cut over a three-year period, referring to it as "this ridiculous proposal."

Carter also called the Reagan tax plan "one of the most highly inflationary ideas ever presented to the American public."

Reagan didn't mention his tax plan, except in the general terms of promising a cut in taxes next year, even though that has been the centerpiece of his economic program since he began his campaign for the presidency.

But he went further than Carter in promising a better economic future for Americans if he is elected.

"We do not have to go on sharing in scarcity, with the country getting worse off, with unemployment growing....All of this can be cured, and all of it can be solved," Reagan said. The weight of most economic opinion would side with Carter's contention that world oil price increases have been a major contributor to inflation in recent years, although not the only cause. There also is widespread agreement that deficit federal spending is another cause of inflation.

Nor would Carter get much argument from most economists that Americans' living standards must suffer, at least temporarily, to help bring inflation under control. This view was also widely held during the administrations of former Presidents Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford.

Reagan claimed once more that he could increase defense spending, cut taxes and balance the budget by 1983, if not sooner, by trimming waste and fraud from the federal budget. But Carter asserted that to accomplish those goals, Reagan would have to cut non-defense spending by $130 billion by 1983, a sum large enough to imply spending cuts beyond just waste and fraud. Reagan did not respond to Carter.

In the past, Reagan's aides have said Carter is overstating the cuts that would be necessary, but they haven't offered a specific rebuttal.

On the other hand, Carter offered no rebuttal to Reagan's ridicule of the president's claim he had created nine million jobs during his term in office. Reagan said the economy naturally creates some jobs, but "that can't hide the fact" that there still are eight million unemployed, including two million who have lost their jobs in the last few months.

Israel fails to call for minister's resignation

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli Parliament defeated a motion today calling for the resignation of Religious Affairs Minister Aharon Abu-Hatzeira, who is being questioned by police about alleged corruption and bribery in his ministry.

Amnon Rubenstein of the tiny Shai opposition party sponsored the motion, asking how it was possible for a minister who has been interrogated three times by police to stay in office "as if nothing has happened."

The attorney general is to decide whether police have enough evidence to bring charges against Abu-Hatzeira, and the Knesset (parliament) voted 49-12 to strike the motion off the agenda, after government speakers warned that it could prejudice the investigation.

Abu-Hatzeira, 42, became a minister in Prime Minister Menachem Begin's Cabinet in 1977. Police have questioned him about suspicions that he and his associates took bribes and channeled funds earmarked for religious institutions into private pockets.

The investigation has paralyzed Abu-Hatzeira's powerful political group, the National Religious Party, just as electioneering is getting under way in anticipation of elections in November 1981.

The NRP is Begin's vital coalition partner, and before the Abu-Hatzeira affair broke, it favored an early election to test government economic and foreign policy. Now it stands to lose votes because of the scandal.

Eisewhere on Israel's political front, Begin's Likud bloc political group published newspaper ads Wednesday boasting that it has built more than twice as many Jewish settlements in the West Bank as the Labor Party did during its term in office. It published a map of 49 West Bank settlements, and said 34 were built by the Likud. The chart did not include the Jordan Valley, where more than a dozen Labor Party outposts exist.

The ad, embellished with the Likud's election symbol, said "our policy and acts will prevent the establishment of a Palestinian-Arafat state."

Labor Party leader Shimon Peres recently ran a series of ads entitled "let us save the state together," in which he attacked Likud policy and called for early elections.

Turtle importers' trial under way

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A defense attorney says two men charged with illegally selling and importing more than 17,000 pounds of Pacific Ridley turtle meat were within the "grace period" offered when a federal ban against the meat went into effect.

Ben Solloff, owner of Ben Solloff Seafood Distributors of Philadelphia, and Pat Pace, owner of Pace Fish Co., of Brownsville, are on trial in what has been called the largest turtle products case ever prosecuted.

They are accused of importing and selling more than 17,000 pounds of the turtle meat in September and October of 1978. Solloff's attorney, Juan Gavito, claimed Tuesday that the government gave importers a year to sell off their stocks of the meat after a federal ban took effect Sept. 6, 1978.

"The dates Mr. Solloff was alleged to have violated the law was well within the grace period," Gavito told a federal jury.

