Proposals echo many Reagan energy themes

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER

WASHINGTON (AP) — An influential conservative think-tank is urging Ronald Reagan to begin abolishing the Energy Department in phases, boost federal spending for nuclear research and sell off the government's interest in half of U.S. hydroelectric power.

While the lengthy energy blueprint drawn up by the Heritage Foundation doesn't have Reagan's official blessing, it echoes many of the themes the president-elect raised during his campaign.

Reagan often talked about getting government out of the energy business and letting private enterprise do the work. He also called for increased use of nuclear power, with proper safeguards.

Early in the campaign, Reagan called the Energy Department, created in 1977, a failure and said it should be abolished. He said it had turned President Carter's "moral equivalent of war" into the "bureaucratic equivalent of surrender."

Aides recently have said, however, that Reagan may allow the department to continue rather than fight Congress over abolishing it.

But the Heritage Foundation urged Reagan to keep his earlier promise, saying that axing the agency would be politically easy because it has "no large, well-developed constituency to fight for its survival."

To get rid of the department, the foundation urged Reagan:

—To reorganize the agency internally his first day in office to better emphasize fuel sources — fossil, nuclear and renewable. These changes would not need congressional approval.

—To submit within 90 days a reorganization plan to Congress that would transfer the strategic petroleum reserve and the Naval Petroleum Reserve to the Interior Department, transfer functions of the Energy Information Agency to the Commerce Department and certain defense functions to the Defense Department. The number of assistant secretaries of energy would be cut from eight to four. These changes could go into effect if not vetoed by either house of Congress.

The agency thus would be reduced to a size similar to the old Energy

Research and Development Agency, one of the forerunners of the department.

The report said Reagan should then focus on a plan to present Congress in 1982 that would either transfer all remaining energy functions to other agencies or at least downgrade the department to a sub-Cabinet agency.

The report also called for selling the five government power administrations — which account for half of U.S. hydroelectric consumption — to private utilities. The administrations are the Tennessee Valley Authority, Bonneville Power, Western Area Power, Southwestern and Southeastern.

During the campaign, Reagan took no position on changing the status of the giant government hydro projects.

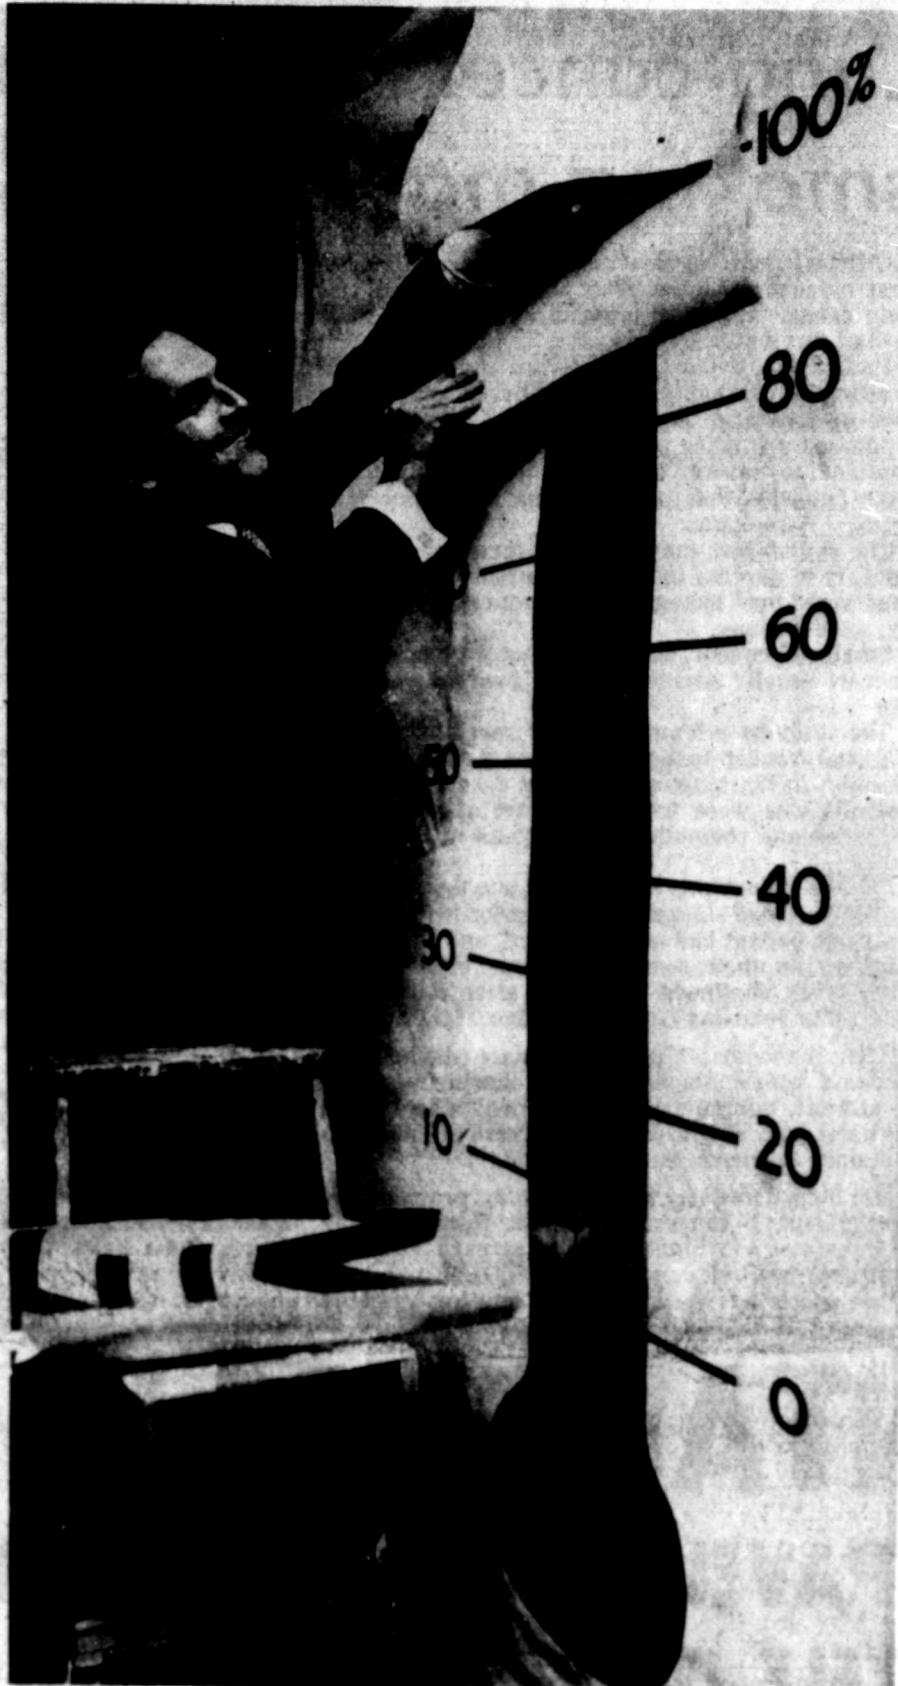

The Heritage Foundation also urged Reagan to allow private oil companies to participate in buying oil for the government's strategic petroleum reserve. By letting the oil companies spend their own money to buy the petroleum and store it in the government-owned salt domes, the government could save $2.9 billion annually in purchase costs, the foundation said.

However, the government also would lose any benefit from sale of the oil during shortages. Instead, the report said, the oil companies should be allowed to draw down the reserves during shortages "without fear of the imposition of some sort of economic penalty such as a windfall profits tax."

The study also called for a $664 million increase in government spending on nuclear research in the 1982 budget. Much of the extra money would go to development of the Clinch River, Tenn., breeder reactor, which the Carter administration has blocked because of nuclear proliferation concerns. Reagan has voiced support for the breeder reactor.

The Heritage Foundation formally presented its energy recommendations and 19 other papers dealing with the Cabinet and other federal agencies to Edwin Meese III, head of Reagan's transition team, at a dinner Thursday night.

Asked earlier in the week about the proposals, Meese, who has worked with Heritage officials for several years, said the project has no official status in the Reagan transition.

United Way at 98 percent of 1981 goal

By SUE FAHLGREN
Staff Writer

Midland United Way workers celebrated completion of 98.43 percent of their 1981 campaign goal Thursday night at a victory dinner at the Holiday Inn Country Villa.

With a 1981 goal for the Midland charity drive of $1,150,000, division leaders reported some $1,131,967.50 collected thus far.

"I can say, beyond the shadow of a doubt," Don Evans, campaign chairman, said, "with the additional pledges, traditional year-end contributions, and the clean-up work and follow-up work, our 1981 goal is going to be reached and exceeded."

As Evans put the final few percentage points on a giant United Way goal thermometer, and the red "mercury" showed close to the 100 percent mark, a round of applause grew from the crowd of volunteers and campaign division chairmen.

"We're pleased to announce that the volunteer effort as well as the division chairmen's efforts have made this a successful campaign early on," Evans said, adding that the full fund-raising usually ran through the end of the year before the goal was within reach. Already, he said, "we really feel like the work has been done."

The Midland campaign was divided into five divisions of the community in which volunteers were to seek funds: advanced support, commercial and metropolitan, industry and commerce, oil companies, and public and professional outlets.

Some of the largest contributing divisions by percentages included: the oil companies with 102.2 percent of its goal with $323,270.98 collected; and advanced support with 99.1 percent of its goal with $321,566.82.

"This has been a fun campaign," Evans said, "and a lot of work for a lot of people. Because of each of you," he told the campaign workers, "the quality of life in this community is better."

Evans said, from the beginning the $1,150,000 goal was felt to be "ambitious, but we all thought achievable."

Other divisions of the drive collected the following figures thus far: commercial and metropolitan with 87.1 percent of its goal reported $15,877.50; industrial and commercial with 95.5 percent of its goal reported $341,015.01; and public and professional outlets with 97.1 percent of its goal reported $103,236.39.

The Midland United Way program supports 18 area groups, including the Midland Chapter of the Red Cross, Casa de Amigos, the YMCAs, Family Services, Council on Alcoholism, Boy Scouts, Boys' Clubs, Salvation Army, La Florencia Day Nursery, Community Day Nursery, Tape Lending Library, U.S.O., Midland/Lee Youth Centers, Camp Fire Inc. and Girl Scouts.

Tax discrepancies 'unexplained'

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Staff Writer

If a school administrator had not questioned the tax roll report from the city's tax office, the large discrepancies in the tax values for the school, city, college and hospital might have remained unknown for quite some time, Dr. James Mailey, school superintendent, said Thursday.

"It is conceivable that we (school district) could have taken those figures and, had the (school) board signed it, we would not have known our error until way late," said Mailey.

The first public revelation of tax value discrepancies came to light during Tuesday's school board meeting when Trustee Parker Humes read a statement revealing a tax base of $2 billion minus $94 million.

However, two weeks ago when Don Furgerson, school district business manager, discovered the error, the difference in the assessed tax values was about $88 million, Mailey noted.

"The thing that disturbs me," said Mailey, "is the loss of assessed value keeps decreasing."

When the report was sent out with the discrepancies in the values, Mailey noted that no written explanation was given by the tax office.

The superintendent asked the tax assessor-collector, Virgil Jones, to explain the difference. "Virgil has not given a good explanation," said Mailey. "I don't think Virgil knows."

When contacted by The Reporter-Telegram on Thursday, Jones declined to comment, referring all further questions about the tax mix-up to Mayor G. Thane Akins and the city.

And the city admits it doesn't know what caused the differences in the tax rolls, Akins said this morning.

Akins noted that an explanation on what caused the discrepancies will probably be disclosed on Monday.

Apparently the difference in tax values was created by a computer error, he said. Just exactly what that error is remains under investigation.

When the school district began winding down its budgeting process in the spring, the tax office supplied estimates which gave the district an idea of what its tax base would be, explained Mailey.

By June and the early part of July, when the district was well into the budgeting process, Mailey noted tax values reported by the tax office became extremely important.

By law, the tax office must publish an effective tax rate after the Board of Equalization completed its work in July.

"This effective tax rate is not a legal tax rate," said Mailey.

But, it is that rate which brings in the same amount of revenues to cover last year's budget, he explained.

"When Mr. Jones publishes the effective tax rate, this presumably is based on his understanding of (tax) values at the point the Board of Equalization completes its work," the superintendent noted.

"As such, he is then giving us our official values."

The discrepancies in the school district's tax values is considered a very serious matter, Mailey said.

And with the last report of decreasing tax values, the school district's loss of $840,000 in tax funds has to be made up somehow.

"We need to find out where we are," Mailey said of the different tax value reports, "and we need to know it right now."

Reagan series begins Sunday

"Where's the Rest of Me?," autobiography of president-elect Ronald Reagan, will begin Sunday in the first of a 10-part series. Breezy, anecdotal, full of Hollywood highlights, the series follows Reagan from Tampico, Ill., to the threshold of the California governorship.

Silent Witness tip helps solve two burglaries

A Silent Witness tip has resulted in two burglary cases being cleared and in two men being arrested by Midland police.

A cash award to the caller has been approved by the Silent Witness board of directors.

About two weeks ago, a call was received on the Silent Witness number, 685-1190, concerning a person who had stolen some power hand tools in mid-October.

According to Police Chief Wayne Gideon, up until that time, his officers had reached a dead end on the case.

The caller reported only one person involved in the burglary. However, after investigation, police discovered the man had an accomplice and also discovered a television stolen during another robbery.

Midland officers arrested Danny Stroud, 23, of 3105 Kessler Ave., and Michael Ray Buckles, 23. Both later signed confessions regarding the burglaries. Peace Justice Robert Pine set bond at $10,000 each for Stroud and Buckles on charges of burglary.

According to police, the crimes involved included two October burglaries in which a television and the hand tools were taken.

Silent Witness allows a person to call a specific number and anonymously give information on felony crimes that have occurred, are in progress or are being planned.

The caller is then assigned a code number which is known only to the caller and the person answering the Silent Witness telephone.

The information is relayed to the appropriate law enforcement agency, who follows up on that information. Should the information lead to an arrest or indictment, the Silent Witness board of directors sets an award to be paid to the caller. Payments are arranged to maintain the person's anonymity. On some crimes the reward may reach $1,000.

The Midland Silent Witness program is sponsored by the Midland County Sheriff's Office and The Midland Reporter-Telegram in cooperation with the Midland Police Department.

"The value to the citizen on this program," said Sheriff Dallas Smith, "is that,

When information received through the Silent Witness program leads to an arrest or indictment, directors set an award to be paid to the caller.

hopefully, we will save some manpower and on the number of personnel, thereby saving tax dollars."

The value to law enforcement is multi-fold. The program provides an opportunity for community involvement in the law enforcement system, provides further information on cases regular, routine law enforcement efforts may not have resolved, and saves investigation time and manpower, allowing officers to investigate more cases.

'Very sick' twins to be separated

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Two "very, very sick" 5-month-old Siamese twins were being prepared for a separation operation today after one of the babies suffered brain death.

Valerie and Natalie Wackler, joined at the base of the spine, originally were to have been separated later this month. But doctors at Children's Medical Center decided to move up the operation after an electroencephalogram, or EEG, conducted on Valerie indicated brain death, a hospital spokesman said.

Valerie could be kept alive on machines after the operation, a hospital spokesman said.

"We need to act now to give them the best possible chance," said Dr. Charles Goodwin, a pediatric surgeon who was to lead the seven-hour surgery.

The operation would involve 13 doctors working in shifts, he said. The actual separation would be a four-hour procedure, with reconstruction taking another three hours.

The infants, in critical condition late Thursday, probably will live through the separation, physicians said.

"(But) the girls' individual medical problems don't allow us to hold out much hope for their long-term survival," Goodwin said.

"These babies are very, very sick. Their individual medical problems are much more serious than the fact of their being conjoined. That really complicates the problem."

The babies' parents, Randy and Rebecca Wackler of Piqua, were consulted by doctors after the EEG test results Tuesday. They were not available for comment.

The twins, born prematurely on June 17, both have suffered major medical problems, particularly cardiac disease, which has proven more severe for Valerie.

Natalie has a cyst at the base of her skull that caused excessive bleeding during recent surgery. She has little cerebellum, the section of the brain which affects balance and coordination.

Two weeks ago, the girls were given independent digestive systems when a surgical team performed simultaneous colostomies in a 50-minute operation.

About one of every 50,000 sets of twins are born conjoined, the hospital spokesman said. Of those, about one pair out of five is joined at the base of the spine.

18-year-old cancer patient looking forward to apartment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Joe Kreuter, an 18-year-old cancer patient banned from treatments at the National Institutes of Health because of his drug problems and unruly behavior, says he's looking forward to getting an apartment after spending much of the last year living on the streets.

Kreuter, who according to doctors may be terminally ill, was discharged from NIH after repeatedly smoking marijuana at the facility in suburban Maryland and assaulting a physician on one occasion. He had received treatments at the government-run facility for three years.

The Arlington, Va., man, whose story was told in today's editions of The Washington Post, is now recovering from his latest operation — this time on his lung.

"I think an apartment will be OK," he said as he discussed attempts by Arlington Hospital officials to find him his own place to live on $320 a month in disability checks and food stamp payments.

The teen-ager was too disruptive to stay with his parents after being barred from NIH in January of this year and then spending only three weeks in another hospital, The Post said. So he spent much of the last year alone, living in vacant lots and sleeping on the streets.

"What I'd like most is to get out of the hospital and live with my parents but I guess I can't do that," said Kreuter, who suffers from a rare form of cancer known as undifferentiated sarcoma. He is 6 feet 1 inch tall, but weighs only 110 pounds.

Kreuter is able to stand the pain of his illness only by taking morphine every four hours, and doctors at NIH acknowledge that the youth had become addicted to the drug while at the facility.

"We were really torn because Joe could be a very likable and charming kid," said Dr. Philip Pizzo, a pediatric cancer specialist who treated Kreuter for 2½ years at NIH.

Lung cancer victims who stop smoking may prolong life

CHICAGO (AP) — New research has provided the first evidence that suggests victims of small-cell lung cancer who stop smoking may prolong their rate of survival, scientists say.

Patients with the cancer — an unusually fast-growing cancer that claims 25,000 lives a year — who give up cigarettes before or when their disease is diagnosed are more apt to survive than those who continue to smoke, according to a results of a study published today in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The explanation may lie in the fact that smoking appears to depress the body's immune system and thus would tend to negate the effect of chemotherapy, scientists say.

Small-cell cancer, one of four major types of lung cancer, usually occurs in those over 50 years of age.

The study by a team of cancer specialists at the National Cancer Institute-Veterans Administration Hospital in Washington examined case histories of patients who were treated as part of a six-week radiation and chemotherapy program at the hospital.

"Of the 112 patients who entered into the program, we found 19 had stopped smoking prior to diagnosis. Only one patient had never smoked, and 35 stopped smoking on their own at the time of diagnosis. Fifty-seven continued to smoke after diagnosis," said Anita Johnston-Early, an author of the study.

After 18 months, 28 percent of those who had quit smoking before diagnosis were cancer-free after treatment, compared to 16 percent who kicked the habit upon diagnosis, and 6 percent of those who continued to smoke, the study found.

Ms. Johnston-Early said the study provided the first evidence to suggest that quitting cigarettes may be associated with higher survival rates in those who contract small-cell cancer.

One specialist speculates that quitting smoking may increase chances for survival of patients with certain other types of cancer as well and they, too, "would do well to stop smoking."

Day care closed in meningitis case

TEMPLE, Texas (AP) — A church day care center here remains closed after a toddler died of contagious meningitis and health officials await results of tests on the staff and children.

Throat cultures were taken from 100 children and 30 adults who were exposed to the bacteria at the First Baptist Church Child Development Center on Thursday.

Physicians at two Temple hospitals say they are trying to find out if any of the others who came in contact with the sick child contracted the contagious illness.

Alan Tate Maxwell died Wednesday, 24 hours after he was taken to Scott and White Memorial Hospital in Temple. Doctors say they first thought the 21-month-old baby was sick with a flu.

Bell County Health Director Dr. G.J. Womack said he was "nearly positive" the toddler died of the contagious form of spinal meningitis called hemophilis influenza.

Because that form of meningitis is considered contagious and sometimes fatal, the day care center was closed Thursday and will not reopen until test results on the children and adults are available, Womack said.

The form of meningitis that killed the boy usually strikes children between six months and three years of age, said a Dallas pediatrician.

It is curable in most cases if detected early enough, he added.

Cell implantation 'cures' rats, may help human diabetics

BOSTON (AP) — An experimental process involving the implantation of living cells has been found to cure laboratory rats of diabetes for up to three weeks, and may one day spare human diabetics of the need for daily insulin injections, scientists say.

The tests on rats involved encasing living, insulin-producing cells in a tiny porous membrane which protects the cells from rejection by the rodents' immunity systems.

The capsules, then implanted in the rodents' abdomens, allowed nutrients to squeeze through while insulin and waste products got out.

Dr. Franklin Lim of the Medical College of Virginia told The Boston Globe it should be possible to harvest insulin-producing cells from human cadavers or even from some animals, encase them in microcapsules and inject them into human diabetics.

He said such a process, however, could not be tried on humans without several more years of testing on animals.

A full report on the process will be appear in next week's issue of Science magazine, the newspaper said.

The protective membranes holding the insulin-producing cells are made of a gummy substance called alginate. They are only one-fiftieth or one-twenty-fifth of an inch wide and can be injected through a standard hypodermic needle.

Lim said once the capsules are inside the abdominal cavity of the rats, the cells produce insulin on demand, varying the output according to the level of sugar in the blood just as they would normally in the pancreas.

He said that after about three weeks, the insulin has an increasingly difficult time getting out because the membrane gets clogged with fibrin, a wound-healing tissue.

Ethics board approves inquiry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House ethics committee approved on Thursday a preliminary inquiry to determine if Rep. John Jenrette, convicted of bribery and conspiracy in the Abscam investigation, should be punished by the House.

The committee approved the inquiry of the South Carolina Democrat's conduct by a vote of 9-0.

Rep. Michael Myers, D-Pa., was expelled from the House Oct. 2 on the committee's recommendation after his bribery conviction in the FBI's Abscam investigation.

The committee can recommend no action against Jenrette or it can recommend House punishments ranging from reprimand to expulsion. Rep. Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., chairman, said that if the committee recommends punishment, it could be put to a House vote early next month.

Jenrette and Myers are among six House members and a senator charged with bribery in the FBI's Abscam investigation. Abscam is short for Arab scam. Jenrette and Myers were defeated in the Nov. 4 elections.

Jenrette told reporters he understands the committee inquiry would be dropped if he resigned from the House but said, "I don't know what I plan to do."

"I'm pretty much destroyed by a con man, (Melvin) Weinberg, making the decisions," Jenrette said.

"There's little more that can happen to me," he said. "I'm prepared to go to jail or anything to get the message across. This is Hitler, really Hitler."

He was referring to his claim that the FBI created the crime and entrapped him into appearing to participate. He is back in court trying to overturn his conviction on those grounds.

Jenrette was convicted Oct. 7 on one count of conspiracy and two counts of bribery. A federal jury found that Jenrette and a middleman, John R. Stowe, split a $50,000 bribe.

Videotapes showed Stowe receiving the money last Dec. 6 from an FBI agent claiming to represent two Arab sheiks needing special immigration bills to come to the United States. Actually, there were no sheiks.

A voice tape has Jenrette telling the FBI agent hours later by telephone that "everything's fine."

But Jenrette told the court he was referring to what he said he thought was financing by the Arabs for a plant in his district to save jobs.

One tape showed Jenrette discussing introduction of a bill for the Arab sheiks and saying, "I've got larceny in my blood."

But Jenrette told the court he was drunk when he said that, and was rambling to stall for time because he thought the agents would hurt him if he rejected their offer.

The chief counsel to the House committee, E. Barrett Prettyman Jr., said it is ready to review the video and audio tapes and transcripts from Jenrette's bribery trial.

After the committee approved its inquiry, Prettyman went to a courtroom, where a post-trial hearing in Jenrette's case was under way, to inform the congressman of the resolution.

Two other House members, Reps. John Murphy, D-N.Y., and Frank Thompson Jr., D-N.J., are now being tried on Abscam bribery charges. Both were defeated Nov. 4.

Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., and Reps. Raymond F. Lederer, D-Pa., and Richard Kelly, R-Fla., face future trials on the charges.

Meanwhile, the judge at Jenrette's post trial hearing said he wants to review privately the government's entire file on Jenrette's case.

U.S. District Judge John Garrett Penn said he also may want to review the 25 volumes of government files on all Abscam cases.

Penn asked prosecutors to provide the files after defense lawyers for Jenrette and his convicted co-defendant, John R. Stowe, told the judge there could be written files that the prosecution never turned over to the defense.

The government is required to provide the defense with pertinent files on the case to help lawyers prepare their defense.

The defense lawyers are asking Penn at the court hearing to overturn the Oct. 7 convictions, claiming the government was guilty of misconduct by creating the crime and failing to control Weinberg, a paid informant and convicted swindler.

Second man sought in Ribicoff death

VENICE, Calif. (AP) — Authorities continued searching today for a second man wanted for questioning in the shooting death of Saral K. Ribicoff, niece of Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., outside a small French restaurant here.

Ms. Ribicoff, 23, a writer for the Los Angeles Herald Examiner, was shot in the chest during a robbery Wednesday night as she and a companion, John Shoven, 33, left the Chez Helene restaurant.

