Reagan gets landslide mandate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Wilson Reagan won the White House on the crest of a conservative tide that swept Republicans to control of the Senate for the first time in 26 years and gave the president-elect a landslide mandate for his promises of a tougher America abroad and less government at home.

"I am not frightened by what lies ahead," Reagan told a victory celebration at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles, promising to "tap that great American spirit."

President Carter congratulated Reagan and pledged "our fullest support and cooperation in bringing about an orderly transition of government."

"I can't stand here tonight and tell you it doesn't hurt," Carter told supporters at a Washington hotel.

Today, Ray Jenkins, special assistant to Carter, said the president will devote his attention for the rest of his term on bringing home the 52 Americans held hostage by Iran.

Reagan and running mate George Bush led from the earliest returns on Tuesday and it quickly became clear that their triumph was a prelude to a sweeping shift in the American political balance of power.

The GOP ticket had courted Democrats — Jews, blue-collar workers and big city residents — and his strategy paid off, according to polling data that showed Reagan capturing a substantial share of those votes.

As the returns flowed in, the magnitude of Reagan's victory was clear in the electoral vote tally which gave the Republican nominee 483 to 49 for Carter with only one state — Arkansas with 6 electoral votes — to be decided. Reagan only needed 270 electoral votes to win.

The national turnout of Americans of voting age was low — only 52.9 percent — the lowest since the Truman-Dewey election of 1948.

With 98 percent of the vote counted, Reagan had 42.4 million votes for 51 percent and 483 electoral votes. Carter had 34.2 million votes for 41 percent and 49 electoral votes. Anderson had 5.4 million for 7 percent, but no electoral votes.

Republicans captured 10 Democratic Senate seats and were leading in the race for two others, assuring them at least a 51-49 majority and control for the first time since 1954. The GOP won at least 29 House seats and led for five others, but fell short of the 59-seat gain needed to wrest control of that body from the Democrats.

Among the last races to be decided — all in the GOP's favor — were in Wisconsin, where former Rep. Robert Kasten defeated veteran Sen. Gaylord Nelson; in Alaska, where Frank Murkowski defeated Clark Gruening for the seat held by Sen. Mike Gravel, who lost to Gruening in the Democratic primary; and in North Carolina where John P. East defeated Sen. Robert Morgan.

The Democrats, in contrast, were threatening only the seat held by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., whose 1964 presidential campaign was Reagan's first taste of national politics, but the lead in Goldwater's battle with Phoenix businessman Bill Schulz saw-sawed.

The Senate outcome will mean the shift in Senate committee chairmanships — with Charles Percy, Ill., taking over the Foreign Relations Committee; and these other new chairmen: Strom Thurmond, S.C., Judiciary; Bob Dole, Kan., Finance; Mark Hatfield, Ore., Appropriations; Jesse Helms, N.C., Agriculture; John G. Tower, Texas, Armed Services; Jake Garn, Utah, Banking; Bob Packwood, Ore., Commerce; James McClure, Idaho, Energy; and Alan K. Simpson, Wyo., Veterans Affairs.

A Reagan presidency, promising one of the sharpest ideological shifts of this century, thus would be aided by a more conservative Congress, even with the Democrats still in the majority.

Reagan wants to remove most government restraints on private industry as the surest way of solving the nation's energy problems. He says one of his principal goals is to "take

Local Republicans, Demos split six contested races

Although Ronald Reagan carried the Republican Party to huge election celebrations throughout the country with a sweeping victory over incumbent President Jimmy Carter, local Republicans and Democrats did some celebrating of their own, equally splitting six wins in contested races here.

Midland Democrats took their wins in the district judge seat and both county commissioner seats. Democrat Pat Baskin won the district judge seat of the 142nd district over Republican Jay "Timber" Floyd by a wide margin. Democrat Durward Wright took the precinct 1 seat in the commissioners race over Republican Jeff Barber by about a 2-to-1 margin. And Democrat C. Dwayne Davis beat out Republican Alexandra Morris for the precinct 3 seat in the commissioners race.

Local Republicans celebrated wins in the sheriff race, the justice of the peace race and the county constable race. Incumbent Republican Sheriff Dallas Smith defeated his Democratic challenger Joe Carr by a more than 3-to-1 margin. And Republican Charlie Sprayberry ousted 20-year incumbent John Biggs in the justice of the peace race for precinct 1 in the first contested race against Biggs after five terms. In the constable's race, Republican Tom McGinnis beat out Charlie Jones for the seat.

County joins landslide Reagan gets huge margin here

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Local Republican leaders were smiling like the Cheshire cat Tuesday night as the returns from Midland showed Ronald Reagan with a 19,000 vote margin over incumbent Democratic President Jimmy Carter.

After the results nationwide showed almost a surprising landslide victory for the Republican, the GOP leaders acknowledged gleefully they won't have Carter to kick around any more.

And an elated George W. Bush, son of vice presidential-elect George H.W. Bush, was in Houston this morning, reveling in the sweet taste of victory that only someone involved in a hard-fought campaign can know, while former Midland mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. was in Austin doing much the same thing. Angelo, former Midland mayor, has worked more than five years to get Reagan into the White House.

Midland County was one of the tops in the state in voting for Reagan. With 32,887 casting ballots in the nation's top race, 76.5 percent went for the Republican, 20.9 percent for Carter, 1.7 percent for Independent John Anderson and .7 percent for Libertarian Ed Clark.

"I FEEL VERY GOOD," said the younger Bush, an independent oilman based in Midland. "We're elated and honored. And we're very excited for Dad and the country."

Bush said he wasn't surprised about the victory, just the fact that "we won so big. The final tally is huge. Everyone here is surprised and pleased about it."

Nor was the Bush family prepared for Carter's concession early in the evening. "It was unfair to the West Coast voters. It was over so quickly, and we expected it to drag on all night," Bush remarked. As the states for Reagan were called by the television networks, "euphoria began to build. Then it became a mad house around here."

For George and Laura, who were to return to Midland this afternoon, the win will mean no change in their lives here. "It's just that when we go to visit Mom and Dad, we'll go to the vice presidential mansion. It's going to be an exciting administration."

Out of 44,073 registered voters in

ANGELO WASN'T OVERLY surprised at Reagan's landslide win. The candidate's pollsters had been predicting for several days that Reagan would win. "We thought we had lost our ability to predict, or the pollsters were being intellectually dishonest. We in the Texas campaign felt the margin of victory would be substantial."

As to the Senate changes, Angelo said the national Reagan staff also had predicted there would be numerous changes in that legislative body but "everyone was surprised at the magnitude of the wins."

Bob Monaghan, region V director of the Reagan-Bush campaign in Texas, said he anticipated Reagan would win by a bigger margin than what pollsters were predicting.

"I feel it was a groundroos swell," he commented this morning. "People (See MIDLAND JOINS, Page 2A)

Reagan easily captures Texas' electoral votes

DALLAS (AP) — As television thrillers go, it had all the drama and suspense of a Sportatorium wrestling match. Charlie's Angels with bras.

But Texas Republicans liked the ending: Ronald Reagan and George Bush by a near landslide.

The former California governor and his Houston running mate torpedoed President Carter's bid for reelection and captured Texas' 26 electoral votes in the process.

In sports parlance, it was a laugher.

Worse still, the end came with some Texans standing in line to vote and with hardly a handful of ballots counted.

NBC projected Reagan the presidential sweepstakes winner shortly after nightfall Tuesday and awarded him Texas as something of an afterthought.

Early today, the Reagan-Bush ticket commanded 55 percent of the vote, roughly a dozen percentage points ahead of Carter—Mondale.

For a state described variously as a tossup, as pivotal, as critical, the swift verdict was a bummer.

But not for the Republicans.

Said Gov. Bill Clements: "Nationally, all across this nation, Texas has become a model for how a campaign should be structured, how a campaign should be run."

The fact that the feisty Clements helped structure and run that Texas campaign could hardly be overlooked.

But former Gov. John Connally was no less ebullient. Said he:

"We are clearly moving toward a moderate-conservative philosophy in American politics... In the decade of the 1980s, Texas will be one of the strongest Republican states in the nation."

For Bush, an adopted Texan, it was a night of rejoicing, though tempered somewhat by reflective rhetoric.

"This is a night of celebration for some of us, disappointment for others," he told a cheering crowd of supporters at a Houston hotel.

"But tomorrow, in the great American tradition, those of us who celebrate tonight and those who have suffered disappointment will come together as one people to meet the larger challenge."

All but overlooked amid the presidential fanfare were several important Texas races and issues, ranging from congressional contests to constitutional changes.

From a national viewpoint, the most important involved House Majority Leader Jim Wright, who survived a well-financed challenge to win a 14th term in congress.

Wright won a surprisingly lopsided victory over millionaire Fort Worth businessman Jim Bradshaw, a popular, conservative Republican.

Three other house races involving incumbent congressmen were too close to call. They included Democrats Jim Mattox of Dallas and Bob Eckhardt of Houston and Republican Ron Paul of Lake Jackson.

Democrats Jim Nugent, an incumbent, and Buddy Temple won election to the powerful Texas Railroad Commission, neither with undue difficul-

Hance re-elected by wide margin

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Kent Hance started running for re-election to a second term in the U.S. House of Representatives from the 19th Congressional District with no opposition from his party nor even the local Republican organization. But by last summer, he was being challenged by Libertarian candidate J.D. Webster of Midland.

Hance did no campaigning nor advertising, yet he won handily in Midland County by a vote of 17,230 to Webster's 1,732.

And it was an even bigger margin when the results from the 17 counties in his district were in — 123,713 for Hance, 6,737 for Webster.

Late Tuesday, Webster acknowledged the vote totals, saying "I thought I was going to do better. But we found quite a bit of constituency out there."

The challenger said he was hoping there would be a large "Republican crossover" here that would help, but it didn't show up.

Kent Hance

However, he felt the electorate who voted for him were people who normally wouldn't have cast a ballot in that race. "These are new people for the potential equation in the future." He predicted the Libertarian Party will be seen again in the future in more local races. "People find it easier to vote for a Libertarian candidate in the lower races," he explained.

Hance, a former state senator from Lubbock, won his first term two years ago in a heated contest with Republican George W. Bush of Midland. It was the rural vote that gave Hance the edge he needed then to take the congressional seat.

From Hereford, the home of his mother-in-law, Hance said today he was "extremely pleased with the percentage of vote we received. I look forward to a new Congress; it will be a more conservative Congress."

Referring to his own conservative political philosophy, Hance said he believes he will have no trouble working with President-elect Ronald Reagan or the Republican-ruled Senate. "I've always been one that puts the issue first," he said.

His first project in the new session will be to get the Windfall Profits Tax repealed or get the royalty owners and independents exempted from the tax. Hance said he expects some relief of this type will pass Congress. "Reagan has indicated he will support it."

If the conservative trend continues into the elections two years from now, Hance said he believes he still will be reviewed on his record, not specifically his party.

"I would think people would judge me for the work I've done with the district and for staying in touch with the people. I've had more town hall meetings than any other congressman."

Hance will be returning to Washington next week for the final meetings of this Congress. But he's not expecting much to happen, Hance said, pointing to the number of lame duck congressmen.

"I don't think we'll be handling much of anything," he added. "I wish we'd just adjourn."

Democrats keep control of House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democrats are keeping control of the House but the nationwide voter mutiny against Jimmy Carter slashed sharply into their ranks and will likely insure a receptive forum for the conservative programs of Ronald Reagan.

Several of the House's most prominent — and liberal — Democrats were defeated Tuesday as the mood of the electorate swung sharply to the right, ousting Reagan a landslide victory and, in the Senate, ousting Democrats from the control they had held for the last quarter-century.

Republicans won at least 26 additional House seats, surprising even themselves, and were leading in eight of the 10 remaining races. A 34-seat gain would restore the party to the strength it held before the Watergate scandal ousted Richard Nixon from office and decimated the GOP's ranks.

Democrats hold a 276-159 margin in the outgoing House. With 10 races still too close to call, the lineup was 240 to 185.

The additions, coupled with the scope of Reagan's landslide, are sure to put the House on a more conservative course than has been the case. The House, with its membership up for election every two years, is necessarily sensitive to the mood of the electorate.

Even House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-

Mass., called the election results a "disaster for the Democrats" and said "the president collapsed in the last few days."

Carter has frequently been engaged in squabbles with the House as liberal Democrats and conservative Republicans joined forces against his proposals. His energy program, for example, was almost completely rewritten, as were several of his transportation deregulation proposals. Probably his most crushing defeat came when the House passed legislation forbidding him from imposing an oil import fee and then decisively crushed his veto of its prohibition.

But the remaining liberals, their eyes on the election results, are unlikely to muster much opposition to Reagan's plans for legislation such as a 30 percent tax cut and for decreased government interference in private enterprise.

"There is no way the next Congress is going to resemble the last," said Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, who headed up the $9 million Republican advertising drive to elect Republicans to the House. "Democratic leaders who managed to survive had the bejesus scared out of them."

More importantly, Republican challengers knocked off several prominent liberal Democrats who have helped shape the nation's course for years. Among the most notable Democratic losers were John Brademas of Indiana, who held the 3rd ranking leadership post among Democrats; Frank Thompson of New Jersey, a top spokesman for labor causes; Thomas Ashley of Ohio, influential in housing legislation; John Murphy of New York, a leader of American shipping interests; and Harold T. Johnson of California, head of the House Public Works Committee.

Another prominent Democrat — Al Ullman of Oregon, who chairs the powerful tax-writing Ways and Means Committee — was in a neck-and-neck race, trailing his Republican opponent by more than 2,300 votes with 88 percent of the precincts reporting.

And several veteran Democrats, including Richardson Preyer of South Carolina, Lester Wolff of New York, Sam Devine of Ohio, Jerome Amodeo of New York and Andrew Maguire of New Jersey, lost their seats.

In contrast, Republicans lost fewer than six incumbents. But one loss was that of Rep. Robert Bauman of Maryland, the parliamentary wizard who has long made life difficult for the Democratic majority.

Wright decisive victor; Eckhardt loses squeaker

By TERRY LEONARD
Associated Press Writer

House Majority Leader Jim Wright won a decisive victory Tuesday night to turn back the toughest election challenge of his political life, but the political fortunes of three other incumbents were undecided early Wednesday.

Wright, who needed a solid win to strengthen his leadership position if the House, collected 62 percent of the vote in whipping Republican Jim Bradshaw.

But U.S. Reps. Bob Eckhardt, Ron Paul and Jim Mattox still were engaged in see-saw battles early Wednesday for the lead in their bitter campaigns for Congress.

"I am grateful for this victory," said Wright. "It was not I who achieved it — it was the people."

Wright said he was not looking forward to the retirement of House Speaker Tip O'Neill, but he said the decisive win would bolster his chances for the post should O'Neill step down in two years.

"I am not looking forward to Tip's retirement... If he's still speaker 10 years from now and is a pall bearer at my funeral I'll be happy," said Wright.

The House majority leader also said he did not foresee any problems working with a Republican president.

"...I've worked with three already," said Wright.

"We may have a Republican administration, but we still have a Democratic Congress," he said.

The lead in the 8th District exchanged hands frequently Tuesday night between Eckhardt and Republican challenger Jack Fields. With 55 percent of the vote counted early Wednesday, Fields held a narrow 230-vote lead out more than 125,000 votes cast.

Paul, the Republican 22nd District incumbent, clung to a narrow 335-vote lead out of more than 178,000 votes in his see-saw struggle early Wednesday morning with Democrat and political newcomer Mike Andrews fight for the seat in the 22nd District.

With 90 percent of the vote counted Wednesday morning, Mattox held a slim 52 percent to 48 percent edge over Republican challenger Tom Pauken.

Former State Sen. Ralph Hall, a Democrat from Rockwall, beat Republican John Wright of Tyler in a tight race for the 4th District seat vacated by the retiring U.S. Rep. Ray Roberts.

Democratic incumbent Martin Frost won handily over Republican challenger Clay Smothers in the 24th District. Incumbent Democrat J.J. "Jake" Pickle of Austin won re-election.

107-year-old casts her first vote

FAIRMONT, W.V. (AP) — A 107-year-old woman who became an American citizen just four months ago says that voting in her first election put her in awe. And in the best Yankee tradition, she kept her vote secret.

Although Mrs. Marvich happily acknowledged the congratulations and kisses of those who turned out to watch, she refused to reveal which candidates got her first votes. "She didn't say," Mrs. Nicoletti said about her mother's choices. "She wouldn't say nothing."

Mary Marvich, who usually gets around with a walker, was carried by several men to the second-floor voting booth at Marion County Courthouse so she could cast her ballot Tuesday.

"I was just awed by the whole thing," said Mrs. Marvich, who came to the United States 91 years ago from what is now Yugoslavia.

Federal officials had denied her citizenship because she couldn't remember the name of the ship she came on. They said they had no way of knowing whether she entered the country legally.

Mrs. Marvich gave up fighting the authorities 60 years ago, but at her 107th birthday party this year she once again brought up her dream of citizenship. This time, with help from many corners, she won the fight. After taking the oath of citizenship in June, she said her last wish was to vote.

"Bad weather or not, I'm going to be there," she told well-wishers who gathered for her citizenship ceremony.

She kept her word. Her daughter, Betty Nicoletti, helped Mrs. Marvich mark the ballot.

"She was thrilled to death," said Mrs. Nicoletti. "Her hip was bothering her but she said she was going (to vote). She did a terrific job."

Midland joins Reagan landslide

who had never voted Republican-voted for Reagan. Some of my wife's relatives in Arkansas voted for a Republican governor.

"People wanted a change," Monaghan explained of Reagan's wide margin of victory over Carter. "They wanted to feel the country had a future; they wanted to be optimistic."

The 51-49 Republican lead in the Senate — making it the first time since Dwight Eisenhower's term in 1952 that the country has a Republican Senate — was a surprise for local Republicans.

TO HOPE FOR A LEAD in the Senate "was wishful thinking," Monaghan laughed this morning. "It was a surprise to us. We had only been hoping to get two or three liberal senators out of office. But I believe the coat-tail effect of Reagan has gone all the way down to the courthouse, not just the Senate."

The Republican Senate will make it easier for Reagan to push through some of his proposed policies, Monaghan surmised.

The change in the Senate is a "very important swing," said Bush. The vice president-elect "is excited about being in charge of the Senate and it means Reagan will have a body to work with him and to effect his policies. The Senate has powers that are extraordinary to the House."

However, Bush noted the election also changed a lot of seats in the House from liberal Democrats to more conservative legislators.

Bush feels the new Republican administration has a "chance to put the country back together again" and he believes Reagan can deal effectively with his people.

The outcome of the election — over and above the election of Reagan — is that the liberal Democrats have been taught a lesson, in Monaghan's opinion.

"To get a strong organization, they're going to have to change their thinking."

Four years ago, Monaghan wasn't smiling the day after the general election, he recalled. But this year, he said he was getting telephone calls from excited relatives even after midnight.

MIDLANDER HARRIS KERR, a member of the State Democratic Executive Committee and chairman of the Carter-Mondale ticket here, agreed with Monaghan's summary of the Democratic Party's future.

"There's an awful lot of work ahead for the Democratic Party," he said. "I think it was an anti-incumbent election. The message was 'you had better change your ways.'"

He remarked he was "astounded" by Reagan's margin throughout the country, but he feels the Carter people "did their job by turning out the vote."

The Republicans, he feels, "did a fine job of organizing. They're to be congratulated. But I'm pleased with the local Democratic winners we had."

Angelo and the Bushes are going through "emotional letdowns" after the high of winning. For George and Long lines such as these at Goddard Junior High School, Precinct 28, were common at several Midland voting locations Tuesday. Many voters reported that they had to wait as long as two hours at several precincts. (Staff Photo by Bruce Partain)

Laura Bush, the only event they will be looking forward to is the Inauguration. "We're primping for the Inauguration and that will be a lot of fun," said Bush.

Angelo said there is no doubt that he'll be at the Inauguration. After that, however, he intends to stay in Midland and work. Although the question of an appointment with the Reagan administration has been popping up recently, Angelo denied that he would take anything.

"I'M NOT INTERESTED in any appointment. I'll be glad to help from the standpoint of giving advice on what would benefit the people of Texas. But I couldn't imagine any appointment I would be interested in."

Carter only carried three precincts in Midland County, and all were in strong Democratic areas. At Precinct 1, located at the Public Safety Building, the vote was 433 for Carter, 122 for Reagan. The fifth voting box, located at Carver Cultural Center, was 635 for Carter, 60 for Reagan. And Precinct 10, which voted at the fire station on Golf Course and Edwards Streets, recorded 971 votes for Carter, 235 for Reagan.

The remaining precincts were heavily in favor of Reagan with the largest number of votes coming out of absentee, 5,775 for Reagan and 879 for Carter. For John Anderson, the vote was 586 while Ed Clark received 235 votes.

The Reagan administration will have a definite effect upon Midland, Angelo forecast.

While the Windfall Profits Tax is burning up the oilmen here, Angelo admitted that "it's pretty well set in concrete in a lot of ways. It won't be easy to get it out. But they can work to phase it out."

FEDERAL PROGRAMS will be attacked by Reagan, said Angelo, who focused on the Department of Housing and Urban Development. While mayor of the Tall City, he opposed applying for federal funds from HUD on the basis of their government strings.

"You won't see HUD telling cities how to do things. The relationship between the cities and federal government will change. You'll see the government geared to providing programs that are oriented more to local control and development."

Because Midland has taken a similar stand for years, Angelo said the city will be in the forefront of advocating that change.

Although the Tall City has had a strong economy while the rest of the country has been in the slumps, Angelo said the city will prosper even more when Reagan improves the rest of the economy.

In other state races, a majority of Midlanders pulled the Republican lever. For one of the seats on the Railroad Commission, Republican Hank Grover pulled out 17,547 votes in this county compared to 8,818 for Democratic challenger Buddy Temple.

In one of two contested Texas Supreme Court races, Democrat C.L. Ray of the Texarkana Court of Civil Appeals ousted Republican Will Garwood, a Clements appointee to the high court last year.

Democrat Jim Wallace, a judge on the Houston Court of Civil Appeals, defeated Austin attorney Jim Brady for the seat of retiring Justice Zollie Steakley.

Texas voters a resounding yes — 72 percent — to an amendment allowing banks to use automated teller machines away from the bank premises, the closest thing to branch banking ever allowed in the state.

Also approved were amendments to:

—Allow the governor to initiate removal proceedings against his appointees.

—Give the existing Courts of Civil Appeals review power over criminal cases.

—Allow married couples to set up individual property ownership.

—Allow sparsely populated counties to do private road work.

Fire causes heavy damage; Thefts of doors, wallet probed

A fire early Tuesday afternoon heavily damaged a Midland residence, according to fire department reports.

Firemen were called to a residence at 603 N. Madison St. about 2:20 p.m. and spent nearly two hours battling the blaze. Owner of the residence was not listed among fire department reports.

The fire caused heavy damage to the front two rooms of the home and some damage to the roof.

Cause of the blaze was not immediately known.

Midland police this morning were investigating thefts from the construction site of Skyline Terrace at 4101 and 4107 Angelina.

Taken in those thefts were a lead glass door valued at $600 and a six-panel glass door valued at $200.

Debra Henderson of 3909 Anetta Drive reported the theft of a wallet containing $400 in cash and a number of credit cards. She said the theft occurred between 4:45 p.m. Saturday and 12:30 p.m. Sunday.

Police were called to the Hideaway Lounge, 1205 Rankin Highway, shortly after 7 p.m. Tuesday in reference to a fight.

There they found two men yelling at each other, according to police reports. Jim Fields of Route 4 was bleeding from a cut over his left eye.

A second man was arrested at the scene for public intoxication, police

Warm weather forecast for area

The weather will be warming up a bit in the post-election days this week, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Days will be fair through Thursday with warm afternoons, expected to reach a high near 80 degrees Thursday.

Tuesday's high was 70 degrees, much cooler than the 84-degree record set in 1934 for the date. The low Tuesday morning was 41 degrees, much warmer than the 27 degree all-time-low for the date in Midland set in 1936.

Temperatures will drop to the mid-40s tonight, showing a slight warming trend in overnight temperatures.

Winds will be southerly tonight, 5-10 mph, increasing to 10-15 mph on Thursday.

Charlie Sprayberry

Tom McGinnis

Republican candidates take peace justice, constable posts

By DAVID CAMPBELL Staff Writer

Republican Charlie Sprayberry was declared the victor Tuesday over 20-year incumbent Democrat John Biggs in the race for justice of the peace, Precinct 1 Place 1. Meanwhile, Republican Tom McGinnis easily overtook Democrat Charlie Jones in the race for constable in Precinct 1.