Coffee marketers cut prices by 15 cents

By The Associated Press

The nation's big coffee marketers have cut their prices by up to 15 cents a pound.

Hills Bros. Inc., in San Francisco, and the Folger's coffee division of Procter & Gamble Co., in Cincinnati, announced identical and immediate reductions Tuesday on wholesale list prices of ground, instant and high-yield coffee.

The companies cut 15 cents off wholesale prices for a pound of ground coffee, to $2.73 per one-pound can, a reduction of about 5.2 percent.

Prices on instant coffee fell 2 cents an ounce, or about 4.25 percent, to $4.50 per 10-ounce jar. The roasters posted wholesale list prices of $2.24 per 13-ounce can of concentrated coffee, down 12 cents, or about 5 percent.

Hills Bros., ranked third in the nation behind Procter & Gamble, also said it was cutting the price of its decaffeinated coffee by 2.5 cents per ounce, to $4.31 per eight-ounce jar.

The companies cited lower prices for imported green coffee beans as the reason for the reductions. They previously cut prices in September and July. A one-pound can of ground coffee cost $3.23 last July 2.

In Houston, Coca-Cola Co.'s food unit posted the same reductions in wholesale prices for its ground and instant coffee brands: Maryland Club and Butter Nut.

Industry leader General Foods Corp., based in White Plains, N.Y., said it had not changed prices.

Wholesale price changes could be reflected in retail prices in about a month. But coffee sells below wholesale at many supermarkets, which use the beverage as a "loss leader" to attract customers or which get discounts from roasters for large-volume purchases.

Senate panel criticizes FAA's computer system

CHICAGO (AP) — The computer system which oversees the nation's intercity air traffic is fine when it's working — but too often it's a "management nightmare," a Senate subcommittee has charged.

The system administered by the Federal Aviation Administration at 23 flight control centers is plagued by equipment failures, poor planning and other critical problems, according to the report released Tuesday by Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., chairman of the transportation subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

The report criticizes the FAA's request for a $2.8 billion computer system to replace its current system.

It says the FAA failed to include a required cost-benefit analysis. Bayh, adding he is "deeply concerned about some inadequacies that exist in the computer system," said his panel has recommended the Senate delay funding for a new computer system pending further study.

"I think it would be folly to spend $2.8 billion on a system for the future that would be based on a system we have now that's really a mess," he said.

FAA officials said they would have to read the report before commenting.

The computer system is known as the "en route" computer because it tracks planes between cities. Separate computers at airports provide information to control tower personnel on takeoffs and landings.

Using information gathered by long-range radar, the "en route" computer displays a plane's altitude, location, direction and flight number on air controllers' screens. When the system breaks down, the controller must keep track of the information manually.

Controllers at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport, the world's busiest, had to use the manual system for 12 days in August because of a computer breakdown. No mishaps were reported.

Bayh said the current system "is a safe system if it's working," but that too often, it doesn't.

Among problems cited in the report:

—Equipment breakdowns are often recorded in FAA logs as shutdowns for maintenance.

—Computer shutdowns of less than a minute are not recorded. Bayh said "planes on converging courses can travel 14 miles during an equipment outage that is not even counted as a breakdown."

—The FAA has "no effective means to relate near-misses or crashes with computer outages."

—Some air controllers are not adequately trained on what to do when computers fail.

—The FAA does not keep adequate records of failures of computer components. Bayh said FAA officials "are not aware of how often and how significant the computer component failures are."

Bayh said FAA officials have failed to respond adequately to complaints about frequent computer breakdowns.

"They had no plan except to say that if you give us $2.8 billion for a new computer system that will be on line about 1990, then that will solve the problem," he said.

Search continues for man in Gulf

PORT ISABEL, Texas (AP) — One man is safely ashore today, but the Coast Guard search continues for his Port Arthur buddy last seen clinging to a 5-gallon gas can after their pleasure boat sank in the Gulf of Mexico five days ago.

Owen Joe Cato, 26, of Leucadia, Calif., was rescued by a commercial fisherman who found him floating in a life jacket Monday about 45 miles southeast of Corpus Christi, said Coast Guard spokesman Lt. Steve Sparks.