Shoven, a professor of economics at Stanford University, told police the shooting occurred without provocation after he handed over his wallet, which contained about $200, to two men who emerged from the shadows nearby.

Police arrested one man, Frederick Jerome Thomas, 21, of Los Angeles, an hour later at a hospital where he was being treated for a gunshot wound to the left hand.

Detectives weren't sure how Thomas, who was booked for investigation of murder, received the wound.

"I think he probably got shot by his crime partner," said Los Angeles police Sgt. Marvin Engquist, "but that's not what he said. He said somebody driving by in a car shot him. That's not what we believe at this time."

Medical authorities were to conduct an autopsy today on Ms. Ribicoff, police said.

Cornett says wife could be violent

By ED TODD Staff Writer

A year before Richard Reni Cornett shot his wife in a family squabble and mortally wounded his "mean" sister-in-law with the same revolver, the 26-year-old Cornett said his wife assaulted him with a pistol after he had refused to buy her a new car.

He said he needed the resources to bolster his fledgling welding business more than to invest in a car. "She was a very quiet woman," Cornett testified on Thursday in 238th State District Court in his own defense. "Then all of a sudden, she'd just go off (explode)."

"She was so hot, so I just left the house to get in the yard, and she followed." A tussle ensued, and Cornett said he managed to wrestle the .22-caliber pistol from his wife's hand.

Defense attorney Tom Hirsch asked his client why he continued to live with a woman who had threatened to shoot him. "That's a good question," the 26-year-old defendant said from the witness stand. "I guess I loved the woman."

A YEAR LATER, Cornett was temporarily in jail and was charged with the attempted murder of his wife, Mildred Jo "Blondie" Cornett, 27, and with the murder of his sister-in-law, Norma Jean Loring, 31, of Odessa on the afternoon of June 30, 1960.

On that day, as he had in the past, Cornett had driven by his estranged wife's house in his welding truck to persuade her to reconcile their differences and to mend their ailing marriage and to bring their children together. She declined.

That afternoon, Cornett said he entered the house at 1715 E. Oak St. and was challenged by his sister-in-law, Ms. Loring. Their conversation "went from worse to worst," Cornett said. "Norma Jean (Loring) was a pretty mean person," the defendant had testified earlier. "She'd probably cuss you out. She had a real nasty mouth."

After Ms. Loring confronted him, Cornett said his wife "pulled a gun" in the hallway of the house, which had been awarded to the wife in a divorce court hearing earlier that month. "And when she snapped at me, I grabbed the gun," said Cornett, who was one of six defense witnesses in the week-long trial. The state tendered about 20, including Cornett's wife, whose testimony conflicted with his.

Cornett said that he and his wife of three years "tussled" over the .38-caliber pistol, and his hefty, 5-foot-2, 200-pound sister-in-law joined in the fight. She was wielding a butcher knife, Cornett said. "I was trying to push my wife into her."

"The gun went off, and she (Ms. Loring) fell, and the gun went off again, and my wife fell," he said. Then, before he knew what was happening, Cornett said his wounded sister-in-law got up from the floor and, with the butcher knife in her hand, started charging him. "As fast as she was going — she had the butcher knife in her hand — and I had to do something," Cornett said. He fired once, and she fell again and failed to rise.

CORNETT TESTIFIED that he did not have sole control of the handgun when it went off during what he described as a "tussle." "I hadn't got full possession of the gun; it was in both of our (his and his wife's) hands" when his wife and Ms. Loring were shot.

Afterward, Cornett said he placed the pistol on a bookshelf in the house and waited for the police and ambulance to arrive. On Tuesday, Cornett's estranged wife testified that her husband had broken into the house at 1715 E. Oak St. on the afternoon of the shooting, charged in, shot Ms. Loring twice and her once.

The wife said that earlier she had thwarted his attempts for a reconciliation. Unharmed in the tussle and shooting were the couple's baby, Kevin, and Mrs. Cornett 5-year-old daughter, Chautauqua Nekim "Kim" Young, by a previous marriage.

Kim, called to the witness stand today by the prosecution, testified that her stepfather shot Ms. Loring, her (Kim's) mother, and then placed the butcher knife in Ms. Loring's hand, as she lay dying on the den floor. "He (Cornett) shot my auntie," the girl said timidly. "Then he shot my mommy."

"What happened next?" asked Prosecutor David Joers. "He went in the kitchen and got the knife and put it in her (Ms. Loring's) hand," the girl said. Mid-week in open court, the child essentially gave the same account to Judge Vann Culp but out of the presence of the nine-woman, three-man jury.

At that time, Kim, in a barely audible and timid voice, told the judge, who gently questioned her, that her stepfather twice shot "my auntie," and "He was shooting my mommy." "My mommy said, 'Don't shoot my auntie,' and he did," Kim had said. Kim said her aunt was "lying down" when her mother "fell." And the judge had asked what happened next. "He put the knife in my auntie's hand, just like that," Kim had said, after Ms. Loring had been shot and lay dying on the den floor.

THE CONTROVERSIAL butcher knife was No. 55 of the state's 94 exhibits, which included color photographs and X-rays of Ms. Loring and Mrs. Cornett, photographs of Cornett's multi-cut left arm, pictures of the house, bloodied clothing, the .38-caliber revolver allegedly used in the shooting, and bullet fragments.

Cornett said he was unaware of his cut and stab wounds until after the shooting. And his attorney, Hirsch, offered into evidence a long-sleeve khaki shirt which Cornett said he was wearing at time of the shooting. The left sleeve had holes and cuts in it. But the prosecution had suggested that Cornett's wound were self-inflicted.

Dr. David Shneidman, the pathologist who performed the autopsy on Ms. Loring, testified that Cornett's left arm cuts "were certainly consistent with self-inflicted wounds." He theorized that wounds made by an attacker would have been deeper than were the several wounds on the defendant's arm. "The person stabbing is trying to do a good job of that," reasoned Shneidman.

Forecast cold

Cold weather enthusiasts will be pleased to know the weather forecast for the weekend includes low daytime and nighttime temperatures, plus a slight chance of precipitation tonight.

The National Weather Service is predicting tonight's low to be in the mid-30s, while the high for Saturday is expected to be in the low 50s.

Chance for rain tonight is set at 20 percent. And Saturday's skies should be partly cloudy.

Northeasterly winds tonight are expected to be 5-10 mph and the direction should change to an easterly direction Saturday with an increase in wind speed of 10-15 mph.

Thursday's high of 68 degrees did not break the 1973 high of 83 degrees. And the record low remains at 13 degrees set in 1976. Last night's low was 40 degrees.

Odessa was reporting light rainfall this morning. Other area towns were reporting cloudy conditions with some mist falling.

Council studying lake formation

By LANA CUNNINGHAM Staff Writer

Midland City Council members aren't guaranteeing they will go through with the project, but on Thursday they instructed city officials to look into the costs of turning Wadley-Barron Park into Wadley-Barron Lake.

Meeting in a regular session in City Hall Council Chambers, the six-member panel heard a report from Wayne Kohout on how Lubbock turned some of its playa lakes into water attractions and the results of a survey of residents living near the park.

Of 66 letters mailed to Midland residents, Kohout said there were 29 responses with a majority preferring the lake. However, when questioned about the prospect of allowing fishing, Kohout said he received some negative replies because people felt "it would bring in undesirables."

The park, located at A Street and Cuthbert Avenue, is a playa lake designed to serve as a combination park and drainage basin. But in recent months the city has been unable to get the standing water pumped out of the park. A hydrologist who looked at the park said the water table had risen and the water wasn't going to be drying up as it has in the past.

Using Lubbock's method of digging out the playa lake, Kohout said the lake could have a depth of 12 feet. Mosquitoes could be controlled by either chemicals or fish. If fish are used, the lake also could be used as a recreational area.

Lubbock has posted No Swimming signs at its lakes and there is an ordinance levying a fine if someone is caught swimming, he said. The lakes have been in existence since 1967 and there have only been two drownings. In neither case was the city held liable.

Councilman Tom Sloan objected to some of the residents not wanting fishing because it would attract "undesirables," and he suggested the lake be used as a place to teach canoeing.

"If you restrict or prohibit fishing, you're depriving people of a right. Most of the people who fish are going to be kids," he said.

The council went into executive session for 1 1/2 hours to discuss the tax situation in which there is a $94 million difference between the estimated tax rolls and the revised figures.

The discrepancy was brought to light Tuesday by the Midland Independent School District board of trustees, which could lose up to $841,000 in tax revenues.

The City Council came out of executive session at 6 p.m. and Mayor G. Thane Akins announced there would be another session at 3 p.m. today. A council member said the panel is looking at all the figures before announcing how the lowered tax rolls would affect the city budget.

In other action, the council approved a lease agreement with Jet East Corporation to become a fixed base operator at Midland Regional Airport. Col. Wilson Banks, director of aviation, noted the company plans to make Midland its corporate headquarters.

The city decided to buy four acres of land in the northwest part of Midland adjacent to Younger school site for a park. Under current city ordinances, the land was held by the developer for a year to give the city an option to buy.

The deadline will be up soon, and the city decided to pay $86,127 for the land. This price also includes the city's cost of putting in the nearby street, curb and gutter and utilities.

Relocating the Operations Building and constructing a new office area attached to the building was approved in concept by the council. Estimated cost will be $300,000 and the council told city officials to get plans and specifications ready to advertise for bids.

The Operations Building is located over an old landfill. The landfill is sinking, causing the foundation of the building to crack and sink on one end.

Snatched purse contained $14,000

Purse thefts may be run-of-the-mill on most days, but Thursday the Midland Police Department was notified of one a little out of the ordinary. A woman working at the art and crafts exhibit at Midland Park Mall reported the theft of her purse and some $14,000 in contents at 10:20 p.m. Thursday.

She reported that a Mexican-American male, approximately 18-24 years old, took her handbag containing four rings and a gold bracelet sometime between 9:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.

The purse, a brown leather bag valued at $100, contained four rings: one yellow gold ring with approximately five sapphires and 10 diamonds, valued at $6,000; one ring with one five-carat mine cut sapphire set in white gold, valued at $5,000; one ring with six diamonds with a total carat weight of 1.5, set in gold, valued at $1,300; and one ring with four aquamarines and one diamond at a total carat weight of .5, valued at $900.

In addition, the woman reported a 22-carat solid gold bracelet, valued at $1,200 was in the purse, along with a pair of glasses, valued at $100, and $60 in cash. The total value of the theft was $14,600.

In other police news, Hazel Herndon of 303 Holly Drive reported the criminal mischief of her automobile. Ms. Herndon said sometime between 5 and 5:40 p.m., someone broke out the front windshield of her 1968 Chevy Impala. Police records show investigators believe the windshield, valued at $200, was broken with an object made of caliche.

Charles Miller of Route 2 reported the theft of his tool box and various tools, at about 2:15 p.m., with a total value of $200, from his unlocked 1973 Ford Pinto.

Clayton Hail of 1310 W. Florida Ave. reported the burglary of his 1976 Grand Prix Thursday. Taken from the auto was an AM/FM 8-track player and a CB unit. The combined value of the items amounted to $1,000.

Police Roundup

Police records indicate entry was gained through the vehicle's T-top.

Also, three men have been arrested and charged with illegal possession of alcoholic beverages with the intent to sell.

The arrests were made by Midland police officers Lt. Gayle Reeves, Sgt. Joe Carr and Mike Mann Tuesday.

The arrests were made at a private residence located Texas Avenue and Lamesa Road. Taken into custody and charged were Starlin Les Knox, 1704 Butternut Lane; Leon Luster, 1608 E. Hancock Ave.; and Charles Edward "Bubba" Blaylock. All three men have been released on bond.

A pre-trial hearing for two of the three men was scheduled for this morning.

Also arrested this week was Aaron Bundage, 19, of 1717 Morgan Way, on armed robbery charges. Bundage was arrested on a felony warrant for the armed robbery of the Colonial convenience store on the corner of N. Big Spring Street and Louisiana Avenue on Halloween night. Bond for Bundage is set at $25,000. He remained in custody in City Jail this morning.

And a Midland man was in custody this morning awaiting a bond hearing on charges of theft by exercising control. The man was arrested on an outstanding third-degree felony warrant issued by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine. The charge is in connection with his possession of stolen property resulting from the burglary of a warehouse storage room. Police detectives said the property was valued "around $400."

Search continues for helicopter

MIAMI (AP) — Coast Guard crews were searching the Florida Straits today for a network news charter helicopter and four passengers who were more than a day overdue from an assignment in The Bahamas.

NBC cameraman Jay Randall Fairbairn, ABC technician Joe Dellisera and free-lance sound technician Dan Cefalo, on assignment for NBC, had left Congo Town, Andros Island, late Wednesday after covering the forced evacuation by Bahamian police of 102 marooned Haitians from the tiny island of Cayo Lobo.

Authorities identified the pilot as George Snow, 42, of Boca Raton, Fla. Coast Guard aircraft and the cutter Vigorous searched a wide area of the Straits and the Gulf Stream from the Bahamas to Vero Beach, Fla., for the craft, which was due at Miami International Airport at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Weather reports in the area late Wednesday indicated thunderstorms, 10-foot-high seas and 20 to 25 knot winds.

By early today, there was no confirmation of earlier reports that wreckage of the Bell Jet Ranger helicopter had been found.

Part three: What makes Nancy Reagan run?

The woman behind all that steel armor

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is the third of a four-part series by Los Angeles Herald Examiner staff writer Wanda McDaniel, with reporting assistance from Caroline Cushing, tracing the life of Nancy Reagan, wife of president-elect Ronald Reagan.

BY WANDA MCDANIEL

Not even Nancy Reagan can be all THAT perfect.

Can she? Clearly there are indications that she is not.

There's her campaign trail faux pas when she looked over a Republican fundraising crowd in Chicago and gushed with glee at seeing "all these beautiful white faces." Quickly amended to include "black faces."

There's her totally unforgiving, unwavering, unnerving posture when someone writes something she dislikes.

There's her reported sniping at vice-presidential candidate George Bush's wife Barbara.

There's her rigid resistance to talking about the time when daughter Patti once lived with a member of the Eagles rock group.

There's the fact that she's never seen her son Ron perform with the Joffrey Ballet.

There's the episode when she chatted with Elizabeth Taylor all the way through a speech at the convention given by the NAACP's Benjamin Hooks.

There's her asking Johnny Carson to cut out the "Ronnie dyes his hair" monologue jokes.

There's the temper and the tantrums.

The press either loves Nancy — or they hate her. They either see the homey image of her zipping around in her trusty Mercury sedan — or they can't get past the concept that she's more Rodeo Drive than rodeo.

"What's she wearing under those Galanos gowns, anyway? Jockey shorts?" blasted an established Hollywood figure at a sedate party recently. "Are you kidding?" shot back another male guest. "She's my dream woman."

AND SO IT HAS always gone, ever since Nancy Reagan gave up the dim lights of Hollywood for the spotlight of politics, and opened her coveted private life to public scrutiny.

While the couple's show business experience prepared them somewhat for the political spectrum, apparently neither was ready for the all-out peep show ahead. Former Reagan aide Nancy Reynolds said in The Washington Star that Mrs. Reagan suffered from shyness, not snobbishness. "It (politics) was a totally new world for Nancy," said Reynolds. After Reagan won the California election for governor in the 1966 election, the Reagans were never again far from the maddening crowd.

Yet privacy was the Reagans' constant quest. One journalist compared Mrs. Reagan with a lioness, protecting her cubs from annoying public scrutiny.

Mrs. Reagan has never been one to get "good press." In Sacramento, she is remembered by some as the state's first lady who vigorously promoted the Foster Grandparents Program, a compassionate nationwide project which brings together children with the elderly. But she is remembered by most as an aloof Los Angeles establishment hostess who seemed to disdain mingling with the lowly pols.

During Reagan's two terms as governor, the legend of his politically savvy wife grew. Insiders both fawned over and flagellated her reputation for passing on "suggestions" to the governor and his staff. Jealousies mounted. Politicians walked in fear of somehow incurring her wrath. The most obvious example of her state house clout was when Reagan administration press secretary Lyn Nofziger fell out of favor (hers) after she accused him of a controversial leak to the press. Following a five-month snub by Mrs. Reagan, Nofziger was fired.

"HER POLITICAL instincts are better than her husband's," says a current campaign staffer. "So you learn to court Mrs. Reagan. That's called smart politics."

Friends say it comes from her vulnerability, her shyness, her penchant for privacy. Yet it is increasingly obvious that Nancy Reagan is extraordinarily suspicious of the media. After a particularly scathing article about her (from the legendarily scathing pen of Sally Quinn) in the Washington Post on May 1, rumors spread that Mrs. Reagan had gone underground. No more one-on-one interviews. ("Not true," says Nancy's press secretary Coral Schmid, although it is true that the New York Times was refused an interview for months.)

Mrs. Reagan is said to be angry at those who pick on The Gaze — her ability to be totally transfixed, to sit totally still, to hang with rapt attention on every word that her husband says in speech after speech after speech. She's had it with all the gossip about how she bore her first child only seven-and-a-half months after her wedding date. She's sick and tired of everyone harping about how powerful she is, SHE, of all people, the most unliberated of the campaign wives. ("It is a paradox, isn't it," muses an aide.) And she's just plain mad about how everyone says she and her stepfather caused Ronnie's switch in party affiliation, not to mention influencing every blessed political thought he's ever had.

"THEY DON'T FOOL me for a minute," observes a high-ranking local socialite. "Look, he's an actor — and so is she. She's been playing Jackie O forever. And God only knows they've been at the Bistro for the past 10 years, toasting him as the next President of the United States."

"She's very hard to deal with, I can't TELL you," says a woman in a local service business. "But always in the end, she gets what she wants."

Nancy Reagan usually gets what she wants through men, turning only to the women among her cloistered circle of friends, and only when necessary. Sources say it is through her urging that Reagan went for anti-abortion and anti-ERA stands. A staffer goes further: "Nancy simply does not like other women. She's absolutely threatened by them."

Attractive socialite (and alternate delegate to the GOP convention) Cheryl Clarke tells the story about boarding an elevator with actress Ruta Lee following a fundraising luncheon in 1975. "The doors were standing open with Nancy already inside, so we just walked in," remembers Clarke. "Then all of a sudden she was saying, 'Oh, no. You can't come in here.' Well, we got off, but just then Ronnie showed up and said, 'Sure, they can ride with us.' I couldn't figure out what had happened until a friend of theirs later told me that Nancy simply didn't want two, good-looking women in the same elevator with her husband. Honestly, I couldn't believe it."

SOME OF THE MOST intriguing insights into the character of Nancy Reagan come from a respected Los Angeles writer who interviewed her over several months in sessions at the Reagan's Pacific Palisades home. Recently the writer agreed to talk about the woman he came to know well, but even now describes with caution. He asked not to be identified by name.

"The only warmth she has is for Ronnie," the writer says. "She dislikes his family. Nancy is just for Nancy and Ronnie. It is a strong relationship in which they need each other. They are both very sincere when they meet and part again. I'm sure it is Nancy who is behind Ronnie's decision on ERA. She could never conceive of the kind of world where women are side by side in the trenches. A woman's place is in the home. Both of Nancy's issues (ERA, abortion) have cost Ronnie a lot of votes."

"Nancy wields influence over Ronnie. She pushes him and admires him. She wants that limelight. The reason, I think, is that she feels so strongly about her way of life and wants to impose it on others. Goodness, God, home and country are what Nancy believes in. She lives in a narrow world. She is not intellectual. She's a tough, clever girl who knows what she wants. She has street smarts, has a certain grace, and whatever the temper is, she can control it. She really loves her husband and thinks he will give us the moral leadership the country needs."

"NANCY'S NICKNAME is 'The Iron Maiden' — that's what she's called by the Reagan office staff who claim to spend an abnormal amount of time dealing with her demands. Some of them resent her. The campaign manager thinks he can decide what's right and wrong for the candidate. Nancy says, 'He can't do that.' She's constantly calling the office and laying down the law. 'A man has to have some time for his family,' she says. 'He's going to the ranch with me.' Nancy likes the ranch because it's the only place she can have Ronnie all to herself."

"Nancy had every advantage. When she came to Hollywood, Spencer Tracy arranged the screen test. It was easy for her to give up her career. Even Ronnie got nowhere and turned to G.E. when there was no work. He has never made a lot of money, but he has been bothered by taxes. That's why he's so concerned over tax."

"Nancy hates Betty Ford with a passion. She claims that Betty was on drugs. The claim comes from the '76 convention when Betty was not responding to those around her in the Ford box. Nancy was furious because the Reagan box was at the back of the hall. Nancy says, 'Betty parades her alcoholism like a medal of honor. Why is she overcoming the problem when she shouldn't have it in the first place?'"

"NANCY WILL BE the most prominent First Lady since Jackie. She is a tasteful lady, not a trendsetter. The bigotry doesn't bother me. Eleanor Roosevelt was born and brought up a bigot — and she forced FDR to receive blacks. She'll make one hell of a First Lady."

It's strange, the mean-spirited criticism of Nancy Reagan, a woman of such inner virtue and outward class. Some say it comes as a result of her inaccessibility, of her placing the rest of the world at arm's length. Some say it's the human rich folk envy that festers in most of us. Others say it's because she sets herself up as a model of everything that is good and right, that her squeaky-clean posturing leaves the rest of us feeling down and dirty.

After a certain point, Mrs. Reagan's quest for laudable ethics turns against her. She's too good, too perfect in an era when some of our most glamorous and respected figures are Woody Allen and, well, Betty Ford.

"If she's just come down off her high horse and show us something of the real world," sighs a woman who has spent evenings out with the Reagans. "I keep getting the impression that she wants the White House, while all he'd like to do is tend cattle in Santa Barbara. If only she could loosen up and relax and stop being so afraid, I do think there's a terrific woman there, somewhere deep inside."

ACTOR ROBERT STACK, who has known Mrs. Reagan longer than most, and narrated a TV ad for her candidate, concedes that her face "may be cold and prepossessing." But he goes on to explain: "That is simply the kind of facade you must put up. She always gives him front and center. Nancy is less a power figure now than I've ever seen her. There's nothing militant about her. I don't think she's that self-involved. "But politics is dog eat dog. Every day, a judgment is made," continues Stack. "And if you show emotions, suddenly they are calling you a schizoid. Look at Joan Kennedy. The only way to survive is to put on a mask. In all of God's world, the wife of a politician has the toughest job. And part of being a political wife — is being eternally petrified."

Tomorrow: Part IV: Queen Nancy and her loyal Court)

Nancy Reagan departs ahead of her husband at Burbank Airport as the Reagans end their year-long campaign odyssey Nov. 3, the day before his landslide victory over President Carter. Despite their fish-bowl life in Hollywood and in politics, privacy has been the Reagans' constant quest. In Sacramento, she is remembered as the state's first lady who promoted the Foster Grandparents Program and as an aloof Los Angeles establishment hostess who seemed to disdain mingling with lowly politicians. Austin's elephant tracks

Washington isn't the only place that will see more conservative political practices next year as a result of the Nov. 4 election.

Texas voters elected two more Republican state senators and 10 more GOP state representatives in balloting on election day.

Some individuals have gone as far as to say that the election really marked the start of the two-party system in the state, a reference to the Democratic Party's stranglehold on politics in the state during the past 100 years or so.

But we don't think that's the case. The Republican Party has existed in Texas for years although the election in 1978 of Republican Gov. Bill Clements actually marked the beginnings of the Republican Party's assertiveness in the state. Gov. Clements is only the second Republican governor the state has ever had, the first having been Gov. Edmund J. Davis, who took office on Jan. 8, 1870.

While the Republican showing in the Nov. 4 election was impressive, the impact on the state's political system will be even more apparent in the next few years. Gov. Clements likely will find that he's going to have some of his party "running interference" for him on programs he's attempting to get through the Legislature. Some of those programs, including a wiretapping provision and initiative and referendum legislation, have met with controversy up until now.

But with seven of the 31 senators and 36 of the 150 state representatives Republicans like himself, Gov. Clements may find a more receptive legislature awaiting his proposals next time around.

The governor apparently is pleased by the way things turned out Nov. 4, saying, "These new members in the Senate will make a difference.... It will change that whole general atmosphere in the Senate and it will become more conservative."

The change will do one thing for certain: The next session of the legislature is almost sure to be a more interesting one for those interested in watching partisan politics at play in a state where this traditionally has been virtually unknown.

No, this election didn't mark the start of the two-party system in Texas. The Republicans just began to spread their wings and assert their power.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Apathetic press has failed to expose facts

WASHINGTON — Rightly do newsmen rail against bureaucratic secrecy, political coverup and judicial hostility. But the great graveyard of investigative stories is to be found in apathetic newsrooms.

If the press at large ignores an expose, if editors scorn its incompleteness or fail to grasp its importance, if reporters don't jump in to widen the beachhead, if they don't confront officials over it, then it may get lost between the cracks of history.

The White House-Robert Vesco scandal is such a story. The facts have been largely discarded or ignored in editorial offices across the 50 states.

For the picture that emerges is not one that America really wants to see so soon after Watergate. Americans have been rocked by one news shock after another until they now tend to duck at the appearance of disagreeable news. Nor are the expositors any more eager than the exposed to engage in another angry, protracted, bitter-end investigation that might traumatize the nation all over again.

