Season to be thankful

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — This column was written on Thanksgiving Day, four days ago. It is too important to skip without expressions of gratitude for our abundant lives, too fine a season to let pass without voicing thankfulness for the good fortune so many Americans enjoy.

HEARST

Under the circumstances, thanks are tempered by the continued criminal behavior of the Ayatollah Khomeini in Iran. After all, our 52 hostages there never did anything to Iran or anyone else, for that matter, and to hold them in prison is No. 1 — in arrogant defiance of International

Iran's demands topic of talks

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — President Carter met Saturday with several top officials at his Maryland mountaintop retreat to discuss clarifications of the U.S. response to Iran demands for release of the 52 American hostages.

Carter met with Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher, White House Counsel Lloyd Cutler, Assistant Secretary of State Harold Saunders, Deputy Treasury Secretary Robert Carswell, and Roberts Owen, State Department legal adviser.

Neither the White House nor the State Department was willing to release any details of the meeting at Camp David.

Christopher had traveled to Algeria earlier this month in efforts to win the release of the hostages, held in Iran since Nov. 4, 1979, and he presided over two days of talks last week at the State Department with three Algerian intermediaries in negotiations aimed at ending the more than year-long stalemate.

State Department spokesman John Trattner had cautioned Thursday against optimism in the wake of the Washington talks, although spokesmen earlier had described the sessions as "useful."

Meanwhile, Iranian government officials withheld official comment Saturday on the fate of the American hostages and said they were unaware of any new developments.

Spokesmen for Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai said in telephone interviews they had no new information despite several news reports last week claiming the government had taken custody of the hostages from the U.S. Embassy captors.

Later, Hashemi Rafsanjani, speaker of the Iranian Parliament, or Majlis, brushed aside questions on the subject at a news conference. Asked about the reports and for information on the location of the hostages, Rafsanjani smiled and replied: "I don't know where they are, I didn't even know where they were before."

The exact location of the Americans has not been confirmed since the unsuccessful U.S. rescue attempt last April, when the hostages' captors claimed they had scattered the Americans throughout the country.

ULLI report confirms his housing advice

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

A year of work has gone into planning Midland's development in the 1980s. But the hardest part is yet to come.

Improving the quality of life in south and east Midland was pinpointed as the primary target for this decade, and the Urban Land Institute was called in to evaluate the situation and recommend methods to achieve the hoped-for goals. Their suggestions centered around implementation and future effectiveness of a non-profit community development corporation.

One Midlander who was satisfied with the ULI ideas was Michael Williams. He had been hired by the Objectives for Midland advisory committee to gather data on housing and commercial development in south and east Midland. It was this material which the Urban Land Institute scrutinized for its recommendations.

WHAT HE DISCOVERED in the target area was lack of new houses, few conventional loans for homes and businesses, high employment and a void of leadership among the minorities who comprise those communities. The studied area is bounded by Big Spring Street, Wadley Avenue, Fairgrounds Road and Florida Avenue.

Williams had started with a larger area, but found "the problem was a whole lot bigger than we thought it was," and the area was reduced.

He sifted through all available material on housing programs in Midland — Christmas in April, the county Section 8 rental subsidy, low interest home loan bond programs. He also looked at deed and trust records to see where the money in Midland was going and if there is redlining.

From his information, Williams said most of the homes sold in south and east Midland are "seller financed, as opposed to conventional financing or Federal Housing Administration. I don't know if this says financing isn't available, or that the money isn't going to these people."

He found numerous programs for the elderly, but there was no cohesi-

Midland man, 38, crushed to death in industrial mishap

A Midland man was crushed to death Saturday morning when a front-end loader pinned him against a tractor he was repairing at the M.F. Machen Construction yard on Garden City Highway, a Sheriff's Department spokesman said.

Justice of the Peace Robert H. Pine pronounced William H. "Buddy" Johnson, 38, dead at the scene after a front-end loader left running evidently jumped into gear and pinned Johnson against a tractor.

Sheriff's deputies were dispatched to the yard on Highway 158 approximately one mile east of I-20 shortly before 10:30 a.m. Saturday after the accident occurred. The Sheriff's Department spokesman said Johnson and another man were repairing the tractor, while a third man was driving the front-end loader. The forklift driver parked his vehicle to get something from inside a nearby building, but left it running.

Apparently, the spokesman said, the front-end loader threw itself into gear and started moving toward Johnson and the other man. The loader pinned Johnson up against the tractor and crushed him to death. The other man was not injured.

Services for Johnson, of 1512 S. Baird St., are pending at Newline W. Ellis Funeral Home.

There's nothing a pet pussycat likes better than a scratch on the back. Gene Byers obliges his former kitty — Poo, a 150-pound lioness. Byers, who also owns two cougars, sold Poo last week for $500. (Staff Photo by Bruce Partain)

Once upon a lion...

By KAY CRITES
Staff Writer

Poo, a 150-pound lioness, was in a rather nasty mood Saturday morning.

She lunged at the photographer (she apparently didn't like his camera) and gave a little nip on the chest of her past owner and present landlord, Gene Byers.

She's been declawed, but the photographer didn't know that when she lunged and snarled. He only knew she was being held by what, at the moment, appeared to be a rather flimsy dog leash.

Poo was finally controlled, put back in her cage next to two rare South American cougars, and soon calmed down enough to be scratched on the back and under the chin with a large rawhide "bone" for dogs. Her pleasure was evident.

"She's having a bad day," said Byers about her short feline temper tantrum. But she's not really dangerous because she's small enough to "manhandle if necessary," he said.

Byers has had Poo for about two months. He bought her from a man in Houston who raises "big cats." In fact, the Houston owner, David Bayne, said Poo is a former television star, having been used in several commercials. Bayne described the lioness as "just a really lazy animal."

"I really planned to breed her," said Byers. "From what I can see, wildlife is dwindling as it is, and many species will be extinct within the next decade. So, the only hope for a lot of species is in zoos or as domestic pets."

"But not for the average family," added Poo's new owner Jerry, whose last name is being withheld for the animal's safety.

However, Byers decided that he really wanted to concentrate on breeding and raising the cougars, so he sold Poo. Jerry bought her for $500.

"We'll keep her as a pet, and maybe later move her out (in the county) and try to get a male," he said. Jerry has some acreage in the county, where he plans to build a large pen with an enclosed barn for Poo.

Neither Byers nor Jerry have any special training for raising the cats.

"It just takes common sense and, most of all, thinking about the needs of the animal," said Byers.

Byers ran a newspaper ad to sell the lion, and got "hundreds" of calls; most were simply curious.

"I had some really stupid calls," he said, "from people who wanted to know if she jumped through hoops and people wanting to buy her for their husbands and then stick her in the garage. That's where you get animals who are being mistreated."

Ricky Yaden, a friend of the new owner, added, "Yeah, you can't just do these the way you do a dog — just let them sit out in the back yard and throw some food out to them."

"It takes," said Byers, "a special kind of person that has a sincere interest in taking care of it."

The lioness and cougars are all declawed. Poo was declawed when Byers bought her. The cougars were declawed by a Midland veterinarian. "He (the vet) almost had a cat because he had never done anything that big."

Byers said he had always had a lot of pets while growing up and "always wanted" a big cat. He found his first

Plans for retail, office center off Midkiff Road announced

Billingsley Enterprises, Inc., has announced plans to build a combination office and retail complex on a 7.25-acre tract at 3325 W. Wadley Ave., just off Midkiff Road, according to John B. Billingsley Jr., chief executive officer of the development firm.

Called La Villita, the project will include a 68,000 square foot atrium office building, 48,000 square feet of retail specialty stores, and 16,000 square feet to be occupied by the Midland Athletic Club.

The two-story office building will be tailored to the needs of tenants allowing 450 square feet and up. An atrium will add a garden to the view within the structure.

Free parking in 474 spaces is planned for tenants and shoppers. Access will be from Wadley Avenue.

Billingsley said construction will begin in January 1981 and plans indicate the first tenants will move in during August 1981.

HBF Construction Inc., of Midland, will be general contractor in constructing La Villita, according to plans made by architect Byron Fols of Fort Worth. Walter F. Pate of Midland will work out the tenant design and layout.

Other local developments by Billingsley Enterprises include North Park Shopping Center, The Western Building on Andrews Highway, Western State Bank Building and Western Park Plaza, located adjacent to the bank building. The company also is engaged in other developments in other parts of Texas.

La Villita, to be located at 3325 W. Wadley Ave., will include an open shopping center of retail stores as well as an office building and the Midland Athletic Club. See related photo, Page 5A.

veness to these various projects. "There is no single person coordinating all these programs and services."

By the time the nine members of the ULI came to Midland in early November, Williams said he had already concluded from his work "there is no way you can do all this (upgrading the target area) solely with private money and, more importantly, with private direction."

number of people who apply for the money," he added. Some of Williams' data didn't make it back in time for the ULI study. It concerns the appearance of neighborhoods in the target area and was being broken down into statistics by a computer.

Looking at the target area, Williams said the easiest place to put up a house is in Tract 1, explaining the water and sewer facilities already are in place. "And it has some degree of ethnic balance."

Overall, Williams said he was "extremely pleased with some of the suggestions. The ULI panel comprehended what was going on in Midland in a very short time."

Looking at the ULI's recommendations to get rid of undesirable businesses along Lee Street, Williams was pleased about a possible redevelopment of that area. But he charged that the citizens in that part must deal first with the crime situation there.

The residential decline should be stabilized by then with the area beginning to grow as more houses are built, he said.

Buidling permits total $9.6 million

Building permits issued for the month of November totaled $9,697,742 as of 5 p.m. Friday in the city's permit office.

The year-to-date total came up to $129,960,000 this week as some $3,198,988 worth of construction was permitted.

Of 18 new permits issued this past week, eight were for new residences for a total value of $763,738. Four permits for new commercial buildings totaled $2,367,000 for the week. Another four permits were issued for residential alterations amounting to $38,250, while two permits were issued for commercial alterations for a total of $30,000.

Two of the four permits issued for new commercial structures will be new office buildings, while a third will be a large downtown parking garage. Mideo Properties took out a permit for a $1,450,000 office building to be located at 711 N. Colorado St. The building will be a two-story structure with 23,000 square feet of office space.

Clayton Williams took out a permit for a $150,000 office building to be located at 2709 Garden City Hwy.

Engin Plaza Joint Venture took out a permit for $764,000 for a new parking structure to be located at 301 S. Pecos Ave.

And Jack Wood Oil Co. took out a permit for the construction of a $3,000 sign to be located on Big Spring Street.

Alterations to commercial properties included permits to Ed Pritchard for alterations at 111 S. B St. at a cost of $10,000; R.J. Lauadig, $20,000 of improvements to a laundry area at 1105 N. Midkiff St.

The eight new residence permits included one to Dab Waldron for a $150,000 house at 4477 Hackberry Drive. Another went to Clyde C. Brown at 24 Hialeah Ave. for $130,000. Neil Construction received a permit to build a $250,000 home at 4 Bay Miadrews. Ramcon applied for a permit for 5100 W. Storey Ave. to build a $62,250 house. Leprehan Homes Inc. applied for three permits for new homes at 101 Sprayberry Drive, $34,776; 3801 Cedar Spring Drive, $33,600; and 3112 Roosevelt Ave., $28,112. And Grafa Construction was awarded a permit to build a $75,000 home at 3905 Crestline Drive.

Residential alteration permits went to Roy Rotan at 2408 Castleford Drive, $14,000 worth of repairs due to fire damage; Richard Addinon, $12,500 in repairs because of fire damage at 3517 Hyde Park Ave.;

E.A. Richman, add a storage building at 3902 Bedford Drive; and Chris Rysman, 1400 S. Camp St., $6,500 worth of improvements.

Texas man escapes

JUNCTION CITY, Kan. (AP) — A prisoner being held on charges of attempted murder of a policeman and burglary stole his way out of the Geary County jail Friday night and was still at large Saturday.

The sheriff's office identified the fugitive as Leon Henry Stanley, 32, of Galveston, Texas. He was believed to have fled on foot, heading toward either Missouri or Texas.

A sheriff's spokesman, Ossian Satterwhite, said Stanley cut his way through a cell lock and through a chain on another door with some undetermined instrument.

Satterwhite said Stanley was wanted in Missouri on murder charges, and that Missouri authorities had been notified.

New relief effort begins

By SAMUEL KOO
Associated Press Writer

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — A major international relief operation swung into action Saturday to feed, clothe and shelter tens of thousands of southern Italy's earthquake victims. The wide-ranging help came as winds, snow and torrential rains pounded the area, stricken by the quake a week ago Sunday.

Searchers using specially trained dogs and sophisticated listening devices made three dramatic rescues, two of them children buried alive in Lioni and the third an elderly woman in another town.

"This is a living hell," 65-year-old farmer Antonio Milano told a reporter in Lioni, in hard-hit Avellino province, as he watched soldiers set up tents in a school ground in ankle-deep mud.

"The children are crying constantly because it's too cold to sleep and I have nothing hot to offer them," he said. "For the first time in my life, I realize death might be preferable to a certain type of living."

A bulldozer operator clearing rubble in Lioni spotted the leg of 10-year-old Carlo Campitello sticking out from the debris. Rescue workers said the boy weakly called out, "mamma, mamma," when found after a 137-hour burial in the rubble. They said the boy was orphaned in the quake.

French technicians and Italian firemen pulled 8-year-old boy Pietro Jorlano from under 36 feet of debris, but he died at a Naples hospital later. He was found with noise detectors that picked up his heartbeat in an area given up as holding no survivors. Relief crews had already dropped disinfectants in the rubble, believing it held only the dead. Authorities said his parents, too, had been killed.

An Italian army captain in Sant' Angelo del Lombardi, where an 80-year-old woman was found alive, said "These miracles are boosting the morale of the overworked soldiers and firemen."

The Italian military command reported that 2,913 bodies have been recovered and listed 1,548 people missing.

National police in Rome said 2,285 are dead and 1,211 are missing.

Authorities said 265,000 people are homeless. American paratroopers, West German army engineers and Polish mountain climbers were among the foreign personnel pouring in to bolster Italy's 26,000 soldiers pressed into rescue work.

Italian and U.S. helicopters ferried tents and blankets in poor visibility and winds gusting up to 60 mph. Hundreds of Italian volunteers joined troops driving trucks, buses and campers loaded with relief goods over slippery mountain roads to reach the villages.

Nearly 150 American soldiers, including 100 who arrived Saturday from northern Italy, were erecting tents. The United States has contributed 2,000 tents, 20,000 blankets and tons of foodstuffs since an airlift was launched Wednesday.

West Germany sent a mobile hospital with 80 doctors, nurses and technicians, 1,000 tents and other relief material. Seven special trains were bringing in 700 engineers who helped rebuild Italy's quake-stricken Friuli region in 1976.

Bulgaria contributed a plane-load of rice, sugar, blankets and medicine. France sent technicians and Argentina airlifted tents.

The Italian news agency ANSA, quoting Vatican sources, said Pope John Paul II has allocated an unstated amount of Vatican money for the quake victims.

Giuseppe Zamberletti, chief of rescue operations, commanded 1,500 hotel rooms on the Amalfi coast and the Sorrento area for the homeless. Two hotel chains in Puglia and Calabria in Italy's deep south made 3,000 more rooms available, at no charge for the first 10 days.

Two freighters loaded with 700 mobile homes were leaving the northern port of Genoa for Salerno. The state railroad has made available over 1,500 cars for temporary housing. Zamberletti was quoted in a newspaper interview as saying 5,500 more were needed.

Many Italians face quake tragedy alone

By CLARA HEMPHILL
Associated Press Writer

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Many of the Italians whose homes were devastated by last week's earthquake faced their tragedy alone — digging with their hands through the rubble in search of relatives while awaiting the agonizingly slow arrival of government rescue teams.

When help came, it was disorganized. Some of the 179 southern towns hit by the quake on Sunday, a week ago, got too much food. Others did not get enough. Piles of clothing were dumped on the streets in some towns while the stricken in other villages shivered from the cold.

Despite efforts of 13,000 army troops, many towns in the quake area east of Naples had only volunteers to help them for days after the killer quake.

The Italian military command Saturday reported 2,913 people dead and 1,548 missing — and presumed dead.

"God should not punish us like this," said Antonio Piccino of Conza di Comania, where more than half the population of 1,000 is believed dead. "In 30 seconds everything I worked for, for 30 years, was gone. It was a beautiful house."

His words trailed off and he wiped at his tears. "Look at it now. There's nothing."

All but eight of the 200 stucco houses with red tile roofs in Piccino's hilltop town were destroyed. Villagers donned face masks against the smell of decaying bodies as they slogged through the rain to salvage whatever belongings they could from the rubble.

"You have to have a good memory to remember where the streets were," said Antonio DiMattia, who drove from France to dig his mother's body from the rubble. "The town has been wiped off the map."

Villagers in many towns said they would move north to find work rather than begin the discouraging task of rebuilding their towns from scratch.

They will join the exodus of people who have already left the poverty of Southern Italy to seek jobs in West Germany, Switzerland, France and Italy's northern industrial cities.

The quake struck at 7:35 p.m. as many Italians were eating Sunday supper. The main tremor registered 6.8 on the Richter scale and was followed by dozens of aftershocks throughout the week. It was Europe's most deadly quake in over half a century, when a Jan. 13, 1915, tremor killed 30,000 people in the Avezzano area of central Italy.

Italy is prone to quakes because it sits atop a major fault, or crack in the earth's crust, which runs from North Africa to the Alps.

The quake left an estimated 300,000 homeless. For days, thousands of people slept in cars or in makeshift shelters of plastic tarps stretched between cars.

A dreary rain which later turned to snow added to their misery. The tent camps where thousands were living turned to muddy fields.

The area hit by the quake is huge — 10,000 square miles — and has a population of about 7 million. It is larger than the state of Massachusetts in both size and population.

Two super-highways run through the area, but the roads that connect them to the tiny mountain towns are winding and treacherous, making it difficult for emergency vehicles to get through.

Several hospitals and more than a dozen police stations were leveled. Many mayors, police and firefighters who would normally help organize rescue operations were killed.

Many people in the villages complained about what they called delays and inefficiency of the rescue work.

President Sandro Pertini criticized the efforts and said, "Those who failed must be punished."

Interior Minister Virginio Rognoni, who supervised the rescue work, submitted his resignation late Wednesday but Premier Arnaldo Forlani rejected it the next day, saying it would only exacerbate the problems.

Towns just a few miles apart had dramatically different rescue aid.

In Balvano, where a church collapsed during evening Mass and more than 80 people died, truckloads of boxsprings, mattresses, and tents arrived. Hundreds of soldiers quickly dug out the bodies and the injured were moved to hospitals in neighboring towns.

But in Ricigliano, just a few miles away, residents dug out many of their 15 dead by themselves. Food was in short supply until an American newspaper reporter stopped a truck of supplies that Balvano had turned away and led it to Ricigliano.

A tent hospital with 40 doctors, nurses and volunteers was set up Conza di Comania; there was not a single patient.

"There aren't any wounded here," Giuliano Dominique, a volunteer said. "They're all dead. The only people alive here are the relatives who have come from abroad to find their families."

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude.

Dream vacation becomes nightmare for Americans

LAPORTE, Ind. (AP) — It should have been a dream vacation — 17 days free in Italy. But for Edward and Antoinette Baldrige the dream was shattered by a devastating earthquake that killed more than 3,100 people.

"It scared the daylight out of you," said Baldrige, 67. "We were standing in the middle of the room and plaster was falling all around us. The screaming was the worst part, screaming all around us."

Baldrige said he and his wife were sleeping in a Naples hotel Nov. 23 when the earthquake occurred. Mrs. Baldrige, 62, had won a 17-day trip to Italy in a Chicago newspaper contest.

"The shaking was like swells on the ocean — the mattress raising and falling just like a raft," he said. "There were horrible creaking and cracking sounds coming from the hotel."

Baldrige said the couple had turned in after passing up a trip to Mount Vesuvius, where he said the quake was worse.

After collecting their luggage, the Hoosiers tried to leave the hotel. But Baldrige said the manager stopped them in the lobby and directed them to stand under a marble arch with a California family also waiting out the quake and accompanying aftershocks.

Outside, people were being crushed to death by falling buildings.

After two hours, he said, they returned to their rubble-strewn room on the third floor.

Dallas opera fans aid quake victims

DALLAS (AP) — When Dallas Civic Opera patrons were asked to help earthquake relief efforts in Italy during an intermission Friday night, they donated more than $1,300 in 15 minutes.

The collection was in conjunction with a visit to the opera by Italian ambassador Paolo Pansa Codronio, who left his devastated homeland to attend the American premiere of Antonio Vivaldi's opera "Orlando Furioso."

The donations would be given to the American Red Cross, said DCO general director Plato Karayannis.

The Naples-born ambassador thanked Americans for "concern, sympathy and prayers" given the Italian people in the wake of last Sunday's earthquake, the worst to strike the country in half a century.

Pansa Codronio's relatives, including a brother, were among the survivors of the tremors that left an estimated 3,000 dead and thousands missing.

He said he had not yet surveyed the "very large" devastated area, which he estimated was 90 percent of southern Italy, but expressed "great fear" the death toll would top 5,000.

"It was foggy when it hit," he said at a Southern Methodist University music symposium before the opera.

The continuing torrential rains "couldn't have been worse" in hampering rescue efforts, he added. Roads leading to mountain hamlets not made impassable by the quakes were washed out by floods.

"We're trying to alleviate the immediate hardships right now," he said, "and will try to rebuild as soon as possible."

The task would take a "tremendous effort of national solidarity," he said, but volunteers are "driving in from all over Italy" to aid the army and relief agencies in the digging-out process.

Although strong criticism has been aimed at the Italian government for its slow reaction to the crisis, Pansa Codronio praised the "quick, spontaneous effort" of citizen volunteers.

More than 200,000 people are without food and shelter, he said, and tents, mobile homes, prefabricated homes and drinking water are needed badly.

DEATHS

Hugh Allen Boyd

CRANE — Services for Hugh Allen Boyd, 73, of Crane, were Saturday in the Crane Christian Church with burial in Crane Garden of Memories under the direction of Richard W. Box Funeral Home.

Boyd died Thursday in a Crane hospital after a brief illness.

He was born July 16, 1907, in Comanche. He was married to Lita Lowe April 12, 1939, in San Angelo. He was a member of the Church of Christ and was a foreman at the McElroy Ranch. He had lived in Crane since 1965.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, Robert Allen Boyd and Billy Hugh Boyd, both of Crane; two sisters, Mrs. H.S. Whittenburg and Mrs. E.F. Powell, both of Fort Stockton, and Mrs. Norman Coleman of Birmingham, Ala.; three brothers, Leonard Boyd, Ray Boyd and Homer Boyd, all of Ozona; and five grandchildren.

'Buddy' Johnson

Services for William H. "Buddy" Johnson, 38, 1512 S. Baird St., are pending at Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Johnson died Saturday as the result of injuries received in an industrial accident at the M.F. Machen Co. yard on the Garden City Highway.

Survivors include a wife and two children.

Theresa Moore

Theresa Alice Moore, 75, of Midland died Thursday in a Midland hospital after a brief illness.

Services will be at 10:30 a.m. Monday in the Abbey Chapel of Restland Memorial Park with burial to follow in Restland. Thomas Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Moore was born in Galveston Oct. 31, 1905. She lived in Galveston and Dallas most of her life, moving to Midland in 1970 from Dallas. She was a member of Greenville Avenue Christian Church of Dallas.

Survivors include two sons, Jess I Moore of Midland and Jerry Moore of Dallas; and five grandchildren.

Joe B. Johnson

Services for Joe B. Johnson, 92, 4702 W. Illinois Ave., will be Monday in Clarksville with burial in English Cemetery there directed by Clarksville Funeral Home. Local arrangements were handled by Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Johnson died Saturday in a Midland convalescent home following an illness.

He moved to Midland eight years ago from Red River County where he had lived all his life. He was a Baptist.

Survivors include a son, Abilene Johnson of Redway, Calif.; two daughters, Alma Welch of Midland and Frances Northcutt of W. Monroe, La.; 27 grandchildren, and eight great-grandchildren.

Dai Shing Joe

Dai Shing Joe, 91, of 3627 Imperial Ave., died Saturday in a Midland hospital after an illness.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Monday in the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with Dr. Daniel Vestal of the First Baptist Church officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Joe was born and raised in Canton, China. He moved to Canada and operated a restaurant there. In 1947 he returned to Canton and retired. He later moved to Hong Kong and then to the United States in 1977. He lived in Midland with his son.

Survivors include his son, Joe Chung of Midland; a sister, Mrs. Y. Y. Wong of Sacramento, Calif.; and seven grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be Tim Chau, Bobby Joe Chau, Steve Chau, Watkon Joe, Lemyee Chau and Joe Dot Chau.

An overall view of the La Villita complex scheduled to open in August 1981 is seen in this artist's rendition. The complex will allow for 474 parking spaces for the tenants of the office building section, as well as for shoppers in the retail section.

U. S. Embassy protests new arrests in Haiti

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The U.S. Embassy filed a protest Saturday with the government of President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier over a new wave of arrests of opposition leaders and journalists.

An embassy spokesman declined comment on the arrests but said, "We have protested."

In Washington, the State Department said it had "reliable reports indicating that as of Nov. 20 Haitian authorities instituted widespread arrests" and "these reports, if true, are a cause of great concern."

Reliable sources in Port au Prince said at least a dozen political leaders, journalists and civil rights activists were taken into custody Friday.

The government issued no statement, but its radio station and newspaper carried a communique warning the public against "plots" aimed at "stirring up" the people.

Foreign Minister Georges Salomon could not be reached for comment.

Steve Forester, an attorney for the Haitian Refugee Center in Miami, told reporters there that Duvalier's government arrested 40-50 people Friday and Saturday. He said it was the largest number of mass arrests since Duvalier was installed in office in April 1971 after the death of his father, Francois Duvalier, who also had been president-for-life.

Among those reported under arrest were Gregori Eugene, head of the Christian Social Party and publisher of the newsletter Fraternite; L'Enfantin Joseph, secretary-general of the Haitian Human Rights League; the daughter and wife of Sylvio Claude, a prominent dis-ident who has been in jail since mid-October; two writers: from the newspaper Le Petit Samedi Soir and journalists associated with Radio Progres, Radio Metropole and Radio Haiti

Inter. A spokesman for Radio Metropole said Marcus Garcia, the news program director, was arrested at his home Friday.

The State Department

statement said, "We would view an attempt by Haitian authorities to silence the free expression of political opinion as inconsistent with the government's previous expressions of an intention to move toward a more liberal system." "It is our hope that those arrested will without delay or harm be freed, or if they are charged, bail will be considered," it added.

Syria will defend against Jordan regardless of price

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Syria would defend its national security against neighboring Jordan "regardless of risks or costs," according to official sources.

They said U.S. Ambassador Talcott Seelye asked for a formal explanation from the Soviet-supported Syrian government of its reported military buildup along the border with pro-Western Jordan.

Syrian officials responded by telling Seelye that Jordan has become a "major training camp for anti-Syrian guerrillas" and Syria was determined to use "all its means to head off this threat," according to the sources.

They did not say when or how Seelye had sought the explanation of the Syrian buildup, which according to Western diplomats consists of some 20,000 troops and 600 tanks.

Jordan's King Hussein responded by moving army units and British-made Centurion tanks to reinforce his northern garrisons.

The government-controlled Syrian media, raising the specter of new violence in the Mideast, said President Hafez Assad has a right to undertake military action across the border to defend national security.

Government officials and newspapers claim Hussein is helping the Moslem Brotherhood, which is outlawed in Syria, wage a campaign of bombings and political assassinations in Syria.

Jordan has denied supporting the fundamentalist Moslem organization that is seeking to overthrow Syria's ruling Socialist Baath Party.

The Carter administration said Friday it considered Jordan "a friend whose security is important to the United States." Israel said it was "closely watching" developments along the Syria-Jordan border.

The Iran-Iraq war has sharpened the Syria-Jordan feud, with Syria supporting Iran and Jordan backing Iraq.

The leftist Lebanese newspaper As-Safir, which has ties to Syria, said Iraqi President Saddam Hussein has expressed the belief that Syria might go to war against Jordan to close Iraq's main supply routes. Iraqi ports, all on the Shatt al-Arab waterway separating Iraq and Iran, have been shut down by the war.

Jordan has been allowing cargo bound for Iraq to be unloaded at Jordan's Red Sea port of Aqaba for overland shipment to Baghdad.

$245 million in insurance funds due in hotel fire

By PATRICK ARNOLD
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — At least $245 million in insurance money is available to rebuild the fire-blackened MGM Grand hotel-casino and cover claims stemming from the Nov. 21 blaze that killed 84 people and injured another 700, according to a hotel official.

built. New provisions now require sprinklers and smoke alarms in all areas of hotels but do not apply to existing resorts.

Most of the victims died of smoke inhalation in the upper floors of the 26-story structure.

In addition to the damage claims, the hotel also could face employees' disability claims due to a management decision made less than two months before the fire.

State Insurance Commissioner Don Heath said hotel management opted for a new plan that shifted employee disability coverage from the Nevada Industrial Commission to its own carrier. Heath said the hotel had a total of $21.5 million in coverage for its employees.

Hospital strike 'inevitable'

BALTIMORE (AP) — It "appears inevitable" that members of the National Union of Hospital and Health Care Employees will go on strike against six city hospitals, the local's president said Saturday.

Federally mediated contract negotiations continued Saturday among Local 1199-E of the union and the managements of Johns Hopkins, Sinai, Maryland General, Greater Baltimore Medical Center, Lutheran and Provident hospitals, according to union and hospital officials.

But Ronald Hollie, president of the local, which represents 3,000 service and maintenance workers and some practical nurses and technicians, said in a statement:

"A strike of (four of the hospitals) Monday morning, Dec. 1, appears inevitable."

Contracts for hospital workers at four hospitals expire at midnight Sunday. Union officials said that if negotiations don't show adequate progress, those hospitals would be struck at 7 a.m. Monday.

Contracts for workers at Sinai and Provident expire at midnight Monday. The union has said any strike at those institutions would begin at 7 a.m. Tuesday.

Major issues in the negotiations include wages, cost-of-living adjustments and health and welfare benefits, union officials said.

"The hospitals are seeking to take back or sharply reduce the union members' cost-of-living protection and health and welfare plans, without which most of them would have to go on welfare," Hollie said.

Union spokesman Bill Artis declined to say how much more in wages the union is seeking, but said its members average about $5 an hour.

The union is seeking an increase in the amount paid by hospitals to the union's national health and welfare fund of 1 1/2 percent of the employees' payroll, to a total of 11 1/2 percent.

"This is big money," noted Leonard Marcus, a Sinai vice president.

He said his hospital is obtaining data indicating that Baltimore-area hospitals are paying more than their share of the cost of benefits paid out to hospital employees by the fund.

"We're getting ripped off," he charged.

Johns Hopkins officials contended late Friday that Hopkins also is paying excessively into the national fund.

Some buses will run Monday

ATLANTA (AP) — Some striking school bus drivers will be back on the job after the Thanksgiving Day holiday to transport handicapped public school students and those in a voluntary desegregation program, officials of a strike-bound bus company said Saturday.

But most of the 30,000 students who usually depend on National Transportation Service buses will have to use public transportation or find another way to school Monday.

An NTS spokesman said at least 100 of the 290 bus drivers who walked off the job over a pay dispute Nov. 20, closing down schools for a day, said they would report on Monday. He said the company will put 48 school buses on the road to carry the disabled and students in a desegregation program.

Officials hoped more buses would be running by later in the week, depending on how many drivers actually return to work.

"After Monday, we'll be in a position to determine how quickly we can reinstate all of our neighborhood routes," said Atlanta School Superintendent Alonzo Crim. "We think it will be a relatively short period of time before we have full service again."

The Atlanta school board signed a $4.6 million contract with NTS this year to transport Atlanta students who live more than a mile from school. Last year the Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Authority had the contract but lost it when fares doubled.

During the strike, MARTA has offered the school board 25-cent fares for students instead of the usual 50-cents. The school board, meanwhile, is withholding $25,000 a day from NTS during the strike.

Meat cutters contract amended

By The Associated Press

Union officials in Southeast Texas Saturday planned to present an amended contract proposal to striking meat cutters in a series of meetings.

All-day negotiations also were under way in Irving, a Dallas suburb, as the expiration of a contract for about 150 Kroger meat cutters drew near.

Bob Nelson, president of the local that represents the Irving processing plant, said workers would begin picketing the plant on their own behalf if no settlement could be reached by midnight, when the contract was due to expire.

The meat cutters already were off the job in support of the Houston-area strike.

Reagan looks westward for aides

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Ronald Reagan is looking westward for the conservative economic brainpower to turn campaign vows into the specifics of government programs.

Losing its clout is the Brookings Institution here, President Carter's favorite "think tank" as well as a pool of talent and a school of thought for earlier Democratic presidents. Gaining new stature is the Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace at Stanford University.

Because a president knows whose ideas he's comfortable with, and whose senior fellows he'd like to borrow, a new group of thinkers and planners is on the way to the nation's capital.

In setting up his new administration, Reagan has sought advice from a number of scholars from eastern schools such as Yale and from West Coast institutions such as the University of Southern California.

But the Hoover Institution, set up more than a half-century ago by the president whose name it bears, has more than a dozen representatives — by far the most of any institution or school — on task forces helping plan Reagan's important economic moves. And many of those scholars and writers are expected to find their way into upper- and middle-level government jobs in the new administration.

Reagan himself "comes here occasionally to meet with our people," Hoover historian Peter Dulgnan said earlier this year in California. In fact, the institution and the president-elect feel comfortable enough together that he's been made an honorary fellow.

On the other hand, Reagan's people haven't had much to do with Brookings, where Jimmy Carter was an enthusiastic visitor four years ago.

Carter filled a number of important posts with Brookings people, including economic advisers Charles Schultze and Barry Bosworth. But few at Brookings are expecting to be called by the new administration.

Bosworth returned to Brookings some time ago, and Schultze is expected to do the same Jan. 20. But a Brookings spokesman said the institution will hardly be the "Democratic government in exile" that some have tried to dub it.

"We're not looking for many of the Carter administration people to come here in January," Brookings information director James Farrell said recently. "There's not going to be a big reversal of motion."

He also points out that Brookings' Robert Crandall has been working on an economic task force for Reagan. But Farrell acknowledges that his institution is commonly perceived as a more likely haven for liberals than conservatives, a perception he describes as "just a burden to carry."

Out in California, spokesmen for the Hoover Institution say they do have some Democrats on their rolls. But their institution is widely perceived as more conservative than many — Brookings, for example.

They're pleased to claim such conservative economists as Milton Friedman, Martin Anderson and Darrell Trent from the institution are in Washington now as top economic advisers for the president-elect's transition team.

The institution's director, W. Glenn Campbell, is no stranger to conservative causes, either, having taken a leave of absence in 1964 to work in Sen. Barry Goldwater's unsuccessful presidential campaign. Campbell himself is working on a couple of Reagan transition task forces.

He says he is not surprised to find the ideas of the institution's analysts and writers in demand now at the highest government level.

"Compared to Harvard, Yale or Berkeley, we are conservative, but we're closer to the mainstream than they are," he said. "The mainstream has moved toward the Hoover Institution more than the Hoover Institution has moved toward the mainstream."

Short inaugural ceremony in works

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Ronald Reagan wants a short inaugural ceremony — hopefully no longer than an hour — with plenty of flags, color and pageantry, planners said Saturday.

And the Presidential Inaugural Committee is considering suggestions that military units leave their rifles at home and carry flags in the Inauguration Day parade, a spokesman said.

"The plans are a long way from being finished. We don't know that we'll be able to do the parade in an hour, but that's a goal right now," said John Lengel, director of communications for the committee.

The inauguration of President Carter four years ago took three hours.

Reagan says rejections won't slow, change Cabinet selection process

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Ronald Reagan arrived here Saturday to attend a hospital benefit and said rejections from early favorites William E. Simon and George P. Shultz will not change the pace of his Cabinet selection process.

The president-elect told reporters he could not say precisely when he would announce his choices for the top government posts, "but we are making progress and I hope to do so as soon as I can."

Reagan and his wife, Nancy, flew here to appear Saturday night at a $2,500-a-plate, star-studded benefit for the Eisenhower Medical Clinic.

Former President Gerald R. Ford, whose wife, Betty, is a trustee of the hospital, was to introduce Reagan to the guests and entertainer Sammy Davis Jr. was to perform for the gathering.

The Reagans planned to spend the night at the estate of Walter Annenberg, former U.S. ambassador to Great Britain. They were to return to Los Angeles today.

Reagan, speaking to reporters after his chartered Tiger Airlines plane landed at the airport here, said he had nothing to announce in the way of Cabinet selections. He added that the withdrawal of Simon and Shultz from consideration "isn't going to change the pace at all" of the selection process. Mrs. Reagan stood at his side holding a large glass jar of red-and-white jelly beans, her husband's favorite candy.

Housing hearing slated

Midland County is planning to submit a pre-application to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, for Community Development Block Grant funds. This pre-application will be submitted on or about Jan. 5, 1981.

The county will hold a public hearing Wednesday at 7 p.m. at Midland Freshman School, 100 E. Gist Ave., to obtain citizens' views and comments concerning Midland County's needs and priorities for housing and community development programs.

Citizens will also be invited to comment on the county's past performance in housing and community development programs.

During the meeting, the county will provide information on eligible CDBG activities, the amount of funds available to the county and other important data on the CDBG program.

Interested citizens and groups are encouraged to attend this important public hearing and present their views on the county's housing and community development programs.

Written proposals and comments from citizens will also be accepted by the county.

Handicapped individuals having difficulty in attending the session should contact the Midland County Courthouse to arrange for special assistance.

For further information, persons should contact the county judge's office at 682-9481.

Midland coordinator chosen

HOUSTON — B.J. Pevehouse of Midland will coordinate the second M.D. Anderson Annual Campaign in the Midland area to help support the work of The University of Texas System Cancer Center, which includes M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute.

The annual campaign is a project of the associate members of The University Cancer Foundation Board of Visitors, a group of concerned citizens interested in promoting quality cancer patient care, research, education and prevention.

M.D. Anderson's campaign emphasizes the importance of community support in the fight against cancer, said T. Boone Pickens Jr. of Amarillo, who is chairing the campaign.

"The response to last year's annual campaign enabled M.D. Anderson to broaden its research into the causes of cancer, educate health care professionals and initiate new programs in cancer prevention," Pickens said.

Perot to address local drug seminar

Ross Perot, Texas businessman and contributor to numerous charitable organizations, will highlight a drug seminar to be presented from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Wednesday at Theatre Midland.

Perot is chairman of the board at Electronic Data Systems Corp., a computer service company. After working for IBM for five years, he founded EDS and turned it into a multi-national company with more than 2,000 employees.

Perot is probably best-known for his direction of a team of EDS volunteers in the successful rescue of two EDS employees who were being held as hostages in Iran in 1979.

