Abilene turns out for Carter

ABILENE, Texas (AP) - President Jimmy Carter stood under a slate-gray November sky and made a strong pitch to farmers and hard-line Baptists in this plains city, hoping to break traditional GOP voting habits

He spoke to about 10,000 cheering people from a runway platform at the Abilene Municipal Airport. Over the heads of the crowd, the president could see a parking lot dotted with green John Deere tractors plastered with Carter-Mondale campaign post-

"I'm a farmer. I come from a long line of farmers. And I chose a man as, agriculture secretary (Bob Bergland) who knows how to plow a mule ... how to plow a tractor and give you a better

"We increased farm storage 2.8 billion bushels, which encourages farmers to sell when the price is right. Through diplomatic relations with China, we've sold 6 (million) to 9 million tons of grain over the next five years," he said.

The farm country surrounding Taylor County, which grows primarily grain sorghum, cotton and maize, went heavily for Gerald Ford in American Agriculture Movement have denounced Carter and have worked against his re-election.

Saturday, however, several men in three-piece suits and cowboy hats mingled in the crowd, holding signs that read, "Farmers for Carter."

"I like Carter because he helps the farmers with SBA disaster loan programs (for farmers in drought-stricken counties)," said Earl Glenn, a strapping, silver-haired farmer-banker from nearby Bronte.

"Our area was a disaster when the Lord created it. This is a bad year, a real bad year. But we have lots of money now for loans, more than we have ever had in our life," said Glenn, who also is president of the First National Bank of Bronte.

Carter, calling the Abilene area a "deeply religious education center," took aim at the evangelical new right by saying he strongly favored the separation of church and state.

"I don't believe in a religious test for political activity and I don't believe in a political test for religious fellowship," Carter said, eliciting applause and cheers.

The president acknowledged the dignitaries on the platform, including U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, Lt.

The second major construction project for ClaDesta Plaza in north Midland has been announced by Clayton W. Williams Jr., developer of the 105-acre office building-business complex near Midland Air Park.

Bob Smith, an associate of Williams and the Williams Companies, said late Saturday that Williams will build twin six-floor towers in the core of the development area.

The towers will include a total of 190,000 square feet of working space. including the connecting ground floor mall area

One of the Williams towers will be the corporate headquarters for all of the Williams Companies, now em-" ploying approximately 500 persons in offices located in Midland, Fort Stockton, San Antonio, Giddings, Houston, Dallas, Jackson, Miss., and Denver, Colo.

The other tower will be for lease to other companies.

The Williams Companies' offices are presently located in the Gulf Building, owned by Williams, and the Blanks Building in downtown Midland

The first major project for the area was announced Thursday by Gulf Oil Corp. That company will build a 200,-000-square-foot, six-story facility. When completed, that building will be the second largest in Midland, from the standpoint of floor space. The

Voters not swayed by latest debate

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

NEW YORK — The Big Debate the other night served to emphasize why so many American voters are undecided how to vote, with the election only two days away.

Like so much of the campaigning before it, the confrontation in Cleveland failed to clarify all the issues. or to give voters all the answers they are looking for about the character and opinions of the candidates. For these and other reasons the polls have blossomed with more HEARST 'don't knows" and "none of the aboves" than I have ever seen in a presidential contest. Nevertheless, the debate was a good thing for the campaign. Millions of citizens saw the candidates profounding their views face to face, and that surely will lead to better informed voters on Tuesday.

The choide we must make is between two patriotic Americans who have great faith in the Democratic process. The rest of us can show our faith in that process by going to the polls on Tuesday.

night's spectator sport than will actively participate in the election.

Picking a president always involves large elements of guessswork. Many guessed that Harry S. Truman with his machine-politics background would be a mediocre president, and that General Dwight D. Eisenhower as a "military man" would not easily adjust to civilian leadership. Both performed with distinction.

It hasn't been all easy sailing for President Carter during his first term. "Let's take a look at the rec-(See EDITOR'S REPORT, Page 2A)

What infuriated Linebarger was that the sheriff reportedly has issued seven keys to the west side, outside entrance to Linebarger's office. And Linebarger said only he and his deputies, particularly Chief Deputy Frances Shuffield, should have access to his office.

"Everybody's got one (key)," said Linebarger. "Everybody else can lock their office (and keep it locked) but I can't (because of keys held by other elected officials.)

Even Ms. Shuffield, who is Linebarger's apparent successor to office, was somewhat ruffled.

"He (Smith) was here smarting off a bit," she said. "He has authority over the courthouse for security, but we never thought about the courthouse being insecure.

Linebarger and Ms. Shuffield said they talked to County Commissioners Durward Wright, Charlie Welch, Winfree Brown and Jack Leonard on Saturday.

"Every one (of the commissioners) feels that this is our door, and nobody should have a key to it except Elmo and whomever he decides," Ms. Shuffield said.

Another point of anxiety which angered Linebarger was the relative insecurity of the vault in the tax office. "We have more money than the rest of the courthouse put together," he said.

The sheriff, contacted later Saturday by The Reporter-Telegram, verified that new locks were put on courthouse doors Friday in accordance with the Midland County Courthouse Security Plan approved last June by the commissioners, he said. Seven keys were made to the deadbolt lock on the outside door of Linebarger's office and were passed out to some other elected officers on Friday. The sheriff's chief deputy, George Kent Hance and J.D. Webster agree. on two things: abolishing the Department of Energy and slicing into infla-tion by way of a "massive" cut in government spending.

Past that, U.S. Rep. Kent Hance and J.D. Webster of Midland part ways.

Hance, a Democrat from Lubbock, is running for his second term in Congress from the 19th Congressional District, while Webster plays the role of the challenger on the Libertarian Party ticket.

Unlike two years ago when the seat was up for grabs and the race had turned into a heated battle between Hance and Republican George W. Bush, the contest this time has remained fairly quiet.

In a telephone interview from Washington, D.C., Hance talked of his accomplishments in his two years and listed the upcoming major problems as the economy and national defense. Webster, who works as an engineer analyst for Union Texas Petroleum, listed the same areas of concern.

"It's a disappointment that inflation' is as high as it' is," said Hance.

"I've consistently voted for a balanced budget and against deficit. But you have to keep in mind that I'm one of 435 in the House and we also have to deal with the Senate and White Houses

DURING HIS first year in the House Hance introduced an amendment calling for a balanced budget. A procedural vote to bring if before the House failed by a vote of 198 to 200.""I hope with the election there will be enough changes in Congress that we'll be able to pass such legislation."

Getting the country out of its recession won't be an easy matter, said the congressman. A massive cut in spending without a cut in taxes would be the quickest way for the country to start flourishing again.

In Webster's view, the federal government is the reason for inflation, unemployment, recession and industries' lowered productivity level. Agreeing with Hance that a massive federal cut in spending would help the economy, Webster then charged the incumbent congressman with voting to increase the federal debt by $29.8 billion back in November 1979.

He then criticized Hance for voting to give Chrysler Corp. $1.5 billion, adding "that was a turkey vote."

To reduce federal spending, Web ster suggested eliminating the Department of Energy and the Department of Education. Combined, that would cut about $31 billion out of the budget, he explained.

Concerning education, he advocated an income tax credit for those parents who send their children to private schools. "It would take the burden off public schools and give people the choice of where their kids can go to school."

HANCE SAID HE already is at work on sponsoring legislation to abolish the Department of Energy. "I have consistently voted to cut back on agencies' powers.'

To substantiate that statement, the congressman said that when the Treasury Department introduced a piece of legislation to initiate withbolding taxes on dividends on all savings accounts, stocks and bonds, he retaliated by introducing a bill that counteracted the measure.

"My bill passed so overwhelmingly that I doubt if the Treasury Depart-

THE MIDLAND REPORTER-TELEGRAM, SUN., NOVEMBER 2, 1980

Halloween weekend turned out to have a little more excitement for the City Police Department as officers answered an armed robbery call late Friday

According to police reports, a man with Halloween make-up and an Afro and a woman with a blue steel revolver robbed a Colonial convenience store at Big Spring street and Louisiana avenue. An undisclosed amount of money was taken from the store as the clerk was threatened at gunpoint around 10 p.m.

Some 13 persons were arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated by 7 a.m. Saturday, with three for disorderly conduct, two for possession of marijuana, one for consuming alcohol after hours, one for auto theft and one for burglary of a habitation. Also on Saturday, Gary Dunigan of 2200 S. Lamesa Road reported the burglary of his home and the theft of some $246.67 worth of firearms. Dunigan reported the guns were stolen sometime between 8 p.m. Friday and 11 a.m. Saturday. Police reports indicate entry was gained through the front door of the residence.

In other police news, a minor accident occured around 8 p.m. when a car ran into a house at 1118 E. Estes Ave. No injuries were reported

The congressman remarked that national defense is more important an issue today than it was two years ago. "Starting in 1979 there has been a stronger emphasis on national defense. I've consistently voted for increased funding of national defense.'

The worst way to reduce federal spending would be by cutting national defense, he added.

Webster, a 28-year-old graduate of Southern Illinois University with a bachelor's degree in biology, criticized Hance for voting to give Egypt and Israel $1 billion each. "That's giving arms to both sides," he said.

MUCH OF THE problem with the country's defense today can be traced to Carter, said the Libertarian. He claimed the President vetoed pay raises for the military and finally passed one of the bills giving military workers a reduced raise.

"He's created a problem where people who would stay and serve can't afford to. We've spent money training them and we don't pay them enough to keep them," said Webster. To build up the military, Webster charged the president will draft all 18 and 19 year olds, even though he conceded that a draft hasn't been passed by the president or Congress.

HE ALSO CITED his work on getting the farm disaster program extended through 1981. "That was partly because of an amendment I proposed which was passed. This (extension) is something I think the farmers in our district wanted," said Hance.

On the subject of food, Webster proposed cutting all taxes on raising and selling food, thereby reducing its cost by about 50 percent. If this is done, he claimed, there would be no need for food stamps because "poor and elderly could afford food again."

Working with constituents is another strong point of his term, said Hance. "We (he and his staff) work toward staying in close touch with the people. We've had town hall meetings, and in the Permian Basin we've worked especially hard to allow people to have input.

But Hance thinks he has a better years of work as a congressman, idea for making congressmen keep in touch with people - a six-month working session rather than yearround

The Camp David accords stand out prominently. So does espousal of human rights even when they had to be trimmed to certain pragmatic specifications. They make sense and Americans can be proud that we took the initiative on the world scene.

Despite stiff opposition, the President took the bull by the horns and won approval of the bill to cede the Panama Canal to Panama. There might well have been many anti-Yankee riots fomented in that highly volatile and strategic Central American region had we clung obstinately to keeping canal rights forever.

President Carter also launched an energy program which the Congress. in its own wisdom, stymied. In my view, we need an energy program so that this nation will never again be subject to the whims and venal demands of foreign regimes.

During his first term, the President chalked up some additional accomplishments, but I fault him for unreaonably adding to big government as he did in the creation of a Department of Education.

Overall, I don't believe his presidency has been an enlightened one to put it charitably. His advisers, in the main, have run the gamut from mediocre to appalling. While, in my experience, the President's personal image abroad has never been as poor.

Republican speeches and trinkets

By SUE FAHLGREN Staff Writer

What was billed as a Republican candidates rally at the Republican Black Caucus Headquarters Saturday turned out to be more of a standoff between candidate supporters and Democratic Midlanders in the predominantly black neighborhood.

tant to Gov. Bill Clements, flew in from Dallas to be the featured speaker at Saturday afternoon's rally on Lee Street. But local blacks hardly seemed interested in the event.

Before Kirven arrived shortly after 4 p.m., only a handful of local blacks sat on the east side of Lee Street with the candidates. Other blacks sat in parked cars, stood along the curb on the west side or cruised up and down the street, slowing in front of the campaign platform.

A black blues/rock band, Future Generation, played on the candidates side while children and campaign workers tried to distribute free popcorn, Pepsi, lollipops, balloons, matches and screwdrivers to crowd members.

THE CANDIDATES, who huddled in groups in front of the headquarters, tried to coax the resisting blacks to join the rally.

Justice of the Peace candidate Charles Sprayberry grabbed a microphone and appealed to them directly, saying their kids wouldn't know whether the lollipop was a Democratic one or a Republican one - so they should accept the free candy.

The skeptical crowd made no motion to get them, so Sprayberry took a bucket of campaign balloons and a handful of Republican-printed screwdrivers and crossed the street to mean much to him. He asked Sprayberry why county jail prisoners were not allowed to smoke cigarettes in their cells. "If you can smoke in the penitenary, why can't you smoke here?" Killings asked.

Sprayberry replied that there were some things about the position he is running for that he cannot change including the no smoking rule in the county jail.

Some of the Democratic blacks, on the other hand, were not necessarily against the Republicans campaigning in the black community.

Marshall David King Jr. said he wasn't going to cross the street to the campaign side because "this is where I belong." However, he said their campaigning in the black community was the "way of democracy."

"Personally, I don't like it (the Republican platform)," King said, "but I've got sense enough to understand it.

KING SAID HE felt the blacks in the community "don't care about no vote. They don't even know about it (the campaign)." But, he said most Midland blacks would be voting in the upcoming election because their friends - who were interested in the races - would be voting.

Jesse Davis said he thought a fourth of the blacks would vote Republican, "but the other three-fourths will still be Democrats.

Davis said, "I'm for part of the Republican Party platform - like Reagan's no-war policy." But, he added. "no matter if Reagan gets in or Carter stays in, we're still going to have a war."

King pointed to the campaign side of the street and said, "There ain't nobody over there that ain't doing it for money. They have to be. They couldn't be doing it for the platform.

Davis said he was more interested in what he could get changed for future generations. "You can't get nothing if you don't ask for it," he said, emphasizing the importance of voting. "I got 10 grandkids and I want it different for them. That's what I'm doing - trying to look forward for you to do is vote for your own interests. And in 1984, if they (Reagan and Bush) have not done what I've said they will do, I'll come out against the Reagan-Bush ticket.'

Kirven asked the crowd, "Is your situation better now than it was in 1976 when Carter took over?" He suggested if their situation was worse, they should "vote the ticket from top to bottom - straight Republican.

Kirven said the Carter administration needed to hear from the people. "Send them a message. This time, vote the straight Republican ticket. But, don't make that a habit (voting straight ticket).

Kirven added if the blacks did vote Republican, "I'll assure you that you'll not have an earthquake in Midland, Texas, on Nov. 4."

He reminded blacks, "We don't have no permanent friends or no permanent enemies. We just have a permanent objective and this is for the advancement of our people."

Big Lake girl dies when hit by car

BIG LAKE - A 12-year-old Big Lake girl was run over by a car and killed Saturday evening as she darted across a street in a Halloween costume.

Big Lake's trick-or-treating had been postponed a night because of a Reagan County High School football game Friday night against Eldorado High School, according to Reagan County Sheriff's deputies.

The girl, whose name had not been released by press time, was trick-ortreating in the area of 5th Avenue and Main Street in Big Lake when she ran in front of a car about 6: 30°p.m.

No charges had been filed or arrests made late Saturday night in connection with the death.

Ford says Carter 'screwed up

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP) - Ronald Reagan campaigned across Michigan Saturday with Gerald R. Ford, who said President Carter had "screwed up the economy" and should be retired from the White House.

"Jimmy Carter is\a four-year phenomenon," Ford told a chilled crowd gathered in front of the Battle Creek train sta-'He won't be tion. around."

Reagan in turn said that Carter inherited av sound economy from Ford

"All Jimmy Carter had to do is to follow the lead Gerry Ford had given him but he didn't have the smarts," Reagan said.

The two men appeared on a platform with Gov. William G. Milliken, who said that Reagan stood "a better than even chance" of winning the state's 21 electoral votes which could be crucial to the sum of the inflation and unemployment figures - to attack the Democratic president. Carter campaigned against Ford on grounds that the index was at 12 percent in 1976. "If a 12 percent misery index is good enough to beat Gerry Ford, a 20 percent misery index is a damn good reason to beat Jimmy Carter," Ford said. Reagan was described earlier as feeling "pretty good" about his chances on Election Day.

As the campaign entered its final three days, Lynn Nofziger, Reagan's spokesman, said of the candidate: "He won't talk about winning, but he said: "The only thing ple sitting out there is that hostage thing.

Reagan strategists feel they are slightly behind in Michigan despite polls that say otherwise, and the Republican challenger, with Ford at his side, planned to spend the entire day in the state. After Grand Rapids, he was to appear in Battle Creek, Saginaw and Pontiac.

Campaign contributions varied like West Texas wind

By ED TODD Staff Writer

If money and votes have any correlation, then campaigners in Tuesday's general election already may suspect who will be celebrating victory and who will be lamenting defeat

But politics and elections are like the shifting West Texas wind: unpredictable, shifting and fickle. In Midland County races, money generously flowed into some campaigns and trickled into others.

Leading the ranks in contributions in Midland County is Republican Sheriff Dallas Smith, whose campaign coffers have accumulated $44.-174 from 100 sources a week before the general election.

HIS CHALLENGER, 41-year-old police narcotics officer Joe W. Carr, has taken in $6,243.52 and had spent $4,246.50 as of the last campaign reporting period. Smith, 38, has spent $24,784.19 on billboards, brochures; and radio, television and newspaper advertising.

Donors to Carr's campaign numbered less than 20.

In terms of donations, the race for the judgeship of the 142nd State Judicial District is runner-up to the sheriff's race. Democrat Pat Baskin, 53, has taken in $31,421.77 in funds from about 170 sources and has spent $22,-511.11 on exposure via letters, brochures, posters, sign and radio, television and newspaper advertising.

His opponent, Republican Jay H. "Timber" Floyd, 37, has contributions of $29,270, including $21,500 in loans, and had invested $25,868.64 in advertising, billboards and other exposure

Durward Wright, 48, a Democrat who has held the Precinct 1 county commissioner's post for 12 years, has taken in more revenue than any of the remaining candidates in Midland County races.

WRIGHT HAS accumulated $6,-250.20 in contributions and has spent-$5,300.78 in advertising. His challenger, Republican Jeff Barber, 55, is trailing somewhat in revenue. He has taken in $5,964.55 in contributions and has spent $5,738.07.

Republican Alexandra Morris, 46, Precinct 3 county commissioner candidate, has taken in $2,400 in contributions and has spent $2,077.43 toward her election. Her opponent, 60-yearold retired schoolteacher C. DeWayne Davis, has mustered $2,850 in contributions and has invested $2,767.68 in his campaign. Ms. Morris and Davis are seeking the post currently held by Democrat Jack Leonard, 56, who lost his bid for re-election to a second four-year term in the May primary

Freeze of funds may delay highway projec

By KAY CRITES Staff Writer

A threatened freeze on federal highway funds in Texas has raised ques-tions on possible effects on two Midland County highways, both scenes of recent fatal accidents.

One is under construction using federal funds. The other was scheduled * undergo renovation in about a year.

The freeze was imposed in mid-October by the U.S. Department of Transportation because it maintains Texas has not complied with new regulations which require contractors awarded construction projects to subcontract with a fixed percentage of minority businesses.

Last week, that freeze was temporarily lifted as the Texas attorney general's office and the Department of Tranportation agreed to a 30-day extension to allow for negotiation.

Should negotiations fail, the freeze could be re-instituted, according to a spokesman in the attorney general's office Friday.

Lynn Passmore, engineering assistant III with the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation, said a halt in funds would have no effect on the area now under construction but might affect the future project.

"This (the freeze) only affects contracts being let in November, not projects already under construction," he said.

The area under construction is on Interstate Highway 20 from the Ector County line to the Highway 349 overpass.

Several accidents involving injuries have occurred in the area since construction began in July, and it's been the scene of one fatality.

Part of the current construction work is a safety project, funded by the federal funds, to install safer guard rails on the overpasses and to level off the inch and a half drop-off on either side of the road.

The second phase of construction was the laying of a fabric underseal and hot mix. It's the most dangerous, Passmore said, because the road is constricted while the hot mix is laid down.

"Although it (Construction) probably won't be completed for another two or three months, the most dangerous portion of it is through," he said.

Passmore seemed to feel that, in this area, most of the accidents were the result of drivers ignoring construction and reduced speed limit signs "Of course, a construction site is never as safe as an unobstructed highway because you have earth moving machines and people working.

"But if people would just slow down and watch for the construction signs it would do a lot for their safety and the safety of the construction workers, too.'

In contrast, Passmore feels the project scheduled to begin a year from now might well prevent future accidents similar to the two fatalities that occurred there. Within a two-week period recently, two truck-tractor semi-trailers soared through the guard rail on the Interstate 20 over-, pass at U.S. Highway 80 and crashed below, killing drivers of both vehi-

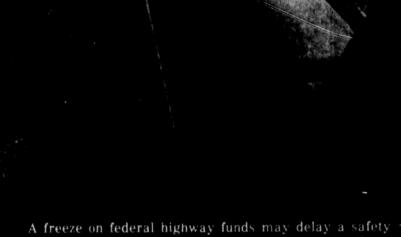

A safety project contract is scheduled to be let in November 1981. The project would widen the bridge and install new guard rails which have currently been judged as safest.

"It's a bad place," said Passmore. "It's on a curve and there's nothing we can do about that. Anything with a curve is worse than a straight road. But if we had had a little wider bridge or if we had a different type of rail it might have-helped."

The current guardrail is a flex-band type of rail, which was the standard used 10 or 20 years ago when the bridge was built, Passmore said. But Texas A&M, in conjunction with the highway department, has developed a new type of rail.

'The new type, that we're trying to build on all the new structures and replace some of the old ones with, is a concrete rail. We have the Texas Tranportation Institute that's associated with Texas A&M working closely with the highway department in regards to improving safety on guard rails and bridge rails. Over the years they developed better rails. We change our standards every few years to ones we think are better."

The new rails, when struck, throw cars away from the rail and make it slightly more difficult for a truck-tractor semi-trailer to break through.

Proposals designed to speed appeals, cut road costs, separate property

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last in a three-part series reviewing the pros and cons of each proposed constitutional amendment.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM -Staff Writer

Out of the nine amendments to be decided Tuesday by the public, only one will have no effect upon Midland, and that is No. 7

The last two, Nos. 8 and 9, deal with the courts.

The seventh amendment on the list would authorize a county, with less than 5,000 population to perform private road work with county equipment for "a reasonable charge." State Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland explained this amend-

State Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland explained this amendment "has no effect on Midland County," which boasts a population over 80,000.

For the small counties, the amendment would allow them to maintain expensive road equipment that isn't used on a full-time basis. The charges for private work would help defray increased costs of public road programs.

THE TEXAS Legislative Council noted that one argument against the amendment claims the county would be encroaching on private enterprise and could open the door for a varietyof abuses.

Eighth on the list is an amendment changing the name of the Courts of Civil Appeals and names and qualifications of justices of the Supreme Court. It also sets out the jurisdiction and authority of the appellate courts.

District Attorney Vern Martin said the idea behind the amendment is to speed up appeals, but the justices on this court aren't in favor of the change.

The state legislature already has decided to add more justices in an attempt to speed up the appeals process, he said.

"It depends upon what the state legislature does with it," Martin said of the proposed change, "and what laws they will pass to put it into effect."

CURRENTLY, THE appeals court is two to four years behind on cases, he said. "People are supposed to have speedy justice, but they aren't getting it."

He pointed to a murder case in which a person was judged guilty by a lower court, had to sit in jail for three years waiting on an appeal and the verdict was overturned.

"I'm not convinced this (change) can work," said the district attorney. "But I think I'll vote for it (amendment)." In looking at the positive side of the amendment, the Texas Legislative Council noted these appellate courts with jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters may attract and develop better justices who have dealt with a variety of legal problems. Looking at the negative aspects, the council noted a one-step appellate review for all criminal cases is the most efficient system. And an additional court in the appellate process creates a double appeal that is more complex and costly.

THE NINTH AMENDMENT looks at the issue of separate and community property in a marriage. If passed, it would allow what has been considered community property to be converted into separate property.

Spouses could agree in writing the income or property arising from one spouse's separate property would remain that way. Currently, that income becomes community property.

The amendment also would allow property to be acquired in the future to be included in a written partition of marital property into separate interests.

District Judge Barbara Culver said she's opposed to the amendment primarily because couples already may draw up contracts concerning property before they marry.

"The law now allows couples to contract any way they want to," she said. The small amount of good the amendment could accomplish is overshadowed by the harm it will do, she said.

THE-JUDGE SAID it could lead to uninformed persons signing away rights they wish they had years later.

What the Legislature had in mind when proposing the amendment is for couples who have been married before and want to keep certain property separate for their children by previous marriages.

One problem she cited could come when a man or woman marries a wealthy partner and signs away his or her rights to it. Years later, if there is a divorce, that partner is left with nothing.

"There have been some bad cases like this in other states," she said of her stand. "The other spouse would have no claim to anything."

The Legislative Council, in looking at the pros, said the amendment would allow "considerable freedom for persons to make alternative property arrangements when they perceive doing so to be in their best interest." This amendment also could reduce the complexity of the process of converting community property to separate and eliminate the néed for periodic agreements.

In looking at the negative side, the council said the degree of deviation from the community property system would be so great that it could foster creation of an entirely different system of marital property law in Texas.

Echos may be utilized in exploration for oil

NEW YORK (AP) — A new technique which promises to extend the power of radar and sonar may be useful in medicine, oil exploration and other non-military fields, say the scientists who devised it.

Physicists Herbert M. Uberall and Guillermo C. Gaunaurd of the Naval as a faint jumble of frequencies that are part of the echo.

These resonances are as individual to an object as is the characteristic frequency that will shatter a goblet if exactly the right note is sung.

In the military, the technique offers a way to tell foe from decoy. It might Surface Weapons Laboratory at Silver Spring, Md., have discovered a mathematical way to read an object's "signature" in a radar or sonar echo and help determine its composition.

Although the technique was developed for the military, the scientists said it could be applied to any field where reflected echoes are used to probe a hidden target.

It might, for example, tell whether an underground pool was oil or water, find the nature of impurities in a critical weld or determine whether a mass in the brain was fluid or tumor, Gaunaurd said.

"You might use microwave scattering to look at droplets or dust particles in the air. Here you could identify the pollution agents by looking at the spectrum of the returned echo," said Uberall.

Radar and sonar work by bouncing waves of energy off a distant target and timing the return of the echo to find its range. Modern radar and sonar can examine the echo for limited information about the target. But they are still basically used just to find its distance and trajectory.

Uberall and Gaunaurd have adapted mathematical methods devised for analyzing sub-atomic reactions to gain information from the echo about the target's shape and composition. They study the characteristic "resonances" of the object, which appear even be used to defeat the defenses of a "Stealth" bomber, Gaunaurd said, although it's likely the anti-radar plane would return such a faint echo it could not be analyzed.

The Navy is studying the method as a way to refine sonar's ability to tell mines and submarines from whales and other benign seagoers.

The theory so far has been applied only to echoes from simple objects such as spheres and cylinders — of uniform composition. In their latest paper, published in the British journal Nature, the physicists show how radar echoes from a coated sphere can be used to tell what the coating is made of.

The scientists said their success shows the method works and can be refined to hangle more realistic targets.

"This is exciting stuff and has tremendously wide applications," said Donald Brill, a U.S. Naval Academy physicist familiar with the theory.

In 1971, researchers discovered that aspirin blocks production of prostaglandins.

"This is a very important new clue as to what the defect is that causes diabetes," Dr. Stewart Metz said in an interview Friday. "The feeling of many investigators is that if you can find the defect, you can find the cure.