Yet in all good conscience, I cannot abandon the Vesco story without a thorough airing. I have already laid out facts that have precipitated investigations by a federal grand jury and a Senate subcommittee.

The grand jury foreman, Ralph Ulmer, accused the Justice Department of obstructing the investigation to protect the Carter administration. He told senators that the key White House witness, Richard Harden, gave the impression he had been "coached." More than any other witness, Harden hedged his responses with the caveat, "to the best of my recollection," Ulmer said.

Harden's answers corroborated the testimony of his friend, Spencer Lee

Jack Anderson

IV, who brought a multimillion-dollar bribe offer from Vesco to the White House. Both men swore to the grand jury that Harden persuaded Lee to have nothing to do with the bribery scheme.

Yet Lee failed two lie detector tests. The examiner who administered the tests concluded Lee was deceptive in 16 areas, which largely paralleled the testimony that the two cronies gave to the grand jury.

Sources close to the grand jury investigation told my associate, Indy Badhwar, that an internal Justice Department memo recommended the appointment of a special prosecutor to investigate whether Harden had committed perjury. The department has refused, however, to honor a Senate subpoena for the memo.

Sens. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., and Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, have accused the Justice Department of "stonewalling." In a case related to another Vesco caper, federal district Judge Fred Winner has also complained that the department is "stonewalling."

The most disturbing aspect of the case involves President Carter himself. One of the conspirators in the Vesco bribery plot, R.L. Herring, has sworn that Lee slipped into the oval

CHARLEY REESE

Cleaning up corruption: hit crooked officials first

Charley Reese

In the city where I live, which is as wide open as Bangkok or Saigon in the Vietnam War years, there is a peculiar obtuseness prevalent among the people which makes them overlook the obvious.

Drugs, prostitution and gambling flourish. The law enforcement officials profess themselves unable to do much about it. Occasionally, an unlucky small fish is scooped up with great fanfare and more infrequently an occasional honest law enforcement officer happens along and is quickly hounded out of town.

Some Christians have been outraged enough to protest on moral grounds some of the commercial establishments which would make Nero blush, but by and large there is passivity.

If this is happening to your town, you might consider the simple logic of organized crime, which deals mainly in the vices of drugs, prostitution and gambling. All three of these are retail businesses, depending on volume sales for their enormous cash flow.

Think about that. For a retail business to generate huge profits, necessity dictates certain things. It must be a fairly large organization. It must have financiers, suppliers, wholesalers, a distribution system and salesmen.

You can visualize the organization needed if you think about the logistics involved in selling two tons of marijuana — ounce by ounce. Furthermore, a successful retail business must have large numbers of customers.

From necessity can come revelation. No large retail organization with a large clientele can function in secret. If customers can find the product by simply spending an evening on the streets, then obviously so can the police. It is absurd to believe, as the public seems to do with a little coaching, that thousands of people can avail themselves of services but the police cannot find sufficient evidence to make arrests.

That's why I say emphatically and without reservation that if you have vice in your area, you have at least some corrupt cops, prosecutors and judges.

Today's corrupted official is far more sophisticated than the old-fashioned grafter. With all of the court-imposed restrictions available, it is a simple matter to queer an arrest or to throw a trial. A gap in the chain of evidence, a defective warrant, an overlooked procedural step and the criminal goes free while the corrupt officials join with the public in grumbling about legal technicalities. Everyone can appear to be trying to do his job.

This inevitable corruption of the criminal justice system puts the lie to claims that drugs, prostitution and gambling are victimless crimes. Justice is the first victim and the general welfare of the people is the second. An official tainted by vice money is like a poisoned well, totally bad.

And no wound is more lethal to an organized society than a failure of the court system. The courts are the dikes which prevent anarchy from drowning a society. It is in the court where civilized men can settle disputes without violence according to mutually agreed-upon rules. It is in the court where a society enforces, in a rational manner, its moral code (the stupidest argument some libertarians make is that morality cannot be legislated; legislation is codified morality.)

If the court system breaks down and fails to provide justice, then the alternative is vigilantism. The vigilante is efficient, but becomes corrupted by his own power and evolves into a tyrant. I grew up in an area and in a time when the Ku Klux Klan was a formidable and pervasive force. At that time and in that place, the Klan was not a fringe group; it was the establishment and, despite all its rationalizations, it was both oppressive and cruel.

Vice, of course, is not the only thing which can kill the effectiveness of the courts. Appointing and electing political hacks will do the same job with the same bad consequences.

Still, I have learned, from my town as well as others, that in our free society we get precisely the government we deserve. The power exists for the people to change their governments for the better, and if it is not exercised, then there's no point blaming fate or the system.

Several times in our country's history, the people have exercised their power and made an almost revolutionary improvement. The end of Reconstruction in the South and the birth of the progressive movement in the Midwest are two examples.

I think it is about to happen again, for I see more and more people dissatisfied to the point of action. But just remember, if you have vice in your town and you want to clean it up, go after the crooked officials first. Otherwise, your efforts will be frustrated.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Nov. 14, the 319th day of 1980. There are 47 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Nov. 14th, 1935, President Franklin Roosevelt proclaimed the Philippine Islands a commonwealth and pledged independence by 1946.

On this date: In 1775, American troops led by Benedict Arnold invaded Canada's Quebec Province.

In 1856, James Buchanan was elected the 15th president of the United States.

In 1942, World War I ace Eddie Rickenbacker and seven other Americans were rescued from a life raft 23 days after their plane went down in the Pacific.

And in 1973, Britain's Princess Anne was married to a commoner — Capt. Mark Phillips.

Ten years ago, some 300,000 people were killed when a cyclone and giant waves devastated the southern coast of East Pakistan and islands in the Bay of Bengal.

Five years ago, Spain, Morocco and Mauritania reached an agreement on the future of the Spanish Sahara.

One year ago, President Jimmy Carter ordered a freeze of all Iranian assets in the U.S.

Today's birthdays: Jordan's King Hussein is 45 years old. Britain's Prince Charles is 32.

Thought for today: Culture is one thing, and varnish another. — Ralph Waldo Emerson, American writer (1803-1882).

INSIDE REPORT

Reagan's lame-duck fumble threatens economic plans

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

Evans Novak

WASHINGTON — An inadvertent misstep by Ronald Reagan less than 48 hours after his landslide threatens not only his tax reduction goals but also hopes of sealing his victory with a trailblazing economic policy.

Reagan's decision to go along with a tax cut in the lame-duck session was made on the spot during his Nov. 6 Los Angeles press conference. It has since been elevated to official policy, leading many lawmakers of both parties to shrug shoulders and say: Well, if that's what he wants, we'll give it to him. Although obstacles remain severe, it is at least possible the bill could clear Congress and President Carter's desk this year.

"We must not let this happen," a House Republican close to the Reagan campaign told us. The lame-duck bill would kill the far more ambitious Kemp-Roth bill for 1981. That would mangle plans for a radical approach to the economy combining an attack on the federal budget that does not starve the poor with massive, long-range tax reduction that nourishes the middle class.

But how to prevent this from happening? In these strange interregnum days, it is not absolutely certain the tax-cut phobia of President Carter and Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill will kill the lame-duck bill. The obvious remedy: Pass the word to the president-elect, in seclusion at his Santa Barbara mountaintop, that he must undo what was done so lightly in the flush of victory. Rep. Jack Kemp might fulfill that function when he goes west this week. It all began with a statement the day after the election by Sen. Robert Dole, giddy by the unexpected prospect of becoming finance committee chairman, that he hoped for lame-duck passage of the Long-Bentsen bill adopted by the committee last summer. Asked about this at his press conference the next day, the president-elect paused and then replied: "It'll be fine with me...."

By the time Reagan chief of staff Edwin Meese appeared on NBC's "Meet the Press" three days later, the inadvertent remark had become official policy. "... what Ronald Reagan is saying," explained Meese, "is let's not waste any time. Let's get tax cuts into effect."

When it emerged last summer, Long-Bentsen was embraced by Republicans as a bipartisan facsimile of Kemp-Roth. But that was campaign politics; it is no such thing. Apart from business tax incentives, Long-Bentsen is a typically Democratic tax bill that increases the progressivity of individual taxes. While Kemp-Roth would slash rates 10 percent a year across the board, Long-Bentsen barely cuts them an average of 4 percent (and only 1 percent in the upper brackets.)

Reagan's embrace of this last week was interpreted by friend and foe as a mercy killing for the tax cut he promoted during 12 hard months of campaigning. "He gets off the hook on Kemp-Roth," Senate Democratic Whip Alan Cranston told us. The same conclusion was drawn at the Carter White House — and by worried supply-side tax-cutters.

Almost certainly, they were all wrong. Against advice from traditionalist economists, Reagan all year stuck to Kemp-Roth. The high probability that he stumbled in the Nov. 6 press conference typifies the pitfalls confronting a newly-elected president. His snap reaction was to endorse a bill that he had already backed during the campaign under wholly different circumstances.

Accidental or not, passing the lame-duck bill would disrupt plans for a massive, multi-year tax cut in 1981 designed to transform the nation's economic climate. The 1981 bill would be considered by a Republican Senate and a House that, though still Democratic, will be much more Republican than the present one. Most important, it would be drafted by a Republican treasury as the essential first step of the new administration's whole economic program.

Passage of the lame-duck bill would kill real chances for another tax bill in 1981. If Reagan is serious about quickly seizing control of the federal budget, he would have no tax cut sugar to sweeten that bitter medicine.

And if he fails to establish this economic program at the beginning, it will be much harder later.

If thoughtful Republicans do not change Reagan's stance, they pray the lame-duck tax bill becomes a victim of the economic thinking that has made Jimmy Carter himself a lame duck. Treasury Secretary G. William Miller will recommend a veto, and the president's instinct is to comply. Or, Tip O'Neill might save him the trouble by ordering a hold in the House Ways and Means Committee, where lame-duck Chairman Al Ullman is opposed anyway.

But given the Republican mandate, the president and speaker conceivably might give the president-elect what he says he wants. That is why the effort will be made to have Reagan end his hasty embrace of the lame-duck Democratic bill, and not repeat it at leisure through the four years ahead.

WATCH ON WASTE: Like many private employers, Defense Department officials in St. Louis have discovered that automation doesn't always save money. They modernized their telephone system, eliminating human operations and letting employees dial their own long-distance calls directly. They predicted a saving of 15 percent on long-distance bills. Instead, the employees indulged in a long-distance gab fest. In the first six months, the toll-call bill shot up by 27 percent.

THE BIBLE

CAN YOU QUOTE IT?

Services for T.A. "Slick" Fraser, 65, of Midland will be at 2 p.m. Saturday in the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Fraser died Thursday in Midland. Born Dec. 2, 1914, in Fort Worth, Fraser moved to Midland when he was 12. He attended Midland public schools and the Texas School of Mines, a division of The University of Texas at El Paso. Later becoming an independent oil operator, he was a member of Petroleum Landmen Society and of the West Texas Geological Society. He was also a member of the First Christian Church.

Survivors include a son, Thomas A. Fraser of Fort Worth; two daughters, Carol Jansen of Gilmer, and Sylvia Francis of Fort Worth; and two grandchildren.

Bess K. Allday

Bess Kavanaugh Allday, 79, of Austin, mother of Martin L. Allday of Midland, died Thursday in Austin following a brief illness.

Private memorial services are scheduled for the family.

Mrs. Allday was born in Marlin June 16, 1901, and grew up in Waco. She moved to Austin after the death of her husband, Martin L. Allday Sr., in 1935.

Other survivors include a daughter, Mrs. Jack Devore of San Antonio and Angel Fire, N.M., and five grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be made to St. Nicholas' Episcopal Church Foundation, P.O. Box 5121 in Midland.

B.Y. Gonzales

LAMESA — Services for Baldo-mero Ybanez Gonzales, 71, of Lame-sa, were to be at 2 p.m. today at St. Margaret Mary's Catholic Church here with the Rev. Pat Hoffman, pas-tor, officiating.

Burial was to be in Lamesa Mem-orial Park directed by Branon Funeral Home.

Gonzales died Thursday morning in a Lamesa nursing home following a lengthy illness.

The Texas native had been a Lame-sa resident for 21 years. He was a Catholic.

Survivors include his cousins.

Jack Weaver

Services for Jack Weaver, 79, of rural Midland, were to be at 10 a.m. today in the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. J.B. Stewart officiating. Burial was to be in Union Cemetery Association of Meyersdale, Pa.

Weaver died Tuesday at his home following a lengthy illness.

Born June 14, 1901, in Wheeling, W. Va., Weaver moved to Midland 2 1/2 years ago from Kalkaske, Mich. He had lived there for a number of years. He was a retired salesman.

Survivors include three daughters, Jackie Steffer of Los Angeles, Calif., Shirley Christiansen of Farmington, N.M., and Pat Johnson of Ventura, Calif.; three grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Larry Scott Partain

ANDREWS — Graveside services for Larry Scott Partain, six-week-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Len Partain of Andrews, were to be at 2 p.m. today in Andrews Cemetery with Dwight Whitsett, minister of Andrews Church of Christ, officiating and directed by Singleton Funeral Home.

The infant died Wednesday night in a Lubbock hospital following an illness.

Other survivors include his grand-parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Dillard Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Partain, all of Andrews.

Louise Landrum

Services for Louise Landrum, 59, of 1305 W. Dakota Ave., were Thursday in the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Glenn Shoemaker of Calvary Baptist Church officiating. Burial was in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Landrum died Monday in a Midland hospital.

Pallbearers were Calvin Thompson, Cecil Thompson, Chester Dugan Jr., Michael Dugan, Charles King and Jackie Powers.

Pauline Audas

Pauline "Pod" Audas, 62, of rural Midland, died Wednesday in a Midland hospital following a brief illness.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Saturday in the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. George Ivy, pastor of the Church of God, officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers will be grandsons and nephews: Tracy Glover, Terry Glover and Frank Howard, all of Midland; Gene Mann of Beaver, Okla.; Mike Scarbrough of Hobbs, N.M.; and Gary Dillard of Albuquerque, N.M.

Pope criticizes energy problems

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II today attacked the manipulation of energy resources, "a universal possession" which God gave to man "whatever part of the world they come from." He deplored "excessive consumption" in one part of the world and urged more use of solar energy.

In an address to scientists who met at a Vatican-sponsored Conference on Energy and Humanity, the pope criticized "the financial, monetary, productive and commercial mechanisms, backed by various political pressures, which dominate the world's economy."

Speaking in French, the pope said: "Energy and the problems which it presents must not serve the selfish interest of particular groups which seek to increase their economic and political sphere of influence. Even more strongly, they (the groups) must not divide the people, put nations in a state of dependence in relation to others, increase the risks of war or of nuclear holocaust."

He spoke of "excessive consumption" of energy in one part of the world without mentioning any country or business group by name, and decried "the crisis" facing energy-producing nations.

He urged scientists to further study the possibilities of solar energy. "This must become one of their main preoccupations," he said, adding that power, derived from the wind, sea or geothermally should also be tapped in order to replace "natural resources on the way to extinction."

The pope touched on environmental and health aspects of energy production, recalling his experience as a chemical worker and his contacts with Polish coal miners in his native Poland.

"I could see for myself the damage caused to the beauty of nature by industrial installations which could have been located in other places or conceived in another manner."

"I have known by personal experience the suffering of the coal miners whose lungs are impregnated with dusts poisoning the mine galleries. I wish to hope that from now on in the name of the rights of man and for the improvement of the quality of life that new and efficient methods for the use of conventional energy sources will be devised, thus avoiding the danger to ecology, the workers and the population."

The pope said nuclear and other forms of energy must take into account "the rules required to eliminate immediate or distant perils threatening" those who live in areas around power plants.

Such plants must be protected against "damages" by promoting "ecological safeguards, protection of fauna and flora and avoidance of destruction of natural beauties which filled the heart with admiration and poetry," the pontiff said.

In another speech, delivered in French to members of the Justice and Peace Commission which oversees Vatican efforts in the area of human rights, the pope condemned the use of torture and the loss of human life in prolonged wars.

Southern Baptist head makes off-color comments about Jews

DALLAS (AP) — The president of the Southern Baptist Convention told members of his congregation, in remarks broadcast on an Oklahoma radio station, that Jews have "funny-looking noses" and he doesn't know why God chose the Jews.

The Rev. Bailey Smith, who in August said God does not hear the prayers of Jews, made the comments from the pulpit at the end of a Sept. 14 sermon on God's special people and special places.

Afterward, Smith said he was teasing, adding "I shouldn't have said it."

The comments angered a rabbi who heard the broadcast and obtained a copy of the tape from Smith's church, The First Baptist Church of Del City, Okla.

The Dallas Morning News on Thursday obtained a copy of the tape and the transcript made by the rabbi, who asked not to be identified.

"There are some people with whom God works more intimately than others," Smith said on the tapes. "Why, you say? I don't know. Why did he choose the Jews? I don't know why he chose the Jews."

"I think they got funny-looking noses, myself. I don't know why he chose the Jews. That's God's business. Amen."

Smith told the Morning News the statement was made in jest after someone had teased him about his bald spot and "a little Jewish boy" in the congregation said to him, "Don't let them tease you, Dr. Smith. Jews have funny noses."

"It wasn't part of my sermon. I was teasing as I talked to the people of my church," said Smith. "It was not a public meeting. Can't people tease any more at all?"

Disneyland park regulations upheld by California judge

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A regulation prohibiting people of the same sex from dancing together at Disneyland has been upheld by an Orange County Superior Court judge.

Andrew Exler, 19, and Shawn Elliott, 17, were thrown out of Disneyland on Sept. 13 after dancing together during the park's Date Night.

The two avowed homosexuals sued the park, seeking damages and an injunction to keep Disneyland from prohibiting dancing between people of the same sex.

But Judge John K. Trotter Jr. said Thursday the park did not violate the civil rights of the two teen-agers.

Trotter said that the actions of Disneyland security personnel were reasonable to protect the interests of other patrons.

Ronald Talmo, an attorney who argued for Exler and Elliott, said he would appeal the ruling.

According to court documents, Disneyland has a series of "modest" regulations designed to control incidents which might interfere with guests' enjoyment of the park.

The regulations prohibit necking and petting, smoking by people under the age of 18, alcoholic beverages or group activity that could be construed as possibly gang-related.

Dancing regulations state that "couples only are allowed on the dance floor," accompanied in parentheses by the phrase, "(male-female)."

Surrogate mother gives birth to boy in Louisville

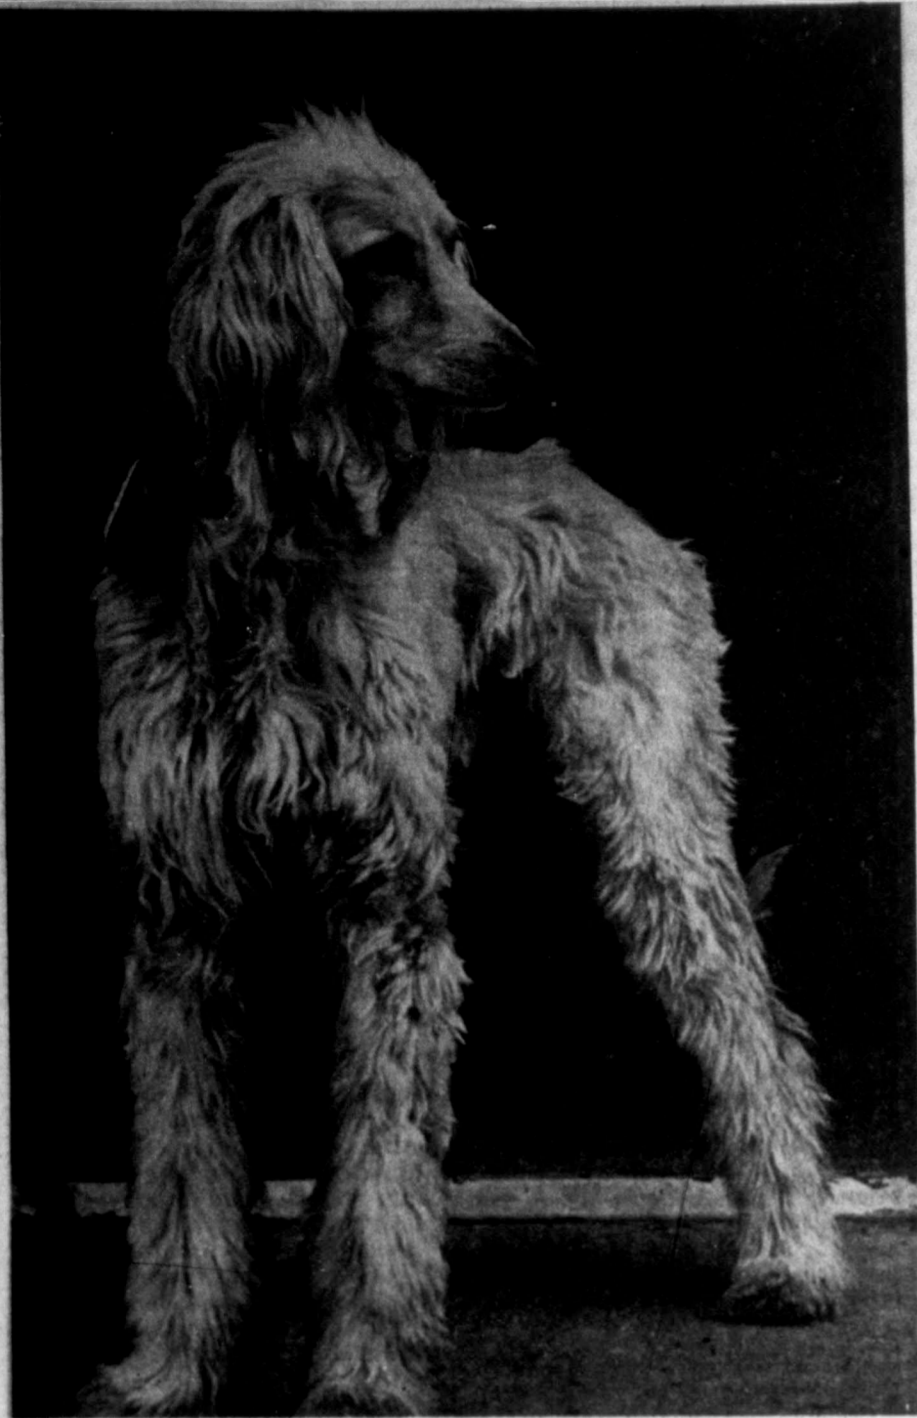

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — An Illinois woman reportedly has given birth to an 8-pound, 6-ounce boy and relinquished it to its father — a man she has never seen. The child was born Saturday night to a 37-year-old woman who was artificially inseminated with the man's sperm in a surrogate parent program, according to a television report. The baby will not return home with its mother, but instead remain in Louisville with his new parents. The birth was reported Thursday by WHAS-TV. Hospital officials told the station the birth was kept secret until a judge could approve parental rights. The woman is one of at least four to have been impregnated in a program administered by Surrogate Parenting Associates, Inc., an organization set up by Dr. Richard Levin, a Louisville specialist on infertility. The woman, who entered the hospital as Mrs. Elizabeth Kane but whose real name and hometown haven't been revealed, was flown to Louisville and gave birth to the boy at Audubon Hospital, according to the report.

Extensive TMI entry videotaped

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — The most extensive trip yet into the radioactive reactor containment building at Three Mile Island yielded a first-hand, color glimpse of the plant via videotape, officials said.

"It's a pretty successful tape. Everybody seems quite pleased with the way things went," plant spokesman Doug Bedell said Thursday after the fourth venture into the crippled plant.

"They certainly got a much better idea of the condition of the reactor. We have much better insight into where we go from here."

A team of six men draped in layers of protective clothing spent 90 minutes inside the building shooting the videotape footage and performing other tasks.

Two additional three-man teams also entered the domed cement building that houses the reactor, which was shut down after the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident, on March 28, 1979.

The 12-man operation was the largest since the accident. Previous journeys inside had involved two to five men. The plant operator is using the information to guide a projected seven-year, $1 billion cleanup of the plant.

The visits by the three teams ranged from 30 to 90 minutes. The first team monitored radiation, took still photographs, installed a television camera and tested it.

The second team, which included a nuclear engineer from the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission, was assigned the major task of videotaping the interior.

It also succeeded in moving a steel bridge used to refuel the reactor, freeing access to a ladder on the wall of a fuel transfer canal, plant officials said. The ladder will be used to get closer to the reactor vessel in future entries.

The third team planned construction of a staging area for future entries in an airlock chamber adjoining the building.

Plant officials said doses for each man ranged from 250 to 400 millirems, far below federal limits of 3,000 millirems for a three-month period.

Entry teams have steered clear of 700,000 gallons of radioactive water that flooded the containment building basement during the accident. Radiation detectors have found levels up to 45,000 millirems seven feet above the water surface.

Suit filed for test site workers

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A lawsuit seeking more than $50 million in damages from the federal government has been filed by former Secretary of Interior Stewart Udall on behalf of former Nevada Test Site workers who allegedly suffered or died from radiation-related cancers.

"Everywhere we have hurt foreigners with our bomb tests we have paid them off," Udall said

Thursday. "But when it comes to compensating our own citizens, the government claps down. I find this intolerable."

The suit filed Thursday in U.S. District Court asked $500,000 in damages for each of 11 former workers who now have cancer, the same amounts for the widows of another 64 former employees who have since died and $150,000 for each of the 97 children of the dead workers.

