hits California

EUREKA, Calif. (AP) - The most powerful earthquake in Northern California in more than a half-century, shook a 500-mile stretch of the Pacific Coast early Saturday, knocking homes off foundations and injuring five people when a car and truck plunged from a collapsed highway overpass.

Scientists said the quake measured between 6.6 and 7.1 on the Richter scale, and one resident of this coastal community said it "felt like the end of the world." But overall damage was believed slight in the largely rural area

Five members of a Eureka family were injured, two critically, when their car crashed off a shattered overpass on U.S. 101 and a pickup truck smashed down on top of them, police said. The truck driver sustained minor injuries.

The quake, at 2:28 a.m., temporarily knocked out electricity to some 1,500 homes, but Pacific Gas & Electric Co. said power was quickly res-

The tremor was felt as far away as San Francisco, 250 miles to the south, and Salem, Ore., 250 miles to the north, said A.B. Adams of the University of Washington at Seattle. It was the most powerful quake in the area since a 7.2-magnitude tremor Jan. 22, 1923. Don Finley of the National Earthquake Information Service at Golden, Colo., said that the last time there was a larger earthquake in the 48 contiguous states was Aug. 17, 1959, when a 7.1 magnitude quake at Heb-gen Lake, Mont., killed 28 people and injured many others.

At least 10 aftershocks in excess of 4.0 Richter were recorded in the two hours following the quake. The strongest was 4.9, according to the Uni-verity of California at Berkeley.

"It scared me to death," said Josie Byrd, 39, of McKinleyville, about 15 miles north of Eureka. "I felt like I was on a ship. My whole bed was rocking."

Scientists disagreed on both the quake's magnitude and epicenter, but agreed this city of 24,000 was close to the focal point.

The University of California Seismographic Station in Berkeley said it registered 6.6 on the Richter scale of ground motion and placed the epicenter 10 miles southwest of here. The National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., said it measured 7.0 and was centered 20 miles northwest of Eureka.

Meanwhile, the Pacific Tsunami Warning Center in Honolulu placed the magnitude at 7.1. It said there was no evidence the quake generated a tsunami, or tidal wave.

V Timothy Hutton has earned the label of "movie star." But the son of the late Jim Hutton is not so quick to accept it.

Five members of a Eureka, Calif., family were injured, two critically, when their passenger car fell more than 30 feet from a Highway 101 overpass which gave way during the major earthquake which struck Northern California Saturday. After falling from the overpass, the car was struck by thes pickup in the foreground, which also fell, injuring its driver. (AP Laserphoto)

"I was very frightened," said Phyllis Bowser, a registered nurse at Sea View Convalescent Hospital in Eureka. "I didn't sleep all night. It felt like the end of the world."

Trattner said replying to Iran was taking time, even after close examination of the terms set by the parliament last Sunday and five visits to the State Department during the week by an Algerian intermediary.

A somewhat different and more optimistic mood was set at the start of the week. The decision by the Iranian Majlis was seen as a positive turning point. President Carter canceled campaign appearances in Illi-nois, Michigan and Pennsylvania, flew back to Washington and made a four-minute statement to the nation.

"Ever since the American hostages were illegally seized in Iran, I have affirmed that our policy is based on two fundamental objectives - protecting the honor and vital interest of the United States and working to insure the earliest possible safe release of the hostages," he said.

"As we understand the parliament's prosposals, they appear to offer a positive basis for both of these objectives."

At the same time, White House and State Department officials went out of their way to caution reporters against speculation that the hostages would be freed quickly.

Nonetheless, the Iranian parliament's action was portrayed as a watershed event in the crisis triggered by the seizure of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

On Nov. 1, the day before the parliament (the Majlis) set its terms, Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie had warned that even if Iranian authorities decided to free the Americans, negotiations were "a probability because of the complexity of the issue.

Last Monday, however, Muskie made an uncharacteristic appearance in the State Department press room to read a brief statement to reporters that was optimistic in tone.

He said he was heartened by three additional developments — an agree-ment in Tehran that the Iranian government would take custody of the hostages from the militants, the involvement of Algeria as an intermediary and reports that a "working group" had been set up to implement the parliament's decision.

"There has been progress," Muskie said. "However, much remains to be done.'

ROBINSON, W.Va. (AP) - Five miners killed in a isolated section of the mine, about two miles from methane gas explosion were removed late Saturday the entrance. from deep within a Westmoreland Coal Co. mine, bringing to end a vigil that began 38 hours earlier.

Several relatives gathered around the entrance to Westmoreland's Ferrell No. 17 mine as the victims, wrapped in black rubber bags, were brought out shortly after 10 p.m.

"They were singed, but did not appear to have been damaged much by the explosion," said a grimy rescue worker, who did not want to be identified.

"It wasn't as bad as I thought it would be." The bodies had been found by rescue teams early Saturday morning

The news was delivered to the miners' wives and close relatives, assembled near the mine opening, shortly after 2 a.m. During the anxious hours of waiting, dozens of sympathizers had congregated on the road outside the mine-awaiting word on the miners' fate.

Westmoreland officials said the men, whose bodies were taken to Boone Memorial Hospital in nearby Madison, were all killed instantly

Thirteen rescue teams had staged a continuous operation, wading through mud and sometimes waist deep water to reach the victims.

Search teams found evidence of a massive explosion before they were withdrawn early Saturday when one of the rescuers was overcome by carbon monoxide.

Westmoreland's chief spokesman Steve Anderson said the miners were killed early Friday by "a very isolated methane explosion." Methane occurs naturally in coal seams.

United Mine Workers President Sam Church said the blast was so strong that it blew large cinder blocks some 150 feet and overturned a conveyor belt several hundred feet away. Two of the bodies were found near the engine of a shuttle car and the other three were found nearby, officials said. "One had been blown some 50 feet" out of the engine, said Church, who had flown from Washington to wait with the trapped miners' fami-

The bodies were found in an area about 21/2 miles into the mine and 300 feet deep. Company and union officials declined to reveal the condition of the bodies, and members of the 13 rescue squads at the mine were told not to talk to reporters.

Company officials identified the victims as Herbert Kinder, 22, of Madison; Howard Gillenwater, 28, of Alkol; Howard Williamson, 39, of Peach Creek; Carlos Dent, 39, of Hewett; and Fred Pridemore, 26, of Hewett instantly about I a.m. Saturday after his sports coupe collided head-on with a pickup truck in what witnesses speculated was a drag race between two cars on U.S. Highway 80 East on Midland's eastside.

The men's last contact with the outside had come in a brief telephone conversation in which they reported encountering heavy smoke, United Mine Workers spokesman Alan Hodel said.

Killed was Bradley Wilson Brannon, a freshman at Midland College, driver and only occupant of the 1968 Pontiac Firebird coupe.

Brannon, of 4501 Cardinal Lane, was pronounced dead at the scene in the 1800 block of U.S. Highway 80 East by Peace Justice Robert Pine. Firemen used a Jaws-of-Life power tool to tear away the tangled metal and to free Brannon's pinned body from the smashed car. He suffered chest and head injuries.

Injured in the accident were Paula Porres, 31, 1708 N. Lamesa Road, driver of the 1979 Chevrolet Bonanza pickup, and her passenger, Linda Halstead, 30, of Route 4, Midland. Ms. Porras was listed in satisfactory condition at Midland Memorial Hospital on Saturday. Ms. Halstead was treated and released.

Police Lt. Herman Wicker said witnesses to the crash surmised that Brannon and the unidentified driver of another car were racing or dragging in the westbound lane of the highway when the mishap occurred. Brannon's car skidded 258 feet after impact and knocked the pickup truck 30 feet backward, according to police reports.

"I don't count too much on the racing theory," Wicker said at the scene of the accident. He speculated that a race would have involved a friend, buddy or an acquaintance, who would have stopped to render aid or to show concern. Instead, the driver of the other car, which was traveling alongside Brannon's coupe, con-tinued westward and sped from the site of the crash.

"They were traveling at a high rate of speed. Not much doubt of that," said the traffic lieutenant.

Investigating the accident was Midland Police Patrolman Ernie Wakefield.

Despite the greenery they add each spring to the landscape, the Midland Chamber of Commerce and city of Midland will be attacking those weeds during the city-wide cleanup campaign Nov. 17-21.

The city will have some employees working in the downtown area and at entrances to the city to remove weeds and trash, said Fred Baker, director of public works.

Behind scenes maneuvering before debate

By SCOTT KRAFT Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Before Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter walked onstage for their only faceoff of the 1980 campaign, a debate raged for days over everything from the color of the set to safeguards against cheating, says the man who directed the League of Women Voters forum.

The behind-the-scenes maneuvering at the Oct. 28 debate was "close to being counterproductive," charged ground set worried Reagan's "platoon of experts who were crawling over every inch of the stage with tape measures," Hanna said.

"Reagan's people didn't like the blue we had selected. So we changed it and they agreed to it. But when we got to Cleveland, that blue wasn't satisfactory.

"So we had transported at the very last minute a cyclorama we bought from NBC in New York for $5,000, and we painted it ... to replicate the color of the original. They were pleased." Lee Hanna, a former news director at NBC.

And the campaign staffs were "pathetic, really, in their desire to pro-tect their candidates' interests," he said

"Almost every element of the debate became a bargaining chip." Hanna told the New York chapter of The National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences on Wednesday.

Among the concessions Hanna said he and league officials made at the request of one or both candidates were:

-Stationing league representatives in the wings with telephones to "make sure the candidates did not produce, by some sleight of hand, crib sheets.'

-"Sweeping" the president's podium minutes before the debate began to make sure no notes were stashed there. -Placing colored paper on each podium just before airtime so offi-cials could tell if the candidates placed notes on the podium.

-Limiting the audience in the 4,-000-seat auditorium to about 900 because the candidates were concerned about television cameras "catching people unawares."

And one Reagan aide said, "We don't want shots of people throwing up while the governor is talking."

according to Hanna.

More than 120 million people watched the 90-minute debate, held in Cleveland just a week before the voting that ended with Reagan's elec-

"Reagan wanted it in Washington, D.C.; Carter wanted it in Cleveland. Reagan wanted a tight format with followup questions; Carter wanted it more free with more give and take," said Hanna.

Algeria seeks better relations

By MAGDA EL-SANGA Associated Press Writer

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) - Algeria has been keeping a low profile on its mediator's role in the U.S.-Iran hostage crisis. But U.S. diplomats here say the North African country has been prepared for some time to undertake the task - possibly, as one suggests, to use it "as a springboard for a shift in relations with the United States."

Algerian officials have declined to discuss the issue since the announcement last Monday that "Algeria will be handling the hostage problem."

Since that announcement, Algeria's role has been to deliver to the U.S. government the text of Iran's four conditions for the hostages' release and to make contact with the U.S. State Department through the Algerian ambassador in Washington.

'The main problem is that the United States and Iran, at this time, have a total incomprehension of each other, and someone in the middle is necessary,' said one U.S. diplomat who declined use of his name.

"Algeria seems to have been ready to play a helpful role from the start," he added. "They were forthcoming in seeking involvement.

"As for Iran's choice of Algeria — it's Arab, and an Islamic nation as orthodox as Iran itself. But most of all, Iran is probably comfortable with Algeria because they're both revolutionary countries."

The official Algerian reaction to the hostage-taking a year ago was reserved. On moral grounds Algeria condemned it as a violation of international norms and procedures. Later it criticized it as a political mistake that isolated Iran from the world.

The U.S. diplomat said he sees Algeria's involvement as a possible attempt to "expunge misconceptions, clear up the record" that says Algeria is a haven for terrorists and hijackers.

"But if Algeria helped in securing the release of the hostages, that would be an instant change in image," the diplomat said.

With such a change, said another Western diplomat, Algeria could ask the United States for increased technological or military aid and possibly could get it.

Since the United States severed diplomatic relations with Iran last April, Algeria has been in charge of Iranian interests in Washington.

ng before that, since Nov. 4, 1979. U.S. Embassy in Tehran was overrun by militant Moslem students, Algeria has, in one way or another, been involved in attempts to free the hostages or at least ensure their comfort.

Here is a chronology: DECEMBER - Algiers' Roman Catholic archbishop, French-born Marcel Duval, flies to Tehran to celebrate Christmas Mass with the hostages at the request of the Iranian government.

JANUARY - A delegation from Algeria's sole political party, the National Liberation Front, visits Tehran

FEBRUARY - A United Nations commission formed to study the alleged crimes of former Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi arrives in Tehran. The Algerian ambassador to the United Nations, Mohammed Bedjaoui, is its co-leader.

APRIL - After the aborted U.S. military mission to rescue the hostages, Algerian President Chadli Bendjedid expresses his solidarity with Iran and says the mission was a threat to all progressive forces.

SEPTEMBER - A day before the Iranian Parliament begins its hostage debate, its speaker meets with Algeria's ambassador in Tehran, Abdel Karim Gheraièb OCTOBER — Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai stops in Algiers on his way home from the United Nations, ostensibly to offer his government's condolences in the wake of the Al Asnam earthquake. But reports at the time say the "hostage situation" was discussed. Later, an Algerian government official says Algeria is doing its best to solve the problem in the best interests of both Iran and the United States, but adds that he does not expect the hostages to come through Algeria when released.

"They don't need to transit through here for Algeria to reap the benefits of its intervention," the U.S. diplomat said last week. "There would still be a flood of good will for Algeria in the States."

He added that the choice of Algeria as an intermediary was made by Iran, and the United States agreed to it.

"If we had submitted a list of possible mediators, there are very few nations Iran would have accepted," he said

"The United States has always had good, pragmatic relations with Algeria. There's a lot of trade, student exchange.

Ghotbzadeh jailed following speech

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Former Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, a moderate who advocated quick release of the U.S. hostages, has been arrested in Tehran for criticizing government officials and the militants who hold the American captives, Iran said Saturday.

Lebanese television reported Saturday night that Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr issued a statement defending Ghotbzadeh's right to speak and saying the arrest was unwarranted. Bani-Sadr defeated Ghotbzadeh in presidential elections and the two have clashed over various matters since the election houri Islami" newspaper in Tehran, said in a telephone interview that Ghotbzadeh had accused the military of controlling and censoring Iranian radio and television.

Officials said the 47-year old former minister was taken to Evin Prison, on the outskirts of the city. For 20 years

Jebeli also said Ghotbzadeh, onetime director of the Iranian media. criticized a children's television show, commenting that the 14-yearold who runs the program was "unfit to do so." The newspaper is the official organ of the hard-line, dominant Iranian Republican Party.

Ghotbzadeh, educated at Georgetown University in Washington and fluent in French and English, was credited with being the mastermind behind the campaign that kept Khomeini in touch with the Iranian people while Khomeini was in exile in France. A stream of tape casettes of Khomeini's speeches was smuggled into Iran and played in mosques throughout the country.

1932, his hopes weighted down by the cement block of the Great Depression, and the glowing promises of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Four years ago another incum-bent, Gerald Ford, became the victim of a series of circumstances - to name a few: The backlash of Watergate, his pardon of Nixon, a debate gaffe. No one did him in, but the accumulation brought about the close loss to somebody named Jimmy Carter.

Now, Jimmy Carter has joined history's list of ousted presidents. Although "the advantage of incum-bency," as political pundits call it, is supposed to be a big deal in presential races, incumbency counted for very little this time around.

Answers have been pouring forth by the millions of words since last Tuesday night. One that seems for sure is that a conservative tide has en flowing across America's political scene. Sometimes it seemed to be rushing, as when California voted for its tax-stopping Proposition 13, and sometimes it was invisible.

But I think it has been there, starting about 1968 when Richard Nixon was elected president. It was obscured during much of his presidency by more attention-getting events, such as Watergate, the anti-war antics and other diversions.

That staggering disclosure was Liberals of varying political hues

Interest in "Cars 1981" at Midland College's Chaparral Center Saturday was evident as local residents browsed around the new car line exhibition.

Although exact figures are unavailable, attendance estimates ranged in the thousands. Neil Florer, chairman of the show, noted that this year's show had probably set a first-day attendance record.

The concept of the show was to give the general public and other dealers a peek at what the auto industry has to offer this year.

More than 100 cars and trucks greeted the curious.

The young, old and middle-aged examined each car with a variety of techniques.

Tire-kicking gave way to more sophisticated means of checking a car out. Many people climbed inside the cars, sat on the seats and pretended they were driving away in the car of their dreams.

Others preferred to pick up literature and read about the auto's specifications. In some cases, persons were seen coming out of Chaparral Center with armloads of brochures and papers on each car and truck at the show music seemed to add to the laid-back feeling. All entrances to the exhibit, including the Garfield entrance to the Midland College campus, will be open today as the show continues from 1 to 6 p.m. A new addition to this year's show was the John J. Schaler III collection of Rolls-Royces. And it was in this collection that the most expensive car, the Silver Wraith II, valued at $102,500, was presented in all its finery. Lighting inside the Chaparral Center gave the Silver Wraith II an additional luster as it did for all the vehicles on the Center's floor.

Outside, all kinds of trucks from quarter-ton pickups to diesels were displayed. In the Chevrolet tent, the "Jaws" van opened and shut automatically exposing the inside components of the van. Youngsters seemed delighted as they watched the van open every 30 seconds. And Odessa magician Grant Davis razzled and dazzled the audience with a variety of tricks.

Those leaving the show said they were impressed. One woman remarked that the exhibit was more of a "wish festival" than it was a car show.

Ghotbzadeh's arrest was confirmed by a prison spokesman reached by telephone from Beirut.

Pars news agency said Ghotbzadeh was arrested "after his provocative television speech" Thursday night. The agency quoted an announcement of the Islamic revolutionary court's public relations office as saying Ghotbzadeh spoke about "the conditions of Iranian radio and television revolutionary organizations and the Moslem students following the Imam Khomeini's line.'

The last item was a reference to the militant Iranians who seized the American staff at the U.S. Embassy Nov. 4, 1979.

It was not clear if formal charges had been filed against the former minister. An official at Khomeini's office, also reached by telephone from Beirut, said Saturday: "His case will be open for investigation - so he can give his words and those accused can defend themselves."

Ghotbzadeh has been critical of the government over the issue of the hostages, the economy and preparedness for the war.

Arson suspected in apartment fire

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Investigators suspect arson was the cause of a five-alarm fire that whipped up an apartment building's stairwell "just like in a chimney" early Saturday, and firemen worried that they might not have rescued all the tenants.

John Adams, a manager of the 40-unit, four-story dwelling, said he hadn't seen a woman resident after firefighters plucked dozens of tenants from windowsills and fire escapes.

"We don't know how many people were visiting there or how many people were away," said Richard Kucich, an investigator for the San Francisco fire department. "The fourth floor caved in and we just hope no one's in there."

Deep burn patterns on a wooden staircase indicat-Kucich. He was waiting for results of chemical tests. Kucich had earlier said there was no immediate indication that arson was involved, and fire officials had said there was no indication anyone was miss About 55 people lived in the building. The blaze had burned through the top two floors of the four-story building when firefighters arrived shortly after 3:30 a.m., said Deputy Fire Chief Emmet Condon. The fierceness of the blaze kept firefighters outside the building during most of the 2½-hour battle. A spokesman at San Francisco General Hospital said two men were treated for smoke inhalation, and another man was treated for respiratory problems at Mount Zion Hospital.

It gave no figures on the number of repairs to the buildings and vacate houses involved, but said many had them by the end of the year, the been taken over by government agennewspaper reported.

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) - Speeding to its rendezvous with Saturn this week, Voyager 1 discovered yet another moon, the 15th found in the ringed planet's crowded skies, scientists said Saturday. The new moon, a small object circling the planet just beyond the major, brillant rings and inside the thinner outer rings, was seen in Voyager pictures received Friday, said Brad Smith, Voyager's photography team leader.

"It's not a large satellite," he told a news confer-ence at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory here. "It's only .. about 50 miles across. That's a very rough estimate."

But, he added, "It's in a remarkable position. It's just outside the outer edge of the bright ring system.

The Voyager picture showed the little moon as a bright dot near the white sheet of what's called the A ring and well inside the faint, thin line of the F ring. The unnamed object is the third moon so far discoverd by Voyager. Two others were announced in October Smith said the new moon orbits Saturn once every 14 hours and 20 minutes and "that makes it the shortest (orbital) period and closest satellite of any of the now 15 known satellites of Saturn.

The 100 Voyager scientists, remembering the shocks of last year's visit to Jupiter, were predicting little except surprises as Voyager 1 swings within 80,000 miles of Saturn on Wednesday.

"Jupiter was kind of a shock. We might say there's no way we can be surprised now," Larry Soderbolm, deputy leader of the Voyager photography team, said in an interview Saturday. "It's clear that our perspective of what's possible is much broader, but I doubt it's so broad we are not going to be surprised at Saturn.

Already scientists are happily reporting puzzling new features in Saturn's glimmering rings and complex yet subdued colors on the surface.

The unmanned space ship moved to within 3.5 million miles of Saturn Saturday. On Sunday, it was to continue examining the planet, its rings and several moons, as well as searching for as yet undiscovered satellites.

The Jet Propulsion Laboratory here said heavy rains over a tracking station in Spain caused the loss of about five hours of data from the ship, which is nearly'l billion miles from Earth.

Firefighters rescued Ruth O'Farrell, her husband. Tom, and about 20 other residents from windows and fire escapes.

"We didn't dare open the door," Mrs. O'Farrell said as she sat in a Red Cross van.

Mel Dagovitz, owner of West Coast Properties. which manages the building, said he couldn't immediately assess the loss. Fire officials earlier tentatively assessed the damages at $1.25 million.

Reagan steamroller flattens reputations of nation's polls

By EVANS WITT ciated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Ronald Reagan steamroller not only flattened many Democratic politicians, but also dented the reputations of the nation's polls and pollsters for failing to gauge the magnitude of the Republican victory. Most published polls just before last Tuesday's election said the race between Reagan and Jimmy Carter was "too close to call," but Reagan trounced the incumbent by 10 percentage points in the actual vote.

While explanations of the difference vary, what is certain is no poll correctly called Reagan's margin. Some were closer than others, but none was on the mark.

Some pollsters say there was a last-minute surge for Reagan as Americans' frustrations boiled over on Election Day. Others say there was just a steady movement toward Reagan in the last week that some polls detected and some did not, partly because they stopped polling too soon. Ironically, several polls put Reagan in the lead in their final surveys, but the caution painfully learned from years of experience with the strengths and weaknesses of polls led many to judge the election as "too close to call."

Three published national polls were conducted between the Carter-Reagan debate and the elec-

The poll that came the closest to the outcome was done by Louis Harris as part of the ABC News-Harris partnership. Harris' last survey, based on interviews with 1,997 likely voters on Nov. 2, put Reagan at 46 percent and Carter at 41 percent, a five-point edge. Harris found a similar margin when he put together all 16,000 interviews conducted from Oct 22. through Nov. 3.

The final poll by the Gallup Organization put the race at 47 percent for Regagan and 44 percent for Carter. That was based on interviews with about 2,000 likely voters from Oct. 30 through Nov. 1.

CBS News and the New York Times' final survey, based on 2,264 interviews weighted for turnout conducted Oct. 30 through Nov. 1, gave Reagan 44 percent and Carter 43 percent. The results of the CBS-New York Times survey made the race well within the three-point error margin inherent in polls that size. The Gallup poll was on the outer edge of that sampling error margin, which was acknowledged by a Gallup news release before the election.

"There was momentum to Reagan," said Andrew Kohut, executive vice president of Gallup. "Had we continued polling past Saturday we have every reason to believe that we would have picked up Reagan's mo

He said the Gallup polls in the 10 days before the election showed small, but steady gains for Reagan, with little movement by Carter. But the final results remained within the poll's error margin, leading Gallup and others to a conservative interpretation of the results.

Kohut said the interviewing was not continued Sunday and Monday because of the belief — now under question — that the election is fairly static in those final hours.

Warren Mitofsky, director of the election and survey unit of CBS News, also said there was novement to Reagan in the final 48 hours before the

"Harris was able to poll a day later and I'm sure that was part of the difference," Mitofsky was quoted as saying.

The last-minute shift argument also had no sup-port in the results of the Associated Press-NBC News polls of voters on Election Day. Those surveys taken outside polling booths across the country found no movement at all in the final days toward Reagan. So the evidence on what happened is not conclusive. Burns Roper, president of his own research firm, said he doesn't find any of the explanations satisfy-

"The polls and the pollster missed something fundamental," he said, adding that, "No one has explained what that is."

Peter Hart, a private pollster who generally works for Democratic candidates, said the pollsters and the media became too enamored of the "horse race" question of matching the candidates and/overlooked the basic facts of the race.

"A president who has a 30-percent approval rating is just not going to be re-elected. It's that simple," he said. "People stopped looking at the broad picture. They just looked at the 'horse race.'

Carter's pollster, Patrick Caddell, has said his polling Sunday night and Monday showed a sudden shift toward Reagan due to Americans' frustrations, focused in those final hours on the hostages still held in Iran.

Richard Wirthlin, Reagan's head pollster, said his polls found no such sudden movement. He said his surveys detected a steady movement toward Reagan after the former California governor's performance in the debate calmed fears that he was a "warmonger."

Harris said in an interview Friday that he found some movement in his late polls as more and more some movement in his late polls as more and more people became negative about Carter. "It was widening at that point. Jimmy Carter was finally the issue in the election," he said. Harris' analysis suggested that Reagan would win. Harris said on the morning of Election Day that it could be a landslide for Reagan.

But his final poll was still five points low on Reagan's margin. Harris now attributes about two percentage points to the last-minute impact of the Iran crisis and about three percentage points to the decline in turnout. Turnout was about 52 percent in the presidential race, down from 54.4 percent in Harris' own polls did not show a last-minute shift of the magnitude that Caddell found. The five-point margin in his last poll was the same as from the surveys earlier in the week.

Birch Bayh: The defeat of a U.S. Senator

By JAN CARROLL Associated Press Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Indiana Democrat Birch Bayh, a liberal senator from a conservative state, found himself swept away by a Ronald Reagan tide that carried Republican Dan Quayle into the job he held for 18 years.

"We've gone through the post-mor-tem: 'If only? What if?"' he said after his loss. "I don't know what we could have done to withstand a Reagan tide of 400,000 votes."

Bayh began his Senate career at the age of 34 with an upset of three-term

Republican Homer Capehart. In the Dame. interim, he defeated William Ruckelshaus in 1968 and Richard G. Lugar, now Indiana's senior U.S. senator, in 1974. He ended it with a loss to the 33-year-old Quayle, a two-term congressman from Huntington in northern Indiana.

In the Senate contest, Bayh carried only 23 of Indiana's 92 counties, most of them in southern Indiana, where Democrats traditionally run strong. His biggest margins came in Lake County, the northwestern Indiana mill area, and in St. Joseph County, home of the University of Notre

He lost the industrial counties of Howard, Madison, Elkhart and Henry, where layoffs in the auto industry helped push Indiana's unemployment rate over 10 percent, second in the nation to Michigan's.