For Sprayberry, the outcome remained uncertain until all but one of the 29 precincts had reported their results.

The winner took 15,581 votes while Biggs received 12,551 votes.

For a while, Sprayberry was leading the incumbent with a comfortable 1,000 vote margin until 9:15 p.m. when precincts 10 and 5 reported lopsided returns of 1,495 for Biggs with the Republican taking only 188 votes for the two boxes.

At that time, Biggs vaulted into the lead with a 200-vote margin, leaving only four boxes and the absentee vote.

But, the absentee vote went in favor of the Republican as he garnered 3,554 votes to Biggs' 2,345 and the lead never changed.

Sprayberry thanked his workers and the Midland voters for their confidence in him.

When questioned about the secret of his success, Sprayberry replied he wore holes in two pairs of boots, indicating the amount of time he spent working on the campaign.

Improvements in the office would come after some study of the JP's needs, he said. Included in the improvements would be a better flow of cases being handled by the office.

The Democrat incumbent was good-natured about the loss. Fishing will most likely be occupying some of his time, as well as getting out the golf bag and trying to pick up the game Biggs left some time ago.

Of the 28 precincts, Sprayberry took 19 boxes and the absentee ballots, leaving Biggs with nine precincts.

The constable race saw Republican Thomas McGinnis easily overtaking Democrat Charlie Jones.

McGinnis took 21 voting boxes and the absentee ballots with a total count of 15,513 votes to Jones 11,295 votes and seven precincts.

During the primaries, the Republican ran unopposed while Jones had to overcome Odell Smith to win the right to represent the Democrats on Tuesday's ballot.

Both office seekers were deputy constables when they decided to campaign for the head position.

The winner said early this morning that he was in a numb state about the election.

"It was a good race and I congratulated my opponent for running a good race."

He commented that his success came from his campaign.

But, he credited the secret of winning the constable's office to the Midland County voter.

Eight amendments favored

No. 2 fails here by small margin

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Midland voters apparently were in a giving mood Tuesday as they decided in favor of eight of the nine proposed constitutional amendments on the ballot.

The amendment which failed was No. 2, but it lost by only about 1,000 votes. Final tally was 11,909 against, 10,840 for.

If passed, the amendment would have allowed the state, or the defendant to appeal certain pretrial rulings of a trial court in a criminal case. When questioned about the amendment before the election, District Attorney Vern Martin commented he saw some good points, but also was hesitant about it.

The first proposed amendment to allow unmanned teller machines at locations throughout the city or county passed by the biggest margin of any amendment on the ballot — 19,598 for, 5,707 against. It also passed by an overwhelming margin in each of the 29 precincts.

The third amendment to set a single appraisal and a single board of equalization within each county for ad valorem tax purposes was approved by Midland voters by less than a 2,000 vote margin. The final count was 12,228 for, 10,648 against.

Before the election, the city tax assessor-collector and deputy county tax assessor-collector took opposite viewpoints on the proposed law. The city wanted it; the county turned thumbs down, saying it took away the citizen's right to have a voice in his taxes.

The fourth proposed amendment breezed through with a local vote of 16,102 for and 8,701 against. This calls for allowing each city to hold an election and decide if bingo games in that city will be legal. If so, money from the games must be used in Texas for charitable purposes.

Midlanders weren't quite sure if they wanted the governor to have enough power to switch funds from agency to agency, but were strongly in favor of letting him fire appointed heads.

Amendment No. 5 passed in Midland on a vote of 11,721 for to 11,551 against. It allows the governor to exercise fiscal control over the spending of appropriated funds, with the approval of a budget committee.

The sixth amendment, which passed 16,720 to 6,805, allows the governor to remove officers he appointed, but with the consent of the senate.

Although Midland County has a population near 90,000, the voters approved Amendment No. 7 to allow counties with less than 5,000 population to use road equipment for private road work and to charge a fee for it. The amendment passed, 16,654 to 6,804.

Midlanders also were in favor of changing the Courts of Civil Appeals and the way it is set up in state. The eighth proposed amendment passed, 15,119 to 9,915.

The last proposed amendment slid by with a wide margin, 14,616 to 9,392. It calls for allowing spouses to agree that income or property arising from separate property will remain as separate property. Before the election, one local judge had objected to the amendment, saying it already is provided for in the law.

Texans OK seven of nine amendments

DALLAS (AP) — Despite warnings of the perils of legalized gambling, Texans approved a constitutional amendment allowing perhaps the most water-downed game of chance there is — bingo.

The voters also approved six more of the nine proposed amendments. The new amendments will be the newest patches on Texas' 104-year-old constitution, which already sports 235 amendments.

With 73 percent of the vote counted, 63 percent of the voters favored local option bingo for charity.

Texans voted a resounding yes — 72 percent — to an amendment allowing banks to use automated teller machines away from the bank premises, the closest thing to branch banking ever allowed in the state.

Also approved were amendments to:

— Allow the governor to initiate removal proceedings against his appointees.

— Give the existing Courts of Civil Appeals review power over criminal cases.

— Allow married couples to set up individual property ownership.

— Allow sparsely populated counties to do private road work for a fee.

— Set up single property appraisal districts in counties.

Voters turned down attempts to give the governor more control of the budget, and to allow appeals of pretrial rulings before the trial begins.

The bingo amendment passed by a wide margin despite opposition from Baptists — who previously managed to kill a horse race referendum — and Attorney General Mark White.

White said the bingo is an invitation to organized crime.

Pro-bingo activist Lee Hayes of Houston is not scared.

"We're not afraid of the Mafia. We're not afraid of any of those undesirable elements. The charities will take control of the bingo operations and use the profits for good work," he said.

Hayes noted there is still much campaigning — at the local level — to be done before bingo becomes legal anywhere in the state.

The games have been going on for years in some parts of the state despite the long-standing ban on gambling. Enforcement of the law was sporadic.

"It was a thorn in law enforcement's side," said Hayes.

The banking amendment was promoted by the Convenience Banking Committee, a collection of various bank associations. They stressed the convenience of machines spread around town and shared by banks and other financial institutions.

The Texas Consumer Association opposed the amendment as anti-competitive, but mounted no campaign.

William Sinkin of San Antonio, a past president of the Independent Bankers of Texas, said Texans simply voted for convenience.

"It means better banking service for the consumers," he said late Tuesday.

The voters decided to add another layer of appeals in the criminal court system by routing cases from the district courts to new Courts of Appeals, now called the Courts of Civil Appeals.

Under the present setup, criminal cases go directly from the district courts to a lone Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin, an overburdened panel of nine judges who sift through thousands of cases.

Some opponents claimed the Court of Civil Appeals judges are not qualified to handle criminal matters. But the voters, by a 66 percent to 34 percent margin, said those judges can do some homework, if need be.

Texans turned down Amendment No. 2, which would allow immediate appeals of certain pretrial rulings. Proponents said it is ridiculous to go through a cumbersome trial only to have an appeals court throw a case out because of some early, pretrial ruling. Both the state and the defense would have had the appeals right.

The amendment failed by a 52 percent to 48 percent margin.

The electorate also split on two amendments concerning the powers of the governor. No. 5 would have granted tighter control over the budget. Fifty-six percent of the voters said no to the proposal.

'Tax revolt' movement out of steam in six states, carries Massachusetts

By MIKE SILVERMAN
Associated Press Writer

Massachusetts voters defied warnings of fiscal doom and gave themselves a whopping property tax cut, but in six other states the nation's tax revolt ran out of steam as voters rejected Proposition 13-style measures.

Taxes headed a list of hundreds of ballot measures decided by voters in 42 states Tuesday. In California and in Dade County, Fla., they refused to limit smoking in public; in Illinois, they slashed the size of the state House, and in South Dakota, they lifted an eight-year ban on the shooting of mourning doves.

Attempts to limit nuclear plants or waste sites met mixed receptions in a half-dozen states. Missouri voters decisively turned back a move to ban such plants in the absence of licensed radioactive waste dumps, while Montanans rejected a proposal that would have essentially halted uranium mining.

But Washington voters approved a ban on storing most out-of-state radioactive wastes at their Hanford dump. Final results were in doubt on nuclear issues in South Dakota, Oregon and Massachusetts.

In one of the most emotionally charged issues — seen as a backlash against Miami's 600,000 Cuban immigrants — Dade County voters by a 60 percent margin told officials to stop conducting business and printing county publications in Spanish as well as English.

"This shows people want to speak English in their own community," said Emmy Shafer, a Russian immigrant who led the drive for the measure.

Election-year success

Another election has come to an end in Midland, the state and the nation, proving once again that the form of government practiced in the United States is the most representative of all the people.

Locally, the 1980 election was an exciting one. For the most part the candidates handled themselves admirably, befitting the offices they were seeking. Campaigning was vigorous and clean. Local issues were addressed. Concerns were expressed. Prospective solutions were offered.

That is what makes the American political system so fascinating. It gets people involved, draws them into it even when they do not want to be involved. It puts the burden for success — or failure — squarely on the shoulders of all the people — the candidates and the voters.

Midland is fortunate to have a politically active citizenry. People in the Tall City take their politics seriously, as they should. They take an active role in local political organizations. They get involved in the voting process. Many offer themselves as candidates in the local political arena.

That's no small statement anymore. Getting involved in politics as a candidate — even at the local level — means relinquishing a degree of one's private life and opening that life to public scrutiny. It means long, hard campaigning for an office that oftentimes pays less than what one can make in the private sector.

And yet in Midland, in Texas and in the federal government this year literally thousands of individuals offered themselves for public service because they apparently believe they have a duty to serve their government, whether at the local, state or national level.

In Midland, nearly every office up for election was sought by candidates from at least the two major parties. Only a handful of offices featured a single candidate.

The same was true of statewide races. In most instances voters were offered a choice between two or more candidates. For the most part the campaigns addressed the issues in the races and were hard-fought and clean.

Midland residents, who enjoy a heritage of political activism, have every right to be proud of the turnout for Tuesday's election, as more than 32,000 voters cast ballots. That speaks well of Midland's citizens.

All the candidates who offered themselves for public office in this election deserve the sincere gratitude of all Midlanders. They have made our political system successful again.

Congratulations to all the winners. We look forward to their leadership in the years ahead.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 5, the 310th day of 1980. There are 56 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 5, 1940, President Franklin D. Roosevelt was elected to an unprecedented third term.

On this date:

In 1605, conspirator Guy Fawkes was seized as he was about to blow up the British House of Lords.

In 1872, Susan B. Anthony was fined $100 for voting before women had the right of suffrage.

In 1946, John F. Kennedy was first elected to public office as a Boston congressman at age 29.

And in 1968, Richard Nixon staged a political comeback when he defeated

Vice President Hubert Humphrey for the nation's highest office.

Five years ago, Morocco's King Hassan ordered some 350,000 of his countrymen to move into the Spanish Sahara and claim it.

One year ago, militants in Iran seized the British embassy in Tehran as the U.S. hostages in the American compound began their second day of captivity.

Today's birthdays: Singer-songwriter Paul Simon is 38 years old. Former cowboy star Roy Rogers is 68.

Thought for today: Conformity is the jailer of freedom and the enemy of growth — John F. Kennedy, U.S. president (1917-1963).

NICK THIMMISCH

Carter & Co voted nastiest campaigners of '80 election

WASHINGTON — When Jimmy Carter's civil service reform legislation was enacted two years ago, the White House ballyhooed it as the greatest boon to governmental efficiency since the invention of the paper clip.

Competent public servants were to be rewarded, not just with a hearty handshake and a scroll, but with cold cash in the form of bonuses. Whistleblowers would be given incentives, protection and public recognition for exposing waste and mismanagement of the taxpayers' money.

Unfortunately, this Mary Poppins scenario wasn't the way things worked out. In practice, the cash bonuses were handed out to entrenched senior bureaucrats with political clout — some of whom were actually involved in retaliation against lower-echelon whistleblowers. Virtue is still pretty much its own reward for the working stiffs in federal government.

The handling of the bonus idea has turned so sour, in fact, that disillusioned employees refer to the program as "Cash for Cronies."

My reporters Indy Badhwar and Gloria Danziger have reviewed a long list of the recipients of cash bonuses — some $3 million worth, ranging from $5,000 to $20,000. Here's the sorry rundown on just a few of these bureaucratic bonus babies:

— Marion Finkel, assistant director for new drug evaluation, Food and Drug Administration — $10,000 bonus. For years, she has been accused of harassing FDA scientists who were deemed "adversarial" to the interests of drug companies. A special panel of federal investigators concluded in 1977 that Finkel and FDA management had concealed the truth until it was quietly scuttled after critical hearings by the Senate Appropriations Committee in 1977.

— Erich von Marbod, deputy chief of the Defense Department's security assistance agency — $10,000. Von Marbod came under congressional fire in 1977 for providing defective intelligence information at a time when the Carter administration was selling sophisticated radar-equipped planes to the Shah of Iran. Von Marbod gave incorrect assurances that the Shah's security forces were capable of keeping the highly secret equipment from falling into Soviet hands — assurances which were completely, and correctly, contradicted by the CIA.

— Walter Kallaur, chief of the General Services Administration's Washington, D.C., regional office — $3,500. Kallaur was the subject of a Justice Department investigation in 1978 for his activities when he was on loan to the Carter-Mondale transition team. He and an associate cooked up a way to get around GSA regulations as a means of paying transition team members until they were officially on the government payroll. Kallaur admits to using a "shortcut" but denies there was a Justice Department investigation. He says Justice "looked at" the system he had devised to pay salary advances, and concluded there was nothing wrong.

— Edward Scott, former assistant secretary, Department of Transportation — $20,000. Scott's brainchild was a costly scheme to replace secretaries (the clerical kind, not department heads) with TV-sized computer terminals that would receive, store and dispense messages while busy executives were out to lunch or otherwise absent. Scott took the bonus and then left government service. — William S. Heffelfinger, chief of administration at the Energy Department — $2,500. Onetime Nixon hatchetman at DOT, Heffelfinger has come under congressional scrutiny on charges he falsified his job resume, lied to DOE investigators and shredded government documents. DOE's inspector general referred the charges in 1978 to the Justice Department, which recommended administrative action instead of prosecution. Justice's handling of the case is being investigated by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Bonus program pads bureaucrats' pockets

WASHINGTON — After an election, as wounds are bound and cuts salvaged, it's fair game to look over the campaign rhetoric, and decide whose was the dirtiest. It is inevitable — perhaps even necessary — that candidates use vigorous, stinging language to rouse voters to their cause, but there are bounds even for the most hard-pressed aspirants.

Carter & Co. by far won the 1980 award for exceeding the limits. Candidates always play on unhappy feelings, confusion and fear, but to fuel such fires so much that the cauldron boils over, well, tut, tut.

The most undistinguished example of this sort of excess in the recent proceedings was produced by Andy Young, the retired ex-champion of Big Mouth rhetoric. After Reagan proclaimed in Mississippi that he believed in "states' rights" and a belief "in people doing as much as they can at the private level," Andy really cut loose.

In a speech at Ohio State University, Young noted that Philadelphia, Miss., was where three civil rights workers had been murdered, and therefore, for Reagan to go there and talk states' rights "looks like a code word to me that it's going to be all right to kill niggers when he's president."

The White House disavowed Young's cheap shot, but it has already disavowed a whole string of Andy's verbal offenses. Tsk, tsk.

Then we have sweet Patricia Harris, secretary of Health and Human Resources, announcing early in the fray (on a federally funded "official" business trip) that when she hears Reagan speak, she "sees the specter of white sheets" — said sheets belonging to the Ku Klux Klan.

Harris bellowed that the Klan had endorsed Reagan, totally and conveniently ignoring the fact that Reagan had already repudiated this unwanted support (as the late Robert Kennedy repudiated Arab support in his 1964 Senate campaign), by stating that, "I have no tolerance with what the Klan represents and I want nothing to do with it."

Reagan, stung by Harris' malice, expressed his reaction three weeks later when he noted that Carter was "opening his campaign down in the city (Tusculum, Ala.) that gave birth (false) and is the parent body (true) of the Ku Klux Klan."

This was dumb by Reagan and so was Carter's consequent use of it in Martin Luther King's Ebenezer Baptist Church when he charged Reagan with injecting "stirrings of hate" into the campaign and piously proclaiming that "racism has no place in this country."

Carter, at that point, evidently thought "racism" and warmongering were the select tars to brush Reagan

ART BUCHWALD

Call your candidate while he's got a phone

WASHINGTON — I am writing this before the election results are in. And I'm going to say something very strange: Three cheers for everyone who ran for political office this year, from the presidential candidates down to those who tried to get elected to the local school boards!

While the majority of us sat on the sidelines booing, cheering and eating popcorn, a few brave men and women decided to put their reputations on the line, open up their private lives, humiliate themselves by begging for money and support, and compromise their ideals to serve the public in some political capacity.

Some did it for glory, some for power, and some because they believed they could change the system. Few, if any of them, whether they win or lose, will be the same people they were before they got into the race.

Selfridge is one of them. I stopped in to see him a few days ago. He looked 20 years older than when I had seen him before he decided to run for political office.

"Where's your wife?" I asked him. "I think she left. I haven't seen her around for days. She said she couldn't keep smiling anymore no matter how many votes it would get me. I guess politics isn't her bag."

Selfridge took a swig from a bottle of Pepto-Bismol.

"You have stomach trouble?" I asked.

"I've eaten every ethnic food known to man, not to mention attending four hotel banquets a day. I think it got to my stomach."

"It's been a rough campaign?" "You could say that. My opponent revealed my brother was in a mental hospital, my kid has been booked on pot charges, my sister once had an abortion, and my law partners were defending a murderer. He also said I was a crook, and there was some question whether my parents were married at the time I was born."

"What's that big lump on your head?" "Some television reporter tried to stick a microphone down my throat and hit me in the head instead. The media have been good to me. They called me up at all hours of the day and night wanting to know when I beat my wife."

"I guess you lose your privacy when you decide to run for public office."

"I believe you do. Everyone now knows how much money I have in the bank, how many outstanding debts I have and how much income tax I paid last year. My life is an open book."

As we were talking some men were carrying furniture out the door.

"What's going on?"

"My printer attached my furniture because I couldn't pay the bill. We ran out of money three weeks ago. I think the advertising agency is going to take the car this afternoon."

"Let me ask you a question, Selfridge. Why did you do it?"

"I've been asking myself the same question for months. All my friends talked me into it. They said the country needed me and it was my duty to serve the people."

"Do you think they were serious?"

"I don't know. I haven't heard from any of them since the polls showed I was going to lose."

"Well, I don't care about anybody else. I want you to know that I admire you for getting into the fray. There aren't many people in this country willing to put up with what you have to represent your fellow men. I'll call you after the election."

"You can't?"

"Why not?"

"The telephone company is taking the phone out. I owe them $2,000 and they want their money today."

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

The Vatican announced that it is reviewing its conviction of Galileo back in 1633. It's the same old story — no sooner is the criminal arrested, than some lenient judge lets him back out on the street.

Galileo, you'll recall, with his cheap Saturday night special telescope, committed a 17th century felony — and was booked by a Florence, Italy, SWAT team for claiming that the earth rotated around the sun.

"I'm innocent," cried Galileo at the police lineup. He was positively identified by two women who said they heard him singing the forbidden heretic ballad: "I Hate to See the Evening Sun Go Down."

Galileo said he had been burned before — which is what happens when you fly too close to the earth.

So, 347 years later, Galileo might be forgiven for his hare-brained flaunting of tradition. So, be of good faith, ladies. Priesthood is just around the corner.

Moment of silence asked in frightened Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — As police threw up roadblocks near the riverbank where an 11th child's body was found, religious leaders called for a moment of silence at noon today in this frightened city.

The Interfaith Association of Greater Atlanta asked everyone in the city to observe a moment of silence in respect for the 15 black children killed or missing. And the panel of about 25 clergymen set up a prayer rally, also at noon, at a park in the central business district.

The Rev. Joseph E. Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said members of the families of the dead and missing children would attend the prayer rally.

"We today are calling upon the whole city of Atlanta to express its concern for those who suffer directly from the tragedies," Lowery said.

On Tuesday, police questioned motorists at roadblocks near the wooded riverbank where a passerby Sunday found the body of 9-year-old Aaron Jackson Jr., who had been smothered in the latest in the series of deaths.

Officials refused to discuss what they may have learned from the roadblock, but Public Safety Commissioner Lee P. Brown said, "We're not in a position to make any arrests."

Police have said they don't know if any or all of the cases, which began 16 months ago, are related.

The discovery of Jackson's body sent new waves of fear through the black community, particularly among the parents of the four children still missing.

Beverly Belt, mother of 10-year-old Earl Lee Terrell, said she has been convinced since her son's disappearance July 30 that he will be found alive.

But she said the slaying of the Jackson boy, who lived less than two miles away, has shaken her confidence.

"I'm scared half to death right now," she said, trembling as she spoke. "I'm scared of what they might find with Earl."

Jury deadlocked in mother's trial

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors described Patricia Ann Frazier as a "calm, cool and collected killer." But 10 jurors reportedly could not believe she was sane when she cut out the heart of her 4-year-old daughter.

The jury reported itself deadlocked Tuesday, forcing a mistrial.

Miss Frazier, 25, who contended she was insane when she killed her daughter with a butcher knife Feb. 22, had no comment when state District Judge Keith Nelson declared the mistrial following 13 hours of jury deliberation.

There was no immediate word whether District Attorney Tim Eysen would seek a retrial on the murder charges. Miss Frazier's lawyer, Harold Lerew, assumes the office of county attorney on Jan. 1 and will be prohibited by law from defending her after that time.

Eysen said 10 of the 12 jurors reported they favored a verdict of innocent by reason of insanity. Lerew said he was "disappointed I didn't convince more of the jurors that we had met our burden of proof on the insanity defense."

Psychiatrists testifying for the defense said Miss Frazier was a paranoid schizophrenic, but state witnesses said she appeared normal the day of the slaying.

Miss Frazier had said she killed her child, Khunji Wilson, because she believed evil spirits had invaded the girl's body. She said she saw grass growing out of her daughter's chest and cut out the girl's heart because she was under orders from spirits "touching my body."

Twice Monday, jurors sent notes to Nelson saying they could not reach a decision. But the judge ordered them to continue their discussions until Tuesday evening.

In final arguments Monday, Assistant District Attorney Bob Brotherton called the killing the "ultimate and final act of child abuse." The defendant killed the child so she could be free of the responsibility of motherhood, he charged.

Lerew, trying to prove Miss Frazier was insane, told jurors that the defendant was wearing a blood-soaked bathrobe, her arms and legs were spattered with blood and she had made no attempt to clean the bedroom where the slaying occurred or to hide the butcher knife.

Kidnap convictions upheld

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The state Court of Appeal on Tuesday unanimously upheld the conviction and life terms of three young men in the ransom-kidnaping of a busload of Chowchilla school children four years ago.

But the court voted 2-1 to throw out findings of bodily harm which required life terms without possibility of parole for James Schoenfeld, 28, of Atherton, and Frederick Newhall Woods, 28, of Woodside.

Schoenfeld's younger brother, Richard, 25, also is serving a life term for his part in the kidnaping, but he already was eligible for parole because he was convicted under a youthful offender law that has since been repealed.

They were charged with kidnaping 26 children and their driver from the central California town of Chowchilla on July 15, 1976, then taking them to a quarry near Livermore and burying them alive in a moving van.

The victims dug their way out after 27 hours in captivity and 16 hours in the van.

Following arrest and extended pretrial proceedings, each defendant pleaded guilty to 27 separate counts of kidnaping for ransom and received concurrent sentences of life on each count. In three counts, the victims were found to have suffered bodily harm, which resulted in the older two being made ineligible for parole.

The trial judge held the total experience constituted "an ordeal of terror" and that nose bleeds, fainting and stomach aches substantiated the amount of suffering sustained. Based upon this, he found bodily harm was suffered by three of the victims.

Teen hijacker receives treatment, not jail term

SEATTLE (AP) — A retarded teen-ager who said he wanted "to start over again" will receive treatment instead of a 20-year prison term for commandeering a Northwest Airlines jet, a judge has ruled.

Glenn Kurt Tripp, 18, who acknowledged the attempted hijacking, was sentenced Tuesday by Judge Joseph Coleman in King County Superior Court on recommendations from probation officers and the county prosecutor's office.