According to the suit, 50 of the test site workers were employed there between 1951 and 1962, when more than 80 above-ground nuclear blasts occurred.

The suit contends the men contracted cancer or leukemia as a result of the radiation they were exposed to by the above-ground tests.

It is the second such suit filed against the government by Udall, now a Phoenix, Ariz., resident.

Man fighting for solar rights

WAUKESHA, Wis. (AP) — Glenn Prah says President Carter's 1977 speech urging the nation to conserve fuel helped convince him to install an $18,000 solar heating system in his new home.

Now a Circuit Court judge has ruled there was no legal basis to prevent a neighbor from building a home that Prah says will throw a shadow onto the system, cutting its effectiveness.

In his ruling, Judge Max Raskin noted that Wisconsin law is silent on the issue of sunshine, though some other states, one of them being New Mexico, have adopted solar access laws.

Raskin held that Richard Maretti had followed all existing zoning and land regulations in Muskego and that there was no judicial basis for ordering him to alter his plans.

Prah, 33, an airlines pilot, filed the lawsuit after work began on the basement of Maretti's home.

Maretti said he had made concessions in the matter, shifting the home location somewhat.

But Prah contended the house, which would be taller than his home, would still shade his solar collectors in the winter when the system's efficiency is most important. He asked the court to order the home placed five feet further to the south.

"For the court to adjudge that Maretti must move his house five feet to the south would be a deprivation of his property without just compensation," Raskin said in his decision.

"I listened very intently to (Carter's) speech," said Prah, who in 1977 was about to start construction of a home in the Milwaukee suburb of Muskego. "That helped me decide to put in a solar system."

The system, with collectors covering the southern slope of Prah's roof, cost $18,000 to install and saved an estimated $600 in fuel costs last winter, Prah said.

The judge called on state lawmakers to set rules to encourage use of solar energy.

Prah pledged to work for passage of state and national legislation to protect those who install solar systems. A solar energy bill introduced in the state Legislature last session died when the session ended.

Mafia trial jury still deliberating

LOS ANGELES (AP) — While lawyers and defendants waited anxiously, jurors in the trial of five reputed Mafia figures reached verdicts on more charges and returned to court today to continue deliberations that have lasted more than a week.

The jurors earlier had returned some verdicts but reported they were deadlocked on others. On Thursday, they told U.S. District Judge Terry Hatter they were making some progress.

Hatter said he would question the seven-woman, five-man panel again on its progress if it did not reach the needed 20 separate verdicts by today, the eighth day of deliberations.

The judge also was to summon lawyers to the courtroom for a session aimed at answering a question from the jury on the charge of conspiracy, according to Hatter's clerk.

The five defendants, reputed to be leaders of the Los Angeles family of La Cosa Nostra, are charged with racketeering, extortion, obstruction of justice and conspiracy in a case stemming from the 1977 gangland slaying of Frank "the Bomp" Bompensiero, a Mafia figure who turned informer.

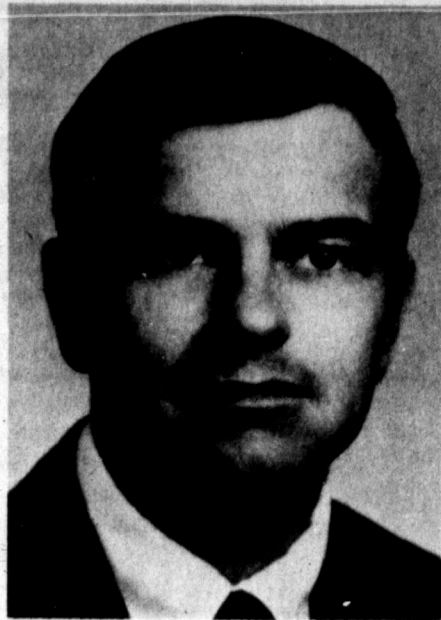

They are Dominic Philip Brooklier, 66; Samuel Orlando Sciortino, 62; Louis Tom Dragna, 59; Michael Rizzitello, 52; and Jack LoCicero, 68.

The judge called jurors into court Thursday and said: "The reason I called you here was to inquire if the foreperson whether you have been able to make any headway."

Foreman William Wasil replied, "Yes, we have."

"Would it benefit you to continue your deliberations at this time?" Hatter asked.

"Yes, it would," Wasil said.

Rep. Tom Craddick

Craddick elected to bank's board

State Rep. Tom Craddick has been elected to the board of directors of Commercial Bank & Trust Co., Robert D. Southerland, president of the bank, announced Thursday.

Craddick, representative of district 68 since 1968, is currently serving as sales representative for Mustang Mud, Inc., in addition to owning Craddick Properties.

A 1965 BBA graduate of Texas Tech University, Craddick received his MBA from that institution in 1966.

While serving as state representative, he has served on a number of committees. Currently, he is a member of the Natural Resources Task Force of Intergovernmental Relations Committee of the National Conference of State Legislatures. In addition, he is serving as chairman of the Committee on Natural Resources.

Craddick and his wife, Nadine, reside in Midland with their two children.

Saudi Arabia rushes to aid Kuwait after rocket attack

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Saudi Arabia rushed to support Kuwait after its oil-rich little neighbor blamed Iran for an air attack on a Kuwaiti border post. But a Kuwaiti newspaper said the rocket attack was "unintentional" and speculated that the Iranian pilot dropped his payload after being hit.

"Saudi Arabia will come to Kuwait's aid against any danger it is exposed to," said King Khalid, leader of the world's largest oil exporter, in a message Thursday to Kuwaiti ruler Sheik Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah.

Saudi Crown Prince Fahd telephoned the Kuwaiti ruler and assured him of "the importance Saudi Arabia attaches to the safety and territorial integrity of Kuwait," Kuwaiti sources said.

Three other Arab states on the Persian Gulf, Bahrain, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates, joined Saudi Arabia in expressing solidarity with Kuwait and concern that the 53-day-old Iran-Iraq war might spread down the Arabian peninsula. That would endanger the remaining flow of oil from the area to the non-communist world.

Kuwait said it sent Iran a formal protest over the incident Wednesday, in which two Iranian rockets exploded harmlessly near Kuwait's Al Abdali post on the border with Iraq.

There was speculation that the Iranian jet had been assigned to attack the Iraqi naval base and port at Umm Qasr, 12 miles from the Kuwaiti post. The base, on the embattled Shatt al-Arab waterway, was hit twice Wednesday by Iranian jets.

"Since the eruption of the Iran-Iraq war Kuwait has been well aware that being close to the battlefield meant something like yesterday's incident could happen at any time," the Kuwaiti newspaper Al Siyassah said, adding that the attack appeared to be "unintentional."

It reported that persons in the area saw an Iranian plane, believed to be a U.S.-made Phantom jet, crash near the border post, and military experts said the pilot probably dropped the rockets in an attempt to reduce his plane's weight after it was hit.

In reports from the battlefields Thursday, Iran claimed its forces pushed Iraqi troops back about four miles from the besieged oil refining city of Abadan, and both governments reported fighting on the bridge over the Karun River on the east side of the neighboring Iranian port city of Khorramshahr.

The Iraqis control most of Khorramshahr, but Iranian forces are dug in on the east side of the bridge and block the road to Abadan 10 miles to the southeast.

Iran said more than 300 Iraqi troops were killed in an Iranian attack that "silenced" Iraqi artillery shelling the provincial capital of Ahwaz, 75 miles north of Abadan. An Iraqi communique reported one Iranian soldier killed, the lowest figure claimed since the start of the war.

Iraq said it shot down four Iranian Phantoms, one at the southern end of the 300-mile front and three over northern Iraq. Iran said it downed an Iraqi jet fighter at Iran's main naval base at Bushehr, 150 miles southeast of Abadan.

Pars, Iran's official news agency, said it received a message from Iraqi rebels saying they killed 40 Iraqi soldiers in an attack on an ammunition dump in Baghdad, the Iraqi capital, and 137 Egyptian soldiers at the Iraqi port of Basra. But there was no confirmation of the report from any source, and Egypt has denied any of its forces are in Iraq.

More than half of Iraq's population are Shiite Moslems, the major faith in Iran.

Senate vote could kill court-ordered busing

By JAMES H. RUBIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration says efforts to end public school discrimination could be crippled by a conservative-led Senate vote to deny the Justice Department its last resort: seeking court-ordered busing.

But President Carter may find it difficult to veto the provision. Like one previously passed by the House, it is attached to a $9.57 billion appropriations bill to keep the Justice Department and several other federal agencies operating through the fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

Carter could not reject the amendment without vetoing the entire bill.

The proposal would not ban busing but would forbid any federal expenditure on efforts to require busing to achieve integration. Liberal Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., who led the provision's opponents, said the Justice Department would have to withdraw from any case in which busing is involved.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who offered the amendment with Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said it might give some federal judges second thoughts about busing.

Thursday's 42-38 Senate vote — 21 Democrats and 21 Republicans voted for it — came despite a plea from Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti that the measure is unconstitutional and would effectively hamstring government officials working on school desegregation cases.

Helms and Thurmond both argued that Ronald Reagan's landslide victory last week was a sign that Americans oppose forced busing to achieve racial balance.

During the debate on the bill, Helms asked: "How long are we going to allow federal bureaucrats in the Jus-Justice Department to torment the little children of America? The vast majority of Americans, black and white, are fed up to here seeing their children hauled past neighborhood schools, sometimes as far away as 15 miles."

Weicker acknowledged that busing may be unpopular but added that the Senate "is not supposed to be a body of polltakers."

"It's supposed to exercise leadership," he said. "I'm not speaking for busing. I'm speaking for individual rights, for equality of opportunity."

A final vote on the appropriations bill, including the amendment, is due Monday. Assuming approval then, the measure would go to a Senate-House conference committee to work out minor differences in the two versions.

Civiletti, in a letter to the Appropriations Committee chairman, Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., argued that the amendment's provisions could "unconstitutionally withhold from the executive branch any ability to ensure through the courts that federal funds are spent in a non-discriminatory manner."

As the law now stands, courts may order busing as a last resort to enhance racial balance. But Civiletti said that if the Senate action becomes law, even that use of busing would be eliminated.

"This is the very situation the courts have suggested raises serious constitutional doubts," Civiletti said.

He noted that Congress voted three years ago to prevent the government from withholding aid from school districts that refuse to bus to achieve racial balance. But that amendment did not prevent the Justice Department from filing suit against school districts that allegedly discriminate against minorities.

New Right worried by Reagan choices for transition team

By ROBERT PARRY

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Ronald Reagan's choice of mainstream Republicans for his transition team is setting off alarms from the New Right, whose leaders are worried over their apparent decline of influence.

"We don't understand why the conservatives have not been more prominent in the campaign and the early stages of the transition," said Richard Viguerie, a leading fund-raiser for conservative causes. "It sure looks strange."

Although New Right leaders continue to voice confidence that Reagan will live up to his conservative principles, they are clearly concerned about being shut out of the incoming Reagan administration.

"The early signs are that Governor Reagan will be pursuing rather liberal policies economically and a policy of detente in foreign affairs," said Howard Phillips, national director of the Conservative Caucus.

Reagan has turned heavily to former officials from the administrations of Presidents Gerald R. Ford and Richard M. Nixon in setting up his transition team. And that has raised suspicion among some conservatives that a Reagan administration might adopt policies similar to those pursued by his two Republican predecessors — policies the New Right considers too moderate.

The New Right, which advocates major tax cuts, sharp reductions in social spending and a massive military buildup, has been particularly critical that advisory positions have been given to former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, former Treasury Secretary George Shultz and Alan Greenspan, former chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers.

"We're concerned that the type of people who are setting policy in the budget area are concerned with merely slowing growth of government, instead of making real cuts," Phillips said in a telephone interview. "Treaties with the Soviet Union are not the way to protect American interests."

"If Ronald Reagan was to install himself as the second act of the Ford administration, I would be concerned," said Terry Dolan, director of the National Conservative Political Action Committee, which supported Reagan and spearheaded attacks against several liberal senators who lost re-election bids.

Paul Weyrich, another conservative leader and architect of the evangelical political movement known as the Moral Majority, said Reagan officials had been polite when the New Right offered suggestions about personnel. But they apparently are ignoring the advice, he said.

Asked what input he had in the initial stages of the Reagan transition, Weyrich answered: "None."

Reagan transition officials insist it would be a mistake to interpret too much from the selection of transition personnel.

Moderates gaining in Caribbean

By MARC D. CHARNEY
Associated Press Writer

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Prime Minister Michael Manley's defeat in the Jamaican election was the latest in a string of political victories for moderates that have slowed the spread of Cuban President Fidel Castro's influence in the Caribbean.

One reason for the swing to moderate and conservative politicians, West Indians say, is a growing realization that the West, with its financial resources, its markets and its tourists, offers perhaps the only practical key to solving the Caribbean's paralyzing economic problems.

Manley's open friendship with Castro frightened off foreign and local investors, and he could not meet the International Monetary Fund's terms for continued loans. Production dropped, unemployment soared, and professionals left the country. The crisis forced the socialist prime minister to call early elections on Oct. 30.

Edward Seaga won the election by linking Manley to Castro's communism and blaming him for Jamaica's economic crisis. That left Cuba with only one sure friend in the Caribbean — Grenada, a 133-square-mile island run by a revolutionary government that seized power in a 1979 coup.

After the coup, Grenada's new government suspended all elections, shut down the independent press and began building up the tiny army. Some West Indians say that hurt leftists running for office in St. Vincent and Dominica.

An increase in Western aid in the past year was another factor in the shift away from the left.

But even the most Western-oriented leaders stress that if West Indian voters have turned away from leftist politicians, they don't want to join in a power struggle between the United States and the Soviet Union or its Cuban ally.

Government leaders throughout the area speak of themselves as brothers within the Caribbean and members of the Third World, not as ideological allies of the West. Their small nations are black, poor and jealous of their new independence. There is a limit to how much any of them will identify with either side in a cold war between white nations that are large, powerful and rich.

Seaga declared that Jamaica is "neither a communist nor a capitalist country" but a country with economic problems that have to be solved.

Some of the moderates are asking privately if Ronald Reagan's administration will put pressure on them to choose sides and if American aid will continue if they don't.

Prime Minister Tom Adams of Barbados, one of the area's most stable and Western-oriented democracies, said in a radio interview that he saw no negative implications for the area in Reagan's election. But he warned against a cutback in aid.

"The most potent weapon" for keeping the area in "the American camp" would be to create a standard of living equal to that in the United States, he said.

Adams said he recently turned down an offer from the Carter administration of $5 million in military assistance because his country has other needs, for example, money to replace slum housing with "a comfortable bungalow with water and a lavatory."

"Instead of offering Barbados something for which it never asked," he said, "they can offer the money for the building of houses. I don't want $5 million in guns."

GLENBROOK, Nev. (AP) — Crews were searching again today for the pilot of a rocket-powered boat that disintegrated before hundreds of horrified spectators when it hit a fickle Lake Tahoe current at around 300 mph.

Sheriff's Sgt. Doug Struthers said Lee Taylor, who was attempting to break the world water speed record, was "presumed dead" after the accident, which occurred as his mother, wife and daughter looked on.

Searchers recovered an unopened drag parachute, Taylor's helmet and several sections of the boat, but were unable in the five-hour hunt Thursday to recover the cockpit section, which they presumed contained Taylor's body.

Denver Dickerson, Tahoe project director for the attempt, said it appeared that the boat — powered by a 18,000-horsepower rocket designed for aircraft and missiles and fueled by 1,000 pounds of hydrogen peroxide — hit a "black line" of shifting currents that caught a wing-like stabilizer at the rear.

He said a black line creates a surface disturbance similar to a bump, and the line was where Taylor started to shut off his engine.

The boat "just blew apart," Dickerson said. "He never had a chance to say 'boo,'" crew member Luke Fratello said.

The accident occurred after the 45-year-old Taylor, of Bellflower, Calif., had made one of two required runs through the one-kilometer speed trap at well below the record of 317.6 miles per hour held by Australian Ken Warby.

Doug Freeman of Taylor's organization, said the official speed clocked on the first run was 289.835 mph, but Fratello said the boat peaked around 350 mph before slowing.

A crowd estimated at nearly 1,000 greeted the pilot with cheers as he raced through the speed trap. The shouts turned to screams when the boat flew apart in 200 feet of water about one-half mile off the shore.

Taylor had tested the boat this summer on Walker Lake southeast of Reno and reached unofficial speeds of 333 mph.

"It's euphoric" traveling at that speed, he said then. "It's sort of like riding the tip of an arrow just shot from a bow."

He said he hoped to hit 350 mph in Thursday's attempt.

"My goal is to bring the world's water speed record back to the United States in 1980," Taylor said.

Warby broke Taylor's previous record, held for 11 years, in June 1978. Both records were set in jet boats. Thursday's was the first attempt in a rocket-powered craft.

Taylor, who survived a 1964 jet boat crash on Lake Havasu, tested the 40-foot "U.S. Discovery II" Wednesday, but said choppy waves damaged the aluminum hull of the $2.5 million craft, forcing postponement of an official run.

The course was an 11-mile stretch along the Nevada shoreline on the east side of the lake, with most of the distance used for acceleration and slowing down.

Child fights parent's abuse with fire

ASHTON, Mich. (AP) — Four children who were in school when a fire killed their parents and three siblings have reported they were the victims of child abuse — and one of them has confessed to setting the fire, police say.

It may not have been the first time the children fought back with fire, police say.

The young survivors told police they had been abused by their parents, and one of them had been abused Monday morning before the fire.

None of the surviving children was identified by name, age or sex.

"I think they were lashing out at their parents," said Osceola County Undersheriff Harry Browne. "But I also think they never stopped to give a thought that the outcome would be what it was."

He announced Thursday that the fatal blaze in a rural house near here on Monday was the work of a child who confessed to authorities Tuesday.

The child lit one fire atop a dresser on one side of a bedroom and another on the bottom of a set of bunkbeds, blocking the only escape route, Browne said.

The child then left for school Monday morning with three brothers and sisters, he said. About 25 minutes later, the house was in flames.

The children had set other, unreported fires in other dwellings where the family had lived, but someone in the family had always managed to extinguish them, Browne said.

A series of suspicious blazes followed the family as they moved from house to house, and there were three fires at their house near the village of Luther, authorities said.

The bodies of Linda Ruppert, 29, and her ex-husband Robert Wilder, 36, were found near a basement window inside the house, in a remote western section of the state, some 50 miles east of Lake Michigan. The bodies of her children Timothy, 3; Christopher, 2; and Ruth Ann, 5 months, were found in their beds.

The coroner said smoke inhalation caused the deaths.

The survivors were children of Wilder and Mrs. Ruppert. The father of the dead children was Robert Ruppert Jr., who was divorced two years ago and reportedly moved to Seattle.

Brown says Defense needs funds

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown has urged the Senate to make major changes quickly in a House-passed military money bill to avoid a "serious and debilitating impact" on the Pentagon's ability to carry out its mission.

In a 20-page letter to the Senate Armed Services defense appropriations subcommittee, Brown urged more than two dozen changes in the bill, which was passed by the House in September.

The effect would be a $1 billion increase, to $158.2 billion, for fiscal year 1981, which started Oct. 1 and overlaps the Carter and Reagan administrations.

Brown said final congressional action on the defense bill is imperative in the next four or five weeks because "passing this chore to the new Congress and administration would be unfair and extremely time-consuming."

The outgoing defense secretary asked the Senate to take back about $2.1 billion in items it added to the Carter administration's program, including about $1 billion in additional military warplanes such as the F-14, F-15 and F-18 fighters.

At the same time, Brown sought restoration of about $3.1 billion in programs cut by the House, including about $1.6 billion for research and development.

Any additional delay in wrapping up action on the bill in the waning weeks of the Carter administration and Congress "will introduce a ... serious instability and uncertainty" in the Pentagon's operations, Brown said, adding that this "will have far-reaching effects on its field commanders, program managers, contractors and subcontractors."

Brown's letter, sent to Capitol Hill four days after President Carter's defeat by Republican Ronald Reagan, was made public by defense officials while Brown was in Brussels attending a NATO meeting.

Brown said he was particularly disturbed by the deep cuts in research spending, including a $120 million reduction in the MX mobile missile program, which he said would force a slippage in the schedule for flight testing.

He told Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., the subcommittee chairman, that the overall research reductions are "inconsistent with the need for the U.S. to maintain a general technological advantage over the Soviet Union as a counter to Warsaw Pact numerical advantages."

Brown also objected to House action increasing from four to six the number of new frigates to be funded in fiscal 1981, saying this "is not a prudent use of limited funds."

On the other hand, he said, "I most strongly oppose" a $207 million reduction in the Pentagon's request for a new type of cargo ship which would be "prepositioned" in remote areas, loaded with military equipment for Army or Marine forces deployed in an emergency such as a Persian Gulf war.

Brown also balked at another House cut in a new air transport program which also is designed to enhance American ability to project ground combat power over long distances.

Noting that the House had reduced a $35 million research proposal for the new CX transport plane by $15 million, Brown said that this would "slow full-scale development, introduce inefficiencies ... and increase costs."

Voyager 1 now far beyond Saturn

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — After radioing a legacy of photographs and data that tells more about Saturn than earthlings had learned "in the entire span of human history," Voyager 1 today was already more than 1 1/2 million miles beyond the ringed planet.

The robot spacecraft has one last duty as it speeds into the unknown: to send radio signals as long as possible. Scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory here will monitor them in hopes of finding the end of the solar wind — a stream of electrically charged particles emitted by the sun.

That point marks the end of the sun's influence, where the spaceship truly begins its endless voyage among the stars.

The week of photographs taken as Voyager reached the climax of its 38-month, 1.24 billion-mile journey by soaring near Saturn's moons, rings and swirling cloudtops will mean years analysis and interpretation for scientists.

"We have learned more about Saturn in the past week than in the entire span of human history," Bradford Smith, head of Voyager's camera team, said Thursday.

"Saturn has always been special to me. It was always the mysterious one that was just a little bit too far out to really see. It's an object about which we knew almost nothing and now that we're finally seeing what's really out there, it's all unexpected," he said.

But for the moment, "It's almost impossible to concentrate on (one) picture for more than a few seconds without being distracted by the next," Smith said.

Here are some of the revelations that Voyager 1 radioed to Earth:

—Saturn's famous rings are far more numerous than previously thought, incredibly complex and, for the moment, quite inexplicable. They are filled with hundreds of concentric ringlets, at least two out-of-round ringlets and three others that appear braided "in some sort of strange fashion that we don't understand," Smith said.

—Mystifying dark spokes or fingers reach across the brightest part of the rings. Voyager confirmed a dim and long-disputed D-ring stretching about 11,000 miles from Saturn's cloudtops to the edge of the other five major rings. A new ring, "very thin ... very inconspicuous" also was discovered beyond the others, Smith said.

—Three new moons were discovered and close-ups of the planet's smaller moons show they consist of dirty ice. Some are pockmarked by meteoritic craters collected over the ens, but others are smoother and apparently younger.

—Ribbons, ovals and halos are driven by winds within the outwardly bland yellow, tan and brown bands of Saturn's churning surface of clouds.

—The dense, reddish atmosphere of Titan, largest of Saturn's 15 known moons, may be filled with nitrogen, not methane, which had been considered its major component.

Scientists speculate that great atmospheric pressure and temperatures some 300 degrees below zero would give Titan "nitrogen clouds and underneath there could be puddles, pools, swamps or oceans (of liquid nitrogen) on the surface," said scientist Andy Ingersoll.

This is the Saturn moon Dione taken by Voyager 1 on Nov. 12, from a distance of 149,000 miles. Bright radiating patterns probably represent debris rays thrown out of impact craters. Other bright areas may be topographic ridges and valleys. (AP Laserphoto)

Haiti says it won't punish escapees

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The Haitian government says it will not punish the more than 100 Haitians who tried to escape to the United States but were shipwrecked in the Bahamas. However, it indicated it may take action against the Haitian captain who organized the journey.

Foreign Minister Georges Salomon told The Associated Press his government will take no action against the passengers, who are expected to return home Saturday aboard a Bahamian vessel, but "will probably ask the people who was the captain."

He said the captain "took considerable risk with the lives" of his passengers and added his government is drafting a law "to be passed in the next few days or weeks" to punish those who involved in the traffic of Haitian refugees with fines and prison sentences of up to three years.

A diplomatic source said, "There's a lot of ill feeling between the two countries," and that the stranding of the refugees "came at a very low point in their (Bahamians) relations with the Haitians."

The source said the boat used, the Lady Moore, had been used last July to transport Haitian refugees back to Haiti at a cost to Haiti of $20,000, which the Haitians considered "exorbitant." This time, the Haitians are believed to be paying $12,500.

The source said the two countries bickered over the price and a 10-year-old informal agreement under which no more than 400 Haitians a month could be sent back to Haiti from the Bahamas. Haitian officials said the verbal agreement was reached when "the Bahamians needed the labor."

Bahamian police used tear gas and clubs Wednesday to herd the 102 Haitians off the small deserted Bahamian island of Cayo Lobos, 20 miles north of Cuba, and onto the ship for Haiti. The refugees, who claimed they would be punished if forced to return home, had been trying to reach Florida.

Some Haitian refugees have claimed in the past they were political refugees fleeing authoritarian rule in their Caribbean homeland. But most are believed to be economic refugees, fleeing the poorest nation in the Western Hemisphere. Haiti has never insisted on their return.