"I was concerned about that from the beginning," he said. "I really think we were hurt more by people who had jobs and were afraid of losing them than by the people who were out of work."

Another factor that made this race different was the influence of outside groups, such as the National Conservative Political Action Committee, which put Bayh on its hit list of liberal senators. Bayh likes to refer to organizations like NCPAC as "right-wing haters" and draws comparisons between their members and Hitler's Nazis.

"I don't think the right-wing hate groups beat me. I think the most important factor in Indiana was Ronald Reagan," he said. "I think it would be worse to give them too much credit."

Bayh says he fears the increased influence of the "New Right" in American politics.

"I think they have the taste of blood now," he said in an interview.

The 52-year-old lawyer said + blames part of the Democratic losses on the economy.

"The people of Indiana were deeply concerned about economic problems that President Carter had not handled well," he said.

During his years in the Senate, Bayh helped to pass legislation that had an impact on the political system. He was the guiding force behind the 25th Amendment, which set an orderly process of succession for presidenvacancies and the 26th Amendment, which gave 18-year-olds the right to vote in federal elections.

Bayh also introduced the proposed Equal Rights Amendment, which he now concedes is probably dead because of its rocky road toward ratification.

Looking ahead to his future, Bayh says he hasn't made up his mind what he will do.

"I'm just going to let things come along, as they will," he said. No matter what, Bayh said he plans to return to Indiana, "to do a little farming, practice some law, maybe teach

The week in government-

County commissioners

The Midland County Courthouse security plan, which was plunged into controversy involving the sheriff and the tax assessor-collector last Nov. 1, will undergo scrutiny at 1:30 p.m. Monday when the Midland County commissioners meet.

The plan, sanctioned by the commissioners on June 9, was drawn up and then implemented by Sheriff Dallas Smith on Oct. 31 - the day he had locks changed on most of the courthouse doors. The action drew the wrath of the tax assessor-collector, Elmo Linebarger, who said too many keys to the eastside entrance to his office were in hands of others and angrily charged that the "sheriff has no more business with that key (to the tax office) than I have with a key to his office."

The next day, the sheriff, after talking to County Commissioner Durward Wright, ordered had a new deadlock installed on Linebarger's door. And the sheriff, via Chief Deputy G.W. Thompson, issued Linebarger a key; three others were placed in the sheriff's safe.

The security plan was given impetus earlier this year after money was stolen from the County Attorney's office and after other items began to disappear from the courthouse. Subsequently, the sheriff, who is charged with courthouse security, and the commissioners worked out a new plan, which, among others guidelines, calls for locking outside doors leading into the courthouse after 5:15 p.m. weekdays and keeping. them locked until 7:15 a.m. on weekdays. In the lock-out hours, entrance to the courthouse can only be made though the so-called "jail entrance" at the sheriff's radio room at the northside basement to the downtown courthouse.

Currently, an exception to the rule is Linebarger, whose key opens his eastside office door, which, it so happens, is an outside entrance to the courthouse.

Other items to be discussed by the commissioners include:

Consider a request by the Midland Housing Association to apply for a grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development's Small cities Community Development Block Program. —Consider revenue bond application, proposed by Grant Billingsley, spokesman for the Midland Industrial Development Corp. Billingsley is the Midland Chamber of Commerce's director of economic development.

-Award a contract for a postage machine. Bidders are Friden and Pitney Bowes Inc.

-Consider holding a public hearing at 1:30 p.m. Nov. 24 to erect three stop signs on County Roads 123, 124 and 125 at their intersections with County Road 1308.

-Canvass returns of the Nov. 4 general election. -Accept road, easements, agreements or deeds.

-Possibly go into an executive session to discuss personnel matters, possible land purchases and pending or prospective litigation. The Midland County Commissioners meets on the second floor of the courthouse. The commissioners will be in an informal discussion at 10 a.m. Monday in their Conference Room, which adjoins the Commissioners' Courtroom.

School board

A report concerning the Texas Education Agency accreditation monitoring visit in September will be presented to school board trustees at Tuesday's meeting

The seven-member board will consider all agenda items starting at 1:30 p.m. in the school administration Board Room on 702 North N St.

A four-member team from the TEA Division of School Accreditation visited Midland schools during the week of Sept. 29. Although the district was recommended for accreditation and no corrective measures were needed, the report included six areas of concern.

Every five years, a team from the TEA makes on-campus visits to study the instructional process, curriculum, and educational services offered by the school district.

Also, board members will be deciding to grant the League of Women Voters approval to study the school district's curriculum.

A report regarding school staffing ratios and class size will be considered by trustees.

Bids for a gasoline storage tank, stage curtains for Midland High School and six elementary schools will be up for trustee approval.

Football game receipts for two high school games will be reported, as well as one personnel resignation and four appointments.

Following an executive session, the board will consider a recommendation to expel a student from the schools. The proceedings are scheduled to start at 4 p.m.

African OPEC officials meet

ALGIERS (AP) — Officials from the four African members of the world oil cartel convened a meeting here Saturday, reportedly to discuss a production increase to help Third World nations meet energy needs.

The three-day, closed-door meeting is the first separate meeting of all four African members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. Delegates would not disclose their agenda, other than it is a "consultation and work session," but other sources said the energy needs of developing countries are a prime topic.

Attending are oil ministers of Algeria, Libya, Nigeria and Gabon, which produce a total of about 5 million 42-gallon barrels of crude oil daily - one-fifth of the 13 OPEC countries' production and provide for about 12 percent of U.S. oil needs.

Informed Western sources said they expected Algeria and Gabon to submit a proposal to increase their oil production and make the additional supplies available directly to non-oil producing Third World countries.

Algeria accounts for about 4 percent of OPEC production while Gabon, OPEC's smallest member and a first-timer at a separate African OPEC meeting, produces less than 1 percent of total produc-

The Western sources said it was not clear whether the oil would be sold at discount rates. Oil from Nigeria, Libya and Algeria - OPEC's most expensive - sells for about $37 a barrel under long-term contracts, although spot market sales have been $2 to $3 per barrel higher, according to petroleum industry reports.

The official Algerian News Agency said the meet-ing should be seen "in the light of the recent developments on the international scene.

"The world supply of oil has noticeably decreased in the wake of the war between Iraq and Iran, and many developing nations are unable to get their needs in oil and its by-products."

The report said the ministers would discuss particular ways to help non-producing African nations meet their needs.

Panel says reactors should be operated

By H. JOSEF HEBERT

WASHINGTON (AP) - An advisory committee to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission recommended Saturday that a nuclear test reactor in California be allowed to resume operation.

The reactor, operated by General Electric Co., near Pleasanton, Calif., was shut down in 1977 after questions arose about its being able to withstand an earthquake. The reactor is located near an earthquake fault.

The Advisory Committee on Reactor Safeguards, a group comprised of 15 nuclear scientists, drafted a letter Saturday to the NRC saying that modifications made at the plant now make it clearly able to withstand an earthquake.

The letter is expected to be sent to the NRC early in the week. It's not known when the NRC will consider Republican landslide seen as 'energy mandate'

By MARK S. SMITH

WASHINGTON (AP) - For the nation's energy industry, the GOP landslide is a dream come true, a mandate to - in the words of President-elect Ronald Reagan - "get the government off the backs" of producers and "let them produce."

"The results of this election are abundantly clear," says C. John Miller, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America. "The American people have soundly rejected the growing encroachment of government on the private enterprise system."

But conservationists are worried that anti-pollution and land use laws will be trampled in the rush toward deregulation

"There's a lot of concern, there's no question about that," Dick Ayres, spokesman for the Natural Resources Defense Council, said Saturday. "Some of those campaign statements Reagan made were preposterous.

Reagan has said he supports swift decontrol of fossil fuel prices and opposes the so-called "windfall profits tax" on the oil industry, which was enacted earlier this year.

The president-elect also says he favors faster licensing and construction of nuclear power plants, removal of many restrictions on land use, and elimination of "excessive" clean air and water rules.

But perhaps Reagan's most controversial contention is that there's plenty of home-grown energy to be had - if the government eases up on what he considers to be excessive regulation and lets U.S. industry mine, pump or generate

But Ayres disagrees: "There isn't unlimited energy out there."

"I think that's one statment that almost no one who knows the subject at all would support," says Ayres. "And I think that once he's in office, he'll learn it won't work."

The industry is ready to try and prove Ayres wrong. And it's hoping the Republican landslide will lead to removal of what it considers regulatory obstacles.

The voters "have, in effect, provided the philosophical, political support for the private enterprise system to get American moving again," declared Miller. "Americans are fed up with a burgeoning bureaucracy that no longer allows people or business control over their destiny.

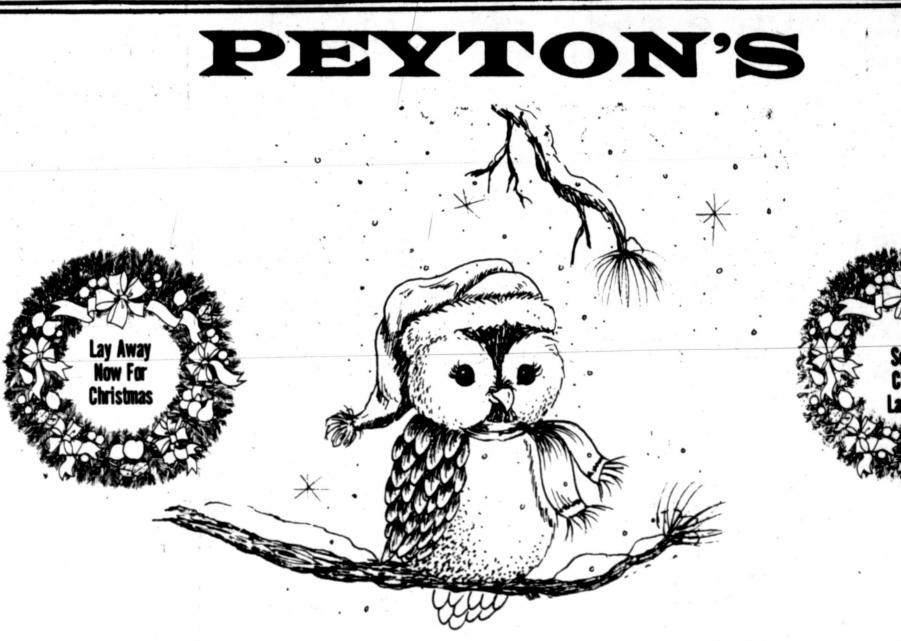

One area where Reagan is expected to move quickly — and effectively — in establishing his laissez-faire philoso-phy is in the government's independent regulatory agen-

President Carter's nomination of Albert Carnesale to chair the Nuclear Regulatory Commission has not yet received Senate confirmation. It's expected that Reagan will now be allowed to make his own selection, and his choice could shift the panel's sympathies more toward industry.

Reagan also can appoint at least three of the five members of Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and designate a new chairman within the first year of his administration. The FERC regulates interstate electricity and gas pipeline rates.

And he will have the opportunity to select the entire even-member board of directors for the new Synthetic Fuels Corporation, created by Congress earlier this year to encourage development of alternatives to fossil fuels.

Perhaps the first major congressional battle on the energy-environment front will be over the scheduled review this year of the Clean Air Act.

the matter. The agency's staff indicated general support for reopening the small reactor, which is about one-twentieth the size of a full scale modern nuclear power plant.

Some environmental groups, including Friends of the Earth, have opposed the GE reactor and have asked to intervene in the case, requiring the NRC to hold public hearings on the subject.

In its letter to the NRC, the advisory group said the NRC staff and representatives of General Electric must still work out calculations about soil strength under the reactor, but that this problem is expected to be resolved.

"There was a great deal of feeling (committee members) that that we problem," said Morton Libarkin, and Alberty committee staff member.

All 15 members of the committee, whose function is to advise the NRC on safery matters involving nuclear power plants, agreed to recommending the plant resume operation, pending resolution of the soil issue.

That question revolved around calculations that have been used to determine the strength of the soil and what effect a shifting of some soil under the plant might have on the reactor, said Libarkin. He said both the NRC staff and GE technicians agreed that the effect of such a shift was within safety parameters.

The test reactor, which began operation in 1958 has a capacity of only 50 megawatts. It has been used to test nuclear fuel material and for the production of radioactive elements used for medical purposes.

Dwight Gilliland, GE's manager of reactor irradiations, told the committee earlier in the week that it would take nine to 12 months to restart the reactor once NRC approval is given.

Gilliland said the reactor has been strengthened and analysis has been done to show it would withstand an earthquake.

8-foot python escapes in Dallas apartment, strangles baby girl

DALLAS (AP) - An 8-foot-long python snake escaped from a 30-gallon quarium in the living room of an apartment and strangled a baby girl to death early Saturday, Dallas police said.

Toni Lynn Duboe, 7-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Eugene Duboe, was pronounced shortly after her mother found the body in its crib about 8 a.m.

The child suffered numerous wounds to the head and face, apparently from being struck by the snake, a field agent for the Dallas County medical examiner's office said.

Duboe, 35, said a wooden plank weighted with potted plants on top of the aquarium had been moved enough to allow the snake to escape, apparently sometime after the family went to bed about 2 a.m.

Duboe, after being awakened by his wife, found the snake curled up on a wooden ledge above the baby's head. After trying to cut off its head on the floor of his bedroom, Duboe shot it in the head with a .25-caliber pistol, authorities said.

The medical examiner's office ruled the child died from traumatic asphyxia as a result of the snake's wrapping itself around her body and squeezing.

A 5-year-old sister, Jessie, was sleeping in a bed in the same room but was not harmed, officials said.

Sgt. Gus Rose said Duboe told police he fed the reptile a hamster every two weeks.

"He said it had been two weeks since it was last fed. It could have been hungry and probably was," Rose said.

The snake was 4 inches in diameter, weighed 71/2 pounds and was 2 vears old.

Moments after the hold-up, the 33-year-old man carrying the shotgun was apprehended by Paul Thompson, a uniformed Odessa policeman, who happened to be "coming down the street" as the robbers were leaving the station, Downhour said.

"As far as I'm concerned," Wallach continued, "you haven't been an administrator until you've gone to talk to patients." He added he didn't mean talking to "well patients" in for minor cosmetic-type surgeries, but he said he meant the intensive care unit patients and the badly burned patients who are often difficult to console.

Not only does Wallach advocate administrators meeting patients, he has even done some "undercover work" as a patient.

'An administrator often doesn't know what's going on in his hospital outside of his office door. When you've been a patient in your own hospital, you get a different perspective on things," he said.

A 15-year veteran of the hospital administrating business, Wallach said, "I didn't get into it because I don't like it. If you're not interested in the patient, then you should get out of health care."

Wallach began his career life "quite by accident," he said, with no pun intended. An industrial management graduate, Wallach joined the Air Force in 1965 and was placed in a management position at a base hospital in Omaha. From then on, he said he was hooked.

"A hospital exists to serve a community," Wallach said. "A hospital should not tell the community what they want." He said the addition of community imput at Parkview will help establish a hospital "people can look at with pride."

THE PROGRAM, denounced by the American Cancer Society as worthless, was developed by Dr. Donald William Kelley, a former dentist who is director of the International Health Institute in Dallas.

Kelley defended his program: "Steve McQueen actually changed the course of medicine by stepping forward to accept metabolic therapy which made the quality of his life excellent during the past four months."

Fat woman pleads by phone

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) - A woman who pleaded guilty by telephone to a charge of drug abuse may escape a jail sentence because she has a weight problem that wouldn't allow her to appear in court. Alberta Taylor, 39, of Columbus, telephoned her lea to Franklin County Common Pleas Judge Craig Wright on Friday because her weight and other medical problems prevented a court appearance. The call was handled by her lawyer. Mrs. Taylor, who weighs 500 pounds, was original-charged with aggravated drug trafficking after olumbus police found a quantity of drugs and $5,000 in cash while searching her home May 2, according to a Franklin County assistant prosecuting attor-

Couple commits suicide in courtroom

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) - A young couple's double suicide in a Rockville courtroom ended lives that were dominated in the end by drugs and alcoholism, friends of the couple say.

As horrified spectators and relatives looked on in the Montgomery County Circuit courtroom, William Melton, 27, and his wife, Tracey Lee Melton, 21, swallowed lethal doses of potassium cyanide Friday and went into violent convulsions. Frantic efforts to save them at Shady Grove Adventist Hospital failed.

The Meltons, both carrying Bibles, were in court for sentencing on drug-possession convictions. They apparently were afraid of going to jail, despite assur-ances from their lawyer, Maurice Beggiani, that they would not be incarcerated.

"All along, they always questioned, were always skeptical about what might happen to them," Beggiani said. "Then this past week they were very acquiescent, maybe almost resigned to carry out this tragic act.'

During the sentencing Friday, Judge Stanley B. Frosh said Melton needed a more structured environment, such as a pre-release camp.

Patrolman Paul Garofalo, 24, died after he was shot in the chest, shoulder and head, according to Col. Kenneth Coffey of the Wichita police.

Garofalo's partner, Randal Mullikin, 26, was treated at a local hospital for pellet wounds in his leg, and later

Coffey said the officers were attacked about 3: 45 a.m. after Garofalo had pulled their patrol car to the side of the street to talk to an unidentified

"They were just on routine patrol when they stopped and asked her how she was doing," Coffey said.

While the officers spoke with the woman, the assailant walked up to the street-side of the car and fired two blasts at point-blank range through the driver's window. The first struck Garofalo in the shoulder and chest, and the second hit his head, Coffey

No one has been arrested in connection with the incident. Coffey said police were talking to several witnesses, but the woman the officers were talking to has not been found. Coffey said police had not determined a motive for the attack.

Wife will testify against defendant

The wife of Richard Reni Cornett, who is charged with murdering his 31-year-old sister-in-law and with wounding his estranged wife on the night of May 30, is expected to be the state's principal witness next week when he is to be tried for shooting his wife, Mildred, with a handgun in her home

The trial in Judge Vann Culp's 238th State District Courtroom is to begin after jurors have been selected on Monday.

Aside from the wife, the prosecution is to put Dr. Andres Morales, an Odessa physician, on the witness stand to help bolster the state's case. Witnesses for the defense are to include Judge Barbara Culver, who presided over a Cornett family dispute in 318th State District Court in Midland last spring; Ed Brackeen, the court's bailiff; Bill Alexander, David Wayne Smith and Calvin Lee Causen. Prosecuting Cornett will be Midland County District Attorney Vern Martin and his first assistant, David Joers. Defending Cornett, 26, will be Odessa lawyer Thomas H. Hirsch. Cornett was accused of breaking into his estranged wife's home, which the court reportedly had awarded to her in a civil proceedings, and with mortally wounded his sister-in-law, Norma Jean Loring of Odessa, and wounded his wife,

Pot trial to begin Monday

Three men, including the former pilot-mechanic of the now defunct Big Bend Airways at Alpine, are to go on trial at 9 a.m. Monday in federal court in Midland on charges of conspiring to possess and to distribute 1,100 pounds of marijuana in February 1979.

Charged are the pilot-mechanic, Terry Wright, 42, now of Crystal Beach, near Galveston; and Ricky J. Kornele, whom the government formerly listed as "John Doe," and Gary Orsack, 32, both of Houston. Each is free under a $10,000 bond.

Also charged but in a separate indictment is D.A. "Ace" Moseley, 44, former Midland police undercover narcotics detective and ex-chief of police at Alpine. He is expected to testify in the trial.

Moseley's trial has not yet been set, as his defense attorney, former Midland County District Attorey James Mashburn, has been successful in gaining continuances.

Federal Judge Lucius D. Bunton is to preside over the threesome's jury trial, which is to be preceded by an 8 a.m. hearing to suppress evidence. If evidence is suppressed, as the defendants wish, the trial likely would be cancelled.

Wright is charged with one count of conspiracy to possess and distribute marijuana on Feb. 27 and 28, 1979, and with one count of possessing with intent to distribute 1,100 pounds of the controlled substance. Kornele is charged on two counts of conspiracy - in February 1979 and again from Aug. 27 to Sept. 6, 1979. Orsack is charged with conspiracy. Maximum penalty for each offense is a five-year prison sentence and a $15,000 fine. After they had been indicted in September, the defendants sought separate trials, but Judge Bunton denied the motion and ordered the threesome tried in unison. "A man takes some risk in choosing his associates," quoted Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Bock in arguing against separate trials. "And if he is hailed into court with them, (he) must ordinarily rely on the fairness and ability of the jury to separate the sheep from the goats." Bock was quoting from the 1935 U.S. vs. Fradkin case.

Officials asked the Texas attorney general's office Friday to seek a permant injunction against S&R Oil, plant that reprocesses used crankcase oil from services stations, car dealers and garages and then sells it to motorists.

Investigators from Corpus Christi said they recently discovered an S&R truck dumping a mixture of acidic sludge containing high levels of lead on property owned by F.M. Ryon of Seadrift.

The wastes were dumped into a sand pit about 20 yards long and about 40 feet wide, investigators

Earlier this year, Ryon's property was identified as an unlicensed dump for toxic wastes, according to department records.

Spokesman Tom Milligan said the department wants the state to prevent S&R and Ryon from violating department regulations and require them to clean up the waste material.

02 Haitians marooned on tiny island in Caribbean

MIAMI (AP) - The Bahamian goverament has agreed to rescue 102 Haitians stranded on a tiny island — over a month after the U.S. Coast Guard first reported the Haitians' plight, Coast Guard officials said Sat-urday. Five refugees reportedly starved.

The rescue vessel is scheduled to arrive Monday at Cayo Lobos — or Key of the Wolves — an island about the size of a football field about 25 miles off Cuba that is within the jurisdiction of the Bahamas, Coast Guard officials said.

The five deaths reportedly occurred before Oct. 9, when a U.S. search plane on routine patrol spotted the Haitians, mostly young men but including several pregnant women. The first in a weekly Coast Guard air drop of food, water and medical supplies began that day, said Petty Officer Mike Ayres, a spokesman at Coast Guard district headquarters in Miami. Bahamian officials were informed of the Haitians the day of the discovery, and they responded by asking the Coast Guard for aid, Coast Guard files show.

More supplies were dropped the next day, and the latest drop was Friday. A team from the Coast Guard cutter Dallas took other supplies to the Haitians on Oct. 20, giving them brief medical examinations and telling them they would be picked up within a few days.

There was no immediate explanarescue vessel.

"They have said, 'We will have a vessel there Monday to take them off,"'' said Ayres. "But we don't know what vessel, or where they will take them."

Bill Kalis, a spokesman for the Bahamnian government, said Saturday that the rescue vessel had not embarked on its mission yet and might not leave until Monday.

The Miami Herald, which reported Saturday that the Haitians had been snared in a "jurisdictional squabble" among Bahamian officials, Haiti and the United States, quoted a Haitian official as saying the people would be taken back to Haiti.

Bahamian officials could not be reached by the Herald said they were unaware of any Haitians stranded at Cayo Lobos.

It was not known how the Haitians reached the tiny island, which is some 300 miles from their island homeland. More than 25,000 Haitians have fled their island for the United States in the past few years, seeking jobs and refuge.

White House officials told the Herald on Friday that they had not been aware of the situation until the newspaper asked about it.

"I'm outraged," said Eugene Ei-denberg, special presidential assistant for inter-governmental affairs, adding: "The White House is looking into the question of how this situation for 30 days without higher authorities being advised of the situation and action taken."

The island is about 25 miles off the northeastern coast of Cuba, on the southern edge of the Bahama Channel which separates southern Bahamian waters and Cuba's Camaguey province.

A 180-foot lighthouse, on automatic operation since 1970, rises from the center of the flat, low-lying speck of land. Several small buildings, constructed when keepers manned the lighthouse, are scattered about, providing some shelter for the refugees. The landing party from the cutter Dallas was told by the only Englishspeaking person among the 102 Hai-

'Wizard' on trial for fraud

NEW YORK (AP) - A yoman who managed a recording studio for Sandra Brown has testified that she saw her employer as a financial "Wizard of Oz," sitting behind a desk pulling the levers that guided a mini-conglomerate.

"I liked her very much," Janet Rosenb-latt, 27, told a jury at Mrs. Brown's fraud trial in Manhattan state Supreme Court. "I was very impressed. I thought of her like in the movie 'The Wiz' with Sandra Brown sitting behind this big desk."

But, said Assistant District Attorney John Moscow in his opening statement, Mrs. Brown kept her companies afloat with $3.4 million swindled from the federal government and by writing millions of dollars in worthless checks. Mrs. Brown, 42, and her gompanion, Kenneth Martin, 48, are acting as their own lawyers in the case. They face up to seven years in jail if convicted on grand larceny and related charges.

In a tearful opening statement, Mrs. Brown claimed that "there is not one dime that is missing." Martin said evidence would show he engaged in "generally accepted accounting and business practices." Mrs. Brown was sentenced to 4½ years in prison by a Denver court n April for writing bad checks. She is free pendng appeal. Miss Rosenblatt testified that she managed a recording studio, the Sound Palace, on Man-hattan's East Side.

Mrs. Brown's bookkeeper, Wendy Schantzer, 27, testified Friday that the recording studio and other enterprises were always on the brink of collapse and constantly in need of cash.

During a five-year ten-ure with Mrs. Brown, Miss Schantzer said she falsified documents, engaged in a check-kiting scheme and acted as a go-between in dealings with loan sharks.

Mall sues to get valuations reduced

Center says it received inadequate tax relief

Dellwood Mall Associates has lodged a suit in Judge Perry D. Pickett's 142nd State District Court in an effort to get valuations of the retail property downgraded for 1980 tax purposes.

Named as defendants in the suit are the city of Midland, Midland College, the Midland Independent School District and the Midland Memorial Hospital District.

The petition, filed on behalf of Joshua A. Muss of Dallas, general partner in the shopping mall, says the plaintiff initially protested to the board of equalization but did not get adequate relief. The plaintiff complained that the property value affixed by the assessor-collector of taxes was too high.

The board, however, did "adjust the value" set by the assessor-collector "but not in such amount as requested" by the complaining Dellwood Mall Associates. Virgil Jones Jr. is the tax assessorcollector for the four taxing entities. Later, the plaintiff appealed to the Midland City Council in "again protesting" the valuation. Subsequently, the city council found the board of equalization "to be in error and determined a lower figure to be the true valuation of such property after depreciation of both land and buildigs."

Nonetheless, the petition maintains, the board did not heed the council's determination to further reduce the property valuation and, thusly, taxes on the mall, which takes in more than 18 acres in the Permian Estates Addition in west central Midland.

The petition, filed with District Clerk Madge Wallis, did not list either the tax assessor-collector's appraisal of the mall's value nor the valuation the plaintiff recommended.

Representing Dellwood in the litigation are Midland lawyers Alvin Walvoord Jr. and Jack Ladd.

Knife-wielding killer dies after being subdued

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A man who said he was God and fatally stabbed a construction worker died because his chest was crushed when police subdued him, an autopsy showed.