In previous years, Perot was involved full-time for four years with the United States government in an effort to change the treatment to U.S. prisoners of war in North Vietnam. Perot was awarded the Department of Defense Medal for Distinguished Public Service — the highest award given to a civilian by the Defense Department.

Although the head of a large corporation, Perot is respected for his concern and interest in his employees. From employee selection and training to advancement, Perot gives personal attention to his employees.

EDS operates its business through 60 offices throughout the world and is actively engaged in designing, building and operating information systems in the life insurance, banking, health care, manufacturing and public utility industries.

In addition to EDS, Perot's other business interests are in oil and gas and in real estate.

Perot is also the chairman of Texans' War Against Drugs, a statewide committee appointed by Gov. Bill Clements whose aim is to reach and educate Texans about drugs and to diminish the use of illegal drugs.

Other speakers at the all-day seminar Wednesday include Dr. Marsha Keith Schuchard, consultant to the National Institute on Drug Abuse; Vern Martin, district attorney; Parker Humes, chairman of the board for the Midland Independent School District; and Richard Salwen, attorney.

The group will be addressing Midlanders Against Drugs and interested individuals to help involve communities and families in the fight against drugs.

Redistricting risky, attorney warns

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Federal officials and the courts will be quick to correct any errors in next year's state redistricting, an Austin lawyer warned legislators Saturday.

"There is no area more fraught with the opportunity for serious error," attorney Steve Bickerstaff said. "But you may be confident that someone will find them."

Bickerstaff was part of Saturday's program at the pre-session legislative conference at the University of Texas.

"Almost certainly the actions you take will be subject not only to the scrutiny of certain federal officials...but by the courts, state and federal," he said.

The 1981 Legislature will use 1980 census figures to redraw boundaries lines for seats in congress and the state senate and house. If the legislators cannot agree on a plan, the Legislative Redistricting Board takes over. The board includes the lieutenant governor, the speaker of the house, the attorney general, the comptroller and the commissioner of the general land office.

Bickerstaff cautioned the legislators could surrender their redistricting power if they do not adhere to specific principles set by federal officials.

The Justice Department and the courts will review the plan, no matter who draws it.

In 1978, 30 states had their districts drawn by courts, he said.

Rep. Tim Van Dohlen, D-Goliad, said his House Committee on Regions, Compacts and Districts has determined "ideal district sizes" based on new census data.

Van Dohlen said there should be one state representative for every 94,000 people counted in the 1980 census.

Midland educators return from social studies council

A group of Midland educators attended the annual meeting of the National Council for the Social Studies in New Orleans, La., that ended Saturday.

NCSS is made up of teachers, supervisors and professors who are involved in social studies education.

Dr. Robert Carter, coordinator of Social Studies and Languages, and James Bradford, social studies chairman at Lee High School, conducted a table session on "Effective Participation in Democracy Through Individualization," which teaches students to be effective citizens in a democratic society by involving them in decision-making activities in the classroom.

Classroom materials written by Mrs. Shan Banks and Dennis Stratton, teachers at Midland High School, and Sam Manning, teacher at Lee High School, were explained.

teacher at Carver Cultural Center, assisted by Joe Papai, teacher at Bowie Elementary, explained the role of Carver Cultural Center as an effective program for teaching children in grades one through three to live and learn with those of other cultural backgrounds.

Bertha Starks, coordinator of law-focused education and elementary social studies, will serve as the National Credentials chairman.

Jazz concert scheduled Wednesday in Odessa

ODESSA — A jazz concert featuring guest artist Milt Hinton of New York City will be presented by the Odessa College Jazz Ensemble and the Community Jazz Ensemble at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Recital Hall of the Fine Arts Building on the Odessa College campus.

The concert will feature popular jazz music by such artists as Duke Ellington, Count Basie, "Doc" Severinsen, Woody Herman and Louis Bellson, said Bernie Rose, the jazz ensemble's director.

Hinton has played the annual Odessa Jazz Party and has been a part of the Midland Jazz Classic since its beginning. While in Odessa, Hinton will also lead a "rap session" for jazz fans at 3 p.m. and a bass clinic for musicians at 4 p.m. in room 108 of the Fine Arts Building.

Admission to the afternoon session and clinic will be $1.50 per person. The evening concert will cost $3 for adults and $2 for students.

Javier Calderon performs today

Guest artist Javier Calderon of Bolivia performs with the Thouvenel String Quartet during its second concert of the season today at 2:30 p.m. at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

The Thouvenel has just returned from its first concert in its scheduled series at Carnegie Hall in New York. Today's performance will feature works by Arriaga, Haydn and Vivaldi.

A wine and cheese reception will follow the performance. Tickets, priced at $4 for adults and $2 for students and senior citizens, may be purchased at the door.

Varied art work to be displayed

A wide variety of work will be on display Tuesday through Dec. 11 for the annual fall semester Midland College Student Art Show exhibited in the McCormick Gallery in the Allison Fine Arts Building.

The show officially begins with an open to the public reception for the student artists from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday.

Included in the show will be drawings, paintings, sculptures, ceramics, weavings, photographs and jewelry. Creations by both beginning and advanced students will be shown. Some of the works will be available for purchase.

The show will remain on display Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. and Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Persons interested in making purchases from the show may contact art instructors Warren Taylor, Sara Gilstrap, or Stan Jacobs at MC.

Faculty recital slated Dec. 7

Dr. Donald Grant, clarinetist, will present a faculty recital at the Allison Fine Arts Building at Midland College on Dec. 7 at 3:30 p.m. Grant will be assisted by Dr. Betty Walker Morris, faculty piano instructor.

His program will include the "Hillandale Waltzes" by Victor Babin, "Sontat for Clarinet and Piano" by Francis Poulenc, "Peregrin Verbunk" by Leo Weiner and "Sonata in F Minor, Op. 120, No. 1" by Johannes Brahms.

Grant has played with the Corpus Christi Symphony, soloed with the Columbus Symphony in Indiana and the Salisbury Symphony in North Carolina. For the past six years he has served as a clarinet and saxophone clinician for Yamaha Band Instruments.

The free recital and reception following is open to the public.

Pamela Price's works on display

ODESSA — An exhibition of oil paintings by Pamela Price, assistant professor of art at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, will be on display at UTPB's art gallery Thursday through Dec. 23.

The show, which features oil paintings of African wildlife and domestic dogs, will open with a reception from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Thursday in the gallery.

The exhibit is free and open to the public. Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Traveling art exhibit on display

ODESSA — The traveling student art exhibit of The University of Texas of the Permian Basin will be on exhibit through the month of December.

The exhibit is a collection of student work sent to area junior colleges in an effort to promote the art program at UTPB. The works include drawings, prints and watercolors, with all being completed within the last year.

'Importance of Being Earnest' slated

ODESSA — The University of Texas of the Permian Basin Coffeehouse will be transformed into an intimate theatre when the drama students present the comedy production of "The Importance of Being Earnest" Friday through Dec. 7.

The play will be presented Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. and Dec. 7 at 2:30 and 7:30 p.m. University students, faculty and staff will be admitted free. Tickets for the general public, which are available in the UTPB bookstore, are $3.

Diamond M Museum hosts exhibit

SNYDER — The Diamond M Museum of Snyder is currently exhibiting the sculpture and paintings of five artists through Friday.

Featured artists are Emily Gutherie Smith of Fort Worth, who works in pastels; Pat Krahn of Lubbock, who works in oils; Robert Shufelt of Wickenburg, Ariz., who works in pencil; Herb Mignery of Hastings, Nebraska, who works in bronze; and Bruce Wynne of Spokane, Wash., who works in stone.

The artists will be present today from 1 to 5 p.m. Museum hours Monday through Friday are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. For more information call 1-573-6311.

Hugo to give reading Friday

LUBBOCK — Poet Richard Hugo, an editor of the Yale Series of Younger Poets and a runner-up for a Pulitzer Prize in poetry, will give a reading Friday at noon in the Lubbock Room at the University Center at Texas Tech University.

The reading and informal workshop session following are free and open to the public. Hugo's trip is sponsored by the English department.

The poet is director of creative writing at the University of Montana and has taught as visiting professor at the universities of Iowa, Colorado and Washington.

His "Selected Poems," published in 1979, was a runner-up for the Pulitzer and was awarded the Melvin Cane Prize from the Poetry Society of America. His book, "What Thou Lovest Well Remains American," received the Theodore Roethke Memorial Award in 1976.

Other poetry books include "Death of the Kapowsin Tavern," published in 1965 and winner of the Northwest Writers Book of the Year Award and the Pacific Northwest Booksellers Award, and "The Right Madness on Skye," published this year.

A native of Seattle, Wash., and a World War II veteran, Hugo was educated at the University of Washington. He received a Rockefeller Grant in 1967-68 and a Guggenheim Foundation Fellowship in 1977-78.

Weather delays atograph party

BIG SPRING — Due to inclement weather, the autograph party honoring Joe Pickle has been postponed until Dec. 7 from 1 to 5 p.m. at the Heritage Museum.

Pickle will autograph copies of his book, "Gettin' Started," an early history of Big Spring.

"Barges on the River — Shanghai" by Midland artist Betty Lynch is among the many watercolors she will be exhibiting at the Baker Gallery of Fine Art in Lubbock beginning Saturday and continuing through Jan. 3. Other artists featured in the show are Carroll Collier, Glenna Goodacre and Mondel Rogers. Also on display will be the graphics of Thomas Hart Benton, Peter Hurd and Gene Kloss.

Works of Betty Lynch will be part of art exhibit in Lubbock

LUBBOCK — The latest works of Midland artist Betty Lynch will be part of an exhibit opening Saturday at the Baker Gallery of Fine Art in Lubbock.

The show also features the works of Carroll Collier of East Texas, Glenna Goodacre of Colo. and Mondel Rogers of Sweetwater. All four artists will be present in the gallery for the 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. opening.

Ms. Lynch started studying watercolor in depth following an introduction to the medium by Eliot O'Hara. She continued to study under such teachers

Her works and background were featured in the December issue of American Artist Magazine. At the same time, the Baker Gallery will also present a special exhibition of the graphics of Thomas Hart Benton, Peter Hurd and Gene Kloss. Both shows will continue through Jan. 3.

Brooks Atkinson gets first O'Neill award

DURHAM, N.Y. (AP) — Former New York Times drama critic Brooks Atkinson received the first Eugene O'Neill Award on Saturday from a group of theater personalities who traveled to his retirement home to give it.

The presentation — by a committee formed a year ago to promote O'Neill's work — came one day after Atkinson, who started reviewing O'Neill's one-act plays in the 1920s, celebrated his 86th birthday.

Among those who presented Atkinson a gold Carier medallion were Jason Robards, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Colleen Dewhurst, director Jose Quintero and Broadway caricaturist Al Hirschfeld.

The medallion was inscribed: "For enriching the universal understanding of Eugene O'Neill."

In presenting the award, the committee recalled that O'Neill, author of "Mourning Becomes Electra," "Emperor Jones" and other plays, had tried to avoid publicity. When he refused to go to Stockholm in 1936 to accept a Nobel Prize, the Swedish prize committee went to him in San Francisco.

"Like you, O'Neill was a hard man to give a medal to," the committee said in a statement read to Atkinson. "We are deeply grateful to you for your devotion to the theater over its years of feast and famine."

Atkinson began his long career as a drama critic on the Boston Evening Transcript in 1919. He said he became acquainted with O'Neill when the playwright's work was produced at the Provincetown Playhouse in Provincetown, Mass.

Atkinson said that years later in New York, when O'Neill "was already a big shot," he asked the author during an interview what he thought of critics.

"I love every bone in their heads," was O'Neill's response, Atkinson said.

'Tribute' flip side of 'All That Jazz'

By the Associated Press

TRIBUTE is the flip side of "All That Jazz," the story of a show biz character who insists on cracking one-liners all the way to the grave. Trouble is, he first must make peace with the priggish son who feels he was neglected by his fun-crazy father. Bernard Slade's adaptation of his Broadway play betrays his sitcom training, and Bob Clark's direction allows scenes to run too long. But genuine laughs abound, and not a few heart-tugs. Major credit is due Jack Lemmon, whose performance as the irrepressible Scottie Templeton is as consummate as any we're likely to see in this decade. He is nothing short of magnificent. Hesitant at first, Robby Benson works his way into the role of the disapproving son and scores impressively, as does Lee Remick as the compassionate ex-wife.

Brass Quintet's debut success

The Lone Star Brass Quintet's debut Midland performance Nov. 22 was deemed a success by those there.

Unfortunately, not many were there. Those who showed up were glad they came. The program, which included "Contrapunctus IX" by J.S. Bach, "Scherzo" by John Cheetham and "Revecy Venir du Printemps" by Claude Le Jeune, was well done.

Outstanding among the selections was the group's performance of "Suite from the Montegian Hills," four movements, by Morley Calvert, "Canzona Bergamasca" by Scheidt-De

It is also safe to assume that at least 50 percent were once again in front of a television Thanksgiving Day at 3 p.m. to watch the Dallas Cowboys mow down the Seattle Seahawks. And, of course, dining on this day of Thanksgiving was in most homes either planned to take place before or after this most important cultural event.

So where were even a sampling of those people, many of whom take such great pride in pointing out that Midland is in the top five in per-capita income in the United States and that it has a symphony, a ballet, a theater, etc., etc., etc., Nov. 22?

Once again, this reviewer feels compelled to say that if we don't support our fine arts events with our attendance, rather than just lip or billfold service, there may be none to support. And that would be a sad commentary to make in a town which prides itself on being culturally enriched.

Jong and "Quintet," three movements, by Victor Ewald. Also quite good was trumpeter Britt Theurer's rendition of "La Virgen de la Macarena" by Raphael Mendez.

Actually the entire performance was tastefully done with a good balance between serious and light tunes, an example of the latter being "Little Brown Jug," arranged by Irving Rosenthal.

It was the turnout and not the performance that was disappointing.

And it's really a shame in a town that prides itself on its cosmopolitan tastes and interest in the cultural arts, that only about 25-30 of said sophisticated individuals had the inclination or took the time — the concert lasted at the most an hour and fifteen minutes including intermission — to attend a cultural performance.

This reviewer feels it safe to assume that more than 50 percent, which is a very conservative estimate, of Midland's 70,000-plus residents had the time and interest to watch television the Friday night immediately preceding the performance to find out who shot J.R.

George Raft fought his way out of squalor

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — It took me the rest of the day to recover from the shock of seeing George Raft for the last time one afternoon last August.

He was rolled into the Del Mar Turf Club in a wheelchair. His face was the color of a ripe pumpkin and his features had been so distorted by time and illness that he bore little resemblance to the film star familiar to moviegoers.

I was not the only one moved by his plight.

Standing in a betting line, my wife struck up conversation with the woman ahead of her. They talked about the crowd at the track that day and my wife said: "My husband just pointed out George Raft. I never would have recognized him."

The other woman replied: "My husband and I knew George in New York (in the 1930s). I saw George here the other day and went home and cried."

Many would say, no doubt, that I felt too kindly toward a man of George's reputation: Dancer in a New York speakeasy during Prohibition, a pal of gangsters, a gambler, a womanizer, etc.

George Raft always treated me with friendly respect on the occasions I chanced to be in his company. In interviews he was frank and truthful. He spoke disparagingly of no one.

This is no defense of Raft's conduct. But critics all too frequently fail or refuse to understand why a man is what he is.

George came up in dire poverty in New York's Hell's Kitchen, one of the world's toughest communities. People living in its squalor must scratch and claw to rise above it. Raft quit school in the seventh grade.

I can accept this, not as an excuse, but as an explanation where Raft was concerned.

When he was the third highest-paid film star, Raft would discuss the bitter years in Hell's Kitchen with people who understood.

To me, the incongruity about Raft was his timidity around a stranger. Here was the top movie gangster blushing during an introduction and groping for words in his soft, boyish voice.

At one of the lavish press parties given by the Del Mar racetrack, Raft was sitting beside Slapsy Maxie Rosenbloom. Making an unscheduled "speech," Slapsy Maxie's vulgarity was so progressive, syndicated columnist Henry McLemore, also in his cup, challenged the former light-heavyweight boxing champion to a fist fight.

That was the high point of the evening, but not to Raft, who suffered in embarrassment. He had whispered of pal Maxie: "Will he never shut up?"

Raft made millions as an actor and lost it all, mostly as a horseplayer, the rest through bad investments. But he didn't grouse about it.

Perhaps the only thing in his life that George ever regretted was the leukemia that took his life.

Hearings on assassination plot end

Charges of frame-ups, persecutions still to be heard

By PHIL BROWN
Associated Press Writer

PEKING (AP) — China's Supreme Court on Saturday concluded hearings on an alleged plot to assassinate Mao Tse-tung, leaving charges of frame-ups and persecutions during his Cultural Revolution still to be heard against the 10 defendants.

The portion of the trial dealing with the assassination scheme was wrapped up with testimony from a former military leader, Qui Huizuo, who admitted burning evidence of his crimes, according to China's news media.

Qui, former army logistics chief, made his first appearance on the stand in the trial of the "Gang of Four" and "Lin Piao Clique" defendants, Peking Radio said. All 10 face the death penalty if convicted. The trial is expected to last until late December.

After a week of hearings, the court has yet to take up a number of alleged frame-ups and "fatal persecutions" of government and Communist Party officials and a purported plot to stage an armed uprising in Shanghai in 1976.

THE INITIAL TRIAL proceedings dealt with the assassination plot rather than following the order of the counts in the lengthy indictment. Observers said that was because officials want to keep Mao, who died Sept. 9, 1976, separate from the defendants.

China's leaders maintain the defendants committed crimes while Mao, the party chairman, only made mistakes.

Jiang Qing, Mao's widow and leader of the "Gang of Four," has been the most defiant of the defendants. She was mentioned Saturday in each of two separate sessions of the trial, according to the reports.

Chen Boda, once the No. 4 leader in the Communist Party hierarchy and now characterized by the Communist Party newspaper as the "mad persecutor," confessed during the civilian trial that he was guilty of false accusations that caused the fatal persecution of 2,955 Chinese, the newspaper reported.

Chen and the "Gang of Four" civilians are being tried in one section of the proceedings and five former military officials in a second section.

The 66-year-old Qui and co-defendant Wu Faxian admitted burning evidence of their relationship with the late Defense Minister Lin Piao, after whom the "Lin Piao Clique" of military defendants is named, the Peking Radio said.

The military "Clique" is accused of planning to blow up Mao's train with bazookas, flamethrowers and other devices after the failure of efforts to elevate Lin to power by party maneuvering. Mao's train trip was cut short before the plotters could act in 1971, according to prosecutors, and Lin Piao, his wife and son tried to flee the country but were killed in an airplane crash.

The foreign press has been barred from the week-old proceedings on grounds that state secrets would be revealed. Chinese media and official and unofficial court sources provide information on the trial.

IN THE SEPARATE civilian trial, Chen said he feared Jiang Qing, the party newspaper said. That fear, he was quoted as testifying, was behind his leadership of an investigation of Lu Dingyi, a vice premier and then-party propaganda chief.

Chen "admitted that handing over a vice premier to Red Guards for trial is counter-revolutionary," said the People's Daily newspaper.

The Red Guards were the bands of young people who tried the Cultural Revolution's "revisionist" targets in kangaroo courts during the late 1960s.

Chen was quoted by the People's Daily as saying, "In settling this score, they might as well chop off my head and be done with it," when he learned that a 1966 editorial calling for loyalists to "sweep away all monsters and demons" would be introduced as evidence.

He admitted responsibility for the editorial, the newspaper said, and acknowledged he was ill-informed when he gave a speech in December 1967 alleging that members of the Nationalist Chinese party, Kuomintang, might dominate the party organization in eastern Hebei Province. The nationalists were driven off the mainland by Communists in 1949 and set up a rival government on Taiwan.

In total, the 10 defendants are accused of persecuting 727,420 people, 34,274 to their deaths.

Jiang Qing's name was brought up by prosecutors arguing in the military trial, Peking Radio said.

THEY WERE QUOTED as saying Lin Piao's wife, Ye Qun, was helping Jiang Qing in her search for old love letters and evidence dating back to her years as a Shanghai actress before she became Mao's fourth wife about 40 years ago.

The radio said Wu summoned Jiang Tengjiao, a military defendant who was Huang Yongsheng, former armed forces chief of staff, appears in court in Peking. Huang is one of the 10 defendants charged with plotting to assassinate Mao Tse-tung and stage an armed coup in China in 1971. According to Peking Radio, Huang confessed, in a taped telephone conversation presented to the court, that he was a "member of the Lin Piao counter-revolutionary clique." (AP Laserphoto)

China's 'trial of century' is briefly explained here

PEKING (AP) — China's trial of the "Gang of Four" and the "Lin Piao Clique" is a complicated web of two trials of 10 defendants indicted on overlapping charges that include plotting to seize power and persecuting thousands to death.

Here is a brief explanation, in question-answer form, of how China's "trial of the century" is conducted.

Q. Who is on trial?

A. Ten Chinese — the "Gang of Four" led by Chairman Mao Tse-tung's widow, the "Lin Piao Clique" of five "counter-revolutionaries" and Chen Boda, Mao's former political secretary who had ties to both groups.

Q. What is the "Gang of Four?"

A. It is composed of Mao's widow, Jiang Qing, former Politburo members Zhang Chunqiao and Yao Wenyuan and former party vice chairman Wang Hongwen. With the exception of Jiang Qing, the "Gang" defendants are specifically accused of plotting an armed rebellion in Shanghai.

Q. What is the "Lin Piao Clique?"

A. Named after former Defense Minister Lin Piao, now dead, it is composed of five ex-generals who are specifically charged with plotting to assassinate Mao and stage an armed coup. Members are Huang Yongsheng, former army chief of general staff; Wu Faxian, former air force commander in chief; Li Zuopeng, former navy political commissar; Jiang Tengjiao, former air force political commissar in Nanjing and Qiu Huizuo, army logistics chief.

Q. What is the basis of their trial?

A. A 20,000-word indictment that lists four major categories of charges and 48 specific charges of crimes committed during the 1966-1976 "Cultural Revolution" aimed at purging revisionists.

Q. What are the four major charges?

A. The Mao assassination charge against the "Clique" and the Shanghai rebellion charge against three of the "Gang" defendants are two. The third is the frame-up and persecution of party and state leaders and plotting to usurp political power; the fourth is the persecution and suppression of large numbers of cadres, or leaders, and the masses. The third and fourth charges applies to all 10 defendants.

Q. What are the 48 specific charges?

A. They include such counts as trying to prevent China's currently most powerful leader Deng Xiaoping from being named a first vice premier by Mao, trying to frame late Premier Chou En-lai, persecuting the late President Liu Shaoqi to death and persecuting 727,420 persons, 34,274 of them to death.

Q. What is the punishment?

A. All could receive death sentences, without possibility of appeal.

Q. How is the trial conducted?

A. It is split into two parts, one for the military "Clique" defendants and the other for the civilian defendants who are the "Gang" and Boda. The Supreme People's Court, China's highest, is conducting it.

through 30 special judges, not all with legal training. Half the judges preside at each trial, which are often simultaneous in separate locations — the police auditorium on Righteousness Road for the civilians and the air force auditorium for the military defendants.

Q. What are the defendants' rights?

A. They are permitted to have attorneys and can make a final statement before the court.

Q. How long will the trials last?

A. They started Nov. 20 and are expected to end in late December.

Q. Is it open?

A. It is closed to the foreign press on grounds state secrets will be divulged. Chinese newspaper, radio and television as well as the official news agency Xinhua is covering it. The Foreign Ministry, Chinese press and official and unofficial court sources provide information to the foreign press. In addition, between 600 and 800 hand-picked spectators from throughout China sit in as official observers.

DA is slain

MACON, Ga. (AP) — District Attorney W. Donald Thompson was shot to death as he tried to halt a late-night burglary at a neighbor's apartment, authorities said Saturday.

Officials said the shooting occurred shortly before midnight Friday when Thompson, whose three-year term as prosecutor was marked by controversy over a hospital investigation, and a neighbor returned to her apartment.

They found the door ajar, said Bibb County Sheriff Ray Wilkes.

"Don took a gun and went in," Wilkes said. "The burglars were in the back, moving material out of the apartment and putting it in the back of a pickup. Don tried to arrest them but they fired first, striking him one time in the chest and killing him."

Dr. Carl Shultheis of King of Prussia, Pa., indicates where traffic flows between what was the pre-Revolutionary King of Prussia Inn and a modern counterpart.

Shultheis is leading a drive to have the building saved as a historical site — even if it means rerouting Pennsylvania's four-lane Highway 202. (AP Laserphoto)

Historic inn located on highway median

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

KING OF PRUSSIA, Pa. (AP)—The location is an innkeeper's dream. So many highways converge here that the road map looks as if a child scribbled on it with a red crayon.

In a mobile society, that's progress — and that's the problem.

The King of Prussia Inn, its limestone door still scooped hollow by the boots of wayfarers for two centuries, including the boots of George Washington on his retreat to nearby Valley Forge, could not withstand the march of progress.

"There is reason to hope," Carl Shultheis was saying the other day, standing before the inn's kitchen fireplace, which is big enough to roast an ox and as sturdy as the day it was built, a day in 1780.

"Progress did the place in," he said, "and progress just might be what saves it."

Could be. A shopping mall near the inn, already enormous, soon will double in size. Shultheis believes, or at least hopes, that the planners will have to unscramble this spaghetti mess of highways to handle the added traffic. If so, perhaps they will reroute the one that gobbled up the King of Prussia Inn.

The inn, you see, sits smack dab on the median strip of a four-lane monster called Highway 202.

It is a fact. The divided highway roars toward the inn, aims straight at it, and at the last minute widens to miss it, then closes again. The track is that of a skier dodging a rock. Whew.

There the inn survives, barely, a lovely old stone structure of two stories, its ancient timbers rattling with each passing truck, its only enemy progress, its only visitors ghosts.

Had it been left to the highway builders, the inn would have been knocked down and paved over when the highway was built in 1956.

A group of local citizens, horrified at the prospect, formed a "Committee to Save the King of Prussia Inn," and did. The committee became the King of Prussia Historical Society, of which Carl Shultheis is an energetic member.

Shultheis is 50. He grew up 10 miles from here and remembers when the whole area was countryside, probably not much different from the way Washington saw it when he and his men marched down the road that became Highway 202.

"Then came the Pennsylvania Turnpike, then Highway 202, then the huge mall — one of the biggest in the country at the time — and all the other highways, and all of a sudden it seemed, the town of King of Prussia was lost in a concrete maze.

"Until that time the inn had been in continuous operation. Its first owner named it for Frederick the Great, and the town that grew around it took its name from the inn. It was a meeting place, a voting place, a place of rest and refreshment. When I was a boy it was known for, of all things, its mint juleps. It's a place worth saving."

During the Bicentennial year, the Historical Society began restoration of the inn as a community project.

"We have the outside walls restored and a roof that doesn't leak and the foundation reinforced, but that's about all. Most of the original interior remains, but it is in bad need of repair and, of course, we have no money. It will be expensive."

Some have suggested that the inn be moved to a place that is safer and easier to get to; it's worth your life to get to it now, out on the median strip. Carl Shultheis has some thoughts about that.

"This is where the inn was built, this is where its history was made, this is where it belongs. I say move the highway."

Season of hope ushered in by world of tragedies

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

It was the week before Thanksgiving, the eve of the season of hope. In a country church in Italy the priest raised the Host before the devout. In a tiny town in Turkey they prepared for a wedding. In a resort hotel in Japan elderly vacationers bathed and took the waters. Out of Sicily and out of Rome, passengers slept on two speeding trains. In Las Vegas the revelers slept late. In Southern California the hot desert winds blew the smog out to sea.

In minutes and hours each benign scene dissolved into a storm of earth, steel and fire—a week of violence that dealt wholesale death as randomly as the spin of the wheel, the turn of a card.

Shared anguish worlds apart left terrible vignettes:

- An aged Californian, dead, clutching a dead puppy he had tried to save from fire;
- Italian villagers alerted by knocking in the rubble, clawing at the debris to rescue a sobbing, injured woman trapped with her three dead children;
- A man plunging to his death from a Las Vegas hotel before he had reached the end of the makeshift rope he had fashioned;
- The image of a man with a shovel, his face lit by the flames, standing between his home and the raging fire that threatened it;
- The happy engagement party in Turkey turned into a mass funeral, the teen-age bride-to-be dead.

It was Sunday night in southern Italy. In the town of Balvano the Rev. Ettore Santoriello raised the Host in adoration. The time was 7:35 p.m. "This is my body," he intoned.

Suddenly the altar shook and lifted from the ground. First the plaster and cement, then the walls and the roof caved in on the several hundred parishioners—and also on the lives of more than 3,000 people from Naples to Sorrento.

It was Europe's deadliest earthquake in 65 years, second only to the disaster in central Italy that took 30,000 lives in 1915.

The Italian "boot" is in an earthquake belt that reaches through the Mediterranean. The people are poor and tied to the land. They build their homes of native stones; the homes run up the sides of hills like terraced ghettos. They are easy prey to the slipping earthquake faults that crisscross the land.

There were seven shocks in the two hours following the celebration of the Mass in Balvano. By the next night, the men in baggy pants and muddy boots and the shawled, dark-shrouded women counted 62 bodies pulled from the Church of Santa Maria Assunta. Many more were buried in the 9-foot piles of rubble. Said one villager: "It's because of poverty. The poor are forced to live in the oldest houses. The villas on the Amalfi coast would never have fallen down like this."

But the poor were not alone in the grief of this week. The rooms of the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas go for something like $70 a night. The guests spend much more than that at the gaming tables.

But Friday morning at 7:15 a.m. PST, fire erupted into the lush carpeted, draped casino, almost the size of two football fields. Billows of black smoke filled the 26-story hotel and its 2,100 rooms.

The 8,000 employees and guests scrambled for any avenue of escape. One elderly couple plunged to their death from the 17th floor, holding hands.

Some were helped to safety by construction workers building a 780-room addition to the hotel, one that would have made it the world's largest. Other guests hurled furniture through the windows to let in air, and were finally rescued by firemen. Some were lifted off the roof by helicopters.

In all 84 died in the smoky fire and 706 were injured.

The details of what happened are still being investigated, but already the first lawsuit against the hotel has been filed. Even while the fire raged, MGM's stock homes were burned in San Bernardino, a city of 112,000.

Veritable walls of fire advanced over flatland, but in the foothills, the winds took strange twists, and with the wind went the fire. Some homeowners stood guard over their property with shovels, puny defenders against the advancing holocaust.

Two of the dead were Earl Welty, 83, and his wife Edith, 82, found in the yard of what used to be their home. He was clutching a dead puppy he was apparently trying to save when the fire caught them.

While the deeper strata of the Italian earth were shifting toward cataclysm, two trains converged for another dark rendezvous near Vibo Valentia a week ago Friday.

The 16-car Train 587 was dashing at 100 mph speeds from Rome bound for Sicily. Right on schedule, the 15-car Train 588 had left Sicily for Rome. Neither train was fully occupied, and their passengers were peacefully asleep.

Suddenly the Sicily-bound train plowed into a string of freight cars on its right-of-way, pitching some of the cars onto the north-bound track. There, minutes later, the sister train crashed into them. In all some 20 died and 42 were hurt.

How did it happen? The 28 freight cars had somehow broken off a 41-car train earlier, and no one noticed them missing.

In Kawaji, Japan, meantime, fire destroyed the four-story Kawaji Prince Hotel, killing 34 guests, most of them elderly, the worst fire in post-World War II Japan. Kawaji is a popular spa, and the victims had come to take the waters.

There are no telephones in Danaciobasi, Turkey, a village of 400 farm families at the end of a dirt road in the rolling hills of the Anatolian plain 75 miles southeast of Ankara.

Many of the village women had gathered in a four-room stone cottage to honor the engagement of 16-year-old Dondü Daggelen. The guests brought young children and infants with them.

Suddenly the electricity went out. In the house they lit a propane lantern, but a child knocked it over and it continued to leak gas. When they relit the lantern, there was an explosion, then a propane tank blew up, engulfing the house in flames.

It took two hours for firefighting equipment to arrive from Keskin, only nine miles away. The townspeople had to send a man on a tractor to get help. It was their only means of communication.

One man lost 22 relatives in the blaze. In all, 97 women and children, some only a year old, perished. No one got out.

went down on the New York Stock Exchange. At the same time, an Iowa doctor and father of eight signed off a hurriedly scrawled will in his 18th-story room with the words, "Smoke is getting heavier and wet towel on my face." He was rescued.

Less than 200 miles to the west, the Santa Ana winds blow off the desert and usually relieve Los Angeles of its blanketing smog. But before the winter rains come, the same winds spell trouble for the tinder-dry hillsides that have baked through the summer.

The worst happened in the canyons of San Bernardino County. Fires sprang up in the dry brush. Whipped by winds of some 90 mph, they raced through foothills and suburbs, leaping highways, defying the efforts of more than 2,000 firefighters. The winds were so high it was days before water tankers could take to the air to help dampen the raging flames.

In all there were ten major fires in five counties. In San Bernardino alone three fires caused more than $44 million damage. Thousands abandoned their homes, at least four people were killed and more than 700 injured. Nearly 300

Winds dying down; Four fires still out of control

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — Erratic Santa Ana winds died down to a light 10 to 15 mph Saturday as a destructive six-day siege of brushfires neared an end. Officials began surveying denuded hills in danger of becoming muddy torrents in winter rains.

Four Southern California fires were still out of control, but all were at least partially contained and firefighters expected few problems in extinguishing them with no additional damage to structures or injury or loss of life.

The latest blaze, the Proctor Valley Fire in southern San Diego County, charred 1,500 acres after breaking out Friday, but was expected to be contained Saturday.

No structures were damaged and no injuries were reported from the Proctor Valley blaze, said state Department of Forestry spokeswoman Vivian Bentkowski. Authorities said the fire began in an area where people were target shooting.

Meanwhile, engineers trudged through smoldering areas and surveyed the land by helicopter as weary fire crews were slowly sent home, said U.S. Forest Service information officer Ken Slater. "The emphasis is shifting from burn control to flood control," he said.

Some 6,000 firefighters were on the lines at the height of the fires, some from as far away as New York.

Workers from the Forest Service and local agencies will begin an effort "as soon as possible" to reseed burned areas, dig earthen channels and clear debris, he said.

"The flood control effort will depend on how the weather holds and the availability of seed—there are thousands of acres to cover," said Forest Service spokeswoman Nancy Upham.

Reseeding must begin without delay, as November through March is the rainy season in Southern California. No measurable rain has fallen in the area since May 20, but there has been above-average rainfall in each of the past three years.

The northeasterly Santa Ana winds, which roared up to 100 mph Monday, blasting out of canyons and pushing 11 brushfires through tens of thousands of acres of brush and timber, subsided to 10 to 15 mph Saturday.

Also Saturday, the 650,000-acre San Bernardino National Forest was reopened to the public. It had been closed because of the high winds and dry conditions.

The spate of fires was the second in two weeks, with the fire damage toll in California since Nov. 15 reaching $64.8 million, said Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.

He said that of that amount, $50.8 million was damage to private property. He said an estimated 106,275 acres of brush and timber was destroyed in the fires.

Indians cite top land fraud

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Canadian Indian leaders of northern Ontario told a tribunal here today that they were victims of the "biggest case of land fraud in the world."

The Indians claimed they lost land, were placed on reserves and deprived of fishing and hunting rights through what they alleged were violations by the Canadian government of a 1905 treaty.

The complaints from the Grand Council of 20,000 Cree and Ojibway Indians came on the final day of cases presented to the fourth Bertrand Russell Tribunal on the treatment of Indians in North, South and Central America.

Dennis Cromarty, grand chief of the Cree and Ojibway, said the 1905 treaty was signed to make peace with British settlers and to allow them to live in northern Ontario and use resources so long as they did not interfere with traditional Indian life styles.

Cromarty said the Canadian and Ontario governments claim the Indians turned over some 100,000 square miles of land by signing the treaty.

"Each Indian was given $5 initially and $14 annually for land compensation," he said.

"Reserves were to be established but we didn't know then what reserves were," he said.

The Indians told the tribunal jury of American and European scholars and writers the treaty is invalid and the Indians insist the Canadian government renegotiate it, giving the Indian nation the right to self-determination.

Roy Kaminawish, an Ojibway chief from a Severn Lake community of some 200 Indians, told the tribunal that Canada's Ministry of Natural Resources had restricted traditional Indian activities with fish and game laws and that Indians were convicted almost daily by courts for breaking them.

Cree Indians said they were also hurt by the Migratory Birds Convention Act of 1916 between the United States and Britain, which was representing Canada at the time.

Archie Stoney, a Cree who lives on the shores of Hudson Bay, said the act "threatens the economic and physical survival of the Crees" by limiting the spring hunt by Indians of ducks and geese, the most plentiful and reliable Indian food source in the region.

Norman Zlotkin, the legal adviser for the Indians, said that in three cases the Canadian Supreme Court ruled the act overrules the previous treaty clause that guaranteed Indian hunting rights.

Stoney, who has been a defendant in many cases involving enforcement of the act, said the government violated human rights and international law.

Other northern Ontario Indians complained that dams built by the government were drying up the Albany River and other waters which Indians rely on heavily for fishing.

Revlon to move lab

EDISON, N.J. (AP) — Revlon Inc. has announced it will move its research laboratory, one of the nation's leading cosmetic research facilities, from New York City to a new lab in this New Jersey suburb.

Explaining the move, company spokesman cited reduced costs in New Jersey and a failure by Revlon to negotiate the purchase of a building the firm has rented in the Bronx since 1964. The lab had been in New York for 47 years.

Officials said most of the 140 employees at the Bronx plant were expected to make the move to Edison, where Revlon also has large manufacturing and distribution plants. They said the new lab was expected to be completed in mid 1962.

Oyster shuckers wanted

CRISFIELD, Md. (AP) — This small town on Maryland's Eastern Shore bills itself as the "Oyster Capital of the World," but there's a crisis afoot that could knock it off the oyster map — Crisfield is running out of shuckers.

The oyster season, which began about the end of September and ends in March, is now at its peak on the Chesapeake Bay, where Maryland watermen last year took 13.5 million pounds of the sweet mollusks worth $17.1 million at dockside.

But the owners of packing houses here in Somerset County say their output is down for lack of skilled people to extract the delectable meat from an oyster's powerful shell.

"We need a new generation of shuckers. Most of the shuckers in the area are 50 years old or older," said Hayes F. Diggs, who owns a packing house in Pocomoke Sound.

"My (packing) house holds 16 shuckers and about four or five of them are over 60 years old," he said. "I know one man has to be about 73."

Diggs said some packers are operating with about half the number of shuckers they need. One would like to start a night shift, but can't even find enough workers to go full strength during the day.

"We're at a standstill," he said.

The shucker shortage looms at a time when the state is experimenting with ways to reverse a recent steady decline in the number of oysters found in the bay to take advantage of growing demand for the seafood.

Twenty-five years ago, oyster shucking was considered a low form of labor, Diggs said. Now it's considered a dying art, he said, and no one has been able to produce a machine to do the handwork.