The refugees remained huddled around a decrepit lighthouse on Cayo Lobos for more than a month, subsisting on meager supplies dropped by the U.S. Coast Guard. Meanwhile, the Bahamas and Haiti argued over their fate. Both countries were told of the stranded refugees immediately after the Coast Guard spotted them Oct. 9.

There are about 20,000 undocumented Haitians in the Bahamas, most of them working as unskilled laborers and household domestics — jobs most Bahamians refused to take. But unemployment in the Bahamas is now about 25 percent, and the government, under pressure from its people, is threatening to deport all Haitians from the Bahamas early next year.

Haiti wants the Bahamas to grant legal residency to Haitians living in the Bahamas for more than a year.

California farmland could disappear

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Farmland in nine San Francisco Bay area counties, where food production equals the agricultural output of 13 states, could disappear in 40 years due to urban sprawl, a study says.

The report, released Thursday by the non-profit People for Open Space, said the 2 million acres of farmland contributes $2 billion to the Bay area's economy each year.

But a third of the area's farm acreage has disappeared in the last three decades and it is decreasing at a rate of 19,000 acres a year, according to the report, which the group says is one of the first such studies at a metropolitan area.

A recent federal study said the United States is losing 3 million acres of agricultural land annually, according to the report. The land now under cultivation is also producing less as it is drained of nutrients, officials say.

Protection of the farmland does not mean that the Bay area's critical housing needs cannot be met, according to Allan Jacobs, president of People for Open Space and head of the city planning department at the University of California at Berkeley.

Jacobs said the Bay area has ample land for housing without developing farmland.

Regional farms and ranches now produce $750 million worth of food a year.

Researcher says interferon not 'the cure' people hope for WASHINGTON (AP) — Interferon may prove to be a major weapon against cancer, but the anti-viral protein is not "the cure" people hope for, says a prominent researcher.

Dr. William E. Stewart, chairman of the first annual International Congress for Interferon Research, said Tuesday that the public has been oversold on interferon.

"There isn't any simplistic cure for cancer," said Stewart, of the Sloan-Kettering Institute for Cancer Research in New York City.

"Interferon is not going to live up to all the expectations," he said in an interview. "Interferon will be important, but it will be supplemental to present therapies, although possibly replacing some."

Stewart noted, however, that interferon research has benefited from the public interest in a quick cure for cancer. Many researchers now are looking at the body proteins and have made significant advances in just a couple of years, he said.

"The progress has been breathtaking," Stewart said.

In just the last year, for example, scientists have been able to decipher the arrangement of amino acids that make up several different types of interferon proteins, he said.

This information is essential if researchers are to learn how to synthesize the substances and to find their active components.

Interferon is a broad term used to describe the naturally occurring proteins. No one is sure how many different kinds of interferon are in the body, but the proteins found in different types of cells have different properties.

Scientists recently established three general categories — alpha, beta and gamma — in which to put interferons according to similarities.

The scientific interest in interferons goes far beyond its potential against cancer, Stewart said.

Some of the few substances known to act against viruses, they can inhibit cell growth. There also is evidence they can muster the body's immune system to fight disease, he said.

Although these properties inspire interest in the therapeutic potential of interferon, results so far have been mixed.

Researchers at the meeting reported some response in patients given interferon for varying cancers as well as viral diseases, such as hepatitis. But the results were mixed and in no case overwhelming.

For example, American breast cancer studies show that only a third of the women with the disease got a "partial response" with interferon treatment. Better results were noted, however, in some European studies.

Dr. Thomas C. Merigan of Stanford University reported that in pilot tests with victims of hepatitis-B, alpha interferon eradicated the disease in only 25 percent of the cases. However, when combined with another antiviral agent called ARA-A, the treatment worked in 44 percent of the cases.

Merigan said the results were promising enough to go ahead with larger-scale controlled tests.

Stewart said the recent promise of getting larger quantities of purer interferon should mean many more clinical tests to find out what interferon can, and cannot, do.

Olives are more than decorations

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

For years I regarded the olive as little more than an adornment for a martini. Then I visited Italy.

I still remember the big, tangy, green olives sold in Naples and the pungent, black ones popular on the Island of Sicily.

The Italians did all sorts of wonderful things with olives that I had never heard of. They made an olive stuffing for chicken, used them in meat loaf and casseroles, and served a delicious soup in which black olives were the prime ingredient.

The versatile fruit was also made into a condiment or salad and chopped with soft cheese to form a spread.

DEAR ABBY

Affair to be forgotten, not remembered

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You always advise people who know that a friend's spouse is having an affair NOT to tell the unsuspecting wife or husband.

I just found out that my husband has been having an affair for six years, and I am now in the process of getting a divorce. He surely must have been seen by some of our friends. Or they certainly must have heard about it. Had I known about this earlier I might have been able to save my marriage, but how can you fight back when you don't even know there is a problem?

You don't ignore a fire in the hope that it will burn itself out. To stop it, you've got to throw water on it.

I think your policy of keeping quiet is wrong, Abby. Please reconsider.—TOO LATE IN CLEVELAND

DEAR TOO LATE: I would never recommend informing a friend that his or her spouse is having an affair.

In the first place, it may not be true. But if were, the spouse possibly already knows but is trying to put up a good front in hopes that the fire will burn itself out. (Some do.) However, each case is different. Generalizations are useless—including this one—but I still wouldn't make it my business to inform.

DEAR ABBY: When I was 15, I gave birth to a baby girl out of wedlock. She's a beautiful child, and I know I did the right thing by keeping her.

Now, three years later, I am getting married to a wonderful guy who loves me and thinks of my daughter as his own.

My problem? My father says that a girl who has "made a mistake" doesn't deserve any kind of wedding—she just goes off to a judge and gets married without any celebration, publicity or parties.

I say that the past should be forgotten and that because this is really my first marriage I'm entitled to be married by a minister in a church with a few flowers. Abby, I don't want a big, expensive wedding. All I want is a small wedding with my friends and family present. And I wouldn't wear white. And most of all I want my dad to give me away.

My mother is on my side, but Dad is boss, and he is stubborn. I told him I was going to write to Dear Abby to settle this, and he agreed to go along with your decision. So what do you say?—GETTING MARRIED

DEAR GETTING: I hope your father will enjoy walking you down the aisle in a lovely little church wedding, because that's what I think he should do. Good luck, and may all God's blessings be yours.

DEAR ABBY: A Hawaiian complained that a lot of people didn't know that in 1959 Hawaii was admitted to the United States of America as the 50th state. Instead they considered Hawaii a "foreign country."

Well, hear this: One of the oil-rich countries in the Middle East got mad at the U.S. and decided to punish us by cutting off shipments of oil. However, the country continued to ship oil to Hawaii because it didn't know that Hawaii was part of the U.S.A.!

Then some idiot in the State Department had to go tell the country that Hawaii was part of the U.S.A., and that put an end to the oil shipments to Hawaii.—TRUE STORY FROM HAWAII.

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 plus a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to ABBY, Letters Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.)

Wine gift is popular

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Rod Overhouse, clad in a decrepit raincoat and tilted baseball cap, staggers into a fancy restaurant, clutching a bottle of cheap wine wrapped in a brown paper bag.

He heads for a party, accosts the surprised couple celebrating their 40th anniversary, offers best wishes and the wine, and staggers out.

Overhouse is an entrepreneur, the holder of a Wino-O-Gram franchise dreamed up by a California couple who spurned careers as an insurance salesman and computer programmer to give people "a very special celebrity treatment."

For $20 to $25, Wino-O-Gram will deliver a bottle of wine and a message. The delivery can either be by a "wino" bearing cheap wine or by a tuxedo-clad gentleman carrying champagne or a good wine.

It's a drinkable version of the many unorthodox greeting services that have sprung up in recent years as people have sought unusual ways to send congratulations, birthday wishes or romantic messages.

German beauty new Miss World

LONDON (AP) — Gabriella Brum, 18, of West Germany began her reign as Miss World today by fending off questions from reporters about her 52-year-old boyfriend, a film cameraman in Los Angeles, who she said was "not too pleased" about her victory.

Britain's domestic news agency, the Press Association, quoted Miss Brum as saying after her win Thursday night that cameraman Benno Belenbaum was the man she had been "living with for the last six months" in California, where she has been working as a model. Her mother lives in West Berlin.

During the traditional morning-after champagne breakfast with the Lord Mayor of London, Sir Ronald Gardner-Thorpe, Miss Brum said she called Belenbaum to tell him of her victory, adding, "I think he did not expect it, just like I did not expect it."

Miss Brum, blonde, blue-eyed and tallest in the contest at 5 feet 11 inches, won over 66 other contestants. Promoters said she was the first Miss World chosen on the basis of characteristics other than beauty.

Reacting to criticism that the 30-year-old contest was nothing but a "cattle market," the organizers this year said the contestants would be judged on personality and intelligence as well as looks, and the usual bust-waist-hips measurements were not given to the judges or the press.

But Miss Brum told reporters she thought she won "more because of my beauty."

Miss Guam, Kimberly Santos, 19, a travel consultant representing the U.S.-owned South Pacific island, was second, and 17-year-old Miss France, student Patricia Barzyk, was third.

Miss Israel, Anat Zimmerman, finished fourth; Miss Britain, Kim Ashfield, was fifth; Miss United States, 17-year-old receptionist Brooke Alexander from Kailua, Hawaii, was sixth among the seven finalists, and New Zealander Vicki Lee Hemi was seventh.

Just before the start of the contest, a group of feminist students confronted late arrivals outside the Royal Albert Hall.

"We are not trying to get at the contestants," one said. "We feel the men are using them and the whole contest is sexist."

Crowned by outgoing queen Gina Swainson of Bermuda, the new Miss World got a cash prize of $12,050 and a $36,150 contract for 12 months of traveling commercial and promotion work.

A capacity audience of 6,000 was in the hall, and the worldwide television audience was estimated at 400 million.

There were no contestants from Soviet Bloc countries, but that may change next year. Because of the new emphasis on personality and intelligence, the Soviets are warming to the idea of sending an entrant, said Moscow journalist Vladimir Simonov of the influential Literary Gazette.

Soviets test new sub-launched missile

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Navy says the Soviets are testing a new submarine-launched missile that could strike deeper than anything in the American sub fleet.

It at least may have greater range, better accuracy and more power than any of the current Soviet submarine-launched missiles, which are just being matched by the U.S. Navy, officials said.

The Navy says, without elaboration, that the Soviets may be experiencing difficulties in their flight test program. But officials indicate they expect the Soviets to overcome those problems and eventually deploy the new missile, with a probable range greater than 4,500 miles, in tubes aboard their giant Typhoon submarines.

The U.S. Trident missile has a range of about 4,500 miles. That is roughly equivalent to the best the Soviets now have in service, the SSN-

18. Giving an unusual amount of detail on Soviet missile developments, the Navy said the first Typhoon sub was launched in September at a northern Russian shipyard and that the vessel is the first of a new class of "extremely large" undersea craft representing a new design.

"It is estimated it closely approximates or may even be larger in size and weapons fit than the U.S. Navy's new Ohio-class submarines, which have a submerged displacement of about 18,000 tons," the Navy said in response to questions.

"It is believed that the Typhoon will be capable of carrying at least 20 advanced-design submarine-launched ballistic missiles," the Navy said.

Each of the United States' Ohio-class subs will carry 24 Trident missiles.

According to naval estimates, the first ship of the Typhoon class could begin sea trials next spring, which would be about the time that the U.S. Navy expects to accept delivery of its first Ohio-class submarine, which will be equipped with Trident missiles.

The Soviets' SSN-18, which can hurl three warheads each at widely separated targets, went into service two years ago.

The Typhoon sub is the third new class of submerged war vessel to appear in the Soviet navy in less than a year.

Last spring, the Russians launched a new type of cruise-missile sub, called the Oscar class, from the same shipyard that gave birth to the Typhoon.

This cruise-missile vessel, too, is huge, and some naval analysts say it might be able to launch saturation attacks on U.S. Navy carriers and other warships.

Last December, U.S. intelligence sources reported that the Soviet Union had begun a new nuclear-powered attack submarine that is rated faster and deeper-diving than the most advanced American sub.

This new Russian attack submarine is called Alpha. It is built of titanium, which reduces its vulnerability to certain types of detection by magnetic means. One Navy source has estimated that an Alpha-class sub can travel at speeds greater than 40 knots, which would make it faster than the most modern U.S. attack subs of the Los Angeles class.

Soviets rebut criticism from Allies

MADRID, Spain (AP) — The Soviet Union today sharply attacked the United States and its NATO allies for criticizing the Kremlin's military intervention in Afghanistan and its human rights policy.

"The fissure in international relations lies not in Afghanistan but in the United States' and NATO's stepping up of the arms race two years ago," Deputy Soviet Foreign Minister Leonid Ilyichev told the 35-nation conference on human rights and detente.

"Certain forces would like to transform the Madrid meeting into a propaganda forum ... A verbal bullfight," Ilyichev said.

"What is the Madrid meeting to become? Is it to be a milestone in the direction of peace, or a step back toward the Cold War?"

Speaking in Russian, Ilyichev denied the Soviet Union had violated the human rights provisions of the 1975 Helsinki agreement and said he had "strong feelings of indignation and bafflement" over charges Thursday by U.S. chief delegate Griffin B. Bell that Moscow was guilty of "brutal repression" of its political dissidents.

He called Bell's accusations "a clear-cut violation (of the Helsinki agreements) and interference in the internal affairs of the Soviet Union ..."

Bell criticized the Kremlin's treatment of political dissidents, including Nobel Peace Prize winner Andrei Sakharov, who was banished to the closed Soviet city of Gorky last January.

Bell also criticized the Kremlin's jamming of Western radio broadcasts and its restrictions on the emigration of Soviet Jews.

Referring to the intervention in Afghanistan last December by an estimated 85,000 Soviet troops, the former Carter administration attorney general said, "The Soviet invasion cast a dark shadow over East-West relations, which no meeting, no pronouncement, nothing in fact but the total withdrawal of Soviet troops, can dispell."

Ilyichev said the Soviet Union "will not accept the casting of aspersions on this (Afghanistan), no matter where they come from," and he warned the West against "interfering in the internal affairs of Afghanistan."

The Soviet delegate stressed detente and disarmament as the chief themes for the Madrid conference and said the Soviet Union was ready to act "with measures to relieve military tensions that would lead to peace."

"We are ready to set in motion a process of military detente in Europe," he said without elaboration.

The Soviet delegate also held out an offer for a program for the reunification of families.

"We are prepared to consider in a business-like way the problems of reunification of families, marriages of citizens of different states, and other cooperation," he said, again without elaboration.

He spoke after the United States and its allies in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization spent the first two days of the conference criticizing the Soviet Union.

The future of the conference, convened to review compliance with the 1975 Helsinki agreement on European security and cooperation, remained in doubt as neutral and non-aligned nations tried to mediate between the East and West blocs.

Abscam defense to cross-examine agent

NEW YORK (AP) — Defense lawyers in the bribery-conspiracy trial of two congressmen were going to court today to cross-examine a key Abscam operative who offered big payoffs for favors for a fictitious Arab sheik.

Reps. Frank Thompson Jr., D-N.J., and John M. Murphy, D-N.Y., both defeated in the recent election, are accused of sharing in $100,000 in bribes and conspiring to arrange business deals for their benefit in return for helping the sheik.

The undercover FBI agent, Anthony Amoroso, ended his testimony for the prosecution Thursday.

Jurors in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn on Thursday watched videotapes of Amoroso failing to get a Pennsylvania congressman to accept $50,000 in bribe money.

In the first tape, Amoroso waved a wad of bills at Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., who refused to take the money. Murtha said he would rather the sheik invest it in his congressional district first.

Amoroso explained that the sheik would gladly invest in his district but that he was still willing to pay the $50,000.

"I'm not interested, I'm sorry," Murtha said. "At this point, you know, we do business for a while, maybe I'll be interested, maybe I won't."

Murtha, an unindicted co-conspirator, is expected to testify against Murphy and Thompson. He told Amoroso that he understood Thompson and Murphy were expecting some cash in return for having brought him into the picture.

A nother tape showed co-defendant Howard Criden, indicted four times on Abscam charges and convicted once, being confronted by FBI agents in a Kennedy Airport hotel while waiting to meet an Arab sheik.

He had been summoned by Amoroso and Mel Weinberg, who posed throughout the two-year undercover operation as representatives of non-existent Arab sheiks.

When Weinberg left the room to bring in the sheik, Criden asked Amoroso, whom he knew as Tony De Vito, "How do you address him?"

"Sheik," Amoroso replied. He paused a few seconds then said, "Howard, my name is Tony Amoroso."

Criden looked puzzled and said, "Okay." Amoroso pulled out his identification and said, "Okay? Just so you know, okay, an FBI agent."

Then FBI agents John Good and Bill Quinn entered the room. "How are you, Howard?" asked Good.

Prince Charles celebrates his 32nd birthday today

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles celebrated his 32nd birthday today amid newspaper speculation that he has chosen 19-year-old Lady Diana Spencer, a distant relative of the Churchills, to be his wife.

Some papers predicted the engagement would be announced today. Others suggested it would be delayed until spring.

The heir to the British throne planned a small, private birthday party tonight at Highgrove, the $2.4-million estate he bought in Gloucestershire three months ago. Lady Diana is certain to be there.

The latest front-runner in the royal matrimonial sweepstakes is the youngest of four children of the 8th Earl of Spencer. Her father, like the Churchills, is a descendant of the first Duke of Marlborough and is the owner of vast landholdings. Her parents are divorced, and her mother has remarried.

Dubbed Lady Di and Dishy Diana by the press, she is slim and pretty, with short blond hair, teaches kindergarten at a private day school in London's Pimlico district, and is reported to be shy, unsophisticated and fond of outdoor activities.

She also gives reporters the brush-off, which gossip columnists say impresses the royal family favorably. On Wednesday, when she returned home from shopping with a package, she was asked if it contained a birthday present for Charles. She smiled and said nothing.

Later she went out again, told reporters who approached her, "I am merely out for a walk," and would say nothing else.

The prince, meanwhile, was visiting the University of Wales, where someone asked him: "When are you going to tell us the good news, Your Royal Highness?"

"I won't be saying anything," he replied. "You will have to wait and see."

Diana's religion is also in her favor. She is an Anglican, a member of the Church of England, which Charles will head when he succeeds his mother, Queen Elizabeth II. A 279-year-old law bars anyone married to a Catholic from succeeding to the throne, and rumors last summer that he was going to marry a Roman Catholic princess from Luxembourg touched off heated debate in the press and Parliament.

Charles has been linked romantically with a host of girls. Among them in the last three years have been the Luxembourg princess, Marie Astrid, who Buckingham Palace said he hardly knew; Princess Nora of Liechtenstein, socialites Anna Wallace and Davina Sheffield; Lady Jane Wellestley, the daughter of the Duke of Wellington; Lady Amanda Knatchbull, his second cousin, and Angelika Lazensky, a Czech countess.

Polish government avoids showdown with labor union

By ROBERT H. REID

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Polish government has avoided a showdown with the country's biggest independent labor union, but Poland still faces the bleak prospect of food and fuel shortages, declining economic growth and local labor disputes.

Premier Jozef Pinski estimated in a recent speech that it would take at least two or three years to rebuild the economy after years of mismanagement and months of labor unrest. "We must all be aware that we are faced with a difficult period of time," he said.

Some Western observers believe the potential for new and potentially devastating social and labor unrest will remain until the economy is restored.

Settlement of the controversy over the charter of Solidarity, the country's biggest new independent union, apparently has ended the threat of widespread strikes for the time being. Solidarity leader Lech Walesa called off plans for nationwide selective strikes after the Supreme Court ruled the union's charter need not include a clause affirming the leading role of the Communist Party.

But local labor disputes ranging from temporary work stoppages to full-fledged walkouts continue.

The government has warned repeatedly that the cumulative effect of local strikes will add another burden to the already strained economy. However, Poland's 34.5 million people do not need dire government warnings to let them know the economy is in bad shape.

"I spent an hour in line this morning for butter," said one Warsaw office worker. "I could understand it if it was for a car, but butter is a staple."

Sugar has all but disappeared from most supermarkets in the Warsaw area. Potatoes are hard to find. The government said the crop this year would be about 25 million tons, half the planned yield, due to spring flooding.

Improvement in food supplies was the first demand of the workers during last summer's strikes, and the government has mapped out plans to put more goods on grocery shelves.

Agriculture, which had been neglected in favor of industrialization, will receive about 30 percent of the investment funds under the next five-year plan, compared to about 20 percent under the current plan. The government next week will unveil the food rationing plan demanded by the strikers to stop diversion of meat, fats, sugar and other scarce staples to the high-priced black market.

The Communist Party Politburo ordered an increase in the number of television sets and other luxury items to be sold abroad to pay for imports of farm products.

As a stopgap, the regime is considering asking East German and Czechoslovak mills to provide flour to customers in Polish border areas.

Pinski said Poland will have to import 10 million tons of grain and fodder during the 1981 fiscal year. He said food imports during that time will exceed the value of exports by $1.4 billion, adding to an already crippling burden of foreign debt.

U.S. officials in Washington said the Polish government has asked the United States for $3 billion in emergency aid. The New York Times reported that Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie has recommended that President Carter increase grain credits to Poland from $670 million to $900 million.

Just as serious for the government and the people are shortages expected in coal, copper, steel and other related areas.

The government says coal production is lagging 8 million tons behind the target, copper production is 20,000 tons down and steel 417,000 tons below plan.

Officials warn that concessions made to strikers in the Silesian coal fields to give them more time off might reduce production further unless operations in the mines can be made more efficient.

Coal exports have been the leading source of foreign currency to buy products abroad, but now it is becoming difficult to meet domestic demand. PAP, the official news agency, reported that during a cold snap this month, 100,000 tons of coal per day were needed for private customers but only about 85,000 tons could be delivered.

Because of the shortages, workers may find it hard to spend the increased wages they won in the summer strikes. Government economists estimate that the amount of money in circulation next year will exceed the value of goods for sale by 200 billion zlotys ($6.7 billion), four times the size of this year's gap.

500 pilots, engineers approve contract, ending airline strike

SAN DIEGO (AP) —

Five hundred pilots and engineers threatened with replacement have approved a new contract with Pacific Southwest Airlines and ended a 50-day strike that idled 4,400 airline employees, officials say.

PSA, the nation's 13th largest airline, shut down service Sept. 25 when flight crew members walked off their jobs. The strike halted 242 daily flights in four states and Mexico.

The airline already had planned to begin limited flight service Sunday between San Diego, Los Angeles and San Francisco. The service will be expanded during the week, a PSA spokesman said today.

The 30-month contract approved late Thursday includes a 35.7 percent wage increase retroactive to Jan. 1. At present, pay ranges from $10,000 annually for a second officer to $67,000 for senior captains.

A spokesman for the Southwest Flight Crew Association, the flight crewmen's union, said membership was "very opposed to the contract" but accepted it by a majority vote.

The airline company had threatened to replace pilots who did not return to work by 5 p.m. today. Eighteen men, most of them senior pilots, accepted the company's offer and crossed picket lines Monday and Tuesday.

SFCA spokesman Nick Stanger said the settlement was accepted "due to the circumstances and position we were in." Before ratifying, union members had to waive a bylaw that called for a 48-hour waiting period before a contract vote.

A PSA spokesman said the company could not immediately estimate how soon all of its employees would be back to work, but said recall plans would be announced in the next few days.

Postal service union chief says workers are deprived of dignity

WASHINGTON (AP) — The labor militant taking charge of the biggest postal union says the Postal Service is depriving its workers of their dignity.

Moe Biller, longtime head of the American Postal Workers Union in New York City, told his first news conference as national president of the union Thursday that he will dedicate himself to "establishing dignity and respect on the work floor" for the 250,000 union members.

He avoided talk of a strike, which is prohibited by federal law. But Biller, the kingpin of a 1970 strike by postal workers, urged the Postal Service to restore workers fired after wildcat 1978 walkouts.

"They (postal management) have got to stop anti-labor programs. They have got to treat workers with dignity," he said.

He contended that the Postal Service "harasses workers for absenteeism and cheats people out of money they are entitled to under the Fair Labor Standards Act."

He called for an end to what he termed "anti-union programs" and vowed, "If we get beaten down, then we will respond in kind."

Biller, who has threatened postal strikes in the past, recently defeated incumbent Emmet Andrews, who was considered more moderate. "If Postal Service leaders want stable and appropriate labor relations, that will be possible," he said.

Biller is expected to drive a hard bargain as the Postal Service opens negotiations this spring on a new contract with the APWU and three smaller unions.

Biller said the union will insist on retaining its clause granting cost-of-living raises.

La Cosa Nostra: 'You go out dead'

By ARTHUR EVERETT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Nearly two decades ago, a stubby minor mobster named Joe Valachi sent a chill up American spines with his sensational behind-the-scenes exposure of the organized crime syndicate.

He was the first to identify the mob by the name of La Cosa Nostra, "Our Thing."

Now, in a Manhattan federal courtroom, a latter-day snitch, Aladena "Jimmy the Weasel" Fratianno, is updating the legend of La Cosa Nostra.

"The Weasel is singing like a canary and his tune is carrying us to thresholds far beyond those reached when Valachi ripped the veil of secrecy from the Cosa Nostra," a government source said recently, asking not to be quoted by name.