James Willis, who was 6 feet 2 inches tall and weighed 277 pounds, held police at bay for two hours Friday with an 8-inch kitchen knife after fatally stabbing Walter Starks, a police spokesman said.

Officers used high-powered water hoses to knock Willis down and then subdued him with night sticks.

Police spokesman Don Fair said the weight of the officers who were trying to subdue Willis apparently crushed his chest.

An autopsy performed Friday night by Dr. Kenneth Carpenter, an assistant medical examiner, found that the cause of death was "fixed compression of the chest." Willis ueath was ruled accidental, police said.

Authorities said Willis had spent five years at Farview State Hospital for the criminally insane after killing a man with a meat cleaver in 1971.

About 20 members of an organization called Communities United Against Police Abuse went to police headquarters Friday night to protest Willis' death.

They left after civil affairs officers advised them to await the results of a police investigation of the incident.

Starks, 44, was shaken off a 6-foothigh scaffold onto the sidewalk outside a dental laboratory and was repeatedly stabbed for no apparent reason, police said.

During the standoff with police, a member of the police department's hostage team tried to persuade Willis to surrender. Police also brought Willis' relatives to the scene to talk to him. Both efforts failed.

AREA REPORT

Greenwood Optimists schedule turkey shoot

GREENWOOD - The Greenwood Optimist Club will sponsor a Turkey Shoot from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at a caliche pit off the Garden City Highway and near County Road 120 East, according to Pat Anderson.

The Optimists will furnish the .410-gauge shotguns and 71/2-shot shells to be used in the contest.

"You're going to have to be pretty good to hit the (clay) pigeons" in the match, he said, due to the small spread of the 71/2-shot shells, Anderson said.

Safety was a factor in selecting the caliche site for the Turkey Shoot. "There won't be any stray shells going wild or hitting anybody," said Anderson

Winners in the Turkey Shoot will be awarded 12-to-14-pound dressed turkeys, he said. Fee for entering the shoot is $3 per shooter.

The Turkey Shoot site is eight miles east of Midland, and signs indicating location of the shoot will be posted along the Garden City Highway (Texas 158) for shooters and spectators alike, Anderson said. No admission will be charged to spectators at the shoot, he said.

Chicago regains No. 2 position

THE MIDLAND REPORTER-TELEGRAM, SUN., NOVEMBER 9, 1980

CHICAGO (AP) — The latest census figures show that Chicago has resumed its place as the nation's 'second city" after a taste of third-class status.

But Los Angeles may catch up yet. Initial figures released by the U.S. Census Bureau during the summer showed Los Angeles with a narrow lead over Chicago. But the newest set of figures - still termed "preliminary" - gave Chicago the edge by a whisker.

The census figures delivered last week to the offices of Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne and the area's congressmen show Chicago had a population of 2,969,570 as of April 1. It was the first time in 60 years that Chicago's population had dropped below 3 mil-

Los Angeles had 2,950,010, a gain of about 140,000 since 1970. New York, of course, is the largest by far. Preliminary census figures have placed New York's population at 6.8 million.

Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley said Saturday that the ranking may change again when the final figures are released. Since Chicago's population is declining, and "with Los Angeles growing as it has been growing, it's obvious that in a short time Los Angeles will surpass Chicago in population."

But is the No. 2'status anything to crow about? It means nothing at all, says Thomas Coulter, chief executive officer of the Chicago Chamber of Commerce for 27 years.

"Being known as the 'second city' doesn't help a damn bit as far as image is concerned," he said Friday. "There's no prestige connected with it." Mayor Bradley said the only impact of the ranking would be "some community pride, but that's so fleeting.' The preliminary count indicates the Chicago population dropped by about 397,000 since the 1970 cen-SUS

The decline could cost Chicago about $79.4 million a year in federal funds distributed on the basis of population, according to Census Bureau estimates. City planners said they hoped the count would be revised upward when final figures are released at the end of the year.

"As long as I've been the chief executive officer of the Chamber of Commerce I've never called Chicago the 'second city,' " Coulter said. "You haven't heard Los Angeles being called the 'third city' have you? People come to Chicago because it's good to do business here ... It's in its biggest commercial building boom in % history.

Mayor Byrne was unavailable for comment, but Planning Commissioner Martin Murphy said, "I'm not too excited about it - 'second city' doesn't mean anything."

"The measure of stability is based on population. The confidence of people who locate their activities in Chicago is what counts," he said.

. Price increases double personal income gains

WASHINGTON (AP) - American working men and women saw their personal income gains in the second quarter outstripped by prices that increased more than twice as fast, the Commerce Department reported Saturday

Total personal income during the April-June period, including farm income, rose an average of only 1.1 percent nationwide, as a severe recession gripped the economy and choked off expansion that began in 1975.

At the same time, the department's Bureau of Economic Analysis said its measure of inflation rose 2.6 percent, more than wiping out the income improvement.

The most-striking aspect of the report was the pervasiveness of inflation. Income increased in 34 states and in the District of Columbia, but in every case was overcome by the increase in prices.

Florida and Louisiana came closest to breaking even with inflation during the three-month period, registering 2.4 percent increases in total personal come, including farm income.

Worst off was Michigan, with its depressed automobile industry, which registered a 1.1 percent decline in income. Idaho showed a 1 percent drop. Most of the report, however, deals with non-farm personal income, which department analysts view as a more stable measure of the economy because of the volatility of farm income. Before adjustment for inflation, non-farm income rose in 44 states and the District of Columbia during the second quarter. The nation as a whole showed a 1.4 percent increase after an improvement of 2.9 percent in the first three months of 1980.

When farm income is taken into account, and measured against the 8.6 percent inflation of the second guarter, only Oklahoma, with a 3 percent increase in income, stayed abad of inflation. Florida stayed crease in income matched its firstquarter rate. But in every other state, the second quarter - when the recession was at its worst - brought less growth than the first.

Nineteen states registered declines or only small increases in non-farm income. The largest single factor was a drop in payrolls for industries making durable goods, especially cars, steel and lumber products.

Most of those 19 states - concentrated in the Great Lakes region, New England and the Southeast - also were severely affected by the 1974-75 recession

Eight states showed comparatively large increases in non-farm income, due mainly to boosts in mining, manufacturing and construction payrolls. The eight states - Oklahoma, Florida, Louisiana, Texas, California, Arizona, New Mexico and Wyoming historically have been affected relatively little by national recessions, the report said.

The Southwestern region led the nation with an overall 2.5 percent improvement in non-farm income for the April-June quarter. The Far West was second, with an increase of 1.9 percent. The Middle Atlantic states had a 1.5 percent increase; New England, the Rocky Mountain states and the Southeast, a 1.3 percent increase; the Plains states, a rise of 1 percent, and the Great Lakes states, an increase of 0.6 percent.

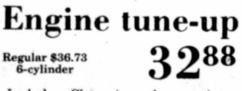

The nation's non-farm income in the second quarter rose at a rate that, if continued for a full year, would result in a total of $2.057 trillion - up 10.8 percent from the same period in 1979

Total personal income, including that from farms, was recorded at an annual rate of $2.089 trillion, up 10 percent from the second quarter of

ANDREWS - Andrews's perennial sage, Editor-Publisher James Roberts, latched onto a Farmer's Prayer, which was printed by Jerry Tidwell, a former Andrews fellow who publishes the newspaper at Granbury

Roberts, in his wisdom, picked up the prayer and reprinted it. Excerpts of it follow:

"As farmers and ranchers, Dear God, give us the wisdom and patience to understand why a pound of T-bone steak at $2 is high but a three-ounce cocktail at $2.20 is not. And a 50-cent Coke at a ball game is cheap, but a 20-cent glass of milk at breakfast is inflationary.

"And, Lord, help us to understand why $5 for a ticket to the picture show is a bargain, but $3 for bushel of wheat is unthinkable; why cotton is high at 65 cents a pound, but a $20 shirt is 'on sale' for $18.95; and why corn is too steep at three cents worth in a box of flakes, but the flakes are just right at 50 cent per serving ...

'Thank you, God, for your past your past guidance and help, but please help us make sense of it.'

ALEXANDRIA, Va. - John Jones of Midland has been nominated for the Future Farmers of America's highest laurel - the American Farmer Degree.

He is to receive the degree in a special ceremony on Nov. 13. Jones is son of Mr. and Mrs. R.D. Jones Jr. of Midland.

AAM reminds Reagan of its support

WASHINGTON - Activist farmers are pledging patience with Ronald Reagan's upcoming administration and at the same time reminding the president-elect of their support on the campaign trail.

The American Agriculture Movement, which led farmers' demonstrations in the nation's capital during the past three years, sent telegrams to Reagan and Vice President-elect George Bush congratulating them on their victory

David Senter, the national director, said the organization planned to give Reagan time to make the transition and take care of pressing international problems.

Marvin Meek, the group's president, said he abandoned the Democratic Party and campaigned for Reagan in 34 states.

"I risked my credibility by abandoning the Democratic Party after it abandoned me," Meek, of Plainview, Texas, said in a statement. He was a delegate last summer to the Democratic National Convention in New York where he cooperated with "dump Carter" delegates.

Killer weed migrating east

PORTLAND, Ore. - Tansy Ragwort, a poisonous, bitter-smelling weed that kills livestock, is migrating east despite efforts to control it, agriculture officials say.

The plant, once thought to thrive only in rainy Western Oregon, has been found in drier areas east of the Cascades, said David Humphrey, director of the state's noxious weed program.

"It's got a very bitter taste," he said. "Animals accidentally ingest it and, according to one school of thought, they get addicted to it and search it out.'

And the last chance to stop Tansy Ragwort before it heavily infests farmland east of the mountains might be next spring, when seedlings begin sprouting, said Lenord Craft, a state agronomist.

Another mutilated heifer found

HEREFORD (AP) — Panhandle Rancher Gary who - killed a heifer he found neatly slit open, with ment. its entrails removed and placed in a tidy pile beside the body.

Other ranchers in the Western United States and Canada, are baffled by incidents of livestock mutilation over the past five years. The FBI and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police have investigations under way.

Some officials attribute the deaths to predators. but Lemons and many other ranchers, don't believe animals killed their cattle.

"The hide was laid back after it was cut straight down two ribs - a perfect incision." Lemons said. "The meat was intact, but the heart was removed. The entrails lay in a neat little pile right beside the cow. It was just as clean a cut as I ever saw."

The 700-pound animal, found Friday 300 yards from Lemons' home, was taken to a rendering plant, where owner Garth Merrick examined the carcass. "There is no animal that exists that could have done what was done to that cow," he said. "It was done with a knife or surgical tool. The cuts were definitely not done by an animal.'

Some cattlemen theorize that the cattle were killed by members of a religious cult that uses animal blood in its rituals, a possibility acknowledged by RCMP investigators.

"Texas has been quiet since 1975, except for a small wave of mutilations in Deaf Smith County a couple of years ago," said Tom Adams, a researcher who keeps extensive files on mutilations throughout the country.

"I don't accept much of any kind of theory in this field. I just gather information," he said. "It's all possibilities.

Sheriff's deputy Bill Henderson also examined Lemons' cow. He said predators usually do not attack a downed animal where the hide is thick. Coyotes usually eat the anus and abdomen of a carcass, he said.

In South Texas last week, ranchers Bill Heath of Harlingen and Lauro Lopez of Rio Grande City lost cattle in similar ways. The hearts were removed from the carcasses of both animals in the same way the heart was taken from Lemons' heifer.

"It looked like someone had heated up a 6-inch pipe red hot and then bored it into the shoulder all the way to the chest cavity," said Heath, who has a degree in animal science. "I wish someone would explain it to

Heath also had cattle mutilated in 1975 and 1978. He says after the cattle were killed, buzzards and coyotes would not touch the carcasses, making the killings even more bizarre.

In Colorado, 30 cases of animal mutilations have been documented by a Denver television station.

The plants contain poisons called pyrolizidine alkaloids, which are potential causes of cancer and genetic mutations, scientists say.

It is not known how Tansy Ragwort got its name, Humphrey said. The weed's Latin name is Senecio Jacobaea.

Researchers say livestock eat the plant until their livers get saturated with the poison alkaloids, causing weight loss and death.

Others say the weed is a threat to humans who feed on the products of such animals. Tansy Ragwort alkaloids have already been found in Oregon honey.

Pesticides and insects that feed exclusively on the plant have controlled Tansy Ragwort in some areas, but officials say the weedy scourge is outrunning efforts at eradication.

Students at small university will make money or lose it

EUSTIS, Fla. (AP) - Well-to-do widow donates $500,000 to small university

So? Nothing too unusual about that. But, wait.

The recipient is Stetson University. in nearby DeLand. Stetson is not a large school, but its standards are high and it is well regarded for its program in business administration.

The donor is Sarah George. Mrs. George is 80. She lives modestly in a small brick house on an unpretentious street. Her years have not dulled her sense of perspective. Nor her sense of humor. Nor, clearly, her sense of adventure

That becomes apparent when you take a look at the strings that sprightly lady attached to her half-milliondollar gift.

Her husband, Roland George, died last year. He was in good health until a month before his death, at 93, and never retired from his lifetime passion, which was playing the stock market.

"It was both his business and his hobby," Mrs. George recalled. "He was an investor. He never tired of it. In his last days, he read the market quotations with a magnifying glass."

In all his years as a Wall Street investor, Roland George had occasion to train many young people entering the investments field. He detected in them a pervasive flaw.

"Roland was a down-to-earth man," Mrs. George said. "It annoyed him that colleges could teach only theory. The students used play money. They took no real risks. He felt the only way to learn investing was actually to do it."

So, in memory of her husband, Mrs. George approached Stetson Universi ty with this proposition:

She would give Stetson University $500,000 provided the students in an advanced course in investments control the whole bundle, and speculate with it themselves, win or lose.

"If they lose it," Mrs. George said, ever so softly, "Well, they will have learned something by the experience

"If they make money, they are to use the earnings to pay a salary for a visiting instructor. Not an academician," she said, her voice firm, "but somebody who will take time off from Wall Street for a semester. A practicing investor.'

The Georges, Roland and Sarah, knew what it was like to be both up and down financially.

During the Depression, Roland George walked the streets of New York for two years and was on the verge of going back to the Pennsylvania dairy farm where he grew up before he finally landed a job at a Sarah, meanwhile, worked as a librarian and kept house in their apartment in Greenwich Village. They had no children.

"We lived on Roland's salary and invested mine," she said. "That's how it began, very small. He made much more than he lost. I was surprised at the size of the estate.

Clinton: GOP tide turns on Arkansas governor By BILL SIMMONS

LITTLE ROCK (AP) - The Republican and conservative tide that swept the nation Tuesday ousted Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas, a young star believed destined for greater roles in the national Democratic Party.

He is the nation's youngest governor at 34, a broad-shouldered Rhodes Scholar with an infectious smile and youthful ideas. With some voters, that didn't count for much.

Clinton lost by about 30,000 votes to Frank White, 47, a Little Rock businessman who had never before run for elected office, and who was given little chance of winning when he filed in the spring. Two polls showed him trailing Clinton by 12 percent and 18 percent a week before the election.

After almost two years as governor, Clinton was criticized by some as too young; by others as arrogant.

Most of his aides were bearded young men, some from out of state. His wife, a lawyer, kept her maiden name and always was identified as Hillary Rodham. His director of state purchasing was a woman under the age of 30. Some saw all of that as a liability in this conservative state.

Clinton's 1979 legislation raising motor vehicle license fees, some of them 50 percent, played a big part in his downfall, as did his ties with President Carter and the Cuban refugee controversy in Arkansas.

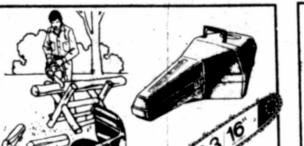

In his concession speech Wednesday, Clinton didn't say what he thought caused his defeat, and he wouldn't answer reporters' questions about his loss. His party affiliation was not a handicap in Arkansas, long a Democratic state.

It was a combination of factors, notably his administration and an apparent desire by the voters for a change at most evels of g

FAA reveals air contingency plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration disclosed on Friday contingency plans to provide traffic control for about one-third of all scheduled airline flights if there is a nationwide strike of air traffic controllers next year.

The plan gives priority to air traffic required for national defense, followed by medical emergency flights. The third priority goes to scheduled flights of more than 500 miles for which there is no reasonable alternative means of transportation.

The final priority is for shorter-range flights capable of serving the most people or national needs. Most private planes would be grounded during a strike.

The FAA's contract with the union, which repre-sents 14,500 of the nation's 17,000 controllers, expires next March 15. A walkout would be illegal because the law forbids federal employees from striking. The FAA plan would accommodate about 3,400 domestic flights and 866 international flights a day.

There are about 13,000 airline operations a day in the country.

Throughout the campaign White offered business-like management for state government and repeatedly denounced Clinton for the license fees, which White promised to lower, and the Cuban refugee relocation operation set up by the federal government at Fort Chaffee.

White said Clinton failed to "stand up for Arkansas" and rebuke Carter when the president, breaking a promise, sent more refugees to Arkansas so refugee centers could be closed in Florida, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin.

While White hit hard on the theme of "car tags and Cubans," Clinton was on the defensive, trying to justify his hikes in fees and his failure to keep Carter from sending the refugees to Chaffee.

In Sebastian County, where Chaffee is located, and in Crawford County, which is next door, White beat Clinton by more than a 2-to-1 margin.

White's general attack also had appeal elsewhere in the state. In the traditional Democratic stronghold of east Arkansas, where Clinton normally would have rolled up a large margin over White, the two candidates were nearly even.

White fortified his pledge of business-like management by asserting that Clinton had failed to provide it.

As an example, White pointed to a wood-cutting program set up by Clinton to train people while also providing firewood for low-income families. The program spent $60,000 and cut only a few cords of wood. Clinton got the program retooled and running smoothly, but the publicity about how the program first floundered hurt him.

White ran the state's industrial development agency under a Democratic governor in 1975-76. During that time, it had the worst job-creating record in its history. White blamed the recession for the problem.

Clinton said his own administration had done better during the current recession, but, even so, he declined to blame White for the poor performance in 1975-76. That was a sample of the soft approach Clinton took to the businessman's vigorous challenge.

White said Clinton didn't realize the threat he posed until it was too late. Could Clinton have beaten White if the governor had taken a harder line earlier in the campaign?

"I think he's probably asking himself that today," White said.

Closing of Indian school launches new 'land rush'

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - When the federal government closed the Chilocco Indian School this summer, it put into motion another kind of Oklahoma land rush. This one might be staked out on the floors of Congress and by the Indians, not the settlers.

The Indian school lay on 6,000 acres of prime farmland in northern Oklanoma's Kay County, land that is being coveted in part or whole by nearly every tribe in Oklahoma and one in Kansas

The Cherokee tribe has already made a bid to take over the land, contending it has first call since the roperty was bought from that tribe

But Bob Carlile, executive business director of the Cherokee tribe, says, 'I imagine every Indian tribe in the Oklahoma will take a shot at it."

Also shooting for the old school, closed by Congress in a budget-cutting move, is the Confederate Tribes of North Central Oklahoma, comprising the Ponca, Tonkawa, Pawnee, Kaw and Otoe-Missouri. Those tribes

The confusion has prompted the solicitor for the Interior Department to rule that Congress must decide which tribe should get the land.

Meanwhile, the BIA has been directed "not to do anything with the land that would hamper Congress' speedy dispersal of the land," said Wayne Nordwald, a specialist in the BIA's division of real estate services

So far, only the Cherokee tribe proposal had been included in a bill introduced by U.S. Rep. Mike Synar, D-Muskogee. His bill would let the Cherokees buy the land for $21,832, or about $3.75 per acre.

That's what the federal government paid for it in 1883, said Sandy Zeune, legislative aide to Synar.

Stacey Buffalohead of the Ponca tribe said the five-tribe confederation plans to ask Rep. Glenn English, D-Cordell, to introduce a bill for that Church begins 'balancing act'

Roman Catholic bishops discuss teachings on marriage

By GEORGE W. CORNELL AP Religion Writer

On a tight rope between church teachings on married life and widespread, modern divergences from them, representatives of the world's Roman Catholic bishops have undertaken a balancing act. They firmly uphold the teachings, but look gently on the many who find the rules too hard to practice. People aren't being read out of the church for non-compliance.

That tempered note, adhering to established church principle but expressly extending understanding acceptance to those who don't live up to the established standards, was seen as a key element of the recently concluded international synod of bishops in Rome on family life.

While it reaffirmed church teachings, "it also took a very strongly compassionate stance," says Bishop Thomas C. Kelly of Washington, D.C., general secretary of the U.S. bishops.

"It did not condemn or make judgments on people, but reached out to them constructively where they are.'

San Francisco's Archbishop John R. Quinn, president of the U.S. bishops, says a main concern was to "give a positive message of hope and encouragement to the families of the world," to "call forth the abundant energies" of their faith and "to give a word of consolation and reassurance" to those having various difficulties.

The month-long meeting, which ended Oct. 25, generated a rash of news commentary, sometimes seen as giving misimpressions, partly because the more widely understood and accepted. sessions were closed and information came in fragmentary bits, coupled with the typically roundabout Vatican idiom.

Along with these problems for reporters, there also was sometimes "a tendency to be superficial, to reports as a challenge to the doctrine itself. shoot from the hip," says Russell Shaw, the U.S. bishops' secretary for public affairs.

In any case, some Catholic leaders have indicated distress that some reports implied, among other things, that there was sharp conflict, that Quinn had challenged papal teachings against contraception, that Pope John Paul II had deplored passionate pleasure in marital sex, that he had relaxed rules for dispensing priests from their vows.

None of this happened, church spokesmen said, although some circumstances and usages might have seemed to suggest it.

The synod overwhelmingly reaffirmed the 1968 papal encyclical, "Humanae Vitae," banning contraception, although recognizing its use by many Catholics, and re-emphasized the permanence of marriage and the exclusion of divorced, remarried Catholics from Holy Communion.

But instead of old-style condemnations, the 205 bishops voiced supportive sympathy to the many out of step with the standards.

"If because of human weakness one does not live up to these demands, there is no reason for discouragement," they said in a final message, citing the help of "humble perseverence" and God's forgiving mercy

"We wish to say to you, brothers and sisters, that we are aware of the frailty of our common human and trying situation of the many Christian couples who, although they sincerely want to observe the moral norms taught by the church, find themselves unequal to the task because of weakness in the face of difficulties.'

It was a candid acknowledgment of extensive lapses in the church ideal, involving the more than 75 percent of U.S. Catholics who approve contraception and an estimated 3 million remarried after divorce

Although Pope John Paul noted that divorced, remarried Catholics are barred from the Eucharist unless they abstain from sex, he stressed that they are not to be considered separated from the church.

'By virtue of their baptism, they can and ought to participate in the life of the church," he said, including its prayers, Scripture readings and assisting in worship.

Besides the bishops' supportive, pastoral message, they also submitted to the pope 43 secret propositions. One, it was learned, calls for study of Eastern Orthodox practice admitting divorced, remarried persons to communion in certain cases, even though the second marriages are not recognized as sacramentally valid.

Canadian bishops specifically had asked for easing of the barrier to communion for Catholics in such situations

Another of the propositions called for bishops to join with theologians in re-examining the ban on contraception to clarify the basis for it and make it

This had been Quinn's suggestion. His outspoken conference address, noting the large proportion of U.S. Catholic laity, pastors and theologians rejecting the ban on contraception, was portrayed in some

But Quinn's address had specifically supported the doctrine, and he is known personally to believe it sound. He said much of the rejection of it stems from misunderstanding, and suggested the dialogue with theologians to put the doctrine in fuller, clearer perspective.

Several U.S. Catholic scholars, both dissenters from the doctrine and supporters of it, welcomed the call for joint re-examination of it with bishops. "A huge step forward," said the Rev. Charles Curran of the Catholic University in Washington.

Regarding the pope's widely misinterpreted remark that a husband who regards his wife lustfully commits adultery "in his heart," Italian press columns, picked up in U.S. reports, saw the remark as disapproving sexual desire even in marriage.

Actually the word, "lust," both historically and in context of the pope's use of it, refers distinctly to selfishly domineering, manipulative use of women as depersonalized sex objects, in contrast to unifying sexual passion.

The pope's remark came, not in the synod itself. but in his regular Wednesday afternoon talks in St. Peter's Square in which he has been discussing sex for more than a year. His discourse focused on the dignity of women, and the distinction between lust and mutual passion.

Far from being anti-sexual as some popes of the condition. In no way do we ignore the very difficult past have been, John Paul is known as a "phenomenological" philosopoher, seeing truth conveyed in human acts, including sex as expressing self-giving

-Buyers check the WANT ADS first for antiques. 682-6222

Christ's condemnation of "adultery in the heart" was "an affirmation of the body, not a negation," the pope said in his talk. Rejecting Manicheistic thought that divides reality into evil material body and good spirit, he said such an attitude negates "the value of human sex.'

But Christian concepts of unselfish mutual giving transforms attitudes "in order to manifest and realize the value of the body and sex, according to the original design of the Creator," the pope said. On another matter shortly after close of the synod, the pope issued stiffer rules for returning priests to the lay status.

His predecessor, Paul VI, had granted such dispensations to most priests applying for them, usually to marry, totalling about 31,000 priests world-wide, about 10,000 in this country.

But John Paul had capped a moratorium on the process for the last two years, with nearly 5,000 applications piling up unanswered. His new rules limit such dispensations to certain circumstances, such as priests long out of the active ministry and those who entered it under undue pressure or through misjudgment of their suitability for it.

Scientists find snail darters in creek 80 miles from site

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) -Scientists said Friday they found snail darters in a creek about 80 miles from the Tellico Dam project, which was delayed for three years because environmentalists thought the fish. had only one natural habitat.

Officials are trying to determine whether the discovery means the fish have a natural habitat other than the area of the Little Tennessee River which has been turned into a lake by the dam.

The 6th Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in January 1977 that closing the Tellico Dam gates could wipe out the fish by flooding their spawning grounds, and it ordered work on the dam to be halted for three years.

Officials said Friday the darters were found last Saturday in South Chickamauga Creek in Chattanooga by David Etnier, the University of Tennessee ichthyologist who discov-ered the three-inch fish in August 1973 in the Little Tennessee.

Biologists from the Tennessee Val-ley Authority, the federal agency that built and operates the Tellico Dam, confirmed Etnier's finding.

Etnier reported locating six darters. The TVA biologists found 14, but TVA spokesman Louis Gwin said some of the fish could have been counted twice.

Etnier met Friday with specialists from the TVA and the U.S. Fish and fildlife Service to discuss his finding. The researchers are trying to determine whether the darters could have occurred naturally in the South Chickamauga, which feeds into the Tennessee River, or whether they might have migrated more than 50 river miles from a transplant site in he Hiwassee River.

Etnier, who found the fish while surveying creeks under contract to-the Fish and Wildlife Service, said he was inclined to believe the creek may be a natural home for the darters.