There are about 2,000 shuckers in Maryland and a top one can handle about 10 gallons, or 2,000 to 2,400 oysters, a day, according to Bob Prior of the state Seafood Marketing Authority. Champion oyster shuckers, in competition, can do a dozen a minute.

The pay is not great — about $150-$175 a week for skilled practitioners — but the oyster season comes at a time of the year when Eastern Shore watermen and farmers are unemployed. The rate of joblessness in this area likely will top 23 percent at mid-winter.

DA says hit squad in Austin

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Local District Attorney Ronnie Earle says a squad of professional killers operates out of Austin and is a threat to the city's "peaceful lifestyle."

Earle would not give specifics about the "murder-for-hire" ring, but said it was involved in two July 14 murders near McAllen. Two people died when a hired killer's attempt to kill a central figure in a drug case went awry, Earle said.

"We have information that (the hit man) is part of an organization which does assassinations for hire operating out of Austin," Earle said at a Friday news conference.

On Tuesday, Travis County grand jurors indicted Boyce Rummel, 28, of Buda, on charges of capital murder and conspiracy to commit capital murder in connection with the McAllen shootings of Kevin Frase of Donna and Charlotte Elliott of Rolla, Mo.

Earle said the shots were meant for Michael Overstreet, a convicted marijuana importer.

The shots came a day before Overstreet was scheduled to talk to a grand jury about drug smuggling.

"The allegation of capital murder and conspiracy to commit capital murder is that Boyce Rummel paid a hit man in Austin and had him flown from Austin to McAllen," said Earle.

FARM-RANCH ROUNDUP

Howard County youths in 4-H Congress today

Two Howard County 4-H'ers will be among 43 Texas youth joining more than 1,700 4-H'ers from across the country at the 59th National 4-H Congress today through Thursday in Chicago.

The youths are all winners in various awards programs and have received expense-paid trips made possible by private donors with contributions of more than $20,000.

"4-H — Expanding Horizons" will be the theme of the week-long educational program, and 287 scholarships totaling more than $285,000 will be presented to outstanding youths during the week.

Attending from Howard County are Tammy Peugh with her award-winning program in home environment and Danny Peugh with his winning program on swine.

Grain farmers must plant in NCA

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has announced that growers of either wheat or feed grains in 1981 will be required to plant within their established Normal Crop Acreage (NCA) in order to qualify for loans, disaster coverage or price deficiency payments under government programs.

A pending announcement on whether cotton producers also will be under the same requirement is not expected until the next week. There is industrywide opposition to the requirement for cotton, but a Washington source Nov. 20 told Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., that as far as the current administration is concerned "it looks now like you're going to get it."

Livestock prices show increase

There is hope for the livestock industry in 1981.

Livestock prices should show solid increases next year due to lower total meat production and improved consumer demand, notes a livestock marketing economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Economic recovery in the business segment along with somewhat reduced inflation should help the retail demand for all meat products.

Cow-calf operators will likely fare well in 1981, but meat packers, stocker operators and feedlots may find the going a bit tough.

The Houston Livestock Show begins Feb. 21 with horse show competition, followed by livestock competition Feb. 25 in the Astrohall.

The show is the world's largest livestock show, with more than 24,000 entries expected. Rodeo events in the Astrodome begin Feb. 27 and all events continue through March 8.

Leaders to speak at farm meeting

Leaders in state and national government and farm organizations will be speaking Monday at special conferences held in conjunction with the 47th annual meeting of the Texas Farm Bureau.

The Young Farmer and Rancher Breakfast will kick off the conference schedule early that morning. At 1 p.m., other conferences will begin for energy, Farm Bureau economic services, farm program, taxes, meat production and transportation.

Guest speaker at Monday morning's general session will be Mayo J. Thompson, Houston attorney and noted advocate of free enterprise. A specialist in admiralty law, Thompson served for two years on the Federal Trade Commission.

More than 1,200 voting delegates from 213 organized county farm bureaus are expected to attend the convention which starts today and ends Wednesday.

Delegates will adopt state policies to guide the farm organization when the 47th Texas Legislature convenes in January.

Officials will cut a ribbon at Permian Mall on the morning of Dec. 11 to open the 14th West Texas Regional Pecan Show.

The show is one of three conducted on a regional basis annually by the Texas Pecan Growers Association.

Thousands of Permian Mall shoppers Dec. 11 and 12 will see the 350 entries in this year's show, which represents 95 counties in the western half of the state.

Dr. Michael L. Kilby, superintendent of this year's show, said the public can attend a clinic without cost both days at the show where Extension Service specialists will present information and discuss problems related to pecan production by the homeowner as well as the commercial interests.

Extension home economists will present information concerning consumer education in using pecans — including valuable pecan wood.

Cutting the ribbon Dec. 11 will be Texas Pecan Queen Phyllis West of Rankin, Texas Pecan Growers Association President Ray Barrett of Midkiff and city officials.

Czech newspaper warns against aggressive trade unions in Poland

MOSCOW (AP) — Radio Moscow coupled its announcement Saturday of the upcoming meeting of the Polish Communist Party's Central Committee with a tough warning from a Czechoslovak newspaper against "anti-socialist aggressive trade unionism" in Poland.

The broadcast made no comment on the Polish committee meeting scheduled to start Monday, but the headline message in Czechoslovakia's Communist Party Daily Rude Pravo was quoted at length.

As reported by Radio Moscow and the official

29-year-old lawyer being sought in death of father

SILVER SPRING, Md. (AP) — A 29-year-old lawyer was being sought Saturday on charges he gunned down his father, who was an Interior Department administrative law judge, and wounded his mother in this quiet Washington, D.C., suburb, authorities said.

Police were searching for Lawrence W. Fishman on charges of murder and intent to kill in connection with the Friday night shootings.

Officers said Frederick Fishman, 60, who had worked for Interior since 1972 and planned to retire in January after 40 years of government service, was found by neighbors in the driveway of his home with several gunshot wounds in his upper torso. He died about two hours later, police said.

Fishman's wife, Evelyn, 60, was shot in the neck but not seriously injured, they said. She was released from a local hospital Saturday.

Authorities said witnesses told them they saw the younger Fishman leaving his parents' house at the time of the shooting in a car with Massachusetts license plates.

Soviet news agency Tass, Rude Pravo referred to the Soviet-led military intervention in Czechoslovakia in 1968 by some members of the Warsaw Pact as "fraternal internationalist aid" to defeat "the designs of counterrevolution." The intervention removed the liberal regime led by Alexander Dubcek.

"And if today the strategists of imperialism think that a convenient time is coming to carry out counterrevolution in one of the socialist states, then again they are in for a disappointment," the paper was quoted as saying.

In Poland, the article continued, "internal and external hostile forces concentrate their efforts on implementing an insidious plan — the plan to set in motion and strengthen some anti-socialist aggressive trade unionism."

"A statement of principle by Polish communists on the existence of a clear-cut line of distinction which can not be overstepped must be correctly understood... in a way that the socialist, patriotic forces of Poland will do everything vitally necessary to protect and strengthen the revolutionary gains of the 35 years of socialist development of their country."

Violence erupts in El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Gunbattles erupted early Saturday in this tense city as supporters mourned six leftist leaders they claim were kidnapped and assassinated by government troops. Twenty people were reported killed in the new surge of violence.

Police said the latest victims were all killed in overnight gunfights and other assaults. An estimated 8,500 people, mostly civilians, have been killed this year in the struggle for power between left- and right-wing extremists.

Witnesses said army patrols and left-wing guerrilla bands fought at least nine gunfights in poorer districts of San Salvador.

A brief gunfight at midday caused panic among the hundreds of people milling about the plaza outside the Metropolitan Cathedral. The bodies of the six slain leaders had been placed there, guarded by armed leftists, until a bomb exploded outside the church Friday night, injuring nine. The bodies were secretly removed to a funeral home in a poor neighborhood following the blast and would be returned to the cathedral at a later time, Roman Catholic church sources said.

Police said they had no immediate reports of casualties in the cathedral area gunfight. More than 300 leftist youths wearing red and black bandana handkerchiefs across their faces surrounded the cathedral, draped large banners across the entrance and blared slogans from loudspeakers.

The crowds snarled traffic in the downtown area and nervous bus owners sharply reduced service in the area. Adding to the tension was a 30-minute electric power cut in large sections of the city.

The Democratic Revolutionary Front, a federation of about a dozen leftist political groups, elected a new leadership to replace the one that was virtually wiped out by the kidnappings and assassinations Thursday and early Friday.

The new leaders introduced themselves at a secret news conference held in a San Salvador hideaway, identifying themselves as Carlos Gomez, 29; Juan Jose Martell, 25; Saul Villata, 32; Eduardo Calles, 40; Manuel Quintanilla, 33; and Manuel Antonio Potillo, 24. A spokesman said the front would elect a new president later.

A Catholic church spokesman said the funeral for the six slain leftists would be held Wednesday.

Leftist groups issued a joint statement calling on "all democratic governments in the world" to send representatives and said they would hold a giant funeral march through the capital.

A front statement accused El Salvador's national guard troops and the military-civilian junta of complicity in the murders.

The junta issued a denial, saying, "This horrible crime is a demonstration of what extremist groups seeking power at any cost are capable of."

Witnesses to the kidnappings said 200 armed men in police and military uniforms surrounded a Jesuit-run high school in the capital, while armed civilians went inside, rounded up the six leaders and took them away.

The leftist front statement said helicopters and other aircraft hovered over the building at the time of the abduction. It claimed 23 other leftists were also seized and that their fate was still unknown.

The bodies of the six leftist leaders, with single or multiple gunshot wounds, were found in the hours following the abduction in different parts of the capital.

A recently formed right-wing organization called the Maximilian Hernandez Brigade claimed responsibility for the killings. The brigade takes its name from an army general who broke up a bloody leftist guerrilla uprising in the 1930s.

The bomb explosion Friday night outside the cathedral injured nine people, wrecked a parked automobile, and set ablaze large leftist banners across the church and a wooden repair-scaffolding around its north tower.

Both leftists and rightists in this country of 4.4 million have been trying to seize control from the five-member civilian-military junta, which came to power following the overthrow of the conservative regime of President Gen. Carlos Humerto Romero in October 1979.

Polish officials promise Communist Party purge

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A senior Communist Party official said Saturday the party would "deepen and accelerate" the purge of those who refuse to accept changes in Polish life or who have abandoned party doctrine.

Central Committee secretary Zdzislaw Kurkowski commented in the party newspaper Trybuna Ludu two days before a plenary meeting of the committee. Officials have said the session will deal with Poland's economic crisis and the surge of liberalism that followed the formation of independent trade unions in this Soviet-bloc country after a wave of summer strikes.

A source with contacts on the Central Committee described the situation within the party leadership as "very tense," with various factions seeking power.

In his article, Kurkowski said Solidarity, the largest independent union, was "a lasting element in our life." But he urged the union to remain watchful of groups within its ranks who want "to create social and political tension" by strikes and political demands.

"We will deepen and accelerate the process of purging from the party those people trespassing ethical and moral norms," Kurkowski said. He added that the purge would include people alienated "politically and ideologically" from the party.

Others facing exclusion, he said, include party members who "abused the trust put in them," an apparent reference to corrupt and incompetent people blamed for leading the country to the brink of economic ruin.

Poland's economy is burdened by a massive foreign debt and shortages of food and consumer goods.

Officials have said that over the past three months, 902 people have been purged from the party, which has a membership estimated to be under 3 million in this country of 35 million. In addition to the purges, changes in top party and government posts have been made in nearly half of the 49 provinces.

There was speculation the Central Committee meeting might produce some high level personnel changes, with party leader Stanislaw Kania placing his own associates in key posts. Monday's session will be the second since the 5th plenum in early September chose Kania to replace Edward Giersek as party boss.

Kurkowski said the party leadership was committed to the "process of renewal," the phrase used in the official press to describe the liberalization trend.

He said the process was threatened both by those who "don't regard these on-going changes as something permanent" and by others who had abandoned party doctrine under pressure from "anti-socialist forces."

Radio Moscow on Saturday announced the scheduled Polish meeting and coupled the mention with quotes from a headline editorial in the Czechoslovak Communist Party newspaper Rude Pravo. The Soviet broadcast made no comment on the Polish committee, but quoted Rude Pravo's warning against "anti-socialist aggressive trade unionism" in Poland.

Observers considered the Czech comment significant in light of the 1968 Soviet-led invasion of that country to suppress the liberalizing trend of Alexander Dubcek's regime. In Saturday's article, Rude Pravo called that intervention "fraternal internationalist aid" to defeat "the designs of counter-revolution."

Poland's Trybuna Ludu said party economic and administrative experts were preparing the first draft of a new economic system that would loosen centralized control over enterprises. Workers and intellectuals have blamed a top-heavy bureaucracy for mismanagement, waste and inefficiency.

The Kania regime has promised reforms aimed at streamlining the economy, rewarding good work and penalizing inefficiency.

Warsaw is also looking both to the East and West for economic aid. The Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda reported Saturday that the heads of Poland's Finance Ministry and state bank met in Moscow with their Soviet counterparts. The paper gave no details of Friday's talks, but Polish sources said the meetings were in preparation for new economic agreements to be signed next month.

Some 200 students at Warsaw University ended a sit-in early Saturday. The students withdrew after reaching agreement with the rector and Education Ministry on a plan for establishing an independent student association, sit-in leaders reported. They said the plan goes into effect December 20.

Woman faces charges in death of sixth victim

RENO, Nev. (AP) — A woman already accused of murdering five holiday shoppers when she raced her car down a busy casino-row sidewalk faces charges in the death of a sixth victim, police said Saturday.

Authorities said an arraignment for Priscilla Ford, 51, on a sixth murder charge had been scheduled for Monday. Court sessions are not held over the weekend.

The sixth victim of the Thanksgiving Day incident died Friday night. She was Jean Kohler, 51, of Lebanon, Ore.

Ms. Ford, who was being held on $500,000 bail pending a preliminary hearing Dec. 12, was arraigned Friday on five murder charges. She also was charged with attempted murder and assault in connection with the injury of 26 of the 27 people hospitalized after the accident.

Aggies' second-half surge stuns bowl-bound Longhorns

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Senior quarterback David Beal scrambled and passed Texas dizzy in a second-half Texas A&M comeback surge and the upstart Aggies stunned the Bluebonnet Bowl-bound Longhorns 24-14 Saturday in the 97th meeting of their bitter Southwest Conference football rivalry.

The Aggies, who finished the season 4-7 and 3-5 in SWC play, made only one first down as the Longhorns built a 7-0 lead at intermission on Donnie Little's 13-yard run.

Beal slapped the Aggies to life in the third quarter and sent the Longhorns, who will play North Carolina New Year's Eve in the Bluebonnet Bowl, reeling to their fourth loss in 11 decisions. Texas finished the SWC 4-4.

A 23-YARD Beal to Earnest Jackson pass set up David Hardy's 38-yard field goal to trim the deficit to 7-3 then the Aggie signal caller really began to work magic against the rocked Longhorns.

With a fierce Texas pass rush bearing down on him, Beal lofted a short pass over linebacker Bruce Scholtz to Jackson who blazed 59 yards to the Texas 5. On the next play, Beal threw a touchdown strike to freshman tight end Mark Lewis.

A clutch third down run of 19 yards helped put the Aggies on the Texas doorstep again early in the fourth quarter. Beal was shaken up but sophomore quarterback Gary Kubiak had the picture. He flicked a short pass over the middle to Thomas Sanders, who made a one-hand catch then scooted 28-yard for a touchdown with 12:28 to play.

BACKUP quarterback Rick McIvor came on late to add some punch to the Texas offense with a 57-yard touchdown pass to sophomore wide receiver Herkie Walls with 4:26 on the clock.

Raiders, broken nose can't stop Jones

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Senior offensive lineman Phillip Moon has been around long enough to appreciate what Tom Jones did in the second half Saturday.

"He has taken a lot of criticism this year but he came back today when a lot of people wouldn't have," Moon said. Jones suffered a broken nose in the first half against Texas Tech but threw a touchdown pass and set up two field goals as Arkansas scored 12 second-half points and beat the Red Raiders 22-16.

Tech reached the Arkansas 9-yard line with less than three minutes remaining on the passing of Ron Reeves. But four passes failed. Jones suffered the broken nose moments before the end of the first half and went to the dressing room before the rest of the team. Jones went to the sideline again in the final six minutes after Arkansas scored 12 second-half points.

Jones completed a fourth down pass to set up a 41-yard field goal by Ish Ordonez and then threw a 17-yard scoring pass to Steve Clyde three plays after Danny Phillips recovered a Tech fumble.

That made it 19-14. Then, on third-and-six, Jones threw deep down the right sideline and Gary Stiggers made a twisting, over-the-shoulder catch for a 40-yard gain. Three plays later, Ordonez kicked a 40-yard field goal to make it 22-14 with 8:15 left in the game. Tech took a 14-10 halftime lead as Reeves ran for one touchdown and threw 18 yards to Jamie Harris for another. Reeves wound up completing 18 of 40 passes for 286 yards.

Arkansas, bound for the Dec. 27 Hall of Fame Classic against Tulane, wound up 6-5 and Tech finished 5-6. Both were 3-5 in the Southwest Conference.

Arkansas scored the first two times it had the ball and seemed to be in control until punter Steve Cox fumbled a snap from center and Tech took over at the Razorback 24 late in the first quarter. (See HOGS, 3C)

Bulldogs nip Irvin

MHS captures Tall City tourney

By BOB DILLON Sports Writer

Clutch free throws by Horace Brown and Herb Johnson carried the Midland Bulldogs to a heart-stopping 64-63 victory over the El Paso Irvin Rockets Saturday night in the finals of the 14th annual Tall City Invitational Basketball Tournament in the Chaparral Center on the Midland College campus.

Brown, a 6-foot-5 senior, sank a pair of free tosses with 2:33 left to give the Pack a 62-59 lead, but Irvin's David McDowell, who flipped in 20 points, hit from close in to cut the MHS lead to 62-61 with 2:20 left.

Johnson, the 6-9 senior center for Coach Jack Stephenson's Bulldogs, calmly hit a pair of free throws with 2:05 left to make it 64-61.

MIKE PETERSON hit a basket for the Rockets with three seconds left and Midland brought in the ball to run out the clock to take the coveted first place trophy.

The victory gives Midland a 6-0 record on the year going into Tuesday's game with Class AAAA Fort Stockton in the Midland High Gymnasium.

Johnson, voted Most Valuable Player of the tourney, scored 18 points to go with 56 in the first two games, giving him a total of 74 in the three games in which Midland defeated El Paso, Burges, Eastwood and Irvin. Brown took high-scoring honors with 23 points for the Pack.

before Midland finally started finding the range. It was 19-14 in favor of the Border City team at the end of the first period and at halftime the score was 37-29 in favor of the Bulldogs.

The Rockets had little trouble breaking the Midland press during the exciting finale of the tourney.

Brown and guard Mike Velasco of Midland made the all-tourney team while Irvin placed Jim Tachibana and March. Other players named included Alvin Dunson of Midland Lee; Blake Goodwin of Burges; Rick Clark of Eastwood; Adolfo Ruiz of Bel Air; Kevin Butler of Odessa Ector and John Shepherd of Eastwood.

The Sportsmanship Trophy went to Lee.

In the third place game, Eastwood took a 58-50 victory over Bel Air with Clark flipping in 20 points for the Troopers. Teammates Steve Carpenter and Shepherd added 14 and 12 points, respectively.

Dean Frank led the Highlanders with 12 points while Phil Larkin chipped in with 10 more as Eastwood outscored Bel Air, 19-11 in the final quarter to pull out the victory which gives the Troopers a 5-1 season mark.

BURGES BEAT a tired Ector team, 42-32 in the consolation finals with Goodwin scoring 16 points and Nate Rogers 12 more. Big guns for Ector were Tony Gamble and Butler with 12 and 10 points.

Paul Stueckler's Lee Rebels downed Amarillo Tascosa 57-49 for seventh place honors as Dunson poured in 19 points and Kenneth Brown 10 more as Lee broke open the game in the final period by outscoring the Panhandle five, 19-10.

Earlier in the day, Midland downed Eastwood, 72-52 in the semifinals with Johnson ripping the cords for 28 points. Brown added 13 more while Lewis Clark and Carpenter had nine each for the Troopers.

In a real tight one, in the other semifinal contest, Irvin took a 47-46 victory over Bel Air. Carlos Morales had 10 points for the Rockets in the low-scoring game while high for the Highlanders was Larkin with 10.

In one of the better games of the tourney, Ector downed Lee, 91-86 in a loser's bracket game Saturday morning. Butler and Gamble netted 28 and 23 points for the Odessans and Charles Ricks added 17 more while Darius Berry flipped in 19 for the Rebs. Other Lee players in the double figures included Randy Pepper and Dunson with 14 points each and Andre Van Buren with 12 more.

Burges downed Tascosa, 34-25 in the first game of the Saturday morning session with Goodwin's 19 points showing the way. High for Tascosa was Marvin Mitchell with eight points.

Owls mess up Cougs' Bowl

HOUSTON (AP) — A Garden State Bowl official visited Rice University coach Ray Albom prior to Saturday's game against Houston and jokingly told the coach, "Don't mess up our bowl game."

But Albom didn't listen. The Rice Owls, behind the record-setting performance of Randy Hertel and a David Darr-led defense that grabbed eight turnovers, upset the Garden State Bowl-bound Cougars 35-7 in the regular season finale for both teams.

"I told that bowl official I had all the respect in the world for (Houston coach) Bill Yeoman and the Garden State Bowl, but there was nothing I'd love to do more than mess up this game," Albom said in the jubilant Owl dressing room.

HERTEL completed three touchdown passes to set a school career record and Darr intercepted two passes and recovered two fumbles from the error-prone Cougars.

"The score deserved to turn out exactly what it did," Yeoman said. "I can't remember when we played that bad. Rice played really well and outlasted, outworked, out-everythinged us, and our team was not ready. I really missed the boat."

Houston had beaten Rice the past five years and routed the Owls a year ago, but Albom said revenge was not a factor. "The reason they beat us 63-0 last year was because they played extremely well, and we played very poorly," Albom said. "You can't tell guys not to play hard. What we emphasized for today was a chance to be 4-4 in the first division in the SWC when not a cotton-picking person picked us to win even one game."

STARTING Houston quarterback Terry Elston threw five of the interceptions, with sophomore Brent Chinn throwing one in the game. The loss sends Houston into the Dec. 14 Garden State Bowl against Navy with a 6-5 season record and drops them to a 5-3 mark in Southwest Conference play.

Hertel, playing his final collegiate game, completed touchdown passes of 36 yards to Bobby Williams and 7 yards to Jose Fortune to ignite the Owls to a 21-0 halftime lead.

Hertel completed a 37-yard touchdown pass to Calvin Fance early in the third quarter for his 38th career TD pass, breaking the school record set by former Rice all-America Tommy Kramer.

BACKUP quarterback Robert Hoffmann boosted Rice's lead to 35-0 in the fourth quarter following an interception by Rickey Thomas. Houston avoided a shutout by marching 80 yards in eight plays in the fourth quarter, with David Barrett going 23 yards for the touchdown.

Hertel finished with 15 completions in 26 attempts for 226 yards with one interception. Darr got Rice started in the first quarter when he recovered a fumble by Elston at the Cougar 36. Hertel completed his first touchdown pass on the first play from scrimmage, with Williams outracing Houston cornerback Reggie Vonner to the end zone.

RICE STRUCK again on its next possession. Punter Dale Walters ran 10 yards for a first down on a fake punt, and Fance ran two yards for the score a few plays later.

Chaps hold off Badgers to capture cage title

AMARILLO — When Amarillo College forged ahead of Midland College by four points with only five minutes to go, Puntus Wilson, the freshman from South Oak Cliff, lit a fire under the Chaparrals who rallied to pull out a 102-100 decision over the Badgers in the finals of the Amarillo Classic here Saturday night.

Lost opportunity to get rich quick

All it would have taken was a little more to go with Rice and 19 and this morning you'd be rich.

Last week the Cougars allowed that they had been motivated against Texas Tech by loose talk in Lubbock critical of Gerden State Bowl officials for not waiting until after the game against the Raiders to pick a representative from the SWC.

IN THE locker room last week, the Cougars were patiently explaining to the inquisitive scribes that they were that good all along, but they'd just put it all together. The scribes ate it up. Presumably, Saturday's postgame locker room session was devoted to the Cougars explaining how they'd taken it all apart in one short week.

AS IT turns out, Baylor and SMU are the conference's pride and joy bowl representatives, but even the Bears can't be all that happy. With all the legitimate pitfalls they could have gracefully tumbled into along the way, why San Jose?

Probably there are even a few old soreheads in Waco who are shaking their heads and muttering, "Grant Woolridge had it."

just can't win the big ones."

BUT the upsets that flipped the customary SWC standings were what made the season fun. Unfortunately, the old soreheads in SWC citadels other than Waco may have their way.

Some coaches undoubtedly are on the hot seat. Tom Wilson at A&M probably is in the deepest trouble. The Aggies had their disappointments in the 1970s, but all in all they were contenders and frequently went bowling. Perhaps the win over Texas may have saved Tom. After all, it isn't exactly a College Station habit.

And if Fred Akers hadn't beaten OU, bowl or no bowl, the dissatisfaction would be showing through in Austin. TCU's F.A. Dry is still trying to lift the manhole cover, but the Frog program has shown progress under his guidance. In his first year, the squad was practically all freshmen.

For a league without a stickout contender for national laurels, five bowl representative isn't all that bad.

UCLA defeats Irish

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Forward Mike Sanders scored 24 points and guard Rod Foster added 22 Saturday night to power the sixth-ranked UCLA Bruins to a 94-81 college basketball victory over No. 10 Notre Dame.

After leading 45-40 at the intermission, the Bruins got a strong second-half performance from Sanders, who pumped in 17 points in the final 20 minutes.

Notre Dame, its loss coming in its season opener, was paced by guard John Paxson with 21 points, while Orlando Woolridge had 17.

The Irish were able to stay close to the Bruins in the early moments of the second half, but UCLA pulled slowly away, building its lead to 61-52 7:30 into the half.

Miami wins amidst barrage

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Miami Coach Howard Schnellenberger said the partisan, fruit-throwing Florida fans deserved credit for the Hurricanes adding a last-second, game-ending field goal that completed a 31-7 upset rout of the 18th-ranked Gators Saturday.

"This was the most unruly and roughest crowd I've ever played before," said Schnellenberger. "After standing on the sidelines and getting hit with oranges for the whole game, I thought we needed to practice our field goal."

Confusion reigned at the end of the emotional, regionally televised contest. Miami recovered a fumble with one second remaining and Schnellenberger elected to go for a 35-yard field goal. Placekicker Dan Miller put the ball through the uprights and one official signaled the kick was good while another apparently indicated it wasn't.

The teams left the field and the scoreboard read 28-7, but minutes later the score was changed to 31-7. The officials explained that the kick had been good and that the official signaling "no good" was actually signaling that time had expired in the game.

Sophomore Jim Kelly passed for 191 yards and two touchdowns and Mark Rush and Smokey Roan each ran for one as the Peach Bowl-bound Hurricanes capped their best season in 13 years before a crowd of 56,437 at Florida Field.

Kelly said Miami's offensive line played its best game of the season and was the key to the victory. "There's no doubt that we're a Top 20 team now," Kelly said. "We just pulled together and worked hard this week."

The Hurricanes had been ranked as high as 13th after beating Florida State early this season. But the team fell out of the rankings with consecutive losses to Notre Dame, Mississippi State and Penn State.

Miami, which will meet Virginia Tech Jan. 2 in the Atlanta postseason classic, dominated the game from the middle of the first period after Florida drove 80 yards for a touchdown on its first possession. Quarterback Wayne Peace capped the drive with a 15-yard touchdown pass to split end Tyrone Young.

But the Hurricanes, 8-3, responded with a scoring drive on their first possession, tying the score 7-7. Kelly passed for 61 yards in the march, including the final 15 to flanker Jim Joiner.

Sooners rip OSU for Miami trip

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Senior quarterback J.C. Watts and freshman halfback Buster Rhymes provided the firepower as sixth-ranked Oklahoma blitzed in-state rival Oklahoma State 63-14 Saturday to lay sole claim to the Big Eight Conference title and land a berth in the Orange Bowl.

Watts scored three touchdowns and Rhymes tallied on a 66-yard run as the Sooners raced to a 28-7 halftime lead and then buried the Cowboys with 21 more points in the third quarter.

The Sooners finished the regular season with a 9-2 overall record and a 7-0 Big Eight mark. They needed a victory to avert a tie with Nebraska for the league title and insure a date with Florida State in the Orange Bowl on New Year's Day. Oklahoma State wound up 3-7-1 overall and 2-4-1 in the conference.

Watts' touchdown spree gave him the Big Eight scoring crown with 108 points. He had 18 TD's for the season. Rhymes, a 195-pound yearling speedster from Miami, Fla., had 105 yards on 12 carries to push his season total to 630 yards — the most ever gained by an Oklahoma freshman. He broke the record of 646 yards set by Buddy Leake in 1951.

It was a day of big plays as the Cowboy defense couldn't cope with the speed of the Sooner wishbone.

Besides the plays by Rhymes and Watts, freshman running back Jerome Ledbetter dazzled the partisan crowd with three touchdowns late in the game, including one on a 95-yard kick return.

Browns challenge Oilers in AFC Central battle

HOUSTON (AP) — The Cleveland Browns, led by precision-passing Brian Sipe, will challenge the Houston Oilers for the American Conference's Central Division lead Sunday and the hobbled Oilers will answer the challenge if they feel their backs are against the wall.

The Oilers, whose psyche seems to allow them to play superior football in desperate situations, missed a chance to take control of the division last week when they were upset by the New York Jets 31-28 in overtime.

The Browns, who share the division lead with Houston at 8-4, meanwhile, rode the passing of Sipe, the National Football League's passing leader, to a 31-7 victory over Cincinnati Sunday. They'll try to redeem a 16-7 loss to Houston in the second game of the season.

"All we were trying to do the first time we played Houston was keep from losing two games in a row," Cleveland Coach Sam Rutigliano said. "Now we are fighting for first place and very possibly the division championship."

Houston could have had a chance to open a two-game lead over the Browns if it had defeated the Jets. Instead, the Oilers will be struggling, which they admit is the posture from which they play their best football.

"I guess we just play better when things get tough," nose guard Ken Kennard said. "When we realize that our backs are to the wall, we really get going."

The Oilers, with 11 players including leading rusher Earl Campbell and leading scorer Toni Fritsch, their placekicker, on the midweek injury list, must feel they're in a must-win situation.

Hogs defeat Raiders

Tech went up 14-10, moving 62 yards for a touchdown late in the second quarter. Reeves completed 5 of 8 passes for 65 yards in the drive, including the 18-yard scoring pass to Harris.

On the touchdown, Harris, split to the left, pushed to the inside and then broke back to the corner of the end zone and took Reeves' toss crossing the goal.

Arkansas took the second-half kickoff and moved to the Tech 33-yard line where the Razorbacks faced fourth-and-two. Jones sprinted right and dumped the ball to Mark Douglas for a 4-yard gain. Four plays later, Ordonez booted a 41-yarder into the wind.

Midway through the period, Kevin Evans hit Greg Tyler and Danny Phillips recovered Tyler's fumble at the Tech 21. On third-and-six, Jones rolled to the right and then threw back to the left to Clyde, who was wide open at the Tech 10 and he trotted in for the score to make it 19-14.

Linebacker Jeff Goff ended Tech's next two possessions. He deflected a pass that Hugh Jernigan intercepted at the Arkansas 37. The next time Tech had the ball, Reeves passed 43 yards to Curt Cole to the Arkansas 24. Two plays later Reeves fumbled and Goff recovered at the Razorbacks' 16.

Jones fumbled right back at the Arkansas 33, but Billy Ray Smith and the option play and slipped a tackle at the 5.

SOCORRO (AP) — Sophomore quarterback Scott Runyan single-handedly carried Artesia into the Class AAA high school football title game by leading the Bulldogs to a 42-10 rout of Socorro Saturday.

Runyan ran for two touchdowns and passed for three more as he led the Bulldogs' potent wishbone offense to 353 total yards. The sophomore stand-out also scored on runs of 24 and 16 yards.

Pacific defeats Texas as Cornelius scores 34

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Ron Cornelius poured in 34 points and passed to Matt Waldron for a key basket as Pacific edged Texas 78-77 in an inter-sectional basketball game Saturday night.

Cornelius, a 6-9 senior who has made the all-Pacific Coast Athletic Association team the past two years, had 11 straight points during one stretch of the second half.

Texas led 39-36 at halftime, but Pacific went ahead to stay 64-62 with seven minutes remaining on a Cornelius layup off a fast break.

After Texas closed to 75-74, Cornelius passed to Waldron under the basket, who laid it in for a three-point lead.

Texas Coach Abe Lemons was whistled for a technical with just over four minutes remaining — in contesting a travelling call against Longhorn Henry Johnson — and the infraction resulted in four free throws for Pacific.

Ags stun UT, 24-14

It was only the sixth time in 44 games that the Aggies had beaten Texas in Austin. A&M's previous wins came in 1902, 1909, 1922, 1956 and 1976.

The defeated knocked Texas out of a chance for a second-place tie in the final league standings with Houston and SMU behind the champion Baylor Bears.

The Aggies went 22 minutes into the game before they got their only first down of the first half on a 13-yard run by Johnny Hector.

after he took Texas 62 yards in 11 plays. The longest gains on a drive were runs of 9 and 8 yards by Little.

The Aggies never got into Texas territory until Beall's 23-yard pass to Jackson set the stage for what proved to be a landslide by the cadets.

Any final hopes of a Texas comeback died when lineback Will Wright intercepted a McIvor pass at the Longhorn 32-yard line in the final three minutes of the game.

The victory was a big one for beleaguered Aggie Coach Tom Wilson, who has asked for a vote of confidence from the A&M Board of Regents, but had not received one by kickoff.

Georgia wrecks Tech to go 11-0

JIM MURRAY

UT had more Joneses than police blotter after vice raid

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Coach Vince Dooley of top-ranked Georgia, the nation's only unbeaten, untied team, said Saturday he knows of no one more deserving of the Heisman Trophy than his sensational freshman running back, Herschel Walker.

Walker scored three touchdowns and rushed for 265 yards to erase the NCAA single-season rushing record for freshmen Saturday as the Bulldogs downed archrival Georgia Tech 33-20.

"As I've said many times, I wish they'd wait until after the last game to vote on the Heisman trophy," Dooley said. "I don't think there's a player in the country who deserves it more. He has broken one of the great, great NCAA records and is on a team that is 11-0. What else can you say?"

Walker's 265 yards, which included scoring runs of 1, 23 and 65 yards, lifted his season total to 1,610 and broke the NCAA freshman standard of 1,586 set by Tony Dorsett of Pittsburgh in 1973.

Walker, who eclipsed that record on his 65-yard touchdown run early in the third quarter, said: "It's okay to break the record but the most important thing is to win the game. I feel pretty good."

"I wasn't thinking about the record," Walker added. "I never thought about it. I just play to the best of my ability, whether it's bad or good."

"It seems when the game got tighter, he got better," Dooley said after Tech had rallied from a 17-0 halftime deficit to cut Georgia's lead to 10 points twice in the third quarter.

"I thought he (Walker) got very competitive in the second half. When it got hairy, he got excited."

Coach Bill Curry of Tech called Walker "a great football player. He certainly hurt us more than any back we've played this season. He was the key against us today. Every time we came back, and we did on several occasions, he led them back."

It was the 12th straight victory for Georgia, including 11 this season, going into its Sugar Bowl engagement with second-ranked Notre Dame on New Year's Day.

Quarterback Buck Belue accounted for the other two Bulldog scores on a 1-yard keeper and a 5-yard pass to Ronnie Stewart on a fourth down, short-yardage situation.

The Bulldogs also got a booming 57-yard field goal from Rex Robinson, who ran his string of consecutive extra points to 101 after missing the first attempt of his career.

Crimson sews up Cotton spot

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Freshman quarterback Walter Lewis sprinted 73 yards to set up Alabama's go-ahead touchdown as the ninth-ranked Crimson Tide defeated Auburn 34-18 Saturday for its eighth consecutive victory over the Tigers.

The decision sent Alabama into the Jan. 1 Cotton Bowl against No. 8-ranked Baylor, 9-2, and gave Auburn a season record of 5-2 in what probably was Doug Barfield's final game as Auburn coach.

Auburn ended 0-6 in the Southeastern Conference, the first time since 1952 Auburn wound up in the conference cellar.

It was the 305th coaching victory for Alabama's Bear Bryant coming in his 400th game as a coach and left him only nine away from tying the all-time mark of 514 set by Amos Alonzo Stagg.

LOUIS WAS the game's offensive leader with 98 yards on 19 carries and another 42 yards on four of five pass completions.

Auburn's James Brooks got 83 yards on 18 carries to give him 1,314 for the season and 3,523 yards for his four-year college career. He already held the school's rushing record for four years.

Lewis' long run, with Alabama trailing 10-7, put the ball on the Auburn 4, and Major Ogilvie dived over a guard three plays later to make it 14-10.

Middies deck Cadets

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Quarterback Fred Reitzel scored two touchdowns and threw for a third as Navy beat Army 33-6 Saturday to take the lead in the storied service classic for the first time in 59 years.

The three-touchdown Navy team, headed for a Dec. 14 Garden State Bowl game against Houston, recorded its eighth victory against three losses for the season. The Cadets completed their season 3-7-1, and now have lost three straight and seven of the last 8 to Navy.

The Middies, who now lead the 61-year-old series, 35-37 with six ties, last held an edge over Army in 1921.

Most of the Navy scoring Saturday was set up by junior Eddie Meyers, who established a new career rushing record for Army-Navy games of 428 yards, 144 Saturday on 30 carries.

In addition to Reitzel's scoring, junior Steve Fehr kicked four field goals and three conversions for 15 points and a career record for a Navy kicker of 75 points.

The Cadets, who have fallen on lean times in football, trailed 20-0 at halftime, and advanced only twice into Navy territory during the game.

Navy's scores came on field goals of 50, 38, 34 and 32 yards by Fehr; 8- and 4-yard touchdowns runs by Reitzel; and a 9-yard pass from Reitzel to split end Dave Dent.

Army's only big moment of the game before 70,313 came in the third period, when Gerald Walker capped a 10-play, 79-yard scoring drive with a 26-yard touchdown run.

East knee deep in snow while Rockies wait

AP Sports Writer

Major ski areas in the Eastern United States took advantage of cold weather and man-made snow to observe a traditional Thanksgiving weekend opening, but in the West many areas still waited for snow.

Some Eastern areas, still mindful of the "Brown Winter" of 1978-80, beuffed up their snowmaking over the summer, and many took advantage of cold temperatures in early November to begin grooming man-made snow.

In the West, where man-made snow has taken a back seat to the natural powder of the Rockies and High Sierras, resort owners waited for their first heavy snowfall of the season. With snow-making on the upswing, however, several areas managed a Turkey Day opening.

