NATO will retaliate if Soviets interfere in Poland

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — NATO foreign ministers agreed today to retaliate against any Soviet intervention in Poland with a series of political and economic measures that would have "very grave" consequences for the Soviet Union, the French foreign minister said.

Foreign Minister Jean Francois-Poncet told reporters the 15 foreign ministers were united in planning a series of responses. "The ministers made it clear that if there were an eventual Soviet intervention in Poland the consequences would be very grave on all levels — diplomatic, political, economic and defensive."

By defensive, Francois-Poncet was referring to beefing up the military capacity of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and not to a NATO military response to a Soviet intervention.

The NATO ministerial council also agreed to reconvene in emergency session if the Soviets did take military action against Poland.

After the Soviet incursion into Afghanistan last December, some U.S. observers felt the Western allies dragged their feet in their reaction to the move. Similarly, the allies' response to Iran's taking of the U.S. hostages was felt to lack bite.

Francois-Poncet said NATO's main interest now is to leave the Soviets with "no misunderstanding" about the gravity of an intervention.

U.S. Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie joined his 14 European and Canadian counterparts in the meeting and the United States was urging a concerted and tough political and economic response.

Muskie arrived in Brussels Wednesday and spent the day conferring with several of his European counterparts in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, including a dinner session with the foreign ministers of Britain, France and West Germany that focused on East-West problems.

Muskie was said to have brought a package of proposed reprisals if the Russians crack down on the independent labor movement in Poland, but U.S. officials insisted Muskie had come to confer with the European allies and not to attempt to impose Washington's views upon them.

Among retaliatory measures being discussed were a cutoff of various East-West negotiations, cancellation of some crucial economic, financial and technological agreements, and a buildup of allied military power.

But the governments of Britain, West Germany, France and other European allies reportedly balked at any attempt to impose full-scale sanctions against the Soviets. They contended they could not be made to work, sources said.

The NATO defense ministers concluded their part of the winter meeting Wednesday with a communiqué which said they expressed "deep concern with situation relating to Poland and agreed that any (Soviet) military intervention would pose a serious threat to security and stability with profound implications for all facets of the East-West relationship."

U.S. Defense Secretary Harold Brown said NATO would increase its military capability in response to any intervention in Poland by the Soviet Union or its allies. He told reporters the alliance has authorized some military precautions, such as stockpiling arms and bringing mobilizations plans up to date. But he said these were not out of the ordinary.

In addition, the United States is sending four AWACS surveillance aircraft to West Germany to monitor Soviet bloc troop movements, and Western military officials cancelled Christmas leave for a six-ship NATO flotilla.

But all the NATO allies have emphasized that responses to Soviet intervention in Poland would be political and economic, ruling out any direct NATO military moves.

Worldwide silent vigil suggested to honor John Lennon's memory

NEW YORK (AP) — Two fans, apparently despondent over the slaying of John Lennon, took their own lives, while Lennon's widow called for a 10-minute silent vigil to honor the memory of the rock star who stepped from five years of seclusion into a hail of bullets.

Meanwhile, the wife of the man accused in the slaying,

Mark David Chapman, said she too mourned Lennon, but loved her husband. Guards were checking Chapman's cell every 15 minutes to make sure he didn't commit suicide.

And lawyers for the Lennon family filed a will estimating the former Beatle's estate to be at least $30 million.

In her first interview since the slaying, Miss Ono said Wednesday, "This is not a time for hate or disillusionment."

"The future is still ours to make," Miss Ono said in an interview with the Los Angeles Times in the couple's apartment in New York, where she has been in seclusion.

"The '90s will blossom if only people accept peace and love in their hearts," she said. "It would just add to the tragedy if people turned away from the message in John's music."

She also said she hoped people wouldn't blame New York City for her husband's murder.

"People say that there is something wrong with New York, that it's sick, but John loved New York," she said. "He'd be the first to say it wasn't New York's fault. There can be one crank anywhere."

Chapman, who has twice attempted suicide in the past, according to his lawyer, was being held for a psychiatric examination.

"I've got a good side and a bad side," the New York Daily News said he told guards. "The bad side is very small, but sometimes it takes over the good side and I do bad things."

Lennon's death Monday night outside his luxurious Manhattan apartment building continued to spark tributes from music fans.

Wife's statement read

Murder-for-hire trial continues

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A 27-year-old Odessa woman, who is accused of plotting the death of her husband, may have been an unwitting party to an easy-money scheme that ended in the stabbing death of her husband on July 28 just off Interstate 20 between Midland and Odessa.

The woman, Patricia "Patty"

McPeters, is charged with murder by hiring her companion, Rex Bradley Shanks, 27, of Abilene, and his friend, Willie Wayne Jennings, 19, of Wichita Falls, to dispose of her 46-year-old husband, James David McPeters.

McPeters was found stabbed to death and slumped over the steering wheel of a leased car about 8 a.m. on July 28.

The alleged plot began to unravel in 142nd State District Court on Wednesday afternoon, when Sheriff's Deputy Sgt. Jim Atwater read a six-page statement signed by the defendant in early August and shortly after her July 30 arrest in Abilene.

The woman sat quietly and stoically beside her defense attorney, Leonard Howell, while Atwater read the typewritten statement. It was introduced into evidence by Prosecutor David Joers.

OCCASIONALLY, Mrs. McPeters would gaze outside the courtroom and look longingly and with concern at her 3½-year-old son, D.J., who was in the hallway under the care of his grandmother.

While not in trial, Mrs. Peters was in the Midland County Jail. Her bail bond is set at $50,000 — the same as co-defendants Shanks and Jennings, who likewise are jailed.

The alleged scheme apparently began in Abilene in mid-July, when Mrs. McPeters told Shanks that "I was unhappy with David, that I wanted to leave him," the statement, read by Atwater, said.

Shanks supposedly asked Mrs. McPeters if her husband had a life insurance policy; she answered that he did, but that she didn't know the cash value of the policy.

However, testimony earlier in the trial (See DEFENDANT'S, Page 4A)

Lubbock inmate shoots self with smuggled derringer

LUBBOCK (AP) — A 22-year-old woman smuggled a gun into the Lubbock County Jail to help her fiancé escape, but another inmate grabbed the .38-caliber derringer and killed himself moments before he was to be transferred to the state prison, officials say.

Frederick Michael Myers, 24, shot himself in the head on the third floor of the jail about 3:30 a.m. Wednesday, police said. Other inmates said the gun had been in the jail since the day after Thanksgiving, authorities said.

Based on information provided by various prisoners, officials arrested

Alainna Hill about 11 a.m. Wednesday. Justice of the Peace Charles Smith arraigned her at 4:30 p.m. and set her bond at $100,000 on charges of implementing an escape.

"They have some witnesses there, the inmates in jail with him (Miss Hill's fiancé), who claim they either saw or heard her bringing the gun up to him," said Gary West, the jail's booking officer.

Miss Hill is the girl friend of Billy Wayne Alexander, 21, awaiting a capital murder trial next month in Abilene for the Oct. 5 shooting of Department of Public Safety trooper Jerry Don Davis near Slaton

Polish workers defy communist regime

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's biggest independent union defied the communist regime by launching an investigation of political detentions but rejected charges that it is spreading chaos and anarchy.

Solidarity, which claims to represent 10 million of Poland's 18 million workers, also offered a moratorium on wage demands.

Union leaders met in the Baltic port of Gdansk Wednesday, accused the government of breaking an agreement to end repression, demanded the release of 10 jailed dissidents and set up a group to investigate all political detentions.

This appeared certain to bring new charges from Moscow and its allies in East Germany and Czechoslovakia that Solidarity was meddling in political matters that were not the business of labor unions.

The jailed dissidents are members of the Confederation of Independent Poland. Its leader, Leszek Moczulski, has been accused of opposition to the communist government and was detained several weeks ago.

Solidarity spokesman Tadeusz Mazowiecki said the union was "not endorsing Moczulski's line or his organization" but wanted to defend anyone arrested because of political beliefs.

"This may seem a political action but it is much rather a social endeavor," he said.

"It would be a little bit naive to keep a 10 million-strong organization completely out of touch with political reality," said Jacek Kuron, a Solidarity adviser who is one of Poland's leading dissidents.

Solidarity and Poland's other independent unions were formed after a nationwide strike wave last summer forced the Communist Party to agree to the formation of independent trade unions and the right to strike for the first time in a communist country.

The government also agreed in principle to free all political prisoners but has continued rounding them up since the accord was signed in Gdansk Aug. 31. And although the party's leaders have repeatedly pledged to honor the Gdansk agreement, they have vigorously insisted that the unions must stay out of the political sphere.

Leaders of Solidarity also issued a statement Wednesday rejecting accusations from the union's that it was encouraging chaos and anarchy.

"It is not Solidarity that brings about chaos and anarchy; we have to stress that our union is the force trying to overcome them," it said.

The statement stressed that the union favored negotiations, not strikes, to settle worker disputes. It said it would stop all pay demands by its members until a general wage policy could be worked out.

It said it was taking the action because of "the difficult situation of the nation and the need to create economic and social stability. ... We are fighting for the highest ideal, for the fate of our country."

Paper predicts hostage freedom

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A leftist Beirut newspaper reputed to be close to Iran's revolutionary regime reported today that the 52 American hostages are expected to be freed on Christmas Day. But there was no evidence that the report was any more reliable than numerous others like it in the past.

Quoting unnamed Iranian sources, the newspaper As-Safir said:

"Agreement has been completed between the United States and Iran to resolve the hostage issue. They are expected to be freed on the 25th of this month."

No authoritative officials in Tehran or Washington were immediately available for comment on the report.

As-Safir said a compromise has been reached on the Iranian demand that the wealth the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi transferred abroad be returned to Iran. It said the U.S. government agreed to freeze the shah's deposits in American banks pending a court verdict on whether to turn the money over to the government of Iran or his heirs.

The sources said the Iranian government accepted this position, which was set forth in a U.S. communication delivered to the Algerian government last week and relayed by it to Tehran.

As-Safir's report said nothing about the three other conditions set by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and the Majlis, Iran's parliament, for the release of the Americans who today were spending their 40th in captivity.

These were a pledge of non-interference in Iran's domestic affairs, the unfreezing of Iran's deposits in U.S. banks and abandonment of all legal action against Iran in the United States.