Metz has prepared a paper on the subject for presentation at a two-day scientific symposium that was being held in New Orleans. Metz said he and other researchers at the University of Washington have found that prostaglandins — a group of very powerful hormones when a new letter carrier took over the route, he couldn't reach as far. Gomez' mail started to pile up at the post office.

'We neglected to inform him his mail was being held," said Fong. "We didn't do out job." The letters that were placed in his box were probably delivered by a more dexterous substitute letter carrier once a week, Fong said.

'I won't lie to you," said Richard Martin, manager of the branch post office. "We should have notified Mr. Gomez his mail was being held."

Usually, undelivered mail is held about 10 days before it is returned to the sender. But Gomez's letters stayed stacked on a letter tray.

Gilchrist, who has been delivering mail for 25 years, said, "I heard them talking about it a few weeks ago, and I told them how to reach the box. They didn't pay any attention.'

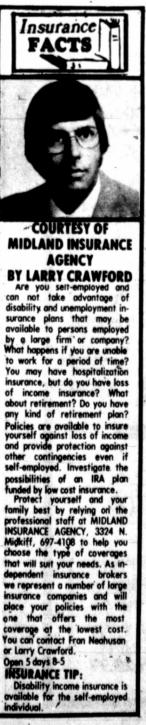

Gomez said he cannot sue the Postal Service because federal regulations exempt it from liability in such incidents.

It was not immediately known what would happen to the mortgage. But there was one bit of good news for Gomez. It came by telephone.

P group makes final Texas bid

By LANA CUNNINGHAM Staff Writer

Four years ago, the Republicans eased up on their drive toward the presidency too soon and paid for it. Democrat Jimmy Carter squeaked out a victory.

This year, the Republicans are making sure they don't make the same mistake.

Starting Friday morning in Dallas, the White section of a Red, White and Blue GOP campaign blitz in Texas took off for a 1½-day, 10-city West Texas tour in urging campaign workers to get out the vote.

Led by U.S. Sen. John Tower, the troupe included his wife, Lilla; Ray Hutchison, who lost a bid for the Republican nomination for governor two years ago to Bill Clements; his wife, Kay Bailey Hutchison, former vice chairman of the National Transportation Board; and Sim Stokes of Dallas, former Dallas Cowboy and now chairman of Black Texans for Reagan-Bush.

BUT THE ONE person all the groups turned out to hear was folkhero Eddie (I'm Mad Too) Chiles of Fort Worth. It was Chiles who drew the loudest and longest rounds of applause and the biggest laughs with his colorful descriptions of the federal government.

After a kickoff speech in Dallas by Tower, who questioned what kind of weapons Carter would send to Iran, vice presidential candidate George H.W. Bush made a surprise appearance to give the team one final boost.

Another partial focus of the three team trips was to gauge effectiveness of the local Republican workers upon the townspeople.

From the college town of Denton to the industrial base of Amarillo with its teamsters, from the agriculture hub of Plainview-Lubbock to oil-rich Midland, the White team was given encouragement that local voters would be departing from the liberal ranks of Democratic thinking for the conservative Republican ticket.

Originating in Dallas, the team hopped into Denton, Wichita Falls, Amarillo, Plainview, Lubbock, Abilene, Midland, Odessa and El Paso with hope of stopping in San Angelo on the way back to Dallas.

Often the initial speaker at these stops, platinum-haired Ray Hutchison, former state Republican chairman, quipped that the only reason he was along on the trip is because "they said spouses could come, too. It was Mrs. Hutchison's job to talk about the women's vote.

AS CHAIRMAN OF Women Leaders for Reagan-Bush, Mrs. Hutchison said the real issue in this presidential campaign isn't the Equal Rights Amendment, but "our economics. Women are the backbone of our economics; we must focus on the issues that really affect us."

Since the debate last Tuesday night. Mrs. Hutchison said polls are showing more undecided women are turning to Reagan. The Republican candidate believes "women should have a part in his administration," she related. "Women today are more in tune with what's going on in the U.S.'

During one of the hops between cities, Hutchison said the tour wasn't so much to convince more voters to go for Reagan as it was to keep the local workers' spirits up and running until Tuesday night when the election is over.

In 1976, a similar blitz was planned for Gerald Ford in Texas. The South Texas leg, however, was canceled because of bad weather. The Saturday before the election, however, the sun came out and shone on Jimmy Carter's tour of the same area, said the former GOP chairman who has a law practice in Dallas. That cancellation is what killed the election for Ford in Texas, he said, and Carter planned almost exactly the same tour on Saturday.

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES can command large crowds and turn a speaking engagement into a major media event, he said. But it's these smaller towns "where the getting out the vote is done by these people. Gov. Bill Clements undoubterly has boosted Reagan's standing in Texas, according to Hutchison. Normally known as a staunch Democratic stronghold, the electorate put a Republican in the state's highest office two years ago "and the people saw that the world didn't come to an end.'

But it's not just Texas that's changing its ideas. The rest of the country also is swinging toward a more conservative mood for the '80s, Hutchison added.

Sim Stokes started out in Dallas and had no intention of making the entire tour. But on Saturday morning, he was sitting in Midland with the rest of the group.

He doesn't believe all welfare and subsidized programs should be eliminated, he said. "There is a definite need for some of it."

But he spouts the belief that the black community feels it is being kept in poverty with the numerous federal handouts and CETA programs. The people would prefer the free enter-prise system, he told audiences.

TOWER HAD TO leave the first part of the tour to travel with a "truth squad" to San Antonio before Carter got there. Standing in his stead was Lilla, who read a prepared statement on the Iranian military materials.

During a lax moment in the traveling, she reflected on the Windfall Profits Tax, saying that the meaning of the word "windfall" has nothing to do with the tax.

Back in the Middle Ages, people used wood to cook with, she said. When a high wind would blow dead branches onto the ground, people could benefit by picking up the branches without much effort. That was considered a "windfall."

When the senator rejoined the group in Lubbock, he focused on what he said were mistakes made by Carter, such as canceling the B-1 bomber. Concerning the arms to Iran, Tower said he would never give them the arms they purchased until the U.S. had negotiated a release for the hostages.

At a Saturday morning breakfast for Midland GOP workers, he referred to the Tall City as the place "where the people think right in such vast numbers.

Giving the final pep talk at each stop was Eddie Chiles. Starting out sounding cold and claiming "I'm not mad today," he would begin relating problems with the federal government, changing his song slightly with each city, and getting hotter as the time passed until he would end the talk with "I'm mad."

WELL-KNOWN THROUGHOUT Texas for his "I'm mad at the federal government" radio spots, Chiles pressed for three things from the federal government: "I want the gov-ernment to defend our shores and defend them well, deliver our mail on time and leave us alone." Explaining his crusade against Washington, the Fort Worth businessman who got his start in the West Texas oilfields claimed "the free enterprise system has been very good to me. It's been so good to me I feel I owe this country something." That some-thing is giving the young people of today the same chances he had, said Chiles.

At two stops, Chiles used a joke to illustrate his idea of too much government intervention in business and private life.

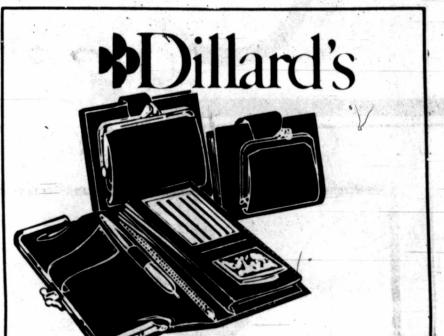

There was a young boy that badly needed $100, Chiles began. The boy asked his mother for the money and she told him to ask God.

"Well, the boy prayed and didn't hear anything, so he decided to write God," Chiles continued. "When the postman got the letter addressed to God, he didn't know what to do with it, so he sent it to Washington.

"The President didn't know what to do about it, so he asked his secretary and she said to send the boy $5. The boy was surprised to get the money and he wrote God to thank Him. But he added: 'I noticed you had to send it. through Washington and those ------- as usual kept $95 of it! ' '

Even if Reagan wins the election, Chiles warned the Midland GOP volunteers that the country won't change overnight.

"People think it's like getting a McDonald's hamburger for a quick meal," he said. "People expect the government to change as fast and it doesn't work that way. It's going to take awhile, so just be patient.'

Iranians plan 'program' on hostage anniversary

By The Associated Press Militants holding the American hostages in Iran called Saturday for a 'grand demonstration" and "a program" at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran on Tuesday to mark the first anniversary of the Americans' capture.

'November 4 is the day of conquering, occupying and smashing the hideout of the great Satan (the United States) in the land of Islam." the militants declared, referring to their seizure of the mission last year.

One Tranian legislator, meanwhile, predicted the Majlis, or Parliament, would muster a quorum Sunday and announce conditions for releasing the hostages on their 365th day of captivity.

The last scheduled session, Thursday, was canceled after a boycott by many legislators cut attendance below a quorum. The protesting deputies said any action on the hostages could help President Carter in the U.S. presidential elections, also on Tuesday.

In Washington, Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie denied a published report that a bargain had been struck on the hostage issue and said further negotiations with the Iranian authorities probably would be needed even if the Parliament decided to free the Americans Resolution of the hostage situation won support from the newspaper of the Islamic Republican Party which controls about 70 percent of the 288 Majlis seats. The newspaper said prolonging the debate "would not bring benefits to our people.

Tehran Radio on Saturday carried a lengthy commentary criticizing the "Zionist and imperialist propaganda machinery" for implying that "Iran is moving ... towards dependence on the West." It said the "Western world has launched the most intense propaganda, awaiting the release of the hostages."

"What they have in mind is to force Iran into entering a deal by this method, where as the Imam (Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini) pointed out, to have the hostages released, America must accept proposed conditions approved by the Majlis," the commentary said.

It said implying that Iran might release the hostages to obtain spare military hardware for its war with Iraq creates the "misunderstanding that it was the war conditions which, under pressure by America, made Iran release the hostages."

Iran claims Iraqi assault stopped

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Fighting intensified around Abadan Saturday and Iran claimed it stopped an Iraqi assault on the besieged refinery city and southwestern stronghold. Iraq said it had "recovered" territories it sought and was ready to negotiate.

"The enemy advance on Abadan has been stopped," said an Iranian military communique broadcast on Tehran Radio. The report, the first to state flatly that the Iraqi attack had been halted, also claimed Iranian forces were "leveling" Iraqi positions around the city.

Iraqi forces dropped a mobile bridge over the Bahmanshir River to cross into Abadan and Iranian troops killed or captured the Iragis who entered the city, Iran claimed. The communique said Iranian forces then destroyed the bridge with rocket-propelled grenades. It was the first Iranian acknowledgement that the Iraqis, who claim a stranglehold on the city, had entered Abadan since fighting broke out 41 days ago.

Mobile bridges sit atop a large armored carrier and can be extended like a ladder across a river.

Last month, Iraq floated pontoon bridges across the Karun River north of Abadan, assaulting the vital Iranian oil port of Khorramshahr and sending tanks and troops south to storm Abadan.

At Khorramshahr, Iranian snipers tripped up Iraq's operations and apparently prevented the Iraqis from reaching the fixed Karun River bridge that leads south to Abadan, Tehrán Radio said. War communiques from Tehran said the Iranians still controlled Khorramshahr's eastern regions.

In a communique late Saturday, Iraq claimed its forces sank two Iranian gunboats on the Bahmanshir River, which flows south from Abadan to the Persian Gulf.

Official reports from both nations listed skirmishes and engagements all along the 300-mile war front that divides Persian Iran and Arab Iraq, but none of the reports could be independently confirmed.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Saadoun Hammadi was quoted by a Kuwaiti newspaper as saying Iraq had "recovered its territories and waters in the Shatt al-Arab" - the disputed estuary that provides Iraq with its only oulet to the Persian Gulf - and was ready to negotiate.

"We are now ready to negotiate, but will never make any territorial or offshore concession," Hammadi said, according to the newspaper Al Qabas. His statement indicated Iraq wants to keep the entire 60-mile Iranian coastline on the Shatt al-Arab, which Baghdad's forces have overrun since the war began Sept. 22.

In Paris, the news magazine Le Point reported Saturday the first of 60 Mirage F-1 French fighter jets ordered by Iraq could be delivered in December, two months ahead of schedule. Iraq, with most of its warplanes Soviet-supplied, ordered the French jets in July 1977 and December 1979.

Afghan rebels destroy Soviet ammunition convoy

NEW DELHI, India (AP) - Afghan Moslem rebels destroyed a Soviet ammunition convey, killed at least 45 Communist Party members and burned down a large primary school in raids north and south of Kabul in the past week, a report from Afghanistan said Saturday.

Sources in Islamabad, capital of neighboring Pakistan, meanwhile, said intelligence reports showed that Soviet forces in Afghanistan have deployed the MiG-25 warplane, believed to be one of the most sophisticated weapons in the Soviet arsenal. The sources, who declined to be identified, said the MiGs reportedly were flown on high-level reconnaissance missions from Bargram air base about 30 miles north of Kabul. They said about 10 of the planes were reported in the central Asian country "during the past few months."

The Soviet Union sent some 85,000 soldiers into Afghanistan late last year to help the country's Marxist government battle anti-communist insurgents who control most of the countryside.

A rebel raid-Monday on the ammunition convoy near Sange Niwishta Pass, 22 miles southeast of the Afghan capital of Kabul, prompted Soviet air attacks against "every moving thing" in the villages of Logar Province, killing hundreds of civilians, the report from Afghanistan said.

The report, from a source who in the past has been reliable, said several Soviet soldiers were killed or injured in the raid in which rebels, some firing rockets, destroyed 21 ammunition trucks, two armored cars and one tank

It said hulks of burned vehicles closed for two days the road through the narrow valley - terrain the rebels have often turned to their advantage for attacks on government and Soviet units.

Supreme Court candidate for TV, radio in courtroom

Jim Brady, Republican candidate for associate justice to the state Supreme Court, supports allowing the electronic media into the courtrooms as a way to speed up trials and inform the public.

Brady, seeking place 1 on the court, was in Midland Saturday with the Republican Party's team effort to get out the vote for Tuesday's election. He claimed his race involves a "typical conservative versus a liberal." Focal point of his campaign is his 34 years as a courthouse trial lawyer since being admitted to the Texas Bar in 1946. Brady said his Democratic opponent, James P. "Jim" Wallace, favors labor and has specialized in the area of claims law. 'My practice has been general; it's run the whole gamut in the legal profession," he said. Since the Billie Sol Estes case first went to court in the 1960s, television cameras have been prohibited from the courtroom. But Brady feels it is time they made a reappearance, citing the example in Florida where cameras are allowed during trial proceedings.

These video cameras "would stop the terrible rising crime rate. It would allow courts to take cases much faster and let the public know what's going on in the courtroom. Brady, who lives in Austin, is backing the passage of Amendment 8 on the ballot which would ehange the Courts of Civil Appeals into the Courts of Appeals. This change would prompt quicker appeals cases in that 14 courts handling criminal and civil appeals would be established. And it could help to reduce the crime rate, he suggested.

Brady has, worked as a prosecuting attorney and served 10 years as an officer or director of state and local bar associations.

DIRT, SQUIRT, QUIRT Heat, drought, insects cause short cotton crop

By CHARLES W. GREEN Midland County Extension Agent - Agriculture

One of the earliest killing freezes on record for Midland County brought the 1980 growing season to an end this week.

Most cotton producers were ready for the dessicating weather to dry the leaves and stalks and allow harvest to procede. There were some late bolls in some fields, but the chance for many of them maturing in a reasonable length of time was slight due to a slow down of physiological activity.

The cotton crop will be short this year due to the heat, drought and heavy insect damage experienced during most of the growing season.

Sixteen chemical elements are essential for plant growth. These consist of mineral and non-mineral. The non-mineral elements are furnished by air and water - carbon, hydrogen and oxygen. The 13 mineral nutrients come from the soil and include nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium, calcium, magnesium, sulfur, manganese, iron, zinc, copper, boron, molybdenum and chlorine.

The mineral elements make up less than 5 percent of the dry matter in plants, but they must be present in the right amounts and right form for plant utilization. However, many other factors in soil and water management also are important.

Candidates tread different economic paths

WASHINGTON (AP) - Not sur prisingly, President Carter and Ronald Reagan agree on what the economy should be like: no inflation, low unemployment and a prosperous private sector. But they propose different paths for getting there.

Voters will have to decide by Tuesday which candidate offers the best hope for attaining those goals, or whether either can accomplish them. John Anderson's ideas may appeal to some.

After two recessions and seven years of high inflation, many voters realize the nation's economic problems have no easy solution, which may be why the candidates aren't promising miracles.

It may also be why Reagan's and Carter's short-term prescriptions for the economy are remarkably similar, although there are significant differences in their long-term approaches. In a nutshell, Reagan's approach to the economy is that by allowing people to keep a greater share of their income, they would be more productive. Their increased spending and saving would stimulate investment and result in a stronger economy that is better able to compete with other nations in world markets. The government's share of the economy would fall drastically over time.

Carter essentially would continue his approach of the past two years, which is to gradually reduce inflation while keeping a lid on government spending. He would slowly reduce the government's share of the economy, while promoting business investment through special incentives. The economy would grow slowly to prevent inflation from heating up again, a strategy that would keep unemployment higher than desired.

Carter, who promised grandiose results in his 1976 campaign and failed to deliver, is not risking that mistake this time around.

In a recent interview with The Associated Press, the president said his first term goals of 4 percent unemployment and 4 percent inflation are also appropriate goals for a second term, but he didn't promise he could achieve them.

It is a matter of great embarrassment to Carter - and an example of his failed economic policies, his critics say - that the nation's unemployment rate is now 7.5 percent of the labor force, virtually the same as when he defeated Gerald Ford in 1976, promising he could do much better. Inflation, as measured by the Consumer Price Index, is likely to be about 13 percent this year, compared to 4.8 percent in 1976.

Reagan isn't promising specific reults either, which key aide Edwin feese says is politically "prudent." But the Republican candidate's decision not to set targets doesn't inhibit him from criticizing Carter for failing to meet his. Reagan does promise that his program to slash tax rates by 30 percent over a three-year period would reduce both unemployment and inflation, but doesn't how much or when.

His one specific goal for the economy is to balance the federal budget no later than 1983, which he says would mark "the beginning of the end of inflation."

Reagan's promise to balance the budget, while also cutting taxes and increasing defense spending, has been challenged by many economists, including some in Reagan's own camp, as unattainable. But Reagan insists it can be done by cutting nondefense spending 7 percent to 10 percent, after discounting for inflation.

Reagan has been unspecific about which cuts he would make, saying only that they would be achieved by trimming existing waste and extravagance. He says Social Security and other necessary programs would be eft intact, but he makes himself the judge of what is necessary.

Carter charged during Tuesday's debate that for Reagan to achieve his budget goals, it would be necessary to cut $130 billion from non-defense federal programs by 1983, the implication being that Reagan would have to dismantle much of the rest of the federal government. Reagan's camp says the figure is too high, but doesn't offer a specific rebuttal. Carter failed in his first-term promise to balance the budget by 1981. His administration ended 1980 with a bud-get deficit of $58.9 billion, the second largest on record, and projects a deficit of $30 billion for 1981. The president has offered no new target for balancing the budget.

Both Carter and Reagan have promised tax reductions in 1981. Reagan would cut income tax rates acrossthe-board by 10 percent. Carter has proposed $27 billion in cuts. Reagan's reductions would primarily go to individuals; the bulk of Carter's cuts would be for business, although they include an offset for the 1981 increase in Social Security withholding taxes.

Both candidates would accelerate the tax depreciation allowance for business investment.

Anderson, the independent, says cutting taxes would be a mistake now and favors waiting until the economy is in better shape. He wants an increase of 50 cents-a-gallon in the federal gasoline tax, both to conserve oil and to help finance Social Security.

rne average lems as related to lack of mineral nutrients and tends to overuse both organic and inorganic fertilizers. This is illustrated by the results of 145 different soil samples tested during the last nine months from Midland lawn and garden soils.

Ninety (62, percent) of these had excess nutrients and accumulation of salinity as a result of overuse of fertilizers and manure. Eighty-five (58 percent) had excess phosphorus, with a note from the soil chemist advising not to use fertilizers containing phosphorus for three to five years.

One of the most important steps in growing ornamental and garden plants is a thorough preparation of the soil. It is possible to grow plants of sorts in soil that has only been scratched, but many times they will be spindly and flowers, foliage and fruit will be sparse.

The ideal perennial flower or shrub bed should have soil prepared to a depth of at least 18 inches; annual beds and vegetable gardens should be prepared eight to 12 inches. In preparing new beds or reworking old beds, November or December is the ideal time to start, before the really bad days of winter set in. Spade or till the soil to the deepest depth practical. Remove all boards, rocks or building debris, but turn under all leaves, grass, stems, roots and anything else that will decay easily. Retill two or three times at weekly intervals.

If the soil tends to dry between workings, water it. If winter weeds or grass try to grow, keep them removed. Adequate soil preparation is a lot of work; but it is better to grow a small garden or bed of flowers in well prepared soil than to attempt to grow masses of flowers or large gardens in poorly prepared soil.

The key to improving the sandy loam soils of Midland is to use lots of organic matter. Adding organic matter improves the structure and water holding capacity of sandy soils. Additional fertilizer and soil amendment may be necessary but this should be based on the results of a soil test from a reputable laboratory.

As mentioned above, some soils that have a past history of fertilizer use have no need for some nutrients.

Some soils will be too alkaline in nature (high pH) and depending on the plants to be grown, may need soil amendment to increase soil reaction toward the acid side. Some organic sources, such as spaghnum peat, are acidic (pH.2.6) and other materials, such as finely ground sulfur or sulfasoil can be used.

In the spring, at least two weeks before planting, till again. At this time work organic material, sulfur and fertilizer (if needed) into the soil. Use four to six inches of spaghnum peat per foot of depth (or other quality organic material, such as rotted manure or compost); five to 10 pints of soil sulphur per 100 square feet, and two pounds of 16-4-4 or 15-5-5 fertilizer (unless soil test indicates otherwise) per 100 square feet of area.

One year they flew to Canada. The next year they flew to Washington, D.C. This year they flew to Hawaii.

How are these trips financed? Do the taxpayers pay for these trips? Ifso, who determines where they go? Who determines if these trips are necessary and what purpose do they serve?

As taxpayers, if we are picking up the tab, these questions should be answered. - Mrs. Tom Mit-

ANSWER: A check with Midland College reveals that basic travel expenses for the trustees, some of whom are members of one or two national organizations, are paid by the college. The trips to be made are determined by the board of trustees.

The amount of money for these trips is budgeted annually by the college.

If spouses accompany their wives or husbands on these trips, they must pay their own expenses.

Man wrongfully jailed will fight polygraph use

COLUMBUS, Ohio dict, Fay said. - An Ohio man (AP) who spent two years in jail for a murder he didn't commit says he plans to work to outlaw lie detector tests which contributed to his own conviction.

"I'm not angry at the jury or the prosecutors," Fay, who was cleared of the crime last week. "But that polygraph examiner hasn't seen the last of me." Fay, 28, of Perrysburg, was convicted in 1978 of murdering a Perrysburg store owner An investigation by Fay and his attorney and mounting evidence led Wood County investigators to arrest two other men for the crime last week. After apologies from a judge, Fay was freed from the London Correctional Institute on Thursday without a criminal record. "I'm just trying to get my job back now," he said in a telephone interview Friday. Fay, who worked for Conrail, said he also is considering an avocation: working to outlaw or limit the use of lie detectors as evidence in court. Ohio is one of 23 states that allows lie detector tests to be used as evidence in a court trial, he said. Court officials said two polygraph examiners who said Fay was lying about the murder had interpreted Fay's results backwards. That misinterpretation figured heavily in the guilty ver-

Baby accompanies parents to jai

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) - John Paul Gaetano, a cherubic six months old, unwittingly focused national attention on his parents' crusade against abortion Saturday when he joined them for a short spell in the city jail. 1

Little John Paul smiled at reporters and television cameraman before his mother, Jeanne, carried him in to share her 24-hour jail sentence. He seemed amused.

Mrs. Gaetano and her husband. David, were arrested a year ago and convicted of trespassing after a sit-in protest at an Alexandria abortion clinic.

She said her chief reason for insisting that John Paul accompany her to jail is that she is breast-feeding him, 'and I haven't left him before for any real length of time.

"After all," she added, "we were arrested together."

At the time of the couple's September 1979 arrest at the Alexandria Women's Clinic, Mrs. Gaetano was two months pregnant with John Paul

Her husband, who will serve out his sentence in an adjacent cell, carried a portable crib, diapers and other items for the baby.

"It looks like we're moving in for a week, but you've got to bring a lot of stuff," Mrs. Gaetano told reporters as she carried John Paul through the jailhouse gates.

The couple and John Paul, named after Pope John Paul II, attended Roman Catholic mass before arriving at the jail in this Washington suburban.

After a goodbye kiss from John A. O'Keefe, the baby's godfather, Mrs. Gaetano walked into the jail where she was met by two female sheriff's deputies.

Reporters were not allowed past the outside gate.

Michael O'Toole, the jail's administrator, said three isolation cells on the first floor have been made available for the Gaetanos, who are being kept separate from the jail's other 118 prisoners.

Gaetano and his wife are in separate cells and the third is being left empty, although jail officials said the facility is overcrowded.

"It's an awkward situation," O'Toole acknowledged, adding that if the sentence were longer than 24 hours, the situation "would have to be re-evaluated." Sheriff Michael Norris negotiated the arrangements with Mrs. Gaetano's attorney. The arrest was nothing new for Mrs. Gaetano, who says she has been arrested at least a dozen times in connection with anti-abortion protests.

"I spent my 18th birthday in a Niantic, Conn., prison overlooking th sea," the 20-year-old mother said. Sunday is her husband's 30th birthday.

FBI's manhunt ends at blood bank

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) - For Allen Lee, the ' address as his residence. soft-spoken manager of the downtown plasma donation center, it wasn't unusual for an FBI agent to ask him to keep a lookout for someone.

The 25-year-old manager of Sera-Tec Biologicals sets all kinds of drifters and down-and-outers, people trying to make ends meet by giving blood for $5.

This time, the FBI was looking for Joseph Paul Franklin, an avowed racist wanted for questioning in the sniper slayings of blacks in four cities and the wounding of civil rights leader Vernon Jordan.

The Secret Service had also linked Franklin to a 1976 letter threatening President Carter. It said Carter had "sold out to the blacks." A campaign visit by the president was only three days away.

IT WAS TUESDAY, Franklin was still at-large after an intensive two-month search. The FBI was checking the Sera-Tec blood bank, where about 120 people a day give blood, as a likely place for him to show up.

Agent Fred Rivero mentioned the Carter visit to Lee as he handed him an agency flier on Franklin, born Clayton Vaughn Jr. He said Franklin was a homicide suspect.

"Very dangerous," Rivero cautioned as he left. Lee mentioned Rivero's visit to some of his lab technicians. He thought no more about it - but within hours, his blood plasma lab would give the FBI the break it needed to get its man.

On Friday, Franklin, 30, a native of Mobile, Ala., was indicted by a federal grand jury in Salt Lake City on charges that he violated the civil rights of two black men who were shot after jogging in a park with two white women on Aug. 20.

The Lakeland Ledger reconstructed the events Tuesday that put him in custody.

At 3 p.m., four hours after the FBI visit, a tired Claudette Mallard looked up from her receptionist's desk to see a 200-pound man walk to the door, wearing brown corduroy pants and a long-sleeved shirt open to the waist. He was carrying a suitcase. "Name?" she asked routinely.