Tripp, 17 at the time of the hijacking attempt, pleaded guilty Sept. 12 to one count of first-degree kidnaping and one count of first-degree extortion.

He has been described by experts as "educable-mentally retarded with the mind of a 9- to 12-year-old." Coleman agreed to defer a 20-year prison term for the youth provided that Tripp undergo treatment under close supervision at Resource Foundation, a residential and vocational-training facility for developmentally disabled young adults.

Tripp will remain under strict court supervision for at least five years, and the sentence will be re-considered if any problems develop in that time, the judge said.

A psychological evaluation showed Tripp could be dangerous to society as someone "open to exploitation" by others and "so suggestible," Coleman said.

"You are accountable for your own behavior," he told Tripp. "You must keep that in mind."

"I'm sorry for what I did," Tripp said. "I want to start over again."

Tripp, claiming he had a bomb in a briefcase, on July 11 commandeered a Northwest Boeing 727 jetliner bound for Portland, Ore., with 64 people aboard. He took over the plane before it could depart from Seattle-Tacoma International Airport.

Final arguments due today in Klan, Nazi trial

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Five months after opening their case, prosecutors were going to court today to wind up final arguments in the trial of six Ku Klux Klansmen and American Nazis charged with murder in the deaths of five communist sympathizers.

Superior Court Judge James M. Long was to begin his charge to the jury of six men and six women when the last of three prosecutors concluded his summation.

In his arguments Tuesday, prosecutor Jim Coman rejected the defense claim of self-defense. The charges stemmed from the shooting deaths of five demonstrators as violence erupted at a Communist Workers Party "Death to the Klan" rally Nov. 3, 1979.

Republicans will offer payments

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Republicans said Monday they will pay $1,000 to anyone who provides information resulting in the conviction of anyone for election fraud in Tuesday's election.

"It's time to take strong measures to clean up Texas elections," said John Clark, San Antonio, state GOP ballot security chairman, "so honest Texans won't have to wonder if the official results really reflect the will of those who voted. We have been informed of numerous errors on voter registration rolls, such as duplicate registrations, current registrations for people who have not lived in the county for years or are deceased, and names of persons who are not legally eligible to vote."

Clark held news conferences Monday in Corpus Christi, Brownsville, Laredo and Austin with Ernest Angelo, campaign manager for the Texas Reagan-Bush campaign.

Clark said a footlocker filled with completed absentee voter applications had been found abandoned in a San Antonio shopping center. He said absentee ballots with insufficient postage had been found stored in post offices in Parker County.

Clark said the postal service in Washington had promised that all absentee ballots would be delivered, even with insufficient postage.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle said Monday he will have a legal staff on duty election day to answer questions from voters or election officials.

"We'll have several lawyers on hand to answer questions and to clear up any misconceptions about voting procedures," Slagle said. "Anyone who believes their right to vote has been compromised can call our offices, collect, at 512 478-8746 or 478-8747 and we'll be glad to answer any of their questions."

NEWSPAPER BIBLE

O Lord Jesus, come!

Keep your eyes open for spiritual danger; stand true to the Lord; act like men; be strong;

And whatever you do, do it with kindness and love.

Do you remember Stephanas and his family? They were the first to become Christians in Greece and they are spending their lives helping and serving Christians everywhere.

Please follow their instructions and do everything you can to help them as well as all others like them who work hard at your side with such real devotion.

I am so glad that Stephanas, Fortunatus, and Achaicus have arrived here for a visit. They have been making up for the help you aren't here to give me.

They have cheered me greatly and have been a wonderful encouragement to me, as I am sure they were to you, too. I hope you properly appreciate the work of such men as these.

The churches here in Asia send you their loving greetings. Aquila and Priscilla send you their love and so do all the others who meet in their home for their church services.

All the friends here have asked me to say "hello" to you for them. And give each other a loving handshake when you meet.

I will write these final words of this letter with my own hand:

If anyone does not love the Lord, that person is cursed. Lord Jesus, come!

May the love and favor of the Lord Jesus Christ rest upon you.

My love to all of you, for we all belong to Christ Jesus.

I Corinthians 16:13-24

U. S. won't reply through media

By The Associated Press

The United States rejected Iran's demand for a speedy response via the media to its terms for release of the 52 American hostages and sought clarification of the conditions set by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and the Majlis, Iran's parliament.

"We are not negotiating through the newspapers," State Department spokesman John Trattner said Tuesday after Algeria's ambassador in Washington delivered Iran's request that the U.S. government "speedily announce" its reply to the Iranian Parliament's conditions for the hostages' release and "notify the peoples of the world through the mass media of this matter."

Trattner said the United States was seeking clarification of the terms and gave no indication when there would be a formal U.S. response to them.

"We will move forward expeditiously," he said, "but we will do it deliberately and with care."

President Carter sent a message to Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai through the Swiss ambassador in Tehran Monday, the day after the Majlis vote, but Rajai said it was a "statement concerning some generalities which did not address the issue of our conditions."

He said if the United States did not accept the conditions, "we will firmly stand by our position."

An official in Rajai's public relations office said Ronald Reagan's election will have no effect on Iran's position on the hostages.

"Iran's stand on the question is clear," he told The Associated Press in Beirut by telephone. "It is up to the United States to accept or reject. It doesn't make any difference to us who the president is."

The terms set by Khomeini, the leader of Iran's revolutionary regime, and the Majlis are a pledge from the United States not to interfere in Iranian affairs, cancellation of all American lawsuits and other legal claims against Iran, release the billions of dollars in Iranian assets frozen in U.S. banks and the return to Iran of the assets of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and his closes relatives.

The public is invited to attend this free concert.

Today was the hostages' 368th day in captivity, the second day of the second year.

Rajai spoke Tuesday to the thousands who thronged the grounds of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran for a demonstration celebrating the first anniversary of seizure of the embassy and its staff by young Islamic militants.

The prime told the crowd that regardless of the outcome of the crisis, the United States will remain Iran's No. 1 enemy.

By SUE FAHLGREN
Staff Writer

Although most of the area counties followed the Texas trend in voting for Ronald Reagan for president, they also endorsed Democratic candidates in their local races.

Local Republicans happy

But three Democrats win here

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Republicans were elated in Midland County on Tuesday night. "I'm as happy I don't know what to do about it," said Grand Old Party supporter J.C. Barnes Jr.

"We're all going to go and dance in the street after awhile," jested a delighted Barbara Culver, judge of the 318th State District Court and a staunch GOP'er.

Each were caught up in the political jubilation at the jam-packed Republican Headquarters in the downtown Midland Center early on the night of general election.

Like other Grand Old Party loyalists, the judge and Barnes were overwhelmed with the Ronald Reagan victory over President Jimmy Carter.

BUT THE REPUBLICANS didn't win all, despite the dramatic effect of the Reagan landslide victory. "We say that (a Republican landslide), but at the local level, Democratic candidates did very well," said Harris Kerr, a Democratic Party leader. "Our local Democratic candidates did very well."

Three won. Three lost. Pat Baskin, 53, the frontrunner on the Democratic Party ticket in Midland, won the 142nd State District judgeship by a 2-to-1 margin over Republican Jay H. "Timber" Floyd, 37. The vote was 21,072 to 9,883.

Durward Wright, 48, the independent Democratic Party candidate for Commissioner of Precinct 1, won re-election in handily undoing challenger Jeff Barber, 55. Wright, who first was elected to the $19,500-a-year post in 1968, pulled in 4,583 votes over Barber's 2,613.

C. DeWayne Davis, 60, a retired high school government teacher, carried 2,710 votes to wrestle the commissionership of Precinct 3 from Republican challenger Alexandra Morris, 46. She attracted 1,686 votes.

THREE OTHER DEMOCRATS lost, and these defeats at the polls put a gloom over the already dismal Democratic Party Headquarters which, unlike the GOP center, was noticeable without revelry, without a crowd without joy.

Only a smattering of people, including a rejected and dejected Joe W. Carr, the party's candidate for sheriff, were there. They reluctantly and sorely accepted President Carter's defeat.

Carr, 41, lost to Republican Sheriff Dallas Smith, 38, by a hefty 21,823 to 9,324 votes.

Peace Justice John Biggs, who is into his 70s, lost to GOP newcomers Charlie Sprayberry by a relatively narrow 18,481 to 14,748 votes.

And Charlie Jones's effort to be

constable was turned back by Republican Tom McGinnis, who defeated Jones by 16,298 to 11,613 votes. Both are deputy constables who were seeking to succeed the late Constable Jack Merritt, who died in office at the age 76 last summer.

BASKIN, WHO WILL succeed retiring Judge Perry D. Pickett, Tuesday night said he was "very grateful" to the voters who gave him the victory and whisked him into the $50,000-a-year judgeship.

"I'm mostly am thinking of my family and friends, who had organized and got involved" in the campaign, he said in victory. More than 700 Midland families worked in his campaign or contributed to its operation, he said.

Baskin will succeed Pickett, 64, who has held the judgeship since 1954, when then Texas Gov. Allan Shivers appointed him to the post.

"He (Pickett) contacted me to congratulate me," Baskin said in a telephone interview from Theatre Midland, where he was throwing what turned out to be a victory celebration.

Pickett's congratulations may have been offset by piercing barbs from Bill Shaner, the chairman of the county's Republican Party.

Shaner was disappointed that his candidate, Floyd, had lost his bid for the judgeship for the second time in four years, and seemed somewhat annoyed that Baskin had won in his initial try for the job.

"IT LOOKS AS though we still have a Democrat-controlled district court judiciary in Midland County," surmised Shaner who, like Baskin, is an occasional amateur dramatist at Theatre Midland. "I hope that he will do his best to keep politics out of the 142nd (district courtroom)."

Floyd, who had put together a party at the Midland Country Club for his campaigners, briefly dropped by the Midland County courthouse to check the votes and greeted fellow GOP'ers at Midland Center.

Floyd was felled in a 1976 attempt to wrest the judgeship from Pickett. He lost 14,747 to 16,705.

Another two-time loser was Barber. He lost to Wright in a race for the commissionership in 1972. That year, Barber won only two of seven voting boxes to compile 2,717 votes against Wright's 3,006. He outpolled Wright in absentee votes.

"I was hoping he (Wright) would win it (the absentee box), and I would win the election," Barber, who seemed somewhat subdued even before all votes were in, said.

Wright interpreted his victory as a confirmation that he "had delivered what they (voters) expected. I represented them fairly."

"I AM EXCITED about the dynamic growth of Midland County, and I'm happy to be a part of the continued growth of Midland County," the commissioner said.

Another candidate who will be a political part of Midland County's surging growth is Davis, who stayed at his rural home rather than drive downtown to celebrate his win over Ms. Morris.

"We're just elated and grateful and very humble about the whole thing," Davis said. "I'm particularly pleased about the minority turnout here and the (turnout) of the people in Midkiff."

Davis said he will work to fairly and justly represent the people in his precinct and will work with the political subdivisions.

His opponent wished him God-speed.

"I want to congratulate Mr. Davis on the race that he won," said Ms. Morris, "and wish him a constructive and productive four years."

Incumbent Dallas Smith nails down another term as Midland's sheriff

By KAY CRITES

When the first box came in, it seemed as if challenger Joe Carr might pull off an upset for the Midland County Sheriff's slot. But as more and more results flooded into the Midland County Clerk's office, it became clear that it was not to be.

Carr lost to incumbent Dallas Smith with a preliminary final tally of 9,334 to 21,823. Carr carried four boxes out of 29, which includes absentee, and tied Smith in another precinct. But those four victories were overwhelmed by precincts 8, 13, 14, 15, 19, 21, 26 and 28—all of which scored more than 1,000 votes for Smith. Smith also gained a resounding lead in absentee ballots, with 5,130 to Carr's 1,326.

"What can you say?" said Carr after the last box had been counted.

"He beat me. "We ran a good, clean race. We eliminated a lot of the name-calling and mud-slinging and he beat me and that's it."

Carr also thanked all who voted for him and for those who worked on his campaign.

As for the victor, entitled to another four years in office, Smith said, "I'm very grateful."

"What makes you feel good is that I feel this is an indication of the general public's support for the concepts, programs and ideas we have implemented. I think it's an approval of what we have been doing," he remarked while waiting for the final official tally to come out of the county clerk's office.

"I felt very pleased in the campaign effort with the financial support and the volunteer help and the ladies who helped with the mail-outs and the group that helped put up yard signs. The efforts went smoothly and were a little more enjoyable and a little more relaxed, perhaps, than four years ago.

"And then don't forget the most important ingredient is where you have a family with a wife who understands the work and late hours and time it takes to organize these efforts," Smith remarked.

Smith also praised the work of his campaign manager, Bill Mathis.

"He's a very successful man in his efforts in that he is an excellent idea man and does a good job of proposing solutions to potential problems that might develop," Smith said.

Smith emphasized that Mathis' efforts were also volunteered.

"Of course, there's no end to the number of people involved in these efforts," Smith added.

As for his opponent, Smith said, "I certainly wish Joe Carr and his family well in their future endeavors."

Craddick, Martin, Rendall, Shuffield win unopposed contests in Midland

Not every local race in Midland's general election was a down-to-the-wire heated contest. Several office seekers were unchallenged in their bids. And while they were assured of winning, not one received unanimous approval by the 32,890 voters who cast their ballots.

Tom Craddick, a Republican who has served in the State Legislature since 1968, won his bid for re-election from the 88th District with 22,946 votes.

His strongest support came from heavy Republican precincts, such as 7, 13, 9, 15, 21 and 28. Precinct 5, which votes at Carver Cultural Center, only reported 83 votes for Craddick out of 722 cast Tuesday. County Clerk Roselle Cherry said that precinct's votes would be checked again today for any possible errors.

Vern Martin, a Republican, kept his seat for a second four-year term as district attorney for the 142nd district. Of the local uncontested races, he garnered the least amount of votes—18,968. His few votes also came in Precinct 5, in which 58 voters out of 722 pulled the lever for Martin.

Robert Rendall beat out a Republican opponent in the primary to run unchallenged for the job of county attorney and take it with 20,639 votes. The vote only backs up the action last week of Midland County Commissioners who appointed Rendall to replace the current county attorney who resigned. Until his swearing-in Monday, Rendall had been an assistant county attorney.

Frances Shuffield was given approval by the voters to take over the job of county tax assessor-collector from Elmo Lineberger by grabbing the biggest share of voters among the uncontested races—23,941.

Running on the Republican ticket, she is a deputy assessor in the county tax office and has worked there 14 years.

has served in the State Legislature since 1968, won his bid for re-election from the 88th District with 22,946 votes.

His strongest support came from heavy Republican precincts, such as 7, 13, 9, 15, 21 and 28. Precinct 5, which votes at Carver Cultural Center, only reported 83 votes for Craddick out of 722 cast Tuesday. County Clerk Roselle Cherry said that precinct's votes would be checked again today for any possible errors.

Vern Martin, a Republican, kept his seat for a second four-year term as district attorney for the 142nd district. Of the local uncontested races, he garnered the least amount of votes—18,968. His few votes also came in Precinct 5, in which 58 voters out of 722 pulled the lever for Martin.

Running on the Republican ticket, she is a deputy assessor in the county tax office and has worked there 14 years.

Reagan pledged during his campaign that one of his first acts as president would be to sign an executive order placing a freeze on federal hiring.

One of president-elect's top aides said Tuesday that another of Reagan's first acts after taking office would be to send Congress his plan for a 30 percent cut in income tax rates to be phased in over three years.

"There has never been a more humbling moment in my life," Reagan told cheering supporters. "Even if it had been the cliffhanger that all of us I think were expecting, it would have been the same way."

It never was a cliffhanger. It was clear from the earliest returns on Tuesday that Reagan was on his way to a major victory. He carried every one of the big battleground states.

One after another they fell in his column: Michigan, Ohio, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Illinois and, finally, California and Massachusetts.

Reagan shattered Carter's hold on his native South Texas, Florida, Virginia, Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Kentucky all went for the Republican nominee. Four years ago, Carter carried every southern state except Virginia.

An Associated Press-NBC News poll of voters in 10 key states showed that Reagan received the votes of six of seven voters who cited firmness and decisiveness as important characteristics in their choice of a president.

The same poll showed Carter received only about half the normally land 10 years ago. Sturgill managed a motel in Ashland for many years until he went to work for a coke company. He was a member of the Nazarene Church and had been attending Travis Baptist Church while he lived in Midland.

Survivors include two nieces, Lonnie Taylor of Midland and Mrs. Jack Young of Stanton; five nephews, G.B. Sturgill and W.A. Sturgill, both of San Angelo, C.A. Sturgill of Hulsache, Delmer Ham of Lenorah and Dennis Sturgill of Tampa, Fla.; and 37 great-nieces and nephews.

C.A. McKinney

Services for C.A. McKinney, 79, of rural Midland were to be today at 2 p.m. in the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with burial in Resthaven Memorial Park.

McKinney died Tuesday in a Midland hospital.

Palbearers were to be his grandsons.

Democratic Jewish vote while Reagan captured about one-third and independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson received the balance.

Among blue collar voters, another traditionally Democratic bloc avidly courted by Reagan, the Republican nominee ran ahead of Carter 48 percent to 45 percent.

This was Reagan's third try for the White House and had he lost at age 69, it would have been his last.

In triumph, he looked ahead: "Together, we are going to do what has to be done. We're going to put America back to work again."

"You know, I aim to try and tap that great American spirit that opened up this completely undeveloped continent from coast to coast and made it a great nation, survived several wars, survived the Great Depression, and we'll survive the problems we face right now."

Throughout his campaign, Reagan echoed the assessment he gave the Republican Convention in his speech accepting the presidential nomination:

"We face a disintegrating economy, a weakened defense and an energy policy based on a sharing of scarcity."

In that same speech, Reagan said, "I believe it is clear our federal government is overgrown and overweight. Indeed, it is time for our government to go on a diet."

An actor-turned-politician, a New Deal Democrat-turned-conservative Republican, Reagan was elected 40th President of the United States after a long campaign in which he flayed Carter as a failed president who had weakened the nation militarily and had mismanaged the economy.

Iran ignores Hussein's peace offer

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iran ignored Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's latest peace offer and flew bombing missions today over two villages in central and northern Iraq, wounding three civilians, the Baghdad military command said.

The command also said Iraqi warplanes scored direct hits today on the big military base in Iran's northwestern city of Mahabad, set ablaze an oil pipeline in the northernmost sector of the battlefield near Qasr-e-Shirin, where it "killed or wounded an enemy force estimated at 100 men," and destroyed the microwave telecommunications station in Abadan, the last Iranian stronghold on the disputed Shatt al-Arab estuary.

On Tuesday, Hussein offered Iran peace if it recognized Iraq's right to absolute control of the Shatt al-Arab but threatened to make further demands if the 45-day-old war continued.

Hussein, in a speech to the National Assembly, said Iraq would withdraw its army from Iranian territory "as from tomorrow" in exchange for "a full recognition of its rights" in the 130-mile estuary that is Iraq's only water route to the Persian Gulf.

But if Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the leader of Iran's revolutionary regime, chooses to carry on the war, Hussein continued, "we are ready to fight until eternity, and he will have to realize that our pre-war demands will multiply as long as the war goes on.... War always produces additional rights for the conqueror."

Physicians become ASC members

Two local physicians recently became fellows of the American College of Surgeons when the ACS held its annual convocation ceremonies recently in Atlanta, Ga.

Drs. Nalin H. Tolia of Odessa and Nipank N. Shroff of Midland, according to the ACS, have earned the right to use the designation "FACS" (Fellow, American College of Surgeons) after their name, indicating they have fulfilled comprehensive requirements of acceptable medical education and advanced training in general surgery or one of the other 10 surgical specialties recognized by the college, and have given evidence of ethical practice and good character.

The total group included 1,556 initiates from around the world; 1,425 of those surgeons were from the United States and Canada and 131 were from other nations.

He asserted that the Iraqi armed forces have plenty of weapons from "friends who are able to supply it with arms and spare parts," an apparent reference to the Soviet Union and to Iran's inability to get replacements from the United States for its American-made war machine.

Since Iraqi forces invaded oil-rich Khuzistan Province in southwest Iraq on Sept. 22, they have occupied a sizable stretch of territory along a 300-mile front, including Khorramshahr, Iran's chief port of entry on the Shatt al-Arab. They have cut off Abadan, 10 miles southeast of Khorramshahr, and are keeping Ahwaz, the provincial capital, and Dezful, the military headquarters for the province, under constant artillery attack.

Iraq had full control of the Shatt al-Arab under a 1937 treaty negotiated by the British. It ceded the eastern half in 1975 to Iran in exchange for the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's agreement to stop supporting a Kurdish rebellion in northern Iraq. Hussein when he went to war six weeks ago abrogated the 1975 treaty, charging that Khomeini's incitement of the Shiite Moslem majority in Iraq to overthrow the Sunni Moslem government in Baghdad violated Iran's pledge in the treaty not to interfere in Iraqi affairs.

Iraqi spokesmen after the start of the invasion also demanded that Iran return to the United Arab Emirates the three small islands at the mouth of the Persian Gulf which the shah seized in 1972 to give Iran control of the shipping lanes in and out of the gulf.

Reporting from the battle lines, Pars, the official Iranian news agency, said Iraqi shelling of Abadan continued through the night and there was fighting at various points along the Bahmanshjr River, on the east side of the city. But Iranian forces "prevented the aggressive enemy's progress toward the city," Pars said.

Some Tucson residents to cast ballots today

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — People who did not get to vote because polling places ran out of ballots were being given another chance today in metropolitan Tucson.

The extended voting could affect at least 31 of Pima County's 221 precincts, said elections clerk Maria Duarte.

The extension also could change the outcome of some local races, according to county Republican Party Chairman Emmett McLoughlin.

It was not determined immediately how many voters were affected.

More than 80 percent of the voters registered showed up Tuesday to cast their ballots in local and state races, including Sen. Barry Goldwater's close battle with Democrat William Schulz.

County election officials blamed the huge voter turnout for the shortfall in ballots. Those who did get to vote gave Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., a 10th full term in the House of Representatives from the 2nd District.

With 80 percent of the precincts counted, Udall had 102,982 votes, or 58 percent, to 69,855, or 39 percent, for Republican businessman Richard H. HFF.

Ortho must defend itself in pill trial

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court cleared the way today for a trial in which a drug firm must defend itself for producing birth control pills that allegedly caused a Mingo Junction, Ohio, woman's stroke.

The justices refused to hear arguments by the Ortho Pharmaceutical Corp. aimed at blocking a lawsuit filed by Sondra McKenna and her husband, James.

Their products liability suit charges that Ortho was negligent in manufacturing and selling Ortho-Novum when the company knew, or should have known, that the oral contraceptive "posed a risk of serious harm to its users."

Mrs. McKenna began using Ortho-Novum in early 1965, following the birth of her second child. She began experiencing health problems in 1967, and stopped taking the pill in 1969.

In early 1972, Mrs. McKenna suffered a catastrophic cerebrovascular stroke that left her severely and permanently paralyzed. Her injuries included permanent paralysis of both legs and arms, facial paralysis, double vision, speech impairment and hearing loss.

The case was assigned to a federal court because Ortho is not based in Ohio. Even when state laws such as those covering products liability are at issue, a lawsuit can be handled by a federal court if the parties are from different states — what the courts call a "diversity jurisdiction" case.

A federal trial judge dismissed the 1974 lawsuit after ruling that, under Ohio law, it had been filed too late.

Ohio's statute of limitations in product liability cases is two years. The trial judge ruled that the time limit started when Mrs. McKenna gave up using the pills in 1969 — a sign that she suspected some link between the pills and her health.

The 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, by a 2-1 vote last March 18, reinstated the lawsuit.

It ruled that even though Ohio law governs the case the Ohio Supremacy

Court, if given the chance, would adopt a new rule not starting the time limit until Mrs. McKenna knew or should have discovered that her injuries were caused by the pills.

In dissent, Judge A. Leon Higginbotham wrote, "Although I am as moved as my colleagues are by the alleged tragic effects from Mrs. McKenna's ingestion of (Ortho's) birth control pills... I see no sign that Ohio is withdrawing from its views on the medical malpractice doctrines relevant to this case."

Higginbotham said the trial judge's ruling was being reversed "not because he was wrong but because the relevant Ohio law is unenlightened."

In seeking Supreme Court review, Ortho lawyers argued that the 3rd Circuit court relied too heavily on recent rulings by Ohio intermediate appellate courts and thus ignored earlier precedents set by the Ohio Supreme Court.