Louis A. Nelson, 26, was still missing Tuesday night when Coast Guard officials suspended the search until 6 a.m. today.

"We've been using aircraft and surface vessels in the search," Sparks said. "The weather got bad, it got dark and we called it off for the night."

Spruce Goose begins journey

'Flight' shorter than first; Move planned

By BRIAN R. BLAND

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Thirty-three years ago, Howard Hughes' giant wooden airplane made its only flight, a trip of one mile. Today, the Spruce Goose was moving again.

More than 200 people and the world's largest floating crane assembled here at a cost of $1 million to take the plane from its hangar and tow it a few hundred yards in preparation for a longer move next year to a permanent showplace.

Its huge hangar has been partially dismantled, but the plane's 80-foot-high tail still had only a 2-foot clearance. Its wings, spanning 320 feet, had a 4-foot clearance on each side.

After removal from its home of three decades, the plane was to be towed down a channel between two piers and hoisted, along with the cradle it rests in, onto one of the piers.

The craft, formally known as the HFB — for Hughes Flying Boat — will be moved across the harbor next spring for permanent display next to the luxury liner Queen Mary, now converted to a floating hotel.

The plane's new owner, the Wrather Corp., scheduled that move for June 1. The company plans to rebuild at least some of the plane's eight 3,000-horsepower Pratt & Whitney engines, and holds out the possibility that the plane will be taxied — rather than towed — across the harbor.

On Nov. 2, 1947, 3½ years after its construction began, Hughes taxied his craft along a 5-mile stretch of the harbor.

As the craft reached 70 knots on one run, Hughes took it to an altitude of 70 feet and kept it in the air for about a minute, covering a distance of one mile.

The plane was never flown again. Hughes died in 1976.

The craft, nearly 219 feet long, was the largest airplane in the world when it was built. Today's Boeing 747 is just 13 feet longer and has a shorter wingspan than the Spruce Goose — which is made mostly from laminated birch.

"The plane was to be a counter-measure to German submarines in World War II that were sinking American troops ships," said Stan Spector, a spokesman for the plane's former owners, Summa Corp. "It could have carried 750 fully equipped soldiers."

With aluminum scarce during the war, Hughes wanted to prove he could build the plane almost entirely of wood. But the war ended before the plane was ready and the jet age made the Spruce Goose obsolete.

Two-month search ends; Klan 'sympathizer' jailed

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Joseph Paul Franklin, a reputed Nazi and Ku Klux Klan sympathizer wanted for questioning in racially linked sniper attacks in five cities, was jailed here today after an arrest that capped a two-month, nationwide manhunt, officials said.

The arrest in Lakeland came three days before a visit there by President Carter, and after federal officials allegedly linked Franklin to a 1976 letter accusing Carter of "selling out to blacks," according to authorities.

FBI spokesman Otis Cox said Franklin was also wanted for questioning in the May 29 wounding in Fort Wayne, Ind., of National Urban League President Vernon Jordan. Other officials have said they have all but ruled Franklin out as a suspect in that case.

The 30-year-old drifter, described by friends, relatives and police as having a deep-seated hatred for blacks, was arrested Tuesday outside a Lakeland blood bank where he sold blood, officials said.

The Mobile, Ala., native was arrested on a warrant issued Oct. 4 in Salt Lake City charging him with violating the civil rights of two black men there by killing them.

Franklin was to appear before a U.S. magistrate today.

A police source in Salt Lake City said Franklin's arrest was "a major concern" because of a letter sent Carter during his first campaign for the presidency. Jack Warner, a spokesman for the Secret Service in Washington, said the letter was signed James Clayton Vaughn — allegedly a Franklin alias.

Police also want to question Franklin about the deaths of a white woman and a black man in Johnston, Pa., the deaths of two black youths in Cincinnati and the deaths of a black man and a white woman in Oklahoma City, officials said.

Franklin was discussed at a "summit meeting" Oct. 16-17 in Cincinnati, where officers from 14 law enforcement agencies exchanged information about unsolved sniper incidents.

Salt Lake City Police Chief Bud Willoughby said he was told Franklin had dyed his blond hair black, had tried to remove tattoos and denied his identity when arrested. A fingerprint check confirmed his identity, the chief said.