"THOMAS ALVIN BOHNERT," he replied, and "I'm going to testify in for a few days," he said. began filling out a form, giving an out-of-state

The donor walked into a donation room filled with 24 orange-and-brown imitation-leather contour beds million bond. and decorated with a drawing of the Seven Dwarfs, with Sleepy saying "No sleeping while donating."

Two technicians noticed the donor had two tattoos - a Grim Reaper on the right forearm, an American eagle on the left. One of them stole quietly into Lee's office, and nervously told him this donor seemed to fit the FBI flier description.

THE FBI DESCRIPTION said the suspect's hair was brown, not black, and indicated a lot of tattoos. But, Lee thought, the man was nervous, his behavior acquittal for former U.S. Army ranger John Giberratic.

He called the local FBI office, five blocks away. Try to keep him there," said agent Bruce Dando. Dando and agent Brooke Roberts decided to call Lakeland police for help, and Detectives Gerald Barlow and Ray Tallman Jr. met them at the blood bank. They agreed to wait outside for Franklin to leave.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Hit-run accidents in the Los Angeles area Halloween night and early Satur-day claimed the lives of five people, including a 10-year-old boy who was run over a second time as he lay in the street, authorities said.

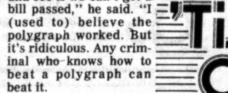

A man and a woman were killed in Los Angeles early Saturday when a motorist drove a car into a group of people after a dispute at a Halloween party, police said. The dead were identified as Jerry Cra-

In Anaheim, about 30 miles southeast of Los Angeles, Carmen Maria Vasquez, who was celebrat-ing her 17th birthday, and Frank J. Montano, 7, were fatally injured by a car that struck them in a crosswalk. The driver sped from the scene, police said.

William B. Balch, 33, of Anaheim, was later William B. Baich, 33, of Anaheim, was later arrested for investigation of two counts each of felony hit-and-run driving and felony vehicular man-slaughter, said Anaheim police Sgt. Ted Labahn. struck by one hit-and-run car and then run over, again by a second vehicle, police said. Santa Ana police said the second driver later turned herself in, but was not immediately charged pending investigation of the incident. The first was still being sought.

Convicted man cries when given 99 years

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) - Joe D. Martinez, 20, cried in the courtroom when he was sentenced to years in prison for the 1979 Halloween slaying of Siegfried L. Davila.

Davila was beaten, stabbed, burned, impaled on a wooden stake and hanged from a tree last Oct. 31. Police who found the body at first thought it was a mannequin hung in the tree as a Halloween prank.

Martinez's 99-year sentence was handed down Thursday by a jury in 227th District Judge Mike Machado's court. Prosecutor Wayne Hampton said, "we asked for life, but we are happy with 99 years."

Martinez was the second of four youths charged with the slaying who has been sentenced to prison.

Bill would abolish roadside finés

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Rep. Joe L. Hernandez, D-San Antonio, has agreed to introduce a bill in the Texas Legislature to do away with roadside payments of traffic fines under threat of jailing by Department of Public Safety officers.

Hernandez said his bill was offered at the urging of Bexar County Justices of the Peace who have condemned a practice whereby DPS troopers force traffic violators to obtain a money order and mail it to justices of the peace, post a bond or go to iai

Hernandez said he has received complaints that Mexican citizens driving through Texas have been arrested and jailed even though they possessed valid Mexican operators' licenses and automobile registrations.

Experiments suspected in mutilations

DALLAS (AP) - Scientific analyses indicate cult activities and government experiments are more likely to be responsible for cattle mutilations than extraterrestial beings, says a UFO researcher who has studied animal tissues for seven years.

Tommy Blann of Lewisville, a research associate to the Center for UFO Studies in Evanston, Ill., and technical consultant for the movie "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," Saturday urged authorities and ranchers to send him samples of the mutilated tissues.

Two animals were found in South Texas last week, after a bizarre string of mutilations in the area two years ago.

'I'm trying to figure out if there is some type of aircraft involved in the mutilations themselves," said Blann, who for 23 years has studied unidentified flying objects - although he prefers to call them "unknowns."

In some cases, he said, marks on the ground near the animals indicated a helicopter had landed there.

"A number of law enforcement officers think we may have some type of government activity. - chemical, radiological, or biological experimentation. Certain parts could be taken from the animals to determine various chemical or bacteriological simulants being used, to determine the concentration of an agent dispersed in the atmosphere," he said.

"There are those cases, particularly in New Mexico and Colorado; where ground traces near the carcass seem to indicate some other type of non-convenetional aircraft," Blann said. .

Tripod markings, with three points inside a circular area, have been found in a few cases, he said.

Some animals' wounds actually have been burned, he said, and others appear to have been cauterized, or frozen.

"This leads one to believe ... that maybe we're dealing with something a little more sophisticated. But that does not prove it was UFOs. We can't exclude the various cult activities and the fact that there have been indications that animals actually have been mutilated and sacrificed for various ritualistic exercises."

Tanker extension sought

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. Bill Clements has asked the U.S. Department of Transportation to extend the Nov. 15 deadline for Texas to accept a license for an offshore port for jumbo oil tankers.

The governor asked the DOT to extend its license offer until May 15, 1981, because the Texas Deep-water Port Authority has been making major changes in its plans, "Upon issuance of this extension, I am prepared to take the necessary steps under state law to expedite this project," Clements said in his letter to the DOT.

Clements said the authority's investment bankers ave accepted a plan to develop the port in stages, ith the first stage providing a capacity of 500,000 arrels a day.

Polish free unionist comes out of underground

JAMES F. SMITH Associated Press Writer

KATOWICE, Poland (AP) - The police didn't find Kazimierz Switon's small printing press until their ninth search of his apartment. It was hid-den under the flooring.

He had been using it to publish an underground newsletter that promoted independent labor unions in Poland.

In more than two years, police searched his home 13 times, jailed him for 4½ months and again for five weeks, detained him 25 times for up to eight hours and held him another four times for up to 24 hours, for "illegal labor organizing activities."

One night last month, Switon stood at the podium of the sports arena here and addressed 10,000 cheering members of Poland's largest independent union, Solidarity, the fulfillment of a dream.

"A lot has changed in this country. It's a different Potand," Switon said the next morning in an interview with The Associated Press in this factory city where the air is hazy from plant smokestacks.

"A social initiative has been awakened that had been asleep for 35 years,2, said the 49-year-old former car mechanic and radio technician. But Switon, who has emerged as leader of the Katowice branch, one of the major power bases of the new independent union, said Poland remains in an extremely delicate position as the unions build their organizations and find their place in Polish society.

"We have to be very, very careful at the moment not to make any sort of mistake. All those people who were kicked out of the government want to return, saying, 'I told you so," he said, referring to the government shakeup at the end of Poland's summer strikes.

To keep hardliners from finding any pretext for launching an assault on the new unions, Switon said he strongly opposes further strikes, a view shared by his friend and colleague, Lech Walesa, leader of the August strikes in Gdansk that led to major reforms in Poland.

"I dont want a tragedy here," Switon said. "If we are irresponsible, then the tragedy is very close."

He sees the danger not in Soviet intervention but in internal suppression of the movement that could end in 'domestic war.'

"Strikes would only hurt the workers themselves," he added. "We.do not have enough food now. If there is a strike, we face famine and full, total chaos.'

The bearded activist now finds himself trying to calm those in the union movement whom he sees as pushing too hard, too fast. Before the interview he persuaded a handful of would-be demonstrators not to unfurl banners of protest in this southern Polish city's main square because the evening rally was not covered on television.

The overzealousness is understandable, he said. "The frustration was there for several years. It just exploded this summer.

"The law wasn't law in our country. There was a great need for freedom of expressing different points of view. You can be free in prison if you can say the things you want to say. That is how I understand freedom.

But he constantly steers the talk away from politics and back to trade unions, speaking with an intensity that has earned him the title of "The Idealist" among some union leaders in Gdansk.

A father of six children and grandfather of five more, Switon helped found the then-illegal Free Trade Union Organizing Committee in February 1978. The group printed a newsletter, Union Movement, calling for independent unions to replace the Communist Party-controlled unions.

When workers at the huge Huta Katowice steel mill went on a solidarity strike with workers in Gdansk and along the Baltic coast, they fetched Switon from his apartment. His phone had been cut off and two militia were standing guard, but they did not interfere when the six steel workers escorted Switon away.

Now a member of the Gdanskbased presidium of Solidarity, he traveled on a weekend tour with Walesa through southern Poland, where thousands of people turned out at a dozen rallies to support the new union movement.

The unions already have achieved some tangible gains. Switon said workers at Huta Katowice have received 700 zloty ($23) raises per month. But he said the union should focus first on building a strong national organization rather than demanding more money "so that no one will be able to destroy the organization and achievements of the summer.

The next step will be reducing censorship so workers will be better informed about the movement, he said. Negotiations are under way with the government on a new censorship law, and Switon notes there has been a sharp increase in coverage by the official press of the changes in Poland?

New printing presses, gifts from Western unions, are now on hand. In place of newsletters from his living room, Switon looks forward to a national free trade union newspaper.

Black lawyer finally in bar association

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A black attorney twice denied membership in the Los Angeles County Bar Association because of his race has accepted an honorary membership after 50 years of practice.

"I feel very humble today on receiving this honor," 73-year-old Charles Matthews Sr. said Friday. Of being twice rejected, he said: "I don't hold any animosity toward anybody about it. That was the constant back in those days." . Matthews accepted the honor at a joint meeting of the Los Angeles County Bar Association and the John M. Langston Bar Association, a black lawyers' group.

Matthews was turned down by the county bar in 1930 and 1944. When they dropped their color exclusion in 1950, he was invited by a friend to join but spurned the offer.

Child loser in cancer battle

By LINDY WASHBURN Associated Press Writer

MILFORD, Conn. (AP) - As 4-year-old Amber Calistro lay in a coma, slipping toward an inevitable death from cancer, her mother stood at her bedside snapping pictures she hopes will comfort parents of other sick children.

And when Amber finally died, Patti Calistro said she offered a prayer of thanks to God. "I feel better now," she said. "Amber is at peace. Ms. Calistro had been preparing for Amber's death for weeks. Beside the deathbed photos, she has films of Amber's last days and tapes of their conversations. "I've saved every scrap of paper she has drawn on," Ms. Calistro has said.

All the material will be used in a book Ms. Calistro hopes to write about her daughter to help other parents who must watch their children die.

A tiny growth discovered behind Amber's right ear last year was later diagnosed as rhabdomyosarcoma, a form of cancer. She was treated with radiation and metabolic and immunological therapy after an operation last March, but in recent weeks, the tumor grew to the size of a saucer, disfiguring one side of her head.

Amber slipped into a coma shortly after midnight Thursday and died at her home in Milford, a coastal community, at about 2:30 p.m. It was Ms. Calistro's 27th birthday.

'It was beautiful. Suddenly I felt this tremendous energy, as if ants were all over me. It was as if she had dispersed, and was all around us. I could only say, 'Thank you, God, thank you.

"You know," she added, "today is my birthday. It's more than just a coincidence. Her life and her death mean something. Of course, I've cried. But now I feel better. She is at peace." In the coming weeks, Ms. Calistro said, she will gather together the drawings and photographs of Amber's life, the notes on her disease, and the tapes of her voice. Then Amber can touch all those who reached out to her, Ms. Calistro said. "They do love her," she said. "Even people she doesn't know, children, have sent letters saying, Amber, we love you.' Ms. Calistro, an artist who separated from her husband before Amber's disease was discovered, has kept a list of people who have called her, and plans to begin a newsletter.

A few days before Amber died, Ms. Calistro said, "I know what it is like to struggle and I want to help other people who are going through the same thing needlessly."

She insists that "something must be done" to link the families of dying children, to help parents lend emotional support to one another and to aid the flow of information about alternative cancer treatments and their legal consequences.

Ms. Calistro plans to have Amber's body cremated Monday. Then she will sail on Long Island Sound, scattering her daughter's ashes on the water.

Police hypnotist cites technique

NEW YORK (AP) - Hypnosis is "growing like wildfire" as a technique in police work and will soon be a common tool for solving white-collar crimes, says the founder of the New York Police Department's hypnosis unit.

Charles Diggett, a retired sergeant, told the annual convention of the Association to Advance Ethical Hypnosis on Friday that hypnosis is particularly valuable in white-collar cases because it can uncover information from conversations held long ago.

The time element is important in such cases because years often pass between the crime and the indictment, he said.

"In white-collar crime, you're almost always looking for something that somebody said," Diggett said.

Police in the city and in another state currently are using hypnosis to investigate a case involving government kickbacks, he said, although he refused to give any details about the case.

Diggett, who recently retired after 28 years with the force, opened the city's hypnosis unit in October 1976 after taking several courses to learn the

He said that a typical session would last from 1½ to 3 hours and would be conducted in the presence of the detective on the case and a friend or relative of the subject, if requested.

In the session, Diggett would briefly interview the detective about the case, and then call in the subject. To make the experience less painful, Diggett said he never made subjects under hypnosis speak directly about a crime. Instead, he would have them talk about the incident as if they were watching it on television or in a movie. Hypnosis resulted in leads in '75 percent of the cases in which it was used, he said, and at last count, pproximately 10 percent of the cases were solved trough use of the technique. Republicans hope for gains in state legislature

They hope to ride Reagan's coattails, Clements' campaigning

By LEE JONES Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Republicans are counting on Ronald Reagan's coattails and Gov. Bill Clements' energetic campaigning to increase GOP strength in the 1981 Legislature.

Several Democratic state senators and representatives could lose their jobs to the GOP's determined push.

The GOP now has 26 House members and four senators. Party leaders targeted seven Senate seats and 38 House seats for extra effort this year, and even Democrats predict some gains.

"I think you will see 30 to 35 Republicans in the House," said one observer with close ties to Speaker Bill Clayton.

Republican State Chairman Chet Uphman predicts the GOP will gain three to seven senators, and Democrats concede that at least three incumbents of their party are in trouble.

The House has 150 members, the Senate 31.

Clements did the unheard-of this year - something none of his recent predecessors dared to do - and campaigned hard for numerous Republican legislative candidates.

But high-ranking Democrats on the staff of the House and Senate think the tactic will backfire on the governor.

"It might turn around and bite him. ... Incumbents who are not having a hard time winning might not take it kindly, when the governor wants their help on legislation, if the governor came out and tried to beat_them," a House staffer said.

The governor will have problems enough with key bills in his legislative program, particularly the initiative and referendum and wiretapping proposals that failed in 1979.

Democratic senators targeted for defeat by the GOP include four of the 12 "Killer Bees" who hid out and halted Senate business for five days in May.

Among them is Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, who will be dean of the Senate if re-elected. Schwartz, a leading liberal and chairman of the Senate Natural Resources Committee, is opposed by James E. "Buster" Brown, a Lake Jackson lawyer.

Brown has been well-financed, reporting about $70,000 more in campaign contributions through Sept. 25 than Schwartz.

Schwartz got some bad publicity when he slugged an opposing lawyer after a heated courtroom session in October, but a grand jury refused to indict him

'All Babe's done since he has been in public office has been to beat somebody. If I had to target a race, it wouldn't be that one. I think Babe will win," said Don Rivers, executive assistant of Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby

Two "Killer Bees" with serious re-election problems are Sens. Gene Jones, D-Houston, and Ron Clower, D-Garland, chairman of the Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee.

Jones has suffered from an Austin grand jury investigation of alleged use of state employees and equipment in his campaign.

The grand jury received a 30-day extension on Thursday, meaning election day will arrive with Jones' case still up in the air.

Clements was in Houston the past week campaigning for Jones' oppo-nent, Sugar Land estate planner Mike Richards.

Clower has had a vigorous opponent in Dee Travis, a former assistant to U.S. Rep. Jim Collins of Dallas, who has accused Clower repeatedly of favoring a state income tax - which Clower denies.

Republicans have rarely made the "Killer Bee" walkout an issue, but Travis has hit Clower with it repeatedly, calling it "an illegal boycott of his sworn duties in Austin." Clower, in turn, has made an issue of Travis' campaign contributors; calling them "an all-star list of special interest. lobbyists.

The GOP belatedly targeted a fourth "Killer Bee," Carlos Truan of. Corpus Christi, who is opposed by Dr. Marco Eugenio, a Corpus Christi neurosurgeon.

Other senators with tough races are Jack Ogg, D-Houston, and Bob Price, D-Pampa. In Dallas, former GOP county Chairman John Leedom and former Democratic county Chairman Ron Kessler are locked in a close contest to succeed Sen. Bill Braecklein, a Democrat-turned-Republican who chose not to run.

In the House, a prominent Republican is in trouble, Rep. Bob Davis of Irving, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee and one of Speaker Bill Clayton's closest advisers.

Congressional hopefuls locked in bitter battles

By TERRY LEONARD Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) - Big bucks, fast talk and some old fashioned mud-slinging highlight hard-fought races for Congress in a state where the push for a seat on the Hill has been overshadowed by the bitter battle for the White House.

Four of Texas' 24 incumbent congressmen are running unopposed, 10 are considered shoo-ins against token oppositon, three others should keep their seats and two are retiring voluntarily.

But four are locked in no-holds-barred struggles for re-election and the stakes are high

Consider the case of U.S. Rep. Jim Wright, the house majority leader; heir apparent to the Speaker's chair and the last of a vanishing breed -Congressional leaders from Texas.

Ever since Wright ambushed Wingate Lucas 26 years ago, he has crushed every challenger in sight - sometimes by polling as much as 98 percent of the vote

But now, at the zenith of his career, he must wage a fierce battle to guard his seat against a Republican upstart

Jim Bradshaw, 40, a five-year Fort Worth councilman, believes he's a giant killer.

"I really think Wright is frustrated by me. He's a powerful man. He rides around in limousines. He's been re-elected for 26 years by landslides. And here he's got to come back to Fort Worth and work against - who? - little ol' me," said Bradshaw.

He is allied with national conservative groups and the Republican national strike force, which includes Wright in a list of prominent Democrats targeted for defeat.

^{$5} Rebate

Bradshaw has attacked Wright as too liberal and claims he has drawn to within 2 percentage points of Wright — a suggestion that Wright dismisses as wishful thinking.

Wright, meanwhile, has pointed to his clout in Washington and its benefits for the district. His supporters paint his opposition as extremist rather than conservative and he argues that it he had not won the leadership post it would be in the hands of a liberal Mud-slinging has become politics-as-usual in the 5th District fight between two-term incumbent Jim Mattox of Dallas and Republican challenger Tom Pauken of Mesquite.

Mattox won narrowly over Pauken in 1978 and the two have picked up where they left off in a contest too close to call and one that may be the most bitter in Texas.

Mattox claims Pauken "hasn't been honest with the people," about his reasons for leaving a position in the Nixon White House. And Mattox says the incident shows "Pauken doesn't have the stature or the strength to stand up under the pressures" of Congressional committee requirements

Two Houston-area incumbents, Democrat Bob Eckhardt and Republican Ron Paul, face stiff challenges in their districts.

Eckhardt, 67, a 14-year veteran, estimates he has spent $600,000 in his bid to protect his congressional seat against conservative Republican Jack Fields,

The challenger is well-organized and financed with the help of national conservative political action groups and the oil industry.

Fields has hammered away at what he characterizes as Eckhardt's liberal voting record on defense, busing and energy, while Eckhardt claims a solid record, including a leading role on such issues as toxic waste disposal that have a visible effect in the district dotted with giant petrochemical plants.

Paul, 45, the on-again off-again incumbent in the 22nd district, faces a tough battle against political newcomer Mike Andrews, 36, a Houston Democrat. Andrews has accused Paul of voting against the interests of the Johnson Space Center, the Texas Medical Center, and Freeport, all in the district. However, Paul contends that the majority of the voters in the 22nd District believe government should stay out of people's lives and that government can not solve the all the ills of society.

The presidential election could play a major role in determining the winners in the 8th and 22nd districts

A heavy turnout for Carter in the historically Democratic districts could spell victory for Eckhardt and Andrews. But a Ronald Reagan sweep could send both Paul and Fields to Washington

The presidential race also could play a role in the race for the 4th District seat vacated by the retirement of U.S. Rep. Ray Roberts.

Former State Sen. Ralph Hall, 57, of Rockwall has developed a familiar, likeable image as a good-oldboy Democrat and generally is considered a safe bet to win the seat.

However, Republican John Wright, a 44-year-old Tyler businessman, could stage an upset win on Tuesday if Reagan carries the district by a wide margin.

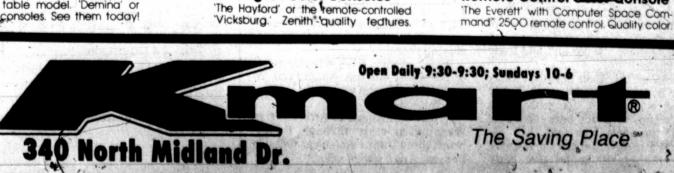

State Sen: Willjam Patman, 53, of Ganado, the son of former longtime Rep. Wright Patman, is consid-ered the frontrunner in the fight over the seat opened when freshman Rep. Joe Wyatt of Victoria resigned, citing personal reasons.

He faces Republican C.L. Conklin, a Corpus Christi physician.

Democratic incumbents running unopposed this year include Sam Hall of Marshall; Jack Brooks of Beaumont; Marvin Leath of Marlin; and Charles Stenholm of Stamford.

Allies face dilemma when U.S. hostages are released

By DAVID MASON

LONDON (AP) - Release of the U.S. hostages by Iran could throw America's main European allies into a dilemma over resumption of normal relations with Iran.

The nine members of the European Common Market in May went along with the United States in imposing arms and economic sanctions against Iran because of the hostage crisis.

If the hostages are released, diplomats say, the European sanctions probably would be quickly lifted in a legal sense. But whether normal trade relations, or any arms supplies, would actually be resumed is a question which troubles many governments.

Normalization of trade relations with Iran, particularly arms supplies, is likely to bring protests from Iraq and its supporters in the war against Iran. Signs of this attitude have already appeared in the Middle East.

Arab officials and oil industry sources have been quoted as warning the United States that it would precipitate a very grave oil situation and alienate the conservative Persian Gulf states if it supplies Iran with military spare parts after the hostages are freed. The same attitude would obviously apply to European nations.

Although the United States was Iran's major arms supplier until the shah's overthrow in early 1979, Britain had supplied several hundred Chieftain tanks, and some other countries had also added to Iran's arsenal. Both Britain and France are holding back delivery of naval vessels that had been finished before the sanctions were imposed.

Iran is believed by military specialists to be in desperate need of spare parts for planes, tanks and other equipment.

Beyond the question of arms is the matter of normal trade and economic relations with Iran, now in suspension.

Before the sanctions were imposed, the nine European countries had a brisk export-import business with Iran. During 1979 the European countries imported $6 billion worth of Iranian products - largely oil - and exported $3 billion in goods. For the first four months of 1980, before sanctions were imposed, the figures were $2.5 billion in imports and $1.7 billion in exports.

Machinery and transport equipment made up 50 percent of the exports to Iran and other manufactured goods and chemicals the remainder, according to Common Market figures. Military equipment was not specifically identified.

The effect on Iran of the sanctions is controversial. Some officials believe Iran has been getting much of what it needed from Europe from third parties, but that it was paying about 25 percent more.

There's no other way to do what WANT ADS do. Dial 682-6222

One British specialist on Iran put it this way: "Before the Iraq-Iran war, the sanctions were inconvenient but not disastrous. But now they bite deeply.

Foreign Minister Gaston Thorn of Luxembourg, current chairman of the Common Market's foreign ministers' group, said after a recent meeting that te countries probably would lift the sanctions after the release of the U.S., hostages. But he added that in his opinion arms sales would not automatically follow and that this option would be left to the individual nations.

Such a decision obviously would be taken in the context of the Iraq-Iran war, diplomats here say.

Figuring in this context would be the attitude of the Soviet Union. Western diplomats here are generally satisfied that the Soviet Union has taken a largely neutral stand toward the warring sides. But this could change, some diplomats feel, if the Soviet Union perceived that Iran's war effort would be aided by resumption of trade relations by Európeans after the lifting of sanctions their innocence, a former federal immigration officer and a Long Island businessman say they will appeal their Abscam convictions for accepting $15,000 in return for agreeing to fix an immigration case.

The Soviet Union had been Iraq's major military supplier before the war and Iraq, too, is believed to be in need of spare parts.

"I felt I was out to do my job," said Alexander Alexandro, 30, a former criminal investigator for the Immigration and Naturalization Service. Alexandro said he took a $2,000 cash payoff because he was trying to build a criminal case against the bribers. "Deep down in my heart I know I am not guilty," he added.

Alexandro and co-defendant Alfred Carpentier, 54, were convicted Friday on charges of conspiracy to commit bribery and a conflict of interest in the nation's fourth Abscam trial in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn.

Alexandro was also convicted of bribery; Carpentier was acquitted of that charge.

U.S. District Judge Mark Costantino adjourned the case without setting a sentence date. A bribery charge carries a maximum penalty 15 years in prison; a conspiracy conviction carries up to five years and the third charge, up to two years. Both peal the verdict. Alexandro, of Commack, Long Island, and Carpentier, of East Meadow, were the first two suspects arrested in connection with the federal investigation into corruption by public officials. Two congressmen have already been convicted, and four House members and a senator are under indictment in the case. The government claimed Carpentier and Alexandro agreed, in return for a $15,000 payoff, to secure admission to the United States of a fictitious Irish national, said to be the protege of an Arab sheik.

The next step of the scheme was for the defendants to prepare a false certificate that the alien was a necessary employee, using the name of an American corporation as his employer, prosecutors said.

Videotapes shown during the trial showed Alexandro taking a $2,000 downpayment on the $15,000

Alexandro admitted taking the $2,-000 and also admitted under cross-examination that he did not tell his immigration superiors he had taken it nor that he was probing a criminal case.

Sadat wants Arab unity

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) - President Anwar Sadat, saying the Iran-Iraq war has capped the "tragedy and comedy" of disarray in the Arab world, called on all Arab nations Saturday to join in the Egyptian-Israeli peace process.

Sadat, inaugurating a second house of the Egyptian legislature, made his first appeal for cooperation since 17 Arab countries severed diplomatic relations with Egypt 15 months ago because of its peace treaty with Israel. The 22-member Arab League also suspended Egypt's membership. In a two-hour nationally broadcast speech, Sadat listed Arab disputes and said, "This disarray has become a dishonor - a tragedy and com-

He noted Saudi Arabia's break of relations with Libya last week, the relations with Libya last week, the fighting between rival militias in Leb-anon, the Noslem Brotherhood's guerrilla campaign against the Syri-an government and the Persian Gulf war, which has split Arab ranks be-tween supporters of Iraq and Iran. The Egyptian leader also said the Soviet-Syrian treaty of friendship

Soviet-Syrian treaty of friendship signed last month and the gulf war underline the "dangerous developents in the Middle East and this makes it imperative that we adopt a new strategy and a new attitude."

Sadat warned of the "dangers" of Soviet encroachment on the area and urged Arabs to "wake up" and unify their ranks.

"I call on my Arab brethren today to join us to continue the peace. Egypt is, and will remain, committed to a comprehensive peace between Israel and all the Arabs," he said. Sadat's speech marked the opening of a 210-member legislative body composed of elder statesmen, religious leaders and scholars. It is to act as a consultative group and can suggest laws and hold meetings with Parliament. It will advise the president on domestic and foreign polcies, but its recommendations will not be binding. The body, with 140 elected and 70 appointed members, was created as part of Sadat's "greater democracy" plan.