The appeal urged the justices "to resolve the conflict between the 3rd and other circuits over the proper regard to be paid to state intermediate appellate decisions."

DEAR ABBY

Reality key to healthy sexuality

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a counselor for "problem" teen-agers who live in our group homes temporarily for a variety of reasons.

I'm responding to that MOM IN PUYALLUP, WASH., who wrote, "When I find a girlie magazine hidden in the room of any of our three teenage sons, I remove it and replace it with a 3x5 index card with a Bible verse covering that very subject. I've never had a complaint from any of them, as they know from the verses that they are to 'abstain from fleshly lusts.'"

Mom may mean well, but she is not dealing with reality. I'm against girlie magazines because they exploit women, but they're here and we must deal with them, as boys will be boys regardless of what the Bible says. Mom is violating her sons' rights to privacy and is teaching them that they must repress, at the most critical times in their sexual lives, the most personal and human of all impulses.

We confront reality here instead of teaching kids avoidance and asking the impossible. They are given the facts of life as they really are, and they're taught to deal with them realistically in a responsible way. Kids get straight talk on birth control and VD and clues to help them form healthy relationships with the opposite sex.

These kids begin to feel good about themselves and their natural urges. No one should be made to feel guilty about their normal feelings.—PHOENIX

DEAR PHOENIX: Thanks for a great letter. And incidentally, this subject is dealt with in a wonderful 30-minute special on CBS at 3 p.m. (Pacific Time) tomorrow. (Check your local TV listings.) Ken Howard, who plays the basketball coach in "The White Shadow," raps informally and frankly with a group of boys between the ages of 10 and 16 about their sexual feelings, their bodies and the problems of growing up. I recommend it highly for boys and girls of all ages. And their parents, too!

DEAR ABBY: I would like to leave my eyes to the Lions Eye Bank, but I am an old lady who has had cataract surgery and glaucoma, too. Do you think they would accept my eyes? I can't see how they would be of any use to anyone. Thank you.—THINKING AHEAD

DEAR THINKING: All eyes are acceptable. Those that are not usable for transplants are needed for research.

DEAR ABBY: I always thought a tip of between 15 and 20 percent of the bill was considered proper no matter what part of the country you're in.

I happen to live in Pennsylvania, but recently visited in South Carolina, where I was the host at a very nice restaurant. There were five of us for lunch. The bill was $28, and I left a tip of $5.50 (the service was excellent).

One of my guests (who lives in South Carolina) saw the tip and said, "That's too much!" I said, "No, that's about right." He said, "Maybe for Pennsylvania, but it's too much for South Carolina!"

Tell me, Abby, does the size of the tip vary from state to state?

Also, when I'm a guest, if I feel that the tip is inadequate, is it OK to slip a little something extra to the waitress if the service was good?—NEEDS TIPS ON TIPPING

DEAR NEEDS: Waitresses earn the minimum wage and depend on tips to survive, so 15 percent for ordinary service and 20 percent for extraordinary service is proper. And it's not only "OK," it's extremely generous to slip a little something extra to the waitress who's been short-changed.

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 plus a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to ABBY, Letters Booklet, (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to ABBY, Letters Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif.

AT WIT'S END

Getting fit by sleeping

By ERMA BOMBEC

They laughed a few years ago when I wrote that napping would soon replace jogging. But hang on, little potbellied food junkies with two-inch tendons. We're getting there.

A banner headline recently in the L.A. Times proclaimed, "Fitness Craze Slows to a Walk."

They're talking now about 50 million people who are taking to the streets walking for their health. They're saying that jogging a mile in 8 1/2 minutes burns only 26 more calories than walking a mile in 12 minutes. They're saying this fall an avalanche of books will hit the bookshelves telling you where to walk, how much to walk, what to wear, the psychological benefits of walking and what it does for your body.

I'll survive the new craze. I always do. I'll watch my husband come in each morning from walking ten miles and when I ask, "Could you get the paper at the end of the drive?" he'll snap, "Without stretching first? Are you crazy?"

I'll sit around at cocktail parties while people quote Henry David Thoreau who wrote, "Two or three hours of walking will carry me to as strange a country as I ever expect to see." (Could you trust a man who talks to trees?)

I'll endure the amusing little stories about how a prostitute won the Boston Walkathon but was disqualified when it was discovered she was a professional streetwalker.

I read somewhere you cannot uncork a new trend until its time. And our time is coming. I don't know when it will come...maybe as we nod on the sofa during the 6 o'clock news...or maybe as our heads jerk up during a dull speech...but the physical decadents of this land will have their day. Trust me.

And then we can recline in a Big Boy Lounger as we quote Lincoln: "All I am or ever hope to be, I owe to my mother who napped a lot."

We can counsel the people who wear the wrong clothes to nap in, don't nap regularly, or get discouraged when they can't fall asleep right away.

When we can work it in, we'll go on talk shows and tell how much more energy we have since we began napping.

But mostly, the thing I'll enjoy the most is seeing a physically fit walker try to join our cult. By the time he gets out of shape, we'll be into another trend.

Microwave cooking guidelines

By SHARON A. HILLIS
County Extension Agent
Home Economics

Keep those "old time" favorite recipes for microwave cooking. Many foods adapt easily and taste like they were cooked conventionally. Some guidelines to help you in converting recipes to microwave cooking include:

— Select a similar microwave recipe with approximately the same amount of main ingredients — meat, cheese, vegetables — for comparison.

— Reduce the amount of liquid by one-fourth. Add more of the liquid removed during cooking if needed.

— Reduce seasoning slightly, especially strong flavorings such as garlic, oregano or bay leaf. It is much safer to add more later than to have seasonings overpower the flavor.

— Reduce the amount of fat by one-half.

— Use the dish size, covering instructions, microwave techniques and timing recommended in the microwave recipes used for comparison.

— If you are not following a microwave recipe for comparison, reduce the cooking time to one-fourth of the original recipe. Cook longer, if necessary.

On the other hand, there are a few recipes not suited to microwave cooking. Do not attempt to deep fry in the microwave — this eliminates the preparation of fried chicken or steak, hash browns or french fries. Foods that normally form a crust, such as popovers, pancakes, pizza and double crust pies will not work because they either become soggy on the bottom or simply do not form a crust. Dried beans, rice and pasta need time to absorb moisture and the speed of the microwave cooking does not allow sufficient time for this to occur. Yeast bread recipes will not convert from conventional recipes. However, all of these foods will reheat in a microwave oven.

"Christmas Impressions II" program will be offered to you Nov. 13 in St. Mark's United Methodist Church Fellowship Hall, 1701 N. Main at the following times: 10-11 a.m., 2-3 p.m. and 7:30-8:30 p.m.

Pick the time right for your schedule and take advantage of this opportunity to gather some new ideas and tips for gift, holiday entertaining and decoration ideas for your home, office or club holiday happenings. Recipes and complete instructions will be provided for those who attend one of these sessions.

MENTAL HEALTH UPDATE

Drug abuse problem is not new in this country or others

By KENNETH H. WOLF, MSSW, SP

The problem of drug abuse is not a new one, either in this country or others.

There is definite evidence that the abuse of certain mind-altering substances has occurred for hundreds of years. South American Indians have used the leaves of the coca plant from which cocaine is derived. Inhabitants of the Middle East and Far East have used opium for centuries.

In our country, a drug abuse problem has existed since the earliest settlements. For example, there is strong evidence that the early settlers discovered the mind-altering properties of the "loco weed," which had been known to the American Indian for many years. There is also strong evidence that early pioneers and heroes such as George Washington, developed drug dependencies in their efforts to treat themselves for various conditions.

A drug is any chemical substance which has an effect on either the body or the mind. Certain drugs of abuse are not approved for medical treatment of humans. Examples of these include heroin, phenycyclidine (PCP), marijuana, acrylics, and LSD.

Other drugs have legitimate medical uses but are subject to abuse because of their mind-altering properties. Still other drugs have no medical use but still are permitted in our society. Examples of these include alcohol, nicotine and caffeine.

The most commonly abused drugs are those which produce an effect on the person's mood or thought processes. When such an effect is produced, the drug is called "psychoactive." Depressants, stimulants, sedative-hypnotics, hallucinogens and analgesics are the most commonly abused classes of drugs. There are literally dozens of drugs belonging to these classes.

Persons who abuse drugs are likely to abuse several kinds of drugs simultaneously, thereby increasing their own physical risks. Two or more abused drugs may interact in such a fashion as to multiply the effect either drug may have produced by itself. For example, someone who abuses both Valium and alcohol (both are depressants) runs the risk of becoming stuporous or even comatose. Accidental overdoses resulting in death are also a common result of the abuse of more than one drug (polydrug use).

Although drug abuse has always been with us, there are several factors which make the problem seem much worse than in previous times. In general, the public attitude toward drugs is quite permissive. This permissiveness is reflected in the attitude that "pills solve problems" or that "pills can make you feel better."

Billions of dollars are spent annually to promote the use of drugs which alter a person's mental state. The largest amounts are spent by the liquor industry and the pharmaceutical industry. People are led to expect a quick cure from drugs.

The fact that certain psychoactive drugs can make one feel differently without any real change occurring in a person's life or his underlying problems is what makes the potential for abuse of these drugs so great.

Drug abusers may be rich or poor, old or young, male or female, and blue collar or white collar. No ethnic group is exempt from the problem. Although certain drugs of abuse are often more closely associated with one particular group of people than another, even this distinction is no longer clear. Drug abuse presents definite signs, symptoms and personality variations. Early recognition of drug-abuse tendencies is vital in the treatment process. The responsibility for prevention of drug abuse lies largely with the family, where attitudes toward the usage of medication and drugs to solve non-medical problems are shaped.

Herders yearn for home in Alaska

Al Stricklin, leaning against the piano in his Cleburne, Texas home, recalls his days of piano playing for the late Bob Wills and His Texas Playboys. At 73, Stricklin, old enough to be the great-grandfather for most he plays for, still finds crowds jamming around his piano the same way they did when he played for the king of Texas swing four decades ago. (AP Laserphoto)

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (AP) — A tribe of nomads who have fled communism for half a century — from the Soviet Union to Afghanistan to Pakistan — harbors a dream to settle in Alaska, along with their thousands of sheep and camels and yaks.

Rahman Qul, leader of the Kirghiz tribesmen, last May traveled to the U.S. consulate in Peshawar to present a letter addressed to President Carter requesting permission to settle the remnants of his tribe in the "land of freedom" — particularly in that part known as Alaska.

Qul, a man in his 60s, told a consulate official he first heard of Alaska about five years ago when a U.N. wildlife expert — an American named Ron Peters, he said — showed him photos of Alaska's mountains.

Qul says his tribe lived a spartan existence in Afghanistan, surviving on the milk, meat and wool derived from their animals. They heated their round yurts — tents of skins stretched over poles — with sheep dung, which was also their cooking fuel.

But since the tribe of some 1,400 people migrated two years ago, more than 150 — mainly children and the elderly — have died. Qul blames the deaths on the change in climate from the 17,000-foot heights of Afghanistan to the relatively low level of 7,000 feet near the town of Gilgit, 351 miles northeast of here.

The summers are hotter than the Kirghiz are used to, and malaria has taken many lives. Qul fears many more may die if they remain.

In addition, Qul told Philip Covington, the U.S. vice consul in Peshawar and a former Peace Corps volunteer in Afghanistan, that the tribesmen were losing their sense of community and cultural identity because they had been forced to find non-traditional employment.

For all these reasons, he wants to resettle his tribe amid the vast, under-populated areas of Alaska.

Qul, a quick-witted herdsman with a knack for business, has himself prospered in Pakistan. He traded some of his livestock and opened a shop in Gilgit dealing in tribal handicrafts, carpets and fabrics.

Staffers for Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, said a Kirghiz representative contacted them last year, asking help from the senator. The nomads later applied through normal diplomatic channels for permission to immigrate.

Haida Boucher, Gravel's administrative assistant, said she had kept Gravel advised of the Kirghiz situation but added that he had taken no active role.

"My own feeling was that until we knew what kind of federal or state land might be available to them — would it be adequate for a nomadic tribe? — nothing further could be done," said Mrs. Boucher.

U.S. diplomats in Pakistan say Qul also has not yet received a reply from his letter to Carter.

"This is a classic ethnic tragedy," said a State Department official in Washington. "But as a government we don't have the instruments to cope with this problem."

He said Pakistan had some 1.2 million Afghan refugees and the United States could not single out a tribal minority for aid.

Current legislation allows for the immigration of about 2,400 Afghan refugees each year. To permit the Kirghiz to settle in Alaska as a group would use up half the annual quota, said the official, who did not want to be identified.

An additional obstacle, he said, is that existing law requires all refugees to have sponsors.

The official said special legislation would be the only solution but that the administration was not inclined at present to come up with its own proposal.

Qul said he had Alaska on his mind when he led his followers, along with their 10,000 sheep, 200 yaks and 13 Bactrian camels out of Afghanistan after the 1978 Marxist takeover.

Escaping communism has been a recurring theme in Kirghiz life this century. As the Soviets pressed their control over parts of central Asia following the Russian revolution, Qul's tribe fled to Afghanistan while other Kirghiz headed for Turkey and China.

Mrs. Carter given boost

ATLANTA (AP) — A letter from former professional football star Joe Namath has given a boost to the president's mother, Lillian Carter, who is recovering from hip surgery.

"I wasn't feeling too well today," Mrs. Carter was quoted as saying in a statement issued Monday by the Americus-Sumter County Hospital. "But then the letter and new picture of Joe Namath came and now I feel very well."

Namath was a star quarterback for the University of Alabama and for the New York Jets of the National Football League.

Mrs. Carter broke her right hip in a fall at her home in Plains, Ga., on Oct. 2, was operated on the same day and has been in the hospital for the past month. She is to be released within a few days.

Presidents keep country in tune

WILMETTE, Ill. (AP) — If Thomas Jefferson visited the White House today, he'd probably spend more time with Amy Carter than with her presidential dad when he discovered he and Amy shared a common interest — playing the violin.

Although Jefferson was perhaps the most musical president, American Music Conference research shows that almost every president has had some interest in keeping America musical, whether as an amateur musician or as an advocate of the arts in this country.

Jefferson was certainly the first president to inject music into the heart of America, although George Washington, who reportedly played flute and violin, began the tradition of music in the White House.

Jefferson was a skilled violinist who once wrote, "Music... is the favorite passion of my soul," and he reported playing no less than three hours a day before the Revolutionary War.

Believing that Europeans far surpassed Americans in the appreciation and understanding of music, Jefferson formed a domestic orchestra of his own by hiring only European workers who played musical instruments for his Monticello estate.

Our third president liked best to play with others, often joining in duets with Patrick Henry and John Tyler, father of president Tyler.

However, the senior Tyler wasn't as musically romantic as his chief executive son, John. Presidents Tyler and Jefferson, legend has it, both won their brides through their musical prowess. Jefferson's rivals reportedly threw in their "courting towels" after hearing Tom and Martha playing together — he on violin and cello and she on harpsichord and piano.

Even "Honest Abe" Lincoln had a few songs up his sleeve. He wrote an eight-verse musical composition, dedicated to his sister's wedding, and although he had no formal music training, Lincoln's harmonica-playing ability became a factor in his run for the presidency.

While Stephen A. Douglas campaigned with a real band during the historical Lincoln-Douglas debates, the Great Emancipator tooted and touted his "little brass band," to the delight of his followers and to the irritation of his opponent.

Of all the musical presidents, Harry S. Truman and Richard M. Nixon were probably the most avid pianists. Truman learned to play the piano as a child and often joined in duets with his daughter, Margaret. He entertained many a White House guest with his piano playing, particularly with his rendering of the "Missouri Waltz," which he made famous.

Possibly the first president-vice president duet was played by Richard Nixon and Spiro Agnew. Both play the piano well and were often known to treat

White House guests to a song or two.

Each president brought his own musical fondness to the nation's capital, and to the entire country, sometimes making history with music.

"Hail to the Chief" was first played for John Quincy Adams on July 4, 1828. Adams played the flute, and was followed by such music-making presidents as Chester A. Arthur (piano), Warren G. Harding (trombone, clarinet and other instruments), and Calvin "Silent Cal" Coolidge and Dwight D. Eisenhower (harmonica).

Black David confronts white Goliath in Lesotho

By JACK FOISIE
The Los Angeles Times

MASERU, Lesotho — This small mountain kingdom encompassed by South Africa does not seem important enough to attract 45 diplomatic missions from other countries, but they are here because a black David is confronting a white Goliath.

The David is Lesotho's prime minister, Chief Leabua Jonathan, a tubby, balding black statesman who torments the white Goliath that surrounds his kingdom.

One of South Africa's most outspoken critics, Jonathan has opposed as racist the South African program of establishing independent tribal homelands, and he insists that South Africa illegally lays claim to territories that rightfully belong to Lesotho.

Jonathan, who is 64, has attracted the sympathy and support of countries of all political leanings, both East and West. They all have missions here to dispense millions of dollars in aid to this Maryland-size enclave that has few natural resources and little fertile land.

To show that he is a friend of all the world except South Africa, Jonathan has established diplomatic relations with both China and both Korea. He established relations with Cuba last year and the Soviet Union this year. He is well-supported by the non-Communist world as well. The United States provided $13.1 million in aid last year, including $600,000 for Peace Corps programs.

International organizations put $96.6 million into the country in 1979, much of the money spent for roads, to replace the footpaths and pony trails, traditionally traveled by Lesotho's 1.2 million people in their bleak upland plateaus.

No part of the country is below 4,000 feet. Lesotho is described as the "roof of Africa."

Ireland is Lesotho's most energetic diplomatic partner. Sixty representatives from Dublin are here to administer aid projects, working in the barren hills and eroded valleys just as enthusiastically as they would in the green pastures and peat bogs of Eire, according to Irish Consul Martin Greene. One project seeks to cross Ireland's famed Connemara pony with the Lesotho pony.

Lesotho is not really so backward. "It's like Ireland in 1935," Greene said. "In the '30s, we needed to promote economic development in our country, to create jobs. That is Lesotho's problem today, and we are trying to help."

The Irish also run the country's fledgling Lesotho Airways whose fleet consists of several small twin-engine aircraft. The pilots also serve as cabin attendants.

But all is not going well for Jonathan, even though he has demonstrated a virtuoso touch for capitalizing on his geographical position in the midst of South Africa's white-supremacist society.

For one thing, Lesotho's value to the foes of South African racism as an example to others would be enhanced if its own government were democratic. The country has not had an election since 1970, when Jonathan, alleging irregularities in the voting, stopped the ballot counting, suspended the constitution, jailed his opponents and took power.

Although Jonathan recently offered a qualified amnesty to his political foes, few have accepted. His principal rival, Ntsu Mokhele, is in exile in nearby Zambia and directs a low-scale but persistent guerrilla war against the government. Last week guerrillas attacked houses in a town 38 miles northeast of here, seriously wounding a brother of the prime minister and killing three women.

Mokhele says he has a thousand armed followers scattered in small units through Lesotho's mountains, their leaders trained in Libya.

To counter, Jonathan has enlarged his Police Mobile Unit to 1,500 men, and equipped it with a few helicopters and light aircraft. Such support reportedly was provided by South Africa, and demonstrates Jonathan's ambivalent relations with the country he says he hates.

Glance at history may give some perspective

Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK CITY — As the first presidency of the 1980s starts, a glance at history may give us some perspective on it. Take the presidents of the past half-century, and ask how they will rank in history.

Franklin Roosevelt held power for almost 13 years, from the early '30s to the mid-'40s. He made some bad blunders in military and foreign policy the last two years. Yet he must rank as the greatest president of the century.

In his hour with poise he had been through the valley of the shadow himself. Thus, at the depth of the Great Depression, he could stand there on his knees at his first inaugural and tell the people that "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself." The New Deal may not have been brilliant economics but it was brilliant psychology.

As a war leader Roosevelt had to cut moral corners to bring the full weight of America into the world balance. The road to Pearl Harbor was Machiavellian, and Roosevelt played the fox as well as the lion. He loved combat and was a happy warrior.

Twice — in the war as in the Depression — he gave America a new chance to live and a renewal of hope. But then, worn down by illness and the heavy burden of global decisions, he made the wrong ones before and at Yalta, and gave the Soviet Union its road-to-expanded power.

Harry Truman didn't have F.D.R.'s largeness of view or his armory of strategies. But he was exactly what America needed in the latter '40s. He corrected F.D.R.'s blunders toward the Soviet Union, picked good advisers, forged the Western alliance, consolidated American power, gave the nation the sense that someone was in charge. Outwardly ordinary, he proved to be an extraordinary man, and showed how a traditional values system, a sense of history and the capacity for command could make an effective presidency.

Dwight Eisenhower had to wait eight years between his victorious return from Europe and his election. He didn't use them to prepare for the presidency as he had prepared for the war. He was a quiet, sunny American who found himself thrust into a maelstrom of convulsive events he couldn't quite fathom.

His weakness lay in too great a detachment. Where Harry Truman was always in the midst of battle, Eisenhower was above the battle. The strength lay, to some degree, in his role as father figure and the trust he evoked. Even more it lay in his tempered judgment at the crunch of events which kept America from spilling over from cold war into world war.

John Kennedy was an effective president in his symbolism, but not in his decisions. He had been a maddening legislator and had no executive experience. He couldn't handle Congress, and fumbled with Castro and Khrushchev. But he presented America and the world with an image of youthful zest, grace, courage and verbal skill, and renewed the choice of the political vocation for American youth. In the Cuban missile crisis he came to an extraordinary maturity which promised the continued flowering of a great president.

Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon came prepared for the presidency as no one before them, both in Congress and the vice-presidency. Each reached toward great achievement — Johnson in civil rights and education, Nixon (with Henry Kissinger) in fashioning a strong foreign policy. Yet Johnson's inner insecurity made him too rigid to cut his losses and get out of the Vietnam war, and Nixon's flaw of character involved him in the destructive tragedy of Watergate.

Gerald Ford's brief tenure of power was much like Eisenhower's, as his public image was much like Truman's. He deserved better than his country gave him in 1976.

Jimmy Carter's tenure at the end of the '70s is still too close to us to assess. They were years shadowed by inflation, the Iranian revolution and the hostages.

Bergman plans film in Sweden

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Film director Ingmar Bergman is planning to shoot his first movie in Sweden since 1976, when he was hauled off a stage here by police in a tax case which he eventually won, movie officials have announced.

Bjorn Henriksson, production manager at the state-owned Swedish Film Institute, confirmed reports that "delicate negotiations" are under way for the shooting of "Fanny and Alexander" from a script by Bergman.

The world famous director went into exile in Munich, West Germany, after the clampdown by tax authorities nearly five years ago, and has since been making movies and stage-directing abroad. He won his drawn-out battle with tax authorities in court last November.

Henriksson said the film institute, Bergman's Swedish film company Cinematograph, and a number of foreign backers are working out details on financing of the $8.4 million production — an all-time high in Sweden where the average movie is budgeted at about $960,000.

Henriksson would not identify any foreign financiers, saying "details have yet to be clinched, and people get irritated when things come out during negotiations."

He added that the film institute would be the central sponsor of the production, planned to start next summer in Sweden.

Newspapers said the Bergman movie would star Norwegian actress Liv Ullmann and Swedish actors Max von Sydow and Ernst Josephson — all former featured players in Bergman productions.

Bergman was in the United States toward the end of October for a Scandinavian film festival staged in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. This winter, Bergman will set up three stage plays in Munich.

The "Fanny and Alexander" project reportedly is drawing inspiration from the 62-year-old director's sufferings as a child. His father was a priest, whom Bergman described as an authoritarian.

"It is a very good script, but I would not interpret it for Bergman. I leave that to him, just like the casting," Henriksson said.

Bergman suffered a nervous breakdown and was hospitalized for shock after police dragged him off stage during a rehearsal of Strindberg's "Death Dance" in January 1976.

A few months later, he left Sweden for Germany, but he has continued spending his summer holidays at his retreat on the Baltic isle of Faero. Bergman reportedly was at Faero recently to put the final touches on "Fanny and Alexander" script.

Kurosawa: Japan's master filmmaker

NEW YORK (AP) — The cinema is the lifeblood of Akira Kurosawa, a man who never wanted to be a filmmaker but eventually tried to end his life out of despair for the movie industry.

"I don't care if people forget about me completely," said the 70-year-old director, "but I do hope they will keep my films in their hearts."

Kurosawa is Japan's premier filmmaker, creator of such celluloid works of art as "Roshomon," "The Seven Samurai" and "Drunken Angel." Now he has once again painted the screen in giant brush strokes with "Kagemusha," a sweeping adventure of war-torn feudal Japan.