The TVA, working with the Fish and Wildlife Service, transplanted the fish to the Hiwassee and Holston rivers in East Tennessee in hopes they could reproduce there.

A snail darter recovery team, which the Fish and Wildlife Service organized, said Friday that until more information is collected, "the implications of the discovery to the species' endangered status cannot be assessed.'

The $130 million Tellico Dam was completed after Congress and President Carter exempted the project from the Endangered Species Act in September 1979. The dam formed a 16,000-acre lake.

Curfew established

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Youngsters 16 and under will have to stay off New Orleans streets between midnight and dawn beginning in February because of a City Council crackdown on juvenile crime.

"The great majority of teen-agers here are very fine, God-fearing lawabiding citizens," Councilman Philip Ciaccio told hundreds of unhappy teen-agers at a hearing Thursday. "But there are also many children who are not that way - and their parents need help."

However, Joseph Giarrusso, a for-mer police superintendent, argued that a curfew is impractical and a misapplication of police manpower.

The council voted 4-3 to impose the curfew from 11 p.m. to 5 a.m. Sundays through Thursdays and from midnight to 5 a.m. on weekends and holi-days. It takes effect in February. Sears PRE-HOLIDAY SAVE $37-$165 Styles may vary by store, but all cial order. Say "I love you" with a

There has been some new thinking since last Tuesday.

And apparently a second term is on Clements' mind.

The top Democratic contenders for governor in 1982 usually are considered to be former Attorney General John Hill and National Democratic Chairman John White.

Hill is a three-time loser within his party. First he lost to Clements in 1978 after most Democrats thought the race was won. Secondly he in backing Rep. Luther Jones, D-El Paso, to be head of the state party, and thirdly he lost as a chief campaigner for Carter.

White, who is expected to leave the national chairmanship soon, has no real base currently to operate from in Texas. He has not made a statewide race since his long tenure as state agriculture commissioner.

Either one as a candidate would have to work hard to get solid backing of his own party.

"The average Democrat in Texas could care less about his official political party but Republicans work through their political party with considerable active participation," George Christian, former White House press secretary, said in a talk at the University of Texas. "They have a better feeling for the attitudes of the electorate than the Democratic Party in Texas.

However, new state Democratic chairman Bob Slagle of Sherman thinks there is hope for Texas Democrats two years from now. He contends Carter's failures rather than Clements' campaigning carried Texas for Reagan.

"Clements is going to have to run on his own record and the fact that Clements was out stomping and screaming for Reagan might be negative for him two years from now," he said.

White House hits 'mid-life crisis'

By MAUREEN SANTINI

WASHINGTON (AP) - The devastating defeat of Jimmy Carter has thrown hundreds of White House employees of all ages into a mid-life crisis. They are about to become unemployed Democrats in a city run by Republicans.

Members of President Carter's re-election committee faced the most immediate problem after it became clear that Republican Ronald Reagan would become the new president. They were out of work as of Friday.

Those who are employed by the White House, however, may remain on the payroll until Jan. 20 when Reagan takes the oath of office and Carter steps aside.

In an effort to ease the blow, Carter chief of staff Jack Watson said Thursday that a job placement bureau of sorts is being created in the White House to help the about-to-be unemployed Democrats.

Some won't be pounding the bricks for long. The dust had hardly settled from Tuesday's ballot box drubbing than some had received job offers. One aide reportedly has received calls from six law firms.

Although Watson said he had "no earthly idea" what he will do, he is a lawyer and as such has a marketable skill

But for others, the job market doesn't look all that attractive. Some might have to list on a resume that loyalty to President Carter has been their prime skill in the past four years. Many already are finding that their $40,000 to $60,000 a year salaries will be hard to equal outside the White House grounds.

And, although they may have sharpened their political skills during the Carter administration, those abilities are not likely to be of value to the incoming Republican administration.

Jody Powell, one of Carter's so-called "Georgia mafia" who swept into town with him four years ago to serve as presidential press secretary, has spent most of his adult life in Carter's employ. For him, Carter's defeat truly foreshadows a change in life's focus.

After the voters retired Carter, Powell was asked what he planned to do with his life. "That's a good question," he replied.

Hamilton Jordan, Carter's chief of staff who left the White House and went to the president's re-election committee as chief political strategist, also says he doesn't know what he'll do, although there are aides home with him. Phil Wise, the White House reports that he's in demand.

'Everybody is in various stages of trying to understand what has happened and to prepare themselves for the next phase of their life," said Eugene Eidenberg, an assistant to the president who dealt extensively with the Cuban refugee problem. He is one White House employee who says hasn't a clue to what he will do now.

Anne Wexler, assistant to the president for public liaison, said the prevailing mood among White House workers was "understanding that we lost and that life must go on. People are just beginning to get over the shock and trying to begin to organize their lives."

Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, asked his staff to stay on the job until Jan. 20 to help with the transition. Brzezinski, who came from Columbia University, gave no indication of his future plans. His chief spokesman, Alfred Friendly, was said to be writing his resume, as were many others.

Faith Collins, an assistant to Rosalynn Carter, once worked in Congress but sees private employment as the only alternative since Capitol Hill was also shaken by the elections. The Senate will be in Republican hands for the first time in a quarter century and aides to defeated lawmakers are also in the job market.

"No one here would be wanted, nor I imagine would anybody be wanting to work for a Republican administration," she said. And considering the changes on Capitol Hill, she said she envisions "an unemployment line wrapped around the city.

The first lady's press secretary, Mary Finch Hoyt, says she thinks she may return to the writing career she abandoned to work in politics. That may include an autobiography, but not an account of life inside the White House, she said.

Only one of the insiders Carter brought from Georgia ever held a job in Washington before Carter arrived. Stuart Eizenstat, the president's domestic policy adviser, once was an aide to the late Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey. There was no word on his future plans.

Of course, as a former president, Carter will be supplied with an office and a staff and, like other appointments secretary, is from Carter's hometown, Plains, Ga. So is an almost certain candidate to remain on the president's personal staff.

But there are some White House workers who will go on working for the government, although they may be placed in other agencies. For instance, some members of the National Security Council staff are on loan from the State Department and other government agencies.

After the inauguration, they will have new jobs elsewhere.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Americans will be seeing a lot more of Presidentelect Ronald Reagan in the next four years, but if they turn on their TV sets they can see a lot of the former movie star in the next few weeks.

Many television stations are pulling their Ronald Reagan movies off the shelves now that the campaign is over

Los Angeles station KHJ ran "Louisa" on election night. This Sunday night, Chicago viewers can see "Santa Fe Trail" over WGN and see "King's Row" the following Sunday. In Washington, where Reagan will soon take up residence, viewers ean see him in "Hellcats of the Navy" on WDVM.

"We'd run these movies sometimes, but we're putting them on Sunday night because we know it'll get a big rating," said William H. Wills, the comotion manger of WGN. "We'd have run them even if he'd lost, because people would have tuned in out of curiosity. We're really running them more for Ronald Reagan than for the value of the movies.

Reagan's numerous movies have not been telecast in more than a year because of his presidential campaign. The Federal Communications Commission ruled that stations were permitted to show Reagan movies during the campaign only if equal air time was offered to Democrats.

"We're gambling that we'll get a big rating because of his candidacy and now his election," said Evelyn Zebro, KHJ's advertising and promotion director in Los Angeles. "We've been running a Ronald Reagan minifestival. We had 'Louisa' election night, 'Dark Victory' on Wednesday and 'Kings Row' on Friday.'

KTLA in Los Angeles will telecast "The Killers" on Monday.

In Seattle, viewers can see "Hasty Heart" over KSTW on Friday, Nov. 28. and "Winning Team" on Dec. 10. Promotion manager William R. McLain said, "We scheduled these some time ago and it looks like we chose correctly. I wish we had more.

Sadat calls on Reagan to continue peace efforts

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) - Egyptian President Anwar Sadat called on President-elect Ronald Reagan Saturday to continue U.S. peace efforts in the Middle East and said he hs asked the Carter administration to set a date for another Camp David-style summit meeting.

Asked if he expected problems because of Reagans stated oppositon to a Palestinian state and his suggestion that Jerusalem be given Vatican City-like status, Sadat sid "not much," and added, "I think we all know the nature of the election campaign in America.

Sadat spoke to reporters after a lengthy meeting with Shimon Peres. leader of the Israevi opposition Labor Party and a contender to replace Prime Minister Menachem Begin in Israel's elections next November. Peres and other Israeli figures were here for a Mideas symposium sponsored by the influential Egyptian magazine October.

Begin left Israel early Sunday for New York and a 10-day trip that includes discussions at the White House with President Carter. Before departing, Begin told reporters he does not expect the trip to include a meeting with Reagan.

Sadat said he asked Foreign Minister Butros Ghali to contact the Carter administration about a date for the summit, suggested by Sadat after he broke off Palestinian autonomy talks. Carter has indicated he would call a summit before he leaves office in January and Sadat said he expects word "soon.

Begin is to meet with Carter, but Israel's ambassador to Washington Ephraim Evron said Friday "nothing substantive is going to happen in the two months left to this (the Carter) administration.

Sadat has praised Carter highly for arranging the first Camp David summit which led to the 1978 peace accord between Egypt and Israel. He said Saturday, "It will be very difficult for us to reach a comprehensive settlement withot the United States as a full partner" and urged Reagan to continue the peace initiative.

Other Arab leaders reacted strongly to Reagan's characterization of the Palestine Liberation Organization as "terrorist." Bahrain's Foreign Minister, Mohammed ibn Mubarak al Khalifa, called Friday for a summit conference of Arab nations to "prepare themselves for all eventualities," should Reagan stand by his campaign statements.

Saudi Arabia's Foreign Minister, Prince aud al Faisal, was quoted Saturday as calling on Reagan to seek a Mideast peace based on "the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people.

The peace I mean is the peace that is built on right, justice, taking into consideration the (Palestinians' rights) to return to self-determination and to independent statehood," Saudi Radio quoted him as saying.

In Rome, Syrian-born Archbishop Hilarion Capudji on Saturday also citicized Reagan's remarks about the PLO.

"There is a big difference between terrorism and resistance," said the Greek Catholic archbishop, who served three years of a 12-year sentence in an Israeli jail on charges he smuggled guns to Palestinian guerrillas. He was freed in 1977 after Pope Paul VI promised the Israeli government his release "would not be detrimental to the state of Israel:

The prelate, an unofficial envoy of Pope John Paul II to Iran, told The Associated Press that the Palestinian question "is at the center of the disputes in the Middle East.

Sadat and Peres held an impromptu press conference after their meeting at the president's residence 15 miles north of Cairo.

West Coast politicians want to overhaul voting procedures

By the Associated Press

West Coast politicians and elections officials, angry that close state and local elections may have been influenced when the presidency was decided early election night, are calling for sweeping changes in the way the nation votes. Defections from voting lines were widespread in western states where polls closed nearly three hours after one news organization projected Ronald Reagan's landslide victory Tuesday. And President Carter conceded more than an hour before some polls closed. Sen. S.I. Hayakawa proposed that polls remain open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. in states in the Eastern Time Zone, from 8 a.m. to 8 p. m. in Central Time, 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. in Mountain Time, and 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. in Pacific Time

House Democrats still hold key

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Ron-ald Reagan poised to take the White House and Republicans relishing control of the Senate, it appears the Democratic majority in the House will decide the extent of conservative influence on the nation's future.

Both sides predict a fairly long honeymoon, perhaps eight to nine months, for Reagan and the House. The chamber is more philosophically conservative than before, and the Democrats' comfortable 117-seat advantage was chopped back to a 51member edge by the voter rebellion at the polls Tuesday.

Both sides also agree that, with the Senate now under Republican control and its leading liberals on the sidelines, any spats - and any efforts to stalemate Reagan's proposals - will come in the House.

But for now, House Democrats are quietly talking of conciliation and im-plying that all will go fairly well so long as Reagan doesn't cut too deeply into existing social programs.

"There's a lot of good feelings for Ronald Reagan on the Democratic side," said Richard Conlan, staff director of the Democratic Study Group, an organization of House liberals.

Political realism is behind the traditional honeymoon between new presidents and Congress, Conlan suggested.

"They (congressmen) want things to go smoothly," he said. "They get re-elected when things go smoothly.

They do not when things do not." Democratic and Republican leaders, as well as political lobbyists, concede that Reagan's overwhelming triumph means liberal proposals such as national health insurance. increased public service jobs and new environmental initiatives - likely will move to the back burner.

The new agenda will be highlighted by Reagan's three-year, 30 percent tax-cut plan and his calls for increased military spending, cutbacks in the federal bureaucracy and a balanced budget.

The Democratic emphasis will be on compromise and on defending the social programs on which it has built its political base.

The length of the honeymoon will depend on how willing Reagan is to keep those programs intact.

"Tip (House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill) is not going to see Democratic programs, programs for the needy, go by without a fight," said one lead-ership source who declined to be identified

But he added "I think all of those programs are going to be in trouble. It's going to take strong leadership to keep them going. Tip's going to be standing at that crossroads."

Congressional Republicans say they believe they must strike quickly to show they have answers to the nation's economic ills.

"After all we've done to get people to go out and vote ... we are discouraging voting by the fact that people turn on their car radios and learn the ballgame is over," the California Republican said.

Sen. Mark Hatfield said he planned to introduce a bill to keep election officials from revealing results until all polls in the nation have closed. The Oregon Republican said his bill would not prevent news organizations from quizzing voters as they leave the polls, but he said he hoped news organizations "would show some self-restraint" in making projections based

The percentage of registered voters who cast ballots Tuesday has not been tallied because some states allow Elecion Day registration. But the percentage of the voting-age population that voted was slightly lower this year than in 1976.

March Fong Eu, California secretary of state, said it was clear that early reports saying the presidency had been decided "helped cause a backslide of interest in California." Of registered voters in California, 76 percent cast ballots this year compared to 82 percent in 1976.

Sparks student demands

By HARRY TRIMBORN The Los Angeles Times

AGE 10B

WARSAW, Poland - The rise of Poland's independent labor movement has sparked student demands throughout the country for a greater voice in universities' academic and administrativeaffairs.

They appear to be getting it. Independent student groups are being formed to press demands ranging from better housing to academic freedom. And the government-controlled Socialist Union of Polish Students, which long opposed demands for liberalization, is now agreeing to reforms.

There have been no campus strikes or other demonstrations to back the demands. The students, sources say, have displayed the same self-discipline that striking workers did during the summer, avoiding actions that might provoke the authorities to crack down physically.

Yet, according to various sources, students at campuses throughout the country are openly expressing their resentment over academic and administrative restrictions.

The agitation has already led to liberalization in the process of selecting the new president of Warsaw university, Henry K. Samsonwicz.

ings and appeals relating to the new student movements. Campus cafeterias and meeting halls are crowded with students debating the issues.

Also growing out of the summer's strikes has been the revival, of the "flying universities," which ceased operations last June because of police harassment.

These universities consisted of lectures given around the country many of them by noted scholars speaking in private apartments and other off-campus locations - on subjects that are either ignored or distorted for ideological reasons in regular courses. The lectures deal mainly with recently Polish history, sociology, economics and other sensitive subjects.

The strikes have also emboldened scholars and other intellectuals, with the result that they are forming their own non-government unions.

There have been sharp attacks on the cultural policies of the regime of deposed Communist Party chief Edward Gierek, and calls for the abolitionof censorship of scholarly works. A key issue in the campus ferment is the extent to which the new scholars' unions should be involved in political affairs. Some believe they should limit themselves to practical matters such as easing the critical housing shortage Others are pressing for a greater say in the operation of their institutions. They are calling for greater autonomy in the universities, increased student representation on university senates and faculty councils, new enrollment procedures, and an effective job-placement program for graduates.

Students and others have maintained that this practice results in the admission of unqualified students as the result of the application of political or personal pressure on the president.

Many students want to push to the limits of official tolerance.

"We would like to have a non-Marxist organization," a 25-year-old law student said, "but we are realistic. W3 realize that ... any organization functioning will have to accept, at least in a formal sense, the need to work within the political system."

And in reference to the possibility of Russian intervention, now considered unlikely, the student said, "There are certain boundaries beyond which we could not go.

Still, he insisted, the new group formed at the university law school, "will work within the system against, shall we say, certain obnoxious elements.'

That was a reference to the pro-government Socialist Union of Polish Students which, before the strikes, said it represent about 75 percent of the country's 500,000 university stu-

Discontent signs evident

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - As Americans approached Labor Day 1979, the signs of discontent that would devastate the Democrats in 1980 already were clear.

The price of gasoline seemed to jump another nickel a gallon every time the family car needed another fill-up. Months of chaos in oncefriendly Iran raised the spectre of even higher prices and possibly a return to gasoline lines.

President Carter took an August vacation trip down the Mississippi River on the Delta Queen. During the first 48 hours the river boat made 11 stops and the president told cheering crowds - at 3 a.m. on one occasion that it was time to end the nation's dependence on foreign oil and to tax the profits oil companies would reap from the lifting of federal price controls.

The president was in political trouble and he knew it. The polls were bad and they were going to get worse. Carter tended to agree with aide Hamilton Jordan that Edward M. Kennedy, despite his denial, would seek the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination.

Carter was certain the polls would change. All that was needed were a few victories, especially on Capitol Hill, and a big one looked certain for the early fafl when the Senate would approve the SALT II treaty. The opposition to the arms control agreement was on the run.

Congress went on vacation for the month of August. It was a good time for Kennedy to get away from Washington and evaluate the risks of challenging the incumbent president. In a way, there seemed little to evaluate. Carter was a political cripple. Liberal Democrats in Congress openly feared that if Carter ran for re-election in 1980, he would drag scores of other party candidates down to defeat. Kennedy was their only hope

The Massachusetts senator was inclined to agree. But challenging an incumbent president was bound to be a bitter fight that could split the party and let the Republicans walk into the White House in 1980.

Kennedy talked to his family and some of his closest advisers. Unless some compelling reason came up for not entering the race, he was convinced he would do it.

In Idaho, Frank Church was gearing up for another rough re-election campaign. It was his fifth campaign. None of them had been easy and this one looked like the toughest ever. Rep. Steve Symms, a conservative Republican, was getting help from right-wing organizations that mounted a powerful attack on the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations for Soviet combat brigade was in Cuba. The senator called a news conference in Boise to demand the Soviet troops be withdrawn. He linked the troops to SALT II and said, "In my judgment the Senate will not ratify the SALT treaty while Russian combat troops are in Cuba.'

Suddenly, Carter's hope for a big victory on SALT was gone.

Ronald Reagan also would demand the Soviet troops leave Cuba. But he wouldn't link it to SALT II. He had opposed the treaty from the beginning.

The men around the former California governor were busy putting together the organization he needed for one last try for the White House.

Republican politicians could smell blood and the field of contenders for the GOP presidential nomination was growing rapidly.

Rep. Phil Crane, a conservative Republican from Illinois, had jumped into the race in August 1978. His theory was that Reagan was too old and would be knocked off early, and then his followers would gravitate to Crane.

Of more concern to Reagan was Senate Republican leader Howard Baker of Tennessee, an articulate moderate. John B. Connally was regarded as a threat but not likely to be able to overcome his ties to Richard M. Nixon. George Bush was dismissed as lacking any real political hase.

The first test of the Carter-Kennedy contest came in Florida early in October with non-binding precinct caucuses. Largely meaningless, except for symbolic value, the caucuses drew strong attention from White House political operatives who were determined to avoid an embarrassing loss to Kennedy, who had not yet announced his candidacy.

Carter won handily. Kennedy dismissed the Florida caucuses and pointed to the Iowa caucuses on Jan. 21, the first real step toward picking national convention delegates.

Then, on Nov. 4, Iranian militants occupied the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and took the occupants prisoner. They demanded that Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, who had come to the United States for medical treatment, be returned to Iran for trial.

Three days later, in Boston's Faneuil Hall, Kennedy formally launched his campaign.

The Kennedy campaign was overshadowed from the beginning by the hostages. The senator was convinced that the real issue was Carter's handling of the economy, but the hostages nevertheless dominated public opinion

Carter said the hostage crisis prevented him from campaigning. He pulled out of a debate in Des Moines, Iowa. The Republicans did debate in th in the polls had soared after the hostage crisis, trounced the senator. Bush, who had campaigned hard in the state, edged Reagan, who hadn't. The campaign moved to New Hampshire, site of the first primary. Bush claimed Iowa had given him momentum that would carry him to the nomination. Reagan, fighting back, criss-crossed the state by bus, shaking hands, answering questions. When the returns rolled in on Feb.

26, it was Bush's turn to be stunned. It was a Reagan landslide. Once again, Carter trounced Kennedy.

From there on, Carter and Reagan never were really challenged. A series of Southern state primaries, followed by Illinos, gave both men insurmountable leads.

In late April, Carter ordered a daring commando raid to rescue the hostages in Iran, only to abort the mission short of Tehran when three of eight helicopters failed in the Iranian desert.

Primary season prepared to give way to convention time. Carter said the Iranian and Afghanistan crises were under control and announced he could campaign.

When the Republican convention convened in Detroit in July, Reagan had long since locked up the nomination and was moving to close party ranks.

Carter also had enough delegates to, win the Democratic nomination in New York City in August, but Kennedy refused to give up. He campaigned for a rule that would permit delegates to ignore the primary results and vote for whomever they pleased.

He argued that Carter's brief rise in the polls had vanished, that the president was looking like a sure loser to Reagan.

Kennedy lost the rules fight, and he and Carter finally made an uneasy peace. The president gave Kennedy what he wanted on the Democratic platform and the senator endorsed Carter.

So began the general election campaign.

Reagan's big lead in the polls began to shrink. John B. Anderson, the Republican congressman from Illinois campaigning as an independent, was attracting support from young people and disaffected Democrats. Carter strategists feared Anderson would cost them key states in what looked like a close election.

Reagan invaded Carter's native South, where the Californian's conservative views always had been popular.

The main battleground, though, was the big industrial states of the Northeast and Midwest, plus Texas, Florida and California.

Reagan took dead aim on tradition-

Bears Believe It; after 42-15 rout; so do Hogs

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

WACO, Texas (AP) - The Baylor Bears, wearing 'Cotton Bowl 81 - Believe It!''T-shirts under their uniforms, took a mad out on the Arkansas Razorbacks Saturday to earn at least a share of the Southwest Conference football championship.

The No. 16-ranked Bears, their dreams of an unbeaten season shattered last week by lightly regarded San Jose State, flattened Arkansas like a steamroller with 367 yards rushing in a 42-15 homecoming victory.

"I'm not surprised," said Baylor Coach Grant Teaff after the regionally televised thrashing. "We had a fantastic week of preparation. We did not show films of the San Jose game. We didn't even talk about

BAYLOR can now earn a Cotton Bowl berth by defeating Rice in Houston next Saturday.

"It's nice to go to bed tonight with a co-championship," said Teaff. "But we've known all along that if we just take care of our business we'll be in the Cotton Bowl."

Baylor is unbeaten in SWC play while every other league team has at least two losses. The Bears closeout their season Nov. 22 against Texas in Waco.

downs and rushed for 128 yards while fullback Dennis Gentry rushed for 100 yards in the rout. Coach Grant Teaff flooded the field with reserves in the fourth quarter.

Then Teaff climbed up to the press box to listen on the radio to the final minutes of Texas' 15-13 victory over Houston, which gave the Bears at least a co-championship.

The victory kept Baylor unbeaten in SWC play with 6-0 ledger and the Bears are 8-1 overall. Arkansas dropped to 1-4 in the league and 4-4 for the season. Baylor can clinch a Cotton Bowl berth next week by defeating Rice in Houston next week.

IT WAS the first time Baylor had beaten Arkansas in Waco since 1963 and was the most points for a Bear team against the Razorbacks since 1949. A Lou Holtz-coached Arkansas team had never surrendered 35 points in a game.

The Bears thrilled the homecoming crowd of 46,000 in the regionally televised matchup with a steamroller ground game against the lightweight Arkansas defensive line.

Abercrombie scored twice by jumping high into the air over the goal from the one-yard line and bolted 17 yards on another scoring dash. Baylor quarterback Jay Jeffrey scored once on a yard run and passed 36 yards for a touchdown to Mike Fisher.

The Razorbacks' touchdowns came on a one-yard pass from Tom Jones to Darryl Mason and on a wild blocked punt play. Baylor punter Bubba Stowe kicked the ball into one of his own players in the fourth period and Arkansas' Keith Burns recovered in the end zone for the touchdown.

Freshman Alfred Anderson's three-yard scoring run with 1:28 to play closed out Baylor's avalanche of touchdowns.

THE BEARS, frustrated by last week's San Jose State upset, took it out on Arkansas from the very start.

They drove crisply to a touchdown the first time they touched the ball with Abercrombie and Gentry handling the workload. Abercrombie's 29-yard run to the Hog 18 was the big gainer. Abercrombie ripped off eight yards to the 9 and Gentry dashed eight yards to the 1 from where Abercrombie scored on one of his patented dives off the one-meter board into the end zone.

Arkansas got back into the game thanks to Abercrombie's fumble at the Baylor 6 which was recovered by tackle Billy Ray Smith. On fourth and one, quarterback Jones flipped a pass over the Arkansas fell behind 28-7 at halftime and Baylor massed Baylor line to tight end Darryl Mason for the touchdown to tie the score 7-7 at the end of the Barbecued Hog first period.

Baylor quickly made it 21-7 on a 68-yard drive the next time it had the ball. A 19-yard Jeffrey to Robert Holt pass and a 14-yard Abercrombie run setup Jeffrey's one-yard touchdown sprint on a bootleg around left end.

Safety Van McElroy's interception of an over-thrown pass at midfield gave the Bears another touchdown just before the half. The score came on a 36-yard pass to Mike Fisher, who was hit at the goal, fumbled the ball into the air and recovered it flat on his back in the end zone.

Baylor's stout defense led by middle linebacker Mike Singletary and defensive end Charles Benson held Arkansas to just two first downs in the first half.

TCU 'Stamps' out Tech on late surge

backs.

By MIKE COCHRAN

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) -Steve Stamp blitzed Texas Tech with three touchdown passes in the fourth quarter Saturday as TCU shot down Texas Tech 24-17 and ended a losing streak stretching back to 1979.

"This one's been a long time comng," sighed TCU coach F.A. Dry after the Horned Frogs packed 24 points into the final quarter for the comeback Southwest Conference triumph.

Stamp rifled scoring shots of 33 and 82 yards to flanker Stanley Washington and zinged a 25-yard touchdown toss to Bobby Stewart during the late uprising.

The 82-yarder was a dazzling passrun combo and provided the victory margin with 1:29 remaining.

"All I thought about on the pass was to catch the ball," said Washington, who flashed a piece of paper showing he had set a two-touchdown personal goal 24 hours earlier.

"I was just hoping to hang on (to the 82-yarder) so we would be in field goal range," he added.

Said Stamp, who passed for 252 yards: "Fate finally turned our way, and we got some breaks ... Washington made some unbelievable catches out there today."