WATERVILLE Valley in New Hampshire was opening on Nov. 15, the earliest in its history. About a half dozen of the larger of New Hampshire's 36 resorts was open by Thanksgiving.

Dick Hamilton of White Mountain Attractions said about three-quarters of its member areas have snowmaking machinery.

In Vermont, many resorts — including Sugarbush Valley, Jay Peak, Killington, Okemo Mountain, Pico Peak, Mount Snow, Stratton Mountain and Bolton Valley — were open last Sunday. Vermont's Green Mountains received a foot of snow on Nov. 18 and had temperatures cold enough to hold it.

"It's just like the good old days," Killington's Foster Chandler said. "It's been five years since we had cold weather and a good snowfall before Thanksgiving."

New York State reported two areas, Hunter Mountain and Greek Peak, open the week before Thanksgiving.

WEST OF the Mississippi, meanwhile, skiing was strictly on machine-made snow, where available.

Man-made snow allowed three California areas — Snow Summit, Gold Mine and Boreal — to open the week before Thanksgiving, but other areas were waiting for Mother Nature to provide a blanket of snow for skiing.

"It's not being called a drought by either the ski areas or the National Weather Service, but the level of snow sure is down," said John Hamilton, an industry spokesman. "Thanksgiving has always been the traditional time for ski areas to open, but traditionally, there has been very little skiing on Thanksgiving."

As of midweek, only one of Montana's six major areas, Red Lodge Mountain, was open on man-made snow. Other areas were grooming trails but did not have enough snow to open.

Colorado had nearly a dozen areas open, most reporting packed powder, which translates to machine-made snow. They included the Highlands and Buttermilk at Aspen, Copper Mountain, Keystone, Vail and Winter Park.

ONLY ONE thing was keeping areas in New Mexico from opening.

"People are eager to go skiing. This is the best market I've ever seen," said Roy Parker of the Sierra Blanca ski area. "If we just get some snow, it'll be great."

Two of Minnesota's areas were open, using man-made stuff for a base. The Lutsen Ski Resort, home base for Olympian Cindy Nelson, and Afton Alps both were open on a limited basis but still smarting from last year's drought.

"Snow wasn't in people's front yards," an Afton spokesperson said, "and if they couldn't see it out their windows, they must have figured we didn't have any either."

Most of Utah's areas either still were closed or reported "marginal early conditions." Those open included Park City, Snowbird and Alta. None of Wyoming's 11 areas was open, and Medicine Bow is the only area in the state with snowmaking capabilities.

WJCC OPENER MONDAY Chaps face big week at home

Midland College opens a four-game homestand this week with a Western Junior College Conference game against Clarendon College at 8 p.m. Monday. After that, the Chaps will host the third annual Chaparral Classic Thursday through Saturday.

The Chap classic will mark MC's third tournament of the season. The Chaps played in the Quarterback Classic at Hutchinson, Kan., and the Amarillo Classic this weekend.

The Midland College Jazz Band, under the direction of Dr. Don Grant and comprised of MC students and local musicians, will begin playing at 7:30 p.m. and one of the highlights will be its arrangement of Sweet Georgia Brown. The group will also play at half.

Of course, all of the action until now has been to get ready for the WJCC race. "While we've generally played well, I'm not sure that our freshmen understand fully what the conference games mean to the team," said Coach Jerry Stone. "But our sophomores certainly know. They came close to winning both the conference and regional titles last year, so they are dedicated to winning both this year. I think they will be hearing down to make sure we get started right against Clarendon.

The Chaparral Classic is a six team event in which each team plays three games. Joining MC from the WJCC will be Odessa College and Howard College plus St. Philip's of San Antonio, Laredo JC and Eastern Arizona JC from Thatcher.

Three games are scheduled each night with Thursday's matchups sending Howard vs. St. Philip's at 5:30; MC vs. Laredo at 7:30 and OC vs. Eastern Arizona at 9:30.

Friday it will be OC-St. Philip's at 5:30 p.m.; MC-Eastern Arizona at 7:30 and Howard-Laredo at 9:30. Saturday it will be Laredo-OC at 5:30, Eastern Arizona-HC at 7:30 and MC-St. Philip's at 9:30. Season tickets for the Classic go on sale Monday at the MC-Clarendon game and will be met at the Physical Education Building athletic office through the week. Season tickets at $7 adults and $3 students and single night tickets are $3 adults and $1.50 students.

Heisman votes are counted, now...

NEW YORK (AP) — The ballots have been counted in what is considered to be the most wide-open Heisman Trophy race in years and the winner will be announced Monday, with running backs George Rogers of South Carolina and Herschel Walker of Georgia likely to be among the front-runners, along with Purdue quarterback Mark Herrmann and Pitt defensive end Hugh Green.

Rogers, a senior, and Walker, a freshman, were ranked first and fourth nationally in rushing last week, Rogers averaging 161.9 yards per game and Walker, who started only eight games prior to Saturday, averaging 141.1 yards.

Herrmann is a senior who ranks as major college football's all-time passing leader with 9,168 yards on 717 completions in 1,218 attempts. This season, he connected on 220 of 340 for 1,889 yards and 19 touchdowns.

Another quarterback, Brigham Young junior Jim McMahon, also is likely to finish high in the voting. McMahon was the runaway national passing leader prior to Saturday night's regular-season windup against Nevada-Las Vegas, with 263 completions in 408 attempts. He has set all-time NCAA records with 4,233 yards and 42 touchdowns.

ROGERS went over the 100-yard mark in rushing in each of South Carolina's 11 games this season — he will take a string of 20 such games into the Gator Bowl against Pitt — finishing with 1,781 yards on 297 carries.

Longshot wins

MIAMI (AP) — Longshot Nikki Winfield came from last place to win the first division of the $33,000 Miramar Stakes for 2-year-olds at Calder Saturday, and another longshot, Kaylem Ho, took the second division.

Eldorado, Clovis in finals

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Unbeaten Albuquerque Eldorado, with speedy Vince Warren scoring the game winning touchdown in the fourth quarter, stopped Albuquerque Highland 13-7 Saturday to earn a spot in the Class AAAA high school football championship game.

Eldorado, which has been in the finals three other times but has yet to win a championship, will meet Clovis next week in Albuquerque. The two finalists finished ranked 1-2 in AAAA this season and go into the title game with Eldorado at 12-0 and Clovis with an 11-1 record.

Highland took a first quarter 7-0 lead on a 1-yard run by Glen Russell and PAT by Yurric. The Hornets' defense made the touchdown stand up until Eldorado's talented quarterback, Jim Everett, hit Robie Humbles with a 27-yard scoring pass in the third period.

Hacienda Alta Vista! Take out your favorite little black hunting and fishing book and jot down that name. It's the newest, cleanest and most modern hunting and fishing resort down Mexico way.

The new lodge and facilities are situated on the northernmost shores of sprawling Lake Guerrero, Numero Uno in bass fishing.

THIS LAST trip found three of us taking more than 300 bass up to five pounds in three days. The days of catching small bass out of Guerrero are over. The larger bass are now beginning to show, and it's common to boat more than 100 bass a day.

Plano avenges '79 loss; Brownwood bites dust would reach the four pound mark. The rest averaged about one and one-half pounds.

IT'S BEEN two years since we visited Guerrero. Many things have changed. With the new facility and the bass growing larger, we might have to now rate Guerrero as the best bass lake in the world. Two years ago, we couldn't have, due to the small size of bass.

ONE EVENING the cooks announced we were to sample "duck tacos". Not knowing what to expect, since I'm not fond of duck meat anyway, I was leary about taking my first bite. But as the old saying goes, "If you don't try it, how do you know you won't like it?" It was delicious.

THE TPWD put-and-take program began in 1966 on the Guadalupe. Since then it has grown in popularity because of the romance the rainbow has for anglers who are otherwise bass fishermen.

Rainbow trout should be taking the bait before the end of the month at Forest Park Lake near San Angelo. Anglers who could stand a little variety from all the bass and catfish should have good success with the planted hatchery fish.

Pinfish are most often found on shallow, fully marine grassy flats, but will sometimes be found in essentially freshwater rivers. The larger pinfish usually are found at or near the bottom beyond the zone of vegetation.

Begin's government at it's weakest point

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — With a year left of its term, Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government has never been weaker. Speculation is again rife that Begin may resign early.

The latest blow has been the expulsion of the popular Ezer Weizman, Begin's former defense minister, from the prime minister's Herut Party and from the governing coalition. This reduced Begin's strength in the Knesset, Israel's parliament, to a 60-60 split with the opposition and the independents.

Weizman has announced plans to challenge Begin by forming his own party for the next election which must be held no later than November 1981.

Begin's survival until then depends on the backing of those independents who are not committed to toppling his government.

"The current situation is ungovernable," says coalition member Menachem Savidor. He predicts that Begin may resign early next year if he cannot entice some defectors to return.

Begin's major foreign policy problem is the stalemated talks with Egypt and the United States on self-rule in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, envisioned as the first step in resolving the Palestinian issue.

However, the Iran-Iraq war and Ronald Reagan's election victory in the United States have eased the pressure for quick results; by tacit agreement on all sides, the self-rule talks have been put in the freezer.

"If we fall, it will be over internal issues," says coalition whip Haim Corfu.

Begin has shown surprising durability in the face of previous political crises. His coalition once numbered 78 of the 120 Knesset members but he has managed to stay in power despite a rash of defections, mainly over the economy.

His closest call came earlier this month when he squeaked through a no-confidence motion over Israel's 130 percent annual inflation rate. The vote was 57-54.

It was Weizman's vote against the government that led to his expulsion from the party 3 1/2 years after he engineered its upset election victory over the long-governing Labor Party.

The coalition's weakness has tied Begin's hands on major legislation. A government bill to impose a one-time surtax on the upper classes is dying in committee. An eight-month-old proposal to settle Jews in seminaries in the West Bank city of Hebron has virtually been killed by another committee.

The government's precarious position also makes it vulnerable to demands by small splinter groups for political payoffs each time Begin is threatened by a no-confidence motion in parliament.

"If Begin quits it will be because he can't afford the blackmail of the small factions," said one Knesset member.

At the same time, however, the largest opposition party, Labor, is torn in a bitter leadership battle between its leader, Shimon Peres, and former Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Peres appears headed for victory in elections for the party convention, which will decide in December which of the two men will stand for prime minister. But Rabin has vowed to go on fighting.

Public opinion polls favor Labor to win the next election heavily, but the surveys are dismissed by government supporters because they show nearly half the electorate is undecided.

To finish his term, Begin is counting on support by the independents who he reckons are uncertain of their political future and have a stake in holding off elections for as long as possible.

Coalition leaders say they hope to coax back a three-man faction which recently split from the Likud bloc, but no one is saying what price the government will have to pay.

If the government can hang on until mid-summer, it will be assured of completing its term by the election law, which provides for a 100-day period between a prime minister's resignation and new elections.

If that happens, sources close to Begin say, they are looking to the new Reagan administration for help next November.

"Reagan can do a lot of things to make Begin look good," said one government source.

Police rescue woman, boys held hostage by gunman

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — As one policeman held the attention of a prison escapee who claimed he had an automatic rifle Saturday morning, other officers twice climbed back stairs to rescue three hostages and capture the escapee, police said.

Police said Lawrence M. McArthur had escaped from a minimum-security prison farm in Concord Friday night. He invaded the home of a woman friend, Joyce Duffy, and held her hostage with her sons Scott, 10, and Brian, 9, police said.

When police arrived at the woman's apartment at about 10 p.m. Friday, McArthur claimed he had an automatic rifle and would kill anyone who came through the door.

McArthur's father, also named Lawrence, was brought to the scene by police after his son yelled, "I'll come out if you get my father."

The father called from a second-story porch "I'll ride down to the station with you," but McArthur replied, "No, shoot me. I'm right in the window."

Police officer John F. Dowd shouted, "No one wants to hurt you, Larry. Don't do this to your dad."

Later, when McArthur yelled "Why don't you come up here and get me?" Dowd replied "No, I'm scared to go up there, just as scared as you are to come down. Why don't you call us on the phone?"

As they talked, members of a police special firearms and tactics force were climbing the back stairs. They grabbed the 36-year-old McArthur as he leaned out the window. Police said no gun was found in his possession.

Police said Saturday that McArthur was charged with three counts of kidnapping, three counts of confining and putting in fear, one count of malicious mischief and one of escape. He was slated for arraignment Monday in Worcester District Court.

An estimated 100 neighbors and onlookers crouched behind nearby cars, houses and trees as the drama unfolded in the blue-collar neighborhood of three-decker apartment buildings.

They cheered when police overpowered McArthur at 12:55 a.m.

Earlier, while McArthur's attention was diverted, police officer Robert C. Gaunt went up the back way and led Mrs. Duffy and her sons to safety.

Joe Landolfi, a spokesman for the state Correction Department, said McArthur had been sentenced in 1976 to 9-to-20 years in prison for armed robbery. He was transferred from Walpole State Prison to the Northeastern Correction Center prison farm at Concord, where he worked in the dairy barn.

Thatcher's government troubled

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government is in trouble 18 months after sweeping to power with a promise to solve Britain's economic ills.

Unemployment is at a post-1930s record. Businesses are falling also at record levels. Money supply and government spending remain well over target despite unpopular cuts.

Economists say British industry has entered probably its worst recession for half a century, and jobs are disappearing at the rate of one every 30 seconds.

So Mrs. Thatcher has been forced into some compromises if not into the "U-turn" her critics demand.

The polls show that she now is unpopular with voters, and in the House of Commons last week, she came up against strong opposition from the ranks of her own Conservative Party.

Former Prime Minister Edward Heath made a sweeping attack on the woman who ousted him as the party leader five years ago.

"The risk to our party is very grave indeed," said Heath, describing how small businesses were being forced to shut because of high interest rates and the strength of the pound sterling.

Mrs. Thatcher's response was to bend, but only a little. "Sometimes obstacles appear," she said as her government announced a new package of tax increases and spending cuts.

"You might just have to deviate a little bit — but we're not blown off course in any way."

The package, which amounted to a mini-budget, contained some notable deviations from her election pledges to lower taxes and help private enterprise.

In addition, a 200-million-pound ($480 million) cut in defense spending means that the British leader cannot fulfil her pledge to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to increase expenditure on defense by 3 percent annually. Instead, Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Geoffrey Howe estimated it will go up 2.5 percent this year and next.

To offset government spending and borrowing domestically, the Thatcher administration announced that it will raise two billion pounds ($4.8 billion) by slapping a windfall tax on oil-company profits from the North Sea and by increasing social security contributions for all British workers.

When Chancellor Howe initially failed to mention that employers' social security contributions are also to be raised by 386 million pounds ($926 million), opposition Labor Party lawmakers urged his resignation.

The Confederation of British Industry complained that the social security hike would wipe out half the expected benefit from a simultaneous 2-percent cut in the Bank of England lending rate to 14 percent, which the confederation had been demanding for weeks.

Criticism for the measures also came from Conservative hard-liners who wanted twice the billion-pound ($2.4 billion) saving in government spending that it represents.

The schism in economic thinking is deep. Mrs. Thatcher is trying to follow a balanced-budget, tight-credit "monetarist" approach in the belief that Britons can only get back what is earned.

The Labor opposition, Heath and others in the Conservative ranks believe the welfare state built up since World War II could be wrecked in the process and the nation irreparably split between those who have money and jobs and those who don't.

Some 2.16 million people, or 8.9 percent of the 24-million-member work force, are unemployed compared with 1.3 million when Mrs. Thatcher came to power in May 1979.

The Confederation of British Industry, the Conservatives' natural ally, forecasts that production will fall by 9.3 percent this year and 4.7 percent next — a total of 14 percent compared with an 11-percent drop in the dark days of 1929-1931.

On the credit side, inflation has fallen to 15.3 percent from 21.6 in May, and recent pay settlements by engineers and auto workers have been in the single-figure range Mrs. Thatcher wants.

She has a 43-seat majority in the House of Commons and her Cabinet is sticking together despite opinion polls which show her trailing 10 points behind Labor.

But, says the respected Cambridge University economist Wynne Godley, "If the government persists with this policy, I foresee something like catastrophe .... I'm prepared to put my reputation on it."

Little hope left for missing teens, counselors

MULEGE, Mexico (AP) — Searchers held little hope Saturday of finding alive six teenagers and their two adult counselors missing seven days in the Gulf of California.

The group undertook a sailing adventure across the gulf without a permit and in poor weather conditions, a Mexican port official told the Arizona Daily Star in Tucson. If a permit had been sought, it would have been denied due to the weather, he said.

The 25-foot metal sailboat they were using to cross from the Mexican mainland to this town on Baja California's east coast was found beached with one teen-ager's body aboard. The boat washed ashore Nov. 24, carrying the body of Bernard Reifer, 19, of Baden, Pa. Although he was wearing a life preserver, authorities said he drowned on the boat. Several life jackets were found scattered on the beach, but authorities doubted the people missing ever reached shore.

The group was made up mostly of youths assigned to VisionQuest, a Tucson, Ariz., private juvenile rehabilitation project. Their voyage was part of a survival training program.

Authorities fear the lost eight, who set out from Guaymas, Mexico, on the 18-hour crossing, were washed overboard when the boat ran into a storm. Three similar boats, carrying 31 youths and counselors including seven girls and two women, made the crossing safely.

About 2,500 square miles of the gulf were searched Saturday with private and U.S. Coast Guard aircraft and Mexican navy patrol boats, said Coast Guard spokesman Garth Groff. The area included some waters already searched. A C-130 airplane and an HH-3F helicopter surveyed 2,300 square miles on Friday before darkness forced a suspension of the search with no new traces found of those missing.

VisionQuest board chairman Robert Burton said after Friday's search efforts that finding the missing alive "looks pretty doubtful. I've been told that when persons drown, they sink to the bottom and then are washed ashore 72 hours later." He said beaches would be patrolled Sunday in search of bodies.

The director of the Guaymas port authority, Catarino Lopez-Arreola, told the Tucson newspaper Friday that all vessels leaving Guaymas require permits issued by his office. He said he never received notice of the VisionQuest excursion.

"When there's bad weather, we simply do not issue permits to small boats, and I consider a boat of 25 feet to be very small."

"There was cold air on the (Mexican) West Coast on Sunday (Nov. 23), a sign of bad weather, and I believe I would not have granted permission," he said.

Burton said of the permit: "That's a new one on me. That's probably an oversight on our part."

Burton said surviving youths stayed in Mexico with their counselors. He said it was "a very sensitive time for the children because a lot of their friends were on that boat."

Wonderful world of miniatures

By SANDI BREEDEN
Lifestyle Writer

From the wall paper to oriental rugs, to the chandeliers to staircases, from the eggs in the basket to the baby crib, Mary LaCaff's miniature wonderland is truly remarkable.

A replica of a house built in 1880 in San Francisco is a Eastlake Stick Victorian house, and not one item has been left out in the miniature reproduction. The real Victorian house is still standing, according to Mrs. LaCaff.

"I saw this house pictured in a miniature collectors' magazine and ordered it in April of 1979. I received it last August. It is number 16 out of a limited edition of 50," said the collector, who usually orders the houses and decorates them herself.

The miniature house is filled with turn-of-the-century furniture, from the bathroom fixtures to the baby crib. The sofa looks life-like with pillows adorning it and oriental rugs decorate the hard-wood floors. A basket of eggs sits precariously in the kitchen and a rocking horse in the nursery anxiously awaits for some youngster to ride.

ALSO HOUSED IS a canary in a bird cage, a Christmas tree, decorated by Mrs. LaCaff, and a doll sitting in a chair with one shoe off. "Her name is Miss Priss," said Mrs. LaCaff. "It took me a year to get her."

Mrs. LaCaff is through decorating the Victorian house and said the best thing about finishing a house is "it's like being frozen in time."

A miniature greenhouse of Mrs. LaCaff's has geraniums brightening the environment and the white daisy's form a sign of welcome to anyone peeking in the windows.

The small bake shop is filled with miniature baked goods and is a reproduction of the work Mrs. LaCaff does in her own kitchen. "I enjoy baking big," said Mrs. LaCaff, "so I copied in miniature."

The miniature collector said she makes cakes with wine corks, which are cut and sliced, and are iced with glue and acrylic paint.

AN ANTIQUE SHOP features Mrs. LaCaff's miniature collection. Pictures, dolls, candles, candelabras, clocks and figurines among other items adorn the miniature shop. Paintings on the wall are actually paintings on handkerchief liners designed by Cecile Martin. "The paintings are done with the same techniques Cecile uses when she does real-life portraits," said Mrs. LaCaff.

The finished farmhouse was sold during the Museum of the Southwest auction held recently, according to Mrs. LaCaff. The house is furnished, is painted and has wallpaper, curtains, mirrors and working light fixtures.

The replica of a midwestern Queen Anne house, built around the turn of the century, has not been decorated yet. A lone Christmas tree adorns the first floor bay window which reaches through all three stories and ends in a 'witches tower.'

The design of the house, which is number one of a limited edition of 14, was taken from an old logo of a California shop, although the architecture is probably more typical of the midwestern part of the United States, said Mrs. LaCaff.

The miniature collector said she buys the houses and then decorates them with wallpaper, paints, curtains and other decorating items. She said she orders them from the miniature collectors' magazines and they come from different parts of the country. "They come by planes and sometimes by truck," she said.

Mrs. LaCaff has been decorating houses for three years. "I had a decorating studio and slowly started spending more time with the miniatures."

"It's incredible how much time, it takes," she added. "But I never get tired of handling small things."

The houses are made of different kinds of woods such as first grade pine, alderwood, birch and ash. The windows do have window panes and the houses usually come wired for electricity.

Collecting miniature items and decorating miniature houses has become a very popular hobby in the United States. Magazines now published for that sole purpose are rising in number as are miniature showings and auctions. Both decorating items, such as furniture and rugs, and houses are built on a scale based on real models.

A showing of Mrs. LaCaff's delicate, miniature wonderland can be seen at The Shop for Pappagallo at Oak Ridge Square during the Christmas season.

This Queen Anne turn-of-the-century styled house features a bay window extending through the three stories and on into the 'witches tower.' The house stands about four feet tall and is part of Mary LaCaff's collection of miniature houses, has not been decorated nor painted. It was shipped to Midland from Wisconsin by way of van, according to Mrs. LaCaff.

Many intricate details go into the building of the 'witches tower' of the Queen Anne style house shown in the above photograph.

Mary LaCaff places an outside lamp on her miniature 'Bake Shop'.

'Miss Priss' takes off her shoe, preparing to lie down on the canopy bed, covered in antique lace. In the background, a miniature canary in its miniature cage adorns the room, which is located in the Eastlake Stick Victorian house, part of Mary LaCaff's miniature collection.

Rabbit coats need special care

COLLEGE STATION — Rabbit-fur coats offer stylish warmth for the winter months, says a clothing specialist, Nevery Rhoades.

Some guidelines will help consumers decide whether or not to buy a rabbit coat, what quality they can afford and how to care for the fur, she points out.

Miss Thoades is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

occasion coat, she recommends.

If worn frequently, as a school or work coat, the garment will not last very long.

Also, intended use should help determine what quality to select.

More durable coats will generally cost more, but, since all rabbit sheds, no rabbit coat will last many seasons.

A lower-quality coat may suit the growing teenager that might outgrow a coat before wearing it out. However, an active teenager may need a more durable garment to last even one season.

Also, keep in mind that rabbit is currently a fashion fad, and while fur is a classic coat fabric, rabbit may lose popularity next year.

FUR QUALITY

Rabbit fur is one of the most delicate, but inexpensive, furs. All rabbit will shed regardless of quality, but higher-quality fur controls shedding to some extent, she explains.

To check for fur quality, hold the coat or jacket up at the shoulders and blow on the fur. The less skin that shows, the better.

ONE-PIECE VS. PIECED

One-piece furs are more durable than pieced furs; however, they are also more expensive, the specialist continues.

If the garment is pieced, check for durable stitches at seams. This will help decrease shedding.

Some furs are pieced by gluing skins together. This process, used on less-expensive rabbit coats, is much less durable and promotes shedding.

FIT

A rabbit coat should not fit snugly. The garment will not "give" with body movement, and the pelt is likely to rip with very little stress, Miss Rhoades cautions.

To help control stress on the fur, select a coat with quality lining.

READ LABEL

Check the label to determine if the fur is real or fake. Government regulations require proper labeling of furs, including identification of dye process used.

WEARABILITY

Rabbit coats, like any fur, will provide warmth for the wearer.

However, since rabbit is not very durable, select the fur as a special-

Controversy over artificial sweeteners continues

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Registered Dietitian
Copley News Service

Dear Shirley: I love your column and I really look forward to it. I would like your opinion on artificial sweeteners in diet pop. Are they dangerous? My husband and I are both overweight because we love sweets, although we are trying to give them up.

Do artificial sweeteners cause cancer? Could we take some, and if so, how much is safe? I would very much appreciate your reply. This is a real problem for us. — N.K.

Dear N.K.: The controversy over artificial sweeteners is still going on. Recent studies showed that men who drank three or more diet drinks a day, had a greater risk of bladder cancer than those who did not. However, this was not true in women.

The National Cancer Institute says that children and pregnant women should never use them, and excessive use by anyone is ill-advised.

The limited use of saccharin seems to be acceptable in many professional circles. I would not take over one to two diet drinks per day, and less if possible. Tiny amounts of fructose (fruit sugar) will give the same calories as regular sugar, but it is much sweeter, so you use less. This may be a better alternative to using a lot of artificial sweeteners. To compensate, cut down calories from other foods, preferably fats.

even tho we're in the worst location...

you'll be surprised at our Christmas cheer!

The wedding is planned for December at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Lubbock.

The bride-elect is attending Texas Tech University in Lubbock majoring in mechanical engineering technology. Her fiancé is also attending Texas Tech majoring in electrical engineering.

Winter makeup

The last rose of summer has long since faded. So has the flattering sun-tan that brightened summer faces. But winter's drab pallor need not cast itself upon your face.

"Winter makeup should be as flattering and natural looking as summer's casual, healthy look," says Monica Hollister, vice president of marketing for Merle Norman Cosmetics. "Winter wardrobes, even in mild climates, tend to be more structured and 'serious' and less colorful than summer outfits. Consequently, some women tend to apply makeup in a more heavy-handed and structured way."

"Your winter makeup shouldn't make you look winter weary," says Hollister. "First you may want to re-evaluate your skin care program to counteract the drying effect of wind, cold and overheated homes and offices. A foundation product that adds a subtle tinge of healthy color to your skin is another essential."

"The biggest boost can come from color enhancers, she says. "Flattering copper and deep rose blushers can brighten the skin and coordinate beautifully with the copper, bronze, loden green, purple blue and rose-colored fabrics in your winter wardrobe. Select a soft deep blue, gray, green or brown eyeshadow to reflect the color of your blouse or dress. Choose a highlighter of a lighter color and then smudge a little navy, brown, green or gray eyeliner pencil just above your lashline to bring eyes into more dramatic focus. For lips and fingernails, rich copper and deep rose colors are appealing but never garish."

MADDOX-HAMAKER

BOSSIER, La. — Mrs. Gus Bernheim of Bossier, La., announces the engagement of her daughter, Sheila Jane Maddox of Shreveport, La. and formerly of Midland, to Cloyse Randall Hamaker, also of Shreveport.

The bride-elect is also the daughter of the late L.D. Maddox. Parents of the bridegroom-elect are Mr. and Mrs. C.J. Hamaker of Shreveport.

The couple will marry at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 3, 1981, at the First Presbyterian Church in Shreveport.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Lee High School in Midland and is presently attending Louisiana State University. She is a member of Tri-Delta sorority.

The groom is a graduate of Woodlawn High School in Shreveport and is also attending Louisiana State University. He is a member of Kappa Alpha Order fraternity and is employed by the Association for Computing Machinery.

HUNTER-DAVIS

Gwen Hunter, 3515 Thomas, announces the engagement and approaching marriage of her daughter, Carma Hunter of Ft. Worth to Mark Chapman Davis also of Ft. Worth.

The bride-elect is also the daughter of the late John Leslie Hunter.

She attended Lee High School and is employed by Nu-way Oil Co. Her fiancé is attending the Criswell Bible Institute in Dallas.

Brakes neglected

Like too many parts on a motor vehicle, the brakes are often neglected because they are so reliable and durable. After a car has been slowed and stopped many thousands of times, the brake linings or disc pads will wear out, but this happens so gradually that the driver may not be sensitive to the changes that result.

Therefore, brakes should be inspected at least once a year and the fluid level in the master cylinder should be checked at least every 5,000 miles, says the Automotive Information Council (AIC).

If a lining is allowed to wear through, the metal rivets or a portion of the brake shoe may scrape or score the brake drum, which will result in the need for reconditioning or replacement.

More than any other factor, your driving habits affect the life of your car's brakes, so unless you have to make a sudden stop as a safety precaution, don't slam on the brakes. Also try to anticipate stops, not only to save the wear on the brakes but on the tires as well.

Don't "ride" the brakes when driving because that practice also causes premature wear.

Because brake wear is so gradual, AIC offers the following items to watch for:

— Brakes pull car to one side — This indicates worn linings, fluid on the linings or worn suspension parts.

— Brakes chatter — A drum is out-of-round, a lining is loose or a disc is warped.

— Metallic grinding when stopping — Brake shoes or pads worn completely through.

— Spongy brake pedal — Low on fluid or air in the lines.

— Pedal goes almost to the floor — Loss of brake fluid.

— Any of the above conditions should be fixed before any further driving is attempted, cautions AIC.

Lifestyle guidelines

The following are suggested guidelines for publication of stories in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram:

Information for our Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday; or two days before publication in a daily paper.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within a week of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. The Reporter-Telegram has forms for engagement and wedding announcement stories.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly.

From left to right are Ann Newman, Eleanor Morse and Ava Hoelscher. They are preparing for Christmasfest '80, sponsored by Las Manos, a service organization of the Museum of the Southwest, which will be Thursday through Saturday at the Lancaster House, 1705 W. Indiana. The event will feature a variety of unusual decorations, ornaments, linens, gifts and Christmas ribbons. For those hard to find stocking stuffers, there will be toys and hand puppets to delight the children. A wooden Christmas Advent Carrousel, valued at $450, will be given as a door prize. Tickets for this will sell for $1. Christmasfest benefits the museum. A preview party is set for 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Thursday, with $5 admission charge. Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. will be free admission. (Staff photo)

These are uplifting hours

VAN NUYS, Calif. (AP) — More than one-third of shoplifting apprehensions occur between 3 p.m. and 6 p.m., it was reported recently in a survey of 917 supermarkets, drug stores and discount stores.

That is also the busiest grocery shopping time. Of the apprehended shoplifters, 30 percent conceal stolen items in a purse, 25 percent hide goods under clothing and another 25 percent conceal items in pockets.

Share traditions

Once again it's time to start thinking about the holidays. And we'd like our readers to share their favorite holiday traditions with us.

We're interested in your favorite recipes, customs, family games, home decorating crafts and ideas for publication throughout the Thanksgiving and Christmas holiday season.

It means a lot to us each year to see what things mean a lot to you and your family at Hanukkah, Christmas and New Year's. We want to begin a tradition.

So please take time in between your planning for the holidays and send some of the recipes or customs that make the holidays special at your house. Send your traditions on a single piece of paper if possible, typewritten preferably. Include your name and a phone number where you can be reached during the day. Please don't send anything you want back. We cannot return pictures, models or family heirlooms.

Last Visit Before Christmas

Sharon Hillis, left, and Cindy Mann, county extension agents, show their table of ideas on how to make a 'Christmas Impression.'

'Christmas Impressions' suggests gift ideas

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

From crafts to fashions to baked goods—it was a program of real variety to encourage the spirit of the holidays at the second "Christmas Impressions" program hosted by the County Extension Service.

Presenting the recent program at St. Luke's United Methodist Church were Sharon A. Hillis, county extension agent, and assistant Cindy A. Mann.

"You can have a beautiful Christmas and still keep in mind two things very important to us these days—conservation and utilization of resources," said Ms. Hillis.

She advised choosing decorations which can be used in a variety of ways—for example, choosing a small Norfolk pine as a table centerpiece.

"For Christmas, all you have to do is put the pine in a basket and attach a big red velvet ribbon. It's beautiful the rest of the year simply as a green plant," she said.

Many of the recipes which the agents demonstrated could be made days or even weeks in advance and frozen, saving time and energy during the busiest holiday time.

They also gave tips on many crafts and food preparations in which children can also participate.

"It makes them proud to do something on their own and really brings the spirit of Christmas closer to home if the children can help, too," said Ms. Mann.

Following are many of their food recipes and craft instructions which make excellent gifts for Christmas or are good for serving at parties, etc.:

for 25 minutes. Spread with cheese spread. Spread like dough and cut into Christmas shapes.

MINTY CHOCOLATE MALT MIX

2 cups chocolate-flavored malted milk powder
1/2 cup white butter mints, chopped
3 cups nonfat dry milk powder
1/2 cup sweetened cocoa mix

In blender container or food processor, combine 1 cup malted milk powder and mint. Blend until mints are finely chopped, about 1 minute. Turn into mixing bowl.

Add remaining 1 cup malted milk powder, nonfat dry milk powder and cocoa mix. Stir well. Store in airtight container. Makes 5 1/2 cups.

For each serving, mix 1/4 cup mix with 3/4 cup boiling water in a cup. Stir to dissolve mixture.

CRANBERRY-ORANGE BREAD

Sift 2 cups sifted flour, 3/4 cup sugar, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt and 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg into bowl. Add grated rind of 1 orange and mix. Combine 1/2 cup orange juice, 2 eggs, slightly beaten, and 2 tablespoons salad oil. Add to dry ingredients, stirring just until flour is moistened. Fold in 1 cup cranberries, chopped. Spread in greased 9x5x3-inch pan. Baked at 350 degrees for 60-70 minutes. Makes 1 loaf.

This bread can be baked in individual grapefruit or orange juice cans, topped with powdered sugar glaze and wrapped with a gaily-colored ribbon.

CRANBERRY FUDGE

2 cups sugar
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup light cream
1 tblsp. light corn syrup

1/2 tsp salt
1 tblsp butter or margarine
1 tsp vanilla
1/2 cup fresh cranberries, chopped

Butter the sides of heavy 2-quart saucepan. In pan, combine sugar, milk, cream, corn syrup and salt. Cook and stir over medium heat until mixture boils. Cook to softball stage or till candy thermometer registers 238 degrees. Add butter or margarine and vanilla. Beat vigorously till mixture stiffens and starts to lose its gloss, about 5 minutes. Quickly stir in cranberries and spread in buttered 9x5x3-inch loaf pan. Score while warm. Cut into pieces when fudge is cool. Makes 2 1/2 dozen pieces, 1 1/2 x 1 1/2.

POMANDERS

Colorful fresh citrus pomanders give an intriguing spicy fragrance to closets or drawers. They're easy to make and delightful as gifts. All one needs is a fresh orange, a box of whole cloves, powdered orris root from the drugstore or arrowroot, ground cinnamon and gay ribbon. Using an awl or ice pick, carefully prick holes in a clean, firm navel orange and insert whole cloves until fruit is completely covered. Roll in mixture of equal parts of orris root and ground cinnamon, patting in as much powder as will adhere. Wrap pomander in tissue paper for several weeks. Remove paper, shake off loose powder and attach ribbon for handling.

REINDEER

Simply draw a reindeer face on a brown paper sack, using a felt tip pen.

SNOWMAN

Staple two paper plates together, and decorate a face out of scrap felt for the hat, scarf, ears and mouth; and buttons for the eyes and nose. These can be glued on. A sprig of artificial holly and berries attached to the hat gives it the final touch.

A slit cut at the top will allow children to put cookies inside and give as gifts to their friends.

This can also be used as a bag for holding cookies or to wrap a gift for a child.

CRAB DABS

1 can (12 oz.) dungeness crabmeat or other crab meat, fresh or frozen

2 cans (6 1/2 or 7 1/2 oz each) crab meat

1/2 cup fine soft bread crumbs

2 tblsp. dry sherry

1 tsp. chopped chives

1 tsp. dry mustard

1/4 tsp salt

10 slices bacon, cut in thirds

Thaw frozen crab meat. Drain crabmeat. Remove any remaining shell or cartilage. Chop the crab meat. Combine all ingredients except bacon. Mix well. Chill for 30 minutes. Portion crab mixture with a table spoon. Shape into small rolls. Wrap bacon around crab rolls and secure with a toothpick. Pack crab rolls on a broiler pan. Broil about 4 inches from heat for 8 to 10 minutes or until bacon is crisp. Turn carefully. Broil 4 to 5 minutes longer or until bacon is crisp. Makes approximately 20 dabs.

HOT 'n TOTS

1/2 cup butter

1 1/2 cup flour

1 cup grated, sharp cheddar cheese

1 tblsp. Worcestershire sauce

1 tsp. salt

1/4 tsp. paprika

1/4 cup chopped pecans

1/4 tsp. cayenne pepper

Mix ingredients with an electric mixer. Blend well. Shape into small balls; press down with fork. Bake at 325 degrees

Christmas brings friends and family closer through the giving of homemade or homebaked presents, such as this Snowman cookie holder, special nut bread and party mix, etc. Wrapped or placed on or in a unique container and accented with pretty ribbon or fabric gives it an even prettier touch. # Secondhand car may provide the best route Admit it. You probably wouldn't put your old car in the category of a fine wine that improves with age. And it's unlikely you'd allow it to slip into class with an antique that increases in value.

Well, the old family car is getting a second look. Latest studies show that used cars are cheaper to own and operate than new ones. And the longer you keep your car, the cheaper it becomes to run per mile.

The purchase price of a used car ranges from 20 to 80 percent below that of a similar model and the operating expenses on a used car can be as much as 50 percent below that of a brand-new one," say the service experts at the Carter Carburetor Division of ACF Industries.

What about repairs and maintenance on an aging car? They're low when compared to a new car's depreciation that, during the first year, is 31.5 percent of its purchase price.

If you care for your car it will reward you with years of service, say the Carter experts. With cold weather and harsh driving conditions ahead, it's a good time to practice preventive maintenance. Here are their suggestions to get in gear for winter driving:

— Give your car a major tune-up if you haven't already done so this year. An experienced mechanic will check the battery, clean and repair the spark plugs, check the condenser, ignition timing and carburetor. Have the fuel pump inspected as well to insure that you're getting the most mileage for your money.

— Check the anti-freeze. Most people keep it in year-round, but if it doesn't check out at minus 40 degrees F, it needs to be replaced. See your owner's manual for the correct coolant level.

— Have your car lubricated and check the oil level while the engine is cold. After a car passes the three- and four-year mark, the need for more frequent lubrication as well as oil changes increases.

— Check the other fluid levels. These include brake master cylinder, automatic transmission, power steering and windshield washing solution.

— Check the gaskets, hoses, belts for leaks, cracks or bulges. Have it done by a professional but make it a habit to care for your car by doing it yourself once a week.

— Unless the battery is the sealed type, take off the filler caps to check the level of water, which should cover the plates. If it doesn't, add water.

— Corroded battery terminals may inhibit starting. Check to see if they need cleaning.