Rape suspect arrested in Arizona motel

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) - An escaped inmate sought for questioning in a series of nine rapes and beatings that terrorized the community of Fife, Wash., was captured Saturday at a motel, authorities said.

Daniel Rybolt, 27, an escapee from the Maricopa County Jail in Phoenix, was taken into custody in the suburb of Glendale, police said.

Trish Berg, a spokeswoman for King County Police in Seattle, said Phoenix police arrested Rybolt at the Sage Motel in Glendale after receiving an anonymous tip that he was staying there. Rybolt jumped from a rear window of the motel but was caught and arrested by officers who were waiting nearby, she said. Rybolt was traced to Arizona from Washington state through finger-prints lifted from a stolen car found in Benson, Ariz., police said.

all there was? What you really wouldn't believe is that Tech walked off a 24-20 winner, handing the Steers, ranked No. 2 nationally, just two weeks ago, their second straight defeat. It was a parlay so rare that it revived memories of 1941 when then No. 1 Texas, so awesome that its starting lineup was featured on the cover of Life magazine, was tied by Baylor one week and lost to TCU the next. EVEN TECH'S first touchdown, a 66-yard drive in six plays, climaxed when quarterback Ron Reeves went over from the two with 6:13 left in the first period, failed to prepare the season's biggest crowd at Jones Stadium for what was to come. Reeves had completed 23 and 11 yard passes to split end Renie Baker, who had just come off the injured list, and Greg Tyler set up Reeves' score with a 30-yard spin around right end, a pitchout that bore a remarkable resemblance to the play SMU used to spring Craig James on a 53-yard TD run against Texas last week.

Less than three minutes later, safety Ted Watts plucked an errant pass by quarterback Donnie Little out of the ozone and headed for the end zone 34 yards away to make it 14-0.

With 2:07 still left, after Stan Williams recovered a Donnie Little fumble at the Texas 15, John Greve kicked a 31 yard field goal. It was 17-0 and Texas was playing catchup. Little went out of the game with bruised ribs and the Longhorns were forced to abandoned their conservative infantry tactics for the aerial arm of Fort Stockton's Rick McIvor.

But for Texas things were to get worse before they got better. A fumble recovery by nose guard Gabriel Rivera at the Tech 41 resulted in a 59-yard TD drive with Wes Hightower punching in from the one with 11:26 left in the half. Reeves and Baker hooked up for a 15 yard pass and Hightower took it to the two on a 13-yard run.

After that it was almost as though the Raiders looked up at the score-board and were frozen in disbelief by the 24-0 score. Through the second period, Tech behaved like an accident that had found a place to happen.

Watts, however, said regardless of what it looked like, "Give Texas cred-it. They are a good football team and they made what happened happen in the second period."

WHAT HAPPENED was that the Steers stampeded 80 yards in 19 plays to send A.J. Jones in from the one with six minutes left in the half. Key play came on a third and 10 from the Texas 20 when cornerback Greg Israel was flagged for pass interference. Herkie Wells, the 5-8, 151 pound punt returner, then turned disaster into success when he fielded a punt at the Texas 23, retreated to the eight and eluded the posse of red shirts to return it to the Texas 48, setting up the Horns second TD, on a broken play haymaker that looked like it had been staged on the backlot R Universal McIvor, forced to scramble the width of the field, arched a 56-yard touchdown pass to Lewis Sampleton, waiting 10 yards behind the nearest Tech defender. "Just say he beat both of us," said strong safety Tate Randle.

"When he started scrambling, we came up to support," elaborated Watts, "When we did, he just threw a beautiful pass.'

Shortly after, Reeves fumbled and UT linebacker Bruce Scholz recovered on the Tech 21. The Raiders stiffened, but John Goodson-kicked a 42-yard field goal.

The elusive Wall set up a 39-yard Goodson field goal as time ran out in the half by returning a Maury Buford punt 23 yards to the Tech 37 with 12 seconds left and McIvor passed 15 yards to Jones to put Goodson in position.

FEW WOULD have risked money. that it would remain 24-20 through 30 more minutes of play, maybe 48-40, but not 24-20, except the Tech defense. Linebacker Rusty Maroney, one of two Midlanders who were major factors in shutting down the Horns, was one who believed, "At half we just decided that couldn't beat us if they didn't score. We had a few break downs on pass defense in the first half, but we handled them pretty well. No, we didn't do anything differently for the game. We stuck to our basic defenses. We just worked harder during the two weeks we were off than we've ever worked before. On Texas' first TD drive, the gruelling 80-yard grind, Texas had first and goal at the Tech nine and McIvor tried a slantin pass to Rodney Tate over the middle. Mississippi State defense halts Tide

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) - Sophomore Dana Moore kicked two secondhalf field goals and the Mississippi State Bulldogs rode an inspired defense to a 6-3 upset of top-ranked Alabama Saturday, ending college football's longest winning streak at

The Crimson Tide waged a desperation drive to rescue victory in the waning moments, moving to the Bulldog 3, but defensive end Billy Jackson preserved the triumph by recovering quarterback Don Jacobs' fumble.

Moore kicked field goals of 37 yards in the third quarter and 22 yards early in the last period as the Bulldogs handed Alabama its first defeat since a 24-14 loss to Southern California in 1978

Alabama scored only on Peter Kim's 49-yard field goal as time ran out in the first half and fell to 7-1 for the season, 3-1 in the Southeastern Conference.

Mississippi State improved its record to 7-2 and 3-1 in the SEC as representatives of five bowls watched the shocker.

Alabama got its last chance when sophomore Mike Pitts blocked Moore's attempt at a 48-yard field goal, giving the Crimson Tide the ball at the Mississippi State 47.

Jacobs hit a 25-yard pass to Major Ogilvie, a 14-yarder to Jesse Bendross and a 16-yarder to Bart Krout to the

But on the next play, defensive end Tyrone Keys hit Jacobs, causing the fumble recovered by Jackson with six seconds left.

The Bulldogs fumbled while trying to run out the clock but recovered at their 1 as the partisan crowd. swarmed onto the field in celebration

Alabama was plagued by four lost fumbles and a defense led by Jackson, a freshman, and linebackers Johnie Gooks and Don Edwards, among the heroes of the Bulldogs' first victory over Alabama since 1957.

Jackson helped kill an Alabama threat in the middle of the fourth quarter when the Crimson Tide defensive end Gary DeNiro recovered a fumble by freshman quarterback John Bond at the Bulldog 44.

The Tide moved to the Mississippi State 37, but Jackson and defensive tackle Ricky George sacked Jacobs for a 3-yard loss on fourth-and-three.

Jackson's recovery of backup quarterback Alan Gray's fumble at the Alabama 29 set up Moore's 37-yard field goal.

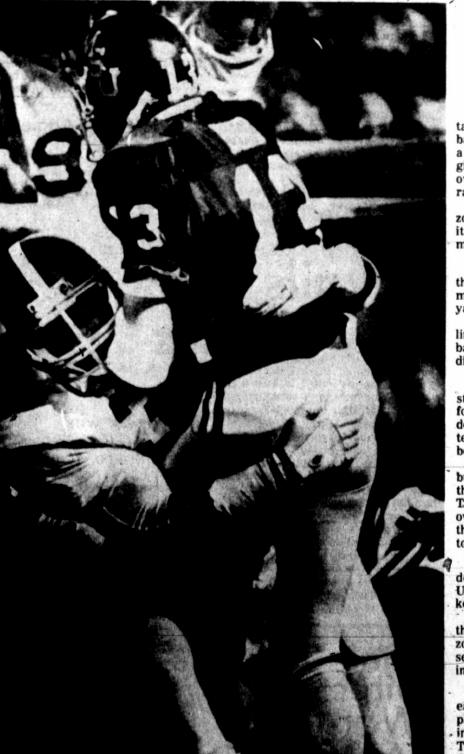

Bond, who gained 94 yards on 20 carries, directed the Bulldogs on a 67-yard drive to the Alabama 5, putting Moore in postion for his 22-yarder with 13:35 left in the game.

Alabama entered the game with the nation's third-best rushing offense but could score only after Pitts' recovery of wingback Mardye McDole's fumble on a punt at the Mississippi State 35. Kim kicked the field goal after three plays netted only 3 yards.

Both teams squandered opportunities in a first half marked by big defensive plays, including Mississippi State fumble recoveries and a key interception in the end zone by Ricky Tucker. Alabama moved to the Bulldog 19 on its second possession but Keys killed the threat at the 18 by recovering at the Tide 18 when the Tide miscued on a pitchout.

Later in the first quarter, Missis-sippi State linebacker Don Edwards recovered running back Jeff Fagan's fumble at the Alabama 36. But defensive end E.J. Junior threw running back Michael Haddix for a 7-yard loss at the 32 to stop the threat.

In the second period, Mississippi State drove from its 35 to the Alabama 17, largely on Bond's keepers, but Tucker intercepted on third down at the 5.

Arizona takes 23-17 triumph over Bruins

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) - Defensive tackle Mike Robinson sacked quarterback Tom Ramsey in the end zone for a safety with 1:32 remaining to help give Arizona a 23-17 upset victory over previously unbeaten, secondranked UCLA Saturday afternoon.

Robinson's tackle came after Arizona punter Sergio Vega put UCLA on its own 20-yard line with less than two minutes remaining.

Vega's punting kept the Bruins in the hole all day as he boomed several more than 50 yards and one 80 yards.

Arizona's defense, led by Robinson, linebacker Ricky Hunley and cornerback Marcellus Greene, made the difference in the game.

Hunley sacked Ramsey twice to stifle UCLA drives in the third and fourth quarters, and Greene knocked down two passes in the fourth quarter, including one that would have been a sure Bruin touchdown.

UCLA had a 17-14 half-time lead, but Arizona struck immediately in the third quarter as quarterback Tom Tunnicliffe hit tight end Neil Nettling over the middle and Nettling wrestled the ball into the end zone for a 39-yard touchdown

'After-that, it was simply Arizona's defense stopping a usually potent UCLA offense, and Vega's punting keeping the Bruins the hole.

UCLA fell to 6-1 overall, and 2-1 in the Pacific 10 conference, while Arizona won its first home game of the season and went to 3-4 overall and 2-2 in the conference.

Ramsey's passing got UCLA going. early. The sophomore completed four passes in the game's opening drive, including a 7-yard pass to tight end Tim Wrightman for the touchdown. On the drive, Ramsey's passing accounted for all the yardage.

Turnovers marked much of the game's early action, with a UCLA fumble in the first quarter leading to Arizona's first touchdown, and an Arizona fumble in the second quarter setting up a 39-yard field goal by the Bruins' Norm Johnson.

That field goal came after split end Michael Brant made a diving catch of a Ramsey pass in the end zone. One official called it a touchdown, but after a conference, the referee ruled that Brant had not touched his feet in bounds.

After the field goal, which came with 3: 58 left in the half, Arizona went into its last-minute offense, moving the ball effectively on Tunnicliffe's passing. At one point, he completed three consecutive passes to move the Wildcats to the UCLA 24 yard line. Four plays later, the freshman hit flanker Bob Carter in the corner of the end zone for the touchdown.

It was the first time in four games that Arizona showed a consistent ability to move the football. Tunnicliffe's passing was the key. He completed 12 of 18 attempts for 217 yards and two touchdowns

Sam Houston State defeats Howard Payne

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) - Split end Frankie Reescano caught a record setting 99-yard touchdown pass Saturday as Sam Houston State defeated Howard Payne by a 23-14 margin Saturday in Lone Star Conference play.

Reescano's catch, which erased and 11-year-old LSC record, came on a toss by quarter back Binky Ford, who also ran 77 yards to set up a 4-yard scoring run by Allan Banks.

Ford then hit Anthony Scott for a 68-yard touchdown pass to put the game away.

Howard Payne scored twice in the fourth quarter on touchdown runs by tailback Levi Morrison.

The win gives Sam Houston a-2-5 season record and 1-3 in conference. Howard Payne is 1-5-1 and 0-4.

Rice upsets Porkers, 17-16 with field goal

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) - Left-footed Kenneth Sam kicked a 31-yard field goal with 21 seconds left in the game as Rice scored all its points in the fourth quarter and upset Arkansas 17-16 Saturday night. Sam's winning field goal came five plays after David England blocked Steve Cox's punt and the Owls took over at the Arkansas 39.

The field goal completed an incredible Randy Hertle-led comeback by the Owls, who were behind 16-0 less than two minutes deep in the third quarter.

The Owls made only one first down in the first half behind freshman quarterback Doug Johnson and then switched to Hertle, a senior, who is a passing specialist

Arkansas, with freshman Bill Pierce making his first start at quarterback, took few chances offensively in the second half and made only one first down in the final two periods.

Hertle and Bobby Williams hooked up on a third down pass play that netted 16 yards in the Owls first touchdown drive.

Moments later, Mark Mistler and James Tolbert missed connections on handoff and Rice noseman Kyle Rice recovered at the Arkansas 34.

Methodist converted two long punt returns by cornerback John Simmons and two blocked kicks into a 20-0 lead and the 19th-ranked Mustangs went on to defeat Texas A&M Saturday in a a regionally televised game.

Linebacker Byron Hunt opened the SMU scoring in the first quarter by blocking a punt and taking it 59 yards for a touchdown.

Moments later, Simmons shocked the Texas Stadium crowd of 41,289 with a 66-yard punt return for a touchdown.

For the day, Simmons returned 3 punts for 122 yards, including a 53yard scamper that set up Eddie Garcia's 53-yard field goal.

Simmons also blocked an A&M field goal try, and Hunt ran 51 yards with a loose ball to set up a 28-yard field goal.

Freshman Lance McIlhenny, who engineered SMU's 20-6 upset of Texas a week ago, got his second straight start. Mitchell Bennett's leaping

Houston batters Texas Christian

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston quarterback Brent Chinn ran 1 and 9 yard for touchdowns and drilled a 7-yard touchdown pass to Hubert Miller in the first half and led the Cougars to a 37-5 Southwest Conference football victory over winless Texas Christian Saturday night.

Houston, which won its fourth straight game, now is 5-3 for the season and 4-1 in the SWC going into Saturday's showdown against the Texas Longhorns. TCU dropped to 0-8 for the season and 0-4 in the SWC.

Chinn, who had 130 yards rushing at halftime, finished with 18 carries for 143 yards and completed three of four passes for 43 yards.

He was the driving force for the Cougars from the first series of the game, when he carried six times for 68 yards in a 77-yard drive and scored on a 1-yard keeper.

Chinn, showing no ill effects from a thigh bruise suffered earlier this season, engineered the second first quarter Cougar score, highlighted by Eddie Wright's 31-yard run. Chinn capped the drive with a 9-yard touchdown dash.

The Cougars methodically took a 21-2 halftime lead early in the second quarter when thinn hit Miller with a 7-yard touchdown pass just out of the grasp of Frog safety Kenneth Bener. Houston added two more third quarter scores on a 2-yard dive by Terald Clark and a 7-yard keeper by freshman quarterback Lionel Wilson, playing for the first time this season . TCU's only scoring came in the first quarter when linenbacker Lionel Williams tackled Chinn in the end zone for a safety and Greg Porter kicked a 36-yard field goal in the third quarter.

Houston also got a safety in the fourth quarter when quarterback Reuben Jones was tackled in the end zone

Wilson, who had played only one down of varsity action, finished with 98 yards on 18 carries and Wright had 104 yards on 13 carries as the Cougar's amassed 507 yards rushing.

Chinn picked up 45 yards on his first two carries of the game, running 20 yards to the Cougar 45 and 25 yards to the TCU 26. An 11-yard run by Chinn and an offsides penalty against TCU preceded the first touchdown.

It was also the first time this season that Houston had scored a touchdown in the first quarter.

The Cougar defense played another outstanding game, stopping TCU at the Houston 36 in the first quarter. TCU reached Houston's 9-yard line in the second quarter, but cornerback tookd Stuard's punt at the 34 and got . Donnie Love intercepted a pass in the end zone to stop another drive.

Houston 9. But Stamp was dropped for a 1-yard loss and then sacked by Reggie Vonner for a 9-yard loss and TCU had to settle for Porter's field goal.

A Young interception and 46-yard return carried Baylor to the San Jose 27, but defensive end Jeff Schweiger stopped Walter Abercrombie for a 2-yard loss at the San Jose 8.

Clarkson came in in the middle of the second quarter and guided San Jose 92 yards to its first touchdown, which Tracy Franz scored on a 12yard pass.

Baylor came up short on at least two other possible scoring drives. In the first half, a 15-yard penalty wiped out Mike Brannan's run to the San Jose 6, and a fake field goal failed. In the third quarter, Gentry raced 26 yards to the San Jose 3, but fumbled into the end zone when he was tackled and Glenn McClaren of San lose recovered for a touchback.

Cowboys try Cardinals

ST. LOUIS (AP) - You really can't blame the St. Louis Cardinals if they're worried about what legerdemain to expect next from Danny White's bag of tricks.

The San Diego Chargers momentarily forgot about the fifth-year Dallas quarterback's sleight of hand last week. Partially as a result, the Cowboys emerged with a 42-31 triumph which kept their National Football League division title hopes burning brightly.

"Danny White has really matured," St. Louis Coach Jim Hanifan said of the 28-year-old successor to all-time Dallas quarterbacking great Roger Staubach.

"I think Tom Landry and his coaches were pretty well convinced of this." Hanifan said. "When Landry had made the statement that he's the smartest quarterback that he's had, that takes in a pretty wide group."

Hanifan said he was impressed not only by White's runs of 19 and 12 yards off fake punts against San Diego but also by other facets of the Cowboys' performance as well. "For the most part, they were able to give White the time he needed," the Cards' coach said of pass blocking by members of the Dallas offensive line. "They still play fine defense. They're just tougher than all get-out to run the ball against."

Landry, the Cowboys' head coach, agreed in principle with what Hanifan said.

"I feel good about things, because we had so far to come," he said of a team which has been forced to rebuild its secondary. "The defense especially is making the plays and gaining confidence. And a lot of young players like (Timmy) Newsome and (James) Jones are playing well and developing."

While rushing leader Tony Dorsett sat out the contest against the Chargers with bruised ribs, Newsome and Jones each enjoyed intervals in the spotlight.

Against St. Louis, however, Dorsett is expected to return. "If he's running well and he's having good success, I'll his total for the season to 1,096. Rogers amassed 168 yards in 35 car-ries, giving him 1,257 in eight games.

However, Rogers cost South Caro-lina at least a shot at a the when he drove to the Tech 10 when a McIvor pass was tipped and intercepted by Randle at the one and returned to the run him 20 to 25 times," Landry said. "If not, I'll move things around whatever it takes.

Dallas, which boasts a 6-2 record, enters the sold-out contest at Busch Stadium against a Cards' team seemingly on an emotional roller coaster with its 3-5 record.

"I think it bothered the team, Hanifan said of a 23-0 loss St. Louis suffered two weeks ago against the Washington Redskins only to rebound and beat the Baltimore Colts 17-10 last week. "Our backs were up against the wall. We were faced with adversity, and we really fought.

Among the accomplishments by St. Louis against Baltimore were an NFL record-tying 12 quarterback sacks, enough to put the Cowboys on guard in their bid for a fifth straight success over their National Conference East

"It's going to be an interesting game, a good game," Landry predicted. "The Cardinals have had a lot of tough luck. I think they're a good,

Lee's Schooler

SAN ANGELO - Midland Lee's Robert Schooler shattered the 15-minute barrier by 25 seconds here at Santa Fe Park Saturday to run away with the District 5-5A cross country championship. The Schooler victory was expected as the Rebel senior left the field in his speedy wake to capture his seventh straight cross country title of the year. His time of 14 minutes and 35 seconds was his best three-mile run of the^r season and makes him the solid favorite next week in the Region I. cross country run at Lubbock. The top five runners in the district meet earned region berths.

SCHOOLER'S LAST MILE was clocked at 4:38, a time he didn't meet in some mile races last year as a junior. Schooler had run this course once before this year, but Saturday's time was 17 seconds better.

Midland High sophomore James Beverly posted a 15: 35 to place fourth and earn a region berth also. Beverly is in his first year of cross country competition and there aren't too many sophomores who can boast a region berth in their first try.

San Angelo took the second and third positions with Brent McCarty placing second to Schooler with a 15:12, some 37 seconds behind Schooler. Dirk Davis placed third with a 15:31. The other region berth went to Dale Rand of Odessa Permian with a 15:40.

Southern Utah wins

SILVER CITY, N.M. (AP) - Dave Mollica completed 11 passes for 170 yards to lead Southern Utah to a 22-0 win over Western New Mexico in Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference football play Saturday.

Mollica, who attempted 20 passes, also threw one interception as he outpassed Western 170 yards to 74. Mustang quarterback Thom Simmons completed five of 17 attempts.

On the ground, Southern Utah was even more dominant, rushing 275 to Western's 15.

Bob Verberg of Southern Utah led rushers with 72 yards in eight carries. Western's Eugene Brown covered 50 yards in five carries.

Five University of New Mexico officials appeared before the National Collegiate Athletic Association Infractions Committee on Saturday as the committee heard charges against the school's basketball program.

"I felt like it went as well as it could go, considering the circumstances," said UNM Athletic Director John Bridgers after the 4½-hour hearing. "The charges are serious and you've got to weigh those against the actions we've taken."

Much of UNM's defense against the alleged infractions was based on improvements in the school's athletic programs since the problems surfaced.

Bridgers, who was hired as athletic director after the scandal broke, appeared before the committee along with UNM President William E. "Bud" Davis, attorney Pete Johnstone, faculty representative Swede Johnson, and Robert Weaver, dean of admissions and records.

The committee may take several weeks to decide how to discipline the university. Possibilities include probation and scholarship restrictions.

NCAA offic tials did not comment, in accordance with the association's confidentiali ty rule covering the hearing. UNM oficia is were limited in what they could say about the hearing, but indicated they were relieved that the hearing, which had been postponed three times, weis over.

"I think that the postponements, the extension o.f the uncertainty, was tougher to deal with than the reality of the findings," Davis said. "There's a feeling of reli ef, no question about that."

The charges augainst UNM include recruiting viol.ations, illegal payments to players: and falsification of grades.

One member of the five-member Infractions Commuttee did not attend the hearing because of health reasons.

The other four members are from the University of T'exas, the University of Kentucky, the University of Wisconsin and LeMoyine College in Syracuse, N.Y.

"It's obvious this is a serious case with a lot of ramifi cations," Bridgers said.

Ever heard a Southwest Airline's commercial on television? "We're Spreading Love All Over Texas." Very catchy and evidently it sells a lot of tickets for them.

Now there's another group, somewhat different, but their slogan is "We're Spreading Pheasants All Over the Panhandle of Texas." This slogan has been around only two years, now working on its third year, but this newly-formed organization is becoming as successful as Southwest Airlines.

NO, IT'S not Ducks Unlimited. It's Pheasants Unlimited, Inc. And what a job they are doing to promote the conservation and preservation of the Chinese Ringneck pheasant, which has taken up habitat, by the thousands, on the High Plains of Texas.

The idea for Pheasants Unlimited, Inc. was conceived in Plainview by interested individuals, who were looking into the future. Hunting in Kansas and

Sports Outdoors

Nebraska for many, many years, watching the pheasant population dwindle year by year, /the conservation of pheasants on the beginning High Plains population would need some help in order to maintain a healthy population.

Lack of adequate habitat was and still is the main problem for the struggling pheasant populations in the northern states. But PU has come to the rescue on the High Plains pheasants.

Pheasants Unlimited, Inc. has been noted by Texas Parks and Wildlife biologists as "The finest conservation program ever designed in the State of Texas by a private conservation group."

JOE DON Scott of Plainview, president of PU, along with several others came up with the idea by organizing DU banquets in Plainview. But the majority of the people who attended, felt they were spending their money on auction items for nothing. They wanted to put their money into something that would benefit the local sportsman. That's where PU came into being!

PU will be holding their Third Annual Dinner-Fund Raising Banquet on Tuesday, Nov. 25 at the Plainview Country Club. More than 100 acution items have been donated by local and area merchants. Including a bull and heifer, two giant grandfather clocks, more than 15 shotguns and an wide array of other Lubbock and Amarillo DU banquets look like a step-sister. Last year, the Plainview auction netted over $24,000. And that's remarkable for a town with a 23,000 population.

The money raised from the auctions goes towards the improving and creating of pheasant habitat. Landowners and famers are contacted by PU per-sonnel. Those who sign the PU contracts are provid-ed haygrazer and millet seed free of charge. And then they are paid $35 per acre, up to 10 acres, to raise the cover and food crop.

The only thing that PU requires to contract landowners/farmers is that they leave the crop standing through the winter and early spring months when pheasants are most vulnerable to predators and harsh winter conditions.

And with the clean farming methods practiced these days and times, without proper pheasant habitat, the Texas pheasaant will go the way of the northern states' pheasant population.

Last year was a record year for PU. They signed contract with 55 landowners and/or farmers with more than 400 acres set aside for the preservation of pheasants. In only two and one-half years of exsistence, the PU program has increased the High Plains pheasant population to the point other states are taking notice and wildlife biologists are praising their efforts. It's been a remarkable program, will continue to be, because of the interest and will help provide many more Texas pheasant hunters opportunities to hunt the wiley, but beautiful[®] Chinese Ringneck pheasant.

Main credit goes to Scott, who devoted much of his time to the program. He almost solely arranges the banquets, solicits the auction items and contacts landowers and farmers.

BY NO means is PU in competition with Ducks Unlimited. Nor does it intend to take away any credit from the highly successful DU program. But they do intend t make PU, one of the most talked about, successful wildlife programs ever conceived in the United States. And now it's working to a tee!

A $25 membership entitles members to attend the banquet, highlighted by roasted pheasant and calf fries, a chance to see an auction like no other and become a full-fledge member of PU for one year. No only does PU cater to the pheasant, but these plots of grain provide cover and food for a variety of wildlife. There's no wonder, PU has been dubbed as a highly successful conservation program.

For more informaation on Pheasants Unlimited, Inc. interested persons can contact: Joe Don Scott, valuable acution items. The PU banquet makes P.O.Box 1180, Plainview, Texas 79072 or call 806-293-1311.

Sandia Peak installs second double-chair lift

Last week the Southern New Mexico ski areas were discussed, but good skiing is offered in central New Mexico as well.

Sandia Peak Ski Area has installed its long awaited second double chairlift. The base-to-summit lift should readicate any lift lines for a while, even on weekends.

The ski area can be reached by the longest tram on the continent or by automobile through Tijeras Canyon. Sandia is comparable in size as Sierra Blanca near Ruidoso. However, Sierra Blanca attracts more skiers, although Sandia is located an eagle hop. from Albuquerque.

With 25 runs, 80 per cent of which are intermediate in skill requirement, that plunge 1,900 feet through ponderosa pines and pockets of aspens in Cibola National Forest, it is a picturesque area. The long, sustained gradi-ents are ideal for those interested in perfecting their techniques.

Adult/child lift tickets will be $13/$13.

One thing Sandia does offer as a result of its proximity to Albuquerque is the largest assembly of lodging in the state. More than 90 hotels, inns, lodges and motels for nearly 10,000. Among those with toll-free room-reservations telephone numbers in every phone book are Best Westerns, Friendship Inns, Hilton Inn, Holiday Inn, Howard Johnson, Ramada Inns, Rodeway Inns, Sheraton and Travelodge.