Tech coach Rex Dockery, noting that the Raiders held TCU scoreless for three quarters, said, "We felt like we were in pretty good shape when we got the 17-0 lead ... you've just got to give them credit for coming back."

The Raiders, 4-4, mounted a 17-0 lead early in the fourth period and appeared en route to a lopsided triumph until Stamp's passing suddenly ignited the sputtering TCU offense.

STAMP, a junior, capped an 81yard scoring drive with 13:02 left in the game on a 33-yard shot to Washington. A minute later, after Shawn King's fumble recovery, he winged a 25-yard TD pass to Bobby Stewart.

Greg Porter's 43-yard field goal tied the game at 17-all with 10 minutes to play.

Tech quarterback Ron Reeves, shattering the Raiders' alltime career offense record, threw a 3-yard scoring pass to Greg Tyler, and freshof 18,752 watched the Horned Frogs record their first victory in 14 games, a string that did include a 3-3 tie with these same Raiders a year ago in Lubbock.

TCU scored all 24 of its points in a 13-minute span of the fourth quarter, chilling the team that a week ago upset the Texas Longhorns, 24-20.

The 82-yard pass and run combo was the third longest in Amon Carter Stadium's 51-year history and propelled TCU to its first home victory since 1977.

STAMP ended the sun-swept afternoon with 252 yards on 10 completions in 18 attempts and got his major ground support from Marcus Gilbert's 42 yards on 14 carries and J.C. Morris' 36 yards on 17 trips.

However, the TCU defense allowed Reeves but 8 completions on 15 attempts, shutting him off with 62 yards and collecting two interceptions.

Reeves, a junior, hit four of his first five passes and broke Joe Barnes' 3,651-yard career record with an 18vard bullet in the second quarter. That pass, and a subsequent 3-yard scoring pitch to Tyler, helped stake the Raiders to a 10-0 halftime lead. Wells opened the final quarter with his 54-yard burst off tackle for what appeared to be the clincher.

But Stamp needed but six plays to cover 81 yards for the first TCU touchdown and got the second score only moments later, after King's recovery of a Raider fumble 15 yards from the Tech end zone.

The second skyjacked pass, by Kenneth Beener in Raider territory, wiped out the last Tech scoring hope in the final seconds of the game.

Washington's two TD receptions totaled 115 yards, making him the day's leading receiver. Stewart pulled in three for 61 yards, and Phillip Epps caught three for 54 yards.

THE VICTORY virtually clinched an SWC championship for Baylor, which is undefeated in the league and needs only to beat Rice or Texas in its last two games to go to the Cotton Bowl.

Texas led 12-0 at halftime, but Houston pulled to within two points with less than four minutes left in the game, as quarterback Terry Elston returning from a 5-week layoff with a broken wrist - quickly guided the Cougars 68 yards to their second touchdown.

Lonell Phea made a diving catch on a pass he tipped for a 9-yard touchdown, and Houston went for two points to tie the game. Elston's pass was on target, but Terald Clark dropped the ball in the end zone.

Two crucial 15-yard penalties on Houston in the closing minutes enabled Texas to control the ball until the game was nearly over. One infraction was for having 12 players on the field, and the other was for roughing Texas quarterback Donnie Little Little alternated with Rick McIvor, who was hospitalized the morning before the game with 102 fever.

Goodson booted field goals of 39 yards and 27 yards into a 15 mph wind in the first quarter.

A FUMBLE by Houston quarterback Brent Chinn at the Cougar 33 set up Texas' lone touchdown, which freshman John Walker scored on a 2-yard leap over 261-pound tackle Terry Tausch.

Houston ripped 72 yards on its first possession of the third quarter for a touchdown, running away from Texas defensive tackle Kenneth Sims, a 6-6, 262-pound junior. Clark hammered in from the 1 for the score.

Goodson's 37-yard field, goal after linebacker Robin Sendlein intercepted Chinn and ran the ball to the Houston 43, gave Texas its only points in the second half.

Texas' leading rusher, A.J. "Jam" Jones, left the game in the first quarter with a dislocated collar bone that probably will keep him out for the rest of the season.

The other Texas starting halfback, Carl Robinson, also was injured, but returned and finished the game with 114 yards on 25 carries.

Clark led Houston with 101 yards on 24 carries.

Although Goodson connected on three field goals, he also missed attempts of 43, 38 and 29 yards.

Texas grabbed five Houston fumbles and had two interceptions - one by safety Bobby Johnson - which he carried from near midfield into the Houston end zone on the final play of the game. A holding penalty on Texas at the Houston 4 rubbed out the score

The Longhorns, plagued with numerous turnovers in recent weeks, committed none against the Cougars

Houston had won four consecutive games but the loss dropped the Cougars to 5-4 for the season and 4-2 in SWC action. Texas, ranked No. 2 nationally two weeks ago before losing to SMU and Texas Tech back to back, raised its season mark to 6-2. The Longhorns are 3-2 in league play.

On what turned out to be the winning field goal, the 37-yarder early in the third quarter, an offside penalty against Houston gave the Texas kicker a second chance after he had missed from 42 yards

One of two first-half penalties cost Houston a possible score, as a 68-yard pass-run play from Chinn to Phea that carried to the Texas 21 was brought back because of a holding infraction.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) - Major Ogilvie bolted three yards for a fourth quarter touchdown following a 1-yard punt as sixth-ranked Alabama trimmed Louisiana State 28-7 in a Southeastern Conference football game Saturday.

Ogilvie's second score of the day gave the Crimson Tide a 14-point lead after the Bayou Bengals had driven from their 10 to the Alabama 41, where punter David Johnston dropped the center snap and barely got off a bouncing punt that was taken by an Alabama lineman at the Tide

The victory lifted Alabama, which had a 28-game winning streak snapped last week by Mississippi State, to 8-1 for the season and 4-1 in the SEC.

The setback broke a five-game winning streak for LSU, which fell to 6-3 overall and 4-1 in the conference.

Sneva wins Phoenix 150

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) - Tom Sneva, winning for the first time since 1977, took the accident-marred Miller High Life 150 championship car race Saturday at Phoenix International Raceway.

The 32-year-old driver gained the advantage for good after 1980 Indy car national champion Johnny Rutherford was injured in a spectacular crash that halted the race on the 72nd of 150 laps.

The race was restarted one hour after the accident and Sneva stayed ahead of second-place Mario Andretti the rest of the way to gain his first triumph since the 1977 Pocono 500.

Rutherford, whose car flipped over on its top after it bumped another car and slid backward into the outside wall at the start of the main straightaway, had just passed Sneva to regain the lead he had held until pitting early in the race.

Rutherford, 42, winner of five races this season, was quickly pried from the wreckage and flown by helicopter to a hospital in Phoenix. He was reported in fair condition with a mild concussion, a lacerated finger and other cuts and bruises. He also was complaining of neck pains.

ANOTHER early leader, Al Unser, was knocked out of action in a threecar crash that occured as he attempted to pass on the 55th lap. Unser, who was leading at the time, tangled with cars driven by Tom Bagley and Bill Engelhart.

"Actually, the accident (Rutherford's) helped us," said Sneva, who won about $12,250 of the $75,000 purse.

"We were having trouble early in the race with our shifting linkage and that (break) gave us a chance to fix it. I was just fortunate I was able to dodge all the accidents."

Rutherford had just regained the race lead at the Phoenix International Raceway when he bumped a car driven by rookie Dennis Firestone coming through the fourth turn.

His bright yellow Chaparral slid sideways for more than 100 feet before slamming backward into the outside wall at the start of the main straightaway. The car then ricocheted off the wall and flipped up into the air.

Rutherford's lowslung open-cockpit racer suddenly went over on its top with the veteran driver strapped inside. .

Lee's Schooler wins regional title

LUBBOCK - Midland Lee's Robert Schooler continued his torrid pace toward a state cross country championship here Saturday by winning the Region I Cross Country title at Mae Simmons park.

Schooler, who became the first Midlander to win a region title, has now won all eight of his races this year and has become Lee's winningest cross country entry. Schooler will now go for the state title Saturday at 1 p.m. in Georgetown on the campus of Southwestern University.

Schooler posted a time of 15 minutes and 20 seconds over the 3-mile Simmons course to win by 12 seconds over freshman Bobby Aguirre of El Paso Riverside. Aguirre appears to have quite a future ahead of him. Schooler took the lead from Amarillo Tasco-sa's David Williams at the 1½-mile mark and was never headed after that. Williams ended up fourth and it was the third time this year he has lost to Schooler.

El Paso Burges' Roger Pineda took third place and Danny Garcia of El Paso Bel Air was fifth. San Angelo's Brent McCarty also won a state berth with a seventh place and was the only other 5-5A runner to do so.

Midland High sophomore James Beverly, who has a big future also, finished 60th in a field of 76 runners. However, Beverly had never run the course before and high winds plagued all runners.

Schooler posted a 15:00 the first time he ran the Simmons course this year in one of his

Huskers rumble; OU survives scare

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) - Quarterback Jeff Quinn tossed three touchdown passes to lead fifth-ranked Nebraska to a 55-8 victory over Kansas State in a Big Eight Conference mismatch Saturday.

Quinn hit 7 of 13 passes for 153 yards in just over two quarters of play. He left the game midway in the third quarter after hitting split end John Noonan with a 39-yard scoring pass for a 41-0 Nebraska lead. Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne substituted liberally in the second half. The Wildcats didn't get on the board until late in the fourth quarter when Mark Hundley scored from 19 yards out against a reserve Husker defense.

Kevin Seibel launched the scoring parade with a 27-yard first-period field goal. Second string I-back Craig Johnson followed with a 2-yard touchdown run for the Huskers, now 8-1.

Quinn tossed a 2-yard scoring pass to tight end Jeff Finn early in the second quarter, and he found split end Todd Brown with a 7-yard TD aerial with 9:29 left in the first half.

Freshman leads SMU over Rice

HOUSTON (AP) - Freshman quarter back Lance McIlhenny, using all of his offensive weapons, gunned down Rice 34-14 Saturday on three touchdown passes and then nonchalantly called it routine.

"We just came out and saw what they were running defensively and the coaches sent in the plays," said the confident McIlhenny, who is unbeaten in three starts for the Mustangs.

"I really didn't know if we planned to go with all those passes. It was just an all around good effort."

MCILHENNY replaced veteran quarterback Mike Ford three weeks ago and led the Mustangs to victory over the then-No. 6 ranked Texas Longhorns.

'McIlhenny did another outstanding job at quarterback," SMU coach Ron Meyer said. "He's started three games and we've won three games, so I'd say it's obvious he's earned a starting job."

SMU running back Craig James, who rushed 97 yards on 17 carries and scored one touchdown, said "with the offensive line we have, we feel we can run on anybody. That line stands toeto-toe with any other in the country.

The Owls, going for their fourth victory in five games, were tight before the game, coach Ray Alborn said.

"They had worked so hard to get where they were and they wanted this one real bad, but it seemed like we were sort of uptight," Alborn said. "I even told them a joke before we went out to start the game to try to loosen them up.'

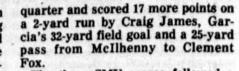

McIlhenny also got help from running back Eric Dickerson, who rushed 22 times for 147 yards, with 126 of that coming in the first half when McIlhenny threw touchdown strikes of 14 vards to Michael Bennett and 8 yards to Anthony Smith.

EDDIE GARCIA also kicked a 47 yard field goal to give the 18th-ranked Mustangs a 17-7 halftime lead.

The win gives SMU a 7-2 record for the year and 4-2 mark in SWC action.

The Owls, behind pass-oriented quarterback Randy Hertel, drove 80 yards on their first drive of the game and scored on a 20-yard pass from Hertel to Hosea Fortune.

The Mustangs took advantage of three straight turnovers in the third

The three SMU scores followed a fumble recovery by Michael Carter and interception returns by John Simmons, his seventh of the season, and Dick Blaylock.

After scoring on their first drive of the game, the Owls did not get out of their own end of the field until late in the third quarter when quarterback Robert Hoffmann completed a series of passes that took the Owls to the SMU 6-yard line.

Then, facing fourth down at the six, Hertel flipped his second touchdown pass of the game to Fortune. Rice, which fell to 4-5 for the season, went into the game with high hopes after winning three of its last four games, including last week's upset of Arkansas. The Owls dropped to 3-3 in SWC games.

AFTER BEING shut out in the first quarter, the Mustangs opened the second quarter with McIlhenny's first touchdown toss, a 14-yarder to Bennett and the Mustangs scored five of the next six times they got the ball. The Owls, who rallied from a 16-0 deficit to beat Arkansas last week, didn't have any comebacks left against the Ponies. They buried themselves with three straight turnovers in the third quarter that produced 17 points for SMU.

Cornerback Blaylock started it by returning a Hertel interception 19 yards to the SMU 42.

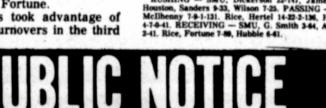

McIlhenny hit Smith for a 33-yard pass completion on the first play and moments later went 24 more yards to Gary Smith prior to James' 2-yard touchdown run.

We arrived the previous evening after a drive of several hours. There was really no indication the weather would be so nasty when we put up the little umbrella tent. But it became uncomforteble. By first light my sleeping bag was piled with my spare clothes in a vain attempt to stay

Ice crystals formed on the inside of the tent walls and the heat from the two-burner Coleman stove had not yet melted them when we left to hunt. It was my most miserable night in memory. The country wasn't as rugged as I had expected. The rolling oak and mesquite covered hills and the brushy catclaw and prickley-pear lined washes looked like very likely javelina habitat. My hosts on this trip assured me it was good hunting country. Ron Donnafield and Rick Coughlin, the host, had accounted for eight javelina in four hunting seasons.

Following a breakfast of hot coffee and sweetrolls my companions laid out the hunt plan. RICK would hunt by himself and after he stuffed some jerky and an apple in his rucksack he took his Bear recurve bow in hand and headed into an area northeast of camp.

Ron pointed to a hill overlooking several gullies that was to be my select area to hunt. Jim Fabby, the other guest hunter, was to take a route over a short saddle and into likely looking javelina habitat.

Later in the morning, after I had sat on a cold rock on the top of my very cold and windy hill, I was able to warm-up some when thinking my assignment was probably nothing more than a practical joke.

But, thanks to the unpredictable nature of the javelina my next move brought me success. I stood up. As if commanded 14 javelina arose from their beds. They had been bedded almost within arms length of where I had been sitting.

Using my recently acquired 57# Howard Hill long bow I put a Fred Bear Razorhead through the shoulder of the grey-ghost-of-the-desert. This 32-pounder was my fifth javelina taken with bow and arrow.

Once a hunting area is selected it should be scouted. Spend time looking the country over. Walk the hills and find the pigs. If you are in an area will a limited hunting season pre-hunt scouting is important. If you can locate javelina without disturbing them chances are they will be there next time around.

Javelina tracks resemble bear tracks but are seldon more than an inch long and they are somewhat more rounded then a deer print.

When hunting the coche javelin' be cautious and observant. If you have a good pair of binoculars use them. Walk a little and watch a lot.

After locating javelina plan your approach carefully and you should get close enough to pick your pig. Keep the breeze in your face or make it a cross-wind. Javelina have poor eyesight but do have a keenly developed sense of smell.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department announced dates and locations for issuing antlerless deer hunting permits for 1980-1981. The permits are issued on acreage and estimated deer population, and may be picked up by the landowner or his authorized agent.

This year's permit issuance will be reduced somewhat from last year because of the drought, according to Charles Winkler, big game program director. Antlerless pemits will not be issued in some Possum Kingdom area counties and western portions of South Texas. Most Edwards Plateau counties will have reduced issuance rate.

'We must remember,' Winkler said, "that this year's drought followed a year of extremely high deer production. Over the long haul, the drought's reduction is not as severe as it first breeding, the red setter-seemingly useless as a birddog 30 years ago-has been brought back to his old traits and now is as birdy and stylish as his English setter cousin.

"These are not the cumbersome, slope-backed, long-headed, mahogany feathered Irish setters of show ring game and calendar top potraiture," Sports Afield reports. "Instead, the modern red setter resembles a red version of the English setter that has been winning field trials in the U.S. and excelling as a gun dog."

During the first half of the century, the red setter was bred by "bench show people" for a solid mahogany color without white in its coat for ever larger size.

The instinct to find and point birds remained in some, but they could no longer run for long periods with snap and dash. In 1950, Horace Lytle, Sports Afield gun editor, proposed that the red be crossed-bred with the English setter,--"heresy as far as show dog fanciers were concerned." W.E. LeGrande of Pennsylvania took up the challenge. LeGrande knew that early English setter breeders had borrowed genes from Irish setter bloodlines to produce the English setters that were winning field trials. Why not get repayment of that debt.?'

In 1951, after many setbacks, Le-Grande was able to buy a five-year old female Irish setter owned by a South Carolina farmer. She was Carolina Lady, the fountain head of the modern red setter breed. Lady proved capable of passing along her intensity, size and style.

'The degree of cross-breeding still going on can't be pinpointed because much of it is done in secret," says Sports Afield. There is no doubt some stylish red setters now on the field trial circuit are carrying pointer blood as well as genes of their English cousins

In any case, the red setter challengers have achieved their major purpose, regaining their popularity among bird hunters who for many years have been denied the thrill of shooting over the classy Irish breed.

Southern loses, 50-7

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Quarter-back Keith Taylor passed for one touchdown and ran for another one Saturday as Jackson State squashed Texas Southern 50-7 in Southwestern Athletic Conference football.

Theodore Parker opened Jackson State's scoring blitz on a 1-yard, first quarter run, and scored again in the second quarter on a 7-yard scamper.

Taylor's first touchdown came in the opening period when he blazed 71 yards to score. He set up another TD in the following period with an 11-yard pass to Buster Barnett.

Texas Southern managed to score late in the fourth quarter when quarterback Jackie Hicks burst 2 yards for the touchdown.

The Tigers finished the game with 505 yards in total offense, with 412 yards of that in rushing.

Winkler says that the problem was compounded this year by hunters and landowners who did not use their anterless permits in 1979. The statewide doe harvest is usually about 75 percent below the number of permits issued.

Wariest of all game is the elusive auodad sheep which inhabits Texas' High Plains.

Good news for you big game hunters who would like to try a shot at bagging an Aoudad Sheep without having to give an arm and leg for a permit. These sheep are not the variety that inhabit the private game ranches in South Texas. They are wild and free-roaming in the Palo Duro Canyon Basin.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department is planning a public Aoudad sheep hunt at Caprock Canyons State Park Jan. 3-18, subject to approval by the TPWD Commission. The park is located three miles north of Quitaque off State Highway 86 in Briscoe County

APPLICATIONS are being accepted for a maximum of 42 permits to be determined by public drawing. Each hunter who draws successfully will be allowed to take one Aoudad, either sex, during the two-day hunt. The application deadline is 5 p.m. Nov. 26. The public drawing will be held in Austin at 10 a.m. Dec. 1.

The Aoudads in the park resulted from stockings by the department in eight Texas Panhandle counties in the 1950s. Aoudads are legally classified as game animals in these eight counties.

Since the park was acquired in 1975, the animals have not been hunted and park officials feel that some trophy animals will be taken during the hunts. Those selected by drawing will be charged $150, which includes camping in the park.

FOR SAFETY reasons, the park will be closed to normal visitation during the Jan. 3-18 hunts; however, only 3,300 of the 13,654 acres will be hunted. The regular Aoudad sheep season in the eight Panhandle Counties is Nov. 8-21 and again on the January dates. In the regular season, hunters can bag one Aoudad by permit only.

More inquiries have been made about the Panhandle Aoudad sheep than anything. Hunters recognize that the Aoudad is one of the toughest game challenges.

Introduced to the High Plains caprock counties region in 1957 on a speculation basis, the Barbary or Aoudad sheep, a native of northern Africa, has provided Texas hunters with opportunities only found in private game ranches in New Mexico and South Texas.

AOUDADS prefer the roughest, steepest, rockiest terrain they can find. Biologists studied the Aoudad in Africa before concluding the sheep could survive on Texas' High Plains, similar to their native country. The population has thrived and now numbers close to 3,000.

"Hunter success has never exceeded 40 percent." says Charles Winkler, TPWD big game project director. "In a recent season, for example, only 166 sheep were taken, and that's far short of the 578 animals for which permits were issued."

The biggest obstacle facing the Aoudad is overpopulation. One parasitic worm infests Aoudads when they come in contact with Mule deer in canyon regions. The worm is harmless to the deer, but it can destroy the trophy characteristics of the Aoudad sheep

MORE Aoudads need to be harvested. One reason more Aoudads are not bagged is the sheep itself. Many hunters have hunted for days before even seeing one. They are plentiful, smart and blend in with the terrain. Then, all of a sudden, you spot them right in front of you. If you are not looking for one, you can probably spot him. At times, while hunting the sheep, we've almost come to the conclusion that the sheep can read the hunting and fishing regulations, too! As with many species of game birds and animals, you see them one day prior to opening season, but they then disappear at nrise on opening morning.

Simms won't forget Dallas

Giants show dismal 1-8 record

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) - Phil Simms, the New York Giants quarterback, can remember the Dallas Cowboys as the National Football League team that drove him to tears.

Now, injuries, rapidly changing faces and a dismat 1-8 record have plummeted the hapless Giants into even deeper despair than they experienced after their 24-3 loss to the Cowboys Oct.5.

The Cowboys invade The Meadowlands today for another confrontation with the Giants.

"You have to dig down deep to find personal motivation for a thing like this," said Giants veteran linebacker John Skorupan. "You have to try not to let the situation around you bring you down."

SKORUPAN said that after eight years in the NFL he's become accustomed to losing. But he warned that rookies or second-year players, like Simms, who are used to leading college teams to victories, find it difficult to accept defeat. The Giants have 18 rookies on their roster.

"For the younger people, it's hard," Skorupan said. After the last Cowboys' game, when the Giants were 1-4, Simms was so angry and frustrated he tearfully threw his equipment into his locker piece y piece

Dave Jennings, the veteran punter, says the weekly changes in the roster are demoralizing.

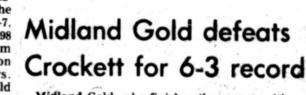

'If it was the same 45, it would be different now." said Jennings. "It's hard with all the new players to get anything going. It's almost like we should be wearing name tags."

THE COWBOYS don't have that problem. Whereas the Giants have lost six starters since the last battle at Dallas, the Cowboys are going in with the same 22 starters they used Oct.10.

What the Giants are evoking now is not competition but sympathy.

"I hate to see anybody get hurt that badly," said Stockstill's passing aroused the Flori-Cowboys Coach Tom Landry, who is tied with da State offense in the second quarter Miami's Don Shuls for third place as the NFL's winingest coaches. "It can hit you anytime, so you

Wreck spoils perfect record for Irish with tie

ATLANTA (AP) - Notre Dame failed to play up to its billing as the top-ranked college football team in the nation Saturday in a stunning 3-3 tie against inspired Georgia Tech and Irish Coach Dan Devine sounded more like a loser.

"This isn't the easiest press confer-ence I've ever attended," said Devine moments after his Irish were shocked by a Yellow Jacket defense that forced five turnovers and allowed the Irish only 252 yards.

"The first thing I'd like to do is give Georgia Tech credit for a great effort. Our turnovers and mistakes shouldn't detract from their effort," said De-vine, whose Irish scored with only : 44 remaining on a 47-yard field goal by Harry Oliver to gain the tie against the three-touchdown underdog Yellow Jackets.

Ogburn completed 11 of 19 passes for 142 yards and one touchdown and rushed for another 83 yards on 18 carries as the Ducks, 5-2-2, snapped an eight-game losing streak against the Bruins. UCLA played most of the game without tailback Freeman McNeil, the country's fourthleading rusher with an average of 144.5 yards per game. McNeil suffered a bruised left hip in practice last Monday and aggravated the injury late in the first quarter. He wound up with 18 yards on five carries.

stole the football for a game-breaking touchdown in the second half, leading fourth-ranked Southern California to a 34-9 Pacific-10 victory over Stanford on Saturday.

Allen, the nation's third leading rusher, totaled 196 yards running as the Trojans stretched their unbeaten streak to 28 games, a new school record. They improved their season record to 7-0-1 before the conference's biggest crowd of the year, 84,892, and a regional television audience.

Southern Cal was unstoppable the first three times it had the ball, mounting touchdown drives of 95, 96 and 80 yards. Allen scored on runs of 4 yards and 1 yard, and quarterback Gordon Adams added a 1yard touchdown dive.

Stanford's Cardinals, 6-4 and dead in the Rose Bowl race with a 3-3 Pac-10 record, made the score 12-6 during the second quarter when sophomore John Elway threw his 26th touchdown pass of the season, a 46-yarder to All-American Ken Margerum. Just before the half ended, Stanford's Ken Naber made the score 18-9 with a 48-yard field goal. The Trojans failed to get a first down on their first two possessions in the second half, but Naber missed a 43-yard field goal try on Stanford's first possession and Lott made his big play the next time the Cardinals had the ball.

Vincent White made a first down run for Stanford but Lott, the Trojan's strong safety, stripped the ball away from White and dashed 45 yards to make the score 24-9. Eric Hipp booted a 37-yard field goal later in the third period and reserve fullback Bob McClanahan ran 21 yards for a USC touchdown just before the game ended.

Kenty defends title

DETROIT (AP) - Hilmer Kenty, overcoming an apparent leg injury in the late rounds, successfully defended his World Boxing Association lightweight title Saturday with a unanimous decision over thirdranked Vilomar Fernandez.

Kenty, a 25-year-old from Detroit, kept his professional record unblemished at 20-0 while Fernandez, a Dominican Republic native now living in New York, dropped to 24-8-2.

Palma scores TKO over Morales

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) - Argentina's Sergio Victor Palma retained his World Boxing Association junior featherweight title Saturday night, scoring a ninth-round technical knockout over challenger Ulises Morales of Panama.

Referee Luis Sulbaran of Venezuela halted the scheduled 15-round title fight after 1 minute, 20 seconds of the ninth round when the 25-year-old Morales, spitting blood, was unable to continue.

Stanton stages Super Bowl

STANTON - With the high school footballers taking the weekend off, the Stanton Noon Lions Club sponsored PeeWee football program came to a sea-son ending climax in the PeeWee Super Bowl in Buffalo Stadium Saturday night. The East All Stars shaded the West All Stars by a 12-0 margin to take the crown.

The first half of play ended in a scoreless tie. The closest either club came to scoring was on the last play of the half when Rudy Navarez hauled in a 40-yard pass but was pulled down on the one foot line as the buzzer sounded.

Michael Willaims broke the scoring drought by racing 25 yards for the first touchdown of the evening. The PAT was no good leaving the East All Stars on top 6-0. A few minutes later Wayne Cain swiped and errant West All Star pass and returned it.

35 yards for the final score of the game. Julie Roberts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reggie Roberts, was crowned PeeWee Queen during halftime cermonies.

The Stanton Peewee program is for youngsters in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades.