Willoughby said Franklin was arrested by local and federal authorities after police alerted blood banks that he might try to sell blood. Workers at the Lakeland blood bank spotted Franklin and called police, the police chief said.

Carter is to make a campaign stop in Lakeland on Friday.

Phillip McNiff, FBI special agent in charge in Tampa, said of Franklin: "This is the type of person you do not want around during a presidential campaign. Also we know he sent a threatening letter to President Carter in 1976. We wanted to make sure he was not down here when they (the presidential candidates) were."

McNiff added, "We feel much better knowing where he (Franklin) is at this time." He said Secret Service agents interviewed Franklin after he was questioned by the FBI.

McNiff said Franklin had been in Tampa for several days and went to Lakeland on Tuesday.

Willoughby said that since Ted Fields, 20, and David Martin, 18, were gunned down Aug. 20 while jogging near a park, police in Salt Lake City had spent "thousands of hours" checking about 550 leads.

Besides the civil rights warrant,

Franklin was also named in a federal warrant charging that he transported a stolen weapon across state lines. He also is wanted on a Utah charge of defrauding an innkeeper.

Franklin was arrested Sept. 25 in Florence, Ky., by police who discovered he was wanted for questioning in Salt Lake City. He escaped by climbing out a window.

The federal complaint against Franklin quoted one woman who said a man she identified as Franklin told her he was a Klan member. She told officials the man asked her "to make a list of black pimps in the area so he could come back to kill them."

An aunt of Franklin's told the Los Angeles Times she was told Franklin had joined the American Nazi Party.

Arrest of plane crash survivor sought by Idaho authorities

BOISE, Idaho (AP) —

A county warrant has been issued for the arrest of an Idaho man who told authorities he survived for five weeks in the wilderness after his rented plane crashed, officials said.

John Provine, of Moscow, Idaho, was found walking along an Idaho forest road Oct. 6. He said he had lived on dehydrated food and berries since his plane went down in the wilderness.

A sheriff later found a parking ticket from California dated Sept. 5 in the downed aircraft.

Ada County Prosecutor Jim Harris signed a complaint against Provine on Tuesday charging him with obtaining property under false pretenses, a felony. The complaint alleges Provine flew the plane to California, then returned and crash-landed only a short time before he was found.

The complaint alleges Provine rented the single-engine, four-seat Piper Warrior in Boise for a one-day flight to Hailey, but instead went to California. The plane was reported missing Aug. 31, but a search turned up no trace of the aircraft.

The plane, owned by Gem Flight Center, was found slightly damaged in a forest near Elk City. Investigating officers said one of the damaged instruments was a gauge showing flight hours.

Boise police detective Russ Terrell said officers did not know Provine's whereabouts.

Idaho County Sheriff R.W. "Bud" Walkup said he found a parking ticket from Salinas, Calif., dated Sept. 5 in the crashed plane. The sheriff said when he asked Provine about it, Provine said he had been in California but refused to elaborate.

Testimony continues in FBI trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two former attorneys general, John N. Mitchell and Richard G. Kleindienst, say they would have authorized warrantless FBI break-ins in some foreign intelligence cases but never were asked to do so.

Mitchell and Kleindienst, testifying at the trial of two former FBI officials accused of illegally approving break-ins, said they believe such entries would have been legal if they had the potential of yielding important national security information.

However, a third former attorney general, Ramsey Clark, said he would not have approved the break-ins under any circumstances, although he, too, said he was never asked to do it.

Mitchell, Kleindienst and Clark were prosecution witnesses Tuesday at the U.S. District Court trial of W. Mark Felt, the FBI's former No. 2 man, and Edward S. Miller, who headed the bureau's intelligence division.

Felt and Miller are charged with violating individual civil rights by approving warrantless FBI break-ins at five residences of friends and relatives of radical Weather Underground fugitives. The break-ins occurred in 1972 and 1973 in New York City and New Jersey. If convicted, each defendant could face 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Both men contend they approved the break-ins on the authority of acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray

III. Mitchell returned to the courthouse where he was convicted in a January 1975 Watergate trial of conspiracy, obstruction of justice, making false declarations to a grand jury and perjury.