Fratianno, a confessed hit man, is the star government witness at the ongoing racketeering trial of Frank "Funzi" Tieri, 76, called "the senior member of the national commission" by the prosecution — in short, the top dog of organized crime.

The New York trial should go to the jury in a week. In Los Angeles, another jury is already deliberating a verdict following a trial in which the star witness was, again, Fratianno. Five reputed California Mafia members are charged with various crimes connected with the 1977 gangland execution of mobster-turned-informer Frank "The Bomp" Bompensiero. The jury has been deliberating six days.

At both trials, the prosecution asked Fratianno how a member gets out of the Mafia.

"You come in alive and go out dead," he testified each time. "There's no way out of the organization."

Fratianno, a dapper, silver-haired 67, has admitted participating in 11 gangland murders. He pleaded guilty to two rubouts and became a government witness in 1974 in return for a five-year sentence.

The Weasel cast off his cloak of anonymous government informer in 1978 when he testified at a federal court trial involving a mob-controlled theater in upstate New York.

Fratianno, who claims to have been a close friend of Frank Sinatra, testified he agreed to get Sinatra into the Knights of Malta, a Roman Catholic honor society, if he would do a benefit at the theater.

It later developed that Sinatra never made a deal. He performed at the theater but was not linked to its fraudulent operation.

At the Tieri trial, Fratianno testified that La Cosa Nostra operates in 20 U.S. cities with one family in each city except New York, which has five. He identified Tieri as boss of New York's Genovese family.

Said Assistant U.S. Attorney Nathaniel Akerman: "This is the first time anyone has ever been charged with being the boss of a crime family."

As Valachi had before him, Fratianno said each boss presides over an underboss and a senior counselor, known as a "consigliere." Capos, or captains, supervise lower echelon members, known as soldiers.

The "national commission," he said, is composed of the New York bosses and the Chicago boss, who "more or less handle disputes with other families."

A highlight of Fratianno's testimony here was his account of his 1948 initiation into the Los Angeles Cosa Nostra:

"You are more or less proposed by somebody. Sometimes you do something significant. Sometimes you have a brother or father in it."

"They took me in a room by myself. There was a long table where all of the members were. Most of the members were sitting. There was a gun and a sword crossing one another in the middle of the table."

"They all stood up. We held hands. The boss said something in Italian. ... Then they prick your finger with a needle or a sword until blood draws. Then you go around and meet each member of the family. You kiss them in the cheek and you're a member."

"They tell you that you come in alive and go out dead. There's no way out of the organization."

Valachi had none of Fratianno's mob prestige when he turned government informer in 1963 before the Senate rackets subcommittee.

Valachi, then 59, had been initiated into the late Vito Genovese's New York family at the age of 27 and worked as a sort of sergeant, above a soldier but below a capo.

During the investigation, FBI agent James Flynn asked Valachi about the crime syndicate:

"What's the name? Is it the Mafia?"

"No, it's not Mafia," Valachi replied.

"We know a lot more than you think," Flynn persisted. "Now I'll give you the first part. You give me the rest. It's Cosa ..."

Valachi paled, then replied: "Cosa Nostra! So you know about it."

Valachi went on to testify extensively against the Cosa Nostra, describing it then as a nationwide network consisting of 27 families and more than 5,000 members.

"Before Valachi came along, we had no concrete evidence that anything like this actually existed," said William Hundley, then chief of the Justice Department's Organized Crime and Racketeering section. "... Valachi named names. He showed us what the structure was and how it operates."

Valachi spent the rest of his life in maximum security prisons, his jailers always mindful of the reported price of $100,000 on his head.

Sniping suspect indicted

DALLAS (AP) — A former Dallas Transit System employee has been indicted on three charges of attempted murder stemming from a bus sniping incident in which a nine-year-old girl was critically injured.

Ray Charles Goff, who worked two weeks as a bus driver before taking part in a month-long strike that crippled the transit system, was named in three separate indictments Wednesday in connection with the Oct. 14 sniping incident.

Three people were injured in the attack that occurred as the bus was making its scheduled morning rounds. Alisa Williams, a fourth-grader riding on the bus, remains in a coma at a Dallas hospital after a bullet struck her in the head.

Two other passengers were injured by flying glass but not hospitalized.

Goff, 23, was arrested Oct. 18 after police said he had been identified by witnesses as the armed man they saw near the bus at the time of the shooting.

Goff has claimed he was asleep in bed when the shooting occurred.

The October sniping incident was followed 10 days later by another shooting attack on a DTS bus. No one was injured in that incident, and police have not arrested any suspects in the case.

On April 3, 1971, he died in La Tuna prison in Texas, 66 years old and a forgotten man, embittered, lonely and sick.

His wife and son refused to claim his body. He was buried in a secret grave lest it be desecrated by the grim organization he had exposed.

He had, in the words of the Weasel, "gone out dead."

Spellman still semi-comatose

CHEVERLY, Md. (AP) — Rep. Gladys N. Spellman, D-Md., who has been semi-comatose since suffering a heart attack while campaigning two weeks ago, will improve slowly, if she recovers at all, her doctors said Thursday.

Buildings have defective concrete

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — More than 100 building projects in the San Francisco Bay area used defective concrete and several will have to be demolished, perhaps at a cost of millions of dollars, officials say.

The concrete, contaminated by scraps of brick through a mixing error, has been used in a jail, an electronics company headquarters, a sewage plant, offices and a condominium complex, whose developer is suing for $30 million.

A $300,000 building in San Bruno was torn down after bits of brick began popping out, leaving holes in the floors, builder Carl Clausen said.

Alameda County officials say 108 tons of concrete will have to be removed from Oakland's 14-story county jail. County architect Don Weaver said it could cost "millions" to correct the damage, which was discovered in August when the building was almost half finished.

The concrete was contaminated when scrap pieces of brick were accidentally mixed with limestone that Kaiser Cement sold to Kaiser Sand and Gravel of nearby Pleasanton for use in concrete, said Kaiser Cement spokesman Lee Bryan.

The crushed brick contains dolomite, which absorbs water rapidly, expands and causes the brick to pop out of the finished concrete. Kaiser Sand and Gravel, formerly a sister company of Oakland-based Kaiser Cement, is owned by the Koppers Co. of Pittsburgh.

Several buildings in a $50 million condominium complex in Foster City, 20 miles south of San Francisco, will have to be torn down, and Centex Homes of California filed suit last month against Kaiser Cement, Kaiser Sand and Gravel and two distributors for $30 million in damages.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Make your own biscuit mix

DEAR HELOISE:

I have misplaced a recipe that dates back in your column many years.

It's a recipe for a biscuit mix that one can make up in large quantities and keep right on the cupboard shelf for regular use.

Would you please repeat the recipe — it's great! — R. Horvitz

Hot biscuits for breakfast! Almost as good as that first cup of coffee.

So, to make that early morning rush a little less hectic, mix up a batch of biscuit mix ahead of time and store it in the cabinet, or on the refrigerator shelf (if you won't be using it too often).

Mix eight cups flour, one-third cup baking powder, two teaspoons salt and eight teaspoons sugar (optional). Cut in one cup shortening with a pastry blender to a very fine consistency. Keep in a container with a tight-fitting lid.

Now, while the family's catching an extra 40 winks, mix in one-third cup milk to every cup of biscuit mix used. Roll the dough out on a floured board and cut in shapes, or just drop from a spoon.

Cook in a greased pan at 425 degrees until lightly browned. I can smell 'em now...

By the way, you can use this biscuit mix in the same way you would a boxed mix — for pancakes, coffee cakes and such. — Heloise

MITTEN COVERS

Dear Heloise: My sister-in-law makes lovely crocheted mittens for all our children. They are so nice and warm and thick — so thick, that when they get wet from the snow, they very seldom get dry by the next day. Besides, the fingertips wear out long before the rest of the mitten.

I had bought some thin, waterproof material for making school bags and decided to try making waterproof mitten covers, too.

When tracing the mitten, I allowed an extra inch all around for the bulk of the mitten. The cuffs can be any length desired, but I made mine long to help the snow take a longer time in finding the wrist.

And guess what! These covers have prevented the dreaded chore of pulling burrs out of their mittens — where do they find them?

The kids' mittens are warmer than ever, as the wind won't go through the material, and the mittens wear much longer, which is a joy to my sister-in-law. — Mary LaClair

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

FABULOUS FIFTIES

Dear Heloise: My two older daughters and I often read to my son — but we felt Daddy should get into the act too.

I taped my husband reading my son's favorite stories. At nap time, the baby would lie down with the book and listen to his daddy tell the story on the tape.

Thus, he had an important midday contact with Daddy (who was at work) and, needless to say, I had more free time. — Audie Mitchell

M-o-m and d-a-d spell relief

By ERMA BOMBECK

It has been 20 years since children first entered my life, and in all that time, not once have our bodies been on the same time cycle.

When I was on wash, iron, shop, cook and run, they were on permanent sleep and off. When I was on sleep and exhaustion, they were on spin-around-the-crib, damp, dry and fill.

I have never understood that.

How can you live with someone all those years and never adapt to their days and nights? When I was awake, the baby was asleep. When I went to bed, the baby woke up. My husband never understood it either. He'd ask, "What's the matter with that kid?" and I'd explain, "Birth lag."

The other night, the phone rang at 10 o'clock. My husband and I had been asleep in our chairs since 7:30. (We always like a nap so we won't go to bed exhausted.) The call was for one of the children inquiring what the plans were for the evening. My blood sugar dropped just thinking about it. The only thing that could possibly have gotten me out of that chair would have been a fire or possibly a cab offering me a ride to the bedroom.

At that moment I looked at my husband and our eyes met in one of those rare moments of understanding.

"He is going out at this time of night? That's ridiculous! What can kids possibly do at this hour?"

"If you can't remember, you won't understand it when I tell you," I said.

"We never started out that late even when we were dating! Did we?"

"Are you kidding? I was 23 before I ever saw my mother dressed. She was in night clothes when I went to school and by the time I got home, she was in her bathrobe again."

"That's ridiculous. Why do we bother furnishing them with a bed? We could just get out of ours and they could crawl in."

"You want them to store their wet towels on the floor?"

"I'm serious. You can't tell me restaurants aren't open at four or six."

"Do you remember the last time you took me to dinner at six? They were still serving lunch. You know the trouble with us? We can't figure out how they stay awake."

Our son came through, showered, fresh, smelling wonderful, full of zip. "Don't get up," he mentioned. "Catch you later. Bye, Mom, Dad."

My husband sighed, "How do YOU spell relief?"

Fabric is enhanced by pattern

Copley News Service

A beautiful piece of fabric can be insulted by the choice of pattern you make. When a fabric is — in itself — a knockout, there is no need to bother it with too much sewing or detail.

VELVET: The fewer seams, the better. Avoid excessive gathering (a little bit is OK). Topstitching is a no-no on velvet because it tends to mat the nap. Pockets should be in-seam rather than patch or welt. Velvet can be tailored or stitched up in a soft dress.

Finger-press seams where possible. For other pressing, place velvet face down over a velvet scrap or a needle board, cover with press cloth, then lower iron to barely touch. Allow the steam to do the work.

CORDUROY: Much the same as velvet, but you can get away with some topstitching if you are careful. It must be cut all the same way, as must velvet.

PLAID: Do not clutter plaids with a lot of seams — especially curved seams or darts. This makes matching almost impossible. Select a pattern that will show off the plaid (bias-cut plaid is fabulous) and will not look too busy. Plaids pleat beautifully, with the added advantage of having built-in fold lines.

LARGE PRINT: It depends on your figure, but most often a large print looks best done in a soft style. Something straight and structured tends to be overwhelmed by the print.

VELOUR: We have discussed this fabric in previous columns and in the newsletter, but one thing I don't believe we have mentioned is how great velour is done up in a long robe, night shirt or dorm pajamas. All it takes to make it work is ribbing for cuffs and neckband.

The 'preppy' look — what is it? A blazer, a bias plaid or pleated skirt and a little shirt with a tiny collar. The shirt can be made of tiny check or stripe, oxford cloth or broadcloth. Tie a length of narrow ribbon under the high-buttoned collar and tuck a coordinating hankie in the breast pocket. For the lapel, select a stick pin (feathers, shells or ribbons). It will look terrific — and so will you.

Soviet police arrest major Jewish activist

By KEVIN KLOSE
The Washington Post
MOSCOW—Soviet police Thursday arrested a major Jewish activist, Viktor Bralovsky, on charges of slandering the state in a move certain to increase Madrid conference acrimony between East and West over suppression of freedom in the Soviet Union.

Bralovsky, 44, a cyberneticist denied emigration to Israel by the Soviet authorities for the past eight years, told his wife the arrest was in connection with his editorship of a "samizdat" (self-published) journal, "Jews in the U.S.S.R.," which the Soviets have sought to suppress.

Irina Bralovskaya said two uniformed police arrived at the family's apartment in outer Moscow Thursday morning and took her husband into custody after serving papers on him. She accompanied him to a local police station and after waiting there several hours, he was driven away. She said police refused to tell her his destination.

Bralovsky, a slight, bearded father of two, has long been a target of the authorities for his activities among Jewish scientists fired from their research posts after applying to emigrate. He was first arrested last April in an official probe of the journal and held for four days on the eve of an unofficial international scientific conference to which prominent U.S. and foreign scientists had been invited. But Bralovsky was released in time to hold the Third International Conference on Collective Phenomena at his home in a sign the authorities were not eager to bring further condemnation from foreign scientists who have taken up the cause of their "refused" Soviet counterparts.

"Jews in the U.S.S.R.," with 20 issues since October 1972, is considered the oldest of the so-called "thick journals" of Soviet samizdat. Each issue averages several hundred type-written pages and contains articles on historic research into Jewish life in Russia under the czars and the communists, Jewish prose and poetry, and serialized excerpts of books on Jewish topics published in the West and forbidden to circulate here. The last issue appeared in June 1979.

Bralovsky's arrest is the latest in the KGB's 3-year-old drive against organized activists. The current round of searches and arrests since the end of the Moscow Olympics in August follows KGB patterns over the past two decades of major policing actions against dissenters prior to national party congresses. The 26th party congress is slated for next February.

But the continuing drive cuts sharply against Soviet propaganda at the Madrid conference, the 35-nation meeting called to discuss European security and cooperation within the framework of the 1975 Helsinki agreement. After three days of tense wrangling preceded by weeks of bitter deadlock over an agenda, the conference teeters now on the edge of collapse. Soviet media has assailed the West for seeking to "slander the world of socialism" by insisting on a full discussion of the Afghanistan invasion and internal human rights repressions here.

Soviet visa officials have cleared about 2,500 Jews a month for emigration this year, but the number of "otkazniki" (refusedniks) has steadily climbed. In recent months, the Soviets have insisted that only Jews with close family relations abroad can be allowed to leave.

Missing freighter search continues

NEW YORK (AP) — Coast Guard aircraft were taking to the air again today in the search for a missing freighter, but officials say their hopes of finding the Poet and its 34 crewmen are diminishing.

The Coast Guard had planned to abandon its search Thursday if the day ended with no sign of the vessel, which has not been heard from since it left port Oct. 24. However, Capt. Milton Suzich said the search, now in its seventh day, would continue through Sunday at the request of anxious relatives.

"Our hopes get slimmer as time passes," he said. "The fact that we haven't found anything yet gives us cause for concern."

The 12,000-ton ship left Philadelphia for Port Said, Egypt, with a load of corn. A severe storm whipped the Atlantic shortly afterward.

The ship was first sought through radio contact with other vessels when it failed to report to its owners, the Hawaiian Eugenia Corp., by radio.

As many as six aircraft at a time scanned ocean in an area 900 miles east and 300 miles north and south, Suzich said.

Suzich said the ship was launched in 1944 and by all reports was in good condition. But a Philadelphia river pilot, Gary Harper, who guided the ship down the Delaware River and bay Oct. 24, said the ship was riding low in the bow, making steering difficult.

Airmen's bodies returned to U.S.

By THERESA HUMPHREY

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Spectators and the honor guard shivered in the chilly night air as a C-141 landed with the remains of 13 U.S. airmen killed in a practice mission in Egypt.

Families of the 11 men and two women were not at Dover Air Force Base when the transport plane arrived Thursday night after a 9½-hour flight from West Germany.

Six pallbearers, led by a color guard, removed each flag-draped casket from the plane to a waiting hearse for transfer to the base mortuary.

The airmen were killed shortly before midnight Wednesday when their plane crashed during the first test of America's Rapid Deployment Force, authorities said.

Wing Cmdr. Col. Albert C. Guidotti stood at attention beside the plane while Col. Ernest Moreau, a chaplain, blessed each casket by saying: "May you be blessed for having given your life for your country and for each one of us."

About 40 people lined the airstrip to watch the ceremony, but most were gone before half of the caskets had been removed. The unloading took about 45 minutes and pallbearers could be seen struggling to keep a good grip on the caskets.

Maj. Robert Groom, a base spokesman, said he did not know how long the bodies would remain in the mortuary.

"An Air Force memorial team from Randolph Air Force Base in Texas is here to make positive identification using medical and dental records," he said.

According to military procedure, autopsies were to be conducted, Groom said.

"The families will make their wishes known to us and the Air Force will fly the remains to the place designated by the families," he said.

In Washington, Air Force officials identified the victims as: Airman 1st Class Karen L. Marti of Springfield, Mass.; Senior Airman Martha M. Misko of Chatsworth, Calif.; Capt. Patrick A. Welsh of Vancouver, Wash.; Capt. Bradford B. Hirschi, who was born in Cedar City, Utah; Senior Airman Raymond J. Bianchi of Buffalo, N.Y.; and Senior Airman Geoffrey L. Galvin of Houston, Texas.

Fires scattered across two states

By The Associated Press

While Kentucky's governor called for swift action against arsonists, firefighters today were pinning their hopes of controlling dozens of forest blazes on predictions that rain would fall soon on tinder-dry areas of Kentucky, Tennessee and West Virginia.

The fires spread thick smoke over some parts of the area, forcing motorists to use headlights in midday. Officials urged residents of some Kentucky towns to stay indoors if they had respiratory problems.

Officials said fires were scattered along the Cumberland Plateau from southwestern West Virginia to the Alabama-Georgia-Tennessee border. One fire official said there were more blazes than authorities had time to count.

"We need that rain ... at least a half-inch of it, if we're to give our crews any rest and get time to fix our equipment," said Tennessee state forester Max Young said.

"We'll take a drizzle or a downpour," said West Virginia Assistant State Forester Ralph Glover.

The promise of rain also pleased officials in Kentucky, where the fires spread a haze as far as Ohio.

Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. toured fire areas Thursday and called on local officials to take "stringent action" to stop arson.

"It is estimated 30 percent of the new fires today were set intentionally," Brown said after meeting with state Division of Forestry officials at Hazard, Ky. "This must be stopped immediately."

Brown said smoke in the region was becoming dangerous for older citizens, children, and people with respiratory problems.

Before the smoke started lifting, motorists were forced to use their headlights in Hazard and Perry County. Sixty miles away in Lexington, where there had not been a pollution alert since the summer of 1979, a blue-white haze hung over the city early Thursday and residents with respiratory problems were advised to stay indoors.

ports from residents that they smelled smoke.

Tennessee firefighters, park rangers and volunteers — including some prison inmates — have been averaging three to five hours' sleep daily since last Friday, battling blazes in the eastern part of the state, Young said.

"We figure arsonists have set most of the fires, certainly those in the remote areas," he said. "If they occurred near houses, they might involve trash burning. The humidity has been running around 16 percent. With it that dry almost anything like a cigarette would be hot enough to start a fire."

There were more blazes than officials have had time to count, he said, but with the exception of those burning an estimated 300 acres each at Hinch Mountain and Wilder, about 60 miles southwest of Knoxville, most had been contained by Thursday.

In the 666,000-acre Daniel Boone National Forest, which stretches north and south across eastern Kentucky, the situation was reported as improved, with three new fires reported Thursday.

Fires have scorched 5,500 acres in the national forest since Friday and $1 million has been spent to fight them, the U.S. Forest Service said. The forest service has issued a ban on open burning.

In West Virginia, Glover said late Thursday that 26 forest fires were still burning out of control in 10 counties. He said he had also received the first report of a structural loss Thursday.

Glover said 46 new forest fires were reported and confirmed Thursday, while his agency had reports of 29 additional fires which couldn't be confirmed because of poor visibility, due to haze from the fires.

Garwood court-martial opens

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Defense attorneys and Marine Corps prosecutors were going before a military panel today to present opening arguments in the court-martial of Pfc. Robert Garwood, charged with desertion and collaboration with the enemy in Vietnam.

Prosecution testimony was to follow the opening statements. The first witness was expected to be Army Warrant Officer Francis Anton, who was in a Vietnamese POW camp with Garwood in 1968-69.

Garwood, then a 19-year-old jeep driver, disappeared near Da Nang in 1965. He was returned to the United States last year to become the first American POW to be charged as a collaborator in Vietnam. He is now 34.

The military judge at the court-martial, Marine Col. R.E. Switzer, Thursday reaffirmed an earlier ruling denying defense lawyers an opportunity to delve into the possibility that American prisoners may still be alive in Vietnam.

Switzer also turned back a government attack on Garwood's competency to stand trial.

"I don't foresee this (Garwood's competency) as a problem at this time," Switzer said, noting that government psychologists concluded last month that Garwood is capable of standing trial.

"While I appreciate government's concern, I see no cause at this stage to require another (psychiatric) evaluation," Switzer said. The issue was raised by Capt. Theresa Wright, a prosecution attorney, who cited an earlier defense contention that Garwood may not be able to defend his actions because of his mental state in Vietnam.

Garwood's mental state will be the major issue of his defense, but his present capacity to stand trial has not been challenged by his attorneys.

Civilian defense attorney Vaughan Taylor said Garwood suffered from one type of mental disorder during his captivity and another type after he was released.

However, Taylor said, neither affected Garwood's ability to understand the legal proceedings.

Garwood's mental state was the basis of the defense move to pursue the issues of Americans still alive in Vietnam.

"No prisoners of war with serious mental defects were returned," chief defense attorney John Lowe said. "None. Zero. All prisoners were considered for repatriation, (but) those with serious mental disorders were not repatriated."

"Garwood was not repatriated. Therefore he may have been in the category of prisoners with serious mental disorders. That theory would provide the jury with a reasonable hypothesis of innocence," he said.

Former Tandy veep sues over contract

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The former vice president of Tandy Corp., who had hoped to one day take over as president, has filed suit in federal court against the company for what he claims was a breach of contract.

James E. Baker, of Ohio, said in the suit filed Thursday that Tandy had illegally broken its contract with him when he was abruptly fired Sept. 26. He is asking U.S. District Judge Eldon Mahon to award him damages of more than $20,000, and at least $10,000 in attorneys fees.

Attorney Sam Day, who prepared Baker's suit, said Tandy executives fired Baker "without good cause or justification."

My family and I wish to thank the voters of Midland and Midland County for electing me your next District Judge of the 142nd District Court.

I shall do my very best always to merit your confidence.

NEWSPAPER BIBLE

Forget the past; you can start over

It is because of this solemn fear of the Lord, which is ever present in our minds, that we work so hard to win others. God knows our hearts, that they are pure in this matter, and I hope that, deep within, you really know it too.

Are we trying to pat ourselves on the back again? No, I am giving you some good ammunition! You can use this on those preachers of yours who brag about how well they look and preach, but don't have true and honest hearts. You can boast about us that we, at least, are well intentioned and honest.

Are we insane [to say such things about ourselves]? If so, it is to bring glory to God. And if we are in our right minds, it is for your benefit. Whatever we do, it is certainly not for our own profit, but because Christ's love controls us now. Since we believe that Christ died for all of us, we should also believe that we have died to the old life we used to live.

He died for all so that all who live—having received eternal life from Him—might live no longer for themselves, to please themselves, but to spend their lives pleasing Christ who died and rose again for them.

So stop evaluating Christians by what the world thinks about them or by what they seem to be like on the outside. Once I mistakenly thought of Christ that way, merely as a human being like myself. How differently I feel now!

When someone becomes a Christian he becomes a brand new person inside. He is not the same any more. A new life has begun!

All these new things are from God who brought us back to Himself through what Christ Jesus did. And God has given us the privilege of urging everyone to come into His favor and be reconciled to Him.

For God was in Christ, restoring the world to Himself, no longer counting men's sins against them but blotting them out. This is the wonderful message He has given us to tell others.

U.S. interests are global, says report

NEW YORK (AP) — Ronald Reagan's national security advisers have prepared a report that says the United States must be ready to use force on its own without its allies and that no part of the world is outside U.S. interest, the New York Times reported Thursday.

Richard V. Allen, Reagan's top national security adviser, said the report would not have official standing in the new administration, but unidentified Reagan aides said the paper reflected the thinking of the president-elect's top advisers.

The study says the United States must have the ability to cope with any level of violence around the globe through a defense policy that provides protection of U.S. interests "under any plausible assault by a hostile power or coalition of powers," the Times said.

The newspaper also quotes the report as saying that Washington should seek the help of allied governments in protecting Western interests but adding that "availability of allied support should not constrain American action in defense of its interests."

American strategic nuclear forces must be able to survive any Soviet nuclear attack and "be capable of attacking the entire spectrum of military, political and economic targets in an adversary nation without causing unintended casualties to civilians," it says, according to the Times.

In a story from Washington, the newspaper quoted Reagan aides as saying the report, called "Strategic Guidance," was prepared by William R. Schneider, an analyst of the New York-based Hudson Institute, and retired Gen. Richard G. Stilwell, former U.S. commander in South Korea.