It is the most expensive movie ever made in Japan, costing $6.5 million. It is also the first Kurosawa has made in his native country in a decade. His 1975 Academy Award winner, "Dersu Uzala," was filmed in the Soviet Union.

"The cost of everything has risen dramatically in Japan in the past 10 or 12 years and film companies are still trying to make movies with budgets of 20 years ago," he said during a recent interview. Kurosawa speaks little English, so Audie Bock, who is translating his autobiography, was the interpreter.

"Japanese film companies also seem to have been cowed, continually using the power of television," he said. "They seem to be content with producing films that look like television movies."

Kurosawa films would have difficulty conforming to the small screen. They are vast monuments that explode with detail, fusing the artistic discipline of wered a newspaper ad for assistant directors with a Japanese film company.

"Partly as a joke and as a mental exercise, I responded to the ad and went through the exams and passed," he said. "But I still didn't want to be a filmmaker, especially because I had gone to the studio many times and had been completely horrified at seeing actresses in all their makeup. It was eerie and I didn't want any part of it."

After he had immersed himself in the movie industry, the political climate in Japan began to change, steadily leading that nation to World War II.

Kurosawa said his scripts had to pass a censorship board during the war years. They were constantly rejected. "Even now when I think about those censors, I become enraged," he said softly.

"I didn't feel that I underwent any change as a result of censorship," he said. "I was faced with the problem of not being able to say anything because the subjects and themes upon which movies could be made were so limited."

"So instead, what I tried to do was to at least make entertaining films so the audience could get a taste of the pleasures of the cinema," he said of what some observers have called propaganda war movies.

Ten years ago, Kurosawa tried to kill himself. It is a subject he does not like to talk about.

"There were a number of reasons," he said. "A major one was that I felt desperate about the movie business. I had made a film with a tiny budget in a very short period of time and it still lost money and the Japanese film industry as a whole was looking very bad."

A physical illness that he was not aware of at the time contributed to the suicide attempt because it caused depression, he said.

"I look back at all the letters I received from all over the world after I did that thing I now feel was terrible stupidity," he said. "Everyone was telling me that if Japan was so uncomfortable, please live in their country."

"Now I owe all those people an apology."

Announcer-less game decision angers Cosell

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When NBC announced its plans to televise an NFL game without announcers, one stark image came to the minds of the TV sports fans — a silent Howard Cosell.

Unfortunately, Cosell works for ABC, and Chet Forte, executive sports producer there, has no known intention to televise a silent Monday Night Football game. That dream will have to be fulfilled vicariously by NBC's announcer-less Dec. 20 game between the Jets and Dolphins.

Such may or may not have been the intention of NBC Executive Sports Producer Don Ohlmeyer, but Cosell himself seems to be taking the stunt personally.

On Monday, the very day that Ohlmeyer's planned experiment was announced, Cosell took to his mike at ABC Radio and denounced the voiceless game as "a move designed to please sportswriters but hardly designed to edify the public."

And it is said that Cosell flew into a snit after last Monday night's game, claiming that Ohlmeyer — who produced football at ABC until two years ago — was betraying him, or something to that effect. Mr. Cosell would not comment here on the matter.

I suppose it's reasonable for Cosell to assume the experimental telecast is in part a response to print criticism of sports announcing, and Cosell has certainly received most of the criticism.

But it's just possible that Mr. Ohlmeyer watched one game too many as they are ordinarily presented and realized that TV football has become a picture bobbing in a sea of words.

The TV game is missing a dimension, that crucial sense of being there.

Ohlmeyer will try to find that dimension by ousting the announcers for this one otherwise meaningless game and filling the aural void with the beautiful cacophony of football.

Viewers will hear the public address system, the crowd, the referee, the crash of pads and the buzzing along the sidelines.

Bryant Gumbel will be on hand for the Saturday afternoon national telecast to update latecomers. A game clock will be inserted in the corner of the picture occasionally, and there will be replays and the usual run of statistical graphics superimposed on the screen.

Given this information, the only element denied the viewer will be the gab. It so happens that NBC's brand of announcer gab is superior to that of the other networks, so the announcers will be missed. Not desperately, though, in this one novelty game.

It'll be fun.

As for Cosell, he can only hope that the Dec. 20 game between the Miami Dolphins and New York Jets is one consummate flop. His network has been known to imitate success.

the traditional Japanese theater forms. No and Kabuki, with the spectacle of Cecil B. DeMille.

The tragic flow of history is important to this former student of history. "There is a saying in Japanese that means go back and study the past with the implication that that will teach you how to live in the future," he said. "That saying more or less summarizes my attitude in terms of my work in showing today's audience how people lived."

In "Kagemusha," which has 200 horses and 400 extras as soldiers, there is almost a hint of Shakespearean fatalism, which is enhanced by the visual effect of angles. Kurosawa moves his soldiers at angles — up and down hills, through the sharp edges of castles.

"I don't feel there's a Shakespeare influence, but it is the period of Japan that creates that effect," he said. "The settings often determined the use of angles. The first scene, showing a messenger running past troops, was shot in the real remains of castles."

"The battle scene that has the sharpest angle was shot during the day with filters to make it look like night — shot up a slope so the sky wouldn't show," the director said. "I also wanted to make it look as dramatic as possible."

Kurosawa grew up in Japan at a time when movies were considered an improper pastime.

"Children who went to movies were thought of as rowdies," he said. "But my father had a great love of cinema and regularly took us all to movies, from nursery school on."

Kurosawa studied to be a painter, but found he could not support himself as an artist. So he answered

'Resurrection' film moving, disturbing

By BOB THOMAS Associated Press Writer

RESURRECTION is a profoundly moving, even disturbing testament to the unexplainable power of certain individuals to heal the sick. Crippled in a California car crash, Ellen Burstyn returns to her Midwest farmland home, cures herself, then contributes her gift to others. It sounds like grim stuff, but humanity shines through in Lewis John Carlino's script and Dan Petrie's direction. The acting is superlative; Miss Burstyn as the healer who refuses to be used; Sam Shepard as the local tough who becomes her lover; Eva Le Gallienne as her understanding grandmother. Rated PG, with a few expletives, some bed scenes, and dramatic intensity that might affect impressionable children.

'60 Minutes' tops ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — Led by last season's top-rated program, "60 Minutes," CBS re-established Sunday night dominance during its self-proclaimed Premiere Week and won the ratings race by a comfortable margin over ABC, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed.

CBS spotted a half-dozen shows among top 10 in the week ending Nov. 2, including four from the network's Sunday night lineup — "60 Minutes" in first place, "Alice" fourth, "The Jeffersons" fifth and "Archie Bunker's Place" tied for sixth.

ABC, offering Premiere Week programming of its own, had two shows in the Top 10, including "Love Boat" in third place, while NBC, which began its 1980-81 season Sept. 15, also listed two.

CBS' rating for the week was 19.8, to 18.3 for ABC and 16.5 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 19.8 percent of the nation's TV-equipped homes were tuned to CBS.

NBC kicked off the season in mid-September with a five-part mini-series, "Shogun," despite the actors' strike that began in July. The network won the ratings race four times in six weeks, and maintains a substantial lead over ABC and CBS for the period from mid-September to the present.

CBS' No. 1 finish in the latest survey was the network's first since the week ending Oct. 5.

The rating for "60 Minutes" was 26.6. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 26.6 percent saw at least part of the newsmagazine. An NBC movie, "The Gauntlet," with Clint Eastwood, finished second for the week.

CBS did particularly well with two movies and a special. "The Jayne Mansfield Story" tied for sixth place, with another made-for-TV docudrama, "Rape and Marriage: The Rideout Case," 11th, and the latest production in "The Body Human" series, on sexuality, 17th.

Of the new series introduced in the ABC-CBS Premiere Week, CBS' "Ladies Man" was the highest-rated, tied for 26th, with "It's a Living" on ABC tied for 38th, and ABC's "I'm a Big Girl Now" 42nd.

Two 'Killer Bees' defeated

Third may fall in final ballot count

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

Republicans defeated two "Killer Bee" liberal-to-moderate state senators in Tuesday's election and had a high probability of picking off a third when the ballot counting is complete.

The GOP's net gain was expected to be one for two senators. Republicans now hold four of the 31 Senate seats.

"We always wanted a two-party state. Well, we've got one," asserted Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, as he analyzed unofficial totals that indicated he probably had lost by about 600 votes.

Schwartz, a senator for almost 20 years and leader of legislative liberals, said he wanted to see official returns before deciding whether to concede to Republican lawyer James E. "Buster" Brown of Lake Jackson.

Also up in the air early this morning was the Dallas Senate race between Ron Kessler, a former county Democratic chairman, and John Leedom, ex-chairman of Dallas County Republicans.

Kessler and Leedom were ran for the seat held by Sen. Bill Braecklein, R-Dallas, who did not seek re-election.

Computer foul-ups and the sheer effort of counting record numbers of votes also left several House races undecided until today.

It was clear, however, that Republicans had added to the 26 seats they hold in the 150-member House.

Unofficial returns indicated Republicans had defeated Democratic Reps. Jimmy Mankins of Kilgore, a three-term conservative; Ed Watson of Deer Park, an oil worker and union member; Bill Harrison of Corpus Christi, a conservative first-term legislator; and Bill Caraway of Houston, a three-term moderate.

Mankins lost to Michael Martin of Longview; Watson to Charles Eastburn of Mont Belvieu; Harrison to Ken Riley of Corpus Christi; and Caraway to Randy Pennington, president of a Houston distributing company.

Mike Richards, a Houston financial consultant, banker and insurance man, defeated Sen. Gene Jones, D-Houston, by several thousand votes. Jones, chairman of the Senate Administration Committee, was hurt by an Austin grand jury investigation of allegations Jones used his legislative employees and equipment in his campaign. Election day arrived with the investigation still unfinished.

Sen. Ron Clower, D-Garland, chairman of the Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee, also was defeated, falling to Dee Travis, a Garland businessman and former aide to U.S. Rep. Jim Collins, a Dallas Republican.

Clower, Jones and Schwartz were among the 12 "Killer Bee" senators who halted Senate business last May with a five-day walkout. The "Bees" were protesting a procedural change designed to guarantee passage of a presidential primary bill they felt was written to help conservatives and hurt liberals.

One Republican senator was defeated, Bob Price of Pampa, who lost his Senate seat after one term to Bill Sarpaullis, a 32-year-old Hereford businessman who used to be an aide of House Speaker Bill Clayton.

Price also served in Congress and ran for the Legislature after losing his post in the U.S. House of Representatives to Jack Hightower several years ago.

Florida's first female senator among 20 congresswomen

By OWEN ULLMANN

WASHINGTON (AP) — A record-breaking 20 women will sit in the new Congress, including Florida's first female senator, but it is not necessarily a cause for celebration among women's rights groups.

Republican victories in Tuesday's elections increased the number of congresswomen from one to two in the Senate and from 16 to at least 18 in the House.

However, a leading champion of women's rights, Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman lost her race for the Senate in New York, and feminists were unhappy with Republican Paula Hawkins' Senate victory in Florida, where voters elected only their second GOP senator since Reconstruction.

Mrs. Hawkins, 53, joins fellow Republican Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas as the Senate's only women members following her slender victory over state Insurance Commissioner Bill Gunter, who defeated incumbent Richard Stone in the Democratic primary.

Mrs. Hawkins, an airline executive and former member of the state's utility-regulating commission, had been opposed by feminist groups, who claim she is hostile to the cause of equal rights for women.

The Senate has had two women members at the same time before, but this is the first time that neither inherited a seat from a husband who died in office.

Predictions that women might take hold of a record three or more Senate seats fizzled after Mrs. Holtzman, a Democrat, lost a close race she had been favored to win against Republican Alfonse D'Amato in New York and Colorado Republican Mary Estill Buchanan came up short in another tight contest against incumbent Democrat Gary Hart.

D'Amato succeeds Republican Sen. Jacob Javits, who lost the GOP primary and ran a distant third on the Liberal Party ticket.

The underdog challenges of women to unseat Senate incumbents failed by wide margins as had been expected. Republican Mary Louise Foust was routed by Wendell Ford, D-Ky., and Democrat Mary Gojack lost to Paul Laxalt, R-Nev.

In the House, all 15 women incumbents easily won re-election, while three female Republican challengers won races in New Jersey, Rhode Island and Illinois, giving women a total of 18 seats.

In New Jersey, M rge Roukama defeated Democratic incumbent Andrew Maguire in the 7th District. In Rhode Island, Claudine Schneider ousted Democratic incumbent Edward Beard in the 2nd District. In Illinois, Lynn Martin captured the 16th District seat that Rep. John Anderson vacated to make his independent run for the presidency.

Record Hispanic vote doesn't help Carter

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Texas Hispanics who registered in record numbers this year also were voting in record numbers, but President Jimmy Carter didn't get the volume of votes he needed, according to reports Tuesday from predominately Mexican-American precincts. Ronald Reagan chipped into Carter's Hispanic support base, carrying El Paso County by more than 13,000 votes and coming fairly close in other mostly Mexican-American areas.

In San Antonio's Bexar County, with more than half the precincts out, Carter leads by only 8,000 votes, much less than he would need to make up for his poor showing in other Texas counties.

In the largely Hispanic Rio Grande Valley counties of Cameron, Hidalgo, Starr and Willacy, Carter gained only 16,000 votes over Reagan.

Reagan beat Carter by 50,000 votes in Tarrant County alone. The Mexican-American did turn out to vote, but Reagan's campaigning in South Texas paid off by shaving the Carter margin.

"We haven't had this good a turnout since 1960 when John F. Kennedy ran for president," said election Judge Dolores Salas at a predominantly Mexican-American Democratic polling place on San Antonio's west side.

Republican Gov. Bill Clements, who chaired the Reagan-Bush Texas campaign, had said if the Republican ticket got 30 percent of the Mexican-American vote in Texas it would defeat Carter.

Record voter registrations, absentee votes and turnout were reported throughout South Texas.

In 1976, according to the Southwest Voter Registration and Education Project, headed by Ms. Choco Meza, there were 486,000 Spanish-surnamed people registered in Texas and 57 percent of them cast ballots. In that election, SVREP estimated 87 percent voted in a bloc for Carter.

Workers for Bush-Reagan and District Judge Ed Prado, appointed by Clements, stood on a street corner in San Antonio's "Little Mexico" section shouting on a bullhorn for Hispanics to split their ticket this year.

Prado's father handed out cards on behalf of his son outside Cenizo Park Elementary School, but one elderly man walking with a cane told Prado in Spanish, "I'm going to vote one lever."

Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, and other local Mexican-American Democrats running for re-election had urged in Spanish radio broadcasts for Hispanics to continue the traditional one-vote lever.

"I'm not lobbying for anybody but by son," Prado's father said, "but everybody's here for a one-lever vote. It's hard to buck them."

Texans like Reagan-Bush ticket

Inflation control, defense lead interests

By GARTH JONES
AP Political Writer

Texas voters liked Ronald Reagan's views on inflation control and national defense, as sold to them by one of the best financed and most aggressive political organizations ever put together.

"What has happened is that Gov. Reagan is right for Texas and President Carter is wrong for Texas," said a jubilant Gov. Bill Clements Tuesday night after Reagan's surprising sweep of the state and nation. "Texas has become a model for how a campaign should be structured and how a campaign should be run."

Reagan carried almost two-thirds of the counties, including a number that voted for Carter in the 1976 election. In the Carter counties, Reagan often got a substantial vote also.

Some political observers called the Reagan win a continuation of a wave of political conservatism that made Clements in 1978 the first Texas Republican governor of this century.

"The margin of the Reagan victory is indicative that the people of the United States are uneasy...the nation was ready for a change and took it out on Carter," said Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, state co-chairman of the Carter-Mondale campaign.

Reagan's supporters credited the win to hard work by the candidate and hard work by those working for him. Reagan made five trips to Texas after being named the presidential nominee. Vice presidential candidate George Bush made nine Texas trips.

The former California governor bore down on the need for more defense spending and criticized Carter for not controlling inflation. He also won Texas votes with blasts at the windfall profits tax and excessive government controls over oil and gas.

In an AP-NBC poll taken Tuesday among Texas voters, 56 percent of them said the president should control inflation and 76 percent said defense spending should be increased.

Fifty-two percent of Reagan's voters told pollsters they had been contacted by Reagan's campaigners. Only 28 percent of Carter's voters had been approached by the Carter-Mondale campaign.

The poll showed 77 percent of the Hispanics voting, voted for Carter, compared to 83 percent four years ago. Texas blacks went 97 percent for Carter, according to the poll.

Clements, who personally directed Reagan's campaign, said 40,000 volunteers worked for Reagan, particularly in vast telephone banks where more than 1.5 million calls were made to voters. About $3 million was spent on the Reagan-Bush campaign in Texas, compared to about $1.5 million for Carter-Mondale.

Democrats put much of their effort into auto caravans that traveled to 144 counties. Members of Carter's family, cabinet members and state officials were aboard on most of them.

Bob Beckel, state campaign director for Carter-Mondale, said they realized Carter was "a point or two behind" after last Tuesday's debate but they thought he had regained momentum with a last minute trip to Brownsville, San Antonio, Houston, Abilene and Fort Worth.

With most of the votes counted, results showed Reagan took at least six of the larger population counties that went for Carter in 1976. These included Bell, Brazoria, El Paso, Grayson, McLennan and Wichita.

Bush says country 'on road again'

NBC first on Reagan win projections

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC News projected Ronald Reagan the 1980 presidential election victor over President Carter at 8:15 EST Tuesday night, more than 90 minutes ahead of the other commercial networks.

But the large Reagan victory, apparent early in the vote-counting, deprived the networks' winner-projecting competition of its usual zest.

ABC projected enough electoral votes for a Reagan victory at 9:50 p.m.

HOUSTON (AP) — Vice President-elect George Bush, savoring an overwhelming and stunning Republican sweep throughout his adopted home state, borrowed a line from a popular country-western song to depict his vision of the nation's path under a new Republican administration.

Bush strolled into the main ballroom of the Houston Oaks Hotel for his victory speech Tuesday night, shortly after President-elect Ronald Reagan had made one in California.

They were greeted by wild cheering and applause from more than 2,000 supporters who packed the hotel's main ballroom.

Quoting a line from country singer Willie Nelson's recent hit, the 56-year-old former Texas congressman and U.N. ambassador encouraged the jubilation.

"America, in the words of the song, is 'on the road again' and with the leadership of Ronald Reagan, that road is going to lead our country back to greatness," he said.

Bush flies to California today for meetings with Reagan and a staff preparing the transition from a Democratic leader to a Republican administration.

Tuesday night's victory, Bush said, marked not only a mandate for change but for peace and freedom.

"A mandate for prosperity, a mandate for opportunity for all Americans... a mandate to make government the servant of the people in the way our founding fathers intended," he said.

"A mandate for hope — for the fulfillment of the great dream that President-elect Reagan has worked for all his life, and to which he and I are going to dedicate every fiber of our being in the years ahead," he added.

Bush thanked the crowd for their support, saying he was "proud to be able to serve in the years ahead with a man, a decent and honorable man I know is going to provide the leadership the people of America want and need."

"This is a night of celebration for some of us, of disappointment for others," he said. "But tomorrow, in the great American tradition, those of us who celebrate tonight and those who have suffered disappointment must come together as one people to meet the larger challenge."

Mondale hints defeat not end to his political career

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Vice President Walter F. Mondale, hinting the Democratic ticket's defeat is not the end of his political career, meets with reporters before flying back to Washington to help turn over the government to Republican hands.

Mondale planned to hold a news conference today and then fly back to the nation's capital. Aides said he and his wife, Joan, would take a vacation in Puerto Rico late this week.

Despite a landslide Republican victory Tuesday night that turned Mondale and President Carter out of office, the vice president rallied his supporters by telling them to continue working for civil rights, arms control, peace and a clean environment.

"In that cause, I pledge to work together with you again!" he shouted.

He also told the cheering crowd of advice he received 12 years ago from the late Hubert H. Humphrey. Humphrey, preparing a concession speech to then-President-elect Richard M. Nixon, said, "It's got to be done right because it's really the opening speech of my next campaign."

Joining Mondale on the podium were Mrs. Mondale and the couple's three children, Theodore, 23, Eleanor, 20, and William, 18.

The vice president, who has known only victory in a political career spanning two decades, said there was something to be learned in defeat.

"I know...that the depth of your views and beliefs, the commitment to your ideals, is much more severely tested in defeat than in victory," he said.

He voiced special thanks to the president, calling him a "kind and good man" who allowed Mondale "to work more closely with him than any other vice president in American history and I thank him profoundly."

In closing, Mondale, the son of a Methodist minister, quoted from the Apostle Paul: "I have fought the good fight. I have finished the course. I have kept the faith."

Students protest Reagan's victory

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — More than 3,000 demonstrators chanting "the end is near" and "Reagan must go" took to the streets of Berkeley to protest the election of Ronald Reagan as president, police said.

The crowd, which police said was made up mostly of University of California students, cheered and chanted "down with Reagan" Tuesday night as a likeness of the former California governor was burned effigy.

City and university police stood by in riot gear while Mayor Gus Newport urged the crowd to disperse peacefully.

Some protesters said they would be back on the streets today.

No arrests or injuries were reported. Police said a window was broken when the crowd rallied in front of Sproul Hall, the university administration building that was the site of angry anti-war and anti-draft demonstrations during the late 1960s.

Berkeley police Officer Ernest Montez said the rally was "loud and rowdy," but that police limited their involvement to directing traffic on streets clogged by the demonstrators.

Some marchers carried candles and screamed "get Bonzo off the button" as the demonstration proceeded across the campus to People's Park.

There, satirist Stoney Burke told the crowd that "twelve years ago, in this park, Ronald Reagan challenged the city of Berkeley. We take up this challenge again today."

Burke referred to Reagan's efforts to quell demonstrations and riots in Berkeley while governor.

Philadelphia's Steve Carlton wins again

Steve Carlton captures third Cy Young award

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Carlton, the brilliant left-hander who led the Philadelphia Phillies to baseball's world championship this year, was named winner of the National League Cy Young award for a record-tying third time Tuesday.

Carlton was voted the honor by a Baseball Writers Association of America panel and joined Tom Seaver and Sandy Koufax as the only three-time winners of the coveted award which goes to the league's best pitcher.

CARLTON POLLED 118 points, with 23 of 24 first-place votes and one second-place vote. Jerry Reuss of the Los Angeles Dodgers got the other first-place vote and wound up second with 55 points.

Jim Bibby of the Pittsburgh Pirates was third with 28, followed by Joe Niekro of the Houston Astros with 11 and Tug McGraw of Philadelphia, Steve Rogers of the Montreal Expos, Joe Sambito of Houston and Mario Soto of the Cincinnati Reds with one point apiece.

The overpowering Phillie southpaw posted a record of 24-9 with a 2.34 earned run average during the regular season, leading the majors with 286 strikeouts. He was the winning pitcher in the opening game of the National League Championship Series against Houston and also won the second and sixth games of the World Series against Kansas City.

Carlton, who previously won the award in 1972 and 1977, was the Phillies' stopper, a man Manager Dallas Green always could depend on for a solid performance when his team needed it most.

"Basically, there wasn't anybody but 'Lefty' who could have won this award in 1980 in the National League," Green said of the 35-year-old pitcher. "I can't say enough about what Carlton did. His dedication and hard work enabled him to maintain his quality of pitching, especially at his age."

Green said with the exception of one game early in the season, which Carlton lost 6-1 to Montreal, the Phillies had a chance to win every other game the big left-hander pitched.

"His first, last and middle name was consistency," the manager said. "Consider that he won 15 or 16 times after we had lost a game. There is no stopper better than that. We never had to suffer through a losing streak. That's a most valuable pitcher. There is no question about that."

CARLTON, A FIERCELY private person, has refused to talk to the press for the past several seasons. In the madness of the Phillies' victorious dressing room following the clinching victory in the World Series, he held his own solitary celebration in the trainer's room, where he often seeks sanctuary from interviewers.

Carlton was not even available to be notified that he had won the award.

He had been expected to go to Japan this week to conduct some baseball clinics with teammates Mike Schmidt and Pete Rose, but the trip was canceled and the pitcher went hunting instead. His wife said she did not know where he was when the award was announced and added he was expected to be away for about a week.