Kleindienst pleaded guilty in the same federal courthouse in 1974 to a misdemeanor charge for refused to answer senators' questions about talks he had with then-President Richard M. Nixon about an anti-trust case involving International Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Mitchell testified Tuesday that he authorized installation of electronic surveillance devices without warrants in foreign intelligence cases. He acknowledged that "from time to time" these actions involved trespass. But asked if he would have approved a warrantless entry solely to examine documents, he said: "It would depend on the circumstances. If the requirements of national security justified it, I would have authorized it."

Asked if he would have approved the Weather Underground entries to seek information on fugitives who were known collaborators with communist governments, Mitchell said: "I think it (the collaboration) would be a very important factor in my approval, all other factors being proper."

Kleindienst said he would have approved a break-in in an "appropriate national security case," even if the location to be searched belonged to a friend or relative of a fugitive.

"If I had somebody come to me with facts that convinced me the national security was involved, without hesitation I would have authorized a search or seizure," Kleindienst said.

Indians take claim to court

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Stung by a state commission's rejection of a land claim settlement that could have expanded their small reservation by 4,800 acres, the Catawba Indians have taken their claim to 140,000 acres to federal court.

The 1,200 Catawbas in York, Lancaster and Chester counties say their ancestors were cheated out of the land in 1840. The 230 square miles of land, valued in 1977 at $1.2 billion, includes all of Rock Hill, Fort Mill and Tega Cay.

A state commission charged with working out a settlement for the General Assembly to consider this week rejected part of a proposed agreement that would have allowed the Catawbas to acquire up to 4,800 acres for their 630-acre reservation.

Tribal lawyers filed suit in U.S. District Court here Tuesday against state and local governments in the disputed area, seeking the entire 140,000 acres.

"Our years of negotiations have proved futile," Chief Gilbert Blue said at a news conference. Attorneys said, however, that they would listen to new proposals.

The Indian claim has clouded the titles of 27,000 landowners, depressed property transfers and slowed commercial development.

"I would think that now things are going to get worse," said state Sen. Coleman Poag, a real estate agent. "It won't be the end of property changing hands, because people have to have somewhere to live. But it has kept industrial and commercial growth down, and this (the suit) will make it even slower."

Attorneys abandon attempts to force Bonanno to testify

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Attorneys for five alleged Mafia figures apparently have abandoned efforts to force reputed underworld kingpin Joseph Bonanno to testify in their clients' trial.

The shift came after Bonanno's attorney told the judge his client was too ill to testify. If he came to court, Al Krieger said, Bonanno would invoke his constitutional protection against self-incrimination and refuse to answer questions.

The defense has sought to shift the blame for the slaying of an underworld informer to Bonanno.

Defense attorneys and the prosecutor told the judge in the jury's absence Tuesday that they would give jurors a stipulation specifying Bonanno's illness and his 5th Amendment stand in order to explain his absence.

A chief element of the defense has been the allegation that Bonanno, 76, conspired with the government's star witness, Aladena "Jimmy The Weasel" Fratianno in the slaying of Frank "The Bomb" Bompensiero. Bompensiero was gunned down on a San Diego street Feb. 10, 1977.

The five defendants are charged with obstruction of justice, racketeering, conspiracy and extortion in connection with the slaying.

Fratianno, 67, testified he had never met Bonanno and denied defense allegations of conspiracy.

The defense theory stems from a note which was found by the FBI in trash at Bonanno's Tucson, Ariz., home five days after Bompensiero died.

The note, written in Sicilian, read: "Call Turi. P.M. Tell Turi — Thursday night. With a semiautomatic gun short 22. That doesn't make noise."

Bonanno's son, Salvatore, is known as Turi.

American climbers fail to top Mount Baruntse

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — An American Himalayan expedition has failed to climb Mount Baruntse due to high winds on the 23,688-foot mountain in the Everest region, the Ministry of Tourism reported today.

The ministry said it did not know yet how high the team led by Dr. Peter Hackett, 33, of Denver, Colo., climbed before it abandoned the attempt on Oct. 17. Three days before the climbers pitched their second high-altitude camp at 20,270 feet on the northwest ridge of the mountain.