The United States has repeatedly pledged not to interfere in Iran. Earlier reports from Tehran and Washington said it told the Iranian government President Carter could rescind his order freezing the bank deposits, but the U.S. government has no power to stop legal action against Iran by private Americans and companies. Even if Carter rescinded his order, much of the Iranian funds would be blocked because of such actions.

As-Safir also said the U.S. government in the negotiations refused to pledge to supply Iran with spare parts and other military hardware for its war with Iraq. It did not elaborate.

Iran said today it crushed the second Iranian attempt in four days to break the nine-week old siege of Iran's refinery city of Abadan.

Midland economic index sets records

Midland's economic index for October jumped to 206.5 and broke all previous monthly figures, according to a report prepared by the Area Development Group of the First National Bank.

The index had been 198.60 in the previous month of September. And in October a year ago, the index was 137.97, almost 70 points below the figure this year.

Summarizing, the report shows that all indexes were up in October, except for building permits. However, residential permits were up 36 percent. Following that, airline boardings were up 16 percent over a year ago. Annual increases for bank deposits were up 48 percent and building permits for the year so far registered a gain of 54 percent.

Other indexes making up the report are gas meters, electric meters, telephones, employment, postal receipts and water meters.

Airline boardings last October were 44,748, as compared to the 38,531 the previous month and 37,139 in October 1979.

Permits were issued for homes amounting to $7,853,050 in October while a year ago the permits were for $2,897,100 worth of housing. In September, the figure was $5,750,200.

Bank deposits at the end of October had piled up to the tune of $1,276,345,000, almost $50,000 more than the previous month's figure of $1,229,195,000. In October a year ago, bank deposits were about $400,000 less than this year — $859,896,000.

Midland's gross sales for the second quarter of 1980 also set a new record — $403,689,863. This is a 35 percent jump over the 1979 second quarter sales of $298,356,689 and a 50 percent increase over the 1978 figure of $257,726,108.

According to the bank report, the biggest increase came in the sale of furniture, with a 35 percent jump over the 1979 figure. Other increases were noted in drug stores, eating and drinking, food, general merchandise, liquor and clothing.

The only drops recorded were in automobile sales with a 2.6 percent decline and miscellaneous with a 2.13 percent decrease.

Office growth in Midland continued to show gains thus far during 1980, the report continues. Office occupancy is listed at 97 percent in the Tall City this year in light of the fact that office space has increased to 3,233,821 square feet. Not included in that number is 884,600 square feet of office space still under construction.

Once these buildings are completed, it will represent a 27 percent jump this year in office space over that available in 1979, according to the report.

Reagan to announce some choices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan, prepared to announce at least half of his Cabinet-level choices, is turning to a leader of Wall Street to fill his administration's most important economic post, sources report.

Reagan planned to name Donald T. Regan, chairman of Merrill Lynch and Co., as treasury secretary and fill seven or more other top administration posts at a news conference today, said sources working on the president-elect's transition team.

Other key economic posts were expected to go to Republican Rep. David Stockman of Michigan, who would become budget director, and Connecticut industrialist Malcolm Baldrige, in line to be commerce secretary, the sources said.

Transition aides have been urging Reagan to make his key economic appointments early so they could begin immediately to map strategy for confronting high inflation, rising interest rates, high unemployment and the threat of a new recession.

Reagan planned to announce other Cabinet jobs for several close political associates and veteran Nixon administration officials. They include:

William French Smith for attorney general, Caspar Weinberger for defense secretary, William Casey for CIA director, retiring Sen. Richard Schweiker for secretary of health and human services, and Republican Party deputy chairman Drew Lewis for transportation secretary.

A mystery shrouded Reagan's choice for secretary of state, the only top Cabinet post that might go unfilled today, the sources said.

Retired Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., the last White House chief of staff under Richard M. Nixon, re-emerged as the leading candidate. Some sources said they believed he eventually would be named, although there apparently had been no decision.

Haig is potentially the most controversial Cabinet candidate. His chances dimmed last weekend amid questions from Senate Democrats about his involvement in the Watergate scandal. Senate Republicans, however, rallied to his support.

Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina, an arch-conservative Republican who led lobbying on Haig's behalf, said Wednesday he phoned Nixon over the weekend to ask if anything on the former president's still-unreleased White House tapes would embarrass Haig. Helms said Nixon replied, "Not a thing."

Reagan said Wednesday he had no plans to meet Haig. But asked if Haig still was in contention for the post, Reagan replied: "Sure."

Sources said other Cabinet appointments to be announced later include Ray Donovan, a New Jersey construction executive, as labor secretary. ABC News said the agriculture secretary would be Richard Lyng, president of the American Meat Institute and an Agriculture Department official in the Nixon administration.

The sources said final selections had yet to be made for the Interior, Housing and Urban Development, Energy and Education departments.

One of Reagan's principal problems has been the treasury post, which he reportedly filled only Wednesday.

An early front-runner, former Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, withdrew, and another prospect, Citicorp Chairman Walter B. Wriston, reportedly was dropped because of potential conflicts of interest stemming from his business interests.

Here are thumbnail sketches of the men expected to be named today:

TREASURY: Regan, 51, has been chairman of Merrill Lynch, the nation's largest brokerage, since 1973. A member of the Eastern Establishment, he was born in Cambridge, Mass., and graduated from Harvard University. A former vice chairman and director of the New York Stock Exchange, he is a member of the Business Roundtable and Council on Foreign Relations.

DEFENSE: Weinberger, 63, was Reagan's California state finance director before serving as Nixon's Federal Trade Commission chairman, budget director and secretary of health, education and welfare. He is one of Reagan's closest economic advisers and headed a task force on cutting the federal budget. Nicknamed "Cap the Knife" because of his tight-budget ways under Nixon, Weinberger is a vice president of the Bechtel Group, an international construction and engineering firm headquartered in San Francisco.

ATTORNEY GENERAL: Smith, 63, chairman of a Cabinet-selection group of Reagan advisers and friends, is Reagan's personal lawyer and longtime confidante. A New Hampshire native with a Harvard law degree, Smith set up practice in California in 1942. A wealthy conservative, he is senior partner in the Los Angeles firm of Gibson, Dunn and Crutcher and a director of several California utilities, banks and other corporations. Since 1968, he has been a regent of the University of California, a Reagan gubernatorial appointee.

CIA: Casey, 67, another member of Reagan's inner circle, was manager of the president-elect's campaign and chairman of the transition operation. Chief of secret intelligence for Europe during World War II, Casey is a lawyer who served as an undersecretary of state and chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission under Nixon. He was criticized for an SEC report on fugitive financier Robert Vesco that failed to disclose a secret Vesco contribution of $200,000 to Nixon's re-election campaign.

OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET: Stockman, 34, is considered one of the brightest young congressmen. He is a leading advocate of "supply-side" economics, which calls for dramatic tax cuts to spur investment, raise productivity and employment and reduce inflation. First elected to Congress in 1976, at age 29, Stockman was a sparring partner for Reagan in preparations for his first presidential campaign debate.

COMMERCE: Baldrige, 58, a one-time rodeo cowboy who specialized in calf and steer roping, is chairman of Scovill Inc., a diversified consumer products manufacturer based in Waterbury, Conn. Baldrige was born in Omaha, Neb., attended an exclusive Connecticut preparatory school and graduated from Yale University.

Reagan meeting blacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Ronald Reagan is meeting first with a group of civil rights leaders, many of whom supported Jimmy Carter for re-election.

The roster for Reagan's meeting today with members of the National Black Leadership Forum included Coretta Scott King, widow of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.; Vernon Jordan, president of the National Urban League; Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the NAACP; the Rev. Leon Sullivan, head of a black self-help organization; and Mayor Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind.

None supported Reagan in the fall campaign. Mrs. King and Sullivan, in fact, often accompanied Carter at campaign appearances before black groups.

But one member of the forum who campaigned most actively for the president had not responded Tuesday night to the invitation to today's meeting. He is the Rev. Jesse Jackson of Chicago, who flew with Carter aboard Air Force One in the closing days of the campaign and stood behind the president when Carter conceded defeat.

Boss remembers Mark Chapman as 'brilliant, articulate' employee

DALLAS (AP) — The man accused of killing John Lennon was "brilliant" and "articulate in everything he did" when he worked in the public relations department of a Hawaiian hospital a few years ago, his former employer remembers.

Larry Larrabee said Wednesday he became a close friend to Mark David Chapman from 1975 to 1979 at Castle Memorial Hospital near Kailua, Hawaii. The "screwball" label given Chapman by New York City police doesn't fit the man who worked for him, Larrabee said.

"He was brilliant," Larrabee told Montgomery County Daily Courier managing editor Paul McGrath during a plane flight to Dallas Wednesday.

"I could trust him with anything," Larrabee said. "He would come in at all hours."

"He was very articulate in everything that he did. He was extremely talented. I probably promoted him too fast."

Larrabee, who now lives in Keene, just south of Fort Worth, said he was administrator at the Hawaiian hospital until 1979.

Larrabee said Chapman always was fond of the Beatles, but did not seem obsessed by them. The administrator said he introduced Chapman to Gloria Abe, a travel agent who married Chapman in June of 1979.

The two couples often socialized, he said.

Mrs. Chapman, like Lennon's widow, Yoko Ono, is of Japanese descent, Larrabee added.

Larrabee said he was "in a state of shock" after hearing that Chapman had been arrested in the Monday night shooting death of music superstar John Lennon.

"I couldn't believe it," he said.

Larrabee's wife, Violet, said she also knew Chapman and was "completely flabbergasted" by the case.

"We all thought he was a nice kid," she said Wednesday night from her home in Keene. "... He (Chapman) gave no indication then (in Hawaii) that he would do something like this."

Larrabee said Chapman became quite upset when he left Hawaii to take his present job as regional vice president of the Adventist Health Systems, a hospital management firm that runs Huguely Hospital in Fort Worth.

He said Chapman — apparently despondent because his friend had moved away — quit his job at Castle Hospital and had a slight nervous breakdown.

Larrabee said he knew of Chapman's emotional problems as a youth in Decatur, Ga., but didn't feel they had any effect on his performance at Castle.