Pistons rally for win

Snap Buck winning streak, 98-96

By The Associated Press
Everything looked bleak Tuesday night for the Detroit Pistons, who have been slumping as badly in 1980 as the Big Three auto companies.

They were 1-10, playing on the home court of the 11-2 Milwaukee Bucks and trailing 81-70 after three quarters. But it all turned the Pistons around in that final period and they beat the Bucks 98-96, snapping their 10-game winning streak.

"It's easy to give up, but we are professionals and we have to play hard," said John Long, who scored 33 points for Detroit, including 12 in the decisive fourth quarter. "If you keep plugging away, like we did tonight, something is going to come your way."

In other National Basketball Association games, the Washington Bullets smashed the Atlanta Hawks 122-98, the Utah Jazz nipped the Kansas City Kings 107-104, the San Diego Clippers tripped the Dallas Mavericks 116-102, the Phoenix Suns edged the Indiana Pacers 109-108 and the Los Angeles Lakers beat the Portland Trail Blazers 119-118.

Pistons Coach Scotty Robertson was elated by the victory. "Nobody gives us a chance but I keep telling my players that you have to beat us on the court ... not in the media or the dressing room," Robertson said. "I told them to keep going to the well and some time you'll get some water."

Bucks Coach Don Nelson attributed the loss to his team's inability to keep Detroit off the offensive boards. "They had 20 offensive rebounds.

Syndicate optimistic over baseball in Cleveland

CLEVELAND (AP) — The syndicate that bought majority interest in the Cleveland Indians baseball team says that despite anemic attendance in recent years, a market for baseball exists in Cleveland.

"I've played a lot of shows in this town and I feel we are going to do very well here," James Nederlander, a New York theater czar and financial kingpin of the purchase said in a news conference Tuesday.

Neil Papiano, a Los Angeles attorney and partner in the syndicate, said baseball may not be the best financial investment, but it has interest and fun going for it.

The Indians lost some $2 million during the 1980 season. Papiano said he saw no reason why the team could not be a contender for the league crown in 1981.

Nederlander, Papiano and other limited partners have purchased about 63 percent of the team for a reported $10 million. The former majority owner, F.J. O'Neill, will retain about 10 percent interest in the club.

Florida gets test Saturday with Georgia

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Florida football Coach Charley Pell said Tuesday his 20th ranked Gators will be tested Saturday when they take on No. 2 Georgia in what he considers "a good old neighborhood rivalry."

"This game is a classic every year, but even more so this year," Pell told a Tuesday press conference. "It's obvious to us we are a stepping stone for Georgia to reach a national championship."

The Bulldogs are 8-0 overall and 4-0 in the Southeastern Conference after an impressive victory over South Carolina. Pell said he's worried about freshman sensation Herschel Walker, but the rest of the Georgia team has him concerned, too.

"What Georgia changes in its offense is they give it to Walker right one week and left the next," said Pell.

Walker has gained 1,096 yards this season, including 283 yards against Vanderbilt. But Georgia has another threat in quarterback Buck Belue, who's ranked second in the SEC in passing efficiency this week, Pell noted.

McEnroe takes easy win

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — John McEnroe, who won the Stockholm Open tennis tournament on a fast surface the two past years, started his second title defense Tuesday on a new, slow court and whipped Balazs Taroczy 6-3, 6-0.

McEnroe has a less impressive record on slow courts, but showed his allround skills as he repeatedly outdueled the Hungarian clay court specialist from the baseline in his first round match of the $175,000 indoor tournament.

It used to be a heaven for the serve and volley specialists in Stockholm's Royal Tennis Hall. But this year, the organizers introduced a new vinyl slab surface considered slower than clay by most players.

McEnroe had a shaky start, Taroczy getting five break points in the opening game, but the American finally held and then quickly seized his first chance to score a break.

He broke through in the fourth game for a 3-1 lead after two brilliant cross-court backhand shots and that was all he needed to win the first set.

McEnroe then jumped all over Taroczy in the second set, breaking through all three times the Hungarian served.

Four other Americans, including third-seeded Gene Mayer and sixth-seeded Elliot Teltcher, won their first round matches. But two former champions, 1977 winner Sandy Mayer and two-time champ Stan Smith, were victims of the slow court.

Gene Mayer trounced U.S. based Andrew Pattison of Zimbabwe 6-2, 6-2 and Teltcher outlasted Angel Gimenez of Spain, 5-7, 6-0, 6-4.

Sandy Mayer, Gene's brother, fell to Wojtek Fluk of Poland 6-4, 6-2. Heinz Gunthardt of Switzerland ousted Smith 6-4, 6-1.

Butch Waltz overcame Stefan Simonsson of Sweden, 6-4, 4-6, 6-1, and fellow American Bob Lutz took Pascal Portes of France, 6-3, 6-1.

Borg faces Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia in his first round match Wednesday. The Swedish five-time Wimbledon champion has never won this tournament, the only indoor championship recognized by the International Tennis Federation.

MHS net team downs Big Spring

The Midland High tennis team, ranked 20th in the state by the new Texas Tennis Coaches Association poll, defeated Big Spring, 18-0, Tuesday in a dual tennis match at the MHS courts.

San Antonio Alamo Heights is the top ranked team in the state. Abilene Cooper is ranked second, Odessa Permian fifth and Abilene High 14th in the new poll, which shows a great deal of strength for District 5-A.

Results of the match are as follows:
Boys Singles: Richey Housh def. Weaver, 6-3, 6-1; John Martin def. Franklin, 6-2, 6-1; Scott Moore def. Nelson, 6-2, 6-2; Duncan Fraser def. Williams, 6-2, 6-1; David Barton def. Rogers, 6-0, 6-0; Paul Hughton def. Childers, 6-4, 6-0.

Girls Singles: Vee Ann Atinip def. Cannon, 6-0, 6-1; Jonata Hasek def. Madry, 7-4, 6-2; Monica Blair def. Hiddison, 6-1, 6-2; Diane Ladaga def. Moore, 6-1, 6-1; Julie Crain def. Lucas, 6-1, 6-0.

Girls Doubles: Atinip-Kirwan def. Cannon-Madry, 6-2, 6-1; Hasek-Blair def. Hiddison-Moore, 6-2, 6-0.

Ealer sets record

CARMEL, Calif. (AP) — Saul Ealer, 64, of Los Angeles, shocked several familiar names in golfing by shooting a course record 67 Tuesday to take the first round lead in the $100,000 U.S. National Senior Golf Championship.

Ealer tallied a hole-in-one, five birdies and two bogies on Rancho Canada-West, toughest of the three courses in use for the 24-year-old event.

Canadiens take narrow 5-4 victory

MONTREAL (AP) — Yvon Lambert's goal midway through the final period propelled the Montreal Canadiens to a 5-4 victory over the Quebec Nordiques in a National Hockey League game Tuesday night.

Quebec defenseman Normand Rochefort was penalized at 9:17 of the third period for freezing the puck with his hand, and the Canadiens took 1 minute and 29 seconds to take advantage of the infraction. A drive by Guy Lapointe was deflected to Lambert, who fired the puck past Nordiques goaltender Michel Plasse.

Nark Napier, Steve Shutt, Rejean Houle and Guy Lafleur scored Montreal's other goals. Brothers Peter and Anton Stastny; Jamie Hislop and Michel Goulet scored for the Nordiques.

It was the third consecutive triumph for the Canadiens, who improved their record to 5-6-1.

Limited partners seeking removal of Tal Smith

HOUSTON (AP) — Limited partners in the Houston Astros' ownership seeking removal of general partner John McMullen say they still are working with enthusiasm.

Several of the limited partners were outraged Oct. 27 when McMullen fired General Manager Tal Smith and replaced him with Al Rosen, former New York Yankees general manager.

"I think we are going to see positive results," said Don Sanders, an investments executive who helped put the limited partnership package together last year.

"Everyone is working diligently on this thing," another limited partner, R. John Stanton, also an investments executive, said. "We continue to be dedicated to change our general partner."

"There is a lot of work to be done which requires a lot of time," Stanton said. "That has to be understood, but even though the furor has died down, our intensity has continued. All of us consider this firing an abominable act."

McMullen, a New York ship-builder, owns or controls about 34 percent of the ownership. The remaining 66 percent is held by limited partners, including 20 Houston residents. Legal documents filed last year indicate 60 percent of the ownership could dissolve the partnership arrangement.

Uil includes 'runnerup' on its November ballot

The UIL, at the behest of the Texas High School Coaches Association, will put a new state playoff structure for football, basketball, baseball and volleyball on the November ballot for approval or disapproval.

In some areas, such as the Gulf Coast and Fort Worth-Dallas areas, it has received enthusiastic support. The UIL hasn't done any handshakes over the prospect, but the coaches, especially football coaches, like the idea of a second chance.

It would necessitate moving the schedule up a week and eliminating the open date to accommodate an extra week of playoff action, at least in football. It would be structured so that a district champion would not face the runnerup team from its district before the championship game.

It would be patterned, apparently, after the College World Series playoffs and, for that matter, the NCAA basketball playoffs, both of which have had finalists from the same conference. Runnerup Arizona beat WAC champion Arizona State in the College Series a few years ago and in basketball Indiana won its national championship at the expense of Big 10 rival Michigan back in the mid-1970s.

Of course, one of the biggest arguments in favor of a runnerup advancing to post-season play would be the sustaining of fan interest through what becomes the drudgery of the final weeks once a champion has been decided.

RANDY HUNDLEY, after two seasons as Midland Cubs manager, apparently will not be back next season. With Wichita Aeros manager Jack Hatt moving up to the Chicago Cubs as a coach, that leaves a vacancy at the triple A level, now Des Moines, and if the Cubs follow tradition, Randy would probably move up.

And if tradition holds, Jim Napier, who has guided Quad-Cities to the Midwest League playoffs the last two years, would succeed Hundley at Midland. But the parent Cubs aren't ready to announce anything as yet.

Jim Saul, who managed Midland in 1977-78, is an outside possibility. Saul, after a year as coach at Oakland, managed El Paso last year, but since the Angels have moved to the Eastern League, Jim's future is in doubt. A native of Tennessee, Jim has always been partial to Midland...

ROGER STAUBACH has a sly sense of humor and if you don't listen closely some of his best shots will slip by unnoticed. Of course, Staubach's "Amy" reference Sunday had the effect of a Staubach-Drew Pearson game-winning bomb pass in the final seconds at Washington. Even another ex-Navy man, Jimmy Carter, was upset about it.

We still haven't heard whether ex-teammate Andy Frederick is mad at Roger, too, over his "Andy had a charisma bypass" operation.

Last year, after one of his patented last-minute rescue jobs, a writer asked how come he commanded so much respect and confidence from his teammates.

Roger deadpanned, "They remember me from the 1963 Army-Navy game."

Landry comparing team with 1975

DALLAS (AP) — In 1975, the Dallas Cowboys had a dozen wildly enthusiastic rookies and not many believers in their Super Bowl dream.

The Cowboys surprised their way right into the Super Bowl and lost by only a touchdown to the powerful Pittsburgh Steelers.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry said Tuesday he could see a parallel between the days of the "Dirty Dozen" and the current crop of eight rookies.

"There is a parallel in enthusiasm with the current group and the young players we had in 1975," said Landry.

"There is a tremendous amount of enthusiasm and it picks up the veterans."

He continued "For example, the tackle James Jones made on Chuck Muncie in the game against San Diego on a kickoff just fired up the whole team. Something like that just helps the older players.

"Everybody was surprised when we made it to the Super Bowl. This year our team is a little more solid but the rookies really help."

Jones has started at halfback, returned punts and kickoffs, and gone down the field under kickoffs to make tackles. The other rookies include offensive lineman Kurt Petersen, defensive backs Bill Roe, Dexter Clinkscales, and Roland Solomon, linebacker Anthony Dickerson, quarterback Gary Hogeboom and halfback Timmy Newsome.

Landry was concerned about his running game at Tuesday's press luncheon.

"We didn't run block and we didn't run last week," said Landry. "When you only gain 58 yards, you've got to NOT work at it."

He said "we're going to cut down on our plays some. You can go through the season with a play that looks good on the blackboard but for some reason it never jells.

Winslow strikes fear into NFL secondaries

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Down through the years the prototype tight end of the National Football League has been represented by such well-known names as John Mackey, Mike Ditka, Ron Kramer, and Russ Francis. A new name is striking fear in NFL secondaries and eliciting comparisons of past and present counterparts. At 6-foot-6 and 252 pounds, San Diego's Kellen Winslow has comparable physical dimensions and football skills. A major difference, according to Winslow watchers, is his speed — the speed of a wide receiver, a position the pass-happy Chargers occasionally use the former Missouri standout. "I honestly don't know anybody else in football like him," says Joe Gibbs, offensive coordinator of San Diego's dynamic passing attack. The Chargers' No. 1 draft pick of 1979, Winslow has exploded in his second NFL season. With nine catches for 153 yards in a 31-14 victory over Cincinnati Sunday, Winslow tied teammate John Jefferson for most receptions (58) in the American Football Conference. A year ago, he was leading the Chargers in receptions (25) when he broke his leg in game seven against Seattle. A healthy Winslow has given the already potent Chargers another devastating weapon in their aerial arsenal. "The guy has so much ability and so much size, but I'll tell you something else about him," Gibbs told Steve Bisheff of The San Diego Tribune. "He's probably the smartest football player I've ever been around outside of a quarterback. For all his tremendous physical ability, it's his intelligence that really sets him apart." Winslow teams up with All-Pro receivers Jefferson and Charlie Joiner, giving the Chargers an outstanding stable of pass catchers. A year ago, the Chargers produced a pair of 1,000-yard receivers in Jefferson and Joiner. With quarterback Dan Fouts 472 yards ahead of his record 4,082 passing yardage pace of last season, San Diego, the AFC West co-leader, could conceivably produce three 1,000-yard receivers. With seven games remaining, Jefferson has 835 yards, Winslow 789 and Joiner 653 on 40 catches. District 5-5A standings

Monte Clark not happy over flap

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Monte Clark isn't laughing about the flap between his quarterback and his general manager, but neither does he intend to let it interfere with the Detroit Lions' drive toward a National Football League playoff berth. After suffering through a disastrous 2-14 season in 1979, Clark feels he already has met the sternest test he'll ever face. "They say you only have one life to give," Clark told his weekly news luncheon Tuesday. "I gave at the office last year." The trouble started late Sunday, after the Lions' 17-13 victory over the San Francisco 49ers, when quarterback Gary Danielson publicly blasted Russ Thomas, the general manager. Danielson, who concluded a bitter contract dispute with Thomas just before training camp began, was upset that defensive tackle John Woodcock had walked out on the team — in a contract hassle — before the 49ers game and apparently is prepared to sit out the rest of the season. In his anger and frustration, however, Danielson apparently got some of his facts wrong, saying that Thomas was trying to force game plans on Clark and that Thomas also wanted Clark to switch quarterbacks. Both Clark and Thomas vehemently denied the charges. "Russ Thomas hasn't tried to influence anything I've done since I've been in Detroit," Clark said. "Quite frankly, I wouldn't listen to him if he did." Clark reminded reporters that he left San Francisco after leading the 49ers back to respectability in 1976 rather than buckle under to general manager Joe Thomas. When he came to Detroit it was with the proviso that he, and he alone, be in charge of the football program and personnel; Thomas was only to handle contract negotiations. "I don't live in a vacuum or in fear for my job," Clark said. "Players, coaches and general managers all live under the same law of the jungle in the NFL. I wouldn't muzzle either Gary or Russ. This is still America where a man can say whatever he believes is right." Still, the Lions' coach, who has turned his team around with a 6-3 record, good enough for a 1 1/2-game lead in the Central Division of the National Conference, was chagrined at having to devote so much time to what, to him, was a meaningless flap. "Why can't we be happy?" he wondered. "I've worked extremely hard to get the loyalty and trust of the football team and nobody's going to get me to change." Clark hinted that part of the problem rested with "media cronies" of Danielson who have a vendetta against Thomas. "I desperately hope this incident does not become an insurmountable obstacle," Clark said. "We've got to put it behind us."

Baker becomes free agent

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I'm disappointed and I think they're disappointed," Los Angeles outfielder Dusty Baker said of the Dodgers after he placing his name in baseball's re-entry draft. "This is my home and this is where I wanted to play," Baker said Tuesday after notifying the Major League Players Association to include his name on the list for the Nov. 13 draft. "Everything has been good here. It's not 100 percent dead; the lines are still open, legally and emotionally." Baker and his agent, Jerry Kaptein, had met with Dodger owner Peter O'Malley and Vice President Al Campanis earlier Tuesday, trying to reach contractual accord with the team. "His asking price was too high," a Dodger spokesman said. Baker's salary demands weren't revealed, but it had been reported previously that he was seeking a five-year contract worth $4 million. He hit .294 with 29 home runs and 97 runs batted in last season for Los Angeles and had 17 game-winning hits. Baker, 31, came to the Dodgers from Atlanta in the winter of 1975. Los Angeles swapped the Braves' Jimmy Wynn, Tom Facionek, Lee Lacy and Jerry Royster for Baker and infielder Ed Gooden. O'Malley issued an announcement later Tuesday, saying the Dodgers have made Baker a five-year guaranteed contract offer which would establish the outfielder as one of the top 10 paid players in major league baseball today. "Al Campanis and myself met again today with Dusty and his agent, Jerry Kaptein, and we feel we made a great effort to sign Dusty," said O'Malley.

Sooners impress Carolina's Crum

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Saturday's trip to Oklahoma left North Carolina football coach Dick Crum dazed, confused and impressed. The Sooners soundly whipped the previously unbeaten Tar Heels, 41-7. Crum said he thought the 14th-ranked Tar Heels, 7-1, might have a chance when they knocked the Sooners starting fullback Stanley Wilson out of the game. "But the guy they brought in (Weldon Ledbetter) was better than he was," Crum said at his Tuesday news conference. "Their red-shirts are probably better than that." The Tar Heel coach said Oklahoma "would have scored 100 points if they could get it, but 41 was all they could get," noting that 11th-ranked Oklahoma kept its starters in until the end. As he walked off the field after the game, Crum said he kept wondering, "Why in the world do these people have two losses?" If it was any consolation, Crum said the Sooners played their best game of the year. "But we caught their hottest game of the year," Crum said. "They ran the wishbone effectively (495 yards rushing). If you were going to draw the offense on paper, that's the way it went." Losing is never good, and this loss knocked the Tar Heels from the ranks of the unbeaten. But some good came of the bad, Crum said.

"Coming out of the ball game, we're a better football team, even though we got beat," the coach said. But that game is now history and the Tar Heels must move on to more important matters — staying on top of the Atlantic Coast Conference. The Tar Heels have one of those games coming this Saturday. They put their 3-0 ACC record against the Clemson Tigers, 2-2 in the conference and 5-3 overall. They (Clemson) had their ups and downs this year," Crum said of Clemson. "But they are still a very fine football team. We have to play a solid football game to win." The Tigers beat North Carolina, 19-10, last year. And Crum said he doesn't see that much difference in this year's team, which is 5-3 overall and 2-2 in the ACC. Clemson's biggest offensive weapon, Crum said, is sophomore quarterback Homer Jordan. He is the Tigers' total offense leader with 366 yards rushing and 874 passing. "He's a real fine quarterback," Crum said of Jordan. "He runs and throws the ball well. He's in a category by himself and is probably the best I've ever seen." This game is particularly important to North Carolina. Maryland is taking the week off with a 3-1 ACC mark. If the Tar Heels should lose, they would fall into a tie for first place with the Terps.

Crandall inks again with Dukes

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Del Crandall, who led the Albuquerque Dukes to the 1980 Pacific Coast League baseball championship, has been signed to again manage the team in 1981, team officials said Wednesday. "There is no doubt in my mind that he is capable of handling a major league managerial job and I certainly hope that he gets back to the big leagues," Pat McKernan, Dukes general manager, said in a news release. "But until he gets that break, I believe that the Dukes are benefitting from the services of the finest minor league manager in the game today," McKernan said.

Temple still leading AP schoolboy football poll

By The Associated Press

Defending state champion Temple in 5A, Bay City in 4A, Childress in 3A and Pilot Point in 2A carried their No. 1 rankings in The Associated Press Schoolboy Football Poll a step closer to the 1980 state playoffs.

The four leaders registered lopsided victories in last week's games and their dominance was reflected in the voting by the AP panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Temple received 15 of the 21 first place votes cast following a 31-9 victory over Killen and outpointed runner-up Port Arthur Jefferson 191-61. Bay City blasted Brazosport 52-0 and also garnered 15 first place votes and a 199-171 point margin over No. 2 ranked Gainesville. Childress defeated Tulla 27-6 and held off second place Stamford 174-152.

Pilot Point retained its top billing by a 10-4 margin in first place votes and a point edge of 187-169 over runner-up Waskom.

There were three newcomers including Harlingen in Class 5A, Huntsville in 4A and Marli in 2A.

Lubbock Chronod dropped from its No. 7 rating last week out of the poll and Harlingen, 8-0, moved in as No. 10. Stafford Dulles, which clinched a district title last week, moved up from 10th to eighth.

Ennis, ranked ninth in 4A last week, dropped off the list this week after a 21-6 loss to No. 6 Corsicana and Beaumont Hebert, rated fourth last week, fell to seventh after a 10-10 tie with Jasper.

Huntsville, 6-1-1, also with a tie against Jasper, moved in as the No. 10 ranked team.

There were no upsets or major changes in Class 3A although Allen exchanged positions with Slaton, moving from sixth to fifth.

Previously unbeaten Baird was the lone loser in 2A and dropped from its No. 9 ranking out of the poll. Mart, 7-1, which appeared in the poll for one week earlier this season, returned to the No. 10 position.

Georgia Tech quarterback doubtful

ATLANTA (AP) — Quarterback Mike Kelley, who has missed Georgia Tech's last three games due to a shoulder injury, is listed as doubtful for Saturday's game against No. 1 Notre Dame.

"He's doubtful, questionable at best," Tech spokesman Brooks Tinsley said Tuesday. Kelley, the junior signal-caller who suffered a severe sprain to his right shoulder in the opening quarter of Tech's 23-10 loss to Tennessee Oct. 11.

Kelley began workouts last week but threw "only three times last Tuesday" and was unable to continue, said Tinsley. He has not thrown since.

But he said Kelley is expected to work out this week.

McNiff joins Yankees

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Tampa FBI chief Philip McNiff says he'll leave the bureau after nearly 30 years to become a troubleshooter for New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner.

"I'll be looking out for his interests," McNiff said.

He said he would "absolutely not" be a bodyguard to Steinbrenner, who also owns the American Ship Building Co. in Tampa, a Tampa motel, a horse farm in Ocala, Fla., and is part owner of Florida Downs Race Track in Oldsmar.

McNiff announced Monday he would resign at the end of next week as special agent in charge of the Tampa FBI office.

Reagan prepares for transition

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President-elect Ronald Reagan, triumphant at age 69 after a 12-year quest for the White House, is beginning talks with top advisers today to shift Republican efforts from trying to win an election to trying to set up a new government.

Reagan, who had campaigned against President Carter's handling of the economy and against the notion the nation's economic problems were too complex to be solved, accepted his victory Tuesday night by saying:

"I aim to try and tap that great American spirit that opened up this completely undeveloped continent from coast to coast and made it a great nation."

Carter takes defeat with ease

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — With his tie off and shirt-sleeves wrinkled from the last day of campaigning, Jimmy Carter, spearing two olives from his drink, was the picture of relaxation as Air Force One sped from the West Coast home to Plains.

But he was only minutes away from learning that, although the polls would not begin opening for two or three hours, he would be rejected, in his pollster's opinion, by a landslide.

And after his press secretary and confidante, Jody Powell, gave him the devastating news, the president did what he had planned to: he took a nap.

Many times, Carter has said, if he feels he has done his best and has fought the good fight, he has no trouble with his conscience or his sleep. Not even an impending, crushing defeat could, apparently, keep him awake.

Tuesday's defeat was the second of Carter's political career. "I can't stand here tonight and say it doesn't hurt," he told supporters in conceding defeat.

After that first wrenching loss — his defeat in the 1966 Georgia gubernatorial contest — Carter embarked on the life of a Baptist missionary, visiting homes to win converts to his faith. He and his wife, Rosalynn, had a fourth child, Amy, their first daughter.

And he embarked on another crusade, one that was ultimately successful: to win a second race for governor in 1970. With dogged determination, he and family members left their home in Plains to crisscross the state. By the end of the campaign, Carter has estimated, he had shaken 600,000 hands.