Education Department: Future in doubt

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Ronald Reagan has some political costs and benefits to weigh in deciding what to do with the fledgling Department of Education, according to officials from two national education groups.

If Reagan puts stock in his campaign promises, he will ask Congress to dismantle the department put together from the old Department of Health, Education and Welfare and other federal agencies six months ago.

Sheldon E. Steinbach, an American Council on Education attorney who is on a Reagan advisory panel, said that would be "a symbolic gesture to show the nation he meant business" about cutting back the size and reach of the federal bureaucracy.

But Steinbach added that the Reagan administration will have to ask "how many political chips would you have to use to accomplish that and how many chips do you want to use up?"

Terry Herndon, executive director of the National Education Association, agreed with that assessment and added: "I would guess there would not be a legislative initiative (to abolish it) for at least a year."

"I would anticipate (Reagan) is in the same mode we are ... trying to assess what that conflict on Capitol Hill is going to look like," he added.

Herndon, whose 1.8-million member teachers union lobbied hard for years to create the department, said abolishing the department would be "a major blow" for the teachers group, he said.

At the department, the lame-duck leaders took comfort in Reagan's announcement last Thursday that he plans to appoint a new secretary of education, as well as a head of the energy department, which also was on the GOP's endangered species list.

"These departments exist and of course you're going to have to have heads to the departments," Reagan said. "Let me make it also plain that I am well aware that in both of those new Cabinet-level departments there are ... legitimate functions that have existed for a long time and that were then incorporated in those."

Secretary of Education Shirley M. Hufstedler said she took that to mean there has been no "determination, at least on an immediate basis, to dismantle the department."

She said it is "vitaly important" to keep education at the Cabinet level to improve the management of federal education programs, avoid duplication and reduce paperwork.

The department has 6,000 employees and will gain 11,000 next year if it proceeds with a planned takeover of the Department of Defense's overseas schools.

Its lineup of programs is still basically those that were run for years by HEW's Office of Education. Mrs. Hufstedler occupies the old commissioner of education's office in a building education still shares with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Innocent man freed

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Keith Hart's two-year ordeal in Folsom Prison is over. Now he faces the task of rebuilding his life.

An Alameda County Superior Court Judge Wednesday, at the request of a deputy district attorney, exonerated Hart of all nine felony counts in connection with a rape, abduction and robbery. Prosecutors said the testimony of a secret but reliable witness cleared Hart.

"I want to just get my family, what's left of it, back together. Raise my boy, mainly," Hart said after the hearing.

Attorney Doron Weinberg, who fought for two years to prove Hart's innocence, said, "I can't imagine ever again doing anything more important."

The years behind bars cost the Fremont, Calif., man his job and his wife.

He said he hopes to reclaim his job as an Amtrak porter and, as soon as he can raise enough money, his 13-year-old son.

"He (the boy) was in doubt as to how they could arrest you and put you in jail if you didn't do anything," Hart said. "I don't think he doubted I was innocent. I think he doubted how they could do all of this."

According to Weinberg, Hart's problems started in the spring of 1978 when he took a wrong turn on a street near his home. He spotted a house for sale and got out of the car to look at it.

A few weeks earlier, the house next door had been robbed and a nervous neighbor, spotting a black man looking over the area, called police, Weinberg said.

When there was an abduction and rape at the same house a few weeks later, Hart became a suspect. On May 4, 1978, he was arrested and the victim identified him as the man who attacked her.

The identification happened, Weinberg contends, only after she had failed to pick him out of a lineup and then had a 45-minute conversation with police.

Standard of Indiana announces $1.5-billion WT tertiary program

CHICAGO (AP) — A newly-formed management group has been given the go-ahead to begin the world's largest tertiary oil recovery program in the Permian Basin of West Texas, the president of Standard Oil of Indiana said late Thursday.

George H. Galloway said in a statement that the $1.5-billion project is expected to produce several hundred million barrels of oil above those ultimately recoverable from current waterflood operations.

The special oil recovery management group will be staffed by Standard and its Amoco subsidiaries. J. R. Barnett, former Houston Region engineering manager, has been appointed manager of enhanced oil recovery production by Amoco.

Related corporate assignments include Aaron Rabinoff of Chicago, Amoco Pipeline Co. carbon dioxide coordinator, who will seek to develop transportation facilities including discussions with potential participants in a possible carbon dioxide pipeline, and A. J. Herbert of Houston, manager of supply for Amoco Oil Co. who will have responsibility for marketing carbon dioxide to the industry.

Barnett said that the first tertiary work will be conducted by the management group in fields in which Amoco Production Co. has operating units, including the North Cowden field of Ector County and the Levelland, Wasson, Anton-Irish, and Slaughter fields in the north portion of the Permian Basin.

Oil in the Permian Basin fields was first discovered in the 1930s and 1940s. Standard Oil currently is using waterflooding in the fields as part of secondary recovery operations.

Barnett added that other Permian Basin fields in which Amoco has production units will be included in the tertiary program as work progresses.

The first barrel of tertiary oil from the area could be produced by the late 1980s, the company said.

Galloway said the tertiary program would use carbon dioxide, developed from the Bravo Dome Field in northeastern New Mexico, to flood the fields in an effort to recover additional oil.

Amoco has an interest in the Bravo Dome carbon dioxide supply. The management group possibly will call on other carbon dioxide sources for the tertiary recovery program.

"Our research advances and field pilot testing have led us to conclude that we now have sufficient knowledge concerning carbon dioxide technology to support initiating major, field-wide carbon dioxide flooding in the Permian Basin," Galloway said.

"We have begun this effort with the realization that we must resolve a multitude of complex and time-consuming problems before the first barrel of tertiary oil is produced sometime in the late 1980s," he said.

Galloway also said that Amoco Production Co., which authorized implementation of the program by a newly formed company, will proceed with obtaining working interest owner approval where necessary and will begin discussions with various suppliers to bring together the key elements necessary to start the program.

Milwee completes Howard discovery

Milwee Oil, Inc., of Midland No. 1 Whitaker has been completed as a Canyon reef oil discovery in Howard County, four miles west of Vincent.

The operator reported a daily flowing potential of 118 barrels of 48-gravity oil, through a 10.64-inch choke. The gas-oil ratio is 1,000-1.

Completion was through perforations from 7,650 to 7,662 feet. Stimulation of any, was not reported.

Total depth is 7,775 feet, 4 1/2-inch pipe is set on bottom and hole plugged back to 7,714 feet.

The Canyon reef top, which also is the top of the pay, is at 7,650 feet on kelly bushing elevation of 2,450 feet.

Location is 467 feet from south and 1,200 feet from east lines of section 19, block 25, H&TC survey, four miles west of Vincent.

A re-entry project, it originally was drilled by F. W. Holbrook of Midland and plugged in August.

CROCKETT DRILLSITE
Liberty Energy Co. of Texas of Irving staked No. 1 B. F. League as a three-mile south outpost to Canyon gas production in the Ozona multipay field of Crockett County, 36 miles southwest of Ozona.

The project is 1,000 feet from south and 660 feet from east lines of section 68, block Q-2, W. W. Wilkins survey. Contract depth is 6,500 feet.

SUTTON AREA
Florida Exploration Co., operating from Midland, will dig No. 02 Hunt as a 6,500-foot project in Sutton County,

2,640 feet from production in the Phyllis Sonora (lower Canyon) gas field.

The project, five miles northeast of Sonora, is 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 33, block 9, TW&NG survey.

MIENARD TEST
Tucker Drilling Co. of San Angelo No. 3 Swaim Ranch "C" will be drilled as a west offset to production in the Celery (Strawn) field of Menard County, seven miles south of Eden.

Location for the 3,300-foot test is 710 feet from south and 3,160 feet from east lines of Bryan Swaim survey No. 110.

GAINES LOCATION
The Seagraves, South (San Andres) field of Gaines County, which currently has eight producing wells, gained a new project with the staking of WTG Exploration, Inc., of Midland No. 2 Grimes.

The 5,000-foot project is seven miles southwest of Seagraves and 660 feet from south and east lines of section 16, block C-35, ps1 survey.

CRANE OPERATION
Gulf Oil Corp. No. 1174 W. N. Waddell and others is to be drilled in the five-well Sand Hills (Wichita-Albany) field of Crane County, 19 miles northwest of Crane.

Scheduled to 5,800 feet, it is 2,004 feet from north and 2,178 feet from east lines of section 11, block B-21, ps1 survey.

Regulations delaying coal slurry line

Coal pipelines can play a significant role in increasing the use of coal in the United States during the next 20 years, a representative of Continental Resources Co. told Florida Exploration Co. employees at a meeting here Thursday.

Charles Row, manager of communications for Continental Resources, the parent company of Florida Exploration, made a videotape presentation concerning an eastern coal pipeline proposed by his company that would bring coal from fields in the Illinois Basin and Appalachian areas to the Southeast, principally Georgia and Florida. Continental Resources is a member of The Continental Group, Inc.

Row told the Florida Exploration meeting that the construction of coal pipelines is dependent on Congressional action concerning an eastern coal pipeline proposed by his company that would bring coal from fields in the Illinois Basin and Appalachian areas to the Southeast, principally Georgia and Florida. Continental Resources is a member of The Continental Group, Inc.

Bentson bill has chance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentson, D-Texas, said Thursday his proposal to exempt small oil royalty owners from the "windfall" profits tax has a good chance of passing during the current lame-duck session of Congress.

"I think we'll win that one," he said. "That's in the (budget) reconciliation bill. We were able to get the president's commitment to support it."

Budget reconciliation is one of the major projects before the lame-duck session that started this week, although there is no guarantee that it will not be postponed until the next session of Congress starts in January.

Bentson said more than 80 percent of the 650,000 royalty owners in Texas receive less than $100 a month. His proposal would offer a $1,000 annual tax credit for the "windfall" tax.

The Senate Finance Committee staff has said the tax credit essentially would mean that anyone receiving less than $400 a month in oil royalties would not have to pay any "windfall" tax.

Energy Secretary Charles Duncan announced the administration's support for the exemption at a pre-election news conference with Bentson in Houston.

The issue had become controversial during the campaign, and the Texas senator said Thursday the approaching election "might have had some influence" in obtaining the administration's support.

Bentson also said he thought Congress would be making a mistake if it did not approve a tax cut in the lame-duck session.

He said waiting until next year probably means a tax cut proposal would not be through Congress until July — postponing its effective date until January 1982. A tax cut enacted during the lame-duck session could become effective in 1981.

"The clock will just run," the senator said.

Bentson said the argument that President-elect Ronald Reagan should not be preempted from offering his own tax cut proposal in January does not apply because Reagan has endorsed the tax cut passed by the finance committee before the election.

McCabe sets Fisher wildcat

John Q. McCabe of Midland, president of Tauros Minerals, Inc., announced location for a 4,000-foot project in Fisher County, five miles south of Roby.

The test is No. 1 Vernon Terry, 660 feet from south and 990 feet from east lines of subdivision 29, El Paso County School Land survey No. 317.

Scheduled to test the Flippen, the project is a northwest offset to 3,612-foot Flippen production in the Longworth field.

The application filed with the District 7-B office of the Railroad Commission of Texas in Abilene designated the project as a wildcat.

Ground elevation is 2,000.5 feet. The project is being drilled on a 158-acre lease included in a 2,100-acre farmout from Cities Service Co.

Tauros Minerals has a 25 percent working interest in the project and the 2,100-acre farmout.

LA officials brace for shortages

Municipal strike now in second day

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With absenteeism as high as 80 percent in some city departments, officials braced for police shortages, garbage piles and traffic jams worse than usual as the second municipal strike in Los Angeles history entered its second day.

"If it extends a couple of weeks it could get to be a real nuisance to the community," said city administrative officer Keith Comrie.

Some 5,600 workers stayed off the job Thursday, "just about like we expected," Comrie said.

"We would expect pretty good participation (in the strike) for two or three days. After two or three days they'll get tired ... and start coming back," he predicted.

But leaders of the three striking unions predicted more of their 10,000 members would call in sick or just fail to show up as the strike over a contract dispute continued.

The unions represent garbage collectors, engineers, traffic controllers, computer operators and mechanics who maintain city cars — about 28 percent of the work force in the nation's third largest city.

Two unions, Local 347 of the AFL-CIO City Employees Union and the Engineer and Architects Association, were defying a no-strike order issued Wednesday by Superior Court Judge Jerry Pacht.

Union leaders face contempt charges and possible $500-a-day fines for violating the order. The city attorney's office on Thursday began tracking down 62 union leaders and served papers on 17 computer operators, citing the critical nature of their work.

As the strike began, supervisors took over traffic control, sewage plant maintenance and computer operations for the city of nearly 3 million people. Police officers filled in for striking jailers.

But only six of 485 two-person garbage truck crews showed up, and trash collection came to a halt.

The Sanitation Bureau had 77 percent of its work force off the job. There was 80 percent absenteeism among street lighting personnel, 60 percent among city engineering employees, 59 percent among street maintenance workers and 38 percent among Harbor Department workers.

The city's latest contract offer to the three unions gives them two options — a 10 percent non-retroactive raise or a 9 percent boost retroactive to July 1. Both options include a 3 percent boost in fringe benefits.

The unions are seeking a fully retroactive 10 percent pay raise plus the 3 percent in fringe benefits, similar to a pact reached in August with workers at the city's Department of Water and Power who went on strike for five days, the first strike by city employees.

The unions are negotiating for one-year contracts. The average yearly salary among the 6,400 blue-collar members of Local 347 is $15,400. The average salary of the 2,900 engineers union members is $22,680, and the average for the 1,200-member Superintendents Association is $21,752, according to city figures.

Opera employees make new contract settlement

NEW YORK (AP) — The stage of the Metropolitan Opera will be full of light and sound again next month.

The last major group of employees holding out on a contract agreement settled with the opera's management on Thursday. Director Anthony Bliss said the settlement with chorus members means the 1980-81 season, canceled in September, probably will open Dec. 8 with Alban Berg's "Lulu."

It will be the first time the Met has mounted a production of the full three-act opera, completed from Berg's sketches after his death.

Bliss said the Met management is making "thousands" of telephone calls to big-name artists around the world to see who will be available to sing during the revived 97th season.

The tentative settlement with the 80-member chorus came at 2 a.m. Thursday, and was ratified by a vote of 51 to 23 at a meeting later in the morning.

That set the stage for ratification of the four-year contract later in the day by the entire 350-member Met unit of the American Guild of Musical Artists, which also includes the ballet, soloists, choreographers, stage directors and stage managers.

The pattern for the settlement was set earlier by Local 802 of the American Federation of Musicians, which got a four-performance week and a 36 percent increase over the current base pay of $525 a week.

The stumbling block to agreement with the chorus was its demand for parity with the musicians. Although the chorus did not get parity, it did get assurance of a $94 bonus for a fifth performance in any week, with additional overtime for sixth and seventh performances.

The settlement also gave the chorus base pay increases totaling 35 percent over four years.

Although the Met still has to sign contracts with 14 other unions, those are not considered likely to interfere with the attempt to open Dec. 8. Stagehands have already authorized union officials to accept a contract.

After halting rehearsals and canceling the season originally scheduled to start Sept. 22, the Met indicated that the first new production of the season, "La Traviata," would be moved from fall to spring if the season could be salvaged.

Bliss, who began making telephone calls to Europe at 6:45 a.m. in his effort to lure the opera's top singers back from other engagements, said further details of his plans for the season might be disclosed next week.

He said there was a possibility that, because of the four-performances clauses in the union contracts, the Met might at times during the season schedule fewer than the usual six evening and one matinee performances.

"The season now coming up will be vastly different from what we had planned," he said. "But we have a public duty to try to do what we can."

U.S. Steel relieved of charges; Workers closer to choice jobs

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — The United States Steel Corp. has been absolved of anti-trust charges, and a group of laid-off steelworkers which sued the giant company may be nearer to getting some of the jobs it wants.

U.S. District Judge Thomas D. Lambros ruled Thursday that the nation's largest steelmaker broke no law by refusing to negotiate the sale of its closed McDonald Works with the Community Steel Corp., a company formed by the jobless steelworkers.

The workers had sought to purchase the closed steel operation by using federal loans and loan guarantees.

After two days of private negotiations, the steelworkers agreed to drop their suit in exchange for agreements from U.S. Steel and Toro Enterprises, a Youngstown holding company, which could lead to the facility's reopening.

Community Steel wanted to use the federal funds to reopen the entire steelmaking facility. Toro, which recently signed a lease agreement with U.S. Steel, wants to reopen only one of five rolling mills.

Under the terms of the settlement, Community Steel and McDonald Steel Corp., a Toro subsidiary, will each name three representatives to an advisory committee. The panel will recommend ways McDonald Steel's operation can be expanded. Toro will be in sole control of the operation.

U.S. Steel, based in Pittsburgh, agreed not to dismantle or remove three other rolling mills at the complex for five years and said it would expedite the process of preparing the finishing mill so that Toro can begin operations as quickly as possible.

About 100 to 150 jobs are expected to be created.

By agreeing to drop the suit, Community Steel frees both U.S. Steel and Toro from the threat of a protracted legal dispute. Community Steel had earlier indicated it would appeal if Lambros ruled against the steelworkers' anti-trust claim.

"We bit the bullet and decided to drop the litigation so we could get the portion (of the McDonald Works) available to Toro," Community Steel lawyer Staughton Lynd said. "We were faced with the possibility of going back to litigation or accepting half a loaf."

FCC wondering about all those 'good buddies'

By NORMAN BLACK

WASHINGTON (AP) — They may have their own radio network, but word apparently isn't getting around to more than two million CB operators entitled to refunds from the federal government.

Two months after launching its special fee refund program, the Federal Communications Commission is wondering what happened to all those "good buddies" who were operating a citizens band radio between 1970 and 1975.

"Our response has not been that good; in fact, I'm rather disappointed," says Richard J. Keller, who heads the program. "Of an estimated 2.4 million eligible, we've only received somewhere in the neighborhood of 35,000 requests for refunds."

The fee refund program stems from a December 1976, decision by the U.S. Court of Appeals, in which the FCC was found to be charging more money than it actually cost to process license applications.

The commission has already refunded more than $50 million to eligible radio and TV stations, common carriers and electronic equipment manufacturers. Last September, the agency said it was ready to handle refunds for less expensive licenses such as those issued to CB and ham radio users.

"We really worked hard to get the word out and there's been a lot of publicity," says Keller. "We didn't expect everyone to file, but we did expect to see requests from at least half the 2.4 million. I really don't understand why the response has been so low."

The key is the 1970-to-1975 time period. The estimated 13 million to 14 million Americans who received a CB license after March 1, 1975 — about the time citizens band radio became such a fad — are not eligible because they paid only $4.

However, between Aug. 1, 1970, and Feb. 28, 1975, a CB license cost $20 and those enthusiasts are now entitled to a $17.99 refund. The program includes a number of other licenses, such as maritime, aviation and microwave users.

Authorities nab Belgian youths, free hostages

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Three Belgian youths terrorized eight school children and two adults in a bus for hours today, then were grabbed by authorities who freed the hostages, a radio official said.

The kidnapers, who had demanded radio time to air their views, moved with the hostages into a radio studio, where authorities suddenly switched off the lights, told the children to run to safety, and grabbed the three young men, the official said.

No one was reported injured.

The youths commandeered the bus at the small east Belgian town of Vielsalm and took it to the Catholic Institut du Sacre-Coeur school, where the children were forced aboard at gunpoint, police said.

The bus then drove the 80 miles to Brussels, escorted by state police, to a parking lot at the Belgian Radio Center.

The three youths, who police said were known to them, reportedly demanded broadcast time to express their views, apparently about what they considered unfair division of wealth. Police said the three were 16, 18 and 21 years old and a radio reporter said they were political extremists who had threatened several months ago to take hostages.

The youths demanded to meet with the general manager of the French-language station and be given a chance to speak on the radio, police said.

One of the three, dressed in black and appearing to be very young, said briefly to reporters, "We are here because some people earn a mere 8,000 francs ($266) per month whereas ministers earn 80,000 francs ($2,666)."

The whole group left the bus in a single file and went into the fifth floor studio, a witness said. There, in the sudden darkness, someone shouted "Get out! Run!" and the hostages rushed as far as they could into the corridors as plainclothes police tackled the youths, witnesses said. Police said they took the three into custody.

Police identified the youths as Michel Stree, 21, Mark Frank, 18 and his brother, whom they did not name — all from Vielsalm in the eastern Ardennes near from the border with West Germany.

One Vielsalm school official told The Associated Press in a telephone interview: "I came to the school playground to find an inter-city bus. A young man with a weapon tried to force me into the bus. A professor inside the bus talked him into letting me go. The men had pushed children at random inside the bus.

"While I was rushing to alert the police, the bus drove off. As far as we know there were nine children, boys and girls, aged 12 to 18, a male teacher, and a chauffeur. Police came and questioned children who had witnessed the scene and quickly said they had identified the three hostage takers." One girl was reported released later.

The Belgian news agency, Belga, reported the youths were armed with a rifle, hand grenades, and a box containing tubes filled with a chemical that was not identified. The bus, painted bright orange, was parked in one of the lots behind the radio and TV complex. It was surrounded by police in plain clothes, and the entire district where the complex is located was cordoned off.

Belga said the boys and girls were in the back of the bus, that the police were waiting in the parking lot when the bus arrived, and that security forces apparently were tipped in advance that there was trouble aboard the bus.

Jet en route to Caribbean makes emergency landing

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A Cayman Airways Ltd. jet en route from Houston to the Caribbean made an emergency landing here Thursday evening after engine problems developed over the Gulf of Mexico, authorities said.

The crew and 92 passengers aboard were unharmed when Flight No. 63 landed at Galveston's Scholes Field, authorities said.

The twin-engine jet apparently developed engine trouble 375 miles southeast of Houston, about 45 minutes after takeoff, said Bud MacLennan, assistant chief of the Houston Air Route Traffic Control Center.

Several passengers said they became aware of a problem after they felt a sharp banking of the aircraft. The flight was to have landed at Georgetown, Grand Caymen.

Today is OR Nurse's Day

Mayor G. Thane Akins proclaimed today Operating Room Nurse Day in Midland. Nurses at both Parkview Hospital and Midland Memorial Hospital will be celebrating the day.

Sponsored by the Association of Operating Room Nurses, the special day is set up to recognize the highly specialized personnel working in hospital operating rooms with a commitment to personalized attention to the patient. Before, during and after surgery, these nurses help the patient understand his or her surgery and healing process.

The Permian Basin Chapter of AORN includes both Midland and Odessa operating room nurses.

District 5-5A grid race winds down tonight

Rebs, Bulldogs clash tonight

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

Somehow all the District 5-5A football marbles rolled down Highway 80 to Odessa as the final day of the grid season became a reality today, leading the annual Memorial Stadium shootout between Midland High and Midland Lee just another city bragging rights contest at 8 p.m.

Odessa High and Odessa Permian will be playing for the district playoff berth tonight before a sellout through which went camping to just get a ticket. But if things seem lost for the local warriors, you would have a hard time convincing MHS mentor Pat Culpepper or Lee coach Spike Dykes.

"As far as I know, this is the only game in town, and it is our most important game of the year," said Dykes. "Every week is our most important game of the season, and that's the way we approach it. In football, you don't play many games, so every game is important and this one is too."

Culpepper also views the game as important, saying, "We have an opportunity to go 6-4 on the year and we are determined to make the effort. It may not sound like much right now, but in 20 years it will be important to the kids and the fans. Midland High has not had that many winning seasons in the past few years and that would be a big boost."

And as far as the series stacks up, the game could have added importance. Lee owns a narrow 9-8-2 edge heading into the 20th matchup. Lee, however, has won the last four times out. It will also be the first meeting between Culpepper and Dykes. So there is something old and something new in this one.

LEE enters the game with a 5-3-1 record, insured of a winning season without a victory, while MHS is 5-4, needing a win for a winning season.

Both coaches are expecting an intense and physical battle tonight and the winner could be the game's survivor.

"In all my years of coaching, I've never seen a high school team as physical as Midland High," Dykes says. "They are really huge and they can just manhandle you. It's very easy for me to see that they could very easily be playing for the district championship. They have size and a lot of experience. Michael Feldt is a super quarterback and Scott Yocham is a strong fullback. With the size they have up front, they can just really beat you up."

"I think Lee has improved every week," Culpepper states. "Calvin Riggs is the best running back in the league and quarterback Barry Corley, I think, is a real winner. They play excellent defense and they force you to throw the ball, and when that happens, you have a good football team."

THE GAME should also be one of complete contrasts. It will be Lee's ground oriented attack against the Bulldogs' vastly improving air attack, or at least, that is what one expects when you match these teams on paper.

Lee has thrown very little this season and have relied on the fearsome rushing antics of Calvin Riggs and Rodney Hemphill. Riggs, who is almost a shoe-in for the district rushing title, has 873 yards in nine games and owns a 60-yard lead over Cooper's Oscar Riggins heading into the contest. Hemphill is the league's fourth leading rusher with 656 yards and had 134 yards rushing last week. Quarterback Barry Corley can also burn you when you key on the other two.