In Honolulu, Mrs. Chapman broke her silence on Lennon's slaying and told reporters she was "very sorry this had to happen, that John Lennon had to die and his (Lennon's) wife and son have to suffer. I also mourn the death of John Lennon."

When asked what she might say to Chapman, she said, "I would tell him 'I love you,'" but added she has no plans to attend his trial.

Yoko wants memorials sent to Spirit Foundation

NEW YORK (AP) — The Spirit Foundation, a private foundation established by John Lennon, will distribute any donations in memory of the slain former Beatle to one of a dozen charities or service groups, the organization says.

Yoko Ono, Lennon's widow, requested that instead of flowers, donations be sent to the foundation, which is primarily concerned with the elderly, abused children and orphans.

David Geffen, who produced Lennon's last album, said Wednesday the foundation was set up about one year ago by Lennon to distribute funds to charities. The foundation was apparently a way for Lennon, who was shot to death Monday, to avoid responding personally to the requests for aid that celebrities often receive.

The foundation recently sent Thanksgiving Day baskets to juveniles in the Spofford House of Detention in the Bronx and to programs for the elderly in New York City.

A note from the Lennons accompanying the baskets said: "In this day of Thanksgiving, we are thinking of you and we wish you a happy life. Love, John, Yoko and Sean."

Sean is the couple's son.

"They were always so modest about it," said Gertrude Wagner, the nutritional director for senior citizens at the Hudson Guild Neighborhood House in Manhattan, which received 300 baskets several days before Thanksgiving.

Gaffen refused to disclose the financial assets of the foundation. "That would be better left to Yoko," he said.

A statement released Wednesday said:

"Spirit Foundation, Inc. is a private non-profit, non-operating foundation which has previously received approval of its application for exemption from taxation. It is the intent and expectation of the officers and the directors of the foundation to distribute all receipts to one or more of the following charities:

- "Hale House, East Harlem Family Health Service, Covenant House, Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, New York Foundling Hospital, St. Barnabas House, Salvation Army, Police Athletic League, WNET, New York City Police Department Vest Fund, WBAL-Pacifica.

Bodyguards couldn't have saved Lennon, say specialists

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The business of guarding celebrities is booming, but top security specialists say no amount of bodyguards can prevent a random killing like the one that claimed the life of former Beatle John Lennon.

"There are just so many kooks walking the streets," said Clyde Duber, who has been in the business for 40 years.

"If they want to kill you, there is really no protection," said Chris Gugas, a private investigator who formerly provided a personal security service. "Look at the president. Every time he goes out in a crowd to shake hands, he's vulnerable."

Nevertheless, bodyguards are more in demand than ever. Duber, for example, now has branch offices of his C.N. Duber Industrial Security Inc. throughout the state and a school for bodyguards with a current enrollment of 600.

Perhaps the best known security organization, the federal Secret Service, employs 1,550 agents, both guards and counterfeit currency checkers, said spokesman Jack Warner. It currently is guarding 25 people regularly, including the presidential family and past and future White House residents.

Among Duber's clients is Frank Sinatra Enterprises. "Every time Frank gives a charity show, we provide the security. Before he steps on an airplane, there are bodyguards in there."

Others said to have full-time protection are Bob Hope, Jane Fonda and publisher Larry Flynt. But the biggest demand for guards comes from corporate executives who fear abduction, say Duber and former Los Angeles Police Chief Tom Reddin, who runs a security agency.

In London, ex-Beatle Paul McCartney hired two bodyguards after Lennon's slaying, according to Don Murfet, who runs Artistes Security Services, a bodyguard agency. But Murfet said the bodyguards were hired to protect McCartney from the press, not from an assassin.

McCartney's press agent, Tony Brainsby, said reporters were after McCartney and his family in "alarming numbers," following the Lennon slaying.

Duber said his agency was "very heavy in corporate kidnapping protection. The companies know that if an executive is kidnapped, it may cost them a year's profits to get him back."

Reddin said he often uses retired or off-duty police officers to protect executives because "they have knowledge far above the average security guard." Often, these guards do double duty, serving as chauffeurs or personal aides.

"The days of having a nice old guy who drives your car is over," said Reddin. "Now, they are mostly security people."

The slaying of Lennon on Monday brought at least one frantic call to Duber's office from a celebrity he declined to identify.

"She was pretty worked up and said, 'They're coming to get me next,'" said Duber, whose firm protected the Beatles during an appearance here in the late 1960s.

Reddin said he was "flabbergasted" that someone of Lennon's prominence did not have bodyguards.

Prime rate ties record

NEW YORK (AP) — With the prime rate back at the record 20-percent high that helped precipitate a recession early this year, economists fear it could go even higher and choke the economy into another relapse. "When interest rates are this high ... small businesses are the first to be squeezed out because they are generally in a less capable position of paying 20 percent," said William J. Dennis, an economist at the National Federation of Independent Business.

Economists expect production schedules to be cut back and workers laid off as businesses, accustomed to paying only pennies a year for the use of a dollar, are asked to hand over nearly a full quarter for each borrowed dollar. President-elect Ronald Reagan said in Washington that the prime rate increase to 20 percent "is one of the things that has to be corrected."

Fatality reported west of Odessa

ODESSA — Department of Public Safety troopers this morning were investigating a one-truck roll-over west of Odessa in which at least one person had been killed. According to early reports, the truck also caught fire. The accident occurred west of Odessa on FM 868. It was reported to the DPS at 7:23 a.m.

Defendant's statement revealed

By that time, the two men had "already started drinking." "Rex and Wayne said they were going to kill David," Sgt. Atwater again quoted the statement by Mrs. McPeters. "Rex was pretty high, because he had been drinking all day." "That night, the foursome drove to Warfield Truck Stop midway between Midland and Odessa; Shanks was driving. And apparently at the insistence of the two men, Mrs. McPeters got out of the car, called her husband on the pay telephone, and told him that her car had broken down, just north of the service road of I-20 between the truck stop and the OIME plant.

Two more postal stations remain open on Saturday

Two more Midland postal stations will be open on Saturdays until Christmas to handle the increased demand for holiday mailing of packages and cards, according to D.E. Holster, Midland Sectional Center manager-postmaster. The Village, 2309 W. Louisiana Ave., and Graves, 3304 W. Wadley Ave., stations will be open from 8 a.m. to noon the next two Saturdays, he said.

along with Atwater, investigated McPeters' death. "Yes, sir, I am now," he replied. Tammy Karlic Jennings was not indicted. "As far as I'm concerned," said another state witness, Texas Ranger William R. Gerth of Wichita Falls, "she was a witness." Gerth got involved in the case after Tammy Karlic Jennings told law men that she had thrown two knives, supposedly used in the McPeters stabbing, in a park pond in Wichita Falls.

THE TRIAL BEFORE the five-man, seven-woman jury began Tuesday and is expected to continue into next week. Six witnesses, including Sgt. Atwater, Texas Rangers Byrnes and Gerth and three witnesses related to McPeters' life insurance policies, have been presented by the state. The testimony of Tammy Karlic Jennings was expected to take several hours today.

Without being facetious," said the judge at close of the trial on Wednesday. "I don't intend to be trying this case on Christmas Day. Let's move it along."

WTU rate hike gets PUC OK

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Public Utility Commission has approved a stipulated settlement by the parties in the West Texas Utilities electric rate increase case which will increase rates by $9.54 million.

West Texas Utilities had sought a $12.73 million rate hike, but had worked out the stipulation with intervenors in the case, including the Texas Retailers Association, Texas Municipal League and West Texas Legal Services.

The increase approved closely follows the PUC staff recommendation in the case.

The new rates will affect customers in all unincorporated areas and most urban areas of West Texas Utilities' service area. The rates are scheduled to become effective Dec. 15.

The company sought the increase because of inflation, costs of converting to cheaper and more abundant fuels and costs of constructing plants to use those fuels.

West Texas Utilities serves 152,100 customers in 52 counties.

Money goes for toys for children

Industrial arts clubs at Lee High School and Lee Freshman High School are collecting money for toys which will be distributed by the Salvation Army to needy children at Christmas.

The clubs will be involved in the project through Dec. 15.

"Last year the clubs provided $500 worth of toys which included eight tricycles," said Todd McMann, senior at Lee High School who heads the project.

He added the money is used to buy toys from local stores which have reduced prices on some items with missing parts.

Students repair toys and give them to the Salvation Army.

Interested persons wishing to contribute can call the LHS Industrial Arts office at 694-2551.

Sheriff fires eight

AUSTIN (AP) — Incoming Travis County Sheriff Doyle Bailey has fired eight deputies, including several who were the highest-ranking officers in the department.

The officers were notified of their dismissal — effective Dec. 31 — by form letters. The letters gave no reasons why the officers were fired.

Bailey, 33, defeated Sheriff Raymond Frank in the Democratic primary last May and Republican Saadi Ferris in the November general election. Bailey had been an Austin policeman for 11 years.

Draft statement says MX system would mean jobs, inflation

CLOVIS, N.M. (AP) — A draft environmental impact statement on the MX missile system says if any part of the MX is located in southeastern New Mexico, the area would receive economic boosts including both added jobs and inflation, the Clovis News-Journal reports.

The News-Journal obtained from a confidential source a copy of the draft impact statement, which the Air Force has planned to release in mid-December.

In its Tuesday editions, the News-Journal reported the statement says that "with economic expansion more goods and services would be made available. Local price inflation could be a problem, especially during the construction phase."

The Air Force is considering locating the MX at a site in Nevada and Utah, as well as a location in west Texas and New Mexico. Current cost projections are $3.8 billion, with $3 billion added if the Texas-New Mexico site is selected. Defense officials have said they prefer the Nevada-Utah site.

The impact statement outlines possible direct project effects if "an operating base for the system is built near Clovis, along with protective structures and other technical facilities in Curry County," the News-Journal reported.

Effects include migration of many construction workers into the area and creation of many jobs. "Large-scale investments would be required to supply the needed infrastructure," the statement said.

Economic expansion would cause inflation which would have its greatest effect on "the elderly, low-income families and those on fixed incomes," the draft said.

If the entire MX system is located in the vicinity of Clovis and Dalhart, Texas, "direct MX employment in Curry County would reach about 10,150 employees in 1989," leveling off to about 7,500 at the end of construction, the statement said.