The eight-man team has left its base camp for Katmandu en route home, the ministry said.

Last month five Japanese and two Nepalese Sherpa guides scaled Baruntse via the southern side.

Proposed utility rules different things to different groups

AUSTIN (AP) — To consumer groups that proposed the rules, the idea is to protect poor, defenseless Texans from powerful utility companies that arbitrarily dole out power.

To the companies, the only thing the rules would do is protect a few customers who might be looking for free electricity. Consumers who pay their bills would wind up also paying for the freeloaders, according to the companies.

"Utilities have been given a dangerous freedom. Essentially, a freedom to kill," said Willo Hardin of Austin, representing the Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now (ACORN).

Ms. Hardin told Public Utility Commission Hearing Examiner Mark Zeppa at a Tuesday hearing that "utility terminations kill people in Texas every year."

"The funny thing is a utility customer has no rights. Convicted murderers have rights," she said.

ACORN and Consumers Union want the PUC to adopt a series of rules controlling utility service termination, including:

- No cut-offs when it might endanger a customer's health.
- Annual statements to customers of their rights.

- Deferred payment plans for delinquent residential accounts.
- Bilingual termination notices.
- A formal hearing process before termination.

Company officials who testified Tuesday echoed the same arguments — the proposed rules would be costly and that cost would be passed on to paying customers.

The rules are not needed, they said, because company policies protect well-intentioned customers.

Tom Curlee of Central Power and Light Co., said, "There are a lot of people who tamper with their meters. This is the group that will benefit most from rules like these."

Elephant slaughter rapped by expert

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of African elephants are being slaughtered each month to satisfy the demand for ivory jewelry, art objects and piano keys, an animal expert charged today.

Oria Douglas-Hamilton, who with her husband directed the first continent-wide census of African elephants, said poachers are killing 50,000 to 150,000 of the creatures each year primarily for their ivory tusks.

In a presentation to be given at the National Geographic Society, Ms. Douglas-Hamilton blamed the slaughter on poachers seeking easy money, lax law enforcement in game preserves and economic pressure caused by consumers in other countries wanting ivory items.

"I see only a few people working in the field and behind desks who are protecting the elephants, compared with the multitudes who are indifferent or whose focus is a quick way of making money," she writes in National Geographic Magazine.

The demand for ivory drove the price up from about $2.30 a pound in the 1960's to $45 a pound in 1975, say wildlife authorities.

The price has leveled off to around $35, but this is high enough to bring a poacher $500 for a pair of 22-pound tusks. This is more than an average year's income for many Africans, an ample incentive to continue killing elephants, Ms. Douglas-Hamilton said.

Oria and Iain Douglas-Hamilton surveyed Africa's elephants from 1976 to 1979, both on the ground and from the air.

They concluded that only 1.3 million elephants survived in their 35-nation habitat and are being killed off faster than they can reproduce.

While elephants declined in three-fourths of these countries, the problem is particularly bad in 10, she said. Major declines are reported in Angola, Cameroon, Central African Republic, Chad, Congo, Kenya, Sudan, Uganda, Zaire and Zambia.

The elephants of Uganda have fared worse than most, Ms. Douglas-Hamilton said. After the overthrow of the dictator Idi Amin, fleeing troops gunned down many animals and the discord left guns in the hands of many potential poachers, she said.

In 1966, 8,000 elephants were counted in the southern part of Uganda's Kabalega Falls National Park. The herd has since been exterminated, she said.

Ms. Douglas-Hamilton said some countries, including Senegal, Zimbabwe and Malawi, are trying to enforce strict conservation laws and others have tried to restrict the formal ivory trade. But poaching still goes on within their borders, she said.

More than 80 percent of African ivory ends up in Hong Kong and Japan, where it is worked and exported, she said. Raw and worked ivory passes through so many countries that it is often hard to determine its origin for law enforcement purposes, she added.

The United States imports one percent of the world's raw ivory and about 20 percent of the worked product. The elephant is considered threatened, but not endangered, in this country, allowing import of its products only with special permits.