— Check your tires for good tread; you'll need it for winter driving conditions. Be sure the tires are inflated at the level recommended in your owner's manual.

— Have the exhaust system and muffler inspected for leaks. Driving in cold weather with the windows closed tight and a faulty exhaust system could lead to carbon monoxide poisoning.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a grown woman with a good husband, two wonderful children and a full, busy life. I do a lot of driving and always allow myself time for getting lost.

Even if I have been there before, I get turned around and have to stop and ask for directions. Sometimes I have to stop and ask for directions two and three times. I am a careful driver and I am considered fairly intelligent, but I have absolutely no sense of direction.

My husband says I get lost because I lack self-confidence and I set out expecting to get lost. Can that be? Are there others like me? Have you any suggestions?—GETS LOST A LOT

DEAR GETS: Don't be ashamed. Some of our brainiest people get lost a lot. Recommended solution: When you start out, have written instructions on how to get to where you're going. Should you get lost, stop at once and ask for help. (And be sure to listen carefully, so that you understand the directions.) Also, always take a phone number of the place you're headed for in case you want to call and ask how to get there.

If that fails, carry a compass, a Bible and a survival kit.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from SHOCKED IN SAN DIEGO didn't shock me. (Shocked's 17-year-old son was dating a 17-year-old girl whose mother rented a motel room for the kids so her daughter's first sexual experience would be "nice." Listen to this: Our son, at age 18, was invited to go on an extended motor trip with his 17-year-old girlfriend and BOTH her parents. When they stopped overnight at motels, the parents rented two rooms. And instead of putting the men in one room and women in the other like respectable people, they put the two kids in one room and occupied the other room themselves.

I think they were hoping their daughter would get pregnant so our son would have to marry her. Care to comment?—DISGUSTED IN CALIF.

DEAR DISGUSTED: Under California law, "Sexual intercourse with a female under the age of 18 and not the wife of the male constitutes Statutory Rape." And, "The combination of two or more individuals in furtherance of an unlawful act constitutes a Conspiracy."

So your son could have been charged with statutory rape, and his girlfriend's parents could have been charged with conspiracy.

DEAR ABBY: I say "Hurrah" for the mother who rented a motel room for her daughter and the girl's boyfriend. Parents over the years have felt it their obligation to make their children's sex lives as miserable as possible, and I find it encouraging to read about one mother who has shown some compassion and understanding.

Kids are going to do it anyway—that's the way the world is and there's no use ignoring it. I think it's a darn sight better to provide them with a clean, comfortable bed and bath than to force them to use the back seat of a car—especially considering how small and cramped back seats are these days—STEPHEN S. IN GOLETA, CALIF.

DEAR STEPHEN: SEE MY REPLY TO DISGUSTED IN CALIFORNIA. Now are you still for providing a clean, comfortable love-nest for minors?

DEAR ABBY: My son, who is 21 and attends a university, does not want to give me his off-campus address because he does not want me to visit him. I write to him in care of a post-office box. He claims that none of the students there are visited by their parents. I am deeply hurt by his attitude. What can I do?—UNHAPPY IN FLA. DEAR UNHAPPY:

Don't insist. (P.S. But if you send him homemade cookies, bake for two.)

Make your own colorful window shades By ELLEN APPEL Copley News Service every print, color and texture you can think of, you can make your shades match almost anything. PREPARATION: 1. Cover a large work area with newspapers. 2. Unroll window shade onto the newspapers. 3. Press fabric or bedsheets with warm iron. COVERING THE SHADE: 1. Spray shade with adhesive, according to directions on the can. 2. Wait a few seconds for adhesive to become tacky. 3. Smooth the fabric onto the shade. Let fabric overlap bottom edge by about two and a half inches. SIDE EDGES: 1. Cut excess fabric from side edges. 2. Cut excess fabric from top edge. 3. Apply white glue to side edges of shade. Use a stick to apply the glue. Use very little glue, and be careful to remove excess. LOWER EDGE: 1. Turn the shade over. 2. Spray two and a half inch fabric margin with adhesive. 3. Turn margin over shade. Smooth fabric against shade.

Today about half your electricity is made from lignite coal.

And a good thing, too, because our biggest contract for low-cost natural gas (which we also use to make your electricity) expires this year. This contract has been in effect for almost 20 years. It's helped us keep the cost of electricity lower here than in many other parts of the country. Next year when we have to start paying much more for natural gas, electricity is going to cost more. There's no way around it. But your bill won't be as high as it would be if we weren't making about half your electricity with economical, abundant lignite coal from Texas.

Could you please tell me

We'll see what we can do, Theima.

In the realm of sewing, there is only one queen — the seamstress who does the very best she can. So what if the blazer you made doesn't look quite as good as

Susie Q's? If you did the very best you can, how could you possibly ask more of yourself?

The key word here is

IF.

IF you did the best you can. Often we give a fraction of what is there because we are tired, or in a hurry, or not interested at the moment.

But the best is there — hiding, waiting. Pull it out and use it.

IF you have reached a rather tedious step in the construction of your garment, don't dash through it. Wait until you are alert and eager. Then set in on it. If it takes awhile, or if it takes redoing a few times, you have a better chance of coping than if you tackle it when you are not operating on all cylinders.

IF you come to a step in construction that is new to you and is going to require some extra effort, tackle the "understanding" part before you tackle the "execution" part. Read through it, look it over, read through it again and then go at it... one tiny step at a time.

IF, after repeated efforts, one particular spot does not suit you, and there is no way you can do any better, and you can't find help, don't let it haunt you. You gave it your best shot. Now, forget it. It will look a lot better in the morning.

When working on a complicated project, give yourself a fair chance by selecting easy-to-workwith fabrics. A complicated pattern plus a complicated fabric gives you twice the headaches.

AT WIT'S END

Tokyo's naivete

By ERMA BOMBECK

For an industry that is touted to be a world leader and a pace-setter in auto manufacturing, I cannot believe the naivete of Toyota.

This month they are exporting to this country what is billed as the "first talking car." Two models of their small luxury passenger lines will be equipped with a speaker monitor of a woman's voice which will warn drivers to fasten their seat belts, remove the ignition key and set the parking brakes.

Are they serious? Americans wrote the book on talking cars. Has no one told them that every American car has been equipped with a live talking system since the car was invented? They used to be called back-seat drivers until they moved up to the passenger side. Now they're called a lot of things.

When it comes to telling a driver what to do, no one does it better than American women. We learned it in the back seat from our mothers. Even before I learned how to drive, I knew the standard pre-ignition quiz: "Is your door shut all the way?" "Do you have it in park?" "We got enough gas?" "Is the brake off?"

Throughout the years, realizing that the couple who drives together survives together, women have elevated their role to an art form.

There's Creative Gasping. You won't get THAT in a foreign model. It's a little subtle intake of breath from the passenger when the driver comes a little too close to another car — or the car in front of you stops suddenly.

There's the Muffled Prayer, where you cover your face with both hands and mumble, "Oh, my God!" and when the driver asks, "What's the matter?" you look pale and say, "Nothing."

The Active Non-Driver is strictly a made-in-America concept where the woman actually pushes an imaginary brake pedal to the floor at every stop and her entire body does a complete swivel with every lane change.

And, of course, standard equipment with every American-made talking car is the "Evaluation" that comes at the end of every drive. No matter how long a driver has driven, he gets a verbal scoreboard of near misses, yellow lights run, speed misdemeanors, carelessness, and a prediction on what is in store for him and what changes must be made if anyone is ever to drive with him again.

I don't want to discourage Japan's talking car before it opens its mouth, but just let me say that American car manufacturers have a stockpile of 137 million talking cars on their roads... and no one wants them... in any language.

Will metric make it?

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It may be 10 years — or never — before the metric system becomes predominant in the United States, the U.S. Metric Board says in its first annual report to Congress. Either way, the board says, is OK with it.

"Our job is neither to cajole nor persuade," chairman Louis F. Polk, a Columbus, Ohio, businessman, said in the report released this week. "It is to educate, inform and assist those parties who make a voluntary decision to convert."

Nevertheless, in a news released issued with the report, the board conceded, "There is some confusion about (our) role and the national policy on metric conversion."

The board was created by the Metric Conversion Act of 1975, which neither made conversion mandatory nor set a deadline.

Set up in 1978, the $2.5 million board consists of 17 part-time members from business, labor and other walks of life. It has a full-time staff of 31.

A 1978 General Accounting Office study challenged the assumption that metrics were inevitable and claimed the cost of converting could run into the billions of dollars.

A board spokesman, William DeReuter, said conversion to metrics continues to gain momentum in some industries, notably auto manufacturing, where General Motors plans to be metric by 1982.

"G.M. isn't switching because they think it would be a nice thing to do. They're doing it because they see some cost savings involved," DeReuter said. "They won't have to keep two parts inventories."

But he said most polls show Americans oppose the growing use of the metric system, which substitutes meters, liters and grams for the English measures of yards, gallons and pounds.

The United States is one of the few nations in the world that has not converted or begun a changeover to metrics. Other holdouts are Burma, South Yemen and Brunei.

Some oil companies now sell gasoline by the liter. The wine and liquor industries switched their stock to liters in the past two years. Many bottlers boosted prices in the process, which DeReuter said "kind of gave metrics a black eye."

Board member Francis R. Dugan, president of a Cincinnati construction firm, said the nation is unlikely to abandon the metric uses it has adopted. "So the choice is whether we want to live with dual measurements. Probably the answer is that we are going to be metric in the workplace and customary on our own time."

Some authors can go home again

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — Some people can go home again. A very Corman is one of them.

Corman is a writer. With two novels — "Oh, God!" and "Kramer vs. Kramer" — behind him and nothing new in the typewriter, Corman suddenly felt a need to go home, to go back to the New York City Bronx area where he had grown up. He wanted to look again on the scenes of days past.

"It was cold and windy, the day I went back," Corman says. "I wandered around a bit and then I went to a park. I stood there, looking and thinking, and it came to me that I used to play in that park when I was a boy — and it didn't seem all that long ago."

"Yet, it was all gone. I felt very sad. Once I was a kid playing in the grass and now I'm standing in the same park and I'm in my 40s. Words started to come to me, words that appear in my new novel and pretty well sum it up."

"They were, 'It all goes too fast. It was the marbles season — and now I'm a middle-aged man.' I love that line. It sums up the passing of time. But it also was the starting point for a new book."

The book is "The Old Neighborhood." It's the story of a man's life, the man is called Steve Robbins but Corman says there's a lot of himself in the character. It opens in 1944 when Steve is 10 and winds through the years as Steve strives for success, finds it and then rejects it.

"Sure it's about a life," the 45-year-old Corman says, "but it also tries to put forth and explain the old-time values I grew up with, the dreams I, and others, had."

In those days, the late 1930s and the 1940s, Corman says, "the idea was to get out and make it. The Depression is over, so do it, make your mark on society! Well, a lot of people did make it — like Steve in my book — but I'm not so sure that life is all that much better for them."

"That's because we've lost so much. We used to live in a time when there were more varied people around us. Now we seem to group ourselves in what is almost income-defined neighborhoods. In the old high schools you had all classes of kids — rich, poor and in-between. Now that's no longer true in many cases, the schools seem to be in areas where the people seem to be determined by income. We've lost the old mixture of people, and that to me is sad."

"You used to be more visible in the old days. You knew the people who supplied you with goods and services and they knew you. There was a community feeling."

Corman, who lives on Long Island with his wife and their two sons, adds that while success has made some people "much more rigid than when they were growing up" it hasn't affected him all that much.

Seminar marks anniversary of famed book's publication

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Fifty years ago, a dozen young men at Vanderbilt University published a book about the South, a place they saw as spiritual and aesthetic in the thrust of post-World War I industrialism.

The three surviving members of the group known as The Agrarians — Robert Penn Warren, Andrew Lytle and Lyle Lanier — returned to Vanderbilt recently for an anniversary seminar.

"I'm amazed that the document has held up over the years," Lanier said, looking out over the packed lecture hall. "No one considered themselves a prophet. But, we turned out to be far better prophets than we knew."

After the work, "I'll Take My Stand," was published in 1930, it remained out of print until 1958.

"It occurred to me in the spring of '79 that this year would be the 50th anniversary of this very famous book," Walter Sullivan, a professor of English at Vanderbilt, said.

Sullivan sought the help of William C. Havard, a professor of political science, and together they obtained money from the National Endowment for the Humanities, the university's chancellor, Alexander Heard, and the university, for the symposium. About 10 scholars in Southern literature, history, political science and sociology participated.

"We were awfully lucky because we got the people we wanted," Sullivan said. "There is no chance of getting these three men together again."

At the center of the movement a half-century ago was a group of four poets at Vanderbilt called the Fugitives. The four men, Warren, Allen Tate, John Crowe Ransom and Donald Davidson, looked to the South as a symbol of a life untainted by the ugliness of industrialization.

They saw their region as a stronghold against mechanization — a place where people held on to the agrarian way of life.

The South may have seemed backward to Northern industrialists, but to the young Fugitive poets it represented a life of leisure, tradition, aestheticism and religion.

"In its very backwardness, the South had clung to some secret which embodied, it seemed, the elements out of which its own reconstruction — and possibly even the reconstruction of America — might be achieved," Davidson wrote then.

The Fugitives were soon joined by eight young men with similar ideas, and they became known as the Agrarians.

Two were novelists, Stark Young and Lytle; one was a poet, John Gould Fletcher; another was a professor of English, John Donald Wade, and two were historians, Frank Owsley and Herman Nixon.

340 N. Midland Dr. Daily 9:30-9:30 Sun. 10-5 until Christmas

Dr. William D. Kelley, founder of the International Health Institute in Dallas, prescribed treatment for actor Steve McQueen that involved Laetrile, injections of animal cells, coffee enemas, rubdowns with castor oil, a positive mental attitude and a vegetarian diet. Kelley's dental license has been suspended and his cancer treatment program was denounced by the American Cancer Society. (AP Laserphoto)

'Medical community sabotaged'

DALLAS — "The medical community has been sabotaged by agrusiness and the oil companies. Farmers started using (inorganic) nitrogen fertilizers and that killed off a whole group of bacteria in the soil," he said. "We know for a fact that there are nine nutrients missing from corn today that it had in 1940."

Kelley's treatment method depends on what he said is a thorough, computerized analysis of each individual's metabolism—the rate at which a person's body burns energy—and fashioning a diet tailored to that metabolism.

The reason people get sick, said Kelley, is that their systems are so weakened by lifelong, unsuspected malnutrition they can't fight off degenerative diseases, such as cancer.

"The bodies we're putting in front of doctors are defective. They're malnourished," he said. "In three to five years, a doctor who doesn't use the Kelley program won't be able to carry on with his arts and sciences."

Kelley said he acted only as a consultant for McQueen's treatment in Mexico. Although he was in the operating room during McQueen's surgery, he says he no longer treats any patients directly, to avoid running afoul of the law.

McQueen's death was not due to cancer and, in fact, the actor's response to the Kelley program constituted a resounding success, Kelley said.

"He died from an embolism, a blood clot, that reached his heart. The tumors (three in his abdominal cavity and one on his neck) had stopped growing five weeks ago," said Kelley. "He was doing OK. The tumors were dead."

The Mexican surgeon who performed the operation, Dr. Cesar Santos, disagreed with that prognosis.

"Without the operation he might have lived for two or three more months," the doctor said. "Unfortunately, the disease was too advanced in this case."

"He had cancer all the way to his diaphragm and cancer from the right lung was pushing into the left lung," he added.

But Kelley, asked point-blank if he can cure cancer, answers equally directly. "We've got the answer."

One who believes him is Mary Anne Evans who formed the Kelley treatment in the summer of 1978 after doctors at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York told her she had hystiocytic lymphoma, a form of cancer that attacks the body's circulatory system and is usually fatal.

"I do. The doctors call it remission. The tumor is gone."

The danger, according to the medical establishment, is that false hope could persuade cancer patients to reject them for unorthodox practices.

"I don't know anything about Mr. McQueen's case," said DeBakey, "but public, prominent and popular figures do bear a special responsibility to society. If they create in the public mind the belief that there are new, efficacious cancer cures available in Mexico but not in our best cancer institutes here, that's not particularly true. Every man is allowed to resort to quackery but a responsible man should not publicize it."

DeBakey's remarks were in a "Parade" magazine article written before McQueen's death.

Mrs. Evans said she—like McQueen—turned to Kelley only when standard treatment failed.

"The doctors said to me that if I took chemotherapy I might not live to the second treatment. They really didn't offer me any more than a year and they thought that was telling me a lot," she said.

Ms. Achterberg, a psychologist who works with the terminally ill, said such a pronouncement is the emotional equivalent of a death sentence.

"It's like a voodoo curse, shaking the stick at them and saying, 'You have six months to live.' That's the same as a death sentence and when that's pronounced their right as human beings is to seek whatever treatment they can find," she said.

"I'm convinced that people have the ethical and moral right to seek out alternative forms of treatment once they have been given a death sentence."

"I don't know anything about Kelley's program but I know that unorthodox treatments work and people do get well from them. I know a lot of things cure people and I'm a firm believer in the 'belief system.' If they (patients) believe that zucchini is going to cure them, sometimes it does."

Even a coffee enema, she said, might have a legitimate place in cancer treatment.

"That's cleansing, that's detoxifying. Nobody's ever done a study of coffee enemas, or any of these unorthodox methods, and I think they should be done. But it won't be done because nobody's going to fund it. It's against the vested interests of the, quote, 'war on cancer' to even look at that kind of treatment."

British diplomat to speak at San Antonio university

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Lord Harlech, a British diplomat and expert on international affairs, will speak on "The Status of Friendship: The U.S. and Europe" next Thursday at Trinity University.

Harlech, the former Sir David Ormsby Gore, scheduled the lecture for 8 p.m. Thursday at the university's Laurie Auditorium.

A former British Ambassador to the United States from 1961-65, Harlech was a member for 11 years of the House of Commons and for five years of the British Conservative Government.

As minister of Britain's foreign relations from 1957-60, he delivered the "Grand Design" speech, advocating the bringing together of all European organizations. In 1966 he published a book entitled "Must the West Decline?", an assessment of the condition of Western civilization in the 20th Century.

He currently serves as company chairman of Harlech Television STD, and president of the British Board of Film Censors and chairman of the Kennedy Memorial Trust in the United Kingdom.

Eager politicians eyeing Rep. Spellman's position

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

CHEVERLY, Md. (AP) — While physicians and family keep watch inside the hospital where Rep. Gladys Noon Spellman lies hooked to tubes and machines, another vigil goes on outside, kept by eager politicians eyeing her seat.

The 62-year-old Democrat is in serious but stable condition in the coronary care unit at Prince Georges General Hospital. Sources say she hasn't spoken since Oct. 31 when she suffered cardiac arrest at a Laurel shopping center while campaigning for a fourth term.

"She is semi-conscious," said hospital spokesman Fred Cyran.

"At no time is she fully conscious," said Art Jaeger, her press aide.

Four days after her heart seizure, as she lay unconscious and in critical condition, voters in Maryland's 5th District gave her a 166,035-vote to 25,693-vote victory over Republican challenger Kevin Igoe.

But her political future is as uncertain as her medical outlook.

The new Congress will be sworn in Jan. 5. Even if she is unable to be present, Mrs. Spellman need not lose her seat; Stanley Brand, general counsel to the House clerk, said there is precedent for either administering the oath outside the Capitol or waiting until an ill member returns to the Hill.

But any representative can introduce a resolution declaring Mrs. Spellman's seat vacant. If such a resolution were adopted, Gov. Harry Hughes, a Democrat, would have to call a special election.

Allan Levey, state Republican chairman, already has called for Mrs. Spellman's resignation and a special election because of the prospect of a long convalescence.

"I'm sure she wouldn't want to serve if she couldn't give 100 percent," said Levey, a dentist in Prince Georges County.

This produced angry reaction from Democrats, who are taking the position, publicly at least, that since Mrs. Spellman has given the county 18 years of service, she should be given time to recover.

"I think the speculation and machinations are highly premature," said Steny Hoyer, former president of the Maryland Senate. "If she were in any other business, this wouldn't be happening."

Behind the scenes, however, Democrats are jockeying for position at the starting gate in case Mrs. Spellman, the county's most popular Democrat, is unable to return to Congress.

The names of state legislators, and past and present county officeholders, are rolling off the tongues of speculators as well as their own.

In the meantime, Mrs. Spellman's staff is continuing her work. Jaeger said that friends such as Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., are helping out by reminding colleagues of her positions on various issues.

The staff, however, recently got overzealous in its use of an accepted House practice, pairing the votes of absent House members who oppose each other. The practice has no effect on the outcome of a question, since the votes cancel each other out, but it allows the absent members to appear in the record.

Finally the House sergeant at arms asked Mrs. Spellman's staff to stop pairing her vote because of the nature of her absence.

Whether Mrs. Spellman is aware of her landslide victory is uncertain. The fact has been whispered in her ear continually by Rube, her husband; Dorothy, her sister, and Edna McLellan, her administrative assistant and longtime friend.

"She seems to respond in a positive way with her eyes," said a source close to the Spellmans, who asked to be quoted anonymously.

But Mrs. McLellan said she wasn't sure if Mrs. Spellman knows she won or if she even remembers her.

"Of course, she's shown signs, but I couldn't tell if she was recognizing Edna McLellan," the aide said.

Mystery mist bringing unpleasantness to beach

By MATT BOKOR
Associated Press Writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Hungry sharks and stinging jellyfish have been among the uninvited guests at the self-proclaimed "World's Most Famous Beach" in years past.

Last week, the glittering beach had another unwanted visitor that left beachgoers coughing, sneezing and rubbing their eyes. It was diagnosed as a toxic mist from red tide, a micro-organism that can cause paralytic poisoning in people who eat contaminated seafood.

The mist seemed to dissipate under heavy rains late in the week, but officials said they couldn't be sure whether its cause still lurked in the ocean waters off Daytona Beach.

"As spontaneously as it took effect, it's going to have to reduce itself by nature. I don't know any other way to state it," said Frank Landrove, Volusia County's environmental health director. "It's a waiting situation."

Hundreds of beachgoers complained of itching throats, irritated eyes and tingling noses because of the pesky mist, which state officials say formed when tides bearing the red tide organism broke up near shore.

Winds picked up the tiny toxins from the water and dispersed them into the air. Some lifeguards wore surgical masks. Then, on Wednesday, 35 Volusia lifeguards left their beach-side towers.

"I've never heard of anything like it," said a coughing Tom Renick, chief lifeguard, who has worked on the beach since 1968.

In Ormond Beach, officials even barricaded streetside entrances to the ocean for several hours.

What the problem meant to this city's tourist-based economy during the Thanksgiving holiday was uncertain because it was coupled with rainy, gloomy weather.

Tourism officials here are traditionally slow to admit that such phenomena are scaring tourists. One hotel manager reported a few tourists canceled reservations, but the owner of several other area hotels said he didn't know of any dent in business as a result of the national publicity.

Meanwhile, frightening theories ranging from the plausible — that the mist arose from surplus military chemical weapons dumped in the Atlantic Ocean — to the improbable — that German U-boats sunk off the coast in the 1940s carried poison gas canisters that only recently broke up.

The mist began appearing Nov. 16, but wasn't identified for days. The water lacked the crimson coloring associated with the red tide organism, and there weren't any wide-spread fishkills.

Red tide is common along Florida's southwest Gulf Coast during the summer, but it's rare on the east coast. Landrove said he had not heard of an outbreak of the toxic algae in his 19 years with Volusia County government.

Indeed, some federal officials haven't accepted the state Department of Natural Resources' red tide explanation, which prompted the state to impose a shellfishing ban along the coast in five northeastern Florida counties.

"It certainly doesn't sound like red tide. I don't know what it is, but I think it needs more study," said Chuck Moore, of the Environmental Protection Agency in Atlanta.

While health officials could offer Daytona Beach's business community little consolation, they did say everyone should be relieved that the mist was only nature's handiwork.

"In my opinion, it could have been a lot worse," Landrove said. "And by worse, I mean man-made. Man hasn't got the sense that nature does... when man provides irritation to man, he kills him."

As always, a discerning few will appreciate the finest.

Rusk, Texas, farmer/rancher Hulen Wilcox has become quite a tourist attraction in this East Texas community, where for about a week each fall he keeps up a steady stream of syrup and chatter. (AP Laser-photo)

Rusk man 'grows' his syrup into local tourist attraction

By RON HUTCHESON
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

RUSK, Texas (AP) — There are only two things Hulen Wilcox likes better than his sugar cane syrup.

"I like watermelon best. Watermelon is No. 1," he said. "Then ice cream, then syrup."

Although he didn't rank talking, it has to be right up near the top of the list.

With his syrup and his mouth, Hulen Wilcox has become perhaps the biggest tourist attraction in this East Texas town of about 4,100.

His season is short — it starts on Nov. 15 and is usually over in about a week — but it is as much a part of fall here as turning leaves and Thanksgiving dinner.

Many of the people who make the annual trip to Wilcox's syrup mill come as much for the chatter as for the syrup. Wilcox never lets them down.

While he works over the steaming trough of boiling cane juice, Wilcox carries on an almost steady stream of conversation, sometimes to no one in particular.

"My great-granddaddy died when he was 63," he said, "my granddaddy died when he was 63, and my daddy died when he was 63. I thought maybe I'd go too, seeing how it was going that way, but I missed it. I'm 71."

Wilcox has been making sugar cane syrup since he was 5. His latest mill, located about seven miles south of Rusk on FM 725, was built in 1957. The boiling trough, where heat turns pure cane juice into a thick, light brown syrup, is 18 feet long and about 3 feet wide.

"We've tried different sizes, but this is the best," Wilcox said proudly. "We think we've got ours perfect."

The process for making cane syrup is simple. Wilcox crushes the cane stalks, strains and collects the juice, and boils it until it thickens into syrup.

The boiling syrup steams like an outdoor spa and smells something like the inside of a brewery.

Wilcox sells the syrup in No. 5 cans for $5 each. Don't bother to ask how much the cans hold.

"If I said it was a half gallon, somebody would measure it, come up short and be after me," Wilcox said. "I put it in a No. 5 can. Whatever they can figure out a No. 5 can holds, that's up to them."

Wilcox got about 650 gallons of syrup from his three acres of sugar cane this year, not nearly enough to accommodate the crowds that gathered to watch him work and buy his product.

"Lord, they're coming from everywhere," he said. "We had 300 people out here one Saturday. You should have seen it. The hill was covered up. They looked like a bunch of blackbirds up there."

"It used to be that we'd have a little left. This year, I'm selling what I had planned to eat myself. I'm going to have to grow a lot more cane. That's the only answer to it."

Since most of the visitors don't know much about sugar cane, Wilcox tries to enlighten them. The way he tells it, he doesn't grow cane, he grows syrup.

"Sandy land is what you want for syrup," he said. "And that's what I've got — good, sandy land. We wouldn't trade it for the president."

Wilcox also has a few ideas about what people should write when they write about his mill.

"Let me recite you something," he said. "Boats sail on the rivers Ships sail on the seas
But the clouds that sail across the sky Are prettier than these."

"That's a good one, ain't it? Not many know that, but that's a good deal. If you'll drop that in there somewhere, that'll be fine. I never have quoted that for anyone else."

Although Wilcox said his syrup goes with just about anything, he recommends sausage and biscuits.

Wilcox said he never gets tired of answering questions, even stupid ones.

"I enjoy it," he said. "Of course, I might answer each one a little different."

He said his syrup-making is more of a tradition than a livelihood. His cane field is part of a 95-acre farm and ranch.

"We got gas wells. We got a living, but we're still going to do this. A lot of people think it's like pulling a watermelon — you just walk out and do it. But it's hard work. I do it because I enjoy it."

The mention of watermelon prompted some more advice about the story.

"Don't forget that watermelon," Wilcox said as he labored over the boiling syrup. "I'd quit cooking syrup and go eat a watermelon if you had one around."

Smokeout celebrated with free marijuana

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — On the day billed across the nation as the Great American Smokeout, 100 persons in this university city — considered by some residents to be a world apart from most places — puffed away on free marijuana.

An obscure story in the campus newspaper of the University of California advertised a meeting Thursday by a Libertarian group who wanted to meet people who like to smoke pot. The story promised a half pound of grass.

After 40 people came to the meeting, the group moved outdoors to People's Park and 80 others joined them. Soon sweet-smelling smoke clouded the group, crowded onto a wooden platform.

A man who identified himself as Reid Judd, a student, said he organized the event after a Humboldt County marijuana farmer he interviewed for a magazine article gave him a generous helping of the crop. He said he gave away the marijuana to publicize the need for reform of marijuana laws.

Gospel of Darwin gains attention

By B.D. COLEN
Newsday

For the greater part of this century, school children living outside fundamentalist Christian areas of the country have been taught a capsulized version of Darwinian evolution:

All living things descended from a single, single-celled ancestor, and the fittest species and the fittest within each species survived. Thus, the belief that man descended from monkeys rather than from Adam.

What might be termed the Gospel of Darwin has gained much recent attention, however, following President-elect Ronald Reagan's statement during the campaign that Darwin's theory was being challenged by respected scientists — to say nothing of Reagan, who allowed as how he has never been all that sure Darwin was right.

Well, Reagan may not be sure, but the scientific community is. While so-called creationists, literal interpreters of the Bible, are challenging the validity of Charles Darwin's "Origin of the Species," the scientific community is not. There are, however, several hot debates within the precincts of science about precisely how Darwin's theory works.

The main debate involves the question of how, and how rapidly, one species evolves from another. Is change a gradual, steady process, or does it occur in quick, choppy, bursts?

Niles Eldridge, curator of the department of invertebrates at the American Museum of Natural History, is one of the proponents of the choppy burst, or "punctuated equilibrium" theory of evolution.

"This is all a question of scale," says Eldridge. Pointing out that, as paleontologists, he and his colleagues are studying the evolution and development of species with 5 to 10-million-year histories, he said, "When we say changes are abrupt, we may mean up to 50,000 years." And when studying change over time spans of 380 million years, "we have a hard time telling time in increments smaller than 1 million years."

According to Eldridge and other scientists challenging the more traditional "gradualist" view of Darwin, "there is a tendency to extrapolate what we think we understand from well thought out, well planned experiments in the genetics laboratory, where you can see (genetic) changes occurring in fruit flies in just a couple of months."

But Eldridge and others in the "punctuated equilibrium" school note that there is virtually nothing in the fossil record to support the concept of gradual change and evolution from one species to another. "What we would expect as patterns of change do not arise as a nice smooth, gradual continuum," says Eldridge.

As an example, Eldridge spoke of a family of clams in which "there is a slight trend, or pattern of change, but then all of a sudden there's a new species, and the pattern of change in the older species is in an opposite direction from the new species."

Thomas J.M. Schopf, professor of geology and evolutionary biology at the University of Chicago, says that gradualists like himself don't "object to the idea that species evolve very rapidly. The other side of the coin is that there are species that don't change for millions and millions of years, which is called stasis."

While a "punctuated equilibriumist" would say "there is no change for up to tens of millions of years, a gradualist would say there is continual change," says Schopf, "that species are continually forming through time. Then the question becomes, to what extent you do or don't see these changes."

Schopf and other "gradualists" argue that the reason the fossil record does not appear to record gradual changes is that "with fossilization, you end up with only a small portion of the (body structure) of a species." The fossils that fill museum cases are missing much vital information about the soft tissue, biochemical mechanisms and genetic structure of species, says Schopf, and those missing links might show that change and evolution is "continuously going on. Species, once changed, don't call a halt and say, 'Let's not change for 10 million years.'"

There is also, says Schopf, "a second aspect to this: How do you get different types or forms" of life? "The argument there runs on the one hand that the same ordinary processes that occur in day-to-day life" are sufficient to cause selective development and change. That argument would be that "variation holds the potential for major change, while the other side holds that some major genetic change is needed" to produce a new species, says Schopf.

Darwin's basic theory, that the fittest survive through natural selection, is often misinterpreted because of its simplicity, says Schopf. "If you define the fittest as those that survive, then it's a tautology. Is everything getting fitter and fitter through time? That isn't possible. Things survive and therefore they're called fit." What is too often forgotten is non-scientific discussion, acknowledged Schopf, is man's ability to alter his environment and that of other species, which may or may not make man the "fittest."

But while Schopf and Eldridge disagree on how to interpret Darwin's theory, they find their various supporters do not disagree on its basic validity.

"Right now, there's a tremendous amount of debate about how the theory really works," says Eldridge. "Some of our fundamentally held beliefs about how it worked are being challenged, and the creationists are jumping on this."

If the creationists "believe a certain way they'll find reasons to believe it," says Schopf. "It's like people who believe the earth is flat. If they believe in it, they'll find reasons to believe in it." (Distributed by the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service)

Two types of interferon may be better than one

NEW YORK (AP) — Some types of interferon seem to boost the potency of other types of this natural virus-fighting substance, scientists have found. The discovery adds insight to the search for interferon treatments for virus-caused diseases and cancer.

Scientists at the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston found that combinations of interferons combatted mouse tumors more effectively than the sum of the tumor-fighting powers of each interferon alone.

The finding follows a similar study at the university last year showing that interferons also boost each other's power to fight viruses.

While the conclusions are based on animal and cell-culture experiments and do not apply directly to humans, "these results hold the promise that combined interferon therapy in humans might increase the efficacy of the interferon therapy and might lower the required interferon dosage levels," the scientists said.

W. Robert Fleischmann Jr., Kathryn M. Kleyn and Samuel Baron published their report in the latest Journal of the National Cancer Institute.

Interferon is a natural substance discovered 23 years ago which helps protect the body against viruses. Because it can shrink some animal tumors, it is also under study as a possible cancer treatment. It is expensive to manufacture and difficult to purify, and results against human cancer have often been disappointing.

The Texas scientists found that, in mice, a relatively new and unstudied type of interferon known as "immune" interferon seemed to boost the anti-tumor potency of a more conventional type, called "virus-induced" interferon.

Tumors in animals treated with the virus-induced interferon alone grew more slowly than in untreated animals. But the delay in growth was nearly doubled when the two interferons were combined, despite the fact that the immune interferon alone had virtually no effect on the tumors.

All but one of the 76 mice eventually died from the transplanted leukemia which was used in the experiment, the scientists said. But Fleischmann said in a telephone interview that against other mouse cancers less resistant to interferon, the combined treatment has sometimes achieved cures.

"We showed you could add something which didn't have any effect to something which had a modest effect and get a much greater effect," he said.

This shows that "whatever the results of the clinical interferon trials so far, we may not have used the best methods for those trials although we used the best methods available at the time. The best may be yet to come in interferon's role in therapy," Fleischmann said.

Baron, Howard Johnson and Jerzy Georjades of the Medical Branch plan to work with Jordan Guterman of the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston to see whether the human form of immune interferon can boost the power of other human interferons in cancer patients.

The scientists have been able to manufacture and purify the immune interferon, but are still working to get it to remain stable in frozen storage.

Most interferon trials with patients so far — including the much-publicized American Cancer Society trial which Guterman heads — have used human "leukocyte" interferon.

Huge reservoir of coal lies untapped in seams below Oklahoma's surface

NORMAN — About 90 percent of Oklahoma's seven billion tons of coal reserves lies untapped in thin seams 100 or more feet beneath the earth's surface because the cost of digging the fuel out is too high.

But a University of Oklahoma chemist, supported with a $111,000 grant from the U.S. Office of Surface Mining, is working to find an economical means of drawing the coal from the ground with the aid of chemical solvents.

The research of Dr. Arnulf Hagen, OU associate professor of chemistry, could enable energy producers to mine the Oklahoma coal as a premium fuel that is low in sulfur and ash content and environmentally safe.

By using fluorinated solvents to break the coal into small particles, miners could pump the resulting slurry to the surface. "Preliminary results indicated a high probability exists for the development of a commercially important process," he said.

Hagen's two-year project is designed to explore the suitability of fluorinated inorganic materials as solvents for mining thin-seamed, heavily overburdened coal; to design a solvent "system" that will produce a premium boiler fuel with low sulfur and ash content; and to evaluate the environmental and economic consequences of each potential solvent's use.

Heat and pressure beneath the surface will be considered in selecting an appropriate solvent. Early tests pointed to several solvents that show promise for use at temperatures and pressures that may reach 300 degrees Fahrenheit and 5,000 pounds per square inch.

Upcoming studies will center on "hydrogen compounds and their fluorinated analogs," Hagen said. The fluorinated compounds are protonic and "very reactive at atmospheric pressure and serve as a model for the anticipated reactions of the hydrogen compounds" beneath the surface.

Coal-mining conditions can be created in laboratories at OU, allowing Hagen and assistants to study how coal reacts when exposed to various inorganic solvents. "In this laboratory, we can duplicate any anticipated conditions of pressure and temperature that would be suitable for mining operation," he said.

The solvent that eventually will be chosen for mining operations will have two other characteristics that energy producers may find valuable.

Solvents that are recovered easily from the coal slurry are preferred, because the solvent's reusability will cut mining costs dramatically. Also, the coal will be more acceptable environmentally because of its reduced sulfur content.

Hagen is testing for solvents that work well in water, because water will be present in mining areas. An aqueous solution makes recycling of the solvent easier, although the chemist also will experiment with pure solvents to produce comparative data.

Oklahoma coal generally is high in sulfur content, but some solvents being tested will reduce sulfur content while breaking up the coal and forming the slurry. Ash content also could be reduced, allowing producers to ship more energy per train carload and reduce waste.

The most acceptable solvent will not form other environmentally hazardous materials in place of the sulfur.

Hagen, who has studied high pressure reactions of inorganic materials throughout his research career, calls the current project a natural extension of his work into "practical applications." He previously has conducted research for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the National Science Foundation and the Petroleum Research Fund.

When the current project is completed, Hagen plans to propose a field test of a suitable solvent at a location in Oklahoma. The test would be done in cooperation with OU's School of Petroleum and Geological Engineering, which would lend to the project its expertise in petroleum processing — technology that is applicable to coal recovery.

The coal research project is sponsored at OU by the Oklahoma Mining and Mineral Resources Research Institute. Initial funding for the current project was provided by OU's Energy Resources Center, which supported preliminary experiments to establish the feasibility of the project.

Fort Worth man named

DALLAS — Ray J. Dryden of Fort Worth, manager of press and community relations for Champlin Petroleum Co., has been named chairman of the Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association's Public Relations Committee for 1981.

Dryden was chosen to head the industry group by other members of the committee during the association's recent 61st Annual Meeting in Houston. He has been a member of the committee eight years and has been with Champlin 25 years.

Dryden is a member of the Public Relations Society of America, as well as the North Texas Chapter of PRSA; the Fort Worth Press Club, and the Association of Petroleum Writers.

The committee presently is made up of public relations and public affairs executives representing 18 of the larger energy companies having extensive operations in Texas.

The committee enables the association to bring professional expertise to bear on specific communication problems for the benefit of all involved in Texas oil and gas operations.

Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association is a general, multipurpose trade association representing all segments of the Texas oil and gas industry.