But if half of the system is located at the Texas-New Mexico site, with Nevada-Utah getting half and the operating center being located in New Mexico, by 1987 direct employment in Curry County would climb to about 9,400 and drop to 6,050 by construction's end.

Another alternative, which would locate half of the system at the Texas-New Mexico site with Dalhart as the operating base, employment in Curry County could increase by up to 1,550 in 1988, but drop to zero upon completion of construction.

More cancer found in Gov. Ella Grasso

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Gov. Ella Grasso, who already has announced plans to resign her post because of liver cancer, was in satisfactory condition today after an operation to remove a malignant growth blocking her bowel.

The governor, who plans to give up her office at the end of the month, had the cancerous growth removed from her large intestine during a 3½-hour operation Wednesday at Hartford Hospital.

Doctors also bypassed a portion of her small intestine because of a cancerous growth. The doctors said the cancer in her intestines had spread from earlier cancers. They said they anticipated no further surgery.

Hospital spokesman James Battaglio said Mrs. Grasso's husband, Thomas, and her children, Susane and James, visited the governor Wednesday night. He said Mrs. Grasso was alert and able to recognize those who visited her.

The governor probably will remain hospitalized for about two weeks, Battaglio said. He said he didn't know whether the 61-year-old governor would be able to go home for Christmas.

Doctors performed a colostomy, which involved removing a portion of the large intestine and inserting a tube to carry bodily wastes.

Mrs. Grasso was admitted to the hospital Monday, complaining of nausea. On Tuesday, officials announced she would undergo surgery to correct what they said was a "blockage" in her large intestine. The nature of the blockage was not known until the operation actually began.

Egg thrower convicted

DENVER (AP) — A third man has been convicted of throwing eggs at independent presidential candidate John Anderson.

Esmerejodado "Ed" Guerrero, 26, was found guilty Monday in U.S. District Court. No sentencing date was set. As he did in two previous egg-throwing trials, Anderson — a Republican congressman from Illinois when he made his unsuccessful presidential bid — testified for the prosecution.

Orphans get only $12 million, not $52 million

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — The Associated Press reported erroneously on Tuesday that two small children whose parents died after a 1977 train derailment had been awarded a $52.15 million settlement.

The youngsters, Daisy Thorshov, 8, and her brother, GamGee, 4, will receive from the Louisville & Nashville railroad about $12 million, which will be used to purchase bonds and annuities for the children, according to a settlement signed in county court Tuesday.

Their lawyer Fred Levin said the fund was expected to generate the $52.15 million over a 30-year period.

The children's parents, Dr. John Thorshov, 37, and his wife, Lloyd, 28, were killed Nov. 9, 1977, when toxic anhydrous ammonia leaked from a derailed Louisville & Nashville tanker. Both children's eyes were burned by the chemicals, and the girl suffered lung damage.

Nuns freed unharmed after incident at Vatican embassy

MIAMI (AP) — One Cuban employee of the Vatican embassy in Havana was shot to death but four nuns taken hostage by "anti-socialist elements" were freed unharmed when security forces rushed the building, according to Havana radio.

The nuns were freed the use of using firearms, Havana radio said in a report monitored here Wednesday.

The Cuban employee of the embassy was mortally wounded in gunfire from the captors, according to the report.

The Yugoslav news agency Tanjug, which reported from Havana that four priests had been seized, said the embassy invaders were 10 to 14 armed Cubans and that security forces used tear gas to take control of the embassy.

Havana radio did not say how many people were involved or how long the siege lasted. It described the intruders as "anti-socialist elements with jail records, some armed."

The report said the intruders were handed over to the court "where they will have to answer for the action."

In April, an estimated 10,000 Cubans seeking political asylum jammed the grounds of the Peruvian embassy in Havana. President Fidel Castro called the Cubans "common delinquents, anti-socials, vagrants and bums" and said he would allow them to leave Cuba.

The incident sparked the biggest mass exodus of Cubans to the United States and other countries since the 1960s, with some 127,000 eventually making their way to Key West, Fla., in the "Freedom Flotilla" boatlift.

Remembering Lennon

The shooting death Monday evening of former Beatle John Lennon shocked the music world and stunned the legendary performer's millions of fans throughout the world.

Since Lennon and his three fellow Beatles arrived in the United States to an open-armed reception by teenagers in the early 1960s, music and all of society, in fact, has not been the same.

Not all of the impact has been favorable, by any means. Many people credit the Beatles for helping to bring about the onset of the drug culture, the "flower children" influence of the late 1960s and early 1970s, sexual promiscuity among youths and so forth.

And, of course, there are those who even today do not recognize the acclaimed musical abilities and contributions of the group that became known as the "Fab Four." But others do. The fans of the Beatles numbered into the millions and their music was as changing and as controversial, at times, as were the members of the group.

The group's music was acclaimed by individuals from virtually all segments of the music industry. Conductor Leonard Bernstein took his three children to see the Beatles perform on the Ed Sullivan show in the early 1960s and, afterwards, praised their music. The late Elvis Presley, referred to as the king of rock 'n' roll, also recognized the musical talents of the Beatles.

Often during the years they performed together the Beatles were surrounded by controversy. And that controversy continued to follow them in their private lives, too.

The impact they had on society changed clothing styles, hair styles, music styles, language styles.

The reasons behind the shooting of Lennon were not clear early this week. Perhaps Lennon's assailant hoped to gain a degree of notoriety. If so, that is a sad commentary on the society the Beatles said they were attempting to enlighten via their music.

Lennon will be remembered by his many millions of fans as a great musician. He will be remembered by others as a person who brought about changes, whether good or bad. He will be remembered by all those who look back to the 1960s and 1970s as an individual who had an impact and who left his indelible mark on society.

'NOTHING LAME ABOUT THAT DUCK'

ART BUCHWALD

Life can prove boring for a congressman's wife

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — "Mr. McCall, Mrs. Wesley Heights, the wife of Congressman Heights, is here to talk to you about publishing her book."
"Send her in. Ah, Mrs. Heights, this is indeed a pleasure. I'm terribly sorry your husband being found guilty in the Abscam trial. I definitely believe his constitutional rights were violated."
"You know he was a lush, don't you?"
"It seems to me I did read something about that in the papers."
"They didn't really go into the sordid details. It's all here in the book. He was smashed from morning till night. I used to have to pour a pot of coffee over his head to sober him up enough so he could attend his Congressional Prayer breakfasts."
"I'm sure you don't want to talk about it, Mrs. Heights."
"Are you kidding? It's all here in Chapter One. He was a mess."
"It must have been very tough for you."
"It wasn't as tough as his playing around — that's in Chapter Two. I swear you wouldn't believe the type of women he would drag home with him at night. They were old enough to be his mother."
"How did you put up with it?"
"That's in Chapter Three. I was determined to be a good congressional wife, and pretend that nothing was wrong. It was a role the people in Wesley's district expected me to play. So I just closed my eyes when Wesley came into the house with a paramour, and closed them again when she left."

"This is all in the book?"
"You bet your life. There was this one night when I woke up and..."
"That's all right, Mrs. Heights, I'll read the manuscript. Does your book tell anything about how Washington works socially?"
"Of course. That's in Chapter Four. I went to this fund-raising party and someone offered me coke — and I said I didn't do coke, and he said everyone in Washington did coke and I wasn't a team player. So I got mad, and we went for a drive along the Potomac, and when we got back in the morning, the party was still going and everyone was stoned."
"You paint a different picture of Washington than, let's say, Arthur Schlesinger does."
"He's never been a congressman's wife. Then, in Chapter Five, I talk to other politicians' wives and they tell me what they've been through. This chapter tells how they have to beat off every woman in a skirt who thinks the hunting season on congressmen is 12 months long. The wives really have been through the mill and, boy, do they have stories to tell. It makes my life sound like 'The Waltons.'"
"You've done a lot of work in a short time."
"I kept a diary and I'm a fast writer. Besides, my husband helped me fill in the gaps that he could remember."
"Then your husband knows about the book?"
"Of course. He has no objection to my writing it. He voted against ERA, but he thinks a woman should do anything she wants to, as long as it makes her happy. He made a big contribution to Chapter Six, when I tell how he took the money from the phony Arab sheiks."
"He didn't mind your writing that?"
"Au contraire, he gave me lots of good stories that aren't on the tapes, about how he stuffed the $100 bills into his socks, and stole the sheik's gold cigarette lighter when he wasn't looking."
"I must say, Mrs. Heights, this is not your ordinary Washington memoir. But it may have some interest for the reading public, particularly since it's told from a woman's point of view. I'm sure we can make a very generous offer. But I'm curious about one thing. Why did you write this book in the first place?"
"I was bored just being a congressman's wife — and it was either this or getting a job selling real estate."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Warning system's faults threaten nation

WASHINGTON — While the generals in the Pentagon eagerly make plans for multibillion-dollar contraptions like the MX missile system, our defensive screen against a sneak Soviet attack has serious deficiencies that could be fixed at relatively little cost.

Incredible as it seems, such a minor event as a thunderstorm at the wrong time and place could deprive the United States of computers that are vital for defense against incoming Russian missiles.

The importance of the early warning system is spelled out in the dry technical jargon of a top-secret Pentagon report: "Early tactical warning and assessment of missile attack are necessary to enhance the survivability of U.S. strategic forces. Tactical warning gives the NCA (National Command Authority) the time and information required for an appropriate response."

In plain English, what they're saying is that without a first-rate warning system, our missiles might never get off the ground. Or worse, we might respond to a false alarm. A recent Senate report, for example, pointed out serious flaws in the system, which is so delicate that it has produced an astounding 147 false alarms of Soviet missile attacks in the past 18 months.

There's an even more serious problem with the computers that are tied into the warning system, my intelligence sources report.

Penny-wise and pound-foolish planners in the Pentagon hooked some of the National Command Center computers up to commercial power lines, leaving the vital instruments with no emergency generators of their own. So when the commercial power lines are down for any reason, or when a local electrical storm sends surges of power through the lines that would damage the computers, the machines are automatically switched to operate from batteries.

Unfortunately, there aren't enough batteries to operate all the subsystems. In fact, every time there's a thunderstorm in Washington, D.C., some vital defense systems have to be turned off.