Pope says genetic research endangers the rights of man

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Citing Thalidomide as a "tragic example" of the result of irresponsible medical research, Pope John Paul II says discoveries in such medical and biological fields as genetic engineering, organ transplants, artificial insemination and fertility and psychic drugs also carry "implicit danger" to the rights of man.

"Technological development is a characteristic of our time and it suffers from a deep ambivalence," the Roman Catholic pontiff said in an address Monday.

"While on one side it allows man to take control of his own destiny, on the other hand it exposes him to the temptations to go beyond the limits of a reasonable dominion of the nature, threatening the survival and integrity of the human being."

The pope spoke at a special audience for 2,700 Italian doctors two days after he ended a month-long synod of bishops by reaffirming the church's ban on artificial methods of birth control.

The pope lauded advancements in medicine that "extend its role from the primitive functions against illness to that of global promotion of health of men." But he said science is not "the highest value to which all others must be subordinated."

Some new technologies are "insidious forms of violation of the rights to live in a worthy way as a human being," he declared. "The tragic example of Thalidomide is a proof."

The drug, a sedative, was banned in 1961 after it was found to cause severe birth deformities when administered to pregnant women. As a result of it, an estimated 8,000 deformed babies were born around the world, many without arms or legs.

"We must consider, within the limits of biology and medicine, the implicit danger to the rights of man from the discoveries in the fields of artificial insemination, birth and fertility controls; hibernation and 'delayed death,' of genetics engineering, of psychic drugs, of organ transplants, etc.," the pope said.

Iraq says fighting tapered off

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iraq said fighting tapered off along its 300-mile invasion front in western and southwestern Iran with only 15 Iranian troops and eight Iraqi soldiers killed in 12 hours of combat.

Iran claimed 40 Iraqi troops were killed and 15 tanks destroyed in ground action Tuesday and 330 Iraqis killed in the previous 24 hours in Iran's western provinces.

It also said Iranian planes pounded Iraqi positions on the island of Umm al Rassas in the disputed Shatt al-Arab estuary. The island faces Khorramshahr, Iran's major shipping port that Iraq claims to have captured.

Iran said Iraqi planes and artillery pounded Abadan but that Iraqi tanks were prevented from crossing two key bridges on the northwestern and eastern approaches to the refinery city, which is 10 miles south of Khorramshahr.

Iran said in the past three days its forces drove Iraqi units back 11 miles at the northern end of the invasion front and made "a series of lightning attacks on Iraqi territory" in which "a number" of Iraqi troops were killed and three enemy tanks were destroyed.

IRAN ALSO REPORTED smashing an "enemy transport battalion" and shooting down an Iraqi helicopter gunship among several attacking Iranian defensive positions near the border town of Sar-e Pol-e Zohab.

Tehran Radio said Iranian anti-aircraft guns knocked out another Iraqi helicopter that was making a run at Iranian forces near Ilam, in the war zone's midsection.

None of the claims from either side could be confirmed since Western reporters were barred from the battle zones.

Iraq invaded Iran Sept. 22 after abrogating a 1975 treaty ceding to Iran the eastern half of the Shatt al-Arab, which forms the southern end of the border between the two countries and is Iraq's waterway to the Persian Gulf.

Iraq since the start of the war has made clear one of its goals is to regain full sovereignty over all of the waterway. But a letter from Iraqi Foreign Minister Sadoun Hammadi to U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, made public Tuesday, indicated an intention to retain control of some of the Iranian territory on the east bank that the invading forces are occupying.

The letter said: "In order to guarantee our full sovereignty over Shatt al-Arab, our national river, and to be in a position enabling us to actually exercise that sovereignty, it is imperative to secure the eastern bank of the river after Iran refused to recognize our sovereignty and used force to close it to navigation. Shatt al-Arab is our only water outlet to the outside world."

Hammadi also indicated Iraqi forces might attempt to penetrate deeper into Iran, saying: "On the basis of military considerations and topography, there may be better positions forward for defensive purposes."

HE PROPOSED THAT A cease-fire be followed immediately by negotiations under Waldheim's auspices "with the goal of achieving a final solution to the conflict, by demarcating the frontiers between the two countries in a final manner, and the withdrawal of both parties from territories and waters which do not fall within their territorial boundaries according to the frontier line."