"I'm tired of being single," Charly said during an interview between sets. "I want a relationship. I think it would help me mentally. I'm not saying I can't go without anybody. I can. I've done it for two years.

Charly, who has been performing since she was nine and had a small band that included her brother on guitar, said she spent two or three years taking tapes to Nashville with no success. She always thought "she'd wind up as a secretary" and was actually working as a receptionist when her break came.

"In order to get a number one hit you have to get out and work for it," she said.

She remembers one day when she had interviews every 30 minutes from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. and then performed two concerts.

She agreed that that was too much because she "barely remembers the second show." But, when she is at "home and not working somewhere, I feel I'm not living up to what I should be in this business

"I'll probably never be satisfied," Charly said. "Everything that I'd wanted to achieve I have, and it wasn't what I wanted."

Then she laughed and said, "If Burt Reynolds asked me to marry him tomorrow, I'd never be happy.

Wednesday night there were several admirers who would, from all appearances, most likely like to try their luck at making Charly smile. Perhaps that says it all.

Sometimes, I can't believe what's happened to me. Every morning when I wake up I want to check to make sure I'm the Steve McQueen who's in the movies, has a wonderful wife, two great kids, a home of his own and money in the bank.

Man, I can't get used to it. I could just as easily have wound up behind the eight ball.

When I did "The Great Escape" for producerdirector John Sturges and The Mirisch Company, I kept thinking: "If they were making a movie of my life, that's what they would call it: "The Great

I left school when I was 15 though, and shipped out on an oil tanker. From there I worked in lumber camps, as a sandalmaker, did a tour in the Marine Corps, was a delivery boy and a carney huckster, tended bar and sold encyclopedias.

A friend of mine took me to one of Sanford Meisner's classes at the Neighborhood Playhouse and I was hooked. I dug it because it let me burn off energy, which I've got a lot of. Besides, I wanted to beat the 40-hour-week rat race. But now I'm working 72 hours a week, so there you go.

One thing they taught me at Boys Republic was discipline and, man, it helped when I started the acting scene. I won a scholarship to the Herbert

Devanova's exuberance contagious

By GEORGIA TEMPLE Staff Writer

Animated, expressive and enthusiatic about life and her work, Bulgarian pianist Marta Deyanova leaves part of her spirit with those whose lives she touches. Her exuberance is contagious.

Two impressions, that brief exposure to her might leave others with, are: she's a mere slip of a girl, barely over 18; and she's had an easy, wellsheltered life. Both are inaccurate.

At 31 (she will be 32 Nov. 14th), Marta is the only child of divorced parents.

In an interview after her recent Midland-Odessa concerts, Marta explained that, although many children withdraw or have hard feelings against one or the other parent, her choice was to become more involved in others' lives. For her, people are important.

"I am a very sentimental person. I would like to have brothers and sisters, but I love my friends, my city (which is Sofia, Bulgaria). There is a very beautiful mountain that I can see from my balcony and it's my favorite place.

She said she would like to have children, but admitted it won't be easy with her demanding career. "Music is very special to me; it's in my blood," Marta said. "I could never give it up," but, at the same time, she has an "incredible attraction to drama."

Marta has been playing piano since she was 5, performing her first public concert at the age of 11, when she initially experienced the joy of communicating with an audience.

It wasn't until she was 18 that she was first exposed to acting and was "absolutely torn between drama and music.

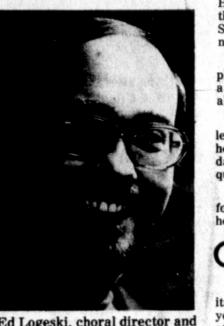

"When I play the piano, I usually play with shut eyes. With drama I see and I feel the closeness to the audience.

Today, Marta may have a way of solving this dilemma. She has auditioned for a part in a Bulgarian movie and will find out in the coming months whether she has been chosen. She is competing against six others who also had acceptable screen tests.

Marta has been a State Artist since 1971, which means she is one of the "30 or 40 artists paid by the state to play at least 30 concerts a year in Bulgaria and to go on tours in Socialist countries.

"As a State Artist I have a lot of privileges and much more freedom than other people," Marta said, ad-ding that she has passports to Asia, Europe and America.

It is not easy for her husband, Bojomil Starchonov, who was her last teacher, to go with her, especially to America. He spends his time, Marta said, teaching at the Sofia State Conservatory and serving on the board of the Bulgarian Theatre Association. Thus, Marta spends her time traveling alone.

"We are crazy about phones," she said, laughing.

They both hope, Marta said, he will be able to accompany her to New York in December for her Carnegie Hall debut as the guest soloist with the American Symphony Orchestra. She will be playing a piece she has never performed before.

"It is a piece by Strauss that is not played very often," and although it is a very difficult one, Marta said, "I always like to take a risk."

Marta accepted just such a challenge when she played Rachmaninoff here, because she had only had six days to prepare. And his works are quite complicated to perform.

Those who missed her local performances missed an opportunity to hear not only an exceptional performance by the symphony, but a truly remarkable performance by a great pianist.

"It is very important to feel at ease," Marta said, admitting that she was more comfortable the second night. Also, from hearing her play both nights, it was apparent that the piano she used Tuesday had a better sound.

Marta, who will be performing yet another new piece in Rome, Italy, Monday, said she was sure she was going to "be a little nostalgic" leaving West Texas.

"The flat land gave me a strange sensation of freedom somehow. I went to the top of the First National Bank Building (in Midland) and saw very far away. It was a special feeling." She added that she loved the "incredible sunsets" she saw from her room.

"There are a lot of mountains in Bulgaria and the sun disappears very suddenly. You feel like it's been stolen. Not here. You have all the sunset for yourself.'

Marta said she also found the people here "definitely very different" than those in other parts of the United States

"The people here were very open and very warm. I felt at home."

Texas Nurses Week has been proclaimed by Gov. Bill Clements and the Texas Nurses Association as Nov. 9-15. Nurses can be found in all phases of life - in the doctors' offices, hospitals, schools and health departments. Wherever they are found, all are known as dedicated, hard workers.

Becoming a nurse is not easy. The knowledge and skills required of today's registered nurse (RN), can only be obtained through entry into nursing schools at three levels including the three-year diploma, twoyear associate degree and four year baccalaureate degree. Degrees are also offered at the master's and doctorate levels with such degrees being mandatory for nursing educators and clinical specialists.

Nursing is a profession very much alive and growing and there is a critical shortage of nurses in Texas and the nation. There are over 9,000 currently vacant nursing positions in Texas hospitals. The profession of nursing offers unlimited opportunities to men and women for a challenging and rewarding career.

Midland nurses recently honored for dedication to their career, were Mary Louise Russell, Community Nurse of the Year; Ann Bryant, Parkview Hospital Nurse of the Year and Wanda Douglas, Midland Memorial Hospital Nurse of the Year. Mrs. Russell had been a nurse for 40 years before retiring in 1977. She was working at Midland City/County Health Department at the time of her retirement. She and her husband, Joe, have six children and several grandchildren. She has worked in many phases of nursing including industrial, office, school and Red Cross. In 1979, she received her 35-year Red Cross Service Pen. She is a graduate of Seton Hospital School of Nursing in Austin.

Mrs. Bryant has been operating room supervisor at Parkview Hospital for two years. Prior to that, she worked as a surgical nurse at Midland Memorial Hospital. She is a graduate of Odessa College. She is married to Jerry Bryant and they have three children.

Employed at Midland Memorial Hospital for three years, Mrs. Douglas was an RN for seven years at St. Anthony Hospital in Effingham, Ill. She attended Kansas State University and Olney Central College. She has worked in labor and delivery, has been supervisor for all three shifts and opened the west nursing unit. She and her husband, Melvin, have two children.

Today's high earner is in sales, teacher says

By MARTIN GERCHEN Copley News Service

There are more people in sales today earning in excess of $100,000 a year than there are doctors, lawyers or engineers in that high-income bracket, says William H. Miller, a management consultant who specializes in sales and marketing.

"I know people who came to me last year when they were earning between $15,000 and $20,000 who now are making $100,000 in sales," said Miller, who teaches a course on sales for University of California, San Diego Extension.

The industry that will dominate the '80s will be service, and if any word can be said to embody the spirit of the service industry, then selling is surely that word."

percent last year and 7.5 percent in 1979, AMA found in a survey of 600 firms employing 46,700 people.

Most sales representatives use cars, but some fly their own airplanes, the survey revealed. Sales representatives who have to move can count on having expenses paid by the employers, with some companies providing coverage for various housing costs.

Tom Hopkins, 36, was 19 when he began trying to sell houses in California's Simi Valley. "In the first six months, I earned an average of $42 a month

"I had too much month at the end of the money.

"I was negative and depressed, so I went in for some sales training. The next six months I sold $1 million in real estate," he said in a phone interview from Sacramento, where he was conducting a seminar on how to sell.

Holiday look is for men

By WANDA MOUTON Lifestyle Editor

"This will be a Christmas for men with the natural look in decorating,' said Louis Patillo, florist, as he addressed a recent meeting of the Midland Country Club Ladies Associa-

His topic was "Holiday Decorat-

"It may be a bit early to decorate your home, but it's certainly not too early to begin thinking about what you want to do," he said. "It takes time to prepare and none of you want to spend your last moments before the holidays working on decorations."

"We are going back to the natural look of twigs, grapevines, mosses, spices, feathers and bird nexts," he said

Many of the arrangements the Lubbock florist exhibited before his audience received spontaneous applause. Among the crowd favorites was an arrangement of twigs and grapevines accented with a stuffed pheasant, and a simple arrangement of giant cinnamon sticks wrapped in a bundle and tied with red velvet ribbon or rope.

He showed three looks-natural, traditional and ultra-modern-for the Christmas season. The traditional look included arrangements using the standby Christmas colors of red and green, and with traditional accessories of Christmas ornaments, miniature Santa Claus dolls, and red and green ribbon, bows and rope. The Della Robia look is always popular, according to Patillo.

He emphasized light and reflection in showing the ultra-modern look. One of his creations for the table utilized small mirrors and candles arranged at different levels to provide a dramatic effect.

"Make the table centerpiece more dramatic with lots of height," he advised. Some of his creations were over two feet in height.

Woods and barks were a popular feature of his natural arrangements. He showed arrangements for Thanksgiving, fall and Christmas in burgundy, deep pink, and apricot colors. 'Natural woodtones are fantastic, as are raffia, lotus pods and pine cones,' he said.

Patillo encouraged his listeners to look in their own backyard for materials in which to make their arrangements. Many of his arrangements were complementary, with a matching

ter. Out come the caulking gun, the weatherstripping, the storm windows and extra insulation. There's another important energy-saving step you can take to insulate your home against chilling winds and your wallet against high fuel costs.

Government research has shown that shelter plantings have a remarkable effect in reducing wind velocity and heat loss from homes. On the sheltered side of green windbreaks, even those composed of deciduous species which lose their leaves in winter, daily temperatures are fourdegrees F. higher than those in exposed areas. Evergreen plantings have an even greater effect on temperatures. All this translates into a savings for homeowners of anywhere from 10 to 25 percent on costly heating bills

According to the American Association of Nurserymen (AAN), the location of windbreaks is the key to their effectiveness. Most cold winter winds throughout the country come from the north and the west, so windbreaks should be located on those sides, with an extension on the eastern side wherever space pemits. The south side should be left open to permit the sun to shine through

Experiments have proven that the maximum wind reduction occurs at a distance of from four to six times the height of the windbreak. This means that if you have a 20-foot house. your optimum energysavings would be achieved with a windplanted in a straighr line,

There are now 2.8 million salespeople in the country, according to the U.S. Department of Labor. And sales is one of the few occupations that can yield a six-figure income without executive responsibility, Money magazine says.

But for salespeople who want the executive suite, the route can begin in sales, move to sales manager and into marketing and the top, Money reports.

More than one-fourth of chief executives of the largest corporations came up through sales, according to the magazine.

The four areas which will need more sales personnel during this decade are health care, financial services such as word processing and accounting, electronic data processing and energy, according to Miller, whose firm is called Management Dynamics.

Selling is hard work, Miller said. "You have to be able to tolerate a high degree of rejection to be a salesperson. You can't be just a good conversationalist. You must know how to get the order."

But getting the order pays off, says the American Management Association. Overall wages for sales representatives increased an average 8.5

During the next two years, Hopkins said he earned $60,000 annually, and was up to $100,000 annually for three years after that.

Now he said he makes more money -1 million a year-teaching people how to sell instead of selling. Of course, he notes that he still is selling. Now he sells people on paying to hear his technique instead of selling homes to people.

The biggest obstacle to success in sales is fear of rejection. The key to success is to have the ability to handle failure. I can teach people success because I failed miserably myself.

He plans to focus on the use of trusts and estate and gift tax. He will also talk about the lifetime objectives of estate planning and death transfer possibilities. Federal and state tax considerations, and the importance of the estate planning team will be discussed. Mullen received his bachelor of science degree in accounting from

Brigham Young University and a master of business taxation degree from The University of Southern California He has been certified by the Texas

Shoes good for body, soul

Many people take off their shoes to relax, but others feel much better when they put them on, according to an article in a recent issue of the "American Journal of Nursing."

Putting on ordinary shoes can mean, "I am somebody. I have things to do." according to Adaline B. Chamberlin, RN. Ms. Chamberlin reports that the mental attitudes of patients in psychiatric hospitals improved dramatically when worn slippers were replaced by good shoes. Nursing home residents said they felt better and their emotional health improved when they were permitted to wear shoes, often resulting in improved motivation and self-esteem. Ms. Chamberlin describes how patients requiring long-term hospitalization crocheted footwear to which they sewed stiff leather soles. They said the footwear made them "feel like people again."

Prior to her retirement, Ms. Chamberlin worked in the areas of gerontologic and psychiatric nursing as Nursing Care Consultant for the state of Washington.

And a good thing, too, because our biggest contract for low-cost natural gas (which we also use to make your electricity) expires this year.

This contract has been in effect for almost 20 years. It's helped us keep the cost of electricity lower here than in many other parts of the country.

Next year when we have to

Depressing news

By ERMA BOMBECK

The paper is so full of depressing news these days that some mornings I don't want to get out of bed.

I don't know about the world situation, but if I see one more story of a woman who works full-time, bakes her own bread, makes her own coats, works for World Peace, is running for the Senate, carrying a child for a woman unable to have one, teaches metric at nights, washes and irons her aluminum foil and whose hobby is "people," I'm going to be sick.

I feel like I'm back in the '50s again, when every magazine I picked up transported me to another guilt trip.

I have one clipping showing a woman with a freshly baked pie who, according to the story, gets up at 4:30 each morning to start the laundry and begins preparations for the evening meal. Before she leaves for work she makes sure everyone "is in a happy frame of mind." That miracle accomplished, she works all day, arrives home at 4:00, slips a roast in the oven and starts baking again, cleans her large five-bedroom, three-bath home and - here's a Hallelujah Heloise for you - "never walks through

RINGING THE BELL Clear impression on TV questioned

By BOB TIEULE

Dear Bob: "We do not begrudge Rev. Jackson's national stature and prominence. He is a national Black

"We will of course admit than many black citizens will and maybe should support the Republican party. However, we do question this fact that on national television there was the clear impression that the feelings, opinions, and political ideology of Rev. Jesse Jackson were indeed those of the Black religious establishment.

"The public at large does not know that Rev. Jesse Jackson, despite his clerical credentials, is not an integral part of the established Black religious community. He does not speak for the millions of Black Baptists, Method-ists, Church of God in Christ, and others throughout the nation.

"It seems White America has always tried to decide who would speak for Black America. This attempt has been a strong element in the rampant racism with permeates this nation. CBS, NBC and ABC have no right to decide, by picking out whom they will' interview, who should be the spokes-man for the Black religious communi-

The Christian Methodist Episcopal Church does not take partisan stands in political elections. It urges its members to participate in the political process as a part of their Christian duty. The church ties to keep them informed so that they can act intelligently. Our church is also aware of the growing conservative mood in this country and that any president must take into account the larger electorate if he is to remain in office. Yes, Rev. Jackson, we are of age, we will speak for ourselves. Keep ringing the bell Brother Bob. You are doing a good job". — Othal Lakey, editor of the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church.

(Note: This memo was received about two weeks before the national election).

Another Black editor writes: "Dear Bob: We cannot believe that Rev. David Abernathy could have made a decision to support Ronald Reagan with a sever search of his sould, as well as consideration of the denunciations which he would be sure to get from friends and foes alike. 'WE believe that it represents a growing degree of political sophistication among Black leaders who are beginning to react to the American politcal scene in a more realistic manner.

"Abernathy's deflection deals with two realities: (1)That we cannot allow any administration to come to power in Washington without having representation in that administration no matter how repulsive the administration might appear to be. And, (2) we cannot continue to put all of our eggs in one basket.

"It has long since been argued that we cannot afford to put all our eggs in one basket. It may be precisely because we have not heeded this warning that the Carter administration has been rather negligent about fulfilling its promises made during the last presidential campaign.

We cannot believe that all of it has been Carter's fault. Congress also, shares a large measure of the blame." - Editors, Oklahoma Eagle.

Recent great quotes: "Our country has entered into a turbulent and challenging decade. We face the challenges of international instability, the growth of Soviet imperalism, problems of reindustrialization and many others like unemployment stability and inflation. All of these problems require a unified country." - Bayard Rustin

Our thanks to the mass media of the Permian Basin, and to the many bellringers and friends who helped make our first "Black College Day" one that will be remembered. Let's hope for a bigger celebration next year. In the meantime, long live our Black Colleges.

While with Jimmy Carter's defeat, the concentration is on the sweeping changes in government - Democrat to Carter Jr. Republican — there are hundreds of personal changes that go with the transfer of power from one administration to another.

Simply put, White House staffers of all ages face something of a midlife crisis. They are about to become unemployed Democrats in a city dominated by Republicans.

For some, job offers already have been received. One high White House aide reportedly has received calls from six law firms. For others, nothing.

White House chief of staff Jack Watson said Thursday that a job placement bureau of sorts will be created in the White House - after hours - to help the about-to-be unemployed. Members of Carter's campaign committee faced the most immedi-ate problem. They were out of work as of Friday. At least White House employees have paychecks guaranteed until Inauguration Day on Jan. 20. Watson said he had "no earthly idea" what he will do next. # Area producers move out for the harvest

By CHARLES W. GREEN Midland County Extension Agent — Agriculture

Producers in the Midland area are moving into their fields with harvesting equipment to begin the task of gathering the 1980 crop. Yields appear to be even more disappointing than at first anticipated.

The early and sharp freeze possibly damaged a few more bolls than at first thought, but the cotton isn't there.

Worm and drought damage took its toll on this year's crop and coming after last year's record yields it does come as a let down.

Most of the water that plants withdraw from the soil is passed through their leaves into the atmosphere by a process known as transpiration. Researchers have been looking for ways to reduce this process and "droughtproof" plants that grow in the watershort Southwest.

Beef tallow is one of the newest resources being examined for possible use as an antitranspirant to decrease plant requirements. Beef tallow, a fat by-produce of the beef production industry, is both abundant and cheap. An estimated 3½ billion pounds of unused tallow in the United States currently is waiting for a market. It may have found one in West Texas.

Dr. Charles Wendt, plant-soil-water expert with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Lubbock, and his research colleague Michael Gerst. are the first to successfully put tallow into a water solution for plant application. Dr. Wendt says it took several months of trial and error to emulsify the fat/water mix into a concentration of tallow and soap solution that would not burn plant materials.

Dr. William Lipe worked with Dr. Wendt and Mike Gerst on the preliminary study, applying a tallow-water emulsion on potatoes to establish tallow's value as an evaporation suppressant.

The study's objectives were to determine the phototoxicity, or susceptibility of plant leaf burn, for several mixtures of tallow-water emulsions under field conditions and to determine its effect on water relations and yield on potatoes grown under different field conditions.

Tallow concentrations of 1.5 percent, two and three and six percent were compared to identical concentrations of Folicote. a commonly used antitranspirant, and sprayed on potatoes grown under two differemnt soil moisture levels at Lubbock and Hill Farms, Texas.

The antitranspirant treated plants tended to use water over a longer period of time and tended to stress less than the untreated plants, while the tallow and Folicote treated potatoes in two percent concentrations were most effective in increasing the value of the potato crops. They sprayed crops yielded an increase of more than $500 per acre, primarily as the result of an increase in the quality of the potatoes.

The study suggests a tremendous potential for more beneficial water use applying tallow as an antitranspirant, particularly when its cost of $5.20 per acre is compared with the cost of Folicote at $40.58 per acre.

Dr. Wendt is hopeful of research funds to continue the studies with tallow. He is working to get even higher concentrations of tallow into solution so the farmer won't have to carry around so much water. He has plans to further examine tallow under field conditions to study its influence on soil properties and its affect on water movement into the soil.

If tallow does prove effective an an evaporational suppressant, its potential wide use could increase the water use efficiency of area crops, and strengthen the beef industry on the High Plains.

A few weeks ago I had some information in this column concerning firewood. Some little gremlin lurking in a typewriter keyboard caused a typographical error and the dimensions of a cord were incorrectly stated. One of my alert readers was quick to catch the error.

The purpose of the article was to help the homeowner determine the proper value of firewood sold in various dimensions. The figure to remamber is 128 cubic feet. The standard cord is a pile of closely stacked logs or bolts 4 feet by 8 feet. Since few people burn fireplace wood either 4 feet or 8 feet long, most wood is purchased as a "face cord" that is a 4-foot by 8-foot face cut to the desired length. A face cord is much smaller than a standard cord. For example, a face cord of 16-inch-long pieces is only a third of a standard cord, or 42.67 cubic feet.

The thing to remember is this more detailed information, we have a free publication, MP-1211, "Buying and Using Fireplace Wood," available from the county extension office, 682-9481, Extension 433,

CONSUMER TIPS Parade gets longer at the front door

By LINDA TRUITT Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin, Inc.

Everyday, it seems, the parade gets longer of people who are trying to sell us goods and services at our front doors. We are approached to buy magazines, home improvement gadgets, vacuum cleaners and encyclopedias at a time when we are not prepared to shop and therefore not as cautious.

Since it is often hard to say no to a door-to-door salesperson (especially children and teen-agers), it is important for you to know your rights concerning door-to-door transactions.

cerning door-to-door transactions. The Texas Home Solicitation Act protects the consumer from an unwise decision involving a home solicitor by allowing him to change his mind if he purchases a product costing $25 or more. To be effective, a written notice of cancellation must be received by the seller no later than midnight of the third business day after the sale.

The law requires the salesperson to provide the consumer with a fully completed receipt or a copy of the contract which must include the date of the transaction and the name and address of the seller. Also, the notice of the right to cancel must be printed in large dark type near the spot reserved for the buyer's signature.

A written "notice of cancellation" must also be attached to the contract or receipt. As the salesperson is required by law to explain, if this notice is signed and mailed to the seller within the specified time period, the sale will be cancelled and all payments returned within 10 business days.

Since prevention is the best medicine, by knowing how to deal with home solicitors you should avoid having to exercise these rights. Use these guidelines when dealing with a doorto-door salesperson:

-Your first and best defense, when you have no interest in the product, is your refusal to let the salesperson take your time. Remember, the law only applies to purchases that cost $25 or more. If you spend less, the business is not required to refund your money.

-Demand identification. Most communities, including Midland, Odessa and Big Spring, require (in most cases) home solicitors to be registered with the police department. If you find a door-to-door salesperson that does not have a permit, immediately inform the police. Also, if you are in doubt about the company a person represents, check with the BBB before you let a stranger into your home.

-Never sign an order for merchandise just to get rid of an aggressive salesperson. If you are truly interested in the product, take time to comparison shop and make an appointment for the salesperson to come back. Reputable firms will allow reasonable time for buying decisions.

-Never sign a conract that you have not thoroughly read.

-Be wary of persons who come to your door indicating they are conducting an opinion poll, or informing you that you have won a free gift. Often this is used as a way to get into your home to begin a sales presentation.

If you are interested in knowing the reputation of a company you are unfamiliar with, call the Better Business Bureau at 563-1880 for a report.

USDA panel calls for new emphasis on farm research

By CLIFF HAAS Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - An Agriculture Department advisory panel is calling for more emphasis in farm research and extension programs on making efficient use of existing natural resources.

The annual report to Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland by the National Agricultural Research and Extension Users Advisory Board said, "Resources that are not forever lost require great amounts of time and investment to recoup." The panel said its annual survey, which included visits to three states and a series of public forums, did not "find satisfactory concern for, nor protection of the nation's natural resources in federal, other public or private research, extension or management programs.

The 20-member panel is composed of representatives of various farm production and marketing groups as well as consumer groups and state agencies.

Singled out for special attention were the loss of farm land to urbanization and "exploitive production practices," and "serious and worsening water supply problems." In addition, "worldwide, forests and watersheds are being destroyed at alarming rates," the report said.

Possibly the most limiting resource necessary to U.S. agriculture is water, the report noted.

The panel said the focus of research and extension programs should be on more efficient use of water supplies instead of increased supply levels.

"Because synthetic fuels programs will dramatically increase water demand in some water-short areas (and other demands on water supplies), ... we recommend the immediate initiation of studies to develop future alternatives for agricultural production in those states where federal synthetic fuels programs are slated," the report said. The report also contained a call for government agencies and other organizations involved in water resource development to coordinate their work on the basis of entire river basin systems.

This would be more useful than the piecemeal, "smaller, often arbitrary" methods now used.

"Substantial new federal funds" would be needed to accomplish this work, the report said. But it did not discuss specific amounts.

Meanwhile, the report said, agricultural land and soil are being "lost in the United States at an unacceptable rate.'

Urbanization and development coupled with intensive production practices are "severely restricting future agricultural capacity for the sake of short-term gains in productivity and-or short-term profit," the report said. We are dissatisfied with the current responses of federal, other public

Ending embargo would be 'dumb' That's the view of outgoing ag secretary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Outgoing Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland thinks it will be difficult for President-elect Ronald Reagan to keep his campaign pledge of ending the partial embargo on U.S. grain shipments to the Soviet Union.

In fact, Bergland said Thursday, it would be "dumb" for Reagan to do

During a post-election interview with reporters, Bergland also ruled out any move by President Carter to lift the embargo before Reagan takes office Jan. 20.

Reagan names team to plan new agricultural policies

CHICAGO (AP) - A point some of the areas Thomas A. Hammer, to where decisions are discuss the transition 19-member agriculture transition team named by President-elect Ronald Reagan has held its first meeting aimed at helping fomulate the new administration's farm policies, participants said today.

Among panel members are former Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz, three former assis-

which he ran also called for its end. "I know people believe he will and he said he will, but I don't think he will — not without a 'quid pro quo,' some response from the Soviet Union," Bergland.

"I don't believe Mr. Reagan will suspend the embargo ... because it would be dumb," Bergland said.