Contact the Greater Albquerque Convention and Visitors Bureau during business hours (505 842 0220) for phone numbers and room rates.

buck to tumble. But it only flinched then moved off at a hard run Later, after the hunter headed back up the trail, away from the path the buck took, I backtracked the buck to see if I could find any blood spots or hair. After the young hunter had fired his shots he'd looked about for sign but quickly gave up. He had just shaken his head in disgust, reloaded his rifle and walked away.

About 150 yards from the tree used by the hunter as a backrest I found a three-point buck with a hole in its ribs. It had traveled that far shot through the heart

LOCATING a hunter in that country on opening day of deer season was beyond reason so a member of our group tagged the buck and took him home. If the young man who shot that buck is still hunting I hope he's learned by now that it pays to investigate.

Most often hunters lose deer because they believe the wound is superficial and they don't try and trail. the deer. Most common, though, is the hunter who defeates himself by driving the wounded animal too hard.

If the deer you shot at keeps going, the first thing you want to know is whether or not you hit it. And that's easy. Deer hair is brittle and a bullet hitting the body anywhere will knock off hair. Don't let the absence of blood deceive you. The wounded animal may bleed internally and not externally for five to 10 seconds

The deer's reaction to your shot is a fairly good indicator of where the bullet went. If it jumps straight into the air, you probably shot to low. A few hairs suggest that you just creased its belly. No hair means you missed completely but came closeor else you shot so low the bullet threw dirt up which stung the deer. If there is considerable hair and some blood along the trail you've probably gut-shot the animal

I'VE HAD heart-shot deer and elk run as though unscathed for 50 to 100 yards before piling up

A deer that drops at the crack of the rifle then regains its feet and bounds away apparently unhurt was probably creased across the back. There will be plenty of hair but little or no blood, and the take a 31-10 halftime advantage. Joe Stellern tied the deer is practically uninjuried. A deer which goes game with a 29-yard field goal and an Allen to Ruffin down and then regains its feet was probably pass that gained 41 yards put the Sycamores ahead gut shot.

If a deer drops as though struck by lightning you probably made a perfect shot. But don't waste time getting to it. Every season, "dead" deer come to life and get away. A bullet striking an antler, creasing the skull, or nicking a vertebra will knock a deer cold, but when it awakens it seems not to be bothered by its wound.

A deer hit in the liver or kidneys by anything with as much or more sock to it than a .30-30 will be dead or unable to regain its feet within an hour. Shot through the stomach it will take three times as long to stiffen up.

the deer moving. A gut-shot deer will often travel miles before dying or laying up. THE DEER will be watching its back trail and won't be as alert as an uninjuried one, so you have a fair chance of seeing it first. If another hunter follows the tracks into the brush he most likely will drive the deer to you. If you are tracking the deer and are accompanied by other hunters, one should stay on the blood trail while the others spread out on each side, staying just close enough to keep track of the person doing the trailing. Since the deer will often double back to where it can watch its trail, the flankers have a better chance than the man on the trail

Deer with broken legs aren't common but you actually see more of them than paunch-shot deer. The reason is that a deer with a broken leg continues to travel while a deer wounded in the paunch will crawl into a secluded brush thicket and Tracks will indicate if a leg is broken and which one. A deer with a broken hind leg has lost a lot of his driving power, and while you can't run it down, it tires fapidly. Before long it will turn downhill. It gets along pretty well going down, but it can't climb very well and won't try.

A broken front leg isn't so serious. The first buck I shot in Utah had a completelly healed severed front leg. The leg had been shot off at the knee.

Every wounded animal can't be recovered, but by spending a little time and effort losses could be cut considerably. There is no excuse for the many animals which are lost because of hunter negli

Temple keeps rolling along

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Defending state champion Temple dashed the upset hopes of an archrival to post its 48th straight regular-season victory while Corsicand shocked Ennis in a battle of top-ranked Class AAAA schoolboy football teams Friday night.

Quarterback Brett Stafford ran for two touchdowns and threw for another as Temple – rated first among AAAAA teams in The AssociatedPress schoolboy football poll – blasted Killeen, 31-9.

THE WILDCATS HAVE not lost a non-playoff contest since Killeen beat them on the final night of the 1975 season. James Richardson returned the second-half kickoff for a score as Corsicana scored two touchdowns in three minutes to stun previously unbeaten Ennis, 21-6.

Corsicana entered the clash as the seventh-ranked squad in Class 4A, while Ennis held down the No. 9 spot.

Besides Ennis, two other top-ranked teams took it on the chin during the ninth weekend of the Texas schoolboy season.

Lubbock Coronado, ranked No. 7 in 5A, was upset by Hereford, 24-11, while Baird, the ninth-rated team in 2A, suffered a shocking 40-13 loss to Hamlin Fourth-ranked Beaumont Hebert in 4A had to settle for a 10-10 tie with Jasper, but took the advantage in district play with a 12-11 edge in first downs.

Should the two teams tie for the district lead, Hebert would advance to the playoffs.

ANTHONY THOMAS SCORED the tying touchdown in the fourth quarter for Jasper, while Hebert's 10 points came in the second quarter on an 8-yard scoring pass from Wilbert Brown to Tommy Granger and Gerald Broussard's 35-yard field goal.

Jasper drew first blood with a 26-yard field goal by Raymond Cowart in J

UT officials have

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - The University of Texas had nothing to do with the sale of football tickets from a former Texas player to a banker in his hometown but reported the apparent violation voluntarily, anyway, Athletic Director Bill Ellington said Saturday.

Lloyd Davis, former president of the Peoples National Bank of Lampasas, Texas, was indicted Thursday on charges he misapplied more than $16,-000 in bank funds to support the Texas athletic program.

In that total, the indictment says, was $700 Davis paid to former Lampasas high school star and Texas football player Johnny "Lam" Jones, now a rookie with the New York Jets of the National Football League, for 14 Texas football game tickets.

"That was a one-on-one arrange-ment between Mr. Jones and Mr. Davis," said Ellington, in Lubbock to attend Saturday's Southwest Conference football game between Texas and Texas Tech.

Ellington told The Associated Press that he notified the National Collegiate Athletic Association as soon as

With scouts from four bowl games watching, Penn State extended its winning streak to five games and boosted its season record to 7-1.

The loss was the third straight for Mami after the Hufriganes won their first four.

Austin College wins

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) -SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Larry Schilings passed for 201 yards, including a 79-yard touchdwon to Rory Dukes, to lead 7th-ranked Aus-tin College to a 14-7 victory over Trinity Saturday night. Schillings directed the Kangaroos on two fourth quarter scoring drives as he connected on 14 of 26 passes. Kelly Hyde dove in from 2 yards out with 1:42 left in the game to raise Austin College's record to 8-1 in Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association play.

Hyde's touchdown run was set up when Trinity running back Kenny Sykes, who gained 142 yards, fumbled at the Tiger 14 and Mark Sartin reco-tored for the Kangaroos.

he learned of the transaction from FBI agents investigating the case.

"We are held responsible for our students to accertain degree and that's why we wanted to make sure that there is a full investigation of the matter," he said.

Ellington said he first became aware of the potential problem when FBI agents visited him Aug. 26 and asked him to look at some checks from Davis' bank. The athletic director said he saw one written in August. 1978 and made out to Jones.

"I saw the one made out to 'Lam' and said, 'That one's on us,"' he said.

However, Ellington said the agents asked to remain silent about the matter to protect their investigative efforts and that is why has said nothing in public until the indictments were returned.

He said he assumes the NCAA will investigate the reports and Steve Morgan, with the NCAA's enforcement board at Shawnee Mission, Kan., confirmed the speculation.

"Anytime there may have been an NCAA rule broken, an inquiry will be made," Morgan told the Dallas Morn-At the time the tickets changed hands, Morgan said, it was an NCAA violation for an athlete to sell his complimentary football tickets for more than their face value.

The tickets had a face value of $8.50 each, and Jones sold Davis 14 tickets for $700, according to the indictment, which would be $50 each.

Funds approved for Venus probe

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter has promised to approve start-up funds for a 1986 mission to Venus aimed at the most detailed scientific examination of the planet so far, a space agency spokesman aid Saturday.

Launched from the space shuttle, the spacecraft known as Venus Orbiting Imaging Radar, or VOIRis to circle Venus for at least seven months, taking ments, said spokesman Miles Waggoner of the Na-tional Aeronautics and Space Administration. Waggoner did not know the amount of money requested by NASA to begin the project. He said, however, that NASA Administrator Robert A. Frosch has been assured by the Office of Management and Budget that Carter will request the necessary funds in his fiscal 1982 budget - if he is re-elected Tuesday.

Saltik responded to Spellman unconscious

LAUREL, Md. (AP) - Rep. Gladys ment N. Spellman remained unconscious Margaret Beazley, office manager at the Igoe for Congress headquarters and in critical condition Saturday in College Park said in a prepared after suffering a heart-attack while statement: "Our prayers are with her campaigning for re-election. Her opand her family. We have ceased all ponent ceased campaign activity and campaign activities. said "our prayers are with her." Mrs. Spellman was stricken at

A spokeswoman at the Greater Laurel-Beltsville Hospited said Mrs. Spellman's heart thythm stabilized Saturday morning, more than 12 hours after she had been brought to the hospital from a nearby shopping mall where she was judging a Halloween costume contest.

Lissa Vogt, the spokeswoman, said the next few days would be crucial in determining the 65-year-old thirdterm Democrat's recovery. Mrs. Spellman represents Maryland's 5th District.

"In any heart attack, the first 48 hours are crucial for the patient," said Ms. Vogt. "It can go either way." Mrs. Spellman "is just holding her own," she added.

An updated report on Mrs. Spellman's condition was scheduled late in the day

Mrs. Spellman, who had suffered a heart attack once before, had been on the campaign trail since the May primary when she defeated her only Democratic opponent by a nearly 8to-1 margin.

She has been considered the overwhelming favorite to beat Republican challenger Kevin R. Igoe, a former budget analyst in the Treasury Department.

Igoe, who has never held elective office, could not be reached for comreform candidate, she was elected to the old Board of County Commissioners and won re-election four years later.

She was elected in 1971 to the first ernment politics through school Parent-Teacher Association activities. In 1962, as a

The estimated cost for the entire undertaking, to be managed by the jet propulsion laboratory man-aged for NASA by the California Institute of Technology, is $500 million to $600 million, Waggoner said. The project is intended to "reveal the true nature and geological history of our sister planet in the same way that Mariner 9 enabled us to see Mars," Frosch said in a prepared statement.

"Venus is completely veiled in clouds. No perma-nent feature has ever been identified by telecsope," he said. "With VOIR, we will be able to see the surface of Venus for the first time almost in its entirety.

"Detailed knowledge of Venus' surface will allow us to take a large step in understanding the evolution of our own plant as well, "Frosch said.

According to plans, NASA would launch one VOIR spacecraft from the shuttle in 1986. A typical trajectory would begin in December 1986 and provide for arrival at Venus in May 1987, when the spacecraft would be inserted into a near-polar orbit at an altitude of 180 miles. Radar-mapping and other information-gathering would continue for five nonths or more Waggoner said Venus has yielded her secrets with great reluctance, principally because of obscuring clouds, crushing atmospheric pressure (100 times that of Earth) and searing temperatures (900 degrees fahrenheit).

Several probes, both American and Soviet, have penetrated the planet's atmosphere and transmitted important data for periods ranging from minutes to hours — but none has provided a satisfactory picture of the Venusian surface, he said.

The VOIR imagery is expected to disclose the presence of continents, ocean basins, mountain belts, rift valleys, fault belts or volcanoes, Waggoner

The nature and time sequence of plate tectonic activity, or continental drift, may also be revealed, as well as any relationship between this activity and volcanic episodes on the planet, he said.

The VOIR orbiter will weigh about 11,000 pounds at launch, Waggoner said.

Stennis improving

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) - Sen. John C. Stennis, dmitted to Keesler Air Force Base hospital for observation after complaining of abdominal pain, will remain hospitalized for "another day or two," a base spokesman said Saturday.

Stennis, 79, spent a good night Friday night and his bdominal condition continued to improve, the base okesman said.

Rex Buffington, a spokesman in the senator's Washington office, said Stennis took part in a series of recent Democratic Party gatherings to promote the re-election of President Carter and complained of stomach problems Thursday night after an ad-dress in McComb.

Stenhis checked into the hospital about 3 a.m. Friday.

Eph Cresswell, a Stennis afde, said the senator was n good health and had few problems since a gall-bladder operation several years ago. Stennis was shot in the stomach and left leg when ttacked outside his Washington home on Jan. 30, 1973, but had fully recovered from those injuries.

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) - Late vote counts Saturday showed Edward Seaga's Labor Party gaining the biggest election victory in Jamaican his-

Meanwhile, violence that has wracked this Caribbean nation for months appeared to drop markedly. A spokesman at the Police Control Center said there had been only sporadic gunfire in the poor areas of Kingston where, on election day Friday and night, police stations were shot up and heavy gunfire was reported.

Seaga was to be sworp in as Prime Minister later the c

First National introduces the Checking Plus-Interest account.

Electoral Commission workers resumed the vote count Saturday morning and hoped to have final results by Monday. Partial figures showed the Labor Party had won 43 seats and was leading for eight others in areas where the count was not complete.

Former Prime Minister Michael Manley's People's National Party, which entered the voting with 47 of the 60 seats in the elected lower House of Parliament, had won nine.

The 51-to-9 seat margin would be the most lopsided in the Caribbean island's history. The incomplete returns indicated Labor was winning more than 53.5 percent of the popular vote, which would be the highest percentage ever won by the party. The PNP had 46.4 percent, compared with 56.8 percent in the 1976 elections.

Police say nearly 600 people were shot to death this year, many of them in politically motivated violence.

Jamaican authorities do not keep separate records of political and non-political killings. However, the death toll escalated sharply after Manley announced the elections April 3.

No fatalities and a small number of injuries were reported from Friday morning to Saturday morning

Many ghetto streets and some large thoroughfares were quiet, still blocked by barricades of rusting car hulks, rocks and piles of debris.

"Police and the military have everything under control," the spokesman said.

Police reports from around the country indicated 10 people, including one policeman, had been killed on election day

Officials of the Private Sector Of Jamaica business organization said Friday the election results were what the nation needed to provide the confidence necessary to revitalize the economy.

PSOJ President Carlton Alexander said calls had already begun coming in from friends he declined to name asking what they could do to get the economy going again.

Seaga had focused his campaign on Manley's handling of the economy. About one-third of the work force is unemployed. Inflation is at 33 percent. Foreign exchange is so scarce that only necessities can be imported. *

Ronald Sasso, president of the Jamaica Bankers Association, predicted that Seaga's new government would return to the International Monetary Fund for financing and a restoration of world confidence that would result from an IMF agreement.

Manley broke off talks with the IMF early this year on extended debt services on grounds the agency was trying to impose extremely severe measures on Jamaica's poor.

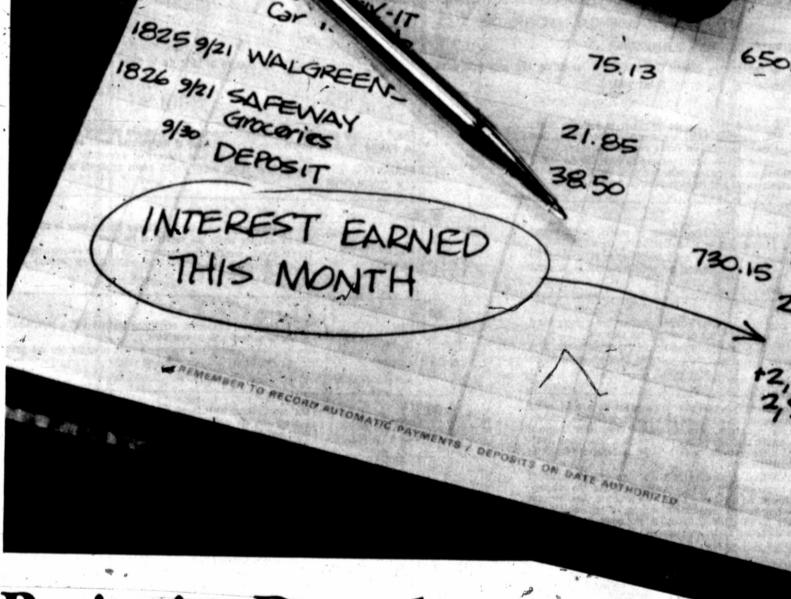

He called elections more than a year early so the people could renew their mandate for his democratic socialist policies and his role as a prominent spokesman on behalf of developing nations.

John Issa, head of the Jamaica Hotel and Tourist Association's Kingston district, said foreign exchange earnings from tourism — already second only to those for bauxite — could reach $500 million intwo years if the nation can shed its image of violence and anti-U.S. foreign policy. The fact that Jamaica has had a largely peaceful and democratic change of government should have a positive effect, Issa said.

Seaga has based his plans for economic recovery on a resurgence of confidence from the international business community, which he predicted would follow a Labor victory.

During his months in a log and mud hut in the Stanislaus National Forest, he said, he hunted, fished, walked the trails, befriended rangers and sportsmen and huddled near his garbage-can stove when storms dumped 6 feet of snow in the mountains near Yosemite National Park, 110 miles east of San Francisco. 1 . 1

But on Wednesday, Tuolumne County sheriff's deputies took him down to the county jail for questioning.

Beloved dingbat, Edith Bunker dies, not in new series

LOS ANGELES (AP) - I've had this nagging sense of remorse about the new season, a feeling born months ago that has remained at large in my head. I've isolated it now. It is a dread of "Archie Bunker's Place," production No. 0201 (second season, first episode of the renamed "All in the Family")

With the broadcast of this episode, Edith Bunker is dead.

The long-suffering first lady of Queens, America's beloved dingbat, died during the off-season, victim of reality's rude intrusion into a lovely fantasy.

Jean Stapleton, who played Edith on "All in the Family" for 10 years, wanted to appear less often on the show so she could pursue other opportunities. Last year, Carroll O'Connor decided that occasional Edith wasn't enough. It limited Archie.

The death sentence was pronounced.

The death of Edith Bunker passes by with only a tiny fraction of the noise attending the revelation of who shot J.R. Ewing, but it is a special moment in television's powerful relationship with our culture. Edith Bunker, for better or worse, was the personification of TV's pervasive reach. She was real, so rendered by creative minds and a thousand living room visits.

The 10-year metamorphasis of Edith Bunker saw her progress from a crude, Archie-like suburban wretch (the earliest episodes) to easy-natured dingbat (the middle years) to mature, slightly liberated grandmother who had last learned to stand her ground (at selected moments).

Through it all, she was America's Ma, much less the shallow caricature the occasional viewer might have supposed. In the course of her residence on Queens' Hauser Street, Edith Bunker was assaulted by a rapist, confronted with menapause, tempted by the "Total Woman" fad, tempered by feminism and made a grandparent.

Through most of it, her basic character — warm, outwardly involved, happy — prevailed. She was carefully sewn into the American fabric and isn't easily ripped out.

Tonight's ripping out of Edith is gently done, focusing on Archie's typically retentive response to Edith's death. It's less a requiem for a dingbat than a device meant to move the series along. Archie refuses to sleep in their bed or move Edith's things, refuses even to sign her death certifi-cate for insurance before finally letting the grief through.

It's a heartfelt moment, guaranteed to loosen a million prime time tears. So long, Edith. See you in the reruns.

Tryouts for Theatre Midland's production of "A Christmas Carol" will be held Nov. 9 at 3 p.m. and Nov. 10 at 7:30 p.m. at the theater, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. The play will be presented Dec. 18-21. Parts for men, women and children are available. Scripts may obtained in the theater's business office.

ROME (AP) - Afghanistan's deposed king quietly tends his garden near here, separated from the war in his native land. But some exiled Afghan leaders say they believe he would answer a call to help unite resistance forces fighting to drive Soviet troops from their homeland.

King Mohammad Zaher Shah, toppled in 1973 after a 40-year reign; has called for Afghan "patriots" to expel Moscow's forces and urged the squabbling opposition groups to cooperate with each other.

He has said repeatedly that he does not want his throne back and would support a restoration of the monarchy only if Afghans rejected a republic in a nationwide referendum

Recently a wave of nostalgia for Zaher has swept the refugees' tents and tea stalls in northwest Pakistan, Afghan sources say. They openly the leaderless Mujahidchia In exile, Zaher keeps a low profile. He won't talk to reporters and spends most of his time cultivating flowers and reading history books at his fourbedroom villa north of Rome, according to close tan, a Europe-based friends.

The king's son-in-law, first cousin and spokesman, Gen, Abdul Wali: does not encourage speculation that the monarch is willing to take a new role, but he doesn't rule it out either.

"The king is a patriot at the service of his people and his nation," Wali said in a recent interview. "Like anybody else, he should serve according to his ability." Wali claimed that the express hope that he king entrys prestige could forge unity among among many Afghans. "Some view him as a

What has happened to America's economy?

Jimmy Carter came to office with a string of came paign promises, but with no economic plan that would let him live up to his promises in the first place. The result is,that after 5 ill-conceived economic plans, we're worse off on almost every economic front than at any time in recent history.

Inflation has hit record highs of over 18%. Nearly 8 million Americans are out of work. Skyrocketing interest and mortgage rates have turned the dreams of millions of Americans who'd like to buy a home into a nightmare.

Almost everything is up under the Carter economics. Federal spending is up. Federal bureaucracy has grown. Thanks to Jimmy Carter, two massive new multi-billion dollar agencies have been created.

What does all this add up to? The biggest combined budget in U.S. history, the greatest single tax increase in our nation's history and a 28% cut in the purchasing power of the American dollar since Carter took office.

In plain and simple terms, our economy is in great difficulty with all the wrong things going up.

Thanks to the Carter Administration, the only thing that's down is the purchasing power of your hard-earned dollars.

Can any President turn things around?

Yes. It's not too late. But there's no time to spare. What is needed is a carefully worked out plan. And that's what a Reagan Administration will put into effect on January 20.

1. As President, his first act will be to place an immediate freeze on all federal hiring. The federal government is the single greatest cause of inflation. By starting at the source of the problem ... by cutting the growth of the bureaucracy ... billions of dollars can be saved in the first year alone.

2. Waste and fraud in Washington will be rooted out and eliminated, resulting in the saving of many more billions of dollars of the taxpayers' hard-earned money.

3. Volunteers from business and labor-America's finest minds and the most dedicated of our citizens-will be invited to join in a citizens crusade to go over the federal bureaucracy with a fine tooth comb, make recommendations on other ways to make government more efficient, more responsive and more responsible in the spending of every tax dollar.

4. An across the board cut in tax rates, along with an acceleration of depreciation, will give incentives to business and workers to invest, to increase productivity, to create new markets in America and around the world. This will create millions of new jobs, jobs that are so desperately needed by America's working men and women.

5. Costly and unnecessary rules and regulations that frustrate and slow down the expansion of our economy will be removed. This will unleash the great incentive, the ingenuity and the driving force of our free enterprise system.

6. Turning over programs to State and Local government along with the tax revenues to support them, will be a top priority. For too long, the federal government has wasted tax dollars to administer programs that can be handled more efficiently and with the kind of personal, local touch that's so necessary, especially to the elderly, the handicapped and those who are truly in need of a helping hand.

7. Programs and progress in the battle on inflation will be monitored on a day-to-day basis. Things don't get out of control unless you let them get out of control. Control, refinement and adjustment will be at the heart of the monitoring system.

8. Goals will be set and goals will be met. The top economic priority of the Reagan Administration will be to get inflation under control starting on January 20. This will not happen overnight. But no excuses will be accepted in this effort and no time will be lost in implementing anti-inflationary policies. Once this has been accomplished, the long term goal will be to see to it that America never again gets itself in the kind of difficult economic situation its in now.

9. In his Acceptance Speech to the nation, Governor Reagan spoke of his dream for peace. Peace for all Americans and for the world. He said, "Of all the objectives we seek, first and foremost will be the establishment of lasting world peace." This is a man whose cafeer in public life has been characterized by an uncanny ability to relate to many diverse groups, to smooth over differences that polarize men and women with differing opinions, and to bring them together for the good of all parties and for the good of the people. He is a man of peace who understands how to attain peace and how to maintain peace.

The time is now for a strong leader with a proven record.

When Ronald Reagan became Governor of California, the State was in financial crisis, spending more than it took in, and the outlook was bleak. Governor Reagan went to work.

He turned a deficit of $194 million into a $554 million surplus. He cut in half the growth rate of the California bureaucracy. He reformed the welfare program and increased benefits to the truly needy by more than 40%. He returned $5.7 billion to the people. His careful management of government enabled him to do much to improve the quality of life in California. He strengthened the State's Medicaid System. He increased unemployment insurance benefits, as well as benefits to injured workers. He increased scholarships to needy students by 500%, aid to the State University by 105%, State Colleges by 164%, Community Colleges by 323%, and the Primary and Secondary Education Systems by 105%.

As Governor of California, Ronald Reagan demonstrated great abilities in compiling a great record. Those same abilities—especially the ability to get things done—will enable him to be a great President.

The time is now for strong leadership.

Spending like a Rockefeller

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Gov. Jay Rockefeller has spent $9.5 million, nearly all of it his own money, in his effort to win re-election, according to a preliminary campaign spending statement.

Rockefeller, a one-term Democrat, has outspent his Republican opponent, former Gov. Arch Moore, by more than 10-to-1, a comparison of their statements indicates.

The statements covered only expenditures through Thursday. Final spending statements are due 30 days after Tuesday's election.

Moore, who beat Rockefeller in a 1972 gubernatorial race, has been making Rockefeller's spending a campaign issue.

"Never in the history of a political campaign has such a fortune been spent on a state election," Moore's campaign treasurer, Thomas E. Potter, said today.

Rockefeller has said he would "spend what it takes" to beat. Moore. Polls by Charleston newspapers have said Rockefeller is substantially ahead. There are about 1 million registered voters in the state.

Rockefeller's statement, filed late Thursday, indicated he has spent $9,-526,584, with his own contributions totaling $9,375,500. Moore's statement listed $795,117 in total spending, with most of it coming from contributions of less than $1,000.

Rockefeller's biggest single expense was an advertising blitz that has crowded West Virginia'billboards and airwaves with a steady stream of commercials since early summer.

Rockefeller, whose formal name is John D. Rockefeller IV, has refused during the campaign to reveal his personal wealth. In 1977, before the death of his father, he said his fortune amounted to $19.7 million.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Extensive blueprints for a Ronald Reagan presidency have been quietly drawn and computerized for immediate use in a transition, should Reagan be elected to the White House next week.

"The governor wants to hit the ground running, so we've been working quietly, behind the scenes," says Pen James, president of a California executive search firm who heads the transition task force for Reagan.

Other campaign sources, who asked not to be identified, said James' transition blue-print concentrates on three areas:

-Appointments that the new president must make immediately upon assuming office Jan. 20.

-Legislative and policy initiatives that Reagan would make within the first 90 days. —Organization of the White House staff and relationships with the Cabinet and Congress. Top Reagan officials say that an 18-person 'kitchen cabinet.'' led by William French Smith, Reagan's personal lawyer, is prepared to advise Reagan on his choice for Cabinet, sub-cabinet and regulatory poisitions.

"We've identified the top 600, top 300 and top 100 jobs," said one source.

Working out of a small Alexandria, Va., office with Helene von Damm, Reagan's longtime personal secretary, James has put together a talent bank of several hundred names of leaders in business, law, medicine and academic circles.