Sources told my associates Ron McRae and Dale Van Atta that this and other problems in the nuclear response network could, usually be corrected with a comparatively piddling outlay from the huge defense budget.

I've already reported on the "radar hole" in our warning system, which would permit the Russians to launch low-flying bombers from the south, east or west while our radar screens are aimed at aircraft coming in from the polar region at high or medium altitudes.

In addition, according to the Pentagon report, all our mechanical radar systems deployed to detect submarine-launched ballistic missiles are obsolete. The report adds reassuringly that they "are (presently) being replaced by phased-array radars of greater capability."

Finally, I have learned that the military's ability to respond in a timely manner to a Soviet attack is endangered by indefensibly bad security at several vital computer installations run by the Air Force, Navy and Defense Intelligence Agency.

Vital information, which simply could not be duplicated if lost, is often kept on a single magnetic tape — while quintuplicate memos on everything under the sun clog the Pentagon daily. And some of the computers are housed in flimsy "temporary" buildings of World War II vintage, virtually defenseless from attack by even something as unsophisticated as a mortar.

Taken all together, these deficiencies suggest that the generals might profitably turn their attention to upgrading the strategic system already in existence before they lavish billions on fancy gadgets like the MX missile-shuttle program.

LOYALTY UNREWARDED: In a political version of the French phrase to describe a military rout — "Sauve qui peut," or "Every man for himself" — the Carter White House has given the brushoff to middle-level administration employees in search of jobs, while making sure that the boys at the top find a snug harbor in their precipitate departure from Washington.

What particularly infuriates the vulnerable bureaucrats is the order sent out by some agencies instructing all "Schedule C" political appointees to resign effective Jan. 20. In the past, they note, lower-level appointees could sometimes hang onto their jobs for months before the incoming administration discovered them and booted them out.

As one middle-level official, whose loyalty to Carter goes back to his Georgia days, observed sardonically: "Jimmy's making good on his campaign promise to reduce the federal payroll by making sure that those of us who've stuck with him the longest get fired as soon as possible."

Meanwhile, the bigshots in the Carter camp, like Hamilton Jordan and Jody Powell, are in no danger of going on unemployment relief next month. Cushy job offers and book contracts are awaiting them. And those who have been forced to look around are using their perks of office to help out. One even had a White House limousine and driver deliver his job resume to a prospective employer.

WATCH ON WASTE: There are direct and indirect ways a Washington agency can waste the taxpayers' money. The Public Broadcasting Service takes the indirect approach. Each year, it gives its employees $20 a month toward their parking fee — even though there's a subway stop within a couple of blocks of PBS headquarters. The annual tab is $44,000. A PBS spokesman insists that the agency is not federally funded. While this is technically correct, PBS does get most of its money from member stations — which are largely funded by Uncle Sam.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Dec. 11, the 346th day of 1980. There are 20 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Dec. 11, 1941, Germany and Italy declared war on the United States.

On this date: In 1816, Indiana became the 19th state.

In 1936, King Edward VIII of Britain abdicated his throne and King George VI ascended to it.

In 1937, Benito Mussolini announced that Italy would withdraw from the League of Nations.

Ten years ago: President Richard Nixon tapped Rep. George Bush, R-Texas, as America's ambassador to the United Nations.

One year ago: Iran's foreign minister said efforts were under way to assemble an international grand jury to hear charges against the deposed shah.

Today's birthdays: Shipping heiress Christina Onassis is 30. Political activist Tom Hayden is 40. Thought for today: A thrill a day keeps the chill away — Actress Mae West (1893-1980).

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

There is talk of the Abscam stingees possibly going free because of entrapment. Entrapment is when someone is caught committing a crime but, being a congressman, he's smart enough to cite entrapment.

If the stingees are found innocent because of entrapment, prostitutes all over the country instead of walking in the streets will be dancing in the streets.

If the Abscam people win their appeals, all a prostitute has to do when arrested is say, "Watch it, buster, I'm a member of Congress."

Just because Ozzie Myers wasn't standing in Times Square wearing hot pants doesn't mean that he and the others weren't engaging in a very old profession.

In this sense, the only difference between the two professions is that there is no madam in a house of legislation.

A CHANGING WORLD

No tears are falling as Jimmy Carter's crew heads home

WASHINGTON — The shock of the landslide Ronald Reagan victory of Nov. 4 has not worn off yet, but the Democrats slowly are packing and hiring moving vans while the Republicans are house hunting.

Most of the incoming traffic is from California and the busiest outgoing route is to Georgia. There also is an abundant amount of boot shaking going on among lower echelon jobholders as they speculate whether President-elect Reagan will eliminate their positions.

There is a minimum of sadness connected with saying goodbye to most of the Carter administration officials. There still is a residue of admiration for ex-Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, but he left long months ago. His successor, Edmund S. Muskie, has not earned the same affection felt for Vance and there is a minimum of regret concerning his return to Maine and, perhaps, oblivion.

In many circles there is open cheering over the end of Patricia Harris' reign at the Department of Health and Human Resources. Open criticism of Harris has been muted because few wanted to be in the position of publicly attacking a black woman. However, her abrasive manner and the brutal way in which she injected racial issues into her campaigning for President Carter, soured much of this city on her, even some of the more moderate leaders in the

John Pinkerman

Democratic Party. Strangely, neither is there any open weeping apparent over the early end of Mrs. Rosalynn Carter's tenure as "assistant president." While there is some compassion felt both for the president and first lady, Mrs. Carter never won the hearts of Washington as did Mamie Eisenhower, quiet Bess Truman and Lady Bird Johnson.

Among those interested in the nation's defense and global posture, particularly the uniformed members of the armed services, the end of Harold Brown's rule over the Pentagon is being celebrated loudly and openly. Brown may have been a junior genius at California Institute of Technology but he never really understood the nation's military needs — and he added to that shortcoming by undercutting the top men in the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines, even the civilian secretaries.

The fate of Robert Strauss, Mr.

Carter's campaign chairman and thus presiding officer over the Democratic debacle, is not certain but Democrats and Republicans alike will be pleased if he returns to Texas and is never heard from again. Strauss can be blamed, in part, for the "meanness" label that was so costly to Mr. Carter and he frequently displayed a mean streak himself, particularly when attacking candidate Reagan.

One lower echelon official who will be missed, particularly by out-of-town newsmen, is Patricia Bario, assistant to Presidential Press Secretary Jody Powell. This woman slaved long hours and long weeks in behalf of the nation's journalists. She told the truth and came through with responses on even the most ridiculous queries. Powell was similarly cooperative when he first arrived on the national scene four years ago but he became less helpful, more remote and hardly the reporter's buddy as the problems of the Carter administration multiplied.

Among those currently suffering from the jitters are employees at all levels at the Department of Education, the Environmental Protection Agency and the nationwide offices of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. There has been an excess of heavy-handed tactics in the EPA and OSHA, and American business has suffered from this overabun-dance of federal interference in industry.

Civil Service workers in the Department of Education will not lose their jobs but the final fate of the agency as a Cabinet-level department may result in bad news for many who remember Mr. Reagan's vow to slap an embargo on federal hiring, even reduce the payroll substantially across the board.

At first glance, the Reagan appointments already made give promise of better days ahead. And, while the tears will flow along with the booze at hundreds of Democratic farewell parties, the more realistic observers are taking the departures in stride — and hoping for something better during the next four years.

Bill would require automatic sprinklers in high-rise buildings

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The state should require automatic sprinkler systems in new buildings taller than 75 feet, according to a legislator concerned about high-rise fires.

Rep. Paul Elizondo, D-San Antonio, said Wednesday, "It just doesn't make sense to spend that much money for a building and not go that extra for sprinklers."

Elizondo has filed a bill that would make such systems mandatory in new office, residential and hotel buildings higher than 75 feet. Sprinklers would also be required in existing high-rise buildings which undergo extensive remodeling.

The bill was filed Tuesday. Elizondo said fire department crews can stretch ladders up to 75 feet to fight blazes. However, anything above that becomes a problem. He said San Antonio firemen had to haul equipment up a stairwell recently to douse a small fire in a downtown bank building.

"The systems would put out a fire or at least retard it until firefighters could get to it," Elizondo said in a telephone interview from his home.

The bill was in the works before the recent MGM Grand Hotel fire which killed 84 people in Las Vegas. The hotel had no sprinkler system. Elizondo said he became concerned after seeing film of an office building fire in New York last year.

Hugh Heflin, chief engineer for the property rates section of the State Board of Insurance, said some Texas cities already have sprinkler system requirements for tall buildings.

He said the board is in favor of the installation of sprinkler systems wherever possible.

PBRPC OKs application for funds

By SUE FAHLGREN
Staff Writer

The directors of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission unanimously approved submission of an application for the continued funding of the Regional Alcoholism Authority (RAA) Wednesday in their regular monthly meeting.

In addition, the directors approved the Regional Alcohol Plan to be used for the 1982-84 period. The plan sets up goals and objectives on a priority basis for the RAA.

The plan is divided into four groups: primary prevention, secondary prevention, treatment and rehabilitation, and planning, coordination and resource development. Under primary prevention, the goals include providing education and information to special population groups and promoting the early identification of alcohol abusers in business, industry and government in the area.

Secondary prevention items include exploring alternative treatment and rehabilitation programs through the criminal justice system and encouraging the establishment of local Councils on Alcoholism in various counties.

Providing a network of detoxification services to area residents is one of the main goals for the group under treatment and rehabilitation. Other goals for this group include providing and expanding outpatient and aftercare services and providing a comprehensive network of alcoholism services to special population groups.

Planning, coordination and resource development goals are centered in three areas: education and inservice training for counselors; statistics reporting and informational retrieval improvement; and coordination of local, regional and state plans affecting alcohol abusers.

The directors also approved the appointment of eight Advisory Council members to the Regional Alcohol and Drug Abuse Advisory Council. The eight included: Sister Eva Marie Hernandez of Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church in Midland; Debbie Bennett, DWI school instructor for Ector County in Odessa; Oteka Darby of McCamey; Clinton Ferrell, constable for Winkler County in Kermit; James Martin of Crane; Sally Brammer for the Center for Battered Women in Midland; Walt Pillsko, counselor for the Texas Employment Commission in Midland; and Richard Smith of the Mullins Detox Center of the Permian Basin Mental Health and Mental Retardation in Odessa.