His arrival in the governor's mansion in Atlanta brought national attention. The new governor, it was said, represented a "new South" of racial tolerance.

By 1972, his long-time aide, Hamilton Jordan, was working on a plan to run Carter for president in 1976 and there was a flurry of thought he might be Sen. George McGovern's running mate on the 1972 presidential ticket. By the end of 1974, Carter had declared his presidential candidacy — that of an outsider who would set Washington straight.

When he arrived in the nation's capital, his honeymoon lasted not much longer than his inaugural walk down Pennsylvania Avenue.

The 1976 campaign, one staff member said Tuesday night, set "very high standards, which were very difficult to live up to."

Then there were the problems of key Carter aides: Budget Director Bert Lance, departed under a cloud of alleged banking irregularities for which he was later indicted and acquitted; and drug adviser Peter Bourne, departed under a cloud of suspicion for dispensing a drug prescription.

There was the president's energy program — the "moral equivalent of war," he called it. Critics ridiculed it. Within three years, however, much of the original program was enacted.

Down and up he went in the polls, as Americans reacted to his difficulties and to his triumphs, most notably the Camp David peace pact and the follow-up visit he made to the Middle East to fight for a further agreement.

But then came the pact with the Soviet Union to limit nuclear weapons, the strategic arms limitation treaty. It faced an uncertain future in the Senate when the Soviets invaded Afghanistan and Carter felt compelled to withdraw the treaty — a key element in his foreign policy — from consideration.

Anderson campaign helped 'landslide'

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — John B. Anderson's independent presidential candidacy did not attract enough votes to account for President Carter's defeat in Tuesday's presidential election, but it probably contributed to the size of Republican Ronald Reagan's landslide.

With only two states undecided, Reagan had won or was leading in 43 states with 475 electoral votes, one of history's biggest electoral landslides. Carter had won or was leading in eight states with 63 electoral votes.

Anderson failed to carry a single state and therefore won no electoral votes, but he did get 7 percent of the popular vote, which probably swung into the Reagan column some states that might otherwise have gone for Carter.

It is impossible to tell how many of Anderson's votes might have gone to Carter or Reagan if Anderson had not been in the race, but his popular vote in a dozen states was greater than the margin of victory for the winner of the state.

For example, in Alabama, with most of the vote in, Anderson got more than 15,500 votes. This was a state Carter carried in 1976 and had counted on in 1980.

Collectively these states have 124 electoral votes. Another close state might have added 26 more electoral votes to the "Anderson difference."

There are some other examples, based on complete or nearly complete votes:

Arkansas — Anderson got more than 20,600 votes. Reagan was leading by just over 2,000 and Reagan was leading Carter there by only 12,000 votes.

Connecticut — Anderson got more than 167,000. Reagan won by 134,000.

Delaware — Anderson got 16,000. Reagan won by less than 5,000.

Kentucky — Anderson got more than 29,000. Reagan won by 20,000.

Maine — Anderson got 49,000. Reagan won by about 14,000.

Mississippi — Anderson got 13,000. Reagan won by 6,000.

New York — Anderson got 440,000. Reagan won by 160,000.

North Carolina — Anderson got 61,000. Reagan won by 34,400.

Tennessee (Carter's second best state in 1976) — Anderson got almost 36,000. Reagan won by 5,000.

Vermont — Anderson got 31,000. Reagan won by 12,000.

Reagan's press secretary, Lyn Nofziger, who told reporters he himself does not expect to go to Washington, said the former governor of California plans to remain in his home in Pacific Palisades all day.

But Reagan will begin work "right away" on the transition to a GOP administration following his landslide victory, Nofziger said. Among the first visitors to the Reagan home will be Vice President-elect George Bush, who was flying here from Houston, Texas, this morning.

Edwin Meese, the campaign chief of staff who served Reagan in a similar capacity during his governorship, said he does not expect the president-elect to announce his Cabinet until late November or early December.

"Our personnel people will collect a lot of names" between now and then and submit the three-to-five top choices for each job to Reagan, Meese said. He declined to discuss names, although he did appear to rule out an administration post for former President Gerald R. Ford, saying Ford "has a statesmanship position far beyond that of a Cabinet officer."

Reagan has said he would value the advice and counsel of the former president, who campaigned for Reagan this year despite their bitter battle for the GOP nomination four years ago.

The trend in the presidential race already was clear when Reagan prepared to leave home for dinner Tuesday evening with the group of wealthy Californians who convinced him to go into politics nearly two decades ago.

His departure was interrupted, however, by a phone call from President Carter, who congratulated him on his extraordinary victory and pledged to help smooth the transfer of power.

At about 7:30 p.m. PST, Reagan drove by motorcade from the palatial home of his host; industrialist Earle Jorgensen, to the Century Plaza Hotel. Campaign workers and supporters lucky enough to get tickets packed into the hotel ballroom around the dozens of television cameras and news reporters to wait for the victor's appearance.

While the crowd listened to music and cheered the announcement of the latest returns, Reagan remained in a 19th-floor hotel suite, tapping his fingers as he watched the election returns on three television sets.

He sat apart, somber, smiling only when visitors offered congratulations and shook his hand. Then congratulations came by telephone, one from Democratic Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

Reagan was surprised by the sweeping victory. "You know me," he said. "You heard me say 'cautiously optimistic' so many times."

At 8:54 p.m. PST, Reagan, his wife, Nancy, and their children stepped onto the stage one by one to a deafening roar from the crowd. "Here we are," the president-elect began.

"There's never been a more humbling moment in my life. Even if it had been the cliffhanger that all of us I think had been expecting, we would feel the same way...I give you my sacred oath that I will do my utmost to justify your trust."

Reagan said Abraham Lincoln, upon his election in 1860, summoned the reporters who had covered his campaign to tell them, "Your troubles are over now; mine have just begun."

"I think I know what he meant," Reagan said. "But I don't think he was afraid. He was ready to confront the problems, the troubles of the still-youthful country, determined to seize the historic opportunity to change things."

"I am not frightened by what lies ahead."

Carter likely won't accomplish much more

An Analysis
By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a lame duck defeated by an opponent with whom he differed so sharply, President Carter finds his hands effectively tied despite the large Democratic majorities in the outgoing Congress.

Ironically, the single major accomplishment Carter still may achieve would be the return home of the American hostages from Iran. Their continued ordeal after one year apparently was a significant factor in Ronald Reagan's landslide victory.

And it seems likely that Carter will consult with Reagan when negotiations begin with Iran for release of the hostages. Beyond that, there is little that Carter can hope to accomplish in the closing weeks of his presidency.

Congress returns next Wednesday for a lame duck session to act on the federal budget and appropriations bills for government departments and agencies.

It will be the outgoing, far more Democratic Congress that will return to the Capitol. For many Democratic members it will be their last trip as legislators.

The Congress that takes office in January will be far more Republican and conservative in its outlook.

But for those who hope that Carter might call on the lame duck Senate to act quickly on the SALT II treaty, which Reagan so adamantly opposes, such an act would be futile. The votes aren't there to approve the strategic arms limitation treaty, a fact that led Carter to withdraw it nearly a year ago.

The arms control treaty with the Soviet Union is dead until Reagan takes office and decides how to proceed with trying to reach a new agreement with Moscow.

Traditionally, the principal area left to lame duck presidents is their power of appointment.

Waiting.
It's another cost of doing business today. Because business is spread out all over the country.
And it takes time to get things from one part of the country to the other, sometimes days and days.
And that gets expensive.
For instance, every time an executive sends a letter, a document, or a report to another city, someone has to wait for it.
This slows down the whole project, which affects productivity, which affects profit, which affects the entire performance of the company.

emergency, but also as a way to eliminate the frustration, the annoyance, and the expense of waiting, and you'll start to see Federal Express the way we envisioned it in the first place.

Federal Express is really a new tool that is revolutionizing the way America does business, as did the phone, the copy machine, the computer, and jet travel.

In a very real sense, it's the next tool that's needed now that we can pick up the phone and talk to anyone and now that we can get on an airplane and go meet with anyone.

Thanks to Federal, you can now have things sent to you from practically any place in the country overnight.*

With no waiting, and all the mental and physical problems that go with it. After all, why wait when you don't have to?

And when you're talking about skilled labor waiting for a part for a machine or computer, you're talking big money for each day of waiting.

Fortunately, there is an alternative. For as little as $20.00, the report you called Phoenix for on Monday can be in your hands on Tuesday.

The part sitting on a shelf in Pittsburgh on Thursday can be in your assembly foreman's hands in Los Angeles on Friday.

All you have to do is have it sent Federal Express.

Florida birds may rest here

By SUSAN STOLER
Associated Press Writer

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Florida's loss could be Texas' gain this winter as thousands of retired northerners head south in mobile homes and travel trailers to escape ice, snow and home heating oil bills.

Tourism industry officials say they expect to make "winter Texans" out of some former Florida vacationers who are dissatisfied with crowding and immigration problems there.

An estimated 75,000 to 100,000 winter visitors flock to the lower Rio Grande Valley just north of the Mexican border each winter.

Most stay in trailer parks while others rent apartments and hotel rooms.

They boost the local economy by about $11 million annually and local businesses depend on their patronage.

"We hear from people in the parks that Florida is becoming a congested area and now the Cuban immigration has some worried," said Jon Opelt of the Harlingen Chamber of Commerce.

"In Florida they are tolerant of winter visitors but don't embrace them like the Valley does," Opelt said.

Almost 75 percent of winter Texans come from the Midwest, including the states of Minnesota, Missouri, Michigan, Kansas, Illinois, Wisconsin and Ohio.

Gene and Leona Pagel of Wauwatosa, Wis., came to Texas this year after seven seasons in Florida.

"Everything is too busy and too many of the half-way decent trailer parks are right on major highways with all the truck noise," said Pagel. "You're paying for the name of 'Florida,' and it's cheaper living here which is nothing to sneeze about these days," said the retired, 70-year-old engineer.

Pagel used to stay in Sebring, Fla., 80 miles south of Orlando but said the Cuban immigration was not a factor in his coming to Texas.

The phenomenon of trailer parks started 13 years ago when Joan Stanley and her husband opened one in Harlingen. Since then, she has seen the business mushroom into a multimillion-dollar competitive industry with more than 34,000 spaces across the Valley.

She said the vacationers arrive in a steady flow after Nov. 1, with big influxes after Thanksgiving and Christmas.

The average stay is 4½ months, although many are showing up earlier this year.

Mrs. Stanley said she went to three travel trailer rallies recently in Texas and Oklahoma and heard several people grumbling about Florida.

"It's becoming crowded there, they say, and the immigration problem in Florida is frightening them," she said.

Opelt said his office gets an average of 100 inquiries a day from retirees responding to ads placed in five, national travel-trailer magazines. The mail increased recently following nationally distributed articles about elderly Miami residents arming themselves against criminals.

"We don't put out publicity about Florida. We're just responding to questions. We don't want to sell on the negative," he said.

Deliberations continue in LA's 'Mafia' trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With five hours of talks already behind them, jurors in the trial of five reputed Mafia members were going back to court today to try to reach a verdict on charges ranging from racketeering to obstruction of justice.

The jurors and alternates were being kept under guard as they deliberated the case, which stems from the 1977 slaying in San Diego of Frank "the Bomp" Bompensiero, a Mafia counselor who turned government informer.

Before turning the case over to the panel Tuesday, prosecutors argued the case offered jurors a chance to put a crimp in crime.

"Organized crime activities have been uncovered in Los Angeles and can be dealt with severely and eliminated quickly if these people can go back to the streets and do what they've been doing," prosecutor James Henderson said in his closing argument Monday.

But defense attorney Howard Weitzman warned jurors to ignore the exciting nature of testimony about Mafia activities. He also asked them not to believe the testimony of Aladena "Jimmy the Weasel" Frattiano, a confessed mob hit man who testified for the prosecution.

Defendants in the case were Dominic Phillip Brooklier, 66; Samuel Sciortino, 62; Louis Tom Dragna, 59; Michael Rizzitello, 52; and Jack LoCicero, 68.

Israel refuses to legalize American residence

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's interior minister on Tuesday rejected a plan to legalize the residence in Israel of about 1,500 black Americans belonging to a People's Temple-like cult and said the government would "try to convince them" to leave.

The black Hebrews, who began moving to Israel 12 years ago claiming they were direct descendants of the ancient Israelites, live in packed housing blocks in several southern Israeli towns.

"I believe we have to explain to them they are living in absolute danger that the innocent ones could be exploited as was the case in the famous Jonestown in Guayana," Interior Minister Yosef Burg told Israel Radio.

A parliamentary commission recommended that the black Hebrews be permitted to set up an agricultural settlement in the Negev Desert and apply for citizenship after five years.

Knesset, the Israeli Parliament, Burg rejected the proposal, saying the cult had circulated anti-Israeli propaganda in the United States and was dangerously unstable.

The commission was set up after some 900 members of the People's Temple sect committed mass suicide and murder.

Redford protests look-alike

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Actor Robert Redford apparently doesn't like the idea that a Republican candidate in the U.S. Senate race in Indiana is being promoted as a Redford "look-alike."

Redford has sent a telegram to U.S. Rep. Dan Quayle protesting the use of his name and photographs in connection with Quayle's campaign to unseat Sen. Birch Bayh.

In the telegram, sent through Warner Communications Inc. in New York on Friday, the film star said Quayle has been referred to throughout the campaign as the GOP's answer to Robert Redford.

"After comparing your record with that of Sen. Birch Bayh, it is clear to me that I am much more supportive of Bayh's views than yours," the telegram said. "I therefore find the connection with your campaign particularly insidious."

Quayle was not available for comment.

Stock market gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market staged a powerful advance in record-breaking activity today, responding to the election victory of Ronald Reagan and the Republicans' big gains in Congress.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks jumped 27.31 to 964.51 by noon-time, challenging its record single-day gain of 35.34 points on Nov. 1, 1978.

Gainers outnumbered losers by almost a 10-1 margin in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Big Board volume in the first two hours totaled 43.05 million shares. The busiest session to date at the exchange was Oct. 10 of last year, when 81.62 million shares changed hands.

Republican gains in Congress "may well lead to the passage of major fiscal changes," observed Robert Stovall, an analyst at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

But Stovall and other brokers were cautious about how long the euphoric mood might last. Further increases in interest rates such as the bank prime lending rate are expected any day now.

In addition, inflation is expected to pick up new momentum in the next few months, regardless of what actions the government takes.

Defense and oil issues were especially strong, amid expectations of increased military spending and possible energy policy changes under a Reagan administration.

In the defense group, Rockwell International jumped 5 1/2 to 39 1/2, and United Technologies 5 1/2 to 58 1/2. Among the oils, Mobil gained 1 1/2 to 76 1/2; Gulf 2 1/2 to 43, and Union Oil of California 3 1/2 to 52.

The NYSE's composite index shot up 2.44 to 76.80, and the American Stock Exchange market value index gained 5.58 to 344.33.

Diabetics may follow vegetarian diet

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it possible for a diabetic to be a vegetarian? My son, who has diabetes, was a vegetarian while in college, but later started eating everything. Now, 12 years later, he says he would have been better off if he had continued with the vegetarian diet. Is it possible for him to go back to such a diet at present? — Mrs. I.K.

A strict vegetarian menu will not contain vitamin B12 which is found in foods of animal origin, and may lack calcium, iodine, iron, riboflavin and vitamin D. If your son is a strict vegetarian, his doctor or dietitian may recommend he take a vitamin B12 supplement. Minerals such as calcium and riboflavin, which normally are provided by milk, can be obtained from dark green and leafy vegetables. A dietitian also can show how plant proteins can be combined so that they complement each other to meet the body's protein requirements.

If your son is a strict vegetarian, complete protein foods such as cheese or eggs can be combined with vegetables that contain protein, such as dried beans.

In any event, your son should have a thorough discussion with his physician and, if indicated, a dietitian, before he embarks on any drastic change in diet.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have read that increasing the consumption of polyunsaturated fats in relation to saturated fats can help reduce cholesterol levels. Are the polyunsaturated fats also lower in calories? — Gail

Dear Gail: Polyunsaturated fats have many calories as saturated fats. Individuals with a weight problem who increase their intake of polyunsaturated fats should be careful to avoid excessive weight gain.

Dear Mrs. K. — Although it is possible for a diabetic to follow vegetarian diet, I would urge your son to discuss the matter thoroughly with his physician before undertaking it. In addition, unless his doctor is very knowledgeable about food exchange, a discussion with a dietitian also would be very much in order.

You do not indicate the type of vegetarian diet your son is thinking of adopting. Strict vegetarians eat only plant foods; lacto-vegetarians eat plants and dairy products, but no eggs; and lacto-ovo-vegetarians eat plant foods and dairy products as well as eggs. As you might suppose, the strict vegetarian faces more problems than do those who follow either of the other two diets.

All of us need complete proteins for the building and repair of tissues. Nine of the 20 to 22 amino acids which go to make up protein are not manufactured in the body in sufficient amounts, but must be obtained from the foods we eat. These nine amino acids are contained in animal foods such as cheese, eggs, milk, fish and, of course, meat and poultry. These foods are complete proteins; plant foods, such as cereal, grain,

Future of atomic power successful in six states

By The Associated Press

Foes of nuclear power scored clear successes in Oregon and Washington in balloting on the future of atomic power in six states.

The vote Tuesday also produced some triumphs for pro-nuclear forces — most clearly in Montana where an initiative to effectively ban uranium mining lost by a 3-1 margin. In Missouri, voters turned down a measure that would have banned nuclear plant operations in the absence of federally licensed dumps for radioactive waste.

In a down-to-the-wire contest that wasn't resolved until the last few precincts were counted on Wednesday, South Dakotans barely defeated, by a 51-49 percent margin, a measure requiring voter approval of future nuclear power plants, radioactive waste disposal sites and uranium mines and mills.

The Oregon measure, which passed with 53.7 percent of the vote, was similar to the one defeated in Missouri. Its opponents, led by Portland General Electric Co. which operates the state's only nuclear generator near Rainer, claim the measure will effectively halt the construction of a second plant until the 21st century.

But the ballot measure will not affect operations of the Rainer plant.

Washington state voters gave overwhelming approval to a less sweeping proposal that will, if upheld in court, halt importation of all but medical radioactive waste to the Hanford nuclear dump. The Hanford site is one of three commercial nuclear waste facilities in the country.

The pay, behind casing perforations from 8,743 to 8,548 feet, was acidized with 10,000 gallons.

Total depth is 9,310 feet and 5 1/2-inch casing is cemented at 9,255 feet, the plugged back total depth.

Texaco Inc. No. 1 State of Texas "DF," a former producer in the Block 17, Southeast (Delaware gas) field of Ward County, has been deepened and completed as a producer in the Capri to (middle Delaware oil) pool.

The well, seven miles northwest of Pyote, was completed as an oiler through perforations from 6,092 to 6,130 feet for a daily pumping potential of eight barrels of 39.4-gravity oil and 76 barrels of water, with a gas-oil ratio of 6,625-1.

Total depth is 6,600 feet, 5 1/2-inch pipe is set at total depth and hole is plugged back to 6,130 feet.

Amoco was charging Pioneer less for gas from the same wells, the court record shows.

A Ward County trial court ordered Amoco to pay the difference and the appeals court agreed.

The Supreme Court denied a writ of error sought by Amoco in the case.

Exxon says 15 million barrels of oil needed from synthetics fuels program

By JOHN M. BERRY
The Washington Post

RIFLE, Colo. — Late last year Exxon Corp. began to circulate a draft of its annual analysis of the nation's energy future and, for the first time, the oil giant stretched its horizon into the next century.

The new numbers included a bombshell: To meet the likely need for liquid fuels three decades hence, the United States will have to develop a synthetic fuels industry capable of producing 15 million barrels a day.

In a manner of speaking, the bombshell exploded over the northwestern corner of Colorado, which would be the center of an 8-million-barrel-a-day shale industry if the Exxon vision comes to pass.

About the time the analysis was published last spring, Exxon Chairman C. C. Garvin went so far as to remark at a lunch with Washington Post reporters that perhaps that corner of Colorado would have to be declared a "national energy zone" in which the "normal rules" would not apply. The nation's security and continued economic growth would require it, he said.

Until the Exxon paper — it does not describe a "plan" Exxon intends to put into effect, the company stresses — hit the scene, the debate about oil shale development on the area of Colorado known as the Western Slope had been proceeding at a leisurely pace, with most participants still talking about an industry that probably never would produce more than several hundred thousand barrels of liquid fuel a day.

"That paper they sent scared the bejesus out of everybody," one Colorado energy expert says. "Exxon changed the game overnight."

The paper galvanized many of the groups that will be affected by development of the thousands of square miles of Colorado oil shale deposits, some of which are as much as 1,500 feet thick. (Smaller but still enormous quantities of oil shale also are located in nearby Utah, with lesser quantities in Wyoming.)

As a result of meetings, hearings, discussions and just sheer publicity over the last few months, the groups — among them ranchers, businessmen, state, county and municipal officials, environmental organizations, ski resort operators, water district representatives and civic clubs — generally now realize that large-scale production is coming, with the first major impacts to be felt soon.

According to Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., a consensus has formed that 400,000 to 500,000 barrels of liquid fuel will be produced daily in the area by 1990 and double that a few years later.

Even a level of 400,000 barrels a day would require construction of at least eight plants, each with a capacity of 50,000 barrels daily and a cost of between $2 billion and $4 billion.

Construction and operating crews and concomitant development of everything from new housing, roads, sewers, water supplies, power plants, schools and retail stores likely would add at least 75,000 persons to the sparsely populated Western Slope.

But no one in the area is reconciled to the mammoth development depicted by Exxon, or to changing environmental rules to accommodate it. "If I'm still in the Senate, they could do that only over my dead body," Sen. Hart exclaimed when told of Garvin's remark.

The first factor limiting shale development is apt to be water. Even Exxon says the upper limit is a 1.5-million-barrel-a-day industry in Colorado without the importation of water from other states in the Missouri and Mississippi river basins. Exxon says that, costly as such water plans would be, they are feasible in an engineering sense. Political feasibility is another question.

For now, however, there is enough water available for the first several plants to be built, and most of the operators have options to buy the necessary water. Later, as more plants are built, air quality standards could become a limiting factor.

Reagan aides say September was the turning point

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was Sept. 4 and as Ronald Reagan's chartered jet carried him toward Florida and Louisiana, his campaign was in trouble, beset by a series of stumbles in its early days.

His once-huge lead in the polls after July's Republican convention was shrinking and Reagan was on the defensive after a flap about his policy toward Taiwan, his declaration that the Vietnam War was a noble cause and his attempt to link President Carter to the Ku Klux Klan.

In retrospect, Reagan's strategists now view that trip as the turning point in the campaign, the day they began to shift the focus from Reagan's missteps to the Carter administration's record.

In the two-state southern swing,

Reagan accused Carter of leaking military secrets about new bomber technology for political gain — to show that U.S. defenses were not in the bad shape that Reagan claimed.

The charges coincided with the start of a congressional investigation of the news leak, and the issue suddenly dominated the headlines and threw the president on the defensive.

"We took the battle to him. That gave us a week to solidify our organization and get back on track," said Reagan pollster Richard Wirthlin.

"Since then, our vote has progressed on almost the precise course we had hoped," Wirthlin said.

THE SEPT. 4 trip also marked the first day that Stuart Spencer, a savvy Republican strategist and manager of former President Gerald R. Ford's 1976 race, began traveling on the candidate's plane. He steered Reagan away from trouble and picked up political intelligence from old allies.

From the beginning, Reagan's strategy was to attack Carter's record on the economy and inflation, particularly in big midwestern and northeastern states where layoffs in the auto and steel industries, as well as in coal mines, pushed state unemployment rates above the national average.

Reagan knew he had to convince blue-collar workers and other traditional Democrats to desert their party. He pledged to beat inflation and give them a 30 percent tax cut over three years.

Over and over, he recalled for audiences that he has a lifetime union membership after serving six years as president of the Screen Actors Guild.

"Look, I know what it's like the first time you pull that Republican lever because I used to be a Democrat myself," Reagan told a crowd outside a barroom in the Democratic stronghold of Hudson County, N.J. "I can tell you it only hurts for a minute, and then you'll feel just great."

He also vowed to bolster America's prestige throughout the world and to make America a militarily strong country that adversaries would be forced to respect.

REAGAN ALSO PAID careful attention to the South. In particular he made repeated trips to Texas and Florida, hoping to crack the regional base that helped put Carter in the White House in 1976.