James, who restructured White House personnel during Richard Nixon's first administration, said he has done an extensive analysis of the White House and executive appointments and paid particulary close attention to the top 100 jobs to be filled. If Reagan is elected president next Tuesday, James plans to hand over his computerized information to the task force on Wednesday.

"We have studied the situation for some time so that the morning Ronald Reagan wakes up as president-elect, we can give him a plan that will have eliminated the rush and frenzy of putting together an administration," James said.

"We've identified the basic structural questions on the best ways to organize the White House and Cabinet," said one source, who has sat in on some of the meetings. "Our basic thrust is to give the new president a plan that will enable him to put together the best team possible."

Two independent organizations are also working on transition blueprints. They are the Heritage Foundation, a conservative Washington-based think-tank, and the Institute of Politics at Harvard's John F. Kennedy School of Government.

But one Reagan campaign source said that the Reagan group will draw most heavily from research done by its own task force.

Sources said that members of the 18-member team include, in addition to Smith, as Edwin Meese, Reagan's campaign chief of staff; George Schultz, former labor and treasury secretary under Richard Nixon, William J. Casey, campaign manager; Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada, campaign chairman; William Simon, secretary of the treasury under Gerald Ford; Casper Weinberger, HEW secretary under Nixon; and Holmes Tuttle, a California businessman.

If Reagan wins, he will be given $2 million in federal money and federal office space to plan his transition between the election and his inauguration.

The rest is history.

The United States celebrated 204 years of independence this past July 4. The preamble of the constitution that bound the new government to certain laws said the document was written to "form a more perfect Union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide to the common defense, promote the general welfare and secure the blessings of liberty..."

July 28, 1868, Amendment 14 was proclaimed, giving full civil rights to all U.S. citizens.

Women got the right to vote 54 years later on Aug. 26, 1920, after fighting for that right, among others, since 1848. It has only been since 1954 that the Texas constitution was amended so women could serve on grand juries and trial juries.

Representing 2.2 percent of the 30 million veterans alive today, the Veterans of Foreign Wars fended off female membership for almost 80 years and only opened the membership to woman in August, 1978.

Today only 35 states have ratified the Equal Rights Amendment, which "insures equality of rights under the law will not be denies or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex." March 22, 1979, was the original deadline established by Congress to have the needed 38 states ratify the amendment in order for it to be added to the constitution. Before that date, Congress extended the deadline to June 22, 1982. Women's rights have been an ongoing battle. Session after session, since 1923, there has been a bill before Congress calling for an Equal Rights Amendment. ERA "resolutions" were reported favorably by the Committee on the Judiciary in the 80-84 and 86-88 Congresses.

AFTER EXTENSIVE HEAR-

INGS and debate, the house on Oct. 12, 1971, approved the ERA resolution in its original form, and after rejecting several amendments to the original language, the Senate approved the amendment as it reads today. Those same 25 words of the basic amendment are an issue in the presidential election, with President Jimmy Carter supporting the passage and candidate Ronald Reagan not supporting it.

Although the amendment has not become part of the constitution, the fight to get it in print has caused other acts to be passed to help dissolve discrimination against women.

If you are a woman today that has bought a car, house or other major purchase on credit, just 10 years ago you would have had a difficult time doing so without the signature of a man. The Equal Credit Opportunity Act passed October, 1975, requires that "financial institutions and other firms engaged in the extension of credit make credit equally available to all creditworthy customers without regard to sex or marital status." As a result of this act, a creditor may not request information about a woman's birth control practices, her intentions concerning the bearing or rearing of children or her capability to bear children. A creditor also cannot require a woman who has a credit account and who has had a change of marital status or name to reapply, terminate the account or change the terms of the account, among other regulations listed in the act.

Many women today attend college on athletic scholarships and many females are able to participate in sports that they could not 10 years ago.

TITLE IX, OF the Education Amendments of 1972, has helped women athletics. Effective July 12, 1975, all public school systems, and education systems supported by the federal government have to offer coed gym classes; sex discrimination in any official club or intramural athletics is forbidden and for non-contact sports where only one team exists, both sexes must be allowed to try out. Sororities, fraternaties and groups such as the Boy Scouts are exempt.

However, regulations do allow separate teams for contact sports or games where competitive skills are required and schools are also not required to make equal expenditures in the athletic programs. Title IX also prohibits sex discrimination against students and employees by educational institutions that get federal aid. It forbids discrimination in financial aid, counseling, courses, extra-curricular activities, health care, admissions, housing and employment. Under this same act, pregnancy, childbirth and termination of pregnancy must be treated the same as any other temporary disability. On October 31, 1978, the Pregnancy Discrimination Act was passed as an amendment to Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. The pregnancy discrimination act became effective April 20, 1979, and forbids discrimination on the basis of pregnancy, childbirth and related medical conditions. Because of this act, a company that offers a sick leave plan and/or insurance must include pregnancy in those policies. Basically what the act does is treat pregnancy as a regular illness.

ABORTION IS ALSO covered under the pregnancy act. The act states that all fringe benefits other than health insurance which are provided for other medical conditions must be provided for abortions. Health insurance, however, need be provided for abortions only where the life of the woman would be endangered if the fetus were carried to term or where medical complications arise from an abortion.

Employers must permit a pregnant woman to work at all times during the pregnancy when she is able to perform her job and must hold her job open for her return on the same basis as jobs are held open for employees on sick or disability leave unless the woman has said she does not intend to return to work.

Today, many women are working in roles traditionally held by men. There are more women geologist, landmen, bankers, lawyers, doctors and more women working in blue collar jobs, such as factory work, working as roustabouts or in refineries. This is the result of an act passed in the early '60s. Another act passed during

& Bush

Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 "prohibits discrimination based on sex as well as race, color, religion and national origin in all terms, conditions, or privileges of employment."

DESPITE THESE ACTS, however, women are still segregated into low-paying occupations, with 80 percent of the women's work force clustered at the bottom of the pay scale, according to national statistics. When men and women are employed in the same occupational grouping, men consistently earn more.

According to the same statistics, women now earn 60 percent of what men earn. In 1955, employed women earned 64 percent of what men earned.

More than 50 percent of all adult women in the U.S. work fulltime. Besides the increasing numbers of married women who are sole wage earners or work to supplement their husbands' incomes, more women are now heads of families.

In 1976, approximately 14 percent of female family heads were employed. The number of single women, most of whom work to support themselves, is steadily increasing.' Between 1950 and 1976, the proportion of single women in the female population went up from 35 percent to 41 percent, according to the Department of Labor.

Women also represent a large number of people who work but receive no pay. In 1975, according to the League of Women Voters Education Fund, 57 percent of married women were full-time homemakers, performing manual tasks such as cleaning, as well as the highly professional and responsible jobs of child rearing and family counseling.

MANY WOMEN ALSO devote much time and energy to volunteer work, performing important work that would go undone without their efforts. Skills and training acquired through volunteer work can often be transferred to paid employment.

Depending on what foot you stand on, the picture for women is either bright or bleak. Women are still fighting battles for equality in all aspects of their lives.

Women and men are encouraged to discover what equal rights and the Equal Rights Amendment really mean. There is a lot of fiction floating around on both sides of the argument on the amendment.

Texas has already ratified the amendment, but unless three other states ratify it by the deadline, the resolution making complete equality a law will die.

And if you think women don't really need ERA, that the U.S. Constitution already protects women's equal rights, remember this: an amendment had to be passed for women to have the right to vote and that right has only been viable for 60 years.

Court allows school to have basketball tryouts

CHICAGO (AP) - MacArthur Ju-nior High School was-holding tryouts for its boys' basketball team today after a federal appeals court allowed school officials to proceed without an 11-year-old girl who wants to be on the eam.

The 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Ap-peals on Monday stayed a ruling by U.S. District Judge Prentice Marshall, who had required the school to allow Karen O'Connor to try out for the boys' team.

Marshall ruled last week that the girl, who lives in suburban Arlington Heights, had a fundamental constitutional right to develop her athletic skills. He enjoined school officials from blocking her tryout.

The appeals court ruling came in response to a motion by school officials asking that the injunction be stayed pending appeal. Miss O'Con-nor's attorneys filed a countermo-

Melinda Leaseburg's son, Jason, has leukemia. Her mother once had cancer, but is cured now. Her best friend died of the disease. Her father's mother was also a cancer victim.

"I always knew that my family has a history of cancer and I assumed that I would have it, but I never thought about my children," said Melinda.

'Coping with cancer is a problem?" she said, "The first thing a cancer patient's friends all think is that if you've got cancer, then there's no hope. "In Midland, there are over 200 people receiving chemother-apy creatment," she said. "That's lot of people—they all say the disease and the treatment is hell."

When Melinda first learned her son had cancer, she felt the need to talk with others going through the same problems.

"I needed help and wanted to help others in the same situation, so I called the Cancer Society. They referred me to other persons. Three of us met for awhile and we all agreed it really helped, but I got frustrated because we weren't reaching enough people.

The Cancer Society found the answer for Melinda through a seminar which they had been wanting to promote here, but had not yet found someone who was willing to lead the ses-sions. Melinda volunteered to be that leader.

'The result of my contact is the 'I Can Cope' cancer seminar, a patient education course for persons with cancer," she said. The seminar is a communications idea, a learning stimulant and tool for person change which focuses on involvement opportunities for patients to use in their own treatment.

"We hope the course will meet participants where they are and helps many of them become personally resourceful," said

A large bouquet of deep red roses on the coffee table in the Parmas' living room caught Mrs. Ford's eye as she arrived for the interview.

"Oh, it is?" Betty Ford said, and then confirmed that with a closer look. Another memento of the friendship of the two families is a black enamel box the Fords sent from China, as well as the eard which Parma had mounted in Plexiglas.

When asked her feelings about the Equal Rights Amendment - a cause she has strongly supported in the past - in light of the Republican Party's removal of the issue from its platform, Ford replied:

"In Detroit (at the GOP convention), my husband and I said we would continue to push for ERA. I don't think you have to agree with a platform in every detail to support a candidate." She did not mention a name in her reference to "candidate.

For the afternoon, Ford wore a long-sleeved dress in brown and white tweedy-pattern, sling-back leather pumps and gold jewelry. The dress was a Capraro, who remains - along with Estevez - favorite designers of size-8 Ford, as they were during the White House years.

The hostages: A year that may seem an eternity

By CHARLES J. HANLEY Associated Press Writer

The Moslem holy book says a day can be "as fifty thousand years." What then of a year?

For 52 men and women held hostage in ignorance and fear, a year may have seemed an eternity.

For two nations locked in a grim struggle of wills, this year of the Iran hostage crisis has been one heavy with frustration and vivid with chilling scenes:. of mobs screaking "Death to America!" outside the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, of melancholy yellow ribbons rustling in a Midwest breeze, of the bodies of Americans stretched charred in a desert sun. It has been a year of delay and disappointment, and of memorable fices — an emaciated, dying shah, a defeated U.N. secretary-general, a grinning and cocksure Iranian foreign minister. It has been an eternity of deep humiliation and helplessness for many Americans, and a season of testing for a president. It has been a year of secret conversations that may never be revealed but may yet pay off. One who should know, freed hostage Richard Queen, said even the young Iranians who imprisoned him and his fellow diplomats could not believe the crisis dragged on as it did.

"Hold thy patience," counsels the Koran, the bible of the Moslems. "... They see the Day of Judgment indeed as a far-off event: But we see it quite near."

ON SUNDAY MORNING, Nov. 4, 1979, 10 months after Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi left Iran, nine months after his government fell, 13 days after he entered a New York hospital, the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was overrun by a mob of 300 to 400 youthful Iranians.

The Marine guards resisted only with tear gas. Iranian security forces stood by and watched. Inside, diplomats destroyed documents and waited in terror. Within three hours 98 people were prisoners within their own 27-acre embassy compound.

Embassy officials had warned Washington they feared such a violent reaction if Pahlavi was allowed into the United States.

The mob, fervently Moslem, proclaimed itself to be "The Students Following the Path of the Imam." Their demand: return of the exiled shah to face trial in Iran.

It soon became clear that Iranian revolutionary leaders, under the guidance of "The Imam," Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, condoned the hostage seizure. Some say Khomeini and his men knew beforehand of the plans for the embassy attack.

President Carter dispatched former U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark to Iran to try to talk the crisis to an end. But he was not even allowed into the country.

CLARK WAS THE FIRST of a parade of would-be mediators that included American clergymen, an Idaho congressman, comedian-activist Dick Gregory, U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, Irish statesman Sean MacBride, French lawyers and a shadowy Argentine businessman.

They all failed. The hostage crisis - a confrontation between a revolution's fervor and a great nation's power - evolved in its own wav

On the U.S. side, the evolution was toward concession:

From State Department spokesman Hodding Carter's declaration Nov. 14, 1979, that "there is no way this government can or will negotiate under the gun of its own people being held illegally," to Vice President Walter F. Mondale's statement Oct. 24, 1980, that Khomeini's demands provide the "basis for progress.

The United States has other options available to it," he said, as a U.S. Navy task force led by the carrier Kitty Hawk cruised toward the Arabian Sea off Iran. Somewhere in the western American desert, young commandos began training for their ultimate mission.

After some initial reluctance, the Carter administration turned to the world community for help.

On Dec. 4, the U.N. Security Council voted unanimously to urge the Iranians to free the hostages. On Dec. 15, the International Court of Justice ordered them to do so. From Khomeini on down, the revolutionaries scoffed at the international bodies as "puppets" of the United States.

On the Sunday that the court ruling was handed down, Pahlavi left the United States for good, flying to an exile home in Panama, thanks to the White House.

Iran's top diplomat in Washington, Ali Agah, had said earlier that if the ex-shah left American soil it was "most, most likely" the hostages would be freed.

But by now the target had become as much the United States as the deposed shah. And other demands had developed: return of the Pahlavi wealth, an investigation of the United States' involvement in Iranian affairs as the shah's chief sponsor and ally, and eventually an "apology" from the United States.

The Iranians allowed three American clergymen to conduct services for the hostages at Christmas, but a freeze seemed to settle over the affair. The United Nations appeared to be the main hope.

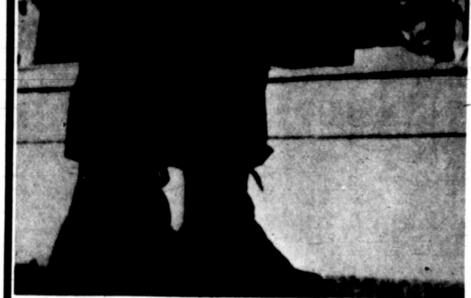

Waldheim flew to Tehran on New Year's Day to meet with Iranian leaders, but he was snubbed by Khomeini. When the U.N. chief paid a visit to the cemetery of revolutionary "martyrs," he was chased off by a mob of fist-waving Iranians.

Hopes'skidded. The Soviet Union blocked an American attempt to have the Security Council order international economic sanctions against Iran. In a new concession, Carter agreed to establishment of a U.N. commission to investigate the past U.S. role in Iran, but the commission's inquiry foundered in March when its members sought to meet with the hostages and were stymied by the militants, with Khomeini's backing.

U.S. hopes had also brightened when Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, a relative moderate on the hostage issue, was elected Iran's first president in late January. But whenever Bani-Sadr tried to assert his authority over the militants, Khomeini would side with the "Students of the Imam.

In early April, in the deepest trough of sliding hopes, President Carter broke diplomatic relations with Iran, expelled Agah and his remaining diplomats and hinted that military action might be next. The threa tened naval blockade or other action could come as early as May, U.S. officials indicated. It came much sooner.

On the Iranian side it was an evolution toward greater political stability, from near-anarchy in 1979 to the consolidation of power under a president, Parliament and prime minister in 1980.

A third factor that seemed to defuse the crisis bit by bit was time itself: Pahlavi left the United States, then died; economic sanctions against Iran strained its resources month by month; war broke out between Iran and Iraq.

IN THE FIRST DAYS after the takeover, throngs of Iranians marched and rallied outside the embassy, shouting fidelity to Khomeini and hatred for what the ayatollah called the "Great Satan," America. In the United States, angry Americans, waving the flag, staged their own marches and scuffled with pro-Khomeini Iranian demonstrators.

The provisional Iranian government of Mehdi Bazargan, embarrassed by the stronger power of the embassy militants, resigned Nov. 6. Iran was not to have another formal government for 10 months,.

The militants released all their non-American hostages in early November, then freed 13 American blacks and women on Nov. 19-20.

As for the remaining hostages - 50 at the embassy and three U.S. diplomats at the Iranian Foreign Ministry - "they could not be treated better," one of their captors said.

The released Americans told a different story, of long hours bound and blindfolded, tied to chairs, forbidden to speak to comrades. Once their guards took a group of blindfolded hostages into a courtyard and staged a mock execution, U.S. officials reported.

The militants threatened to kill their captives if the United States made any military moves against Iran. The young radicals produced documents allegedly showing that the diplomats had been engaged in espionage, and Iranian leaders began talking of putting them on trial as "spies.

The new crusade against America was cast in religious terms, as was Khomeini's Islamic uprising against the shah.

"This is a war between the Moslems and the pagans," proclaimed the aged clergyman-revolutionary.

ON NOV. 14, CARTER STRUCK against Iran, freezing an estimated $8

ON THE MORNING OF APRIL 25, the U.S. armed forces tried to reach deep into Iran to pluck out the hostages. The operation, involving 90 commandos, 90 air crewmen, eight helicopters and six transport planes, was elaborately planned, but apparently not elaborately enough. By the time all had gathered in the desert darkness in central Iran, three of the helicopters were out of action because of malfunctions. The commanders, having decided six helicopters were the minimum needed for going on to the Tehran area, scrubbed the mission. But the getaway was tragic. A helicopter smashed into one of the planes as the force tried to take off, and eight men died.

The collapse of the commando raid threw Iran into jubilation. To many, it proved that God was on their side.

The impasse entered a summer of pessimism. The crisis was "unsolvable," Bani-Sadr said in late June. In Cairo, the ex-shah, by now almost a bit player in this international drama, died of complications of cancer.

That same day, July 27, prospects grew still bleaker when almost 200 Iranian student protesters were arrested in Washington. Iranians were told by their leaders that their young countrymen were being "tortured" in American jails.

The students were later released, but still there was no movement on the hostages.

The Iranian parliament, charged by Khomeini with deciding the Americans' fate, finally managed to convene May 28. It was another three months, however, before it took up the issue, and then only in its foreign relations committee.

U.S. congressmen and Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie sent letters to the Parliament and to the new prime minister, Mohammad Ali Rajai, asking for quick action on the hostages. But the Parliament continued to procrastinate, and Rajai declared, "The United States does not want the hostages freed.

Rumors abounded that secret contacts continued behind the scenes with an Arab nation, possibly Algeria, acting as middleman.

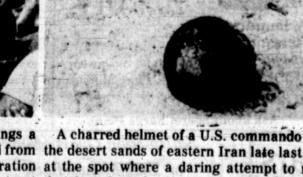

The first major break in months came when Iraq invaded Iran on Sept. 23. Within days it was apparent Iran could not wage a long and hard war if its economy remained hobbled by the sanctions imposed by the United States, other Western nations and Japan. Within weeks Rajai and other Iranian leaders were speaking optimistically of an end to the crisis

Khomeini had presented his conditions: return of the shah's wealth, withdrawal of American court claims against Iran, lifting of the freeze on Iranian assets, and a U.S. pledge of non-interference in Iranian affairs. As always, the thick-browed, white-bearded Moslem patriarch loomed behind the crisis, the final authority

WHAT IS IT LIKE to be a hostage of zealots for a year?

It was "bad" for two months, said Queen, the hostage freed in July because he had developed multiple sclerosis.

"Then life as a hostage sort of became life itself."

The 52 hostages, or many of them, reportedly were moved twice - once from Tehran to a dozen other Iranian cities after the April commando raid, and a second time to still other cities when the war with Iraq broke

U.S. officials said they could not verify these transfers. The last non-Iranian outsiders to visit with all the captives were two Swiss Red Cross representatives who saw them in April.

Six U.S. Embassy staff members who were never taken hostage managed to escape from Tehran with the help of Canadian diplomats last January. At least two other Americans - free-lance writer Cynthia Dwyer and Iranian-American businessman Mohi Sobhani - were arrested for obscure reasons by Iranian revolutionaries.

As long ago as March, a doctor who visited the hostages said some were "mentally distressed." Psychologists fear that the isolation and suppression of freedom can leave permanent scars on the mind. Italian journalist Oriana Fallaci said she was told one of the hostages twice tried suicide.

By Queen's account, life as a hostage could be a stunningly monotonous existence — playing cards or Monopoly, reading books, trying to learn a language. Even being taught about Islam.

We are trying to bring them closer to Islam," an Iranian revolutionary guard said of the hostages last month. "A few of the Americans have turned sympathetic to Islam."

Perhaps, then, some of these 52 luckless Yanks lost in a strange land found some comfort in the Koran's Sura 94:

"Verily, with every difficulty there is relief. Therefore, when thou art free, still labor hard. And to thy Lord turn all thy attention."

4.25 million voters expected in Texas

By GARTH JONES Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - When Texans vote Tuesday they will do so with the knowledge their decision and Texas' 26 electoral votes might elect the next president of the United States, Following last-minute campaign blitzes by both President Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan, Texas remained one of five "battleground" states with large blocs of undecided electoral votes.

Too close to call was the almost unanimous prediction for Texas. Carter scheduled campaign appearances in Houston, Brownsville, San Antonio, Abilene and Fort Worth on Friday and Saturday.

Reagan was in Houston, Fort Worth, Dallas and Texarkana on Wednesday and Thursday.

In Houston, Reagan touched on one of the main Texas criticisms of Carter - the Windfall Profits Tax - saying Carter had implied it would be paid by major pil companies. "Who is he trying to kid?" Reagan said. "That tax will be paid by you and me, by the consumer in this country.... That tax will be responsible for reducing the production of oil by possibly one million barrels a day."

Beginning Tuesday at 7 a.m. and ending at 7 p.m., an estimated 4.25 million voters will cast ballots by paper, machines or punch-cards. Actually, 6.3 million Texans are registered out of the 9.28 million voting-age population

In addition to the presidential contest, Texans will vote on 24 congressmen, a number of statewide officials, 150 Texas House members, 16 state senators and a host of local office holders, plus nine proposed state constitution amendments.

Three congressional races in particular have attracted attention.

Democrats Jim, Mattox of Dallas' 5th District and Bob Eckhardt of Houston's 8th District have been marked by Texas Republicans as prime targets. Mattox faces a strong challenge from Mesquite lawyer Tom Pauken, a Republican who came within 852 votes of unseating him in 1978. Eckhardt, 67, has a serious fight with Jack Fields, a young lawyer from Humble, who has substantial financing from major oil companies. Fields has attacked Eckhardt's votes for the Windfall Profits Tax and to retain oil price controls.

In another congressional race, Fort Worth's 12th District, House Majority Leader Jim Wright, a Democrat, seeks a 14th term with the hope he might some day-be House speaker. He is opposed by Republican Jim Bradshaw, who has tried to picture Wright as a liberal, big-spender who has ignored his home district.

Among the statewide races, two Democrats, incumbent Jim Nugent and state Rep. Buddy Temple, Diboll, are favored for the Texas Railroad Commission over Republicans Henry Grover, Houston, and H.J. Blanchard, Austin. Both Republicans conducted limited campaigns and complained that most GOP money was going to Reagan's race

Another statewide race has attracted attention because it features Republican Will Garwood, of Austin, trying to retain his apointed seat on the otherwise solidly Democratic Texas Supreme Court. He faces Democrat C.L. Ray, now on the Texarkana Court of Civil Appeals.

The proposed changes in the state Constitution include a much publicized amendment to allow off-premise electronic banking, which is backed by most Texas bankers. An effort to authorize bingo for charity, backed by Roman Catholic churches, veterans and charitable organizations, is oposed by Baptist churches and Attorney General Mark White. Still another proposal would revise Texas' internal judicial appeals sys-. tem to allow courts of civil appeals to handle criminal cases.

Carter has made four campaign trips to Texas while Reagan has made five. GOP vice presidential candidate George Bush made eight campaign visits to his adopted state. Vice President Walter Mondale visited Texas several times.

John P. Anderson, who has rated low in Texas polls, was in Texas twice.

Some voters may be confused when they see that the Texas ballot lists Anderson's running mate as Milton Eisenhower instead of Patrick Lucey, as the ticket will appear in most other states. In order to meet Texas filing deadline, Anderson first submitted Eisenhower's name and could not change when Lucey was chosen later.

Reagan started out the acknowledged leader in Texas. Carter began gaining about mid-October.

A mid-October poll by Texas Monthly Magazine of 1,500 voters showed Carter and Reagan with 39 percent each, 8 percent for Anderson and 15 percent were either undecided or expressed no preference.

Reagan depends largely on heavy support from the state's two most populuous areas, Dallas and Houston. He also has strong ties in West Texas and the Panhandle, plus parts of East Texas.

Carter's campaign has been directed toward heavy Mexican-American populations in South Texas, including San Antonio, Corpus Christi, and the Rio Grande Valley. He also has strong support in the industrialized and union stronghold area west of Houston in Beaumont-Port Arthur.

CONSUMER TIPS It's profitable to know difference in solicitors

By LINDA TRUITT etter Business Bureau of the Permian Basin, Inc.

A major responsibility of the BBB is to review charity projects and solici-tations. Upon investigating several recent inquiries, the Bureau has found professionals are currently soliciting businesses and individuals for several local charitable groups.

Usually the business is urged to purchase tickets, advertising or another item in the name of the charity, only in this case it is the solicitor who benefits the most. Since it is often difficult to distinguish between a professional solicitor and a volunteer, knowing how to spot and handle misleading appeals can save your "donation" from going into pockets you never intended.

Telephone soliciting for charities is a big and profitable business. One former professional stated that he and his wife worked for three promoters at the same time; she keeping sales reports and he as a collector on a 6 percent commission. Because of his ability to persuade others, he quickly graduated to the highest commission level possible, 25 percent.

Of all the money that was collected, sponsors were lucky to get even 15 percent of the gross, the informant reported. Half the income was taken off the top to pay for the sales effort, while the other half went for the cost of entertainers, sent of office and show place, printing tickets, telephones and other office expenses. The charity might be guaranteed a small amount of the total, or the profit might be split with the promoter on a went to the sponsor of the charitable cause.

Asking the right questions will usually squelch a misleading sales pitch immediately, without dis-couraging a charitable group that has nothing to hide. -Is the caller a volunteer or an employee of the charitable group, or a paid solicitor?

-Is the solicitor paid a percentage of the funds raised, or a commission on each sale, rather than a flat fee? (Percentage of commission-based fund raising violates the BBB standards for charifable soliciations)

Remember, it's your money, and there are many worthy groups in need of it. Don't be embarassed to ask questions; a legitimate group will encourage your interest, but a solicitor working on a commission basis will be anxious to cut you off and get on to the ext prospect.

Always pay by a check made out to the organization, and be wary of solicitors who press to send a "runner" to pick up your donation. This is often the sign of a professional who is pay-

Polish economic woes jeopardize workers' gains

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - Poland, the world's fourth-largest coal producer, has a coal shortage at home. It is one of the visible signs of what government officials describe as the nation's mounting economic miseries — difficulties that jeopardize the gains of the defiant worker strikes in August.

Problems also cited are falling pro-duction, a potent currency black market and, most serious, huge debts to Western banks.

Communist Party and government leaders are admitting numerous "mistakes and deformations of socialism" as they try to revive the economy.