In other PBRPC news, the directors approved an application from the Dawson County Senior Citizens Center to the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation for the purchase of a bus. The application will be for $10,920 from the agency to be matched by $2,730 of local funds for a total cost of $13,650 for the bus to transport the citizens to and from their homes and activities.

The board also approved Permian Bank and Trust of Odessa as the PBRPC bank depository for 1981-82.

The directors approved application for the continued funding of the State Planning Assistance Grant, which is a 50 percent matching fund grant amounting to a total of $56,416.

The board passed a delayed resolution to apply for a grant contract for the Urban Mass Transportation Administration for the PBRPC. The application was previously tabled in May for some amendments in wording.

And the board adopted the PBRPC annual audit for past fiscal year, which ran from July 1, 1979 through June 30, 1980. The directors reported an excess of $10,580 in the operational budget, which executive director Ernie Crawford said would be "local money used to match and promote other grants."

Reagan wants to decentralize VA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ronald Reagan's byword in changing the operations of the Veterans Administration will be "decentralization," officials on the VA transition team say.

In addition, said former Ohio Rep. William Ayers, who heads the president-elect's VA transition panel, studies of the controversial defoliant Agent Orange will be pursued and possibly enlarged.

Ayers said Wednesday he will recommend that any veteran who feels "he is being affected by what may or may not be a reaction to Agent Orange will be admitted without question to a VA hospital."

Currently, said VA spokesman Frank Terry, a veteran suffering from any medical disorder "can be treated, given certain qualifications. Whether he thinks Agent Orange caused the condition is not really material to whether he'll be treated."

It becomes material, Terry said, in trying to decide the question of whether the particular disorder is service-connected and whether, therefore, the veteran will receive any disability payments.

If tests now being conducted show a connection between Agent Orange and such medical problems as cancer and birth defects — as charged by some Vietnam veterans — then "Congress would have to get involved," Ayers said, by passing a law to make veterans eligible for benefits.

As for the VA itself, Ayers said, a layer of personnel with decision-making authority has been interposed between the field offices and hospitals and the VA director.

"A $22 billion nationwide agency ... cannot operate effectively if every decision must be made by a very small handful of appointees lacking the essential experience and training," Ayers said.

People currently serving in that unneeded level of authority may be "transferred to someplace where they can be better used," he said.

The Washington office of the VA should concern itself with deciding national policies, leaving as much control as possible at the local level, he said.

Don't Blame Your Age For Poor Hearing

Chicago, Ill.—A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of one of the smallest Beltone aids of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.

Send for this model, put it on and wear it in the privacy of your own home. While many people will not receive any significant benefit from any hearing aid, this free model will show you how tiny hearing help can be. It is not a real hearing aid, and it's yours to keep free. The actual aid weighs less than a fourth of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 72241, Beltone Electronics Corp., 4201 W. Victoria, Chicago, Illinois 60646.

Annual car show set this weekend

ODESSA — The second annual National Championship Hot Rod, Custom Car and Van Show, presented by Darryl Starbird, will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Ector County Coliseum.

The show features custom designed cars such as the "De Elegance," a $100,000 1930s styled classic by Starbird; "Sequel," an aerodynamically styled sports car of the future; "Henway," a 1924 handbuilt custom truck; and "Firebird Fever," a custom built Firebird for John Travolta by George Barris of Hollywood. The show also includes hot rods, custom cars, competition machines, dune buggies, boats, motorcycles and experimental cars.

For entertainment the show features the touring band "Switch," a Saturday night only performance by "Flash Cadillac," the 1950s band from the movie "American Graffiti" and television's "Happy Days," and the Urban Cowgirls from Hollywood performing on a mechanical bull.

Show hours are Friday 6 to 11 p.m., Saturday 1 to 11 p.m. and Sunday 1 to 10 p.m.

Band to give concert

The San Jacinto Junior High School Mustang band will perform its Christmas concert at 7 p.m. Monday in the school's auditorium.

The Christmas program will be conducted along with the junior high school's choir and drama department.

On Dec. 18 in the Midland High School auditorium, the Mustang band will perform with the MHS concert band in the high school's Christmas program.

Jana Jones Lions Club Queen

Jana Jones, an 18-year-old senior at Midland High School, was selected as queen of the Downtown Lions Club for 1980-81 at the club's meeting held Wednesday in Midland Center.

Ten young ladies, five from Midland High and five from Lee High, were presented as finalists in the annual competition.

Miss Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H.C. "Nub" Jones, will represent the club in the district queen contest scheduled next spring. She was crowned by Nita Bedford, the club's retiring queen.

Janet Elaine Landenberger, a 17-year-old senior at Lee High School, was named first runner-up, and Angela Essman, a 17-year-old junior at Midland High School, second runner-up.

Lion Jack Darden was chairman of the contest. Morris Hulsey, club president, presided at the meeting. The emcees for the contest were Lions J.E. McLean and W.H. "Bill" Collyns.

Judges were Mrs. Kem Merren, Mrs. Joan Henry and Dr. Keith Poe.

Other contestants included Debbie Brown, Debra Foster, Ana Belinda Garcia and Stacy Lewis, all of Lee High School; and Connie Elizabeth Caton, Gerri Ann Gilliland and Michael Elizabeth Marcum, all of Midland High.

Miss Jones, who has numerous achievements to her credit during her high school career, plans to attend The University of Texas at Austin following high school graduation, majoring in merchandizing for fashion, and studying clothing and textiles.

Jury recommends 40 years for rapist

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — A state district court jury has recommended a 40-year prison sentence and a $10,000 fine for a teen-ager convicted in the brutal rape of an 8-year-old girl.

Jurors deliberated about 5½ hours Wednesday before recommending the sentence for Johnny Fancher, 17, of Amarillo.

The same jury deliberated only about 10 minutes Tuesday before convicting Fancher of aggravated rape of a child in the trial moved here from Amarillo on a change of venue.

The girl, who prosecutors said may never be able to bear children or enjoy normal sexual relations because of the attack, told jurors Tuesday that Fancher lured her into a growths of weeds behind an Amarillo bowling alley on the pretext of helping him "find a good hiding place."

Prosecutors contended Fancher choked the child and started to rape her. When the girl attempted to fight back, prosecutors said Fancher beat the girl with a large rock.

Police found a blood-covered rock and large board at the scene of the Sept. 3 rape.

The girl told jurors the next thing she remembered after being choked was seeing her father and then waking up in the hospital.

Defense attorney John Mann did not present any witnesses prior to the punishment phase of the trial and waived his chance to present a final argument. However, he put Fancher on the stand during the punishment phase in an effort to convince Judge George Dowlan to probate the sentence.

Assistant District Attorney Tom Hughes read to jurors Tuesday a portion of Fancher's statement to police.

"While I was at the bowling alley I raped a little girl — about 10 years old," Fancher said

Revenue sharing future uncertain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prospects for an extension of the federal revenue sharing program for local governments are unclear as an unpredictable lame-duck Congress moves toward adjournment.

The House and Senate have passed similar versions of a three-year extension of the revenue sharing program for local governments, but a dispute over the no-strings grants to state governments is holding up final congressional action. The next move is up to the Senate.

Both houses have approved a bill that would extend $4.6 billion in annual aid to local governments through fiscal year 1983. The bill also authorizes, subject to appropriations, $2.3 billion a year for state governments in fiscal 1982 and 1983.

However, the House included a provision that would prohibit states from receiving revenue-sharing money without giving up an equal amount of money from other "targeted" federal programs which are intended for specific purposes.

The Senate voted Tuesday to delete that House provision and replace it with a one-year pilot program to study the plan. The House refused Wednesday to accept that move, sending the extension legislation back to the Senate.

A strong opponent of revenue sharing, Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, said the federal government cannot afford to allow states to have both revenue-sharing money and the targeted assistance.

"This is not revenue sharing, it is deficit sharing," Brooks said.

One top House staff member said it will be a "question of who blinks first" and the outcome is hard to predict in this volatile lame-duck Congress.

The revenue-sharing program, which began during Richard M. Nixon's presidency, expired Sept. 30, but the next grants are not due until January.

If the House and Senate are unable to work out their differences, local revenue resharing could be preserved under a stopgap appropriations bill now pending before Congress which would extend for one year the local portion of the revenue-sharing program.

PUC approves settlement

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Public Utility Commission approved a settlement Tuesday which is expected to increase electric rate revenues for West Texas Utilities by almost $9.6 million a year.

The company requested an annual increase of $12.7 million but the settlement basically followed the commission staff's recommendation.

Opposition claims landslide victory

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — Voting in Uganda's first national election in 18 years ended today with the opposition Democratic Party of Paul Ssemogerere claiming it was rolling to a "landslide victory" over the party of Milton Obote, the former president who was favored to win.

The Democratic Party said early and unofficial reports from its poll watchers gave it 41 seats to three for Obote's Uganda People's Congress. No official election results were announced immediately, and the Democratic Party's claim could not be confirmed.

The voting had been extended for a second day today due to the late delivery of ballot boxes, ballots and voter lists at hundreds of polling stations.

Opponents of Obote charged that the extension gave the pro-Obote government currently in power a chance to "indulge in malpractices." But a source close to a Commonwealth team observing the balloting commented:

"This election couldn't be rigged — it's too inefficient."

Police agents were ordered to guard their ballot boxes during the night to prevent tampering with them.

Nearly 5 million people were eligible to vote for members of a Parliament which will elect Obote or Ssemogerere president. Hundreds gathered in the dark Wednesday morning at the 5,000 polling stations across the country, many as much as five hours before the opening hour. They waited quietly through the morning as late delivery of voting materials delayed the start of balloting at many stations up to four hours. Election officials said that in Kampala, for example, they had only 12 vehicles to make deliveries to more than 100 polling places.

After eight years of Idi Amin's dictatorship, a chaotic year of military rule and a campaign marked by violence and charges of intimidation and fraud, the voting was generally good-humored and peaceful. The voters were searched at the polling stations, and in Obote's Kampala district the president ing officer told the people: "No guns, no party cards, no grenades — no nothing."

Obote, who became president in 1966, abolished parliament and suspended democratic freedoms before Amin, his army commander, deposed him in 1971. He took refuge in neighboring Tanzania, and in 1979 an invading army of Tanzanian troops and Ugandan exiles drove Amin from the country. After months of factional strife, Obote supporter Paulo Muwanga took over the government six months ago, and the ex-president returned from exile for the campaign.