Bagge says Congress must consider changes in air act

By MAX B. SKELTON
AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Carl E. Bagge says the entire nation should take part in the 1981 Clean Air Act debate.

Bagge, president of the National Coal Association, says the fact authorization for appropriations needed by the Environmental Protection Agency expires next Sept. 30 will force the new Congress to review and consider amendments to the Act.

"The focus of the debate will be in Congress, but the basic issues have nationwide implications and should be discussed nationwide," he said.

"In fact, the impacts of the Clean Air Act are among the most far-reaching of all the statutes ever added to the law books. The Act affects not only air quality but jobs, consumer prices, our economy, and our national security as the result of over-dependence on imported oil."

A lot is heard these days about "quality of life," he said, but there also should be concern about the "quality of debate" on such national issues.

Bagge said coal's proposals to be submitted to Congress are being developed but they will not attempt to "gut" well-accepted Clean Air Act objectives.

"They will be focused instead on adjustments to deal with requirements that are unnecessary, not justified by scientific data, or not justified when considered in light of the overall national and public interest after rationally balancing competing goals," he said.

He emphasized two points: "First, the objective of protecting public health cannot be questioned."

"Second, other non-health related environmental objectives must not be shortchanged as the nation seeks the best balance among our competing environmental, economic, energy and national security objectives."

He said acceptance of the goals and objectives of the Act does not mean there are no problems with any of its provisions or with the manner in which it is being implemented.

"The changes which we believe are needed would not take us further in the direction of the amendments of 1977, which added unnecessary or duplicative requirements and injected the federal government still further into implementation of the Act," he said.

"That has frustrated the original goal of state implementation. The result has been a regulatory morass."

Bagge said the nation will have in 1981 the opportunity to make changes that will preserve the Act's environmental goals "without continuing to jeopardize economic growth or energy and national security while reducing pervasive federal involvement at all levels."

Bagge said four basic themes run through the detailed adjustments the coal industry probably will be seeking next year and which he believes will be shared by many others both within and outside the industrial sector.

First, he said, the federal government must establish more credible, defensible standards to protect public health, the so-called "primary standards."

And, he added, each individual state would have the principal responsibility for making the important judgments involved in standards relating to the public welfare, the so-called "secondary standards."

"Third, more realistic and reasonable deadlines and schedules must be established for EPA as well as industry, to avoid the charade of schedules which are more honored in the breach than in the observance, and which have led to de facto implementation of the Act by the federal courts, not by EPA or the states," he said.

"Fourth, the harsh reality there are unavoidable conflicts between environmental goals and economic and energy objectives must be recognized and carefully designed trade-offs must be forged."

Bagge said the primary standards designed to protect public health need to be sharply distinguished from the secondary standards intended to protect various non-health related objectives, including aesthetic values.

"These non-health matters figure importantly among the goals and objectives of the Clean Air Act, but they are secondary, they necessarily compete with other equally legitimate goals, not incorporated in the Act, and their relative importance is likely to differ from one region to another," he said.

Graduate center slates two oil-related courses

The Permian Basin Graduate Center, 205 W. Illinois St., Midland, will offer "Land Support Personnel — Phase I" and "Delta Systems in Petroleum Exploration" as upcoming courses at the center.

Land Support is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Dec. 8-9, with Lewis G. Mosburg Jr. as the instructor.

It is designed for title clerks, division order personnel, rental clerks, land clerks, contract personnel, para-legals and other persons dealing with the administration of land department activities.

Mosburg is engaged in the practice of law and is a frequent lecturer and writer in the fields of oil and gas law.

Waterflood gets RRC OK

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission has approved a secondary recovery waterflood project, which is expected to boost ultimate production from a West Texas field by nearly 2.5 million barrels of oil.

The RRC approved the project sought by Sun Oil Co. and an accompanying proposal for unit operation for the Lawson (San Andres) Field in Ector County.

"The proposed secondary recovery waterflood project is expected to recover an additional 2,498,100 barrels of oil which otherwise would never be produced," RRC Technical Hearings Director Billy D. Thomas told the commission.

The additional oil will be produced in the new North Lawson Unit, which contains 1,560 acres of land and 31 producing wells. Average daily yield of the wells is 5.8 barrels per day, with more than 2.66 million barrels of oil already recovered from the unit.

The reservoir is 88 percent depleted, Thomas said.

Sun Oil plans to drill 40 new water injection wells in the unit.

be the instructors. Emphasis will be on the new work which has been done during the last 10 years on oil and gas occurrence in delta systems.

Fee for the course is $275.

API slates Sizer talk

The Permian Basin Chapter of the American Petroleum Institute will hold its December meeting Wednesday at Ranchland Hill Country Club in Midland.

Phillip S. Sizer, senior vice president and technical director of Otis Engineering Corp., will be the speaker. His topic will be "The Effects of Government Regulations on the Oil Industry."

The meeting will begin with a social hour at 5:30 p.m.

Sizer joined Otis in 1948, was chief engineer from 1962 to 1970, was elected an officer in 1970, and was named to the board of directors in 1974. He is a graduate of Southern Methodist University.

Sizer is a member of the SPPE and SCCA Committees of ANSI/ASME SPPE-1. He is a past president of the American Wellhead Equipment Manufacturers, and is a member of the Society of Petroleum Engineers and Nomads.

E. H. Blackaller

Blackaller D&S speaker

E. H. Blackaller will be the speaker for the annual officer installation meeting of the Desk & Derrick Club of Midland Dec. 2 at Ranchland Hill Country Club.

The event will get underway with a social hour at 6:30 p.m. Blackaller will speak on "The New Offshore Economics."

He is a graduate of Texas A&M University with a B.S. degree in Petroleum Engineering.

Upon graduation, he spent 12½ years with a major oil company, with assignments in various areas of the Permian Basin and Texas Panhandle.

The next 10 years were spent in Midland as a consulting engineer and independent oil operator. In February, 1968, Blackaller became a member of the board of directors of The Midland National Bank and head of the bank's Oil and Gas Division, where he currently is senior vice president.

Texaco, Inc. hikes budget

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. — John K. McKinley, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Texaco, Inc., declared that the company is budgeting worldwide capital and exploratory expenditures at $3½ to $4 billion for 1981.

McKinley also stated that, for the five-year period 1981 through 1985, Texaco is now anticipating capital and exploratory budgets in the range of $20 billion.

Because of the major emphasis being given to exploration and production, it is anticipated that 58 percent of the 1981 expenditures will be allocated "to these all-important functions." About 20 percent is earmarked for refining, four percent for chemicals, eight percent for marketing, and 10 percent for other purposes.

All of these figures include Texaco's equity in such expenditures by non-subsidiary companies.

"The expenditure pace will be accelerated," McKinley stated, "reflecting recently initiated and expanded programs." He pointed out that it appears unlikely — because of construction delays and other factors — that all of the $3.1 billion budgeted for 1980 will be expended this year.

Engineers slat meeting

The Permian Basin Section of the National Association of Corrosion Engineers will meet at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Granada Club in Midland.

The speaker will be Bob Weeter of Dallas who is a chemical engineer with Mobil Exploration and Production Services, Inc.

He has more than 35 years experience in the corrosion field. His topic will be "Corrosion from Production to Sales."

TRG rigs up ultra-deep unit

OKLAHOMA CITY — TRG Drilling Corp., an Oklahoma City-based subsidiary of W. R. Grace & Co., unveiled the first ultra-deep drilling rig in its fleet at festivities at the company's building yard here.

The rig, a Gardner-Denver 3000E, was constructed at a cost of about $7.5 million, and is rated to drilling depths of 28,000 feet.

Operating under TRG's Mid-Continent Drilling division, the new unit, TRG's Rig No. 10, will operate first under contract to Mesa Petroleum Co., drilling for deep oil and gas reserves in the Anadarko Basin of western Okla.

Earlier this month, Grace announced planned 1981 expenditures of $100 million by TRG, including the purchase of 18 additional rigs, which will increase TRG's rig fleet to 104 units, ranging in depth class from 7,000 feet to 28,000 feet.

In addition to TRG, one of the largest onshore contract drilling operators in the country, Grace's Natural Resources Group operates 23 offshore workover rigs through its Booker Drilling Co. subsidiary, is a major independent producer of oil and natural gas, a supplier of oil field services, and mines coal in Colo., Ky., Va. and W. Va.

Christmas dance slated

The Permian Basin Landmen's Association will hold its Christmas dance Dec. 12 at Ranchland Hill Country Club.

The event will be from 7:30 p.m. to 1 a.m. Activities will include dancing, breakfast and open bar.

Association officials said they expect a large turnout and the event will be limited to an attendance of 350 persons. Reservations should be made by contacting Kelly M. Barnes, Adobe Oil & Gas Corp., 1100 Western United Life Building, Midland, 79701.

Frenzel gets nomination for AAPG vice president

Hugh N. Frenzel, chief geologist and vice president of Flag-Redfern Oil Co. in Midland, has received nomination for vice president of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists for the term 1981-1982. The other candidate is John L. Severson of Chicago.

Frenzel received B.A. and M.A. degrees in geology from the University of Wisconsin. He has been a resident of Midland the last 32 years.

His past professional experience includes six years with Standard Oil Co. of Texas as district geologist; two years with Ryan, Hayes and Burke Oil Operators; 20 years with Ralph Lowe and Ralph Lowe Estate, leaving as chief geologist; and the last six years with Flag-Redfern.

He has been a member of the West Texas Geological Society since 1948, serving as president in 1961. He received the WTGS Dedicated Service Award and honorary life membership.

He is a charter member of the Permian Basin Section of the Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists. He served as president of the section in 1956 and received its honorary life membership in 1961.

Frenzel served as president of the Southwest Section of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists in 1971-1972. He has been a member of the New Mexico Geological Society since 1947; member of SEPM since 1942, serving on the research committee; and Geological Society of Ameri-

Judge grants injunction against company chief

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge has granted the Securities and Exchange Commission a preliminary injunction against OKC Corp.'s chief officer and has demanded he present the court with a $5 million letter of credit.

District Judge Robert Hill also ordered the company's board of directors to appoint a "corporate committee" to oversee all transactions involving the sale, liquidation or transfer of the company's assets.

In its suit filed in mid-September, the SEC said Cloyce K. Box, chairman, president and chief executive officer of the Dallas-based company, received more than $5 million in kickbacks over the last seven years from various "friendly brokers."

The suit asks that Box be required to return the money to OKC and to resign from the company.

In the order Tuesday, Hill stipulated that to prove Box has the assets to satisfy any judgment against him, he must provide the letter of credit payable to OKC "in a form satisfactory to the SEC."

The corporate committee, made up of three outside OKC directors, will review OKC's liquidation proposal to insure compliance.

Hill ordered Box to cooperate with the committee in its study, providing it with any documents or information it requests.

OKC is liquidating all its assets in accordance with a plan approved by shareholders in May.

The SEC suit contends that in 1973, OKC began selling refined petroleum products to Box's friends and business associates who received preferential prices and credit through OKC funds.

Fields-Newton has large selection of forklifts

The Komatsu electric forklift trucks are engineered for comfort, safety, ruggedness, ease of service and economy. At Fields-Newton International at 708 N. Lamesa Hwy. in Stanton, you can find a large selection of Komatsu forklifts for your every moving need.

The operator's compartment on the Komatsu is designed for safety as well as comfort, which is an economic asset to the employer. The overhead guard has longitudinal grill which gives good visibility of the forks and attachments for high stacking operations. The seat is altogether adjustable, and is built for comfort throughout a total work shift.

The controls positioned for natural arm movement, are marked with universal symbols. The floor is spacious and uncluttered, with a pendant-type brake pedal.

The Komatsu masts, which are available in a wide variety, are built for strength, stability and smooth operation.

The rollers are easily and quickly accessible without taking down the mast. They have a nested, wide-space design for maximum visibility and a frame free from stress.

Tilting stability is provided by dual tilt cylinders fitted with greasable bronze bushings.

The hydraulic system of the Komatsu is designed for higher performance and a longer working life.

A dual-voltage electrical system ensures versatility, too. The 36-volt battery is normally used, but the 48-volt is also available for increased travel speed or lifting power.

A one-piece drive axle housing assures part alignment.

Permian Basin Petroleum Briefs

Bart Groves, vice president — Exploration for Diamond Shamrock's Oil and Gas Unit, has announced the promotion of Thomace Brace, formerly area geologist, to district geologist in the Mid-Continent Division office in Amarillo.

Brace joined the company in 1975 as junior geologist in the Southern Rocky Mountain and Permian Basin areas. He was promoted in 1976 to geologist, to senior geologist in 1979 and to area geologist in March. He was graduated from the University of Houston with a B.S. degree in Geology.

DALLAS — Texas Oil & Gas Corp. has announced a transfer, two promotions and three additions to the company.

Gary L. Roeder, a drilling engineer, has been transferred to the North Louisiana District at Shreveport, La. He previously served as drilling engineer for the Gulf Coast District at Corpus Christi.

Texas Oil & Gas promoted John M. Hickman to district administrative manager for the North Louisiana District at Shreveport. He was an accountant in the company's Dallas office. He has been with Texas Oil & Gas since January 1978.

Thomas M. Hauptman was promoted to area landman for the Wyoming Area of the Denver District. He was a landman in the Denver District. He has been with the firm since June 1978.

Greg Swidensky joined Texas Oil & Gas as a landman in the North Louisiana District at Shreveport. He is a graduate of the University of Oklahoma with a bachelor's degree in Business Administration in Petroleum Land Management.

Texas Oil & Gas announced the addition of Stephen D. Meyers to its Gulf Coast District staff in Corpus Christi as a geologist. He previously was with ARCO Oil & Gas Co. in Denver, Colo. He earned his B.S. degree in Biology from Thomas More College at Fort Thomas, Ky., and his M.S. degree in Geology from the University of Cincinnati.

Daniel M. Rickards was added to Texas Oil & Gas's North Louisiana District office at Shreveport as a land draftsman.

He previously was with Turner, Collie and Braden, Inc., as a tax mapping production coordinator.

DALLAS — Dorchester Gas Corp. announced it has commenced a public offering of $50 million principal amount of 8 1/2 percent convertible subordinated debentures due Dec. 1, 2005.

The debentures, which are rated Baa by Moody's and BB by Standard and Poor's, are priced at par and are convertible at any time into Dorchester common stock at $70.50 per share.

The offering is being underwritten by a nationwide group of investment banking firms managed by Warburg Paribas Becker, Inc.

The debentures are redeemable by the company at 108.5 percent of principal amount prior to Dec. 1, 1981, and thereafter at prices declining annually to 100 percent on or after Dec. 1, 1995. The debentures also are subject to a mandatory sinking fund beginning Dec. 1, 1990, which will retire 75 percent of the issue prior to maturity.

HOUSTON — Blocker Drilling Co., a subsidiary of Blocker Energy Corp., announced an agreement with American Hunter Exploration, Ltd., and Blue Sky Oil and Gas, Inc., to supply two new 10,000-foot drilling rigs on one-year contracts in the Giddings area of Texas.

The rigs will be ready for service Dec. 15 and January 15. The addition of the rigs will bring Blocker's rig count in the Giddings area to eight and will increase the company's U.S. drilling fleet to 20 units.

FORT WORTH — Tommy B. Smith has been named chairman and chief executive officer of General Industrial Supply Corp. of Fort Worth. He succeeds Don B. Smith who joined Sun Distributors, Inc., in Chicago, Ill., as group vice president.

General Industrial has sales offices in Midland and Temple and a branch operation in Brownwood.

Tommy Smith was with American Electric Co. of St. Joseph, Mo., 28 years before joining General Industrial Supply.

DALLAS — Holly Corp. has elected Dean L. Elge as vice president of Exploration. He previously held the position of assistant exploration manager and district manager for West Texas and southeast New Mexico.

Prior to joining Holly, Elge held various positions in petroleum exploration including those in the Four Corners area, South Texas, West Texas, and New Mexico. He also held assignments in South America and North Africa. His previous associations include El Paso Natural Gas Co., Exxon Corp., Cities Service Co. and Texas Pacific Oil Co.

PITTSBURGH — Jesse P. Luton, deputy general counsel for Gulf Oil Corp.'s Law Department, has been elected general counsel for Gulf. He succeeds Merle E. Minks who will retire Dec. 31.

Luton, a native of Sulphur Springs, Tex., and a graduate of The University of Texas School of Law, joined Gulf in 1953 as a staff attorney in Fort Worth.

OKLAHOMA CITY — TRG Drilling Corp., an Oklahoma City-based subsidiary of W. R. Grace and Co., unveiled the first ultra-deep drilling rig in its fleet at festivities at the company's building yard in Oklahoma City last week.

The rig, a Gardner-Denver 3000E, was constructed at a cost of $7.5 million, and is rated to drilling depths of 28,000 feet.

Operating under TRG's Mid-Continent Drilling Division, the new unit, Rig No. 10, will operate first under contract to Mesa Petroleum Co. of Amarillo in the Anadarko Basin of western Oklahoma.

Earlier this month, Grace announced planned 1981 expenditures of $100 million by TRG, including the purchase of 18 additional rigs, increasing the fleet to 104 units, ranging in depth class from 7,000 feet to 28,000 feet.

DENVER, Colo. — Forest Oil Corp. announced its board of directors has declared an extraordinary dividend of 30 cents per share on the company's common stock. It is payable Dec. 22 to shareholders of record Dec. 9.

SHREVEPORT, La. — Sovereign Supply Co., an Anglo Energy Co., has announced the opening of oilfield supply stores in Smiley, Tex., and Elk City, Okla.

Frank Gabrysch has been named manager of the Smiley store, and Craig Windham is boss at the Elk City store.

HOUSTON — George FeceI has joined Chickasaw Distributors, Inc., as vice president — Sales. Prior to joining Chickasaw, FeceI owned his own consulting firm specializing in oilfield purchasing department operations. Previously, he was employed by Sun Oil Co. 42 years.

ARDMORE, Okla. — Noble Affiliates, Inc., announced its contract drilling subsidiary has ordered the construction of two new units, an offshore jackup drilling rig, at an estimated cost of $45 million, and an inland water posted barge at an estimated cost of $13.1 million.

The jackup rig, a Livingston Class 111-C, will be built for Noble Drilling Corp. by Livingston Shipbuilding Co. at its Orange, Tex., yard. Delivery is scheduled for December 1982. It will be capable of drilling to 25,000 feet in water as deep as 300 feet.

The posted barge will be capable of working in a maximum water depth of 21 feet and drilling to 25,000 feet. It will be used in south Louisiana and is scheduled for delivery in September 1981.

HOUSTON — Moran Energy Inc. announced that James S. Lowe has been named president of Moran Bros., the company's contract drilling division.

Lowe was with Shell Oil Co. 21 years in a variety of positions in drilling and production.

From Shell, he joined Watson Oil Corp., a subsidiary of City Investing Co., where he became president and chief executive officer.

Since 1978, he has been a management consultant to several companies, with primary emphasis in the area of contract drilling.

DALLAS — Continental Emsco Co., a subsidiary of the LTV Corp., has announced the appointment of Alan Zaeske as vice president — Personnel.

He formerly was with Rockwell International as director of human resources for its Graphic Systems Division in Chicago, Ill.

Andrew J. Hickerson has been promoted to sales representative in Continental Emsco's International Division in Houston. He was manager of the International Sales Order Department.

John M. Brieden has been promoted by the firm to store manager at Giddings. He was a sales representative at Lafayette, La.

The search for geothermal steam reserves is a relatively new form of energy exploration. Rigs such as this one, operated by Aminoil USA, Inc., are drilling for steam in northern California.

Geothermal search still in its infancy

HOUSTON — Only a hundred years ago, divining rods, spiritualists and "sniffers" were among the methods used to choose oil drilling sites.

Such primitive methods vanished long ago from the U.S. oil industry, superseded by sophisticated technology. Yet, other segments of energy exploration — like the search for geothermal steam — are still in their infancy.

"In terms of exploration techniques, we've had to start at the very beginning again," says Jim Grubb, a district exploration manager at Aminoil USA, Inc.

Aminoil, one of the few domestic energy companies engaged in geothermal operations, supplies steam to the world's largest geothermal-powered electric plant. The plant, which is owned by Pacific Gas and Electric Co., is located in the Geysers area of northern California — the only state with commercial geothermal production.

Geothermal steam is created by underground natural water systems heated by magma, or molten liquids, which lie more than 10,000 miles below the surface of the earth's crust.

In non-geothermal areas, magma generally lies much further below the surface of the earth. Geologists estimate that volcanic activity occurring about 10,000 years ago uplifted the magma at the Geysers.

To locate geothermal reservoirs, explorationists study the surface for geothermal seeps, by mapping areas that contain hot springs. "In the same way," notes Grubb, "oilmen searching for drilling sites looked for oil seeps 100 years ago."

In the oil and gas industry, advanced technology for examining underground geologic formations has been developed. But Grubb says that "geothermal geologists spend much more time studying surface geology than their counterparts in the oil and gas industry — looking for clues to underground formations."

Grubb says that, in contrast to more than a century's progress in oil and gas development, there have been only 20 years of U.S. commercial geothermal steam production.

Consequently, one invaluable oil exploration tool is seldom available to geothermal geologists. "Well control data, or information obtained during drilling operations, gives petroleum geologists a great deal of information," says Grubb.

"Thousands of oil and gas wells are drilled each year in the United States," he continues. "But fewer than 50 geothermal wells were drilled last year, so there is very little geothermal well control."

One tool used by geothermal explorationists is geochemistry, the analysis of water from hot springs. Another step is to take underground temperature surveys by drilling shallow wells, filling them with water, and measuring temperatures at various depths.

After a prospective geothermal reservoir has been defined, it is evaluated in basically the same way as oil and gas prospects: by drilling. Grubb says that geothermal wildcat drilling involves more staggering odds than oil and gas ventures, since fewer geothermal wells are drilled each year.

Geothermal potential — a new domestic energy frontier — was considered a frontier of another kind only a century ago. In 1847, an explorer discovered plumes of steam rising from the Geysers, and wrote that he had found "the gates of hell."

Today, those plumes represent an important supplemental energy source to California utilities. Aminoil estimates that its steam reserves alone at the Geysers, based on electric generating capacity, are equivalent to more than 75 million barrels of crude oil.

"We are just beginning to understand and evaluate the types of geothermal fields in this country," says Grubb, who adds that Aminoil also has prospective geothermal acreage in Nevada, New Mexico, Utah and Oregon. "When we acquire more exploration tools, the search for geothermal energy will become easier."

A subsidiary of R.J. Reynolds Industries, Inc., Aminoil USA engages primarily in domestic petroleum exploration and production, crude oil and petroleum product marketing, natural gas liquids operations, and geothermal steam development.

Petroleum imports getting blame for increase in U.S. trade deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 7.3 percent jump in the value of imported oil is largely to blame for a $280 million increase in the nation's trade deficit for October, the Commerce Department says.

However, department analyst David Lund said Friday that a sharp drop in the volume of imported oil will probably keep the total 1980 trade deficit at slightly more than $32 billion, or about $5 billion less than 1979.

The department reported that the October trade deficit was $1.86 billion, while the September figure was $1.6 billion. The value of imported oil increased to $6.16 billion in October, up from $5.75 billion in September.

The department said total oil imports for the first 10 months of 1980 were 2.06 billion barrels, down 23 percent from the 2.55 billion barrels imported during the same period of 1979.

For example, in October 1980 the total volume of imported oil was 188 million barrels, compared with 273 million barrels in the same month of 1979.

The decline in oil imports is attributed both to the recession and to conservation efforts, as well as to stockpiled oil that has given the country a reserve to draw on.

The Commerce Department said the volume of imported oil was up 5.8 percent last month over the previous month. However, Lund said the increase was due in part to the additional day in October, over September.

The improvement in the 1980 trade deficit has been one factor in the recent stability of the U.S. dollar.

Both exports and imports increased during October, with exports rising 2.1 percent to $19.09 billion and imports going up 3 percent to $20.94 billion, leaving a deficit of $1.86 billion.

Lund also said the October trade figures showed that the recession in Europe has not cut into U.S. exports to the degree many had feared. Exports to Europe totaled $5.54 billion during the month, up $171 million from the previous month, and gave the U.S. a surplus in trade with the region of $1.35 billion.

Flash fire hurts trio

MORGAN CITY, La. (AP) — A flash fire on a natural gas rig 40 miles out in the Gulf of Mexico burned three men, one seriously, officials of Shell Oil Co. said.

Shell spokesman John Wright said nobody else was on the rig when the fire broke out Friday.

"What caused it or what happened precisely we don't know at this time," Wright said.

Interior requests lease preferances

Gulf Oil Exploration and Production Co. has announced eight personnel anniversary dates in its Western Division, Southwest District which is headquartered in Midland.

Melton

Three men observed their 35th year with the company. They are D. R. Melton, R. J. Burden Jr. and G. A. Knowles.

Melton of Kermit, production supervisor in the Monahans Area, joined Gulf Nov. 5, 1945, at Kermit as a lease pumper. He was transferred to the Monahans Area in 1962.

He has served as a lease pumper and roustabout in addition to his present assignment.

Burden, who lives in Odessa, is a materials supervisor in the Purchasing Department. His anniversary date was Nov. 1. He started his Gulf career as a roustabout in the Houston District. He served in various areas of the Houston District as warehouse stockman clerk, warehouse stockman and material supervisor. He was transferred to the Southwest District this year.

Knowles, a resident of Midland, is a materials specialist in the Purchasing Department. He joined Gulf Nov. 13, 1945, as a laborer in Chase, Kan. He was moved to Hobbs, N.M., in 1950 as a general clerk. He also served as field material clerk and area clerical supervisor before transferring to Kermit in 1960.

During the next several years, he held several temporary assignments in Australia and Alaska.

He was transferred to Cabinda in 1979 as services supervisor, and in August he moved to Midland in his present assignment.

B. G. Elam of Odessa, senior production supervisor in the Odessa Area, marked his 30th year with the company Nov. 6. His first job with Gulf was as a roustabout in Monahans.

Elam

He served as lease operator and maintenance foreman in Durango,

Farmington and Hobbs, N.M., before transferring to Crane in 1973 as production foreman where he also served as production supervisor. He was moved to the Odessa Area in 1975, and in 1978 was promoted to senior production supervisor.

Plumlee

Another 30-year man is G. L. Plumlee of Hobbs. He is a lease operator in the Hobbs Area.

He joined Gulf Nov. 30, 1950, as a rotary helper in Hobbs. His entire tenure has been in the Hobbs Area, serving as roustabout, lease operator and lease operator-water injection plant operator.

R. E. Ard of Midland also has completed 30 years with Gulf. He is senior staff petroleum engineer in the Production Department. He began his career with the company Nov. 20, 1950, as a reservoir lab supervisor in Fort Worth where he also served as reservoir engineering lab head and petroleum engineer.

He transferred to Houston before serving in Lagos as reservoir engineer and subsurface engineering supervisor.

He was moved to Midland in August 1977 as staff petroleum engineer and was promoted to his present position in 1978.

C. S. Lyles of Lamesa, lease operator in the Goldsmith Area of the Production Department, observed his 25th Gulf anniversary Nov. 3.

Lyles

He joined Kewanee in the Crane Area as a roustabout. He also served in that area as a pumper. He transferred to Gulf when the firm purchased Kewanee in September 1978 and was assigned as a lease operator in the Goldsmith Area.

W. C. Wilson Jr. of Crane, a materials specialist in the Crane Area of the Comptroller Department, completed 25 years with Gulf Nov. 9.

His first job with the company was as a junior geological clerk in Fort Worth. He was moved to Midland in 1956 as a general draftsman.

After a two-year military leave, he returned to Midland in 1959 as draftsman. He also served as a lease clerk. He was transferred to the Crane Area as senior clerk in 1967. He also served as material expeditor, senior material expeditor and now as materials specialist.

Olix Industries, Inc., of Midland said the securities and exchange commission has approved the registration for its spin-off of the stock of its furniture subsidiary, Cramer, Inc., to Olix shareholders.

One Cramer share will be distributed Jan. 16 for each four shares of Olix stock of record Dec. 31.

Cramer, a furniture manufacturer, will operate as an independent concern with its stock traded over the counter.

Management believes that the separation of the companies may enhance the ability of the investment community to identify and evaluate Olix's oil and gas operations.

Ron Lloyd of Midland, area manager of Northern Natural Gas Co., announced that Carl E. Mahaney has been promoted to Midland District manager.

Mahaney

He previously was technical supervisor in the Spearman District.

Mahaney has been with Northern since 1953 and has served in many capacities in Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas.

Northern Natural is headquartered in Omaha, Neb.

H. M. "Hub" Wills has joined the Midland Division of The Ortloff Corp. as a plans engineer, reports A. R. Laengrich, vice president of Consulting and Development for the Midland Division.

Wills

Wills has 27 years of project management, design, and plant commissioning experience related to natural gas processing, petrochemical production and fertilizer manufacturing.

He is responsible for performing non-process conceptual design of process plants for Ortloff proposals and projects.

Wills received his B.S. degree in Petroleum Engineering from Texas Tech University in 1953. He joined El Paso Natural Gas Co. as a process engineer. In 1960, he joined El Paso Products Co. in Odessa as a plant engineer and staff process engineer.

Prior to his employment with Ortloff, Wills worked with Perry Gas Processors, Inc., as manager of process design, and as manager of engineering for PGP Gas Processors, Inc., in Midland.

He is a member of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers.

Three employees of NDT Systems, Inc., of Odessa have been promoted as assigned new responsibilities, reports Delbert Townsend, company president.

Brown

Dexter Brown, former president of International Sales Co. in Houston, has been made vice president of sales for NDT. Through International Sales, Brown has represented NDT since its inception in 1975. He recently was moved to Midland and will assume his new duties immediately.

Bob Leslie, NDT customer service manager, has been elevated to the position of manager of technical services.

Leslie

Prior to joining NDT, Leslie was manager of technical services for AMF Tuboscope for the Western Region.

Arnold Seaborn has been promoted to manager of customer services. His duties with NDT for the last two years have been in quality control. He formerly was a division manager with AMF Tuboscope covering the Hobbs-Odessa area.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department, gearing up for a sale of petroleum leases off California, asked for suggestions Friday on tracts to be considered for leasing.

The sale is tentatively scheduled for May 1983.

The "call for nominations" is the first step in a process designed to identify areas that interest the oil industry and those which should not be leased for environmental or other reasons, before a final decision is reached on tracts to be offered in the lease sale.

The department has invited comment on more than 24.1 million submerged acres beyond the three-mile limit of state jurisdiction along the California coast — from Oregon to Mexico. The area reaches as far as 200 miles out to sea and includes waters up to 12,000 feet deep.

The announcement said a number of offshore tracts have been excluded from consideration, generally for environmental or legal reasons.

The U.S. Geological Survey has estimated that the area may contain anywhere from 3.5 billion to 10.9 billion barrels of oil and 5.4 trillion to 15 trillion cubic feet of natural gas. Actual petroleum deposits, however, can be determined only by exploratory drilling.

The department asked for tract nominations and other comments by Jan. 30, 1981.

Following its standard leasing process, the department usually eliminates some tracts from consideration and focuses its attention on others in response to such comments.

It then selects tracts for detailed study, prepares an environmental impact analysis, holds public hearings and then makes a final decision which may result in conventional offshore leasing, leasing with specific protective conditions attached, or even cancellation of a proposed sale.

Startup record reported

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. — Natomas Company announced its first platform in the Krisna field of Indonesia's Java Sea has started production at a rate of approximately 70,000 barrels of oil per day, almost double the initial rate previously anticipated.

Development currently is underway for two more Krisna platforms scheduled to begin production in February and May 1981.

Natomas has yet to determine the full extent of the reserves in the Krisna field. To date, 23 exploratory, delineation and development wells have been drilled, 20 of which have been successful.

The last two exploratory wells, Krisna 10 and Krisna 26, extended the field's lateral dimensions 1 1/2 miles northeast and 3 miles west, and together with earlier discoveries determined the field's gross oil column to be at least 1,500 feet.

No oil-water contact has been observed in any of the successful wells drilled to date.

Natomas presently has three offshore rigs active in the Southeast Sumatra contract area, and six additional rigs on order for delivery by mid-1981.

Natomas president, Dorman L. Commons, noted that the nine-well platform, which had been expected to start production at 36,000 barrels daily, also set the record for the highest initial production of any platform in the 10-year development of the Southeast Sumatra contract area, where Natomas is operator and holds 53 percent of the contractors' interest.

The previous high initial rate of 36,276 barrels was recorded by the first platform in the Selatan field in 1978.

The Krisna B platform came on stream Nov. 9, more than a month ahead of the mid-December start-up schedule and 9 1/2 months from the time the field was first identified.

Federal suit filed against Guymon, Okla., oilman

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A subsidiary of a Dallas company has filed a $1.5 million federal suit in Oklahoma City claiming a Guymon oilman profited from mistakenly priced oil and that he refused to pay for shipments.

The suit was filed Wednesday by OKC Trading Co., which was taken over by OKC Corp. in 1972 when the petroleum conglomerate took control of OKC refinery in Okmulgee. J. R. Adams purchased oil contracts from the Okmulgee refinery for resale.

The suit by OKC Trading comes in the wake of federal investigations of OKC Corp. and Adams' relationship to the Dallas petroleum company's president Cloyce Box.

OKC Corp. is in the process of liquidating its holdings.

Adams, owner of J.R. Adams Oil Co. of Guymon, was fined $100,000 in December 1979 in U.S. District Court in Oklahoma City for violating government pricing rules by reselling oil products at higher than the regulated prices.

Box pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court here in July to charges relating in part to his firm's dealings with Adams and to oil pricing irregularities.

OKC Corp. agreed to pay $4.7 million for oil pricing overcharges. Some of the allegations against Box included one that he received money back from friendly brokers who upped the price of oil after it was purchased from the Okmulgee refinery and before it was resold.

But OKC Trading Co. contends that from May to November 1977, No. 6 oil was sold to Adams in a series of transactions at a mistaken price so that he actually paid less for the oil than was called for in the contract.

The suit contends that in May 1977, Adams allegedly took delivery of over 50,000 barrels of No. 6 oil at the Okmulgee plant, but due to an invoicing mistake paid $10.13 per barrel instead of $11.71.

The suit also contends that Adams took delivery of $464,337 worth of oil in 1977 but refused to pay for it.

A. H. Dinsmoor of Midland reappointed

WASHINGTON D.C. — The Chairman of the board of the Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA), T. P. McAdams, has announced the reappointment of A. H. Dinsmoor of Marshall R. Young Oil Co. in Midland to the post of vice-chairman of the Association's Environment & Safety Committee. In announcing the appointment, McAdams noted the importance of the committee structure in developing IPAA's energy policies and programs.

The Association represents the interests of more than 12,000 oil and natural gas producers in 33 oil and gas producing states.

McAdams said the committee appointment is for a period of one year. The IPAA was founded in 1929 and has more than 6,000 members nationwide.

Block plans told

OWENSBORO, Ky. — Texas Gas Exploration Corp. is making plans to develop East Cameron Block 220 following the successful completion of a gas discovery by the OCS-G-3323 No. 2 well located 85 miles from shore in 118 feet of water off the coast of La.

The well tested at a rate of 5.7 million cubic feet of gas per day and 105 barrels of condensate per day on a 14/64-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 5,065 pounds per square inch from perforations between 11,415-11,444 feet. The 5,000-acre lease was purchased in a federal sale held in Feb. 1976, with Texas Gas Exploration holding an equal 50 percent interest with partners, Diamond Shamrock Corp. and OKC Corp.

The gas is coming A shot of fizz for you

You saw recently where Amoco's going to spend $1.5 billion to provide CO2 enhanced recovery on 11 projects in the Basin to start including $20 million to develop its big CO2 reserves at Bravo Dome. This project is only one of several CO2 flooding plans in the works for the Permian Basin. Shell, Mobil and Arco have involved plans and may team up with Amoco to bring the gas you find in Pepsi to tired out reservoirs where water flooding's value is fading.

Will there be enough CO2 for you field? How much will it cost? Will federal incentives continue to make this costly risky recovery technique very worth doing?

Gary Bushell - This Corpus Christi lawyer played a significant role in enacting generous incentives for tertiary recovery. Who is better qualified to explain how these incentives make it worth your while to try tertiary recovery Bushell also gives the latest federal interpretations of the rules.

Dr. Arnold Goldberg, former Boeing science and technology director turned petroleum engineer, widely known for his chemical floods in Montana, tells how his firm, Gary Energy, a medium sized independent, is using CO2 in Appalachia.

Dr. Allan Spivak - Formerly with Chevron at SACROC and experienced in math modeling for Chevron Research, Dr. Spivak founded Galactica EOR Corp., a subsidiary of Markland Corp. which operates with Cornell Oil, the Cornell unit in the Wasson Field. Galactica acquires and operates EOR properties.

John Goodrich spent 28 years with Shell before joining Gruy Federal in Houston. Goodrich, an expert in determining which reservoirs are suited for CO2 flooding will tell how it's done.

Panel of Majors - Lydia Phillips, production engineer for Conoco doing a CO2 flood on the Ford-Geraldine Field between Pecos and Carlsbad, tells her experience with CO2

Frank Lim, running Gulf's Jones Enhanced Recovery unit in Brazos County, and

Dr. Jerry Vairogs, supervises Cities Service's Reservoir Performance Group, tells about planning a CO2 flood with proper lab work first.

State has lone rabbi

SIoux FALLS, S.D. (AP) — During the week, he sells light bulbs. In his spare time, Stephen Forstein assumes another role — the lone rabbi of South Dakota's tiny Jewish community.

Only 600-odd Jews live in this prairie state of 600,000 people — less than one-tenth of 1 percent of the population. Only Wyoming and Idaho have fewer Jews by head count, according to surveys by Jewish groups.

"I'm out to sell a product, be it like light bulbs or Judaism, and I make no bones about it — I'm selling Judaism," said Forstein, a 44-year-old native of The Bronx in New York City.

His job as a sales representative for four lighting companies takes the rabbi traveling around South Dakota, allowing him to visit isolated Jewish communities.

On one trip to Pierre, he performed the ritual circumcision required for Jewish baby boys.

THE EVENT — a common occurrence in cities with sizable Jewish populations — rated a long story in the local newspaper. It was heralded as the first such ceremony ever performed in Pierre, where only six Jewish families live.

Distances among scattered families pose a constant obstacle.

Many Jewish families are simply unable to attend weekly services when as much as eight hours of round-trip driving is required to get to one of the only three congregations in the state.

Some of the children enrolled in religious school at the Mount Zion Temple in Sioux Falls can make the long trip to class only once every other week.

But distance doesn't prevent what must be done. A boy in Marshall, Minn., unable to attend regular bar mitzvah classes, gets instruction from the rabbi via telephone.

Discussion groups are held in homes in Brookings, providing an opportunity to congregate for Jews outside the Sioux Falls area.

With 59 families as members, the Mount Zion Temple here is the center of South Dakota's Jewish community. A congregation in Aberdeen has about 20 families, but no rabbi.

About 40 families and single people — many of them Air Force personnel — are affiliated with a congregation that holds its services in the chapel at Ellsworth Air Force Base near Rapid City — also without a rabbi.