The result is a rare glimpse at the severity of the crisis, which one party commentator said threatens to make Poland "the sick man of Europe

Among the problems:

- Production dropped 9 percent in August and 6 percent in September

Coal production has developed a backlog of 4 million tons in the last few months, a shortfall that could rise to 8 million to 10 million tons by the end of the year.

Poland became a net importer of food in 1980 for the first time - a year after the country recorded its first drop in national income.

"One cannot describe the present situation as a crisis, but rather as an approaching catastrophe," wrote Mieczyslaw Rakowski, a party Cens tral Committee member and editor of the influential Polityka weekly.

Communist Party leader Stanislaw Kania said the key economic error in the last decade was "an enormous overburdening of the national econ-omy with investments....The actual scope of the investments far exceeded

RINGING THE BELL Blacks are encouraged to make rational choice

By BOB TIEUEL

Dear Bob: Blacks must stop voting a one-party ticket. They are being taken for granted by the Democrats and must become more active partici-pants in America's two party system. To do that, Blacks must examine both candidates and their records and make a rational choice. As the head of California's government from 1966 through 1974, Ronald Reagan appointed more Blacks to key state positions than any of his peers on the other 49 states, and more than any governor in California history.

"Before his administration took office, no Black had served as director. of a state agency or department. He appointed six. Reagan's record on welfare, human relations and employment were equally outstanding. He opened the doors of California's civil service system to Blacks, and Black employment rose 23 percent during his administration. He created new permanent jobs through sensible programs that used the experience and muscle of private enterprise. He increased welfare benefits for the truly needy by 40 percent while work-ing with an areas of society to move the unemployed off welfare and into meaningful jobs. Reagan will provide workfare not welfare, real work and not make-worth jobs.

"I am most enthusiastic about Reagan's call for 'enterprise zones' in America's depressed urban areas to rebuild them through a practical partnership between government and industry. Above all, Ronald Reagan is not a racist. I am always most suspicious -- and all Blacks should be too -of the candidate who first raises the race issue in any campaign. Wish I could be with you on Black College Day in the Permian Basin, but we can all meet at the polls on Nov. 4." - Dr. L. P. Tolliver

There can be little doubt that more Blacks will vote for the Republican nominee -- Ronald Reagan than they did for the nominee -- Ford in 1976. Some of the nation's top leaders are in the Reagan camp as evidenced by the letter above from an old bellringer, Dr. L. P. Tolliver, an educator from Oklahoma, where this correspondent first saw the light of day. The ques-tion: Will it be a large enough "swing" vote in the more black populated areas of the North and East.

The 1980s are considered as prospectively difficult times for Black people because of the increasingproblem of inflation, the fact that big business is in a recession -- restricting production and limiting hiring - and growing unemployment, according to Dr. Charles W. Faulkner, a black psychologist with NNPA. He believes that a period of benign neglect is in prospect during which time Blacks will be in a void -- little advancement as a group, minimal opportunity and increasing conservatism, he adds.

He states that it does not matter whether Carter or Reagan is elected, Blacks must accept the challenge of the increasing psychological pressures that will be exerted upon them and refuse to be broken emotionally. Emotional toughness and a commen sense appraisal of the world go quite a way toward the development of emotional stability, Faulkner believes SUNDAY'S CHILD: Sometime ago, some off the nation's top Black leaders made a joint statement and declared, in part, "Our communities are in turmoil. The elements that destroy human lives are running rampant. The greatest challenge that faces us as a people today is how to communicate a sense of moral pride to children who seen so much tempta-

"For generations, the Black church has been a powerful influence in our lives. The Black church brought us through slavery, and it can still be a positive influence in our young peo-ple's lives and in our communities. We need to care more about the Black church today.'

We salute Mt. Zion Baptist Church and its beloved pastor, the Rev. Lon Bailey of Pecos, for 30 years of faithful service.

Carter and Reagan argue about young voters, SSI benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) - In the waning days of the campaign, President Carter and Ronald Reagan are taking opposite stands on whether Social Security will give young voters their money's worth.

Ronald Reagan says it won't. Carter and his commissioner of Social Security say it will. The dispute spilled over from Tuesday's debate, in which Reagan said, "I don't believe we can go on increasing the tax because the problem for young people today is that they're paying in far more than they can ever expect to get out."

In Pittsburgh on Wednesday, Carter said that was "exactly contrary to the facts." Thursday, Social Security Commissioner William J. Driver said Rea gan's remark "is not true."

"The typical younger worker will get more out of Social Security than he put into the system," said Driver, adding that "the average young male worker with dependents can expect to receive more than three times what he will pay in taxes."

A single young woman with average earnings can expect a return of more than twice her taxes, Driver said.

But Reagan's camp stuck by its guns and said Driver's ratios ignored the fact that employers must pay a matching share of the payroll tax. That cuts those ratios in half, said Kevin Hopkins, a senior policy analyst for the Reagan campaign.

The Social Security table on benefit-tax ratios for 22-year-olds shows much narrower rates of return for two-earner couples and single male workers. By Hopkins' calculation, counting the combined payroll tax, some couples and high wage earners will get back less than the total tax paid in.

Dwight Bartlett, chief actuary of Social Security, said that the young workers as a whole still show a positive rate of return, even if you count trhe combined payroll tax.

Bartlett said workers 20 to 24 "can expect to get back roughly 15 percent more" than they and their employers pay in. If only the employee tax is considered, they will get back 130 percent, he said.

two new districts are expected to win election to Congress Tuesday, pushing the number of black representatives in the House to 18, the highest level ever.

Black ranks

The numbers of Hispanic and Japanese American members of Congress are likely to hold steady.

There are no black candidates for the Senate. The only black to serve in the Senate in recent years was Edward Brooke, R-Mass., who was defeated in 1978.

One Japanese-American senator, Daniel Inouye of. Hawaii is considered a shoo-in as he seeks a fourth term. Two other senators, Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, and S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., are not up for re-election. And three Japanese-American House members, Robert Matsui, D-Calif., Norman Mineta, D-Calif., and Danial Akaka, D-Hawaii, are all leading their races.

The four Hispanic members of the House - Edward Roybal, D-Calif., Manuel Lujan, R-N.M., Eligio de la Garza, D-Texas, and Henry Gonzalez, D-Texas - are favored in their contests.

The new districts which are likely to choose black candidates are in California and Illinois.

Former lieutenant governor Mervyn Dymally is given the edge in a contest to fill the seat being held by Rep. Charles Wilson, a California Democrat. Wilson was clobbered by Dymally in a primary campaign which preceded his censure by the House for financial misconduct.

Dymally's challenger is Don Grimshaw, a Republican who is a logistics systems engineer.

In Chicago, publisher Gus Savage is expected to win the seat being vacated by Rep. Morgan Murphy. Both are Democrats. Competing for the seat is Marsha Harris, a nurse.

In addition, two new black members are likely to be elected to succeed black congressmen Charles Diggs, D-Mich., who resigned from Congress, and Rep. Bennett Stewart, D-Ill., who was beaten in the primary.

Diggs submitted his resignation after he failed on appeal to overturn his conviction for misuse of his office payroll.

George Crockett, a retired judge, was chosen by the Democrats to succeed Diggs and is expected to defeat Republican Michael Hurd and Libertarian Robert Roddis.

Stewart was beaten by Democratic state senator Harold Washington in the Illinois primary. Washington is given a good chance of defeating Repblican ward official George Williams.

Twelve blacks, all Democrats, are expected to be returned to their seats.

Three are from California: Reps. Ronald V. Dellums, Julian Dixon and Augustus Hawkins. The others are Reps. Cardiss Collins of Illinois, Parren J. Mitchell of Maryland, John Conyers of Michigan, William Clay of Missouri, Shirley Chisholm of New York, Charles Rangel of New York, Louis Stokes of Ohio, William Gray of Pennsylvania, Harold Ford of Tennessee and Mickey Leland of Texas.

There also are two non-voting House members who Eric Fryar, 18, son of Jack and Maridell are black. Both are likely to win their re-election Fryar, of 2409 Auburn Place, is the Junior bids. Walter Fauntroy, the delegate from the District

OIL & GAS BUSINESS/GENERAL N EWS/EDITORIALI

No oil or gas wanted here? That's right. Out of the 60,000 wells being drilled in the U.S. this year, the well in background is hoped to be dry. Its owner, Halliburton Services, doesn't want to find anything in the well being drilled outside its New

Operators establish mark for acreage under lease

By MAX B. SKELTON AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - Backed by higher wellhead prices, domestic oil and gas operators have set another record for acreage held under lease. At the end of 1979, the industry had 447.1 million productive and non-productive acres under lease in 33 states. That was 19.8 percent of total land area of the 50 states. It was the second consecutive year for the industry to move to a new record after a prolonged period of belt-tightening prompted by a 15-year slump in drilling operations.

The new total compares with the old record of 432.1 million acres under lease at the end of 1978 and with the previous all-time high of 424.2 million at the end of 1959.

The drilling slump had dropped the holdings to a modern low of 325.1 million acres in 1967.

The industry released huge chunks of acreage as well completions dropped from a record 58,160 in 1956 to a modern low of 27,300 in 1971. The renewed interest in leasing activity accompanied a gradual comeback in drilling operations that led to 51,263 well completions last year.

New figures on productive and nonproductive acreage were released in the 1980 editon of "The Oil Producing Industry in Your State." The annual publication of the Independent Petroleum Association of America includes 134 pages of industry statistics on nation wide operations and for each state with oil or gas production.

The addition of Oregon this year boosted the number of producing states to 33.

Oregon's first production was reported as the 1979 output of 15.1 million cubic feet of natural gas in Columbia County where 21 wildcat and development wells led to five gas completions and 16 dry holes. The proved reserves at year-end were estimated at 200 million cubic feet.

The booklet indicated 700 productive and 4.5 million non-productive acres or 7.3 percent of Oregon's total land area were under lease at the end of 1979.

An introduction to the 1980 edition says almost 30 percent of the total acreage under lease across the nation is controlled by the federal government. Geologists contend much of the domestic oil and gas yet to be discovered is beneath public lands and the trade group expressed hope "that government policy in the future will encourage the increased use of these public lands for oil and gas exploration and development."

The independents gave this breakdown for employees within the industry's major segments: gasoline service stations 584,200, oil and gas extraction 470,400, wholesale trade 231,600, transportation 186,900, and refining-manufacturing 169,700.

The trade group said a survey of each of the 50 states was made because such information of the number of employees within the industry was not available by state from any published source.

By individual state, the employee totals ranged from a low of 2,045 in Vermont to a high of 325,164 in Texas.

Productive leases at the end of 1979 totaled a record 50.1 million acres, compared with only 25 million at the end of 1959. The new non-productive total of 397 million acres, however, was still below the all-time high of 399.1 million set in 1959.

At the end of 1979, the nation had 526,855 producing oil wells. While still well below the record 617,057 reported in 1961, the new total indicates a continuing although slow comeback since the drilling slump and abandonments dropped the count to 494,352 in 1974.

Since 1859, the industry has drilled 2,526,748 wells. Oil producers totaled 1,484,768, gas producers 264,925. The remaining 777,055 or 30.7 percent were dry holes.

Report supports uranium loss theory

By MATT YANCEY

ERWIN, Tenn. (AP) - A newly released report supports, but doesn't prove, a theory that there was nothing suspicious in the loss of 48.4 pounds of bomb-grade uranium from a plant which makes reactor fuel for Navy submarines, a federal official said Friday.

A previously classified report by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said all but 11.26 pounds of the uranium that disappeared from the plant here last year can be accounted for. The statement in the report, released Thursday, was based on the amount of uranium that was absorbed into the floor of the plant, remained as residue lent of 25 chest X-rays.

"The chance of an individual developing cancer as a result of a one-time exposure to 500 millirems is one in 4 million," NRC spokesman Ken'Clark said.

The report was declassified Oct. 17, six months after it was prepared.

Jim Partlow, chief of the NRC's materials control licensing branch, said Friday that "a lot of uncertainties and a lot of assumptions" are built into the commission's calculations on how much uranium was absorbed or lost as residue.

But he said the report tends to confirm conclusions by the FBI and the commission's investigators that there was no breach of security.

should have been," he said. He added that the NRC still doesn't know exactly why

The NRC ordered Nuclear Fuel Services, a subsidiary of Getty Oil Co., to close the plant Sept. 18, 1979, one day after the company reported that the uranium had been lost between June 18 and Aug. 14 last year. Citing the need to maintain national security, the government at the time refused to specify how much uranium was missing, saying only that the amount exceeded a 19.8-pound limit on discrepancies allowed for each two-month period.

The details of how much was missing and of the NRC's calculations were revealed in the report.

TULSA, Okla. - Commercial production from the U.S.'s first synthetic fuels plants should be on stream by the mid to late 1980's, Oil & Gas Journal says in its Oct 27 issue.

But construction and demonstration work under way or likely to start soon probably won't yield enough production to meet the government's goal of 2 million barrels a day of synfuels output by 1992, the weekly magazine says.

The industry's synfuels managers expect the pioneer commercial plants will be oil shale and coal liquefaction and gasification ventures. Manpower, fabricating capacity, lead time and other constraints will hold the lid downon progress toward the government's expectations, the Journal says five other sizable facilities planned. Three commercial synfuels from coal plants under construction and site preparation under way for a fourth.

- Two large coal liquefaction pilot plants recently commissioned and at least two others to begin construction in 1981

- Good prospects for near term construction starts on several other demonstrations and commercial coal plants.

But synfuel managers expect high mortality rates for other commercial-scale projects that surfaced during recent Department of Energy financial aid offerings. Those proposals face hurdles ranging from extensive permitting to increasingly tight supplies of capital, manpower and hardware.

If the big projects aren't ready to enter the detailed engineering phase, they won't be built by 1985, the Journal reports.

Government incentives, higher energy prices and other factors have substantially improved the synfuels outlook

It is reasonable to expect a synfuels industry producing 550,000-800,000 barrels a day of oil equivalent by 1990, mostly from oil shale and coal gasification, the Journal says,

But the industry faces some major risks in its synfuels ventures, including the performance characteristics of pioneer plants, uncertain regulatory requirements, future Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries pricing policies and domestic economic and tax treatment.

One oil company analysist says 14 major federal acts could slow or stop. a synfuels venture. Another firm says its venture will require about 100 permits from state, federal and local authorities.

Court says lease rules must change

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - A federal appeals court ruled last week that the government must change its system of leasing offshore acreage for oil and gas exploration to encourage competition and increase revenues flowing into the Treasur.

Under the traditional auction of offshore leases operated by the Department of Interior, oil companies make sealed bids, listing the bonus that they will pay for the exploration and production rights on an offshore tract. The highest bonus bid wins the tract. In addition to the bonus payments, which can run into billions of dollars, the government also receives a royalty equal to 16 2-3 percent of the oil and gas produced from the property.

Major oil companies with extensive f8nancial resources usually wip the auctions because they can make big bonus bids.

However, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia said in a unanimous decision that the government must try two alternative systems to "attract bidders other than the major oil companies ... One method would award the tract rights on the basis of a share of net profits. The company offering the government the biggest share of profits over the life of the lease would win the auction. A small- or medium-sized company, without the cash in advance, could win by promising more of the ultimate profits. The second method would award leases on the basis of the spe3d with which a company would explore the acreage and begin production.

A spokesman for the Department of the Interior said that an appeal to the Supreme Court was under consideration.

The Treasury presently receives $4 billion to $5 billion a year from bonus bids in lease auctions and from royalties. The amount varies depending on the acreage put up for lease in a particular year.

If the court decision is not appealed, all three methods - the traditional bonus bid and the two new systems would be used next May in the scheduled sale of leases off the coast of central California.

The lawsuit against, the Department of the Interior was filed last year by the Energy Action Educational Foundation, the California Lands Commission, the city of Long Beach, Calif., and 11 consumer and labor groups and individuals.

If the new systems are used, the government could ultimately double its revenues from oil and gas lease sales, said Ed Rothschild, director of Energy Action. The research group is a frequent critic of the major oil companies and of government energy policy.*

The suit was filed in respons3 to 1978 legislation requiring the government to experiment with new bidding systems. The suit charged that the Des partment of Interior was improperly delaying the issuance of regulations for the new bidding methods.

Estimates on the amount of highly enriched uranium needed to produce a bomb range from 23 pounds to 39 pounds.

Nuclear Fuel Services Inc., which runs the plant, estimated that one pound of vaporized uranium escaped into the air in an unplanned release on Aug. 7, 1979. But the NRC figures show the release was at least 21/2 pounds and could have been up to 15 pounds.

At 15 pounds, the NRC said, the maximum radiation exposure to a child living next to the plant would have been 500 millirems, the equiva-

Operators working 330 rotories in Basin areas

Culberson

Dawson

Operators were working 330 rotary igs in the Permian Basin of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico last week, according to the weekly survey of drilling operations conducted by Reed Rock Bit Co.

The count is 12 less than the previous week which listed 342 rigs going. One year ago there were 303 active rotaries in the Permian Basin.

Eddy County, second in New Mexico and in the Basin, counted 26 units, a decrease of two from the previous survey.

Pecos County continued to lead the West Texas counties with 21 units reported making hole, a decrease of two rigs from the week-earlier survey, while Crockett County, in second place reported 16 units. Other counties with 10 or mor ro-

DOE publishes handbook

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. - The Department of Energy Bartlesville Energy Technology Center has published a new handbook on federal and state environmental laws and regulations as they affect installation and operation of enhanced fil recovery (EOR) projects.

The 224-page publication, produced by Spears & Assoc. of Tulsa for the DOE, is intended to help would be and existing operators of EOR projects avoid costly delays, fines, and perhaps even forced abandonment of such projects by acquainting them with federal and state environmental requirements.

Primary emphasis is on prevention and control of air and water pollution, protection of underground water sources, and management of hazardous and solid wastes. The handbook deals only with those laws and regulations that apply specifically to those features unique to enhanced oil recovery - such as emissions from steam generators or underground injection of chemicals, according to Ron Kendall, DOE technical project officer.

DOE officials emphasize thath the handbook is intended to serve only as a reference guide, and EOR operatords using it are urged to consult

Also included are tentative requirements under some environmental laws hot yet implemented - such as the Underground Injection Control and Resource Conservation and Recovery Act.

In addition, relevant state environmental laws, regulations, and permit requirements are included for 16 major oil producing states where enhanced oil recovery is, or could be important to future oil recovery: Alabama, California, Colorado, Illinois, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Montana, New Mexico, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Texas, West Virginia, and Wyoming.

They spurn personal friendships

By DEBORAH SMITH Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) - The Japanese strongly favor friendly relations with other countries but are not particularly eager to make friends with individual foreigners, two recent government opinion polls show.

One survey, conducted by the prime minister's office, found that 63.6 percent of those questioned nationwide were not interested in personal relationships with foreigners.

Among the 2,388 Japanese questioned, it found more-than 80 percent approving of foreign students, tourists or journalists coming to Japan - but only 4.2 percent wanted to be on "friendly terms" with them.

Another survey, taken a month before the other, found the Japanese generally have friendly feelings toward China and the United States, two foreign countries that have played important roles in Japan's own modern history.

Among the 2,400 queried in that poll, also conducted by the prime minister's office, 79 percent were come" the outsider. favorably disposed toward the Chinese and 77 percent toward the Americans.

United States has regained crucial Carribean base

By GREG CHAMBERLAIN The Guardian

With Edward Seaga's victory in Jamaica's general election, the United States has regained a crucial political base in the Caribbean and a serious blow has been dealt to the cause of Caribbean nationalism.

Seaga's triumph is a watershed at the end of a decade of attempts to build a post-colonial Caribbean identity. After six often chaotic years of "democratic socialism," this island of two million people will now be led back into a close alliance

Japan's past contribution has been woefully weak -- about .9 percent of GNP. This compared poorly with the U.S. 4.8 percent and similar NATO nation expenditures. For years the U.S. has pressed Japan at all levels of government to spend a langer percentage of its GNP for defense

Japan's political consensus has been that greater defense budgets would bring too much power to the military. The military dominance over domestic politics of the 1930s and 1940s had created a lasting dread of rnilitary resurgence. Japan preferred the security of the U.S. nuclear shield and the U.S. conventional forces deployed in the Western Pacific.

On October 24, while we were here, Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, who chairs the governing Liberal-Democratic party, reached a broad agreement with Ryosaku Sasaki, chairman of the moderate and third largest party, the Demo-

But debate on inflation has impact on agriculture

By JAMES H. RUBIN Associated Press Writer

THE MIDLAND REPORTER-TELEGRAM, SUN., NOVEMBER 2, 1980

WASHINGTON (AP) - The televised debate between President Carter and his Republican challenger Ronald Reagan failed to raise any farm issues. And, aside from the partial Soviet grain embargo, the campaign itself has generated limited controversy over agricultural policy.

With the election on Tuesday, the subject of grain sales to the Soviet Union has provided the clearest distinction between the candidates. But there has been a good deal said on the general issue of inflation that pertains to farmers. Both Reagan and independent presidential candidate John Anderson have accused the Carter administration of undermining farm income by failing to control inflation.

"No single economic problem has caused farm families as much excruciating pain as has the Carter inflation," Reagan told Farm Journal magazine, which interviewed the three candidates.

"Net farm earnings in real dollars are dropping sharply," Reagan added. "Farm income last year was the same as in 1973, six years earlier in a Republican administration. But that net income had 40 percent less purchasing power than in 1973."

Anderson said, "We must eliminate the ravaging effects of inflation and high interest rates on farm incomes. The cost of interest payments has gone up 118 percent since Carter took office.

"If the Anderson administration does nothing else than bring down the rate of interest and the rate of grain to the Soviets in January after the Russian inflation, it will have done more for the American farmer than the previous four administrations in Washington," he said.

Anderson also noted that he opposed a tax cut favored by Reagan because, the Illinois congressman said, it would add to inflation trous decline in the farm economy that began in the ed last administration has been turned around.

'In January 1977, cattle were selling for about $32; now they are selling for over $62. In January 1977, wheat was $2.43 and falling, it is now approaching $4 and rising. In January 1977, corn was $2.34 and falling; it is now nearly $3 and rising." The president added, "The same comparisons can be made for nearly every other farm commodity. These are no political pie-in-the-sky promises."

Carter also said that despite his failure to produce a balanced budget this year as he promised four years ago, he intended "to make certain that govern-ment spending is prudent and restrained. ... Our top priority must be to successfully battle inflation. My commitment to a balanced budget is unchanged."

Carter has hoped to blunt the impact of the suspension of grain sales to the Soviet Union by signing a trade agreement with China two weeks before the election. The pact calls for the Chinese to. buy 6 million to 9 million metric tons of grain in each of the next four years.

The administration has said it will provide stability for American grain farmers who have been uncertain in recent years whether they have a customer in China.

From 80 percent to 85 percent of the annual purchases will be wheat and the rest will be corn. The market will produce an estimated $2 billion a year

But not all farmers have welcomed the move. The American Farm Bureau said an erratic market can benefit farmers because they can sell at higher prices created by speculation.

In any event, Reagan has continued to condemn the partial Russian grain embargo.

Carter suspended sales of 17 million metric tons of military occupation of Afghanistan. The administration is still honoring a five-year trade agreement with the U.S.S.R. that calls for sale of about 8 million tons of grain each year.

Reagan said the embargo has eroded U.S. farm income without causing similar suffering in the Anderson has supported the embargo all along. But he has criticized the administration's handling of the move.

'It was irresponsible for the president to impose an embargo, yet fail to take the necessary steps to make that embargo effective by securing the cooperation of Brazil, Argentina and other countries," Anderson said.

Both Anderson and Reagan have said Carter did not do enough to protect farm incomes from the impact of the embargo

But the administration points to the billions of dollars it approved to buy up grain to keep it off the market and has noted prices now are generally higher than when the suspension was imposed.

Carter has said he would lift the embargo only if The Soviets "first make some tangible, demonstrative move to stop their aggression in Afghanistan." The other issue that has generated some fireworks in farm states is the direction of the Agriculture Department toward consumer-oriented policies.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said this question dominated many discussions while he was on the campaign trail.

Water harvesting' may minimize impact of heartland's dry spell

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) - Reduced grain production the Great Plains and parts of Texas, where crops in much of the nation's heartland because of a dry spell this year might have been minimized with an ancient but little-used irrigation technique called water harvesting.

What the technique does, simply, is to make maximum use of rainwater by directing its runoff to places where it is needed - specifically, underneath plants.

It's been used by farmers in dry regions for thousands of years, and now researchers at the University of Arizona have revived it with modern technique

The university scientists are entering their second decade of experimental crop growth using water harvesting

The water-harvesting system can be as simple as it was in ancient times - plowing a field with ntours to run rainwater toward plants — or as complex as setting up special catchment areas and ponds to hold rain runoff that isn't needed right away. C. Brent Cluff, a hydrologist who is one of several university scientists working on water harvesting, said the technique would have good application in marginal dryland areas such as the western part of were reduced by the dry spell.

With the use of water harvesting, yields per acre are reduced somewhat because use of the land is divided between the growing section and the section used to gather rain runoff, Cluff said.

But he said the savings, especially for areas where costly irrigation was used, made up for the reduced yields. In a lot of cases, water harvesting can be used to reduce rather than eliminate the need for irrigation.

A field on which water harvesting is being used is contoured, with sloped runoff areas between the rows of crops. The contouring is easily done, Cluff said, adding that it can be designed for flat land as well as rolling countryside.

"You can grow just about any crop with water harvesting," Cluff said. "Of course, the less water a plant needs, the better."

He said researchers had successfully grown grain sorghum, wine grapes and corn. The technique could also be used for deciduous trees, such as apple, apricot, peach and pear, he said.

The university's experimental water-harvesting plots are at Page Ranch north of Tucson. Twenty acres are planted in crops that get most of their water from directed rain runoff.

In a related matter, the Office of Consumer Credit Commissioner is working on an updated comparison of consumer loan rates among the various states, as part of its attempt to prepare for the next legislative session

That task is more complex than in years past, OCCC Commissioner Sam Kelley reports; because 21 states have changed their rates since the first of the year.

That work should be completed within a month -- if the requested information arrives as expected.

Kelley says that it appears "Texas will be pretty low compared to some other states" on its consumer loan rates.

Credit Union Commissioner John (Pete) Parsons is asking state-chartered credit unions to "submit suggestions and proposals" which they feel are appropriate to accomplish the goals of the (Credit Union) Commission" for consideration before the 1981 legislative session.

The commission has been reviewing proposed changes in the Texas Credit Union Act, and has submitted the alterations to the Texas Credit Union League for comments.

Most of the changes, Parsons says, involve clarifiprovisions for direct deposits of state warrants (as cation and simplification of language, with few urged by Comptroller Bob Bullock) and some "fairly substantive alterations.

Among the other ports actively developing facili ties is Brownsville, which recently received approval on its foreign trade zone application, involving development on a 1,200-acre industrial park site.

State Board of Insurance is reviewing staff recommendations on proposed legislation to be requested in 1981 - with most of the work described as "housekeeping" matters.

However, another set of recommendations dealing with insurance problems of the elderly and handicapped is to be drafted later, and will deal with substantive changes.

SBI held hearings earlier this year on those problems, following a legislative mandate, and the legislation is expected to be made a part of the

Each vote is important

Needless to say, there'll the a number of people in Midland and elsewhere sitting around Wednesday morning griping about who got elected to which office. They'll gripe, but they didn't take the time to go vote Tuesday.

Maybe you're asking yourself, "Just what difference does my one vote make?" Well, U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, in his weekly newspaper column, ad dressed that particular point and presented some interesting results.