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Iran's revolutionary leader, in a broadcast speech Tuesday again rejected negotiations with the Iraqis. But he said he might change his position if Iraqi President Saddam Hussein "stops this, if he takes his hand off the Iraqi people or if he repents and says, 'I have become a Moslem.'"

Khomeini is a Shiite Moslem and Hussein is a member of the rival Sunni sect, and Khomeini considers him an infidel. Iran is also a Persian nation while Iraq is Arab, and the two have been battling for centuries over border territory.

'Bootleg miners' continue to work shaft

WOODBINE, Ky. (AP) — Jeff Crawford watched inspectors check the allegedly unlicensed coal mine where his uncle and two other men died, and he vowed to return to work in the narrow shaft his father runs — also apparently illegally — 500 yards away.

Crawford, 19, and his father, Kenneth Crawford, are "wildcaters," or "bootleg miners." They work without permits in a narrow seam of high-grade Blue Gem coal at an abandoned strip mine in rural Whitley County.

"It's better than drawing welfare and food stamps," said the younger Crawford, who entered the mines at age 12.

Three men died in Kenneth Crawford's mine Monday night, apparently when blasting material detonated prematurely, officials said. The explosion occurred six days after the state ordered a halt to work in the mine, officials said.

"They just went from working days to working nights" said state inspector Dewey Middleton of the miners.

Kenneth T. Howard, deep-mine inspector for the federal Mine Safety and Health Administration, said there may be twice as many illegal mines — those operating without state permits — in his 10-county district as the 50 licensed deep mines.

AMONG THE REQUIREMENTS for a license is an inspection of the mine for safety.

Howard said inspectors have little power to control the wildcat mines.

The mines seem to proliferate in times of high unemployment among miners, as has been the case for the past year. And most wildcat mines, the inspectors said, are "off-the-books" operations in which no records are kept.

"They're going to make a living for their families, legal or illegal," said Howard of the wildcat miners' attitude.

There are at least three shafts into the seam along the hillside where the three miners died Monday, all run by the Crawford family under various company names. The miners work on their backs or stomachs in narrow shafts.

FIVE MEN HAVE DIED in Crawford mines since August, state officials say.

—Lonnie C. Lowe, 22, electrocuted Aug. 28 at the D&D Coal Co. mine operated by Kenneth Crawford's brother, Larry Crawford.

—John Thomas "Tommy" Adkins, 19, suffocated Oct. 1 in Kenneth Crawford's Jeff Coal Co. mine, since renamed the Zonda Lee Coal Co.

—Frank Crawford Jr., Clarence Gay and David M. Hood, killed Monday in a shaft between the D&D and Zonda Lee sites.

Willard Stanley, commissioner of the state Bureau of Mines and Minerals, said his department began cracking down on illegal mines last summer and has obtained four indictments. Warrants were issued for nine other wildcaters, he said.

A Whitley County grand jury indicted Kenneth Crawford on Sept. 25 on charges of violating mine closure orders. A warrant was issued for his arrest, but was never served.

"They said they couldn't find him," said Gene Adkins, father of Tommy Adkins. "We buried Tommy on a Saturday and I came down here Monday and they were still working."

Enforcement of mine closure orders is "frustrating," Howard told a reporter. "The only weapon we've got is what you've got — a pen."

One problem, inspectors said, is the number of state and federal agencies that regulate mining. Another is that MSHA inspectors can do little to enforce closure orders. That task falls to the department's solicitors, who go to U.S. attorneys to seek prosecutions.

Inspectors said each wildcat mine may have only three or four workers making as little as $2 an hour. Overhead is minimal because nothing is spent on safety equipment, Social Security or workmen's compensation, the inspectors said.

"If you get $30 a ton and it costs you $5 to mine it, that's a good profit," said Tom Mark of the MSHA.

And Howard said a ton of bootleg coal may be $4 or $5 cheaper than coal from a licensed mine.

Tommy Adkins started work outside the Jeff Coal shaft "picking slate out of coal," his father said.

"I told him I didn't want him inside, that if he was to come over here to work, to stay outside," Adkins said. "He was wanting a job. He needed work. If he wasn't over here, he'd be cutting timber. He'd do anything to make a dollar."