Col. Harland Sanders is 'feeling much better'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Col. Harland Sanders is "feeling better" at a Louisville hospital, but he remains on the critical list, says a spokesman for Kentucky Fried Chicken.

The 90-year-old founder of the fried chicken empire is battling pneumonia for the second time since he was hospitalized Nov. 7.

John Cox, a KFC spokesman, said he visited Sanders at Louisville Jewish Hospital on Wednesday and asked how Sanders was doing.

Lions Club hosts

holiday party

A special program of Christmas music was the featured entertainment at the annual Christmas party of the Downtown Lions Club, held Tuesday night at Ranchland Hills Country Club. It was a ladies night function.

The entertainers were members of the Sonshiners group of the First Baptist Church, under the direction of Doris Bruce. Other members of the choral group included Kay Burchard, Gwen Carley, Charlotte Cooke, Marianna Crose, Bettye Dellis, Fluffy Green, Sharon Hyde, Doris Lloyd, Brenda Warren and Sharon Wright.

The Sonshiners were aided in the performance by Santa Claus, in the person of James Storie.

Program arrangements were handled by Lion George Loudamy.

Lame-duck Cabinet spending money

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several members of President Carter's lame-duck Cabinet and their aides are spending their last days in office on taxpayer-financed trips to some of the world's glamour spots: London, Paris, Hawaii, Peking.

The journeys all involve official business, but at least two Cabinet members canceled international tours because of their belief that such travel would seem inappropriate during their transition from office. Even these secretaries sent assistants in their place. Destination: China.

China is particularly attractive to the Carter lame ducks. Three delegations were headed there; others were headed for Europe and the Orient.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall was arriving today in Paris, where he will spend two days before heading to China for five days.

Meanwhile, Energy Secretary Charles W. Duncan Jr. was returning from a four-day trip to Paris, where he attended an international meeting of energy ministers.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown spent two days in Brussels this week for the NATO defense ministers' meeting and then headed for Japan for two days, South Korea for one day and, on the way home, Hawaii for a day.

Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie also is in Brussels for the NATO meeting. En route home, he is stopping over in London for the weekend to meet with British officials.

On the other hand, after President Carter was defeated in the November election, Commerce Secretary Phillip M. Klutznick canceled a long-planned trip to China for the U.S.-China economic and trade exhibit. Instead, he sent eight assistants.

"He didn't want to appear that he was going on a boondoggle even though he thought it wasn't," said Malcolm Barr, a Commerce Department press aide.

Housing and Urban Development Secretary Moon Landrieu also canceled a trip to China after the election.

"He felt he should be here for the transition," said Gene Russell, the department's press spokesman.

Russell said Landrieu authorized three aides to take the two-week trip, which ends Dec. 14. They are Tila Maria de Hancock, assistant to the secretary for International affairs;

Russell Marine, general manager of the New Communities Development Corp., and Amelie Wogan, special assistant to the secretary.

In addition, Russell said four other HUD officials have been to Paris since the election for "urban planning meetings," and two HUD officials have been to Mexico City for a seminar on solar energy and architecture.

The HUD officials' China trip, like Secretary Marshall's trip to Paris, Peking and Shanghai, is part of a cultural and governmental exchange program established by former President Richard M. Nixon.

Marshall will be meeting with Chinese officials to discuss job safety and health, employment training, rural development and health care, said press aide Don Smythe.

Smythe said that when Carter was defeated, Marshall checked with the Chinese to see if they still wanted him to make the trip and they said yes. The trip then was approved by the National Security Council and the State Department, Smythe said.

Smythe said Marshall will be accompanied to Paris by one Labor Department official and a White House fellow, a woman participating in a one-year program for young professionals who want to learn how the government operates. They will be joined in Peking and Shanghai by two other Labor Department aides.

Energy Secretary Duncan has been attending a meeting at the International Energy Agency in Paris for energy ministers from the world's largest oil-consuming countries. Energy experts say it is an important meeting where his attendance would be expected.

Two years ago, President Carter ordered the executive branch of the federal government to slash its $3 billion travel budget by an estimated $60 million to $75 million.

Citing the need to contain inflation, Carter asked each department and agency head to cut their administrative travel costs by 20 percent.

The administrative travel budget for fiscal year 1981 was $3.5 billion, including $2.2 billion for the Defense Department.

The lame-duck travel comes just two weeks after aides to Ronald Reagan said government travel would be a chief target of budget cutters once he assumes the presidency on Jan. 20.

Reagan getting economic advice

WASHINGTON (AP) — A cross section of American leaders, reminded that "people are alert and watching," is about to give President-elect Ronald Reagan some unsolicited advice for carrying out his campaign pledge to revive the nation's economy.

More than 175 leaders from business, education, government and labor gathered Wednesday to discuss ways for cutting inflation, boosting employment, and improving the country's energy and productivity outlook.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, told the conference that "people are alert and watching" as the incoming Reagan administration claims a mandate for new approaches to old problems.

Bentsen's committee will use the conference's conclusions as a basis for a bipartisan report the panel will submit to Reagan before he takes office on Jan. 20.

Most of the discussions on economic problems were conducted in five seminars at which only recommendations — but no conclusions — were sought. But at the public sessions there was solid agreement that any lasting improvement in the economy will require government, business and labor to bury their differences.

"Business must not apologize for being motivated by profit, but develop ways to enlarge the distributive share available for the public good," said conference member and former Democratic Rep. Barbara Jordan of Texas.

In other economic news Wednesday, President Carter's two-year-old voluntary wage and price guidelines "hav had no discernible effect" in curbing inflation, the General Accounting Office reported.

U.S. businesses plan to increase spending on plant and equipment by an inflation-adjusted 2.5 percent during the first half of 1981, the Commerce Department reported. Courtenay Slater, the chief economist for the federal agency, said the expected expansion is "relatively strong and indicates the economy is more robust than we thought."

Meanwhile, the panel of national leaders also heard from William M. Batten, chairman of the New York Stock Exchange, who cited a recent survey in which 80 percent of those polled said there has been too little cooperation among business, labor and government.

Busing foe withdrawing from battle — for now

Sen. Helms will leave the issue to new Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The leader of anti-busing forces in the Senate is withdrawing from the battle for this year, leaving the issue to the new, more conservative Congress, which convenes next month.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said late Tuesday he will no longer fight efforts by Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., against anti-busing language in a stopgap appropriations bill nearing a vote in the Senate.

Weicker said he would try to kill the busing amendment when the measure reaches the Senate floor.

Helms, who blocked earlier attempts by Weicker to soften the anti-busing language in a spending bill that President Carter has vowed to veto, said he is satisfied for now that the Senate has expressed its view on the subject.

Lawmakers will be free to pass an anti-busing bill after the 97th Congress, with a Republican-controlled Senate, takes office in January, Helms said. President-elect Ronald Reagan has indicated he would sign such legislation.

Helms' statement came while congressional leaders and White House officials negotiated over whether Carter would sign the stopgap spending measure, even if it contained some form of anti-busing language.

The stopgap resolution is needed because Carter has said he will veto a $9.1 billion regular appropriations bill because it contained an amendment that would bar the Justice Department from seeking court-ordered busing to desegregate schools.

When the Senate passed the regular appropriations bill last week, Weicker tried unsuccessfully to add a paragraph to the anti-busing language saying it was not intended to prohibit the Justice Department or the courts from enforcing the Constitution.

Helms, however, said the amendment was designed only to "leave the door ajar just a little bit" for mandatory busing.

In announcing he would veto the bill, Carter said the anti-busing language "would permit a serious encroachment on the powers of this office."

The real issue, Carter said, was not busing but "whether it is proper for the Congress to prevent the president from carrying out his constitutional responsibility to enforce the Constitution and the laws of the United States."

White House press secretary Jody Powell said Tuesday the president hasn't changed his mind.

"Anybody that thinks he is bluffing is crazy," Powell said.

In response to further questioning, however, Powell left open the possibility that Carter might sign the stopgap spending measure, even with an anti-busing amendment attached.

The appropriations bill would provide money for the Justice, State and Commerce departments, the federal courts and several government agencies for the 1981 fiscal year, which began Oct. 1.

The stopgap resolution would enable these and other agencies to continue spending money at current levels for six months.

Shifts in view of family more than political game

By PHYLLIS BATTELLE
Hearst Special News Service

NEW YORK — In "Public Assistance," a new board game which is selling big among conservatives, a player's best chance of winning is to acquire enough "illegitimate child" cards. Each such child gets $100 in play-money welfare payments, plus a $50 donation for obstetrical costs, from other players unfortunate enough to have a job.

The game is callous at best, racist at worst, and has been denounced by Patricia Roberts Harris, Secretary of Health and Human Services, as a vicious form of stereotyping. But the creators of the outrageously satirical diversion, two Maryland men who backed Libertarian Ed Clark for the presidency, claim the game is good-humored realism. "We didn't invent this game," says one. "Government liberals did. We just put it in a box."

The 17th century philosopher Baruch Spinoza wrote "A man hates what he laughs at," and it's certainly true that the gleeful reception of the "Public Assistance" game reveals the deep ridicule and pent-up resentments of those who play. Even more, the game demonstrates in shocking terms the new polarization between political factions since the country lurched sharply to the right on November 4th. One side chortles while the other quivers in fear of losing its franchise, and perhaps its survival. At issue is what the role of the federal government will be in child welfare and family matters, with the ultra-conservatives feeling a mandate to return to traditional family values and a government hands-off policy in human affairs, while defeated liberals worry about severe cuts in programs that protect the poor, and particularly children.

Pleading the cause of the U.S.'s 70-million children, a substantial minority dependent on social programs and policies ranging from school lunches to protection from abuse and neglect, one man compares our young to the hostages in Iran. "Unaware of the turmoil that surrounds them, powerless to exert influence on their own behalf, and dependent on the bargaining of politicians who decide their fate, they are hostages in their own land," writes Chauncey Alexander, Executive Director of the National Association of Social Workers. Alexander sees children as "pawns in a complex, bitter adult game of political maneuvering," who will be severely victimized if the ultra-conservative bill called the Family Protection Act (S. 1808) gets through Congress: It calls for large-scale reductions in government's role in family and education matters — everything from "restricting federal funds to states which prohibit voluntary school prayers, to restricting funds for materials which denigrate, diminish or deny the historically understood role differences between the sexes." The Act would set back reforms and programs 20 years or more.