"Give it (the embargoed grain) all away to the Russians? The Russians need this grain and for him (Reagan) just to unilaterially suspend it and give up all that leverage is just incon-ceivable," Bergland said.

Carter imposed the ban on grain sales above previously negotiated levels in retaliation for the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan. But the action became the target of many farm groups that said the embargo was more damaging for American producers than for the Soviets.

Bergland said that if Reagan removes the restraints from Soviet purchases of grain without gaining concessions on Afghanistan, "You can ask all kinds of rhetorical questions. Like, 'What about Poland?'

"When confronted with the facts that the Russians have the world's largest reserve of gold and that the crop conditions in the world don't look very attractive at the moment, I can't imagine that any president of the United States would allow the Soviet Union to corner the world's grain reserve," Bergland said.

"And that's what he (Reagan) said he would do. He said it time after time.'

Bergland said bad planting conditions worldwide mean there will be food problems next year. In addition, the Soviet harvest this year is falling below expectations.

"Would it make sense for Mr. Reagan to let the Russians get their share now ... and take care of themselves at the expense of the Third World" countries, which don't have the money to purchase the grain they need

Meanwhile, Bergland is not pleased by the direction he sees farm policy taking under Reagan and a new Congress in which Republicans will have control of the Senate and the Democrats' majority in the House will be cut by 33 votes.

The Food and Agriculture Act of 1977, which is the basis for major agriculture price support, loan and research programs, expires in 1981.

Bergland, a former congressman from Minnesota, said the Reagan administration probably will be slow to move on a new farm bill.

"I expect the Reagan people will extend the current program for a year, until they get time to get them-selves organized," Bergland said.

But he has more definite ideas about the food-stamp program, especially since conservative Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., appears certain to become chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

"Knowing Mr. Helms and conservative members of that Senate Agriculture Committee, the food stamp program is in big trouble," he said.

The food stamp program does not now have enough money to run "past May or June," Bergland said.

Helms said Wednesday that he would make trimming the food-stamp program one of his top priorities. He said it "has got to be changed so you won't have so many freeloaders on Bergland said the so-called "WIC" food program for women, infants and children as well as the federal school lunch program also may have a hard time in the new Congress.

As the Carter administration winds down, Bergland said, no long-range decisions will be made at the Agriculture Department.

"We are not committing Presidentelect Reagan to any spending deci-sions at all," Bergland said.

Modern 'Romeo and Juliet' commit suicide

PEKING (AP) — Adam and Mao Mao were in love and wanted to marry. But he was an Arab student from South Yemen and she was a Chinese worker from Tianjin — star-crossed even before they met.

They never received permission to marry, despite two months of applications and entreaties to both their governments.

Adam Nasser was to have graduated Nov. 6, to have left for home on Nov. 18. Friends said he had vowed to come back and marry Mao Mao. She had said that she could not live without him and would kill herself on the day he left China.

Last Monday night, after laughing, joking and casually talking with a friend about their love problems, Adam, 25, and Mao Mao, 22, drank DDT in his edroom at Qinghua University. "Save him! Save him! Don't let him die!" Mao Mao screamed as she ran into the corridor to call his friends.

WITHIN HOURS ADAM and Mao Mao were dead, lovers in a country which extols brotherly Third World love but bitterly rejects love between Third World men and Chinese women

Their double suicide is under investigation, but campus police, university officials, the Peking Education Department and the Foreign Ministry all have refused comment.

The South Yemen Embassy said only, "Adam Nasser and his Chinese girlfriend drank poison in his room." Officials had no further comment.

Yemeni and Pakistani students at Qinghua University, however, provided details of the love affair.

Adam came to Qinghua University to study engineering five years ago. He was one of six South Yemeni students among 60 foreign students. All are from Third World countries and complain about loneliness and discrimination by the Chinese. They say they are virtually forbidden to smile at Chinese women.

Two years ago he met Mao Mao, a factory worker from Tianjin who was in Peking visiting relatives. Even his closest friends never knew her full name or

THE FRIENDS CALLED her "a good girl, fair and honorable," as they discussed the double suicide Thursday afternoon at the university.

They said she came from a middle-class family who knew about the rom ance. They emphasized there was nothing improper about their love.

Mostly, Adam's friends said, the two young people kept to themselves. They seldom displayed physical affection. To be seen together in public, even merely holding hands, would have invited the cruelest criticism, they said.

Instead, they met off campus or she slipped onto the grounds to bring food and fruit to his tiny 9- by 12-foot room, furnished with a single cot and faded florid wallpaper. From his meager allowance of about $90 a month he bought her shirts, sweaters and slacks from the Friendship Store for foreigners.

His friends said they had applied to both the Chinese government and the South Yemen Embassy for permission to wed. They were depressed at he aring no word from either, their friends said.

Marriages between Chinese and foreigners are sometimes impossible: and almost always difficult to arrange, especially in such a case as Adam's and Mao Mao's. Foreign students at Qinghua University said the Chinese consider Third World men backward and uncivilized. "They think we only are trying to cor rupt Chinese women and will use them and leave them behind," said one of Adam's friends

For Chinese women, they said, the situation is often worse: they are shun ned, considered immoral and accused of seeking money, privilege and exit visa s by marrying foreigners.

ON THE NIGHT THEY died, one of Adam's best friends - Wanjid Pirzadla of Pakistan - went to Adam's room. It was 10 o'clock. They talked for more than an hour.

"It was very casual, very normal. I never suspected anything," Wanjid said. Mao Mao was reading a Chinese novel, and the two men talked about Adam's hopes to marry Mao Mao.

Wanjid told them not to worry, that everything would work out. And to cheer up. He left at 11:15.

Five minutes later, Mao Mao rushed out of the room screaming and weeping. They had drunk the liquid insecticide.

Their friends slung them over shoulders and carried them to th5 campus clinic. She died half an hour later. He died at 1:30 a.m.

"I don't understand," said Wanjid. "It seemed so normal. They even showed me a picture of themselves sitting together in a garden. The police took the photo away.'

Adam also left a suicide note, saying their love and their death was "purely personal.

Churches express views on prisons

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - The Texas Conference of Churches has urged the Texas Board of Corrections not to build any new prisons but to put greater emphasis on locally based programs to deal with offenders.

The board meets in Huntsville on Monday and will receive a report from a committee to locate a site for a new $80 million prison unit.

James Suggs, executive director of the Conference of Churches, said the organization's executive committee was on record as opposing construction of a new prison.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON Career burnout not very unusual

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am a junior high school teacher who, at the age of 42, is planning to start a new career. Over the last few years, a number of my colleagues have left the school system, claiming they just couldn't take the pressures anymore — that they were burned out. While I feel a certain amount of stress on the job, I would not go so far as to say I'm burned out; I would simply like a new experience. As a matter of fact, I'm not too sure what "burnout" is and would appreciate an explanation. I've heard the term applied to doctors, nurses, social workers and various other professional and non-professional peo-ple. If there is such a condition, can anything be done about it? - Ms. G.R.

Dear Ms. R .: While the term "burnout" may be new, the condition it describes is not. Years ago most people simply would have said they were fed up with their jobs. According to Dr. Bruce Baldwin, clinical associate professor in the department of psychiatry at the University of North Carolina, a person becomes burned out when he or she is destructively overinvolved in work activities over an extended period of time. Such a person often is irritable, constantly tired, bored and resentful, and has a low self-image both as a person and as a profession-

Career burnout is not an unusual experience; almost everyone gets burned out to some degree. It is most likely to be found in people who are idealistics and who become overstressed and overinvolved in their efforts to achieve perfection. The condition also tends to be more common in people who are socially isolated and who have few interests in life other tha their work. A third group more susceptible to burn-out consists of perfectionists with very high stan-dards of performance who feel they have to do all the

Implant frees diabetic of daily insulin shots

The pump, about the size of a hockey puck, functions like an artificial pancreas to deliver a steady trickle of insulin to the bloodstream, the doctors said.

By keeping the body's insulin level more steady than can be achieved by daily shots, the pump should help minimize eye, kidney and blood vesel damage that often complicate severe diabetes, said Dr. Henry Buchwald, head of the team that developed the device.

Many researchers around the world have worked toward an implantable pump, but Buchwald's team - with special permission from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration — appeared to be the first to actually use one in a patient.

Their pump lacks the capacity to deliver an extra dose of insulin at mealtime, something that many experts consider vital. But Buchwald said he hoped to add that refinement in a later version.

"This is the first patient and we're trying to acquire a lot of data ... This is, after all, an experimental procedure," said Buchwald, 48, a professor of surgery and biomedical engineering. Buchwald was joined in the work by Dr. Richard Varco, Frank Dorman and Perry L. Blackshear Jr. of Minnesota, and by Dr. Perry J. Blackshear of Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, Blackshear's son.

Dr. Donald Bell, president of the American Diabetes Association, said he was pleased — but not surprised by the news since many diabetics already are wearing external insulin pumps that do the same thing. But Bell said the inability of the

was a severe drawback. He said the ideal pump would be one that adds more insulin automatically as the blood sugar level goes up, just as the natural pancreas does

There are 10 million American diabetics, including 1.3 million who need daily shots of insulin.

In diabetes, the pancreas loses some or all of its ability to make insulin, the crucial hormone that keeps the amount of sugar dissolved in the blood at a constant level.

When this happens, blood sugar levels fluctuate widely and, for reasons that are still not completely understood, this causes damage to small blood vessels including the vital ones in the retina of the eye and the kidneys.

Buchwald said his patient still has some residual pancreas function and doctors were counting on the pump to give his pancreas a rest so it could kick in the extra insulin for mealtimes.'

"What we plan to do now is watch this patient and then, within the next year or so, launch a trial at the University of Minnesota with 10 to 25 patients,," Buchwald said.

"During this time, other institutions will be starting similar programs with the same device. I would think that within a year or so we will have enough data to put the matter before the FDA for general market clearance," he said. The present pump would be limited to persons with some residual pancreas function, Buchwald said. But an improved version of the pump with a magnetically activated valve is being tested in dogs. This would allow a patient to deliver the extra mealtime dose by holding a magnet over his chest for a minute or two, he said. Buchwald's patient, a tool-and-die maker who asked not to be named, had the pump implanted under the skin below his left collarbone in a one-hour operation Sept. 25, but doctors waited until Thursday to fill it with insulin. The device, built by the Infusaid Division of Metal Bellows Co. of

Sharon, Mass., is similar to implantable pumps which, for the last three years, have been used in at least 113 patients to deliver constant doses of blood-thinning drugs or drugs for cancer therapy, Buchwald said.

House campaigns break records

By MORTON MINTZ The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The 25 most costly House campaigns broke all spending records even before final financial returns were in, a Washington Post analysis shows.

Twenty-five congressional candidates built a costly new addition to the House by spending a record $13.6 million. And that doesn't include any spending between Oct. 15 and Election Day, a busy period for many candidates.

Some spent huge sums battling each other. Others threw money at financially puny opponents. And three candidates, who spent a combined $1.4 million, fell by the wayside in primaries or runoffs.

In Tuesday's elections, as in earlier ones, money talked only sometimes, so that a frequent but not automatic correlation emerged between spending and winning among the top 25 or, for that matter, many other House candidates.

Just one of the 25, two-term Rep. Robert K. Dornan, R-Calif., spent by Oct. 15 nearly $1.5 million, or 11 percent of the total, to defeat Democrat Carey Peck, son of actor Gregory Peck, for the second time in a row. Peck ranked 23rd on the top-25 list with $401,343.

Dornan paid $403,529 just for postage - $2,186 more than Peck's outlays for everything - and $502,739 for mass mailing, printing and other activities associated with right-wing fund-raiser Richard A. Viguerie.

In their first round, Dornan and Peck were nearly financial equals, with neither making the top-25 list. In the 24-month period ended Dec. 31, 1978, Dornan spent $291,762, or only 20 percent of his total for the 211/2-month period ending Oct. 15. Peck spent $308.-017, or 77 percent of his 1979-1980 total.

Dornan is not the first million-dollar candidate in a House race. In January 1978, a court

340 N. Midland Drive

City held that Bella Abzug had won the Democratic nomination for the congressional seat vacated by Edward Koch when he ran for mayor. She defeated - by six votes - Carter Burden, who spent $1,136,-112. That exceeded the outlay of the second person on the 1978 top-25 list by $364,809.

These are highlights of a Washington Post analysis of the top 25 spenders in the 24-month cycle of each House election 1972 through 1978 and the 211/2-month pre-election cycle of the 1980 contests. Final figures for the 1980 elections will not be available until early next year.

The dollar figures, adjusted for loans and other factors that skew gross spending totals, come from the Federal Election Commission for the 1976 through 1980 contests and from Common Cause for the 1972 and 1974 races.

Key comparisons of the top 25 spenders in the five biennial House elections - primary, runoff and general - follow:

Total spent: 1972, $5.4 million; 1974, $5.2 million (down 3.6 percent); 1976, $7.8 million (up 48.5 percent); 1978, $12.4 million (up 60 percent); 1980 (211/2 months), $13.6 million (up 9.6 percent).

Biggest single spender: 1972, Rep. Paul N. McCloskey Jr., R-Calif., $321,558; 1974, Rep. Robert C. Krueger, D-Tex., who in 1978 lost a race for the Senate, $311,953; 1976, Gary Familian, a California Democrat defeated by Dornan while outspending him, $637,080 to $403,675; 1978, Burden, the New York Democrat who failed to be nominated after spending $1,136,112; 1980 (211/2 months), Dornan, $1,484.668 (Dornan, in the three races combined, spent nearly $2.2 million).

Second on the 1980 top-25 list was House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Tex., $772,725 (his GOP opponent, Jim Bradshaw, ranked 12th with $521,221). Third was Rep. James C. Corman, D-Calif., $643,291 (beaten by Republican Bobbi Fiedler); Jack Fields. a Texas Republican, $621,399 (he defeated Democratic incumbent Bob Eckhardt), and Rep. Bill Royer, R-Calif., $614,806 (he lost to Democrat Tom Lantos). Neither Fiedler, Eckhardt nor Lantos made the top-25 list.

Computer misused

WASHINGTON (AP) - A computer at one of the government's top-secret weapons laboratories was improperly used by 200 employees to store games, personal letters, jokes and an illegal bookmaking operation, government investigators said Friday.

While the investigation by the Energy Department did not reveal a loss of any classified material from the Sandia Laboratory in Albuquerque, N.M., the department said it had tightened access procedures to the computer.

The department's inspector general began the probe after the FBI reported that an employee at the installation apparently was using the computer to help in running a bookmaking operation for local gamblers.

During its investigation, the department found that 200 employees had used the $100 million computer to store a variety of personal items. Among the items found in the computer's memory were an inventory of a private beer can collection, a loan repayment schedule, poetry and a roster for the laboratory bowling team.

The investigtors said they found 247 games stored in the computer, including a Star Trek game.

The report said that after an initial warning to all employees to purge the computer's memory of un-authorized material, 100 employees still failed to do so. These employees were personally interviewed by management and were reprimanded.

Show may bring glamor and glitter to capital

By ANN BLACKMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Nancy eagan Show, which premieres in ashington this January, may bring lamor and glitter to a capital that has been in a social snooze for four

Many in the social register already are expecting the wife of Presidentlect Ronald Reagan to set the pace for what they are calling "the country club presidency." The frequent, Carter-style barbe-ques, featuring beer and blue jeans on e White House lawn, will be out. Elegant dinner parties, studded with Hollywood celebrities, will be in.

And Washington, which does business while it parties, will dance again

Unlike the Nixon and Ford administrations, when Cabinet secretaries and White House aides frequently attended cocktail parties and embassy balls, the folks who came to town with Jimmy Carter disdained the Washington social scene. "You never saw people from the Carter White House," said Jayne Ikard, wife of former American Petroleum Institute president Frank Ikard and a frequent party-giver. "I think the Republicans will be much more visible and things will start hopping again."

Buffy Cafritz, wife of a wealthy construction company owner, who frequents the party circuit, said the Reagan friends she knows entertain beautifully.

"They're perfectionists," Mrs. Cafritz said Friday. "And I expect Mrs. Reagan is, too. You've got big spenders coming. Washington will have some of the glitter it had during the Kennedy days when artists and performers were brought in. And Embassy Row will come alive."

As first lady, Mrs. Reagan undoub-tedly will have a few pet projects. She has expressed interest in drug rehabilitation and programs that use the talents of the elderly.

But her main project will be accompanying the president, whose after-business tastes run to dinner parties, comedies and splashy musicals.

Mrs. Reagan, 57, is particularly close to her husband and is expected to surround him with the kind of people with whom he is most comfortable

Their closest friends are wealthy California businessmen, including Holmes Tuttle, a California auto dealer who has been raising funds for Republican candidates since Dwight Eisenhower, and Justin Dart, head of Dart Industries and the most conservative of Reagan's inner circle.

Their Hollywood pals, who surely will receive White House invitations, include Frank Sinatra, Charlton Heston, Dean Martin, Bob Hope, Roy Rogers and Michael Landon.

The public Nancy Davis Reagan, a former actress, gives the appearance of a cool, controlled woman, always elegantly coiffed, elegantly dressed. She was described as "icy" by some who watched her during the campaign.

As her husband speaks, she gazes at him magnetically, and has said she regularly critiques his appearances and judgments. She says she relies on her dramatic training to stay attentive

Off stage, the private Nancy Reagan describes herself as terribly sentimental and says she cries easily, worries constantly and vents her anger by taking long soaks in a hot bathtub where she carries on imaginary conversations with her husband's critics.

To relax, she reads the latest bestsellers. Although considered politically savvy, Mrs. Reagan has said her

Judge schedules another trial

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A judge said Friday he would schedule another trial after the jury deadlocked in the case of a sailor accused of raping a store clerk. The woman testified she never saw her attacker but could identify her attacker by touch.

A mistrial was declared in the case Thursday when the circuit court jury split 3-to-3 in what prosecutor William Whitacre said was the first Florida case in which a woman based her identification of her attacker strictly on what she felt with her hands and feet.

Circuit Judge Lon Cornelius said he would reschedule the trial of Norman Paul Fischer, 30, a former petty officer at the Orlando Naval Training Center. Fischer is charged with sexual battery, robbery and kidnapping.

The victim, a former convenience store worker who now lives in New Hampshire, told the jury she never saw her attacker because he put a paper bag over her head and then later bound her eyes with masking tape.

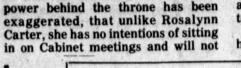

But the 20-year-old woman told the jury she felt the rapist's face, his clothes, belt buckle and shoes and was able to pick his picture out of a photo lineup shortly after the attack two years ago in nearby Winter Park.

She said he raped her in the store where she worked and then in a nearby woods. During the six hours she was held, they sat on the hood of her car and discussed "religion, truth, a deceased parent," she testified.

The woman had seen and talked to Fischer at the store prior to the attack. she told the jury:

"I passed my hands over his face. He had large eyes, high cheekbones, a beard and moustache, no acne at all - very smooth skin."

A rape victim cannot be publicly identified under Florida law.

advise her husband on policy matters. That does not necessarily mean, however, that Reagan won't ask her advice. "He uses her for a sounding board for just about everything," said a longtime Reagan aide who asked not to be identified. SE

Gas expert says law of supply, damand again at work

By MAX B. SKELTON AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - Robert H. Willis says the law of supply and demand is at work again in the gas fields. Willis, Connecticut Natural Gas Corp. chairman, also says the natural gas industry expects in 1981 plentiful supplies, some lessening of upward price pressures, and a continuing inflationary and regulatory squeeze on profits.

And less than an easy time in attracting capital for vital new programs," added the newly elected chairman of the American Gas Association.

Willis said gas supply is not a problem, "but is instead a great national opportunity.

"However, the money to produce gas from new sources and distribute it to the burner tips of the nation's industries and homes may be anr matter," he said.

Gas industry experience, Willis said, offers a powerful economic lesson that may be of help to all business people.

"In 1968, we warned Congress that misguided wellhead price controls were stifling exploration and drilling and that an artificial shortage would develop unless adequate incentives were provided to producers," he said.

"Congress did nothing. The shortages developed as forecast. Federal regulators then, in desperation, allowed the controlled prices to rise far more rapidly than would have been necessary without controls. In 1978, some 10 years after our first warning, Congress finally approved phased price decontrol of new gas discoveries.

Willis said the results of higher prices and less control were that additions to domestic reserves, including Alaska, jumped 35 percent in 1979 as compared with 1978 and additions to reserves in the lower 48 states were the highest since 1967.

"Drilling is continuing at a record pace, and natural gas replaced about 435,000 barrels of imported oil a day in 1979," he said.

"While gas prices will continue to rise, the law of supply and demand is again at work in the gas fields and will have a tempering efect on rates at the point of

Willis said the AGA estimates the gas energy equivalent of 2.3 million barrels of oil a day can be made available by 1985 to reduce dependence on foreign oil if the nation makes the required commitment.

Also expected are further medium term improvements in lower 48 production, gas from Alaska, growing imports from Canada and Mexico, more gas from various tight formations, and rising imports of liquefied natural gas.

And, Willis said, a $1.4 billion coal gasification plant in North Dakota is expected to be the forerunner of a giant industry capable of supplying 3.5 trillion cubic feet of gas from coal annually by the year 2000.

Willis said the gas industry must invest $360 billion, in 1978 dollars, to meet anticipated supply needs by the year 2000 but utilities are particularly sensitive to financing trends that may later affect the general economy.

But, he added, return on equity of the best managed, most efficient utility depends on results of its last and next state rate cases

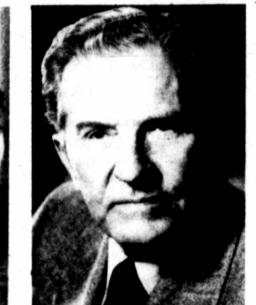

"Investor disenchantment with fixed income securities whose real value and real rate of return decline with inflation, plus current high interest rates, has made bond and preferred stock financing 'extremely expensive, which contributes to increases in utility rates," he said.

He added there is indication of "a beginning of investor reluctance to put up huge sums for utility financing on a continuing basis under regulatory conditions that in effect demand legalized theft of their equity.'

As was the case with gas in 1968, Willis said he believes the industry and many others now face another developing crisis, the impending lack of funds vital to improved productivity growth and national economic progress.

One of the great challenges for 1981, he said, "is to encourage the spark of recognition that industry's ability to attract capital is an essential key to the solution of economic and energy problems and the full development of our total national economic poten-

220,000 persons have visited petroleum museum

An estimated 220,000 people toured the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum during its first five years of operation, and "more great years" are in store, museum officials foresee.

Russell J. Ramsland and Maurice R. Bullock, heads of the museum's two volunteer boards, have released a report on the institution's initial years and called for increased giving during the decade ahead.

The museum has increased the number of area school children taking guided tours from about 5,000 to 7,500 per year, their report said. People from all states and 74 foreign nations have visited.

Even though gasoline shortages and prices lowered tourism during the five years past - in many places by as much as 30 percent - the museum has shown growing attendance in all but one of its first five years. In 1980 attendance is running approximately three percent higher than in 1979.

The Santa Rita Club, made up of men and women volunteers, has grown from its initial two members in the summer of 1975 to about 200.

It was said that the museum today, including the value of donated land, services and materials, is worth more than $3 million and that the new north wing, scheduled to open in the second quarter of 1981, will add about $1.5 million in value.

The museum is totally free of debt. Opening of the museum's new wing next year will add 40 percent to its exhibit space and be the largest single addition since the museum opened in 1975. Even so, new outside exhibits, new scripts and pictures for existing exhibits, and other display spending during the first years totalled more than $200,000.

Ramsland and Bullock said that the museum already has established a national reputation for itself, and that the "Permian Basin has been handed a civic asset of tremendous value during the years ahead."

"Given Texas' continued growth, and the on-going expansion of Midland and Odessa, there's no reason the museum can't get its attendance up to 100,000 a year or more during the next decade," they said.

Next year the museum will be needing about $100,000 more donated dollars to operate its new wing, handle inflation, and do some postponed projects, it was stated. The museum currently spends about $320,000 per year, of which admissions and sales at its gift shop produce some 28 percent

Additional giving will permit the museum to remake the words and pictures in its five-screen theater and buy new electronic equipment for Current and prospective givers are being contacted by the museum, beginning Nov. 1, in hope many will increase their giving. Nearly all the funding effort is being done by mail. Anyone wanting to offer help to the museum and not reached otherwise can telephone 683-4403 and ask for helpful materials.

The company's independent petroleum engineers are currently estimating the company's oil and gas re-

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. - A research project on the use of carbon dioxide for enhanced oil recovery is being continued by the New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology in Socorro, through funds from the Department of Energy's Bartlesville Energy Technology Center.

Carbon dioxide research

BETC is providing $146,666 of the total estimated cost of about $208,-067; the institute is providing the balance.

The work is concentrating on measuring the extent to which carbon dioxide contacts and recovers oil in enhanced recovery efforts, according to Leo A. Noll, research chemist at Bartlesville.

Scientists are studying the phase behavior of carbon dioxide and crude oil mixtures, Noll explained. When conditions such as temperature and pressure in an oil formation are ideal, carbon dioxide and oil mix to form on component or phase. Oil recovery is made easier when this single phase is formed. The studies will investigate how this phase is achieved.

Also data are being developed on the density and thickness of the mixed carbon dioxide and oil and the fluid properties of the mixture.

The project also calls for determining how the carbon dioxide moves through an oil deposit. Since the carbon dioxide-oil mixture is not as dense or thick as oil, it tends to flow along the top of the oil deposits, "fingering," or taking the easy path, through the formation. The studies are concerned with controlling this type of movement through the deposit. A mathematical model of the flow of oil and carbon dioxide will be developed.

These laboratory studies on such characteristics as fingering and mixing of oil and other materials will be used to gain an understanding of recovery efforts that may be applied to actual oilfields.

The New Mexico Institute scientists will be using reservoir core material from six reservoirs in eastern New Mexico and West Texas oilfields. Results will also be applicable to other areas.

The researchers, under the direction of F. M. Orr Jr., will also build a new oil-displacement apparatus to increase efficiency for high-pressure displacement experiments.

The new contract, which extends on-going research at the institute. allows the studies to continue through August 1981.

Gas production averaged 106,400 thousand cubic feet (MCF) per day compared with 218,200 MCF per day in the third quarter of 1979, the decline being primarily due to production curtailment in the San Juan Basin as a result of an explosion at a gas purchaser's compression station. The average gas price increased to $2.12 per MCF from $1.74 per MCF in the third quarter of 1979.

HOUSTON - Moran Energy Inc. reported record revenues and earn ings for the third quarter of 1980.

Net income increased to $3,480,000, or $.39 per share, in the third quarter of 1980 from last year's $1,225,000, or $.22 per share. Revenues increased by 53 percent to $17,236,000 and operating profit increased by 129 percent to $6.364.000

The favorable oil and gas operating results for the third quarter of 1980 stemmed primarily from both higher prices and production. Prices increased to $34.18 per barrel of oil, $1.73 per thousand cubic feet of gas, and $16.40 per barrel of liquids.