So, the key to the MHS defense may

Midland Lee Offense
Quarterback: Barry Corley, 170, Sr. Tailback: Rodney Hemphill, 165, Sr. Fullback: Calvin Riggs, 190, Jr. Flanker: Kevin Sparks, 150, Jr. Split End: Kenneth Brown, 185, Jr. Tight End: Kenneth Harrison, 175, Jr. Tackles: Clyde Smith, 210, Sr.; Rob Watson, 185, Sr. Guards: Irl Conally, 215, Sr.; Keith Brown, 220, Sr. Center: Van Gravitt, 190, Jr.

Midland Lee Defense

Midland High Offense

Midland High Defense

have to come tackles Joe Goebel and Jerry Dedrick along with linebackers Lance Langford, Gary Willis and Curt Holcomb. Ends Matt Carr and Greg Spencer, starting his first game, will also have to help out.

The Midland High offense centers around quarterback Michael Feldt, who is a running and passing terror. Feldt ranks third in district passing with 823 yards, throwing for seven touchdowns. Feldt, however, has been intercepted 13 times this year, and that may be the only negative on his ledger. The Lee secondary, composed of Jesse Fennell, David Corrales, Kevin Bradshaw and Bart Ryan, will have to come up with a big game to keep the MHS offense at bay.

Feldt will have numerous receivers at his disposal tonight. David Bledsoe, who missed several games with an injury has caught 14 passes for 289 yards and three TDs to rank fifth in the league. Devin Alsup has caught 16 for 168 yards and Kyle Ford nine for 155. Giant 235-pound tight end Wade Johnson has 11 for 114 and four touchdowns. Lee's Kenneth Brown has six catches for 113 yards and he has done most of the Lee receiving.

Lee's Keith Brown and Irl Conally, maybe the best defensive tackle tandem in the history of the Rebels, won't be able to rest either since MHS also has a running threat. Feldt has 494 yards rushing to rank ninth in the league and fullback Scott Yocham is eighth with 524 yards while tailback Johnny Garza, who didn't start until the Big Spring game has 402 yards.

THE LEE linebacking unit of Terry Thompson, Clyde Smith and David Cornelius has been impressive this year, but they will have to guard against the rush as well as the pass this week. Ends Wade Colburn and Riggs have both put a lot of pressure on passing quarterbacks in the last few weeks.

Lee will have the youngest team on the field, which bodes well for next year. The Rebs start five juniors on offense and four on defense while MHS has only two juniors on offense and four on defense. Neither team, however, expects a major rebuilding job next year.

OHS and Permian may have their shootout, but the Lee-MHS contest is still a war.

Bullpups beat Brigade to finish with 9-0 mark

By BOB DILLON

It didn't come easy, but Coach Tim Whalen's Midland High Bullpups finished the 1980 junior varsity football season unbeaten after taking a hard-fought 19-7 victory over the Midland Lee Stonewall Brigade before a large crowd in Memorial Stadium Thursday night.

With the victory, the Bullpups finish 9-0 while Lee, coached by Ernie Johnson, winds up with a 4-4 record.

"They (Lee) played awfully hard and Ernie's crew defended Wesley Williams the best that anybody has done all year," said a happy, but drained Whalen afterwards. "I know one thing, there are going to be a lot of sore youngsters when they wake up tomorrow morning on both sides of town," added Whalen as he headed for the celebration in the Bullpup dressing room.

HARD-HITTING is putting it mildly as the two Tall City rivals played extremely well and hard.

Williams had gone into the game averaging more than 250 yards per game rushing and had scored at least one touchdown in the previous eight games, but the determined Lee defense (See BULLPUPS, 2D)

Midland College holds first Jog..Walk-A-thon Saturday

It begins at 9 a.m. and will wobble to a finish at 3 p.m. Saturday. Even fans in the Memorial Stadium stands may ask, What is it?

It's the first annual Midland College Chaparral Walk-A-Thon, Jog-A-Thon, co sponsored by the Midland Reporter-Telegram and designed to raise funds for the Midland College athletic program. And for local clubs and organizations.

The idea is to raise funds to underwrite the 1980-81 MC athletic programs, travel expenses and scholarships. Other clubs and organizations which enter walkers, runners and joggers will receive 50 per cent of the runs they raise with no expenses incurred.

MC Athletic Director Delnor Poss points out that in addition to local groups sponsoring runners, all of the Chaparral athletes have entered as well as some coaches. "This could be the largest running-jogging event ever held in Midland."

It's not too late to sign up at the Midland College athletic offices in the Physical Education building (684 7851, extension 160 or 183.)

Word's out, McGraw broke his arm in fall

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — World Series hero Tug McGraw of the Philadelphia Phillies still could joke about not being selected in major league baseball's free agent re-entry draft.

"I fell out of a tree and broke my left elbow," the ace reliever quipped Thursday night. "I guess everybody heard about it."

"What I really think is that (Phillies' general manager) Paul Owens spoke of me highly at the general managers' meeting in Florida last week and gave everybody the impression — perhaps intentionally — that I'd be with the Phillies next year."

"I believe the other clubs concluded there's just no way I'd leave Philadelphia right now. Erroneously or not, they figure I'm locked in here. So why should they waste a draft choice?" he asked.

McGraw was 5-4 in the regular season with 20 saves, then was devastating in the National League playoffs and World Series.

Chaps bury McMurry, 96-49

By MIKE CRUVER

Midland College had five players in double figures as the Chaparrals opened their 1980-81 season with a 96-49 drubbing of an out-classed McMurry Junior Varsity Indian squad.

Freshman Puntus Wilson, 6-foot-3 forward/guard out of Dallas led the Chaps with 22 points. Wilson had 14 of his markers in the first half and added eight in only five minutes of playing time in the second half.

Support came from Lance McCain with 12, Ernie Tate and Charles Johnson with 11 and Kevin Williamson tossed in 10 points.

Top point getters for the Indians were Rodney Brown and Steve Wright with 13 each.

MIDLAND jumped to a 6-0 lead and that was as close as the Indians could come the rest of the night.

The biggest margin of the night for MC, 92-40, came with two minutes left in the contest. McMurry managed to run off seven unanswered points to cut the deficit to under 50.

Chap Head Coach Jerry Stone said, "I was pleased with the ball movement, we hit the open man. That's important for us because we stress playing team ball."

Many times during the evening the Chaps were able to take the ball away with their pressure defense and record easy buckets at the other end of the court. Wilson and Tate brought the crowd out of their seats a couple of times with rim-shaking slam dunks.

Stone, finding it hard to say anything about the game, said, "Tougher games are just around the corner."

Right he is! The Chaps leave the friendly confines of Chaparral Center until Dec. 1 when they open the Western Junior College Conference race against Clarendon. Between now and then the Chaps have two tournament dates, both three day affairs.

NOV. 20-22 will find the Chaps attending the QB Club Classic hosted by Hutchinson (Ks.) Junior College. MC opens the Classic with a game against Amarillo. Second round plays pits the Chaps against Connors, Ok. The final round finds the visiting Chaps going up against the home-standing hoopsters of Hutchinson.

A week later, Nov. 27-29, finds the Chaps entered in the Amarillo Classic in Amarillo.

Bowl bids go up for grabs

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The possibilities could bowl you over.

Just who will be headed to what college football bowl games pretty much will be decided this weekend ... or next ... or the next.

Actually, bowl bids will officially be tendered Saturday, though many of the major postseason games won't have solid matchups.

For instance, No. 1 Georgia, the only major unbeaten, untied team in the nation, can clinch the Southeastern Conference crown and the host spot in the Sugar Bowl by defeating Auburn on Saturday. But if the Bulldogs stumble against Auburn, either Alabama, Mississippi State or Louisiana State could wind up in New Orleans on New Year's Day.

No. 5 Alabama, meanwhile, plays in the spotlight game of the weekend, a matchup with No. 6 Notre Dame. The winner is expected to get the other bid to the Sugar Bowl — provided Georgia wins or ties with Auburn — while the loser could be headed to the Cotton Bowl. The nationally televised game is a confrontation between the two teams which preceded Georgia at the top of the polls.

ALSO looking ahead to bowl bids after their games Saturday are:
—No. 11 Michigan and No. 16 Purdue, who face off in a nationally televised battle at Ann Arbor, with the winner staying alive in the Rose Bowl race and the loser being considered for the Fiesta, Gator and Garden State bowls.
—No. 7 Ohio State, which is at Iowa and needs a win to remain in the running for the Rose — the Buckeyes are certain to get a bid to a bowl even if they fall short of Pasadena.
—No. 4 Nebraska and No. 10 Oklahoma, the favorites for the Big Eight title and a spot in the Orange Bowl. The Cornhuskers travel to Iowa State while the Sooners entertain Missouri, which also has a shot at the conference championship and the Miami game. All three schools will receive bids, with the Liberty and Sun bowls figuring to invite the conference runners-up.
—Eastern independents Pitt, No. 8 and at Army this week, and No. 9 Penn State, which visits Temple. Both Pitt and Penn State have designs on the Orange Bowl, with the Cotton, Sugar, Liberty, Gator and Fiesta bowls also possibilities.

—No. 12 Baylor, which like Georgia, has the opportunity to clinch a host spot on New Year's Day. The Bears need just a tie at Rice to nail down the Southwest Conference and the invitation to the Cotton.
—No. 13 Brigham Young and unranked Colorado State, who face off for first place in the Western Athletic Conference. The high-powered BYU offense will attract several bowl offers even if the Cougars lose the WAC crown. The winner of the WAC goes to the Holiday Bowl.
—No. 14 South Carolina, which plays Wake Forest on Saturday, is said to be a shoe-in for the Gator Bowl. Virginia is at No. 15 North Carolina, which is tops in the Atlantic Coast Conference and said to be a lock for the Peach. No. 18 SMU plays at Texas Tech and afterwards is expected to get an invite from the Holiday Bowl.
In a key SEC contest, it's LSU vs. No. 19 Mississippi State at Jackson. The victor remains in the hunt for the conference title and a slot in the Sugar Bowl — provided Georgia loses

Permian, OHS fight for playoffs

Odessa Permian takes on Odessa High tonight in the key District 5-5A contest as regular season play comes to an end. The winner will advance to the bi-district round of the state playoffs.

A win by the undefeated Panthers would give Permian the outright title and Mojo is a heavy favorite in the game since they have given up only 22 points this year. OHS, 8-1 on the year, could earn a district co-championship and a playoff berth with an upset. The Bronchos would go to the playoffs by virtue of a win over Permian.

On other fronts, Abilene Cooper, 7-1-1 on the year, still has a shot at second place when they face 4-5 Abilene High in the Key City matchup.

An interesting battle will also take place in Big Spring when the Steers host San Angelo in a battle to see who finishes in the 5-5A cellar. San Angelo has not won in nine outings and Big Spring has lost 43 straight 5-5A games. Both hope to end those streaks tonight.

Astros, Rangers pick Sutton

NEW YORK (AP) — The Houston Astros and Texas Rangers both obtained negotiating rights for free agent pitcher Don Sutton, but New York's two major league clubs may be ready to put the right-hander beyond the reach of Texas team pocket-books.

The longtime Los Angeles hurler also was selected by both the New York Yankees and the New York Mets in Thursday's re-entry draft of major league free agents.

A big-league bidding war looms on the horizon since Yankee owner

George Steinbrenner seldom has let his bank account get in the way of obtaining free agents and the Mets have announced high-priced intentions to rebuild their vanquished National League franchise.

Besides the two Texas teams and their New York competitors, eight other clubs selected Sutton as the annual bidding war for baseball's fortune hunters began.

The Astros also selected slugging outfielder Dave Winfield and handyman Dave Roberts, while the Rangers opted to go after additional pitching help.

Lee Majors stars as Kane in new 'High Noon' sequel

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lee Majors knew that when he accepted the marshal's role in the sequel to "High Noon" he was making himself a target for criticism.

"High Noon" has taken on the mantle of a sacrosanct classic to some, and the immediate reaction was, "How dare they?"

Majors plays Will Kane in the sequel set one year later. It's called "High Noon, Part II: The Return of Will Kane," and will be broadcast Saturday night on CBS.

"We filmed in Tucson with no relief from the 110-degree heat," said Majors. "I picked up the Tucson paper one night and here was this columnist saying, in effect, how dare they desecrate one of the best movies ever made. And it says you'll never guess who they picked to play Gary Cooper's role — the 'Six Million Dollar Man.' Like it was something terrible. This guy's never seen what we're doing and he's tearing it down."

"That's the sort of thing I knew would be coming. I knew I was taking a gamble. But I took it. I wanted to do it because I've always admired Gary Cooper. And I wanted to do a Western again. It was good to be back in the saddle."

The 1952 Western, written by Carl Foreman and directed by Fred Zinnemann, is the classic story of a lawman standing alone against evil. The role of Marshal Will Kane won Cooper his second Academy Award. His new bride, who urges him to lay down his badge, was Grace Kelly.

The tension builds as Marshal Kane awaits the arrival of Frank Miller — who has sworn to kill him — on the noon train. Throughout are the haunting lyrics sung by Tex Ritter ("Do not forsake me, Oh my darling, On this our wedding day") and shots of the clock as the hands draw inexorably toward noon.

Oddly enough, the original movie was badly received in previews, and the clock was inserted as an afterthought.

In CBS' sequel, Kane has resigned as marshal and has been replaced by Pernell Roberts, who plays the role with an agreeable malevolence. David Carradine is a wanted outlaw who is more scalawag than scoundrel.

Kane's attempt to bring Carradine in to pay a debt puts him into armed conflict with the new marshal, who wants the outlaw dead.

This would have been a better movie if the producers had thrown all the "High Noon" baggage off the stagecoach. It's just too heavy a burden for this vehicle to bear.

"High Noon" was marked by the utter economy of the story and the way the tension was tightened minute by minute. The story in the sequel is too padded, and while it does generate some tension, it is not all directed toward the final showdown.

Majors noted that he is not as tall as Cooper, and that the wardrobe and look of the movie is different. "Cooper wore a black pin-striped pants and dark clothes. But it was his wedding day. So we had to look for something different."

Majors had arrived from New York the night before the interview, and was preparing to leave that night for South America. "The Six Million Dollar Man," in which he starred 1973-78, is very popular there and he is known as "El Hombre Nuclear."

He said he prepared himself for the role by reading three biographies of Cooper and looking at "High Noon."

"When we were filming there were scenes when I'd go — where I felt the presence of Gary Cooper. It's hard to explain the emotions an actor goes through to create a role. I wasn't trying to imitate him, but I felt his presence was with me. It is something I've never experienced before. I know it sounds silly."

"Let's say the role was 80-90 percent me and 10-20 trying to absorb something from 'High Noon.'"

Majors is taking a lot of heat for tampering with a classic, but his first movie, "Will Penny," with Charlton Heston, is beginning to take on the aura of a classic.

He did that during a break from his first series, "Big Valley." Besides "Big Valley" and "The Six Million Dollar Man," he also starred in two other series, "Owen Marshall, Counselor at Law" and "The Virginian."

Since quitting his "Bionic Man" role two years ago, he has spent most of his time making movies.

Lee Majors as marshal Will Kane and his screen wife, played by Katherine Cannon talk over Kane's impending meeting with gunfighters in new CBS television movie "High Noon, Part Two: The Return of Will Kane." Majors knew that when he accepted the marshal's role for the sequel to the classic movie "High Noon" — a role formidably played in the original by Gary Cooper — he was making himself a target for criticism. Two Midlanders are involved in new 'Saturday Night Live'

The new "Saturday Night Live," which airs Saturday at 10:30 p.m. on Channel 2, has two Midlanders involved in its production.

Doug McGrath, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cearle McGrath of Midland, was hired following his 1980 graduation from Princeton as a writer for the series.

Although this is McGrath's first professional writing job, he has written two musicals. He spent some time in Hollywood working on a television pilot which has not yet been picked up.

Liz Welch, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Welch of Midland, has been associated with "Saturday Night Live" for the last three years.

A graduate of the University of Texas at Austin, Miss Welch is currently a talent scout for the series.

Both are former members of Theatre Midland's Pickwick Play-ers.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Harvey Korman has been signed to star weekly with Tim Conway on the CBS "Tim Conway Show."

B. Donald Grant, programming vice president, said, "We're delighted to have these two top comedy stars working together. Their comedy talents provided many of the highlights of 'The Carol Burnett Show.'"

Korman won four Emmy Awards on the Burnett show.

Conway said, "Harvey still owes me money, and he promised it out of his first paycheck."

Singer-songwriter Paul Simon smiles during recent Los Angeles interview during which he talked about his new movie "One-Trick Pony." At 39, Simon is one of pop music's most successful and respected figures, considered by some to be the best songwriter in the business. (AP Laserphoto)

'One-Trick Pony' is not really about Simon's life

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — When a world-famous singer-songwriter spends almost four years of his life writing and starring in a movie about a singer-songwriter, the question is inevitable: Is the character autobiographical?

In the case of "One Trick Pony," Paul Simon's recent film, the answer started out as a qualified yes and ended up as a qualified no.

"It's not essentially autobiographical," Simon said, obviously weary but gamely fielding reporters' questions in a small hotel room after a concert.

"It's not about my life or my career or even my marriage, although when I set out to write about it, I thought perhaps by writing about it I would discover something about my marriage and why it didn't work.

"But that turned out not to be the case. I didn't discover anything.

"In fact, the more I got involved in writing about myself, the less it seemed to work, and so I let it drift away, and it's drifted away to such a degree that it's really not autobiographical at all — with the possible exceptions of the scenes between the character that I play, Jonah, and his son."

There are, in fact, obvious differences between Simon and the film's protagonist, Jonah Levin. But regardless of Simon's disclaimers there are some similarities too.

At 39, Simon is one of pop music's most successful and respected figures, considered by some to be the best songwriter in the business.

Simon not only survived his breakup with 1960s partner Art Garfunkel, he went on to produce some of his most admired and sophisticated music. The critically acclaimed "One Trick Pony" soundtrack, his first original collection of songs in five years, had little trouble climbing to the top of the album charts.

Like Simon, the character of Levin made it big in the late '60s. Levin's marriage is in trouble; Simon's ended in divorce.

Both Simon and his character dress in windbreakers and baseball caps, both live in New York. Both are soft-spoken men, and in person Simon somehow has the same air of vulnerability that makes Levin appealing in the film.

But while Simon's efforts to mature musically have been quite successful, Levin is a has-been who now struggles to make ends meet by playing one-night stands in a succession of towns where it always seems to be raining.

He and his band while away long hours on the road by seeing who can name the most dead rock stars; he has to fight to get into a record company executive's office. If nothing else, the film should be required viewing for anyone even contemplating a career in pop music.

"One Trick Pony" represents Simon's first full-fledged acting effort, following a small role in Woody Allen's "Annie Hall" and some guest-host work for NBC's "Saturday Night Live."

But Simon admits candidly that in both the film and his musical career, he is much happier as a writer than as a performer.

"Not to say that I don't enjoy singing or that I don't enjoy acting, but my intense interest and enjoyment comes from writing, not from performing."

"I think that I'm an adequate performer of my own material, and I think that's about all. I think I just about do justice to my own material, and I don't think I'm extraordinary as a performer, either as a singer or as a performer."

"When I think of what I'm going to do in the future, I don't think of myself as a performer, I think of myself as a writer. ... I would like to someday work on a Broadway musical as a writer."

Any more films in sight?
"I'll have to wait and see what happens with this movie and see whether the experience is pleasant or very unpleasant. If it's neutral, I would like to write another screenplay because of learned a lot from the first one. I think I'd be much better the second time."

Pat Carter looking for stars

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Pat Carter is looking for a few good singers.

Carter, an A&R (artist and repertoire) producer for RCA Records, spends an average of three hours a day listening to tapes submitted to RCA by aspiring singers.

Like the Marines who mold raw young men into combat-ready soldiers, Carter can take a singer with potential and help transform him or her into a polished entertainer.

He considers the tapes he gets like a veteran drill sergeant would size up recruits.

"I'll listen to the first verse of a song, and if it's bad, I can tell immediately," he said in an interview in his office.

"You can tell fairly quickly if there's no talent there.

"If the song is good, I'll listen to the whole song," the soft-spoken executive said. "If it's real good, I'll listen to it two or three times."

And if the singer is one of the few Carter believes is good enough to sign a contract with RCA, he will call and ask for more tapes or try to hear the artist in person.

Carter, demonstrating the way he works, played a tape submitted by an aspiring singer from Washington, D.C. After listening to one song, he said:

"He's OK, but the guys in the Holiday Inn sound as good as he does. He's not what I'm looking for. He's a good singer, but I didn't hear anything in his voice distinguishing. He doesn't have identity in his style."

On a scale of 1 to 10, with Kenny Rogers a 10, Carter rated the aspirant a 4.

"Some people have nice voices, but the music business is very competitive and we're selective about the talent we take," said Carter, 37, a former recording artist who ran the RCA publishing firm here for three years.

"Most acts we sign are experienced. We want someone who's experienced and been on the road several years and can handle himself on stage.

"We look for uniqueness in voice — not just a good voice, but phrasing or some special quality that sets them apart."

A mistake inexperienced singers make in their original songs is omitting an attention-grabber early in the composition, he said.

"People will say they have a nice ending, but you've got to have something in the first minute of the song to get their attention," Carter said.

Another mistake is that some people submit 50 songs for review.

Carter said he suggests they pick the two or three best.

He said every tape submitted to RCA is reviewed, usually within two or three weeks.

"A lot of the material is amateur and unprofessional," he said. "I find that after I've listened to material for three hours, I've had enough."

Mary Wright stars in 'Tintypes' Thomas in 'Tunnel'

NEW YORK (AP) — On Broadway, there's a nifty turn-of-the-century musical called "Tintypes." In it, Mary Catherine Wright, one of five in the cast, vocalizes, dances, does mime and dead-pan comedy.

It's a difficult show, what with more than 40 songs to run through eight times a week. But she feels OK after each performance — for a while:

"By that time, you're so warmed up you feel like you're actually flying. But then your body crashes. You need to rest. I don't have much of a social life when I'm doing a show like this."

Still, she's the first to say it's a much better deal than her first job here in 1969, when she came here from San Francisco and found herself starring as a temporary in an insurance company.

"I worked in claims," she said. "I'd write down things like 'the first party of the second part,' stuff like that, and console all the people who were so riled up. I was quite lucky, though."

As yes, the interviewer said, David Merrick called to complain his new show had been run over and hired you on the spot for the next one.

She laughed. "No such luck. But the director of the American Shakespeare Festival did call up. He'd seen me at the Oregon Shakespeare Festival and needed a couple of actresses. I wound up spending three seasons there."

Miss Wright, who is red-haired, in her early thirties and appears briefly as an Irish madam in a new Western epic, "Heaven's Gate," is of sturdy show-biz stock.

Her brother, Patrick, is a film producer. Her dad, Jimmy, used to be a big-band crooner. "He also used to be a boxer and refereed some matches at San Quentin Prison," she added.

She, meanwhile, started in show business in regional and repertory theaters before her Broadway debut a few years ago in "A History of the American Film." She learned her craft on the job.

"I haven't done much (formal) studying of anything, to tell the truth," says the lady, who dropped out of college in San Francisco, and studied a year at the city's American Conservatory Theater.

She got the "Tintypes" job about a year ago when a Broadway-bound musical, "Swing," in which she had a small role, expired during tryouts in Washington, D.C.

She's been with the show ever since its early days at the Arena Stage in Washington and its off-Broadway run, when she got a Drama Desk nomination for her work.

In addition to her stage work, she's made several TV pilots that failed to sell — "I'm of the Ed Norton school of comedy" — and she'd like to take another stab at films some day.

"I'm just starting to get used to it, the business of looking into a camera and talking at a piece of tape just above the lens," she said. "It's weird. You can do one line all day."

She's made three movies so far, all in minor roles. Her first was "Starting Over." It was a big thrill, she said. Unfortunately, no one will ever see her in it, she sighed.

"My scene went the way of" — she pointed down — "the floor."

Scheduled TV programs interrupted by weather

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Numerous television viewers who had anticipated watching "Rocky" or "The Godfather" on the tube, had to settle for reruns or "network trouble" slides after freak weather conditions interrupted network transmissions.

All three network stations here were forced to yank scheduled programming off the air Thursday after incoming microwave signals were distorted beyond use, station spokesmen said.

Problems with interrupted and distorted signals also were noted in Austin, San Antonio and Houston.

The problem, commonly known as "temperature inversion," was blamed on a cold front that moved between Dallas and Austin about mid-evening.

Boston art on tour

BOSTON, Mass. (AP) — "The Boston Tradition," an exhibition of 78 paintings by artists who lived, worked or exhibited in Boston from colonial times through the early 20th century, will travel to four major museums in the United States during 1980-81.

The paintings, on loan from Boston's Museum of Fine Arts, will be shown at the Des Moines (Iowa) Art Center Nov. 24, 1980 — Jan. 7, 1981; the Houston (Texas) Museum of Fine Arts Feb. 6-March 29, 1981; New York's Whitney Museum of American Art April 22-June 14, 1981, and in Philadelphia at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts June 26-Aug. 16, 1981.

The purpose of the exhibition is to display Boston's contribution to the history of painting in America, and to share that contribution with other regional art centers. Major funding for the project has been provided by the Metropolitan Life Foundation with additional grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and National Patrons of the American Federation of Arts.

Reynolds to star and direct film

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Burt Reynolds will direct and star in the thriller "Sharkey's Machine." Reynolds will play an Atlanta vice policeman who stumbles upon a plot that reaches into the highest political circles of the country. It is based on the novel by William Diehl.