"WE CAN'T write them (South Dakota Jews) off because they're just a handful," Forstein said. "We can't cut off the Jewishness of those who live in places where the Jewish community is not as thick."

"I try to keep raising Jewish values and issues and concerns to my own people to help them stay in touch," the rabbi said. "Whatever we can do that's within the realm of possibility, we do."

American Jews, most heavily concentrated in New York City where they or their ancestors arrived from abroad, never settled in large numbers in this sparsely populated Western state dominated by farming and ranching.

Forstein said he doesn't know of a single Jewish farmer or rancher in South Dakota. But a small Jewish community has been around for many years.

The Mount Zion congregation was incorporated in Sioux Falls in 1920. It met in a Baptist church until it bought the Grace Lutheran Church in 1924 and converted the building into its present temple.

Forstein said he decided to become a rabbi while working as an assistant to a rabbi at the Hillel Foundation at the University of California at Berkeley, where he was a student.

"I ALWAYS had an interest in Judaism and I always had an interest in working with people, and I had a broad range in social and moral interests," Forstein explained. "I said, 'This (being a rabbi) is for me.'"

Forstein completed his religious studies in New York City and found work as a rabbi in Westchester County. He didn't like it.

"I didn't particularly like the kind of situation where one is competing with other synagogues and other rabbis for members," said Forstein. "I like the kind of situation where one is the only rabbi in town. We don't have to worry about gimmicks or marketing to get members from others."

As a rabbi in a large congregation, "You don't get to know your people," Forstein added. "I don't want that."

Moving west, Forstein became the only rabbi in Topeka, Kan., then moved to Sioux City, Iowa, as a counselor for Planned Parenthood.

There he worked with a Lutheran woman on a sex education program for her church. The woman converted to Judaism and is now Forstein's wife, Jan, who handles much of the daily administrative work at the Mount Zion Temple.

Forstein began his lighting supply business in Sioux City then moved it to South Dakota 18 months ago after the rabbi at Mount Zion died.

Forstein said he likes being a part-time rabbi here. His job as a lighting supply salesman "keeps me in touch with the real world. ... It's hard to stay up in the ivory tower if you're out pounding the streets."

Dr. Carter addressed meeting held in Boston

Dr. Robert Carter, social studies and languages coordinator for the Midland Independent School District, recently addressed a meeting of the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages held in Boston, Mass.

ACTFL is a national association of foreign language teachers, supervisors and professors which meets annually in the United States.

Midland's foreign language program will be honored along with 49 others which received national recognition as exemplary programs. The Midland program will serve as a model for other school districts across the nation.

A certificate of merit and a copy of the book, "Prescriptions for Success," in which the program is described, were presented to Carter at the meeting.

Hanson new jamboree chairman

IRVING — Bernold M. "Bruno" Hanson, an independent Midland oil and gas operator, has been named chairman of support services for the upcoming 1981 National Scout Jamboree.

The Jamboree, to be held at Fort A.P. Hill near Fredericksburg, Va., July 29-Aug. 4, is expected to draw 30,000 Boy Scouts and leaders from all 50 states and several foreign countries.

Hanson, president of the Hanson Corp., is an Eagle Scout. He will be responsible for the operation of the jamboree commissary, transportation and the health and safety of the residents of the giant tent city.

National Scout jamborees are held every four years.

New device coordinates contraction of heart fibers

Dear Dr. Solomon: The newspapers recently carried a story about a new device that helps the heart keep beating. The news was even reported on national television, so I imagine it must be important. The way it was explained, the device is implanted under the skin. Is this a new kind of pacemaker? If so, I don't understand why it is receiving all this publicity. If it's not a pacemaker, would you explain what it is? — Mr. E.P.

Dear Mr. P.: The device to which you refer is not a pacemaker but an automatic implantable defibrillator that is designed to protect heart patients from a condition that can cause sudden death. The unit is implanted under the skin in the upper abdominal area in patients who are considered to be particularly susceptible to episodes of ventricular fibrillation — that is, the rapid, uncoordinated contraction of heart fibers as a result of disturbances in cardiac electrical activity.

Ventricular fibrillation is a life-threatening condition, with an estimated 300,000 patients dying each year in the United States. Without appropriate medical care, most patients die shortly after the onset of symptoms.

The automatic defibrillator was conceived and invented by Dr. Michael Mirowski, director of the Coronary Care Unit at Sinai Hospital in Baltimore. While it resembles the heart pacemaker in appearance, it fulfills a significantly different function. In effect, it does what a doctor would do when applying an external shock to a patient suffering from this form of heart attack. Because it is internal, however, the device requires only a fraction of the voltage that would be needed externally.

The defibrillator not only can recognize arrhythmias, but automatically delivers an electric shock in order to restore the normal rhythm of the heart. In other words, it not only makes the diagnosis but automatically provides the treatment. This does away with the need for trained personnel or other special equipment.

The first electrical discharge is programmed to begin about 15 seconds after the start of fibrillation so that the heart will have an opportunity to correct itself. If the first shock does not correct the abnormal rhythm, three more can be delivered. The last two shocks, if they are needed, are of an increased intensity. After the fourth shock, about 35 seconds of normal rhythm are needed to reset the defibrillator. The device is then ready to deliver another full set of shocks at the next episode.

So far, the defibrillator has been implanted in six patients with a history of ventricular fibrillation requiring resuscitation by ambulance crews. Only one of the six patients has died, while nine instances of life-threatening arrhythmias have been corrected by the device.

The automatic defibrillator is about the size of a pack of cigarettes, about two and three-quarter inches square. It weighs almost nine ounces and is enclosed in titanium. One of its electrodes attaches at the upper border of the heart, the other at the lower tip of the heart. Its lithium batteries have a projected life of three years or 100 shocks.

Clinical trials of the defibrillator are currently under way at the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

'Elephant Woman' leads normal life

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (AP) — Ignored by waiters in restaurants, screamed at on subways and laughed at in stores, she bears the brunt of one of nature's cruellest tricks: neurofibromatosis, or "Elephant Man's" disease.

While little is known about the incurable disease, what is certain is that it leaves a body grotesquely disfigured.

A maze of fleshy lumps covers Katherine's face. Her nose, overriden with tumors, is pushed to one side. A small clump of the nodes hangs from one side of her jaw. Surgery on the tumors saved her life twice. Her arms have large, beige spots.

England's "Elephant Man," John Merrick, became a circus freak before an early death. His tragic story became the subject of the hit play and movie, "The Elephant Man."

Unlike Merrick, Katherine never wears a bag to cover her face. She works billing patients for medical services, lives in her own apartment and stands up against physical pain and human ignorance.

The pain is never ending. Patting or hugging her may send shivers of pain through her whole body.

"After a while, you learn to live with the pain," says the 54-year-old woman whose true name was withheld when interviewed by The Middlesex News.

Katherine manages to keep her sense of humor through it all.

"If the spots were green, I'd look like a frog," she jests.

But the humor can't always cover the hurt. Several months ago, while riding the subway she was attacked. Police arrested a suspect. But she decided not to press charges.

"I was reminded that if I point a finger at this guy, there was the retaliation factor and in my case, it was more severe. You see, I have a face you don't forget," she said.

Recently, Katherine was in a subway when a woman sat next to her, took one look and "ran to the end of the subway."

Once in a restaurant, a waiter handed her what looked like a recipe.

"It looked good. I remembered it called for eggplant, but when I got to the end of the page, there was a message telling me to apply it to my face every night," she said.

The message promised the mixture would cure her "skin problem."

"It doesn't hurt my feelings any more. If that's the way they feel, they have a worse problem than me," she said.

Yet she lives with a touch of bitterness, too.

"If I was in a room, someone would talk to that handsome man over there or that pretty lady over there before they would come to me. Let's face it," she said.

"Sometimes," she adds wistfully, "I just want to hug people and I don't know how they'll react, so I don't."

Inflation goes higher — again

By KRISTIN GOFF
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The story is a familiar one by now. The latest government figures on inflation came out this past week. To almost no one's surprise, they showed that prices went up.

The consumer price index report showed that the market basket of consumer goods measured by the Labor Department cost 1 percent more in October than in September and about 12 percent more than they did at the start of the year.

The nickel and dime effects of inflation, while aggravating, are such a familiar story by now that the long range implications are often overlooked.

But with 1980 about to mark the third consecutive year of near double-digit inflation (1978 was 9 percent), it's worth noting just what high inflation can do over a long period of time. At 10 percent inflation, one dollar would be worth 90 cents after 10 years, assuming it earned no interest.

After 20 years, it would be worth 15 cents and after 50 years, the dollar would be worth just a penny, according to calculations by Harry Brandt in the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta's latest monthly Economic Review.

While 10 percent inflation annually over the long term may be unlikely, economists are concerned that forces causing the steep acceleration in prices are so stubbornly fixed in the economy that reducing inflation becomes extremely difficult.

One particularly worrisome feature of the economy this year was the extent to which inflation failed to respond to the recession. In past business cycles, as the output of the economy drops and demand for goods fall off, price and wage increases also slow. That happened only to a small extent — if at all — this year. Consumer prices are expected to be about 12 percent higher at the end of this year than last. They rose 13 percent in 1979.

Furthermore, as Brandt noted in his commentary in the Economic Review, "Since 1955, inflation started from a higher base after each successive recession.

"Whether this happens once again in the aftermath of the current recession will depend in part on the policies followed in the interim. The disturbing trend, however, suggests there is an 'underlying' rate of inflation which continues rising through economic expansions and contractions."

While other measures of inflation — the GNP deflator in particular — may be more accurate measures for economists to examine, consumer prices offer a general look at recent inflation history.

The average annual rate of consumer price increase between 1950 and 1965 was less than 2 percent. From 1965 to 1973, it averaged about 4.5 percent. That average increase rose to about 9.5 percent in the last six years, including a 12 percent inflation rate in 1974 and a 13 percent rate last year.

Arguments over who is to blame and how best to cure inflation likely will go on for years. Government budget deficits, high costs of imported oil and other goods, a weaker dollar on international markets, low business productivity and cost-of-living clauses in many labor contracts and for Social Security recipients are all part of the picture.

Inflation affects people in different ways. Those on fixed incomes not adjusted for inflation are obvious losers. But some benefit in various ways.

Borrowers of a few years back, who obtained long term mortgages at about 7 percent, have benefited by an obligation to pay back in inflation cheapened dollars in subsequent years. But lenders have been hurt.

But even those whose wage increases are keeping up with inflation run the risk that savings or long-term investments won't increase that rapidly.

Wages of most workers failed to keep up with inflation's rapid rise this year, the Labor Department reported.

Median weekly earnings of families with at least one working member rose 8 percent in the year ended in October, from $381 to $412, the department said. During the same period, consumer prices rose 12.8 percent, resulting in a 4.2 percent decline in purchasing power, according to the report issued this past week.

Economists cite expected demand for big raises next year as one reason inflation is expected to continue at a double-digit clip in 1981. Rising food costs, continued big debt loads for the government and an uncertain outlook for oil prices are other factors.

In other business developments this past week:

The prime lending rate, a widely followed business loan rate, jumped to 18 percent at one major bank and to 17.75 percent at most others. That brought the business loan rate to its highest level since early last May.

While the prime rate isn't directly linked to consumer loan rates, it underscores a general credit tightening that means loans of all types may be harder to qualify for, or more expensive or both.

A senior agriculture department economist said the department's prediction that 1981 will see the biggest rise in food prices in seven years could prove too optimistic if winter weather is harsh.

The department has been predicting a 12 percent food cost increase next year, compared to about 9 percent this year.

BUSINESS MIRROR

The buck has stopped

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — After more than a decade of falling to face up to inflation, Americans may have arrived at a critical turning point. And it isn't so much a result of admonitions as of recognizing reality.

The reality is that the buck has stopped.

It now appears that large numbers of people are learning, bitterly perhaps, the difference between the illusion of economic progress and the reality of an economy stalled in its tracks and even slipping back.

Early in the life of inflation it can provide many advantages to certain groups: companies can report higher sales without selling more goods, for example, and workers may feel flush with cash.

The borrower too feels power over events, knowing that repayments are made in cheaper dollars. And homeowners may become ecstatic as they see the value of their tract houses rising as fast as the price of gold.

The warnings begin, but aren't heeded. Everyone knows that inflation might be bad for the country, but the correction begins with the other guy. Meanwhile, inflation remains something to exploit, if you can.

The establishment admonitions grow harsh. Just a few days ago Harold Williams, Securities and Exchange Commission head, urged patriotic Americans to commit a once "un-American" act: cut living standards.

The financial evangelists then arise, preaching repentance before the day of judgment, which we are told will mean chaos in the streets and a collapse of most prices except those of precious metals and food.

And the next stage? Well, it seems, it might already be here. All the warnings and threats might have been ignored, but there is no ignoring the evidence now presented to Americans: a decline in real earnings.

With inflation subtracted, the Labor Department announced, the earnings of families with at least one wage earner fell 4.2 percent during the past year. That dictates a lower living standard.

Taxes, meanwhile, have been rising, since the Internal Revenue Service insists illusion is reality. It persists in elevating taxpayers into higher tax brackets — and taxing them on what they never earned.

The Tax Foundation has the figures. "U.S. median family income is higher than ever — $19,950 in 1980, compared to $9,750 a decade ago," it states. And then adds:

"However, after-tax income measured in constant 1970 dollars is lower than it was in any year of the last decade — $7,976 in 1980 compared to $8,412 in 1970."

Interest rates are rising too, and doing so with such speed that all but the most essential loans are being ruled out by would-be borrowers or would-be lenders. It is becoming impossible to get money with which to live beyond your income. And when possible, it is unprofitable.

Because it is almost always in demand, the house has been considered the best hedge against inflation, but what good is that for someone who must sell or raise cash? Sales are now blocked every day because those who want to buy cannot afford the terms or the downpayment.

Because of such factors, inflation's damage now seems to outweigh the benefits. And as it worsens, the number that are hurt rises and the number of beneficiaries shrinks.

Such evidence against inflation is overwhelming, and probably had as much to do with the election of a more conservative political leadership as any one issue.

Americans, it appears, have a huge capacity for ignoring admonitions and threats, but they can read and heed as well as anyone the stark evidence of that bottom line. It's where the buck has stopped.

Datsun has a car that talks to you

Would you believe a car that talks?

Well, Datsun has one for 1981. You can't walk away from the all-new Datsun 810 Maxima with your lights on without a "gentle" reminder from a persuasive female voice telling you to "Please turn off the lights."

That is one of the special features on the completely restyled 1981 luxury/performance 810 sedans and wagons now available at Datsun Datsun, Inc. in Midland.

The audible warning system, which is activated when the driver removes the ignition key and opens the door of his 810 with the headlights or parking lights still on, is actually a small 12-volt device that works on the principle of the old gramophone. A miniature record and turntable spin inside while a tiny needle transfers sound to the speaker.

The 810 communicates with the driver in other ways as well, with a fuel-injected, six-cylinder engine and a brand new four-wheel independent suspension on the sedans insuring excellent performance and handling.

Other standard equipment includes a power sliding roof on the sedan, automatic transmission and air conditioning and, of course, that built-in vocal reminder.

A little black box and not a young lady is the voice behind the unique warning feature... "Please turn off your lights"... that is a part of the 1981 luxury/performance 810 Maxima sedans and station wagons by Datsun.

Bohannon elected director during national meet

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Patsy Bohannon, a Midland Realtor, recently was elected a director of the National Association of Realtors at the association's 73rd annual convention.

As a director, Ms. Bohannon will participate in policy making for the association and in deciding the thrust of Realtor programs.

The National Association of Realtors, headquartered in Chicago, is the country's largest trade association with more than 700,000 members involved in all phases of the real estate industry, according to a NAR spokesman.

Mrs. Bohannon has been a member of the Midland Board of Realtors since 1970, serving as president in 1975. She also has been a director of the board since 1972. In 1976, she was selected Realtor of the Year.

In the Texas Association of Realtors, Mrs. Bohannon is on the board, serving since 1976; was vice chairman of professional standards in 1979, currently is chairman of that committee and in 1981 will take a position on the 12-member executive committee. She also is a member of the legislative committee.

In the national association, Mrs. Bohannon currently is serving on two committees.

People behind the man

As noted on last Friday's editorial page, Ronald Reagan knows politics and politicians. There is another attribute President-elect Reagan possesses that should serve him well in his presidency also.
That is his apparent ability and inclination to choose and appoint subordinates to positions for which their abilities are well suited. He performed that way when he was governor of California, we are told, and from all indications that will be his modus operandi in the Oval Office.

The list of names of prospective members of Reagan's cabinet and key individuals in his administration contains some familiar to most people: Caspar Weinberger, former head of the Office of Management & Budget, possibly to return to that post; George Shultz or Alexander Haig, both of whom served President Richard Nixon, for the top job at the State Department; Martin Feldstein of the National Bureau of Economic Research or Murray Weidenbaum of Washington University at St. Louis or Thomas Sowell, a black, for the new chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

Closer to home, U.S. Sen. John Tower of Wichita Falls is being mentioned to possibly get the nod as head of the Defense Department. Our only reservation about that possible appointment stems from the fact that Tower, in 1981, becomes chairman of the powerful Armed Services Committee. We believe the senator would be more valuable to the nation in that capacity.

There also has been talk of possible appointments for either or both former Gov. John Connally and current Gov. Bill Clements. That talk, however, hasn't been as prevalent or as well substantiated.

Reagan's apparent interest in naming the best possible people to key cabinet and administration posts is reassuring. Jimmy Carter, unfortunately, made some poor choices for his term and suffered the consequences.

It's only wise for a president to choose the most able individuals to help him run the country. No president, regardless of ability, can handle a job that big with that much nerve-snapping pressure and responsibility, without a lot of help. That doesn't imply that the president is relinquishing some of his authority. On the contrary, he is enhancing his ability to gather all the facts he can to make the vastly important day-to-day decisions he will face. Of course, the president alone still must make the final decision.

Reagan appears to be approaching his administration with just that kind of philosophy. And that inspires our confidence about the future of this nation in the tough days ahead.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Reagan's confidante a quiet, organized man

WASHINGTON — Although he is surrounded by more authoritative experts than any chief executive in the world, every American president seems to feel the need for an additional, informal adviser in or out of the government—a close friend and confidant who thinks the way he does, someone he can turn to for dispassionate counseling on the myriad, complex problems that must be decided in the Oval Office day in and day out.

Jack Anderson

For Jimmy Carter, this essential role was filled by Atlanta attorney Charles Kirbo. During Carter's years in the White House, Kirbo was rarely more than a telephone call away from the president. Aside from his wife, Rosalynn, Carter probably placed more confidence in Kirbo than in any other single individual.

The Charlie Kirbo of Ronald Reagan's administration will be William French Smith. Like Kirbo, he is a respected lawyer and a wealthy man—and prefers to stay out of the limelight if he can.

The affable, balding, round-faced Smith has been Reagan's personal lawyer, dinner companion and intimate associate for many years. Their friendship goes back to the days when the president-elect was head of the Screen Actors Guild.

Those close to the two say it was Smith who originally encouraged Reagan to get involved in politics. And since Reagan took the plunge 16 years ago, it has been Smith, as much as anyone, who has guided and nurtured Reagan's astonishing rise from a fading Hollywood actor to president-elect of the United States.

Despite her humble insistence that she will play only a wifely supporting role, probably has as much influence with her husband as Rosalynn Carter has with hers.

Smith was one of the first people Reagan consulted when he was considering his last try for the White House, and he was the first one he turned to when he won the long-sought prize. At Reagan's request, Smith converted his office in the Los Angeles law firm of Gibson, Dunn and Crutcher into an informal transition headquarters two months before the election.

From this unlikely command post, Smith hand-picked the top members of Reagan's transition team, personally screening the handful of Republicans and Democrats who have in turn chosen the key officials for the new administration.

Since the landslide election victory, Smith has sat at the head of Reagan's informal "Kitchen Cabinet," the small group of conservative businessmen and financiers, like Justin Dart and Holmes Tuttle, who have for years been the new president's most determined, loyal and influential backers.

What kind of man is the new gray eminence of the White House? For one thing, he is a man who keeps a low

ART BUCHWALD Term paper is problem no matter who does it

WASHINGTON — It's that time again when term papers are due and all over this land the phone is ringing with calls from desperate students.
"Mr. Blueveid?"
"Buchwald."
"Yes, that's the name. I'm doing a term paper on the Federal Reserve Bank Board and I would like to ask you a few questions."
"I'm terribly sorry, but I don't know anything about the Federal Reserve Bank Board."
"You live in Washington, don't you?"
"Yes, but living in Washington does not necessarily mean you are clued in on the Fed."
"I need this paper by Thursday."
"Why don't you call the Fed yourself? I'm sure they have a department that handles questions from students writing term papers on them."
"Maybe I can write a term paper on you. What do you do?"
"I just mess around in the newspaper."
"My essay has to be three pages long. Could you fill that up for me?"
"I doubt it. You better try the Fed."
"This paper is very important. The teacher assigned it to me in September, but I'm on the cheerleading squad and I went away with my friend Allison to Mexico, and then Elizabeth got sick and I had to take over the decorations for the fall hop, and the day I was going to the library Mom's

"I'm sorry to hear that, but I don't believe that's my fault."
"That's easy for you to say because all you have to do is hang up the phone and go back to your business. I'm stuck here until I get my paper done. I might be thrown off the cheerleading squad if I don't get it in on time. But you'll sleep all right tonight, no matter what happens."
"You won't get to me by laying on a guilt trip. I take no responsibility for people's term papers, since I don't assign them. Nor am I in the business of writing them for students, particularly by Thursday."
"They told me you'd say that."
"Who told you?"
"The people I spoke to at the Federal Reserve Bank Board."

Republicans say they're not getting fair shake in House

WASHINGTON — President-elect Reagan's conservative government will be tested a great deal on how it succeeds in working its will with Congress, particularly in the House, where Speaker "Tip" O'Neill remains as standard-bearer for Democratic Party philosophy.

Outwardly, this is honeymoon time, but on the Hill there are rumbles. Congressional leaders — new and old — are thrashing about like so many animals in the forest, maneuvering for the power that will determine what happens to Reagan's conservative programs when they are proposed in the upcoming session.

The election — and conservative message — were only a week old when Speaker O'Neill announced that Democratic dominance of the most powerful committees — Rules, Ways and Means, and Appropriations — should remain at the present two-to-one ratio, plus one additional Democratic member.

This news galvanized GOP leaders, especially Congressman Bud Shuster, chairman of the Republican Policy Committee and aspirant for Minority Whip, who has long battled O'Neill on the question of Republican representation on House committees.

"O'Neill and his lieutenants are laying the groundwork in the House to block the Republican mandate," Shuster charged. "Obstruction has already begun. This threat to stack the deck against House Republicans stands in stark contrast to the decision by the new Senate majority (Republicans) to give the Democratic minority essentially proportional committee representation."
For 35 years, Democrats so dominated the House that Republicans resigned themselves to accepting far less than their share of committee assignments and staffing. This hurt was compounded by the realization that, while Republicans were getting 45 percent of the vote in Congressional elections, they were winning about 35 percent of the seats in the House — due to Democratic gerrymandering in the states.

In 1978, for example, GOP congressional candidates got 46 percent of the vote, but 36 percent of the seats. Then, when O'Neill and the Democratic leadership organized the House, Republicans got only 33 percent of the key committee slots, according to Shuster.

In the November sweep, however, Republicans won 50 percent of the vote in congressional elections and now hold 44 percent of the House seats. They now demand a minimum of 40 percent of those choice committee assignments so they can work Reagan's will.

In his recent meeting with the Speaker, Reagan himself quietly but firmly informed O'Neill of this reality. Shuster and Congressman Robert H. Michel and Guy Vanderjacket — all seeking Minority leadership posts — demanded it. Then, the new Senate leader, Howard Baker, warned O'Neill that fair is fair.

On hearing the Speaker's remark on what the Republicans would get, Baker said, "Two can play at that game," and added, "They have the majority to do it, but we can do it, too. I really hope that Tip doesn't pursue it. If he persists in demanding committee ratios that are not reflective of real ratios, I had better figure out what we are going to do over here."
If that wasn't enough thunder from the Right, some 35 of Tip's own House Democrats, calling themselves the Conservative Democratic Forum, organized, held eight meetings, and declared they would announce their position on issues. Their leader, Rep. Charles W. Stenholm of Texas, says that, although the Forum will vote for Democrats as committee chairmen, they will still push the conservative view.

Confronted with all this, "Tip" backed off, and now says that a half-dozen Democratic members of the Appropriations Committee told him they would not ask for the magic two-to-one ratio because that proportion might turn the committee partisan, and they don't want that.

Tip also says he is "rethinking" the ratio for the Ways and Means Committee, but will keep the two-to-one plus-one Democratic edge on Rules "because that is necessary to be able to control the flow of legislation to the floor."
Besides, said Tip, "I have tremendous respect for Howard Baker, and when I analyzed the Republican presidential candidates, I always thought he was the brightest. I have worked with him and he is good."
In quieter voice, Tip muses with confidants that when House Republicans were the majority in 1947 and 1953, they insisted on a disproportionate dominance on key committees. Indeed, the record partially bears Tip out on this one.

In 1947, Republicans had a 246-188 edge (57 percent) in the House, kept a two-to-one majority on the powerful Rules Committee, but gave Democrats their fair share (40 percent) of seats on the Appropriations and Ways and Means committees. The Republicans held a bare 221-213 (51 percent) majority in 1953, kept their two-to-one ratio on Rules, and their three-to-two dominance on the other two key committees.

Still, that was a generation ago, and the political and governmental process has been considerably liberalized since then. The one man-one vote concept is now law, and many legislative bodies have opened up accordingly.

"Tip O'Neill is using the past to look to the future," says Bill Pitts, floor assistant to Congressman Michel, in getting the last word in this skirmish.

Like so many of its predecessors in the last three decades, the incoming Ronald Reagan team is planning sweeping changes in White House press relations. And, also like so many of its predecessors, the Reagan administration will probably return to the time-tested way of dealing with journalists after a brief flurry of innovation. That is one area where the new president's staff would be well advised to avoid committing itself to alterations until its members have had a little time to watch the press office work from the inside.

ly to agree with that estimate and decide to avoid it by restructuring the organization so that he will have better relations with the media. It takes a little time to discover that the White House press secretary has little or no control over the manner in which the president will be presented to the public through newspapers and television. Only one person can really determine that, and it is the president himself.

a spectacle were Meese to put those plans into effect. The White House press secretary is invariably the pet target of palace-guard maneuvers seeking positions of power because of the public exposure that goes with the job. To set up four such targets would be to convert the office into a snake pit. Each one would need to wear back armor constantly — even in bed.

Commandments decision sheds new light Indians may have been cannibals

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A brief, unsigned opinion was all the Supreme Court used to strike down a Kentucky law requiring the posting of the Ten Commandments in public school classrooms.

However, the opinion handed down earlier this month offers the newest insight into how the high court views its continuing task of interpreting the First Amendment's first prohibition: "Congress shall pass no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

That wording long has been interpreted to hold the actions of state and local governments, as well as those of Congress, constitutionally accountable. Here, in question and answer form, is a close look at the Ten Commandments case.

Q: Exactly what did the Kentucky law say?
A: Its main portion said, "It shall be the duty of the superintendent of public instruction, provided sufficient funds are available, to ensure that a durable, permanent copy of the Ten Commandments shall be displayed on a wall in each public elementary and secondary classroom in the commonwealth."

Q: Why did the Kentucky Legislature pass the law?
A: State legislators said they were not trying to advance any religious purpose. The law, passed in 1978, stated that each copy of the Ten Commandments should contain these words: "The secular application of the Ten Commandments is clearly seen in its adoption as the fundamental legal code of Western Civilization and the Common Law of the United States."

SO THE LEGISLATURE obviously tried to establish a non-religious base for the law. But the Supreme Court majority said the law's "pre-eminent purpose" was to induce schoolchildren to read and obey the Ten Commandments.

The court noted that the first several commandments "do not confine themselves to arguably secular matters such as honoring one's parents," but concern the religious duties of believers: worshiping the Lord God alone, avoiding idolatry, not using the Lord's name in vain and observing the Sabbath.

Q: Why did the Supreme Court find this to be objectionable?
A: The court said, "However desirable this might be as a matter of private devotion, it is not a permissible state objective under the Establishment Clause."

In past decisions, the court has been sensitive to official acts that seem to put a stamp of approval on religious expression. For example, its 1962 decision outlawing daily prayer sessions in public schools said, in part, "When the power, prestige and financial support of government is placed behind a particular religious belief, the indirect coercive pressure upon religious minorities to conform to the prevailing officially approved religion is plain."

Q: WHAT IF THE Kentucky law had not required the Ten Commandments be posted, but merely allowed them in those classrooms in which teachers or students wanted a copy of the Ten Commandments on the wall?
A: That, too, most likely would be ruled unconstitutional. It was not the compulsion of the Kentucky law that was found to violate the First Amendment but the official approval. That unconstitutional approval would not have come from the state Legislature. It could come from a teacher, who is a public employee.

If a majority of students voted to put the Ten Commandments on the wall, school officials' acquiescence could be viewed as "state action" also.

The 1962 decision outlawing daily prayer sessions struck down a New York law that did not compel students to participate in the praying. But the state approval — creating an official prayer — was ruled unconstitutional.

Q: Was that same rationale used for banning Bible reading in the schools?
A: Yes, but not all Bible reading was prohibited by the court's 1963 ruling. The ban covered Bible reading used purely for religious purposes.

In fact, the court's opinion in the Kentucky case alluded to its 1963 decision. "This is not a case in which the Ten Commandments are integrated into the school curriculum, where the Bible may constitutionally be used in an appropriate study of history, civilization, ethics, comparative religion or the like," the court said. Such "secular" use of the Bible presents no constitutional problem.

Q: Does that mean that the Ten Commandments are not totally banned from Kentucky schools?
A: THAT'S RIGHT. FOR example, teachers could tell students about the commandments during class discussions on ethics or comparative religion. That would be a "secular" use, not a religious one.

Q: How is a school district to know when it crosses the line into religious activities that violate the Constitution's freedom of religion guarantee?
A: Under current Supreme Court case law, a 1971 decision by the court is the most helpful guideline. In it, the court articulated a three-step test for determining whether a state law avoids such problems.

"First, the statute must have a secular legislative purpose; second, its principal or primary effect must be one that neither advances nor inhibits religion, and finally the statute must not foster an excessive government entanglement with religion," the 1971 opinion said.

Q: What specifically did the court say about Kentucky's law?
A: The court did not get beyond the first test. It said the Kentucky law "has no secular legislative purpose, and is therefore unconstitutional."

Q: Did the ruling break any new constitutional ground?
A: No.
Q: Could Congress step in and overcome the court's ruling?
A: No. The ruling was based on the court's interpretation of the Constitution, not some statute. Aside from the court's changing its opinion in a subsequent case, the only way to overcome the ruling would be to amend the Constitution.

Q: What does the striking down of Kentucky's law mean for other states?
A: The court's decision is binding on all states. Any state law requiring such postings now appears to be an easy target for a constitutional lawsuit.

Spill endangers motorists

REDDING, Calif. (AP) — A truck carrying a leaking electrical transformer leaked the toxic chemical PCB along a 20-mile stretch of Interstate 5 north of here Friday, the Highway Patrol reported.

The CHP advised motorists who might have been sprayed with the chemical to contact a doctor.

PCB — polychlorinated biphenyl — was used as an insulator in transformers, capacitors and other electrical components for decades. Its manufacture was banned in the United States after it was linked to skin and liver irritations. It also is suspected of causing cancer.

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — The Indians who lived in Ohio up until the 17th century may have cannibalized their enemies, a University of Toledo anthropologist says.

"We've found clear evidence of cannibalism at three sites between Waterville and Rossford," said Dr. William Strothers, associate professor of anthropology.

Because American Indians usually took great care in burying their dead, the discovery of skeletal remains of six people mixed with garbage pointed to cannibalism, Strothers said.

The cannibals also may have removed the bone marrow and brains of their victims. In the excavated remains were mostly long, narrow bones sliced in such a way that the marrow may have been removed, Strothers said.

And the skulls had been deliberately detached, possibly so the brains could be withdrawn, he said.

"Cannibalism among North American Indians is not as uncommon as most people think," Strothers said. "This is ritual cannibalism we're talking about. These people were quite able to meet their nutritional requirements through other methods."

The cannibals, who probably were eating their enemies to show contempt and to absorb such good qualities as bravery or cunning, lived near Toledo from 1400 until after 1600, he said.

They were part of a group generally known as the Sandusky Tradition that moved into northern Ohio after 1300, he said. More advanced than the Woodland Indians who also inhabited the area, they drove the Woodland Indians from the region by 1450.

One victim apparently died about 1616, according to carbon dating techniques. With the remains were glass beads made in the Netherlands, but Strothers does not believe the victim was European.

There are times when it may be difficult to sell property because of a large down payment requirement. One solution is for the seller to "take back" a purchase money mortgage in lieu of a portion of the down payment.

On the disadvantage side, you will, obviously, receive less "up front" cash than you normally would. Also you just carefully screen the buyer to assure he is a good credit risk.

The advantages are many. You can usually obtain a higher price for your property if you provide part of the financing; especially if money is tight. You can defer paying part of your capital gains tax until you actually receive your cash.

We're not saying that this is the best way to finance or the only way but if you want to sell your property NOW and you can't find a good risk buyer with the full down payment needed, it's an option to consider.

Weather delays cotton harvest

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent — Agriculture

The weather continues to delay cotton harvest. Enough has been said about the poor crop and crop conditions this year, so I'll utilize this space to encourage attendance at the Midland County Pecan Harvest Festival Dec. 2 at Midland Center.

Pecan show entries, food and craft show and exhibits will be open to the public all day. The Pecan Queen's Pageant is scheduled to start at 8 p.m. with auction of winning food items at intermissions.

Revised regulations are now in effect for control of brucellosis in cattle in Texas.

Texas' revised brucellosis control provides for a Class A control area and a Class B control area. The western half of the state, including Midland County, which is relatively free of brucellosis is in the Class A control area.

Nevertheless, there are many things livestock producers need to know about brucellosis and the new regulations and how they will affect their operations in the future.

Livestock producers may want the answers to the following questions: (1) Why is there a need for such a program? (2) Why is brucellosis so important to control? (3) How can I reduce the risk of buying brucellosis infected cattle? (4) How can I be assured that I may move my cattle freely to market in the future? (5) What are the regulations and effects of calfhood vaccination with reduced dosage of Strain 19 brucellosis vaccine?

The answers to these and other questions you might have concerning brucellosis and the new regulations will be given in a county beef cattle meeting at 8 p.m. Dec. 4 in the Roadrunner Room, Midland College.

Dr. Nelson Adams, area extension livestock specialist, and Texas Animal Health Commission Veterinarians, Dr. G. D. Lindsely and Dr. R. M. Zirkle will be on the program. Any interested livestock producer is welcome to attend.

Whether you are planting a pecan for its shade or nuts (or both), you can help assure its success by following proven directions. Plant bare root pecan trees from December through March and space them no closer than 35 feet apart in full sun. But only vigorous, fresh stock obtained from a reliable nursery. Shop for a tree with a 4- to 8-foot top. The scion should be a one-year-old on a three-year-old rootstock. Roots should be free from black knots, nematodes or drying out.

An important step in making sure the root system remains moist (not wet) from purchase to planting. If roots dry up, the tree will die.

Moisten the tree's packing medium and root system as soon as you get the tree home. Plant it immediately or place it in cold storage.

Before planting, remove all broken or twisted roots. Also, cut back one-third to one-half of the tree top at planting to compensate for root loss during digging.

Dig the hole deep and wide enough to accommodate the roots without bending them. Set the tree in at the same depth at which it grew in the nursery.

Fill the hole three-fourths full with water. Place tree in the hole with roots arranged naturally. Then add topsoil a shovel full at a time allowing soil to settle firmly around the roots, eliminating the possibility of air pockets. Do not place commercial fertilizer in the planting hole. Leave a basin around the tree to make watering easy.

Be sure to keep the root zone moist, especially during the first growing season. Treat the basin area with Roundup herbicide to control grass and weeds competing for water. Use Roundup in April, June and September. Wrap the lower 18 inches of the tree trunk with aluminum foil before applying Roundup to prevent herbicide injury.

During the first two growing seasons, allow all shoots above the aluminum foil to grow. Pinch back all shoots to 12 to 18 inches when they start vigorous growth in the spring except for a central leader, and keep them pinched back. This "trash trunk" method of training will protect the trunk from sunscald and wind damage and will also help the trunk to increase in diameter.

At the end of the second or third growing season the tree top should be able to shade the trunk enough so that lower branches can be removed. After five to six years, the lowest branch should be 5 to 6 feet above the ground.

Computer age evident in new greeting cards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three years ago Santa virtually quit the tennis court to straddle a moped for delivery of his Christmas gifts. This year, the jolly emissary from the North Pole has not only returned to tennis, but he's swinging five-irons and burning up the road runner's circuit.

That, in brief, is an overview of one phase of trends in this year's Christmas greeting cards. Lest anyone think of Santa solely as a sports buff, he has also taken to digital computers and satellite communications. Inevitably, the message he transmits is one of "Season's Greetings."

These are among the findings of a survey by the National Association of Greeting Card Publishers, a 55-member association of the major greeting card publishers in the United States, with headquarters in Washington, D.C.

"Greeting cards do reflect lifestyles," said Norman S. Halliday, executive vice president of the publishers' association. "Sometimes these styles are cyclical — like the return of interest in tennis. Events like the Wimbledon and the U.S. Tennis Open, with their extensive media coverage, stimulate mass interest in given sports. This also pertains to media coverage of golf championships and road-running races like the New York, Boston and San Francisco marathons."

"Tennis, golf and marathon running, unlike professional football or baseball, are participant events for a vast number of people throughout the country. These sports have become a way of life for thousands of amateur athletes. Thus, these lifestyles are reflected in Christmas greeting cards."

Halliday noted that the increasing use of computer systems, data processing and satellite communication has firmly implanted Santa in these areas. The country's search for energy sources is also reflected in this year's cards. One portrays an offshore oil-drilling rig topped with a Christmas tree. Another shows Santa rowing a boatload of gifts to the drilling crews.

America's zest for the culinary arts is depicted in many cards that are almost redolent of the sugar, spice and herbs of holiday seasonings. One such is an imaginative Christmas tree fashioned from a big pot, Chinese wok, pepper mill, wire whisks, loaf pan, rolling pin, food processor, baking and soufflé dishes, espresso pot and spaghetti machine.

Halliday reports that the traditional religious themes of Madonna and Child, the nativity and the Wise Men at the manger continue unabated in their popularity. Many are the work of well-known artists whose styles range from realistic to abstract and impressionistic renderings.

In the area of "personalized greeting cards," on which the name of the sender is imprinted, those available this year include the symbols for the professions of medicine, dentistry, pharmacy, architecture, law, optometry, engineering and science.