- In 1845 the U.S. Senate agreed to annex Texas by a one-vote margin.

- John F. Kennedy was elected president by less than one vote per precinct across the nation. One-half of 1 percent of the votes cast in Illinois and New Jersey swung 43 electoral votes to him. Had that tiny percentage of the votes in those two states been reversed, it would have been enough to throw that election into the House of Representatives for a decision.

- In 1800 Thomas Jefferson was elected president over Aaron Burr by one vote in the House of Representatives - following a tie in the electoral college.

- In 1824 John Quincy Adams gained the presidency by one vote when that contest was decided in the House of Representatives.

In 1876 Rutherford B. Hayes was elected president over Samuel J. Tilden when a special Electoral Commission vot

House of Hanover, 96-95. - In 1863 the U.S. Senate twice failed to convict President Andrew Johnson in his impeachment trial by a single vote.

- Finally, one vote cost King Charles I of England his head in 1649.

Those of us in Midland, like millions of others throughout the nation, have a privilege and a duty to vote on election day. It is a responsibility we should not take lightly.

It has been a long, lively campaign at the local, state and national levels. But everyone involved has done his or her part and now we are approaching the end.

WASHINGTON-MERRY-GO-ROUND Questionable tactics could tarnish ABSCAM

WASHINGTON - The FBI's celebrated ABSCAM operation, with its hidden cameras recording the incredible antics of phony Arab favor-seek ers and real-life American politicians, has titillated the public and cutraged Congress.

Two House members have already been convicted, and by the time the rest of the defendants have been tried over the next few months, ABSCAM may go into the history books as the most successful investigation of con gressional corruption ever accomplished.

Certainly its success as entertainment is beyond question. Not since the public hangings of an earlier era has the populace been treated to such a fascinating display of justice at work

Jimmy Carter: The perplexing, beleaguered candidate

WASHINGTON - Now, at campaign's end, Carter begs Democrats to come home to him, though he doesn't seem to be one of them. He looked like a stranger both times at the conventions in Madison Square Garden. Still, he fights, and prays that the flow of undecided voters to any incumbent president, plus the dutiful return of Democratic faithfuls, will be enough to topple Reagan from his superior position in electoral votes

Carter, extremely ambitious, is driven to succeed. If he loses, he'll feel far more pain than Reagan would if Reagan doesn't win. That difference showed on their faces in the debate. Reagan runs because he is bothered by the way the country is going. Carter runs because he is convinced that he is special and what the country needs.

Like any driven soul, Carter will use any ready weapon or tactic. In 1976, he was the "outsider," even employing George Wallace lines, to exploit the public's disillusionment with Washington. In 1980, Carter for-cefully reminds all that he has made thousands of decisions in the presiency, that his work with SALT II laces him with Presidents Nixon and Ford, that as Washington's premier figure, he joined world leaders to determine anti-terrorism strategies.

His hourly effort to drape the pem-His hourly effort to drape the per-ocratic Party around him, invoking glorious memories of FDR, Truman and Kennedy, at least served the pur-pose of strengthening party struc-ture — a sore need in today's politics. But when he portrayed John F. Kennedy as one Catholic deeply involved in "his own local Knights of Columbus and that's where he learned to represent the true ideals and principles of the Democratic Party..." well, that's reaching for it, even in the KC Hall in Gloucester City, N.J. Carter is adroit in whipping Reagan on issues which can quicken voter flow to the president in Washington. He casts old, even fragmentary, Reagan quotes on the nuclear weaponry issue in stark, glistening, contemporary light, and tries to make out the wrinkled former actor as a dangerous person to trust with the trigger. The majority of people do think Demo-crats are better at keeping the peace than Repulicans.

Thimmesch

But Carter failed in the debate to convince the citizenry that Reagan is . such a threat to peace. Reagan's "by-golly" and "byh-gosh" manner served him well.

Carter foreign policy is a mixed bag. True, American bloodshed for the flag has been minimal (eight bodies on Iran's sands), but for too long, Carter heeded the preposterous notion that Vietnam, Cuba, Cambodia and Iran could be sweet-talked into friendship: My single indictment of Carter's foreign policy is that he caused U.S.-Soviet relations to deteriorate. The Soviet system is not our cup of tea. but because "them" and "us" are the most powerful and potentially dangerous nations on the face of the earth, we absolutely must be able to have civil communications with them. We didjunder Nixon and Ford. We don't under Carter. We might under Reagan.

There are disadvantages as well as benefits in being president and candidate. Cafter benefited vastly from the hostage situation, blocking out Kennedy, and holding public support. But now, if expectations for their release get too high, he is hurt if they aren't, and suspected if they are. Historians will probably blame Carter for this humiliating ordeal.

Carter did more than any other president to improve Israel's security through generous arms deliveries and the Egyptian peace treaty. But the U.N. flub and his occasional references to Palestinian rights cause doubting fears to afflict great numbers of Jewish voters who now dislike Carter.

Similarly, it is difficult for Carter to brag to working-class Democrats about how he improved their econom-ic life. While Carter deserves only a "C-plus" on this score, many factors hurting the economy are not his Carter didn't create consumer greed, nor did he cause the years of neglect in energy development, or OPEC. It was Congress that couldn't fare appointed a special investigator, Richard Blumenthal, to find those responsible for this "perversion" of justice.

Blumenthal's report was finished months ago. FBI Director William Webster has said it "points the finger" at certain Justice Department officials. But Civiletti has taken pains to keep the embarrassing report secret until the ABSCAM trials are over.

It strikes some insiders as passing strange that the Justice Department, which treated the rights of the AB-SCAM defendants so cavalierly, is treating its own misconduct with such tenderness. - ENTRAPMENT. In a "sting" operation like ABSCAM, there is always the danger that lawmen have set in motion crimes that otherwise would not have been committed, and civil libertarians are concerned that the FBI's undercover agents overstepped the bounds this time.

Assistant Attorney General Philip Heymann, who took personal charge of the ABSCAM investigation, has insisted that no one from the Justice

dous deficits, and shackled U.S. busi-

Much of what Carter must now

sured the senator. "It's all talk, all bullshit. It's a walk-through. You gotta just play and blow your horn." Even some Justice Department lawyers were doubtful about these tactics. One secret department memo concluded that "constitutional violations of due process in the ABSCAM investigation may have fatally infected the investigations and possible convictions.

 UNETHICAL CONDUCT. In their zeal to nab as many big shots as possible, the ABSCAM team resorted to some dubious investigative techniques. Weinberg, for example, suggested to an unwitting middleman, Philadelphia lawyer Howard Criden, that he ply Rep. Frank Thompson, D-N.J., with booze to get him to take a bribe on camera.

Initially, Thompson refused an offer of cash. The FBI told Criden to bring him back for a second meet-

"He told me he won't discuss money," Criden protested. "The (expletive) guy is an alky. What do you want from the (expletive) guy?'

"Give him another drink," replied Weinberg. With such expert - if questionable - tutelage, Criden eventually got Thompson to return, and the tapes show Criden (though not Thompson) accepting a briefcase containing $50,000

- TARGETING. There is disturbing evidence that certain politicians were singled out as targets, while others were declared off-limits to the undercover agents. Leads were provided by the middlemen that pointed to at least seven members of Congress who were not pursued by the G-men. Two of these were House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., and House Judiciary Committee Chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J.

On the other hand, witnesses recall hearing Heymann, the head of the investigation, asking in reference to Rep. Richard Kelly, R-Fla., "Did we get that troublemaker Kelly?" The answer is: They did. The feisty congressman was videotaped stuffing greenbacks in his pockets and asking, "Does it show?"

Undercover operations like AB-SCAM may be the only way to catch congressmen who are on the take. But the sweet taste of success turns a little sour when the government tramples on individual rights in its pursuit of justice.

"You sold me. What's my next step?'

'We'll send you a speech you can read at the next school board meeting attacking Darwin. Then we'll tip off your TV station that a religious fanatc is going to disrupt the proceedings.

'Will the TV people show up?'' "Of course they'll show up. They have to cover the news."

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Figures aren't in, but Texas government may set biennium record

By BILL KIDD Austin Bureau

AUSTIN - While the final figures won't be known for at least a month or two, it appears Texas state government spending is heading toward another record in the 1982-83 biennium - somewhere around the $25-26 billion mark.

That means an increase of $4.5 to $5 billion over current levels - with the bulk of that increase in salaries for state workers, including those at state-supported colleges and universities

Prospects of that increase aren't sitting too well with some folks, including Austin attorney Waggoner Carr, former attorney general and head of Texas 13, and persistent critic of the growth of government spend-

Carr admits that spending by Texas legislators is trifling compared with Washington, but he still feels it's excessive, wasteful and in need of controls.

"We know that the demands for additional spending are in excess of $8 billion at this point," Carr says. "If the legislature is going to stay within the money it has, it's going to have to take a hard-nosed attitude about these demands."

And, Carr adds, "The thought of additional taxes from Austin sets the taxpayer groups on fire.

Texas 13 has been pushing the issue of initiative and referendum (I&R) since Proposition 13 gathered nationwide attention as California taxpayers attempted to reduce state govern-\ ment spending there. In the 1979 legislative session, I&R received a cold reception from most lawmakers, with the Senate largely pretending no one had mentioned the subject, and the house taking the matter up and battering it into a nearly unrecognizable form before allowing it to expire late one weekend

Gov. Bill Clements has indicated his support for I&R, but has proposed a form considerably more restricted than that first sought by its supporters

Basically, Clements' idea is to limit I&R to tax matters — with the legislature having a chance to offer a counter-proposal to voters along with any voter-submitted plan.

Carr denies that Clements' modifications imply any cooling of support by the governor, contending that rather "he's taking a realistic view that the present overwhelming opposition to I&R in the legislature is a fact of life.'

"His proposal is workable, and I think the taxpayers would be pleased if his proposal passed...and I think that 95 percent of the problems con-cerning taxpayers would be cured if I&R were restricted to taxing and spending matters, and further restricted so that it could not be used to increase taxes or pass new taxes," Carr says.

However, Carr admits he's not seen much evidence that the 1981 legislature will be any more receptive than the 1979 legislature to I&R, although he insists popular support remains as high

"I'm convinced that...I&R for Texas is not going to disappear, whether the legislature adopts this next session or later," Carr says. He also remains convinced I&R is

'We've tried high powered lobbying: we've tried using the ballot box and electing people who will do that," he says

"We've done business as usual for years, and now we're in the present mess, with high taxes and big bureaucratic government.... Many of us have lost confidence that the legislature will take the political steps necessary - and that leaves only the people at home."

When the election is past, Carr says, Texas 13 will be trying to get a firmer reading on support for I&R noting it's difficult "to pin a legislator down on this issue because I&R comes in so many forms.'

Texas 13 will be asking if lawmakers favor the governor's ball - and if not, how they would change it.

But it's already obvious that I&R's struggles in 1981 will be uphill again - with a number of business groups organized and publicly stating their opposition, and with the Texas AFL-

CIO remaining opposed (and having threatened to use I&R to enact a corporate profits tax to replace local property taxes for schools if I&R is enacted.)

Much of the objection to I&R is that it bypasses the legislative process of public hearings, committee studies and floor debate, all of which are supposed to allow the legislature to make careful, reasoned and rational choices on legislation.

Obviously, that system doesn't always-achieve 100 percent success; Carr might even be inclined to rate it more toward the other end of the scale, at least where spending is concerned

Not narrow issue No help here

To The Editor:

The November 4 ballot will include a proposed Amendment 9 to the Texas Constitution under the heading, "The constitutional amendment allowing spouses to agree that the income or property arising from separate property is to be separate property." If this heading accurately described Amendment 9, it would make a desirable change in Texas law.

However, this heading is misleading; indeed, the amendment is almost certain to be challenged for having a misleading caption. Amendment 9 would change Texas' community property laws in a number of ways that defy a brief summary. Texas. voters should understand that this is not a narrow issue involving technical revisions in the law. By making sweeping changes in our laws, Amendment 9 would affect every married couple in the state.

This is a bad amendment that should be rejected for at least five reasons. First, the tax problem that prompted the amendment no longer exists. Second, no reason has been given for proposing sweeping changes in our community property laws. For over 140 years these laws have worked well to protect the rights of both husbands and wives. Why the change without public debate on the merits of the change? Third, the language of Amendment 9 is poorly drafted, and will raise serious questions as to the status of many well-established rules

To The Editor: While on a business trip to Midland, I became ill with severe abdominal pains on Thursday, October 2, about 10 p.m. I went to the Holiday Inn office and they took me to the emergency room at the Midland Memorial

My first encounter was with the young ladies at the emergency desk. They were very rude, nasty and uncooperative and I was told if I was going to be treated I would have to sit down and wait which at that point in time was excruciatingly painful. The attending physician after examination and lab tests said I had the flu, gave me a shot for pain and released me to return to the motel. Again, the lady at the desk refused to allow me to use the phone or give me change for a dollar to use the pay phone and I asked how I was to return to the motel and the answer was "go to the door, turn left two blocks and then right." When I became angry I was finally allowed to use the phone to call for a

The shot for pain that I received in the emergency room did no good and when I returned to the motel I began to vomit. I finally got a plane at 9 a.m. the following morning and returned to Houston. By 4 p.m. October 3 the pain had returned only more severe and the vomiting had continued. At 6:15 that evening I was in the Methodist emergency room and by 9 p.m. was in surgery. The diagnosis from the in surance papers is as follows - "Acute surgical adominal lypis of adhesions, detorsion of the small bowel volvulus." I was extremely fortunate I was told, another few hours and I could have been in very serious trouble. I have never been treated this way in an emergency room before and I hope I never am again and will certainly never go back to Midland Memorial Hospital. Bob Horton Houston

...If a program

To The Editor:

Regarding your editorial (Sunday, Oct. 12) concerning a Section 8 Rental Subsidy Program, you say "... if such a program is approved and inau-gurated here." May we invite your attention to the fact that our association is operating the Midland County Rental Subsidy Program, and has been operating inside the city for several weeks now. The program has been in the county for one year.

The Section 8 Rental Subsidy Program is not a perfect program, anymore than any other federal program, and we thoroughly agree with many of the things Mayor Akins and Councilman Thomas have had to say about the program, and indeed about HUD itself. However, we feel it is inconsistent to tolerate the frustrations and bad portions of other federal programs, and "draw the line" at programs intended for the poor. Haven't we all been frustrated in dealing with OSHA, IRS, EPA, DOE, etc.? But we do it because they're the 'only show in town" and we need the results of dealing with them.

Our feeling is that the Section 8 Program needs to be replaced or at least overhauled, but until such time as this is done, let's don't abandon the poor people, who also happen to be powerless.

Incidentally, our present and recent city and county administrations have shown tremendous concern for the

Need a change

To The Editor:

On Tuesday the extremely long presidential election process comes to a nominal close, excluding the Electoral College process and the inevitable post-mortems by winners, losers and the news media.

Perhaps this would be an appropriate time to consider once again the possibility of changing the U.S. Constitution to provide that our president would be elected for a six-year term ... without possibility for re-elec-

This would allow our president to spend his efforts full time on the administrative branch of government. He could make decisions based solely on the good of the nation, rather than on the political expendiency of his decisions. He could spend more of his time in Washington working on the affairs of the nation, rather than months on the campaign trail, months that frequently seem to leave our government without fulltime leader-

We might even want to make similar provisions for election of our U.S. Senators and Representatives, electing them for six-year terms and limiting them to not more than two terms of service.

This might not solve many of our ills, but it might return some of our government to the people rather than continuing the present system, which tends to perpetuate profesional congressmen and politicians Regardless, please vote Tuesday. It's your government and it needs to hear from you!

Timing questioned

To The Editor:

Your recent editorial titled "The Golden Bulldog'' really upset me, both because of its timing and its content. Apparently the high standards of research demanded by former editor Bill Collyns and former owner James Allison have been drastically lowered. To present such a poorly-researched editorial less than a week before the election smacks of irresponsibility.

The facts are: A "Treasury Watchdog" award is given to all Senators and Representatives who score in the top 30 percent on the federal spending analysis. This analysis is kept by the National Taxpayers Union, and is broken down two different ways: as a percentage of spending bills voted for, and as a comparison with other members of Congress.

In the analysis published by NTU in April, Kent Hance scored at 78 percent against other members of the Congress with a dismal 55 percent of his votes against big spending. That a 55 percent score could rate a congressman so highly is a sad testament to the bankruptcy of the present Congress. Furthermore, any child in our public schools who scored only 55 percent on a test would (justifiably) fail.

In your editorial you presented Kent Hance's voting record as a percentage of votes, not as a percentage of the Congress' spending scores. I believe more effort should have been made to understand what was being presented so the editors could have represented it to the public without distorting it.

This is not a give-away. The people who need the roadwork done will pay for it. This will affect only about 50 counties across Texas. Amendment 7 is supported by Governor Clements, the Texas County Judges and Commissioners Association, the Texas Association of Soil and Water Conservation District Directors, and many other agriculture organizations, county commissioners-courts and newspapers.

I have attended the last few reserved seat concerts in the Chaparral center and have just two questions to ask.

To The Editor:

As election time draws near, I am wondering what percentage of the voters really understand what our elected officials can do to and with a proposition to amend our constitu-

I refer specifically to a recent amendment passed by the voters to authorize the legislature to tax farm land for its productive ability, rather than its true market value. Example: My wife recently inherited a small farm in Bastrop County, Texas, located in the Smithville Independent School District. Due to circumstances beyond our control we did not file for an agricultural exempt use; even though it was used specifically for farming. The school taxes on this property jumped from $67.44 in 1979 to $767.99 in 1980.

This is only one example in which the original intent of the proposition is not even recognizable. So for this reason, I would urge all voters to study the isssue thoroughly and at least try to learn something of the moral character of the candidates. Otherwise, you may be caught in a monstrous bureaucratic trap set by the people you helped elect.

To The Editor: Recently we have been bombarded with articles in the press about the sad financial state of our hospital. We read of hundreds of thousands of dollars in bad debts which have been "written off." Thousands of dollars more are in outstanding bad debts and uncollected hospital bills.

Thousands more were spent for a consulting firm (Tribrook) to study job titles to tell employees what their iobs are.

This same corporation supplied the hospital with two interim administrators at a cost of eighteen thousand dollars per month. That is more than many people in Midland make in a whole year.

To top all this off - the board has now decided to spend another eighteen thousand dollars with Tribrook to conduct a study to tell them what their job is. Included are the trustees, administrator, and his staff.

I am most disturbed and depressed when I think of the future.

The whole world is at unrest and our beautiful United States is fast heading downhill; yet so many Americans are still asking for the same leadership. NO humanitarian wants anything to do with nuclear weapons, but we're forced to produce them if we in the United States want to survive. And who STILL thinks that we can 'peacefully and diplomatically" sete our differences with Russia? POOF!

Thank God

To The Editor: Thank God we still have some men such as Arthur G. Sulliyan, whose letter last Sunday warmed my heart. Of late, it seems so-called men of God are truly ready to send our last boy children out to kill and be killed in the name of "peace and Christ and oil." Now, it's OK with me if these big brave men want to go out and kill but leave the children home and please don't do it in the name of Christ, for it is unlike my Lord and by heaven I don't believe He would appreciate the hypocrisy. Why, when God Himself is pure energy as well as power, love, light, etc., are Christians so afraid that our oil is running out? Christ's teachings were that we might have a more abundant life, and that we may be one as He and the Father are one, and when we realize that each of us is but an atom in the vast body of God we will have that oneness and the abundant life.

Obvious influence

To The Editor:

Why do Dr. James Dunn and Rev. Jimmy Allen rate an AP news story? It is simply because of their past and present executive positions with commissions of Southern Baptists. They are represented to the public, by the media, as spokesmen for Baptists. When Rev. Allen holds a news conference to denounce others, it is only newsworthy because of his executive position with a Baptist Convention. When Dr. Dunn speaks, it is only newsworthy because he is referred to as "Chief of the Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission and the newly elected director of the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs."

Dr. Dung and Rev. Allen have a perfect right to publicly support Carter, but for them to say their political activities are separate from their ministries is hypocritical. Their obvious purpose is to influence Southern Baptists to vote for Carter.

Dr. Dunn's remarks about a "christiap voting block" are ridiculous. Perhaps he did not learn from history how Southern Baptists, as a block, supported the 18th Amendment, voted against Al Smith because he was a Catholic, and were conned into voting for JFK because he was a Catholic (Baptists didn't want to be called bigots.) If called for a return to the values of our Judeo-Christian heritage, that is the foundation of Western Givilization, is a threat to separation of church and state, so be it. In view of Dr. Dunn's and Rev. Allen's political activities, on behalf of Southern Baptists, perhaps they should go back and read Luke 6: 42 and Matthew 7: 5.

POSITIVE THINKING 'Peace of mind' not your accomplishment

By NORMAN/VINCENT PEALE

I'm continually hearing from peo-ple who tell me they have no peace of mind and ask advice on what to do about it. I sympathize with them because in order to live effectively a person has to have an inner calm and quietness in the midst of the activity and difficulty of life.

How can you develop peace of mind? Well, let me give you a personal experience. You may not be interested in hearing about my personal struggles, but this experience may possibly suggest a method you can use on your own.

When I was twenty-seven years old I was called to a big/church in Syracuse. I was pretty young for so large a church — and L was uncomfortably conscious of that fact. Not only did the size of the congregation make me nervous; I was abashed by the very dimensions of the church building - a huge edifice with enormous windows on all sides.

To make matters worse, I knew my congregation included many of the faculty of Syracuse University. Every time.I preached I was painfully aware that out in front were outstanding scholars in advanced fields of learning. How could I, a mere youngster, hold the attention of such distinguished men?

Also among the members of my congregation, I knew, were those who-had expressed their doubts whether an inexperienced young man like me could hope to handle such a large parish successfully. Piously hoping for the best, they were sadly expect-ing the worst. And I found myself falling in with their expectations...I knew their misgivings were well founded...I was sure I was going to fail....My peace of mind hit bottom! To this situation I reacted by developing a perverse determination to succeed if only to show those people they were wrong. I now admit this to be anything but a noble objective for a preacher of the gospel! The church had a debt and more money was urgently needed. I began feverishly striving to build membership and attendance in order to increase revenues. At Sunday services from week to week there were quite a few empty seats. Each time I saw those empty seats I would resolve to work twice as hard to get more people to the church the next Sunday so all the seats would be filled.

Well, of course, anxiety and agita-tion took their toll. The strain of constantly worrying over the impression I was making wore me out. I got tense, jittery, discouraged. So I arranged to take a few days' vacation and headed for Columbus, Ohio, arents lived. On the train I tried to work on my sermon for the following Sunday, on the subject "The Secret of Power." But the harder I worked, the clearer it became that I wasn't getting anywhere ... which was only natural, because what did I know about the secret of power? Then I realized that my whole trouble was that I myself had no reserves of power. And suddenly I knew I had to pray about this. I felt so defeated, so overwhelmed by a sense of failure, that I found myself saying to the Lord, "All right, if I am going to fail, let's get it over with. Whatever may be your will, I'm ready to take it. J can't live like this anymore. Please show me what to do. I give myself to you." In other words, I surrendered to God. It was a complete self-giving of all my-problems, my fears - even my total self.

The answer was an experience 1 shall remember always. Suddenly, I became aware of a new and strange sense of inner quiet and peace. Then I began to feel happy. Then I felt power. I had been like a small boat lying high and dry on a beach impotent to move. But a great surge of the ocean had reached up to the boat, lifted it and floated it free.

From that day on I was able to go about my duties with confidence and a sense of peace. Conditions began to improve and problems were solved. In this experience I discovered a very important fact - peace of mind is not an achievement, it is a gift. The Bible expresses it this way: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.

True peace of mind is a derivative of the peace of God. The only sure way to have peace of mind is by surrendering to God's direction. Putting it an-other way - it is by letting go and letting God. Simply say, and be sure to mean what you say, "I am willing for God's will to be done. I am in his hands.

You will, of course, go on and do your best about everything. And you will find your best will be better, too, because you will have increased power to work with. Always remember the simple fact that real power. comes from a quiet center. Seneca said, "The mind is never right but when it is at peace within itself."

JOHN BIGGS:

The 19 years he has served as justice of the peace-almost two decades of service which have brought him many awards from his fellow justices and his fellow citizens-have failed to change the compassionate dedication John Biggs has for his job, whether it involves a coroner's inquest at the scene of tragic violence or a simple speeding ticket.

DURWARD WRIGHT:

If there was ever a blue-ribbon candidate for office, Durward Wright is one. His own background of business and fiscal management meshes perfectly with the traditional conservative polices of Midland County and his deep involvement with community work and youth programs complements the invaluable ex-perience gained through his 12 years in office.

Labor political machines work for Carter

By OWEN ULLMANN AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - They're not wild about their candidate. Yet, they're spending more than $10 million and have mobilized 140,000 volunteers to work like never, before to keep Jimmy Carter in the White House.

They are the political machines of the labor movement - among the most effective campaign organizations in presidential politics. And they are using computerized precision to sell President Carter to an estimated 35 million unionists and voting-age family members

Except for two big unions - the Teamsters are backing Ronald Reagan and the Machinists are - organized labor has united to mount the neutral biggest effort in its history on behalf of a presidential candidate, according to a score of union officials.

This campaign lacks the passion and devotion to a candidate such as John F. Kennedy generated in 1960, Hubert Humphrey in 1968, or even Edward M. Kennedy in this year's primaries. To much of the labor movement, Carter is what Kennedy branded him: a Republican in Democratic clothing.

But good political machines do not run just on emotion. They run on money, computers, discipline and smart strategy. On these measures, labor's drive in 1980 appears unsurpassed.

The strongest emotions in this campaign are negative, a hatred for Ronald Reagan and a fear that he would cut the labor movement down if he gets into the White House.

At least Carter believes the labor movement should exist, and he is a part-time supporter of its causes, union leaders reason.

"We're doing more for Carter and we're doing it better than ever before," said Rachelle Horowitz, the union's political director. "It's a very determined effort as opposed to wild enthusiasm.

"Our people are working enthusiastically, not because they've changed their feelings about Carter but because they're afraid of Reagan." Reagan is slashing Carter over unemployment to attract union members who normally vote Democratic. Labor's job is to keep Reagan from getting more than the one-third of union votes that Republicans traditionally get.

The hardest working unions include the auto work-

Teachers, a diehard Kennedy supporter in the pri-maries and among the last unions to join the Carter effort, is now running a predominantly anti-Reagan workers, teachers, seafarers and the building trades. Union political directors say their efforts are paying off and members are returning to the Democratic fold.

> Federal law lets unions tap general dues for partisan purposes as long as the activities are imited to members. And the money has been flowing for the past two months, perhaps $11 million or more, first on voter registration drives, more recently on selling Carter and congressional candidates, nearly all of them Democrats.

> Now, the unions are zeroing in on the large group of undecided voters. On Election Day, the unions will work to get out the Carter vote with phone calls and offers of transportation to the polls.

The AFL-CIO's political arm - COPE, the Committee on Political Education - is overseeing the operation with a computer holding names and addresses of nearly all 13.6 million federation members. A more sophisticated computer program for this election helps isolate key groups of voters who may bend to further persuasion

No one has an exact count, but based on rough estimates, some 50 million newsletters, union newspapers and magazines promoting Carter's re-election have descended on union households; phone banks consisting of more than 10,000 phones are in use; and between 140,000 and 150,000 union faithful are manning the phones or making door-to-door canvasses