"It's been the South that's been the real battleground for us," Wirthlin said. "The South broke open for us the second week of October" as the president portrayed Reagan as a warmonger and claimed he would divide the country. "Jimmy Carter's mean streak helped him in the Midwest but hurt him in the South," Wirthlin declared.

In the end, Reagan carried every southern state except Carter's native Georgia.

The debate with Carter a week before the election was a boost for Reagan, his strategists said. "It added to the momentum and put to rest the question of competence and compassion," Wirthlin said.

After the debate, charges that Reagan was dangerous or radical "were not sticking to the wall," Wirthlin said.

It was around the time of the debate, said Reagan aide Jim Brady, that independent candidate John Anderson slumped in the polls.

"The big movement came when the Republicans started to come home, when Anderson's support started to break up," Brady said. "The moderates and liberals were in Anderson's camp. When that fell apart, they came to us, and all Carter was left with were the Kennedy Democrats."

THE ONE REMAINING worry, the Reagan strategists said, was an "October surprise" such as release of the American hostages in Iran. It didn't happen, although two days before the election the Iranian Parliament set terms for the hostages' release.

Reagan spent the final days of the race in GOP areas like Dallas and Houston, Grand Rapids and Saginaw, Mich., Dayton and Cincinnati, Ohio, and finally, Peoria, Ill., calling Republicans home.

"You put Governor Reagan in any given spot and give him average media coverage, and he'll swing the vote up," Wirthlin said.

The debate was beginning of the end for Carter

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the end, the campaign boiled down to two main issues: the economy and war and peace. Both worked against Jimmy Carter.

Carter couldn't overcome his own record and he failed to convince the voters that Ronald Reagan was too reckless and right-wing to occupy the Oval Office.

His last chance may have been the televised debate a week before the election — a one-on-one confrontation that Carter had insisted on.

The reassuring image of the Republican nominee projected before an audience of more than 100 million belted Carter's efforts to portray Reagan as trigger-happy.

As he was restoring luster to his own image, Reagan attacked the president on the economy where he was most vulnerable, asking voters whether they were better off or worse than they were four years ago.

INFLATION STOOD AT 12.7 percent and unemployment at 7.5 percent. Fifty-two Americans had been held hostage in Iran for a year.

Within 48 hours, Carter knew the situation was desperate. During a week-long campaign blitz, he tried frantically to refocus the spotlight on Reagan.

At first, it worked. Carter campaign polls had shown him trailing Reagan by 3-4 points after the debate. But by Saturday, the president held a slight 0.3 percent lead.

Overnight, it fizzled: Sunday's polls revealed that the president was down by 2-5 points. By Monday — the day after Carter had temporarily suspended campaigning to assess the conditions set by Iran for release of the hostages — the outcome was inevitable: he trailed by 7-10 points.

In the pre-dawn hours of Election Day, as Air Force One flew to Plains, Ga., for Carter to cast his own ballot, press secretary Jody Powell ordered a drink and braced himself to deliver the omen to his boss.

Before the president voted, he knew.

HE MAY HAVE suspected even before his weekend surge.

On Thursday, there was a small crowd for the president's appearance at a Polish club in Philadelphia and only polite applause from Jewish leaders when Carter made his strongest pledge ever in support of Israel.

On Friday, in Florida, Carter admitted the outcome was in doubt. And one of his most trusted advisers told reporters aboard Air Force One the campaign was suffering a "pause in momentum."

The post-mortem offered by Carter's aides blamed the defeat on the hostage statement and dual problems of inflation and recession.

Since his nomination at the Democratic convention in August, the president set out to depict Reagan as a dangerous right-winger who repeatedly had advocated military intervention in world crises and was likely to blunder into war.

Blaming inflation and unemployment on increases in oil prices, Carter played up his achievements on energy and the Middle East and stressed the necessity for calmness and stability in the Oval Office.

As the campaign progressed, Carter went so far as to declare bluntly that the election was a choice between war and peace. As evidence, he seized on Reagan's rejection of the pending SALT II treaty with the Soviet Union.

RACE BECAME AN issue, too. Carter lashed out at use of "code words" such as states' rights and intimated that Reagan was peddling racism. Later, he said Reagan's election could divide "black from white, Christian from Jew."

But when asked directly whether he believed Reagan was a racist or a warmonger, the president always backed down, denying he had intended leave such an impression.

Nevertheless, the insinuations took their toll. Carter became known as a mean fighter, and a backlash threatened the general perception that the president was a decent man.

As the campaign reached its final month, Carter was forced to concede his error publicly. He pledged to abandon personal attacks.

Thereafter, the president contented himself with quoting Reagan's own words. Sometimes they were more than a decade old, such as the former California governor's suggestion that those who can provide for their own retirement should be exempted from Social Security. Repeatedly, Carter insisted the former actor wanted to make the pension system voluntary.

AND HE HAMMERED away ceaselessly at war and peace, in the final days singling out nuclear proliferation as the most important issue facing the nation.

GOP picks up governorships

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans, riding the long coattails of Ronald Reagan's march to the presidency, snatched at least two state chief executives in a decade.

The Republicans, whose ranks had dwindled to a mere dozen during the Watergate backlash and President Gerald R. Ford's defeat in 1976, came out with at least 21 governorships to 27 for the Democrats.

There were 13 governorships at stake. Republicans held on to all three statehouses with a GOP incumbent while taking at least two of the 10 Democratic posts.

There were still two races undecided early today. Both were held by Democrats.

The biggest surprise may occur in Arkansas where Democratic Gov. Bill Clinton, at 33 the nation's youngest governor and one of his party's rising stars, trailed Little Rock businessman Frank White.

—And North Dakota Gov. Arthur Link, seeking a third term, was running behind his Republican challenger, Attorney General Allen Olson.

But in Missouri, the most populous state the Republicans captured Christopher Bond beat Democratic Gov. Joseph Teasdale. Four years ago, it was the other way around, Teasdale upsetting the Republican Bond.

Two Republicans easily won re-election. And in Indiana, a highly popular Republican, Otis R. Bowen, was barred by the state constitution from a third term, but he was succeeded by his Republican second-in-command, Lt. Gov. Robert Orr.

The Democrats, meanwhile, threw out two incumbent governors in their primaries and wound up losing one of the seats, Washington, while holding onto Montana with a new candidate, Lt. Gov. Ted Schwinden.

In Washington, King County Republican John Spellman defeated state Sen. James McDermott, who had eliminated Gov. Dixy Lee Ray in the Democratic primary. She was one of only two women governors.

In Delaware, Gov. Pierre S. duPont IV trounced Democrat William Gordy, becoming the state's first governor in 24 years to be elected to two consecutive terms. In Vermont, Gov. Richard Snelling beat Democratic state Attorney General M. Jerome Diamond.

Gov. Jay Rockefeller personally spent $9.4 million in defeating former Republican Gov. Arch Moore to win a second term in West Virginia. Moore had beaten Rockefeller in 1972, but he was outspent 12-1 by Rockefeller in this election.

Other Democratic winners were incumbents James Hunt of North Carolina; J. Joseph Garrahy of Rhode Island; Hugh Gallen of New Hampshire and Scott Matheson of Utah.

Demo's control of Senate shattered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans shattered a quarter-century of Democratic control of the Senate, toppling several of the chamber's leading liberals in Tuesday's elections. The victims included George McGovern, Frank Church, Warren Magnuson and Birch Bayh.

The returns, which reflected the presidential landslide piled up by Ronald Reagan, guaranteed the Republicans a net gain of 10 seats and a majority of at least 51-49.

The GOP held 41 seats to the Democrats' 58 in the outgoing Senate with independent Harry F. Byrd of Virginia voting with the Democrats to organize the Senate. Byrd, who said he voted for Reagan, declined to say if he will now switch parties and vote with the GOP.

In all, eight incumbent Democrats were defeated.

THE SIZE OF THE Republican majority remained to be fixed. In Arizona, Sen. Barry Goldwater was in a virtual tie with his Democratic opponent; in Vermont, liberal Democrat Sen. Patrick Leahy was the apparent, although undeclared, winner.

The new Senate will be the most conservative since 1956, when the GOP lost the control of the chamber it had won two years earlier.

The Republican triumph was clinched with the victory in Alaska of Fairbanks banker Frank Murkowski over Clark Gruening Jr., who had defeated incumbent Mike Gravel in the state's primary.

Goldwater, the party's 1964 standard-bearer, trailed Bill Schultz, a millionaire Phoenix apartment owner, by fewer than 1,000 votes with 99 percent of the votes counted.

In Vermont, with all votes counted, Leahy held a 2,200-vote lead over financial consultant Stewart Ledbetter. But Leahy did not claim victory and Ledbetter did not concede because the slim margin separating them could be reversed in a canvass or recount.

Democratic seats were jeopardized from coast to coast by Reagan's presidential sweep and by the efforts of conservative political action groups, who found several successes in their drives against liberal Democrats.

MCGOVERN, THE DEMOCRATS' 1972 presidential candidate and a South Dakota senator since 1963, was defeated by Rep. James Abdnor in a signal triumph for the National Conservative Political Action Committee — or NCPAC — which was trying to steer liberals toward political oblivion.

In Idaho, Democrat Frank Church, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, lost a long and hard-fought campaign to his conservative Republican challenger, Rep. Steven Symms, by three percentage points.

Bayh, another target of NCPAC, was beaten by three-term Republican Rep. Dan Quayle. With 83 percent of the vote counted, Bayh, a three-term member from Indiana and chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, lost 55 percent to 45 percent.

Magnuson, the most senior Democratic senator and a member of Congress for 44 years, was defeated by Slade Gorton, 52, Washington state's attorney general. Magnuson is chairman of the powerful Appropriations Committee and the chamber's president pro tem, but the race centered more on his age, 75, than on his clout.

In Wisconsin, liberal Gaylord Nelson, chairman of the Small Business Committee and the state's former governor, lost by 4 percentage points to former Rep. Robert Kasten in a contest that had seen the lead change hands several times into the early hours of today. Nelson has been in the Senate 22 years.

Iowa's John Culver, a first-term liberal Democrat who counterattacked fruitlessly against the conservative groups that had sought his defeat, was beaten by Rep. Charles Grassley, a 46-year-old farmer.

IN NEW YORK, staunch conservative Alfonso D'Amato won the Senate seat held by liberal Jacob Javits. D'Amato defeated both Javits, who ran as a Liberal, and favored Democratic Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman. Javits, who lost the Republican primary, took 11 percent of Tuesday's vote.

Republicans defeated incumbent Democrat John Durkin in New Hampshire, where Warren Rudman, a former state attorney general won, and picked up previously Democratic seats in Alabama, where ex-prisoner of war Jeremiah Denton defeated Jim Folsom Jr., and in Florida, where Paula Hawkins, a former state public service commissioner, beat ex-congressman Bill Gunter.

Each of the three contests was decided by four percentage points or less.

Also defeated was North Carolina Democrat Robert Morgan, who lost to John East, a conservative college professor backed by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., one of the Senate's leading conservatives.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., McGovern's campaign manager in 1972, eked out a 2 percentage-point lead over Mary Estill Buchanan, the secretary of state, with 84 percent of the votes counted.

Victorious Democrats included Sen. Herman Talmadge of Georgia, who salvaged a political career threatened after the Senate "denounced" him for financial misconduct. In Connecticut, Rep. Christopher Dodd trounced James Buckley, a former Conservative-Republican senator from New York.

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, the former astronaut, beat back Republican James Betts, a state legislator, with 70 percent of the vote.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., retained, as expected, his seat against a challenge by Paul Gann, a Republican and co-author of the state's Jarvis-Gann tax reduction initiative.

IN MISSOURI, incumbent Thomas Eagleton, McGovern's 1972 running mate, won an easy re-election over Gene McNary, the Saint Louis County executive.

Republican incumbents winning re-election included Robert Dole of Kansas; Charles McC. Mathias of Maryland, Jake Garn of Utah and Robert Packwood of Oregon.

Conservatives succeed in toppling 'targeted' senators

WASHINGTON (AP) — Good aim, good organization, good sense of the nation's political mood and lots of money helped conservative groups shoot down most of the Senate liberals they had targeted for defeat in 1980.

Four veteran Democrats who made just about every Senate hit list of the conservative coalition fell Tuesday night — Frank Church of Idaho, George McGovern of South Dakota, Birch Bayh of Indiana and John Culver of Iowa.

Two Democratic targets who survived the hail of fire were Alan Cranston of California and Thomas Eagleton of Missouri.

All six men were chosen for defeat by a well-financed group called the National Conservative Political Action Committee, which was formed five years ago to work for the ouster of Senate liberals.

NCPAC, based in suburban Arlington, Va., is part of a "New Right" network that includes business groups and fundamentalist Christian organizations, such as the Moral Majority, that have been working in concert to defeat many of the same liberal candidates.

On top of that, the Republican National Committee jumped in with an expanded "hit" list that included the conservatives' targets among other endangered Democrats.

Two other veteran Senate Democrats who fell Tuesday night — Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin and Warren Magnuson of Washington — were on Moral Majority's hit list.

Another Democratic incumbent who lost — John Durkin of New Hampshire — was on the GOP hit list. But Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, another GOP target, barely survived with a narrow victory. Altogether, of 11 decided races in which Republicans targeted Democrats for defeat, the GOP knocked off eight.

The hit-listers' aim was not as sharp in the House, however. Of six candidates backed by Moral Majority, only two won. The GOP succeeded in knocking off only about half of the 51 Democrats it had targeted for defeat.

Terry Dolan, chairman of NCPAC, estimated last month that his group grossed between $3.5 million and $4 million this year alone. Up to $2.5 million was to go as direct contributions to Republican challengers and the rest to be spent on "negative" campaigning against the targets, Dolan said.

This way, NCPAC can handle the dirty work of a campaign and let the Republican opponents appear statesmanlike, he acknowledged.

In campaigns involving targeted candidates, unusually large sums of money were spent by both sides.

According to the citizens' group Common Cause, the four Senate candidates who received the most money from political action committees were the four Republicans who happened to defeat Culver, Church, McGovern and Bayh — Charles Grassley of Iowa, Steve Symms of Idaho, James Abdnor of South Dakota and Dan Quayle of Indiana, respectively. Each received contributions ranging from $505,000 to $438,000.

But Bayh, Cranston and Magnuson also were among the top 10 recipients of political action committees, many supporting of them labor groups, Common Cause said. In total contributions from all sources, the group said, Cranston led Senate candidates with $2.7 million and Bayh was second with $2 million.

Church's campaign raised $1.5 million — five times more than any of his previous campaigns, according to aides to the Senator.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, November 6, 1980

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Academy Award winner Sally Field was born on this day, as was composer and conductor John Philip Sousa whose patriotic marches still stir America. In the year ahead, your career accomplishments will inspire friends and competitors to redouble their own efforts. You suddenly appear to have the Midas touch! Beware of hangers-on. Loving and giving, you are very vulnerable in affairs of the heart. Choose a mate who loves you for what you are, not what you have.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Delegate more authority now and you will soon share in increased profits! A new romance can be a blessing for those who feel stuck in a rut. Optimism is justified if facing new vocational challenges.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Try to set aside more time for both quiet meditation and personal pursuits. Financial goals come into clearer focus after candid discussion with partner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do not let a headstrong attitude cause trouble at home. A valuable business friendship can be cemented at a social gathering. Plan special celebration with loved ones.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A far-reaching agreement helps to provide for a more promising and secure future. Listen to friends who have had plenty of experience. Mixed trends require patience, persistence.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The day may be filled with meetings, discussions and phone calls. Long-range plans begin to take shape. Advance your ideas at an opportune moment. A former employer may have need of your talents.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Strengthen relationships and straighten out your financial entanglements. Saying the right thing at the right time could rescue a languishing romance. Speak from the heart.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Active involvement with a community group may not suit your mood today, but the benefits can be greater than imagined! Be willing to learn from others, broaden your horizons.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Think in terms of long-range goals. Romance could hit a sticky wicket if you are overly assertive now. Concentrate on career interests, business opportunities.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make requests rather than demands and loved ones will be more willing to offer assistance. What happens at work now can be very enlightening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Savings get a boost, thanks to changes in spending habits. Show your best side at work and a major policy decision is likely to favor you. You may be surprised to hear what the boss is thinking.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A member of the opposite sex may raise your lagging spirits today. Go ahead and let your hair down when talking with a close relative. The results will be positive.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Remain true to your principles and eventually you will win. Older associates may be especially sensitive today. The evening finds you in high spirits.

One of the great attractions of bridge is the many subtleties in the play of the cards. At times, even an expert can overlook a critical consideration. This hand from a recent championship team match illustrates our point dramatically.

At both tables, a competitive auction ended with South declaring three hearts. At both tables East had bid spades, and at both a spade was the opening lead. At one table, East won the first trick with the king of spades and shifted to his singleton diamond. That presented West with a considerable problem.

If the ten of diamonds was singleton, the correct defense was to win the ace and return the queen, so that partner could ruff away dummy's king. However, if East held a doubleton diamond and West took the ace, the defenders might not score a second diamond trick. After considerable thought, West elected to play low, and that was that. Dummy's king won, trumps were drawn, and when East gained the lead with the ace of clubs, he did not have another diamond to return. Declarer was able to discard two diamonds from his hand—on a high club and a high spade in dummy.

Sitting East at the other table was Eddie Kantar, a member of the North American team that won the 1979 World Team Championship. He found a superior defense that left his partner in no doubt whatsoever.

Instead of winning the first trick with the king of spades, he made the abnormal play of taking it with the ace!

Now, when he shifted to the ten of diamonds, West was presented with a different picture of the hand. It seemed as if declarer had the king of spades, and that he could therefore obtain an immediate discard on dummy's long spade, so there was no reason to duck the diamond. He won the ace of diamonds and continued with the queen. Declarer covered in dummy and East ruffed. The king of spades and ace of clubs brought the defenders' total to five tricks—one more than declarer could afford to surrender.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do you know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Goddard students elect Reagan, Bush in mock election

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Staff Writer

While many Midland voters were pulling levers Tuesday to elect a president and local officials, 345 students at Goddard Junior High School were punching computer cards at a voting machine in a mock election.

And the final result was apparently similar to the adult vote — Republican Ronald Reagan took the presidency by a wide popular vote margin over incumbent President Jimmy Carter.

The project was undertaken by the school's social science department and the Human Relations Council's Special Programs for Additional Resources and Knowledge (SPARK) program, said Corina Hernandez of the HRC.

The council was approached by the school's social science department, said Mrs. Hernandez, to check into the possibility of getting some voting machines for a government project at Goddard Junior High School.

Through the help of Midland attorney Mike Williams, and the council, she noted they were able to get four voting machines from the Objectives for Midland committee.

"This was the first time the schools used voting machines to simulate the election day process," said the HRC worker.

"We felt supplying students with real voting machines made it more realistic," she said.

Secondary students went through the entire voter process of registering to vote, listening to the political speeches and debates through the media, parental influence and finally picking the candidate of their choice.

The elections coincided with studies regarding the presidential election process. Students studied how the candidates were selected in the parties' conventions, the campaign and the November election, she added.

Mrs. Hernandez said about 425 students registered to vote, while only 345 students went to the polls during school hours.

All three presidential hopefuls were on the ballot including the Libertarian candidate, Ed Clark.

At 4:30 p.m. after the school's mock election polls closed, the results were quickly announced to the media.

Although the results could have been tabulated by computer, she noted voting box personnel tallied the final outcome by hand.

Reagan took 264 votes or 77 percent of the voting population, said Mrs. Hernandez.

The president received only 74 votes, taking 21 percent. Anderson recorded five votes and Clark got one vote.

Ector returns delayed by computer problems

ODESSA — Ector County had its share of problems Tuesday night when their election returns were delayed by a technical counting error. Computer tabulations were delayed several hours by ballot card punch holes which were printed off-center forcing them to be kicked out of the system.

Not until almost 8 a.m. today did Ector County clerks have the results of the polls which closed at 7 last night. Authorities had to adjust the computer to read the mis-punched cards, delaying the machine's operation for several hours.

The final tabulations in Ector County for presidential race showed Ronald Reagan with 25,846 votes; Jimmy Carter with 8,943 votes; Ed Clark with 277 votes; and John Anderson with 629 votes.

In the local races, Ector County elected three Republicans and three Democrats in the six contested races. Republicans won seats in the district judge race, the sheriff's race and constable of precinct 1 race. Democrats won in the district attorney's race, the county commissioner race in precinct 1.

Republican Ray L. McKim took 18,143 votes in Ector County compared with Democrat Cliff Hardwick's 16,030 votes to take the seat in the district judge race for the 161st district.

O.A. "Bob" Brookshire (R) beat out his opponent Jack L. Hubbard (D) in the sheriff's race, 22,931 to 12,165 respectively.

In the constable's race for precinct 1, Republican Leslie Ely defeated Democrat R.G. Hungerford, 5,123 to 4,788 votes respectively.

In the Democratic wins, Mike Holms (D) beat out write-in candidate John Green for the district attorney's seat by a 4-to-1 margin, 24,984 to 6,013.

Democrat David Childress took 5,563 votes to win the county commissioner seat in precinct 1 over Republican Charles White, who received 4,848 votes.

In the commissioner for precinct 3 race, Democrat J.E. "Coach" Presley won with 4,402 votes over his opponent Republican Jim Rodger, who received 3,050 votes.

In the uncontested races, candidates received the following totals: Mike Atkins (D), 25,458 votes for county attorney; Jackie Tripp Glover (D), 23,963 votes for district clerk (unexpired term); Curtis G. Winn (D), 27,322 votes for county tax assessor/collector; Foye C. Bomer (D), 7,529 votes for constable of precinct 2; Jerry Roberts (D), 4,947 votes for constable of precinct 3; and Harry Boucher (D), 2,933 votes for constable of precinct 4.

Conservative foreign governments welcome Ronald Reagan's victory

By The Associated Press

Conservative foreign governments welcomed Ronald Reagan's election as president, predicting a stronger U.S. stance against the Soviet Union. Japanese investors snapped up defense industry stocks, pushing the Tokyo index to a record level, but shunned auto stocks in the belief Reagan would cut imports.

The U.S. election result pushed the price of gold up $11.44 an ounce in Hong Kong, and gold stocks opened sharply higher in South Africa, the world's largest gold producer. South Africa's white-minority government sent Reagan its congratulations.

A member of Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai's staff said Reagan's victory would make "no difference" in Iran's relations with the United States and would have no effect on Iran's terms for the release of the 52 American hostages.

"It is up to the United States to accept or reject (the conditions)," said an official of Rajai's public relations office. "It doesn't make any difference to us who the president is."

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, in separate statements from their capitals, both congratulated Reagan, and Begin said he hoped to meet with the president-elect in Washington next week.

Israeli officials said they expected firmer support from Reagan. Egypt's Foreign Ministry said Reagan's victory would bolster U.S. strength in the Middle East. But it said his win probably will force postponement of Israeli-Egyptian-American summit, tentatively set for January.

China, which feared Reagan might restore official ties with the Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan, expressed hope he would adhere to agreements that committed the United States to conducting only unofficial relations with the island.

A Foreign Ministry statement said this would ensure that "Sino-U.S. relations may continue to make good progress and grow stronger."

But firecrackers exploded on the streets of Taipei, the capital of Taiwan, and the Nationalist Foreign Ministry said it was "glad to learn" of Reagan's victory. It anticipated reinvigorated ties with the United States which it said would provide the basis for "mutual benefits and for maintaining peace and security in Northeast Asia."

The Soviet Union, which was believed to favor President Carter's reelection because he supported the SALT II treaty, withheld immediate comment on the election outcome. But the state radio of Soviet-Bloc member Czechoslovakia said: "Western press agencies describe Reagan as distinctly right-wing with anti-communist orientation."

Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki in a congratulatory telegram to Reagan expressed confidence that he would "demonstrate outstanding leadership, courage and determination in guiding your country, the leader of the free world, in today's difficult environment." Cabinet Secretary Kijichi Miyazawa predicted "U.S. policy toward the Soviet Union will become more aggressive, and Reagan will probably outline a clearer course for cooperation among the United States, Japan and other nations of the free world."

A spokesman for Thailand's military leadership welcomed Reagan's pledges to strengthen America's armed forces and hoped that the United States would display stronger leadership for non-communist Southeast Asian nations which oppose growing Soviet influence in the region.

South Korea's military regime also hailed Reagan's election as a boon to national security. A spokesman for President Chun Doo-hwan said his government expects "close cooperation... with the new administration" in view of Reagan's special emphasis on world peace and the security of America's allies.