To commemorate the holiday season, the U.S. Postal Service has issued two Christmas postage stamps, one a Madonna and Child taken from a stained-glass window in the Washington Cathedral, and the other a vignette of toys beneath a wreath in a sunlit window.

Halliday, who served as an assistant postmaster general before joining the greeting-card publishers four years ago, had this cheerful note to add: "Despite the inflationary trends of the past year, a Christmas greeting card can still be sent for only 15 cents."

Kurtz still wielding baton at 80

By ROBERT WIELAARD

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — In 1976, a Swiss doctor told Efreim Kurtz to quit working after a sudden bout with sciatica had forced the Russian-born American conductor to direct the Tokyo Philharmonic from a chair.

Then 78 years old, Kurtz merrily ignored the advice, which pleased a British physician whom he saw shortly afterward.

"You know, Efreim," Kurtz recalls the second physician as saying, "this Swiss doctor was absolutely right, of course. But if you have to collapse, I want you to collapse on a concert stage."

Kurtz relates the story with glee in an interview.

"So that is what I'm waiting for, I guess," he chuckles, plopping back into the cushioned comfort of his hotel-suite sofa.

Quitting is the last thing on the mind of Kurtz, who has just turned 80. He began a globe-spanning conducting career at the age of 21 with the Berlin Philharmonic and on the eve of his recent birthday he guest-conducted Belgium's National Orchestra.

He works a schedule that is booked two to three years in advance and the 6-footer's engagements take him all over the world. His 1980 travels included the United States, Mexico, Italy and South Africa.

Looking back on his 60 years behind the baton, Kurtz, who looks much younger than his years, does not exclude fate as a major contributor to his successes.

"You have to have luck," he ends the story of how he rose from third to first conductor — practically overnight — of Monte Carlo's famous Ballets Russes of Serge de Diaghilev in 1933.

As the ballet's third conductor, he was dispatched to London to prepare for a performance on July 4 of that year at the Royal Opera House in Covent Garden. Visa problems prevented the first and second conductors from reaching England.

"At 4 p.m. of the day of the performance I was told to conduct," recalls Kurtz. On July 5 he woke up to rave reviews and two days later he was appointed first conductor.

That same year, he came to the United States with the ballet. He would stay until 1955 working with such orchestras as the New York Philharmonic and the NBC, San Francisco, Cleveland and Chicago symphonies.

One day in 1937, luck was with him again when, while rummaging through some dusty scores in a New York shop, Kurtz found a piece he liked on sight. He recorded it with the New York Philharmonic and to date more than 3 million copies of the work have been sold. The piece was the Sabre Dance and the recording made its composer, Aram Katchaturian, famous.

After World War II, Kurtz became the musical director of the Kansas City Symphony, where he met Elaine Schaffer, generally recognized as one of the world's two or three best flutists, male or female. They were married in 1955.

Despite his age and the size of his repertoire, he conducts by heart and insists on much rehearsing — often as many as seven three-hour sessions.

Kurtz has lived in Europe since the mid-1950s. The Kurtzes lived for many years in a chalet in the Swiss resort community of Gstaad, but after the death of his wife a few years ago at the age of 47, Kurtz took up residence in Monaco, where the climate is friendlier.

"Somehow, I don't feel 80 years old," says Leningrad-born Kurtz. "My brain is still working the way it did 20 years ago. In fact, I feel I'm working better now than ever before. I'm not as nervous as I used to be."

Fast food surrounded by riches

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Hungry people who walk into Nicholas Janikies' restaurant first feast their eyes — on 10-foot glass-paneled doors from an Atlanta mansion, a fireplace from a Philadelphia townhouse and a $6,000 lead crystal chandelier.

Then they order Whoppers on plastic trays. Janikies spent $250,000 to make the inside of his Burger King restaurant look like a swank Victorian-era saloon. The trash bin is solid oak trimmed with mahogany. The floors are teak parquet with wool carpets. The walls are covered with custom-built solid mahogany panels and bookshelves.

Janikies calls his Bankers Quarters restaurant the Burger King of the 1990s.

"I must be an egotist. I wanted this corner to have a landmark for Burger King in downtown Providence," says Janikies, the owner of 26 other Burger Kings in Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Vermont.

"I would love people to say, 'Wow, how did he do it?'" He did it by spending as much on the decor alone as most franchisees spend to open the doors of a standard Burger King.

"The old theory of the fast food business was you didn't want people to be too comfortable," says Janikies. "You want people to have their food and leave in 20 minutes."

When the restaurant opened last summer, noontime diners were given leaflets urging them not to linger too long so others could savor the atmosphere.

But loungers are welcome during the mid-afternoon lull.

"I didn't even get anything to eat. I just bought a Coke and sat down to read the paper," says William Richmond of Providence.

Mary Perrino of Cranston comes in every day after work for a cup of coffee and, sometimes, a hot dog.

"I come for the food and it's a beautiful place to relax in," she says. "I tell everybody about it."

While Janikies' Bankers Quarters has earned him a reputation in the fast food business, it was not the first franchise to go beyond the norm.

"I've been doing this since 1971," says Daniel Murray, owner of 12 Burger Kings in New Hampshire. "I think this is going to be a trend. I think as the competitive conditions tighten up, people will be looking for a way to differentiate themselves from the masses."

Murray built a Burger King on the shore of Lake Winnepesaukee with big windows for the view and a dock for passing boaters.

"We tried to build in a certain atmosphere," he says. "If a fellow uses redwood instead of just red wood, and the guy across the street is running a white tile hamburger stand, he is in an excellent competitive position.

"I think all the major outlets, particularly Burger King and McDonald's, are — as the saying goes — putting a lot of effort into removing the 'stand' from hamburger stand."

Janikies says he has hired the man who designed Bankers Quarters to upgrade his other restaurants but quickly added he will not go to those extremes again.

While Burger King's $1.5 billion in gross sales last year trailed the $5.4 billion of McDonalds and $2 billion of Kentucky Fried Chicken, the Pillsbury subsidiary was alone in posting real growth and is catching up in sales per restaurant, says Paul Reinhard, manager of Burger King corporate relations.

Nicholas W. Janikies sits in the lavish interior of his Burger King restaurant in downtown Providence, R.I. Janikies, the owner of this and 26 other Burger King outlets in New England, spent $250,000 for the Victorian-style interior decoration. (AP Laserphoto)

Culture festival planned

CHICAGO (AP) — Mayor Jane Byrne has approved tentative plans for a month-long culture festival during the summer of 1982, officials say.

George Spink of the mayor's office of special events said Thursday the city intends to invite orchestras, choirs, ballet companies and other artistic groups from around the world to perform at the festival.

Spink emphasized the project is still in the planning stage and that no contracts have been signed. He said

Mrs. Byrne gave the go-ahead for further work on the project on Wednesday.

The city will seek financing for the festival from the National Endowment for the Arts and other agencies as well as private groups, Spink said.

"We want to establish Chicago as an international city," Spink said. "Too many people, particularly overseas, just think of Chicago as Al Capone's town."

Fairy tale prices entice many

By LINDA TRUITT
Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin, Inc.

Fairy tales of "too good to be true" prices not only entice consumers, but businesspeople as well.

With operating expenses steadily rising, those who are in charge of purchasing for businesses are also looking for bargains. As a result, questionable office and stationery supply companies are preying on businesses trying to sell everything from light bulbs to typewriter ribbons.

A company that is engaged in an office supply scheme is probably in operation if the salesman uses any of the following in his sales pitch:

1. The supplier is in distress. He is being forced to liquidate stock, someone made a mistake, or the merchandise was shipped to the wrong address and he needs someone to help him out.
2. He is vague about the location of the store.
3. He casually states the Chairman of the Board, corporate treasurer or other office suggested you be contacted.
4. He does not have a sales catalogue which can be mailed to you.
5. He wants a decision right now.

Those who have placed orders over the telephone after listening to a sales pitch have complained to the Better Business Bureau that often the merchandise they received was of substandard quality, and not the brand-name as stated by the salesman. Businesses have also complained that shipments have arrived containing merchandise in larger quantities than ordered. In these cases, the supply company will not accept the return of the merchandise, stating that "there must have been a misunderstanding."

A few companies will eliminate the sales pitch and send unsolicited merchandise through the mail. It is hoped the bookkeeper will not question the invoice and pay the bill.

If unsolicited goods are received and addressed to or intended for the recipient, by law the business can consider the shipment a gift. Or, the business has the right to refuse to accept delivery, and the goods will be sent back to the supplier.

In order to protect yourself against office supply rackets, do not buy from a new supplier until you have verified his existence and reliability, particularly where you have been contacted by phone.

Also, instruct employees to refuse to accept the delivery of unsolicited goods. If by mistake, the goods are accepted, send a certified letter to the company explaining your position and how you expect the company to settle the matter.

If you want information concerning a company soliciting orders for office supplies, or if you have been victimized by an office supply scheme contact your Better Business Bureau at 683-1880.

Indians say U.S. using 'divide and conquer' plan

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — American Indians accused the United States of operating a "divide and conquer" campaign to decrease their numbers and deprive them of their land.

"It is a simple process of conquest, division, control and manipulation," said Herbert Blatchford, a lawyer arguing the Navajo case before the fourth Bertrand Russell Tribunal.

The tribunal, made up of 12 scholars from Western Europe and the Americas, is meeting through Saturday to hear cases of alleged mistreatment of Indian tribes in Canada, Peru, Colombia, Brazil and the United States.

It has no power to enforce its verdict. The hearings are sponsored by the Dutch Workgroup Indian Project and the Bertrand Russell Peace Foundation, named after the British philosopher who died in 1970. Earlier tribunals have dealt with allegations of U.S. war crimes in Vietnam and political repression in Latin America and West Germany.

Hopi and Navajo speakers both told the tribunal Thursday that their tribal councils, created under the 1934 Indian Reorganization Act, worked as tools of white interests to "divide and conquer" the tribes and destroy the traditional values of their people.

John Redhouse, a Navajo leader, said private U.S. firms are seeking approval through the councils to mine 21 million tons of high-grade coal under the Black Mesa reservation used by Hopis and Navahos in Arizona. He said mining companies also have mapped out uranium claims in the region even though open piles of uranium tailings from past operations and the current coal mining have caused numerous health and environmental problems.

Another Navaho, Roberta Blackgoat, claimed the government had partitioned what had been a joint use area for Hopis and Navahos in an attempt to sow differences between the tribes. The government program gave half the land to each tribe and required the resettlement of about 6,000 persons.

Phyllis Young, a Sioux Indian who heads the Women of All Red Nations organization, said the U.S. government has successfully used sterilizations under the guise of family planning to stop the growth of the American Indian population. She said, for example, that sterilizations occur at a rate of four a week on the Sioux Pine Ridge reservation, encouraged by the government.

Blatchford said every case presented to the week-long tribunal session offered evidence of similar exploitation of native Indian tribes by governments and corporations.

"This is a repeating pattern. We see now that there must be international cooperation to protect these people from genocide."

The developer of this replica of a frontier town hopes to attract tourists, adventures, resort property buyers and Western movie-makers. Lajitas is located on the Rio Grande just west of the Big Bend National Park. (AP Laserphoto)

Restored town isn't just 'hick'

LAJITAS, Texas (AP) — When you enter the saloon in this remote West Texas town on the Rio Grande and ask questions of a tall man in a cowboy hat, you may be relieved that he does not fire shots into the floor around your feet and say, "Dance, stranger!"

Instead, more than likely he'll smile and direct you to the town's chief of public relations.

For despite its small size and obscure location, Lajitas is no hick town where cowboys come to drink hard liquor and chase loose women. "We couldn't be considered hicks," says Ray Mimier, the town's director of public relations.

Old West towns may not have needed PR men in Wyatt Earp's time, but Wyatt Earp didn't drop more than $12 million to attract visitors to Dodge City like wealthy Houston investor Walter Mischer has done here.

"The whole town is built on the premise of a Western movie set," says Mimier, and although the town itself has not yet been used in a movie, the production crew of the film "Barbarosa" starring Willie Nelson lived here while filming in the surrounding countryside in September and October.

Mischer, a Houston millionaire who bought the entire community of nine persons and 1,280 acres from rancher Rex Ivey back in 1959, could not have picked a more appropriate place to satisfy his lusts for a 19th Century Western fantasy.

Lajitas, formerly a smugglers' rendezvous point, is located on the Texas side of the Rio Grande on the western edge of the Big Bend National Park, between Contrabando Canyon and the Rattlesnake Mountains.

Since he bought it, Mischer has restored a small church and an opry house, turned an old Army fort into a motel that still looks like an old fort and built 13 condominiums and a replica of an Old West town, complete with an old fashioned hotel that charges modern day rates of $30 a night. Mischer did not have to do anything to the century-old trading post.

Grande just west of the Big Bend National Park. (AP Laserphoto)

Tourists can buy cowboy boots and other Western wear in the dry goods store, clomp up and down the genuine boardwalk, ride horses in the mountains and drink "red-eye" in the "Badlands Saloon."

Mimier says visitors who tire of playing cowboy can hike into the wilderness, ride rafts or canoes down the Rio Grande, lie in the sun or frolic in the Lajitas swimming pool.

Wait a minute. Doc Holliday didn't get to relax in a swimming pool after he helped clean up Tombstone.

"What can I tell you — it's not really part of the Western motif," Mimier conceded. "But the perimeter of the pool is made of natural fieldstone, local to the area."

Mimier said the population of Lajitas has risen to 30 permanent residents, mostly people whose jobs are linked to the tourist trade, and it is still growing. Bulldozers and construction workers were erecting new $24,000 to $35,000 condominiums as Mimier spoke. Residential lots go for $2,200 to $8,500, depending on the size and the view.

Of the 13 condominiums built so far, five have been sold and the others are in a "rent pool," Mimier said.

"This is Walter Mischer's personal project and he wants to make this the Palm Springs of Texas," Mischer Corp. literature compares the restoration here to that in colonial Williamsburg, Va.

A Mischer Corp. press kit on Lajitas described it as having "a brawling, lusty history shot through with shoot-ups, shoot-outs, lynchings, Indian massacres, outlaws on the run, damsels in distress, Mexican revolutions..."

Visitors to the trading post, run by Bill Ivey, son of the rancher who sold this land to Mischer more than 20 years ago, often ask about the pockmarks on the adobe wall inside the historic structure. They look like bullet holes.

RINGING THE BELL

Black Pages, phone directory will keep black money in sight

By REV. BOB TIEUEL

According to one bellringer in the Dallas area — Ms. D.M. — if Raleigh Scott has his way, some Dallas businesses will be "in the black" for a long, long time. He is talking about keeping them in the Black Pages, a telephone directory of Dallas businesses owned by blacks.

Recently more than 80,000 homes received the free directory in the Dallas area. Scott says that he hopes eventually to include a Texas size black directory of black businesses, he says.

Isn't an all-black telephone directory mildly discriminatory? Scott says no. "Our goal is to try to reintroduce blacks with black business. Look at our target market — black businesses and consumers. That's why it's not a segregated publication. Later, white businesses may be included, but only if they are located in a black community. "We are just trying to keep the black dollar circulating in the black community," Scott adds.

"A lot of businesses in the black community have been lost as a result of white owned businesses there," Scott says, and "lack of advertising on the part of black businesses has been one of the major reasons why."

Scott continues, "Chuck Levering, manager of directory sales for Southwestern Bell, told me that the price for a half-page ad in the yellow pages is $12,264 in the Dallas area. The price for a half-page ad in the black pages is $825.50. What we are doing is offering the black small business man a chance to let people know what he has to offer and where he is."

Scott admits that many of the most successful of the black business places did not go along with the directory in its first year of publication, but when we get a track record, it will be a different story, he believes.

"There may be as many as 5,000 black-owned businesses in Dallas, but there is just no way of knowing for sure," Scott concludes. He already has started work on the 1981 edition. The 1980 team found 3,000 businesses operating in Dallas. Interested? Write Scott in care of Metroplex News, 1912 Forest Ave., Dallas, Texas, 75215.

Police Chief Anthony V. Bouza of Minneapolis in 1976, while other police chiefs were crying manpower shortage which forced New York to cut 5,000 cops, said more police should be eliminated, especially the psychos, criminals and unfit. He blamed poverty and other social ills for the high crime rate among young blacks and Hispanics, and was active for many years in the Fresh Air Fund, which aimed to address some of those problems. He is 51 and is author of six books, including two novels.

Gail Benjamin, 24, and her brother, Vaughn, 21, are unique members of a unique class, the first to include women since the Air Force Academy was founded in 1957 in Colorado.

The Benjamins also are the first brother and sister to be accepted into pilot training school. Gail said she was recruited by her brother, Phillip, 27, who was a recruiter for the Air Force Academy.

Strangler wanted help

BOSTON (AP) — Albert DeSalvo, the confessed Boston Strangler who terrorized the city almost two decades ago, says in a newly released tape that he wanted psychiatric help to find out why he killed.

DeSalvo was never tried for the 13 strangler killings, which occurred between 1962 and 1964. He was stabbed to death in 1973 at Walpole State Prison, where he was serving a sentence for sex offenses.

In tapes obtained by WNAC-TV in Boston, DeSalvo said, "They build you up into a gory type of a creature. Yet something happened to me. Yet what happened to me?"

"I wanted to be placed in a hospital. Not to be free. I wasn't worried about being free. I only wanted to understand what made Albert DeSalvo be what he is."

The station will air brief segments from the tapes Sunday night as part of a profile of DeSalvo on its new "More" TV magazine show.

The station said it obtained the tapes, which DeSalvo made in 1968, from a lawyer. The station declined to identify its source.

According to the tapes, DeSalvo said an examination of his mental condition might help other people.

"Some idea might be gotten out of what happened to me... If this will help only one, we've accomplished something," he said. "There are many out there. There are fathers and some there that are Albert DeSalvos at a given time."

Armed Forces News

Navy Equipment Constructionman David Robinson Jr., son of Ola M. and David Robinson Sr. of Andrews, has been deployed to the island of Diego Garcia in the Indian Ocean.

He is a member of Naval Mobile Construction Battalion (NMCB)-40, based at Port Hueneme, Calif.

Having been on the island since July, NMCB-40 has finished several projects started by a construction battalion previously deployed there. The projects include a power plant expansion, a high-explosive magazine site, and the first phase of an air cargo terminal. They are currently engaged in a utilities distribution project which includes electrical, water and sewage lines, a galley, and a petroleum, oil and lubrication storage facility.

The battalion is expected to return home in March 1981.

A 1979 graduate of Andrews High School, Robinson joined the Navy in May 1979.

John R. Lee, a native of Midland, and veteran of 15 years U.S. Army service, has been promoted from Sergeant 1st Class to Master Sergeant.

Sergeant Lee, son of Mrs. Vurelice McDavid of 1707 E. Wall St., is a 1964 graduate of Carver High School. He attended Odessa Junior College prior to joining the Army in 1965 to become a paratrooper. He served two combat tours in Vietnam where he was awarded the Bronze Star and the Purple Heart.

Lee became a U.S. Army recruiter in 1973, serving the New York City area for five years. His outstanding performance there earned him two Army Commendation Medals and recognition as "Soldier of the Year" for his district in both 1977 and 1978.

Master Sergeant Lee is now assigned to the Army's District Recruiting Command in Charlotte, N.C. where he resides with his wife Ruby and two children.

Staff Sergeant Ray H. Nelson distinguished himself by meritorious service as Noncommissioned Officer in Charge of Refueling Maintenance Section, 24th Transportation Squadron, Howard Air Force Base, Panama, from March 18, 1977 to March 18, 1980.

During this period, he served with great distinction in a job of significant importance to the primary mission of the 24th Composite Wing. He displayed dedication, know-how and professionalism of the highest caliber in accomplishing a myriad of significant projects which enhanced the mission support capability of his unit. The distinctive accomplishments of Nelson reflect credit upon himself and the United States Air Force.

Nelson is currently stationed in England and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlee Nelson, 1704 E. California, Midland.

Spec. 4 Douglas C. Bentley, son of Ruth A. Bentley of Midland, has graduated from a U.S. Army primary leadership course at Fort Riley, Kan.

Bentley is a track vehicle mechanic at Fort Riley.

Spec. 4 Luis Patino, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ismael Patino of Garden City, has graduated from a U.S. Army primary leadership course at Fort Benning, Ga.

Patino is a dental laboratory technician at Fort Benning.

Spec. 5 Gilberto Cisneros, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilberto Cisneros Sr. of Big Spring, has been awarded the Good Conduct Medal for exemplary conduct while in the active military service of the United States at Schwaebisch-Smuend, West Germany.

Experimental robot to get safety device

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — An experimental robot that ran amok in a University of Florida laboratory and started bashing into lab equipment will be rigged with a safety device before being allowed back to work, a mechanical engineering graduate student says.

Harvey Lipkin, 29, was at the controls when the robot began slamming itself into a support stand before he could turn the device off.

No one was near the five-foot-long, 70-pound robot during the accident, which occurred a few weeks ago but was made public this week, Lipkin said.

"We are going to install an elementary safety device so at least if it rams into its stand, it will shut off," he said.

"This incident has pointed out to us the dramatic need for robotic safety devices. As of now, there's really no way to prevent an injury if there is a failure."

The $50,000 robot, which resembles a human arm, suffered a sheared shoulder. The arm has since been repaired, but the robot won't be used until the safety device is installed.

The robotic arms are "essentially very stupid devices" and have no real sensing ability, Lipkin explained.

"Like any mechanical device, they do malfunction. That's why safety devices have to be built in," he said.

Constructed for research purposes, it is similar to robots used in manufacturing processes and for "things where the human can be replaced," Lipkin said.

Teens fight in Legion's land

By SUSAN LINNIE
Associated Press Writer

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — On many maps this town is still Fort Lamy, evoking scenes of foreign legionnaires defending the northern reaches of what the French called Equatorial Africa.

Until 18 months ago, it was a sleepy capital of 180,000 people who went about their business on the banks of the Chari River as a civil strife swept the rest of the country.

Today it is all but abandoned, a battlefield where teen-age boys dash from house to house, firing automatic weapons at other young men they often cannot see.

Many Chadians and a few Europeans who once lived here now stand across the river in Kousseri, Cameroon, listening to the clatter of machine guns and the thud of mortars.

They know former Defense Minister Hissene Habre is fighting President Goukouni Oueddei for control of their town. But they are less clear about events that caused them to flee their homes in March to settle in the village once known as Fort Fourau, the scene of Gary Cooper's adventures in "Beau Geste."

Before independence in 1960, France had kept the traditional factional fighting well under control. But in 1963, battles erupted between Christian and animist southerners, who controlled most of the administration and the single political party, and the Moslem northerners, angered at their subordinate position.

Although lines have become blurred and rhetoric more and more confusing, the fight first pitted south against north. But since 1979 north-erners have been fighting among themselves.

For all practical purposes the south is now an autonomous region in a country where government records lie scattered on floors of ransacked buildings in which Goukouni's estimated 1,500 fighters camp out.

The situation in Chad poses a serious threat of destabilization for some of its neighbors.

In the Central African Republic, President David Dacko's government is still struggling with the wreck left by the overthrow of Emperor Bokassa I; in Cameroon, President Amadou Ahidjo is dealing with tension among the various ethnic groups whose tribal and religious differences are similar to those of Chad; and Niger's large Toubou minority in the eastern part of the territory keeps in close contact with their brothers in Chad and Libya.

The U.S. Defense Department in Washington recently said intelligence indicated 4,000 Libyan troops were fighting alongside Goukouni's Popular Armed Forces (FAP) in central and southern Chad. The capital lies on the western border, halfway between the north and south.

Reporters who walked through FAP-controlled combat zones — where bougainvillea bushes twine through shattered automobiles — saw no signs of Libyans.

Following the Defense Department statement, Goukouni was quoted over Guinean radio as saying he had never asked for Libyan help.

"Who killed that rebel over there lying in his eternal rest?" asked an FAP officer known as Commander Bachri, pointing to the body of one of Habre's men killed when the FAP retook the strategic police barracks. "He knows it wasn't a Libyan."

However, French sources say they have evidence of a Libyan air base about 38 miles north of N'Djamena.

"The situation in Chad constitutes a grave preoccupation for the French government," the Foreign Ministry said in a statement. "The arrival of important armed elements from abroad give a new dimension to a civil war (in Chad)... France is in contact on this subject with the African countries which are, like it, preoccupied by the worsening of the situation."

In Kousseri more than 100,000 Chadian refugees line up in their United Nations and Cameroonian administered camp for food rations.

Officials from the U.N. High Commission for Refugees say the camp is "not bad" compared to those in Somalia and Southeast Asia. Refugees have swelled the population of Kousseri and Cameroonian authorities are concerned that the conflict may spill over into their country.

Chad's neighbors — Libya, Sudan, Central African Republic, Cameroon, Nigeria and Niger — have periodically tried to arrange cease-fires, none of which has held.

On Sunday, seven members of the Organization of African Unity, meeting in Lome, Togo, issued a call for another cease-fire, to which Goukouni reportedly agreed. Habre's position was not known.

A few French military observers remain in Kousseri, remnants of an expeditionary force that pulled out of here in May after protecting the evacuation of Europeans and Chadians.

There are also some U.S. diplomatic personnel in Kousseri, several of whom were attached to the embassy here until it was evacuated in March.

Nearly all agree that the battle lines have remained almost static since fighting broke out eight months ago.

Workers on final stage of protection from sea

By MURRAY SEEGER
The Los Angeles Times

THE HAGUE, Netherlands — Every day, 1,200 workers cross a three-and-a-half-mile long bridge to reach a man-made island where they work on the final stage of this country's most ambitious project to control its traditional enemy, the North Sea.

The bridge alone cost Dutch taxpayers $40 million, and it is used only by the workers. In all, the project will cost at least $5 billion, and other millions will go into ancillary elements of the effort to protect this low, flat region from the sea.

When the Delta Project is finished, in 1985, the Netherlands will have no new land; no new economic resources will have been created. But the 350,000 residents of Zeeland, the country's most remote region, will be safe from the sea for the first time.

"We Dutch have learned to live below sea level," Cornelius Fisher, director of the Delta Project, said, "but we have never learned to live under water."

For 700 years or more, the Dutch have battled the sea to save their land or to create new land. The most recent projects have taken on urgency because the region is sinking.

Half of the Netherlands is below sea level and 60 percent of its 14 million people live in the western region, which includes the lowest area.

Living with the sea forced the Dutch long ago to develop skills unique in the world. Most of the country is a tribute to hydraulic engineering, but the Delta Project has forced the development of even more advanced skills and technology.

"Nothing like this has ever been attempted before," Fisher said.

The delta area is the region between Rotterdam, the world's largest seaport and Antwerp, Belgium, another major seaport to the south.

Through this flat, green, marshy region three major rivers — the Rhine, the Meuse and the Scheldt — flow through many channels to the sea.

Farms dot the fingers of land, and in the sandy estuaries fish farmers raise mussels and oysters that are sold all across Europe.

Isolated by the water barriers, Zeeland is as close to a wilderness as can be found in Europe's most crowded country. The Netherlands is about the size of Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island combined, with 40 percent more people.

The need to do something about the delta region became obvious in 1953, when disastrous floods swept over its 400 miles of dikes, killed 1,850 people and ruined thousands of acres of farmland.

"That was a storm that was supposed to occur only once every 350 years," Fisher said.

Dutch scientists have long studied the sea; in 1902 two of them, Henrik A. Lorenz and Pieter Zeeman, won a Nobel Prize in physics for their work on wave action.

Building on the early research, other experts worked out mathematical predictions for storms and tidal waves. But the 1953 storm was not expected.

In its aftermath, the Dutch Parliament authorized studies to provide permanent protection for Zeeland. The concept of raising the dikes even higher was dismissed and after many studies it was agreed to close off the region with mammoth seawalls.

The precedent for this was the famous Zuider Zee program that was started in 1930. Across the northern entrance to what had been an inland branch of the North Sea, the Dutch built a dam 20 miles long.

Behind the dam, four sections of land, called polders, were created as sea water was pumped out. On the new land, new towns and new farms were developed.

The last polder was dried in 1968, making a total of more than 400,000 acres of new land. More than 50,000 people have been settled there. One planned polder has been left incomplete, partly because of the cost of development and partly because the demand for new farmland has diminished.

The Delta Project is far more complex and difficult. It will shorten the Dutch coastline by 440 miles. Wave damage is expected to be halted and new sources of water developed.

Housing industry on verge of yet another crunch

By GLENN RITT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The already-battered housing industry appears on the verge of yet another crunch, the result of ever-rising mortgage rates. And there is mounting concern that help is far, far away as economic strategies shift to efforts to "reindustrialize" America.

While homebuyers and builders may be frustrated and frazzled, the problems of high interest rates and unaffordable houses appear to have a lower priority in official Washington than the shaky future of troubled industries, the nation's waning productivity and costly regulations.

"Retooling American industry may be in conflict with housing for the time being," says Louis H. Nevins, chief Washington lobbyist for the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks. "Housing will continue having a tough time competing for limited capital."

But Nevins adds: "It's not necessarily the wrong decision to go the industrial route."

And Anthony Downs, a housing economist at the Brookings Institution, says the tough times for housing may not be as bad as some distressed builders and lenders claim.

Downs suggests that the housing industry for years has attracted more capital than it should, crowding out investment in more productive areas.

He argues that much of the money channeled into housing has fed speculation, which in turn dramatically inflated home prices.

"It is not that the United States is building too much housing," he says.

"The point is that we are providing too much money to finance housing."

The tax advantages of home ownership are overwhelming, he says, particularly compared with the benefits for investing in stocks and bonds.

A person can sell a house and avoid a huge capital gains tax by acquiring another residence. This option is not open to someone investing in a small business, even though these firms provide most of the nation's innovation and jobs, Downs points out.

He calculates that between 1966 and 1971, 16 percent of all capital raised by non-financial sectors went into housing. By 1977, the amount jumped to 28.5 percent.

In addition, total mortgage financing has risen much more sharply than all costs of building new homes. What this means, Downs says, is that an influx of capital sharply inflates housing prices without adding to its supply.

This inflation takes on a life of its own. People divert savings from more productive areas such as stocks and bonds to purchase over-priced homes. They're convinced that this investment will appreciate faster, and this belief becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy, Downs explains.

The trend is illustrated by these figures: In the 1960s, about 1.7 new or existing homes were sold each year for every new household formed. By the 1970s, this ratio had grown to 2.3 to 1.

"Our current huge investment in housing finance is often justified by references to demographic trends," such as a growing adult population, Downs says.

DEAR HELOISE

I just want to share with you some of the praise and glory we're both receiving for a biscuit mix recipe you had in your column.

For Christmas last year I filled large mouthed jars with the mix, then taped the recipe and baking directions on the jars. I topped each off with a pretty ribbon.

These mixes were delivered along with a jar of home made jelly or apple butter.

You won't believe the compliments and thanks I was still receiving two months later. Some folks were on their second or third refill. One recipient blamed his expanded waistline on my delicious biscuits.

This gift pleased both men and women of all ages — from bachelor to senior citizen, to large and small families.

So you can see why I'm excited, and must share with you, and to especially say a big "thank you" for the recipe.

Rose Kinscherff

kind words, but you did all the work.

Guess it wouldn't be fair to go on about these delicious biscuits without sharing the recipe with those who might have missed it.

Just mix together eight cups flour, one-third cup baking powder, two teaspoons salt and eight teaspoons sugar (optional). Cut in one cup shortening with a pastry blender to a very fine consistency.

This mixture will stay fresh on your pantry shelf for quite awhile, but it'll stay fresh for months if you keep it in the refrigerator.

To make the biscuits, just add one-third cup milk to every cup of biscuit mix. Mix well, and either drop on a greased pan, or roll out on a floured board and cut. Bake at 425 degrees until lightly browned.

This mix is also great for coffee cake and pancakes.

JUST A LITTLE BIT CONFUSING

DEAR HELOISE:
Heal the heels! I have been reading your hints for a long time now and finally I have one of my own.
My mom's heels were all worn out, so I went to my crayon box and found a crayon the same color as the heels.
Now, all I had to do was color in the cracks. Results: good as new!

Christie Noll, Age 9

You threw me for a loop for a minute! Our English language does leave room for misinterpretation.
Got a good chuckle, though, reading it one way when you meant another. Hope your mom's enjoying her good as new "shoes."

SOCKO TIP FOR DOLLY'S WARDROBE

DEAR HELOISE:
I just discovered a neat way to make doll clothes for small costume dolls.
I took an old sock that didn't have a match and cut off the foot.
Then I put the top part of the sock on the doll and tied a ribbon around her waist. It makes a good sundress and is very pretty.
Oh, yes!... Be sure to ask Mom if you can use the sock! Your friend,

Michelle Gibb

Thanks, friend...

TURKEY TREAT

DEAR HELOISE:
Some years ago we had a big turkey for Christmas, and as usual, a lot of leftovers.

We had turkey sandwiches, turkey salad and still plenty left. I was going through my cookbook, trying to find something different, and when I got to the chicken section I stopped, staring me in the face was a recipe for chicken croquettes.

If it's good with chicken, I thought why not turkey. Why, it was so tasty that for the past 21 years my family, relatives and in-laws have used it, plus passed it on to their friends.

R. Beasley
Now aren't you a smartie, and what cookbook doesn't have a recipe for croquettes! Just be sure and grate or grind the meat.

TWO ATTA TIME

DEAR HELOISE:

For extra wear of old pantyhose, wear two pairs, one over the other, under slacks. Runs will not be as evident, gives extra warmth on cold days, helps hold the tummy in, and cuts down on constant stocking replacement.

Eleanor Christmas
You must be very popular this time of year with your last name!

But you're tops in my book all year long, and I love you for writing.

LETTER OF THOUGHT

DEAR HELOISE:
A little boy was once told by his mother that it is God who makes people good.

He looked up and replied, "Yes, I know it's God, but mothers help a lot!"

Ara Lee Doty
Little things like that make it all worth while, huh! Heloise

BEAUTY BAG

DEAR HELOISE:
I use the little plastic bag soft-soled slippers come in to hold cosmetics.

The bag I have has a clear front for easy viewing of the contents, and holds six different articles, including a brush. With a handy snap closure it's turned out to be the best cosmetic case I've ever had.

WASHED ASHORE AFTER THE FLOOD WATERS SUBSIDE — STEVE AWAKENS TO FIND THE DAUGHTER OF QUEEN SNOWFLOWER... WHO SAYS HE IS HER FATHER !!

PRINCESS SNOW BLOSSOM, I MUST JUST ASK YOU TO TAKE MY WORD FOR IT...

I AM FLATTERED BY THE THOUGHT, BUT I AM NOT YOUR FATHER!

BUT MY BEAUTIFUL MOTHER SAID —

AH, PERHAPS MY TUTOR CAN HELP ME TO EXPLAIN — AH —

CANYON, SIRE, HER HIGHNESS THE QUEEN SENT US INTO THE MOUNTAINS TO ELUDE THE REDS COMING TO TAKE OVER DAMMA...

PRINCESS SNOW BLOSSOM NEVER KNEW HER FATHER, THE PRINCE CONSORT, WHO WAS A YELLOW-HAIR SUCH AS YOU....

BUT THE QUEEN EXPLAINED THAT ONE DAY HER PARENT WOULD COME LIKE THE KNIGHT IN SHINING ARMOR IN THE STORIES I TOLD THE CHILD...

...AND WOULD TAKE SNOW BLOSSOM BACK TO BE THE RIGHTFUL QUEEN OF DAMMA!

YOU ARE THE FIRST WESTERNER THE PRINCESS HAS EVER SEEN!

WOW! — WHAT AN INTRODUCTION TO OCCIDENTAL CIVILIZATION!

ATTENTION!

YES, MY PRINCESS

SINCE YOU ARE NOT MY FATHER...

... I HAVE DECIDED TO ALLOW YOU TO MARRY WITH ME!

The BETTER HALF

by VINSON

Featuring HARRIET and STANLEY PARKER

"I'm practicing skiing positions, too. I'll be in this one while I'm riding in the ambulance."

"Don't worry about that. My nurse was walking by at that moment."

"I've decided to respect my elders. My respect for you will be in direct proportion to whatever age you'll admit."

"You're right. It isn't so unusual for a man to come home and find a delicious meal. I saw it happen on a 'Twilight Zone' re-run last night."

I MADE A PHONE CALL TODAY! WE SHOULD BE ABLE TO SPLIT FROM HERE WITHIN A WEEK! I GOT EVERYTHING SET, INCLUDING THE PASSPORTS!

THAT SOUNDS GREAT!

MAYBE I BETTER GET BACK ON THE JOB BEFORE DAN STARTS LOOKING FOR ME!

YEAH! GIVE ME THAT CAN OF BEER! IT WON'T LOOK GOOD YOUR HAVING THE SMELL OF ALCOHOL ON YOUR BREATH DURING WORKING HOURS!

I DON'T WANT TO RUIN MY IMAGE!

ESPECIALLY AFTER THE BARTENDER TELLS THE SERGEANT WHAT A FINE, UPSTANDING CITIZEN YOU ARE!

MEANWHILE, AT SAM DRIVER'S OFFICE HEARING THAT CHET DIED WILL BE A REAL BLOW TO TIM, SERGEANT! I'LL BRING HIM DOWN TO HEADQUARTERS SO YOU CAN GET A STATEMENT!

I'LL WANT MORE THAN JUST A STATEMENT, MR. DRIVER! WE'LL WANT TO QUESTION TIM! WE'VE JUST RECEIVED SOME INFORMATION THAT TIM STARTED THE FIGHT THAT NIGHT, THAT IT WASN'T SELF-DEFENSE!

Prince Valiant

CREATED BY MAL FOSTER

Our Story: THE WILD BOY CREATES A SENSATION UPON HIS ARRIVAL AT CAMELOT, AND LORDS AND LADIES CROWD FOR A GLIMPSE. PRINCE VALIANT HOLDS THEM BACK. "HE IS NOT A DANCING BEAR," VAL CHIDES. THE FALCON HAS COST THE BOY AN EYE BUT HE RECOVERS RAPIDLY FROM HIS OTHER WOUNDS, THANKS MORE TO ALETA AND TILUCUM THAN TO THE IMPOSING MORGAN TODD.

HE CAN SPEAK NO WORD OF ANY TONGUE BUT LOVE IS A LANGUAGE HE COMES TO UNDERSTAND -- AND ONE IN WHICH THE TWINS WILL SOON BE FLUENT.

ALETA IS AT FIRST AMUSED BY THEIR SISTERLY JEALOUSY, BUT IT SOON GETS OUT OF HAND. "ANOTHER EYE PATCH?" TAUNTS A SCORNFUL KAREN. "THIS ONE'S FOR HIS GOOD EYE," VALETA HISSES, "SO HE WON'T HAVE TO LOOK AT YOUR COOKING." LITTLE FISTS FLY.

© 1980 King Features Syndicate, Inc. World rights reserved.

ABRUPTLY SHE LEADS THE YOUTH TO THE STABLES. "HORSE," SHE POINTS, WHILE MAKING A SIGN WITH HER HAND. THE WILD BOY IS PUZZLED, YET HE FOLLOWS HER EXAMPLE.