Oil and liquids production held at the prior year's levels, and gas production increased by 47 percent.

TULSA, Okla. - Under normal conditions, U.S. refiners would have more than adequate ability to meet the country's demand for fuel oil this winter, Oil & Gas Journal says in its Nov. 3 issure.

But disruption in the Middle. East makes prewinter 1980 anything but normal.

Instead of feeling comfortable with record levels of crude and product stocks, refiners are holding their breath. They know the situation could easily change with an interruption of crude oil supplies from the Persian Gulf, the weekly business magazine says.

Here's how the winter will shape up if such an interruption doesn't come about:

-Total fuel oil demand will average 6.139 million barrels a day, compared with 6.587 million barrels a day last year and 7.117 million barrels a day during the 1978-79 winter.

-Distillate demand will drop sharply to 3.501 million barrels a day. while production will drop to 2.918 million barrels a day. Distillate imports will average 209,000 barrels a day -Residual fuel oil demand will drop to 2.638 million barrels a day. Production will decline to 1.556 million barrels a day, with imports averaging 1.018 million barrels a day.

-Natural gas use during the October to March heating season will total 9.4 quadrillion British thermal units, an increase from last winter.

Major factors shaping the outlook are higher-than normal crude and products stocks, assumption that the weather will be about normal, a sluggish U.S. economy, and industry concern over the Iran/Iraq war which may make companies hesitant to draw down stocks.

A normal winter involves 4,771 degree days. Last winter was only one percent colder than normal, with 4,-725 degree days. A winter 10 percent colder than normal requires an additional 38 million barrels of distillate to meed increased demand.

The recession continues to depress demand, especially in the industrial sector, the Journal says. Although most economists believe the recession has bottomed out after deepening in the second quarter, recovery will be slow. Overall effect will be to suppress industry's demand for fuels this winter.

But worry over the Middle East war is overshadowing other variables in the winter fuels outlook, the Journal says

The U.S. imported only a very small portion of its crude oil from Iran and Iraq before the war. But a spreading disruption would trigger supply agreements spreading the shortfall among all the nations in the International Energy Agency's sharing program.

Under these circumstances, even record stock levels wouldn't prevent shortages.

the role of the telephone in business operations. While home telephone users have not been exposed to technological advances as extensively as have their business counterparts, within the next few years the situation will change dramatically.

The same advanced telephone systems that currently allow hotels to save money and energy by controlling their environment also will be available to home users. Telephone customers will be able to control other appliances and program the telephone to perform specific functions whenever needed 24 hours a day. For instance, some telephone subscribers within five years will be able to program a telephone to turn on lights at night while away from home. The telephone will even be able to make sure the fire and burglar alarm systems are working Technology is available now to bring these conveniences to the home telephone customers.

Such technology and what it can do is one aspect of Southwestern Bell's new science demonstration, "The Knowledge Business: Looking Back at the Future.'

The company's veteran science demonstrator, Bill Haehnel, demonstrates many developments in tele-communications available today. For example, on Monday the Midland Optimist Club will see computers onefourth the size of a postage stamp, microscopic bubbles capable of storing a 700-page novel and powerful lasers smaller than a grain of salt.

No indication of problems for Texas air industry

By BILL KIDD Austin Bureau

AUSTIN - Recent failure of two commuter airlines in Texas show the effects of the recent recession, but doesn't indicate problems for the industry in the future, a Texas Aeronautics Commission official believes.

Harry Rodgers, director of the TAC's Air Carrier Administration Division, says failure of Commutair and Amistad airlines shows "the belated effect of softening of traffic" during the recession.

But Rodgers feels things will be improving for the intrastate car-

"With the easing of the recession," he says, "we look for the traffic to come back," with "a fairly decent recovery" likely in late spring.

"The discretionary traveler is not traveling right now," Rodgers reports, "and the busiest traveler is cutting back."

Commuter airlines always suffer when the economy dips, he com-ments, and "capital starts taking its money elsewhere...When traffic is soft, airlines are not the best investment.

Permian Airways, which has cut back its service, is being reorganized, Rodgers notes, with aid of local investors in Midland.

"We're hopeful they can be successful," he comments. "Permian provided the only service between Amarillo, Lubbock and Midland...We hope they can resurrect that airline so people can enjoy this service.'

The current crunch for commuters is similar to those in the past, Rodgers says, but has been made somewhat worse by high costs of fuel - which has resulted in higher fares.

go...Fares have been getting up so high that people are returning to automobiles for short hauls.'

But, Rodgers adds, "strangely enough," some carriers are doing their best business ever at present including Southwest and Tejas airlines, with heavy Dallas/Fort Worth to Houston traffic apparently a factor.

Commuter airlines, Rogers says, "are not going to go away," despite current economic problems.

"They're certainly the wave of the future," because large jet aircraft "are not going to return to the smaller communities.

Texas has done better than many other states in meeting its air service needs, with commuter airlines a key factor, Rodgers feels, as indicated by reports under the "essential air service program" approved by Congress.

Only one Texas city - Paris - is now receiving subsidies for its air service; in all other cities service doesn't need to be subsidized, he says, adding, "we're lucky here in Texas.

TAC is looking at possibly getting additional service to Beaumont since Southwest airlines has ended flights there, with Rodgers looking to see if the city does have sufficient service.

Gold price falls, dollar rises By FLOYD NORRIS

THE MIDLAND REPORTER-TELEGRAM, SUN., NOVEMBER 9, 1980

AP Business Writer NEW YORK (AP) - The dollar is up and gold is down as rising interest rates in the United States bolster the American currency but pose a threat to the economic recovery. The price of gold fell below $600 an ounce Friday for the first time in five months, as the dollar hit a record against the Italian lira and neared its high for the year against the West German mark.

Interest rates continued to rise, with California Federal Savings and Loan Association, the nation's largest federal S&L, boosting its prime mortgage rate to 15 percent from 14 percent, and Citibank of New York matching the 15.5 percent prime rate on business loans announced by other banks on Thursday.

The dollar has been rising all week, partly because of rising interest rates and partly because of hope that the election of Ronald Reagan and a more conservative Congress will lead to steps to control inflation.

Reagan's election initially led to rallies in all financial markets, but the surge in stock prices did not last long. The Dow Jones industrial average shot up 15.96 points on Wednesday, but then lost 17.75 on Thursday and another 2.99 on Friday, to close at 932.42.

The rise in interest rates has come as the Federal Reserve Board tightened credit in an effort to fight inflation, and the board is considered virtually certain to raise the discount rate - the rate it charges on loans to banks - within the next week.

The prime rate has risen from 14 percent to 15.5 percent in the last two weeks, and David Jones, an economist with the Wall Street firm of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., said it may hit 16 percent soon.

Fears are increasing that the slow recovery from the recession will come to a halt, and that a new recession might begin. "A confrontation is rapidly developing between the Federal Reserve's ongoing efforts ... and the rebound in aggregate business activity," said H. Erich Heinemann, an economist with Morgan Stanley & Co.

On Friday, the Treasury auctioned a new issue of 30-year bonds at an average yield of 12.81 percent, the highest rate ever for such an issue.

That high rate came despite the report that whole-sale prices rose 0.8 percent in October, somewhat less than expected. It caused interest rates in the bond market to drop somewhat, although they are still substantially higher than before Reagan's election

Gold, which was above $700 an ounce as recently as late September, has fallen sharply in the last several days, and on Friday it closed in London at $596.50, down $31.50 and the lowest since mid-June. At New York's Commodity Exchange, the price recovered to $602.50 in later trading.

The dollar hit a record of 920.75 Italian lire in Milan

You probably suffer from the disease of 'bracket creep" - even if you've never heard the phrase before. It strikes when you get a raise. You're earning more, but you're pushed into a higher tax bracket. When you combine the increased tax bite with t'e decreased value of your dollars and deductions due to inflation, your purchasing power

Until now, lawmakers have tried to deal with the problem by periodic tax cuts, tailored to changes in the economy and aimed at helping particularly hard-hit groups of people. During the campaign, however, Reagan said there should be a change in the tax system itself. He promised a cut of 30 percent in individual tax rates, spread over three years. At the end of that time, he said, taxes should be indexed to end 'bracket creep.'

Reagan has not given any details of how his plan would work. In general, however, indexation systems link tax brackets, deductions and exemptions to some standard measure of in-

Meeting the goal

Less than a week remains in this year's campaign and already the United Way of Midland has collected about 85 percent of its goal of $1,150,000.

Campaign workers have done their jobs diligently and effectively. The people of the community have been responsive to the campaign for the most part. There's only one problem: 85 percent of the goal will not do the job.

Last year the United Way of Midland served more than 28,900 people.

The campaign goal was increased this year by some 12.3 percent to help even more Midlanders. If that goal is not met, some individuals will not receive the help they need.

Consider the 18 United Way agencies and the services they render to the community. Think of the void it would create in the community if those agencies were not here to offer their services.

Obviously no one organization in a city the size of Midland could alleviate the various needs of 28,-900 individuals. And, yet, the United Way of Midland is doing just that through its progressive contribution solicitation program.

United Way is a convenient program for the collection of contributions. Only one call is made on you each year although the needs of 18 agencies are met. That reduces the necessity of numerous different agencies calling on you each year.

And the United Way is an efficient organization, with more than 88 cents of every dollar contributed going to the member agencies. Administrative costs are kept to a minimum.

All-in-all, the United Way approach to community needs just makes better sense than any other we've seen. In Midland the United Way has been extremely successful, due in large part to the strong support it has received from volunteers.

The campaign will end this Thursday. A hearty thanks is in order for the 1,000 Midland volunteers who have worked so hard this year in order that others would not go wanting. A hearty thanks to all the Midlanders who have already made their "fair share" contribution to the agen-

Now let's open our hearts and our pocketbooks in this final week of the campaign so that the goal can be met and all our member agencies can receive the funds they so vitally need.

WEDNESDAY MORNING IN WASHINGTON - Everyone got on the phone right away:

"Hello, Mr. Secretary. This is the H. Gillman Real Estate Co. We're terribly sorry about the election, but we'd like you to know that if you're preparing to sell your house, we can get you the best price of anyone in this town. We'll be happy to send out our man this afternoon with a very attractive FOR SALE sign which will enhance the beauty of your property ... Mr. Secretary, Mr. Secretary ...

Don't you have an economic adviser I can drop on him? Harry, my family's survival depends on me knowing a Reagan confidant - or at least pretending I do. WASHINGTON - The extent of the military establishment's distaste for Jimmy Carter has been generally underestimated. While retired generals and admirals felt free to make their resentment known by open support of Ronald Reagan, the brass hats still on active duty were effectively muzzled. But their hostility toward Carter was no secret in the command corridors of the Pentagon and in the officers' clubs, where the men ultimately responsible for national security contemplated the way their tasks were made more difficult by the political necessities of the White House. Basically, what drove the generals and admirals in the Pentagon to distraction - not to mention their military counterparts in our NATO allies - was Carter's glib approval of tough-sounding military programs, but without the nuts-and-bolts followthrough that would make the programs effective. Perhaps the most glaring example of the military experts' frustration with Carter involves the unromantic subject of plutonium production. Despite Carter's claim that even 13year-olds are concerned about nuclear weaponry, the U.S. production of plutonium is hardly an issue that is on the minds of the average American. Yet its importance cannot be ignored. Plutonium is the stuff of which nuclear weapons are made. It's the essential ingredient that goes into nuclear warheads. Without plutonium, any nation's nuclear arsenal would be mere Fourth of July fireworks.

Secret documents reviewed by my associate Dale Van Atta show how Carter - and Brown - handled the plutonium problem. Here's the chronology:

Dec. 17, 1979 - Brown at first fought for funds to manufacture more plutonium. In a secret letter, he specifically asked the Office of Management and Budget to reconsider its decision not to finance plutonium production. He recommended resuming plutonium production at the government's plant in Hanford, Wash., and converting a nuclear reactor there to the last four years, but you didn't fool the manufacture of bomb-grade plutonium. Plutonium used to be produced in great quantity by the United States. But in the 1960s, faced with the need for only hundreds instead of thousands of warheads each year, the government began closing down its plutonium plants. At present, three reactors in Barnwell, S.C., are able to supply all our current nuclear weapons needs. With the new missile systems approved by the president, however, the United States will clearly need increased supplies of plutonium. Military strategists pointed this out years ago

The sensible solution would seem to have been to manufacture more plutonium. But Carter resisted this. As the self-anointed man of peace, he was urging Britain, France, Japan and other nations to hold down their production of plutonium.

This did not make the problem go away. Instead, Carter enlisted the persuasive talents of Harold Brown, regarded by many in the military as the most political secretary of de-

With a conservative Senate, led by the Republicans, Reagan can cut federal spending and terminate bad federal programs. He can reform the Social Security system. If two levels of minimum wage are established one for adults and another, at a lower amount, for young teen-agers starting work — perhaps many jobs will open up for the legions of unemployed youth. Several black intellectuals have urged this proposal. A Reagan administration could also turn welfare programs back to the states, and increase the flow of reve-nue sharing for them. Regulatory re-form and a more realistic federal attitude toward business and industry could do much to improve the econom nam War, as Nixon did, nor the foul vapors of Watergate, as Ford had to. Reagan faces a public quite skeptical about government but which can be turned around. In California, his public-presence skills were a plus. They could also serve him well in Washington.

A tougher question is whether Reagan can handle foreign and defense policy questions as well as he can finesse domestic issues. The world, particularly the Middle East and the Third World, has changed dramatically since one generation ago, when Reagan's world thinking was formulated

He has nothing to be ashamed of in his campaign. Despite doleful predictions that he would lose women's support over the GOP plank on ERA and abortion, he won a majority of their votes. The National Organization of Women is ready for hemlock.

Militant feminists and their cause get disproportionate attention and time in the news media, on Norman Lear-type TV entertainment, in Madison Avenue advertising. While women want to be treated fairly and with respect, they don't all buy what the activists proclaim is good for them — and this was the Reagan argument.

Item: A recent Roper poll of women showed that an overwhelming majori-ty want to be called "Miss" or "Mrs.," not "Ms." Among married women, 81 percent preferred "Mrs." and only 12 percent chose "Ms.," according to the poll.

Similarly, whatever women's views on abortion, few rational women regard that sad option as a wholesome. positive act. What better evidence of this verity than this week's success of candidates backed by pro-life groups? It was fascinating to watch Bill Moyers struggle with this truth and other results on CBS election night, and desperately predict a "social revolution" would develop to counter the conservative thrust of politics. Walter Cronkite tut-tutted Moyers, as he would a wrong-headed nephew.

To look back at the week, it was good to see Reagan in victory, promising to lift the national spirit, and to see Carter gracious and magnanimous in defeat. I only wish, however, that Carter would not have indicated as early as 5:30 p.m., West Coast time, that he would soon concede defeat. As that word spread through radio and TV in Western states, what went through the minds of voters who still had two hours or more to get to the polls and possibly vote for Carter and other Democrats? Carter was unfair to those Democratic candidates and voters whom he virtually begged for support only 24 hours before.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK Bullock's in race, but who else is 'off and running' toward 1982?

By BILL KIDD Austin Bureau

OP-ED

AUSTIN - Even before voters went to the polls to put an end - none too soon - to the 1980 campaign season, Comptroller Bob Bullock fired off the opening gun of the 1982 season, announcing he's running for re-elec-

Bullock says the decision was simoly following his tradition of being first to announce and first at the finish line," as he was in 1974 and 1978, and as "I intend to be in '82."

With the 1980 season still being analyzed, 1982 seems mercifully far off but obviously, Bullock and other politicians already are slipping on their running shoes while figuring out just what voters were saying on Nov. 4.

Bullock's announcement ends speculation that he would be among the candidates for governor in what had appeared to be a potentially crowded field for Democrats.

His exit leaves three men as the most frequently mentioned expected candidates: former Attorney General John Hill, current Attorney General Mark White, and National Democratic Party Chairman and former Texas Commissioner of Agriculture John White Hill has indicated he'll announce his political plans, if any, after the 1981 Legislature wraps up its regular session - meaning early June, in all likelihood.

Hill's plan seems to be to determine how Gov. Bill Clements fares in the session, before committing himself to a re-match effort.

Aides to Clements indicate the governor is inclined to run for re-election, although he's not said publicly what his intentions are, nor indicated a time table for any re-election bid.

Clements does need to get some victories in the 1981 session, with initiative and referendum and wiretapping both unfinished matters - from his point of view - from 1979.

However, it appears the biggest battle will be on budget matters, and on reducing the size of state government.

Clements remains far away from his stated goal of eliminating 25,000 state workers from the government payroll — and that pledge was one of his principle election themes.

Considering the glee whith which Republicans leaped on the "broken promises" of the Carter Administration, it will be strange indeed if Democrats don't pick up that stick to do a little thumping on Clements.

That area could be where Clements is most vulnerable with the voters, although indications are that Clements generally is perceived by voters as having done an adequate job as governor.

Attorney General Mark White has the advantage of being an elected official who has a chance to be in the spotlight frequently, although his efforts throughout the presidential campaign were generally low-key, and his support of Jimmy Carter appeared luke-warm at best.

White did hold a press conference soon after word arrived in Austin regarding Clements' pithy characterization of the President at Texarkana, to denounce the governor for demeaning the highest office in the land.

Some Republican officials indicated they were less than impressed by White's concern, with one commenting that it appeared to be the opening of a gubernatorial campaign.

White may decide to wait, however, before attempting to move into the governor's chair, since Clements likely will be a tough opponent for anyone in 1982, and White has served only one term as a statewide elected official.

However, White is, at the moment, facing some issues which could result in his having to recruit that support again.

Austin Rep. Wilhelmina Delco has asked him to rule on whether Prairie View A&M University and Texas Southern University have been denied a share of proceeds from the Permanent University Fund in violation of provisions for education of "colored youths," and has indicated she may take White to court if he doesn't come up with a ruling soon.

White insists he's giving that request the same consideration and treatment as any other would receive - but the matter, obviously, is politically sensitive.

And redistricting, that witches'

brew of political problems, may end up putting White into the position of having to defend the Legislature's efforts against challenges — almost y inevitable challenges — from minorities who'll insist they're being gerrymandered.

John White appears to have been consolidating his base of support among Democratic Party officials during his frequent visits to Texas on behalf of the Democratic presidential effort - but he will still have to do some patching up before it appears, that he'll be in a position to seek the gubernatorial nomination.

There's still plenty of time for all those potential candidates - and whoever else may be getting ready to run - but it's obvious that the 1982 campaign, like 1980, will be a long one.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Energy problem

To The Editor:

The letter by Buddy McQueen in last Sunday's paper prompts me to write.

Unfortunately, McQueen is only one of many people who do not understand how or why the energy problem came about.

No one has said or implied that the excise (windfall profits) tax would shut down all drilling in Texas and the U.S., only that the imposition of an excise tax removes from the oil industry the incentive (profits) that is required to reinvest in further drilling and production of oil and gas.

McQueen's statistics bear this out with the federal government removing from 30 to 60 percent of the oil industry's income, it has still managed to increase the amount of drilling by the figures McQueen quoted. How much more drilling could have been accomplished without the imposition of the excise tax?

Yes, the oil companies have made a lot of money: if they didn't, they wouldn't be in business for long. But along with their success have come jobs for thousands of employees in the oil industry and related industries.

If the royalty owners believe that the excise tax is unjust and deprives them of necessary income, then the same reasoning must apply to all that the tax is imposed on. For the government to selectively impose this tax is blatant discrimination.

Free enterprise

To The Editor:

In response to "wolves in sheep's clothing," Oct. 26, 1980, Midland Reporter-Telegram, who stated, "If the oil companies would only admit it, they have made more money under Jimmy Carter than any president in the history of this great country," my reply is:

The name of the game is to make money - free enterprise! If a person doesn't like it, he can go out and buy or drill his own well. He can't? Why? It costs too much? He might not find any oil? That's the gamble one has to make. Oil costs a lot because it's hard that's my fault, and I'll live with it. Gordon Jennings Midland

Giving his own

To The Editor: Re: Mr. Arthur Sullivan's letter of

Oct. 26th concerning the violence and perversion contained in James Robison's TV program and others.

I certainly agree with Mr. Sullivan that we should strive to eliminate not only war, but its causes. And yes, the Christian community is to know, live and propagate the truths contained in the word of God. "Love one another as I have loved you," is indeed the ideal prescription to get along with our fellow men. However, nowhere in the scriptures do we find the philosophy that we should stay speechless or. motionless when another human being's rights are being violated. This principle also applies to a community, state or nation. For the privilege you and I now have to write these letters to the editor, Sullivan, some have spilled their blood.

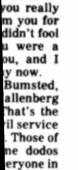

I do not advocate violence, whether on TV or as a means of solving problems and I assure you neither does James Robison. The theme of his TV program "Wake Up America: We Are. All Hostages!" on Oct. 16 was to. awaken the viewer to the problems facing our nation, the need to vote for godly leaders, the dangers of losing our freedoms, etc .... all traceable to the forgetting of God's principles.

The idea was not to encourage rash fighting and killing of anyone disagreeing with Christian principles, but rather to be ready to defend and protect what our country was founded upon. Robison's exact words were: .. my blood will run in my ankles before they ever lift another flag over this native land. I will give my very life to protect our liberty." He is not talking about taking a life but giving his own.

ODESSA - If the U.S. Bureau of the Census has gotten its numbers right, then Odessa has more folks to feed, clothe and outfit per household than does Midland.

Not many, though. Just 0.1 person. Based on the bureau's second revised preliminary count for 1980, Odessa has 2.7 people per family dwelling; Midland has 2.6.

The bureau's count suggests that 89,797 people live in 33,398 dwellings in Odessa. Midland's figures reflect 70,-291 people living in 26,952 units mansions, ranch houses, townhouses, condominiums, apartments, brick houses, mobile homes, frame houses and shanties.

"There is a difference in lifestyles in the two communities," noted Kerry Sweatt, the Odessa city manager.

Three months ago, the bureau released its first preliminary count, which indicated that Odessa's population had grown from 78,380 to 85,842 in 10 years and that Midland's count had shot up from 59,463 to 66,998 during that same period.

Councilmen, commissioners, chamber of commerce leaders, businessmen and just plain "everyday citizens" in either city protested the count

And the bureau, eliciting the cooperation of the two cities, staged another preliminary census. As a result, the population "grew" by 5 percent in Odessa and by about 5.5 percent in Midland in just three months' time. Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins figured the count was "still low," but offered no firm proposal - outside of Midland conducting its own census

The latest 1980 census suggests an 18.2 percent people growth in Midland in a decade. The first preliminary count reflected something more than 12 percent growth in 10 years.

Odessa's Sweatt was almost resigned to the new figures, which will be finalized before they are staked out on the outskirts of the city.

The revised census had given the city a 14.5 percent population increase in 10 years. The first count reflected a less ambitious 9.5 percent growth.

"We haven't violently disagreed' with the bureau's lastest figures, said Sweatt. "We have some indications of 'skips.' They (the bureaucrats) responded to our various requests" in revising the census.

But Sweatt wasn't totally anti-Census Bureau. He tried to understand.

"There's been some wailing and gnashing of teeth; we don't know who's right. I have empathy with their problems.

"It's a tough deal; we know households have grown smaller. There have been changes in our lifestyles."

football team a monster? Odessa Permian is a very good football team and has been for a number of years. Williamson seems to have something against the Permian team and their record. I am wondering if Williamson would have called any other team a monster if they had the same record Permian does.

I can understand Williamson being a Midland fan, but what gives him the right to label or put down the efforts of other football teams in the 5-5A district? The young men on all the football teams go out every Friday night and give their all, win lose or draw. Williamson rewards Permian's efforts by calling them the 'monster of the west." His headline and first paragraph outweighed the good things he had to say about Permian in the rest of his article. Halloween trick? To The Editor:

> I can not understand the news media in the Permian Basin or are our children not that important?

We were at a local VFW Saturday night and it was announced that the police had said there were children in the hospital from eating trick or treat candy and if we knew anyone that still had any left to throw it away. I think it was on one news broadcast, I don't know which station. Why wasn't there anything in the papers and a crawler or break-in on the TV and radio? They do this for other things.

It is no wonder our young generation doesn't trust or respect their elders when they can't even accept a piece of candy from them without wondering if they are trying to kill them or make them sick.

To The Editor:

I would like to join Nan Williams' criticism of how ticket sales for concerts at Chaparral Center are handled.

I recently was first in line at a local business for tickets to a concert at Chaparral Center. I requested 8 tickets on the front row that the store showed to be available. As I was preparing to pay for them, a call came through to the person handling the tickets and she was informed that "x" number of tickets on the front

'Wake up, Buddy' To The Editor:

"Wake up, Buddy McQueen" (Reporter-Telegram, Oct. 26, 1980)

I wonder where Buddy McQueen has been the past four years, in that he makes the statement, "Texas is Carter Country." He must have been somewhere with his head buried in the sand.

Carter did not remove the price controls from oil and gas, neither did he raise the price of oil. The price of oil was raised by OPEC. However he did make a misstatement of the facts when he said, "We are going to put a windfall tax on the oil companies and take away their obscene profits.' There is no such thing as a windfall profit in this case, as it is an excise tax. The tax is paid by all people, rich and poor, young and old. The only thing the oil companies do is collect the tax for the government. You pay the tax at the gasoline pump or in a royalty check deduction.

The oil companies attempted to involve the people, pointing out that this would be paid by the people themselves, and not by the "rich oil companies who would benefit from a national crisis," as Carter on TV was telling people.

I agree, there is an increase in the drilling for oil and gas. The independents and oil compaines are taking the risks, due to the increase in price and demand for the product. Buddy McQueen, I think someone calls this 'free enterprise."

Buddy McQueen, where are the wolves in sheep's clothing that you refer to? I think they are in Washington, working on red tape and regulations.

Offensive story

To The Editor:

I wish to take exception to your choice of material for the first page of The Midland Reporter-Telegram on Monday, Oct. 27, 1980.

Your article on the Ku Klux Klan was not appropriate or necessary on the front page. This particular item should appear on the back pages of the paper. I feel articles of this type only serve as free advertisement for racist organizations. Also, some of your readers may be offended by this type of material.

Articles of this sort should only contain the facts, not quotes promoting national racism as the one stating that even President Carter would be a racist one day. Nancy Renick

Noteworthy act

To The Editor:

On Wednesday night, October 22, 1980, a kind gentleman delivered a purse which he found on Midland Drive, to my house. I had to stop for a minute and think because I hadn't even missed my purse, but upon checking its contents I found it was mine.

In it I had my wallet, statements of various bills, pictures, credit cards, some money, etc., and that is what was returned by this young man. I was still trying to figure everything out that I didn't even get his name. I thanked him and later that night I asked God's blessing for him and his kind deeds.

I again want to thank him and I wish I knew your name so I could. include it here. But most of all I want you to know you left a very positive impression on my little five-year-old boy. You might not have noticed him but he noticed you. God bless you.