Many middle-road Republicans agree that the New Right's call for revival of traditional family values is dangerously unrealistic. The traditional model family was supported by a male breadwinner, with a mother, housewife and child-rearer. Today's family consists, more often than not, of two working parents and in the economic and social climate of the times, they would be hard put to survive if the mother gave up her wages. Certainly a house, color TV and college educations would be out of reach and, as one editor puts it, "We doubt that the conservatives touting traditional values would lend themselves to a stripped-down lifestyle. Big business would not survive a return to 18th century modes of living, with a government that dictates people live totally self-sufficient lives. One wonders if those so militantly opposed to most federal legislation affecting children — who feel that child-rearing is personal, internal and within each family's resources to manage — have thought of that."

Mr. Alexander concedes that government has bungled. The current bureaucracy, consisting of over 47,500 voluntary and 7,500 government agencies performing social services for families and children, "was designed by no one," performing social services for families and children, "was designed by no one." Help needs to be coordinated and streamlined, given solid direction and management. But he warns that family and child advocates are up against strong opposition from the New Right, which he claims is a "sophisticated, well-oiled political machine which can raise millions of dollars and generate millions of pieces of mail to Congress on any single issue, from opposing welfare to opposing equal rights for women."

Obviously, most Americans want change, less government greed with our pocketbooks and fewer regulations. But turning back the clock to a simpler age is not viable in a complex, industrial, largely urban society — a new, more efficient clock must be concocted. Otherwise, anarchy. This is no time for playing games, especially "Public Assistance." It is a time for caring, and vigilance.

When there's a problem, it's said, the liberals throw money at it. When there's a problem, it seems, some conservatives throw derision at it.

Odessa College opening ORT training program

ODESSA — Persons interested in training to become operating room technicians should apply by Dec. 19 for new classes which begin Jan. 15 at Odessa College.

Students who start operating room technology (ORT) training at the start of the spring semester at OC can complete the program in 12 months, according to Val Jumper, program director and associate professor of operating room technology at OC.

Upon completion of the OC program, students are eligible to take the National Certification Test given by the Association of Surgical Technologists, Jumper said.

"A skilled ORT has the necessary training to assist in general surgeries and is able to assist in special advanced surgeries such as eye, ear, orthopedics, and cardiovascular," Jumper explains.

The program director adds that the primary function of an ORT is that of the sterile instrument handler in the operating room.

"But training includes the basic knowledge of the operative procedures," Jumper said.

Interested persons should contact Jumper or Don Huff, head of science and health programs at OC, to apply for the spring ORT program.

Chiropractors' suit goes to trial

CHICAGO (AP) — A long-standing dispute between chiropractors and the American Medical Association has moved to the courtroom with the trial of an antitrust suit against the AMA and other medical groups.

Five chiropractors, including Chester Wilk of Chicago, have charged that the AMA orchestrated a campaign to drive chiropractors out of business to eliminate competition.

George P. McAndrews, the chiropractors' attorney, told a jury in an opening statement Tuesday that he will provide memos of the Chicago-based AMA outlining allegedly illegal plans to stop public funds to chiropractors and bar them from hospitals.

Max Wildman, an AMA attorney, said the medical organization has taken its position as a matter of public interest and not to eliminate competition. He said evidence will show that the AMA violated no antitrust laws.

The AMA once branded chiropractors as an "unscientific cult."

The five complainants contend that harassment by the AMA, the American Hospital Association, the Illinois and the Chicago Medical Soci-

Widow hits intruder with cane

ATLANTA (AP) — Dorothy Pugh didn't like seeing a young man trying to rob 80-year-old Ralph Davis. So the 73-year-old lady grabbed Davis' cane and whacked the assailant on the head until he fled.

Davis, a retired painter, and Mrs. Pugh are residents of an Atlanta apartment building for the elderly, but they were not well acquainted before the incident. Now, Davis says, they will be close friends.

"I love her," he said. "I even bought her a (soft drink) after it was all over."

The two were in the lobby of the building Sunday night when an assailant attacked Davis, frisking him in search of money.

"Mr. Davis had the cane in his hand when the man began to frisk him," Mrs. Pugh said. "I just had to twist and twist to get the cane out of his hand. I finally got ahold of the cane, took it with both hands and hit him (the assailant) across the head."

"She knocked the fool out of him," said Davis, who weighs 110 pounds. "I tell you she had a lot of nerve to take on that man with my walking stick."

"Mr. Davis is just a little bitty thing," she said. "He couldn't defend himself."

USDA has new horse publication

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has a new publication that tells where to go for practically anything you want to know about horses.

For example, the 114-page directory — Horse Publications and Visual Materials — lists the names and addresses of all known breed registry organizations in the United States.

They range from the American Andalusian Horse Registry of the Americas to the Welsh Pony Society of America.

And it lists dozens of other horse-related organizations, which deal with such activities as endurance riding, shows, jumping, rodeo riding, trail riding, side-saddle riding and harness racing.

The directory is being distributed to state and county extension offices across the country as a reference book for horse owners, 4-H members and others interested in obtaining specific publications, photographic slides, film or other material about horses.

Dixon D. Hubbard of the department's Science and Education Administration said Tuesday that more than 5,000 copies of the directory were printed.

The directory will be updated every two years so that new listings can be added and other changes made.

That famous hybrid, the mule, also is recognized in the directory under a listing for The American Donkey and Mule Society, Denton, Texas.

Among the society's listings are: "The Saddle

Mule," "Is Braying a Problem?" and "Care of the Pet Donkey."

From the society's New Haw Book Service is such information as: "Asses Vs Jackasses," "The Donkey and Mule as a Backyard Hobby," "Twenty Mule Team Days in Death Valley" and "Misunderstood Mule."

Virtually every kind of activity — including the riding and care of horses — is described by publications or visual aids available on order from the various organizations, state universities and extension offices.

From the University of New Hampshire, for example, are slides or films that include such subjects as: "Horses and

Their Ancestors," "Health Hints for Your Horse," "Buying a Horse," "Plaiting the Hunter's Mane and Tail" and "Hot Horseshoeing."

And from the University of California, Davis, is a long list of publications, including: "Horses and Wheels," "So You Want to Be a Horse Judge," "Horse Shopping" and "4-H Light Horse Project."

Besides being available as a reference at extension offices in the near future, the directory can be ordered directly at a cost of $4.50 per copy from: Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402, officials said.

Farm loan program bonds are sold

AUSTIN (AP) — A financial adviser says a new state-guaranteed loan program will help keep farms in the family but will not help Texans get bank loans to buy acreage.

The First National Bank of Dallas was named the low bidder for the $10 million in bonds. Money from the sale of the bonds will guarantee $50 million in farm loans.

The program was approved by voters in a November 1979 constitutional amendment election.

Ray Hutchison, a Dallas lawyer who advised Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown on the bond sale, said under existing financial conditions, "the probability of a bank making a loan for a farm, even with a state guarantee, is remote."

The program's biggest benefit, Hutchison said, will be for farmers who want to sell their land to their children and carry the note themselves.

The Dallas bank bought the bonds at 8.985 percent interest.

The state's liability, in case of default, is limited to $10 million, said Brown.

"There are some misunderstandings about the program," Brown said. "We want to stress that this is not a loan program, it only guarantees that the state will stand behind 90 percent of the loan."

Brown estimated 150 families will get loans guaranteed under the program. The guarantees are available only to five-year Texas residents who have a net worth of less than $100,000.

The applicant must also prove that farming will be the family's prime source of income.

Weather shrivels Soviet grain output

WASHINGTON (AP) — The latest Agriculture Department estimate of the Soviet Union's 1980 grain harvest is 185 million metric tons, unchanged from last month.

Poor weather has once again shriveled Soviet grain production. This year's estimated output would be 21.3 percent below Moscow's plan target for 1980 and not much more than 1979's reduced harvest of 179.2 million metric tons.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and, for example, is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat or 39.4 bushels of corn.

"Although Soviet officials have not published a preliminary figure for total 1980 grain output, press reports from the USSR's three major grain-producing regions suggest a crop that will not be significantly higher than last year's drought-ravaged harvest," officials said Wednesday.

Looking at global harvests, the department said total world grain output in 1980-81 is estimated at about 1.53 billion metric tons, up slightly from prospects a month ago.

The slight increase was due to larger grain production estimates for Canada, India and Western Europe, the report said.

Weather also hurting cotton harvest in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Poor weather has continued to take bites out of this year's cotton harvest, now estimated at about 10.9 million bales, 25 percent below the 1979 crop of 14.6 million bales.

The new estimate was announced Wednesday by the Agriculture Department. Based on Dec. 1 surveys, it also was 3 percent less than the department's estimate of 11.2 million bales a month ago.

Production of upland cotton by major producing states, based on Dec. 1 indications, included:

Alabama, 420 pounds an acre and production of 275,000 bales; Arizona, 1,062 and 1,345,000; Arkansas, 327 and 450,000; California, 963 and 3,050,000; Georgia, 260 and 84,000; Louisiana, 390 and 455,000; Mississippi, 497 and 1,150,000; Missouri, 330 and 365,000; New Mexico, 440 and 110,000; North Carolina, 419 and 55,000; Oklahoma, 177 and 220,000; South Carolina, 308 and 77,000; Tennessee, 347 and 195,000; and Texas, 229 and 3,200,000.

Two students were inadvertently left out of the All-Region band article which was published in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram. Also, named to the All-Region band were Jeff Boortz, bass clarinet, and Bob Scott, cornet, both of Lee High School.

Also, 18 students qualified for the Pre-Area band. Tryouts for the Pre-Area band will be conducted at Permian High School in Odessa Dec. 15.

Those Midland High School band students making the Pre-Area band are Leslie Fort, Karen Green, Marta McNabb, Jay Hardy, Keith Cofer, Tim Hicks, Ted Bernard and Chuck Cloyd.

Lee High School band members making the Pre-Area band are Stacy Lewis, Susan Pullig, Jeff Boortz, Anthony Jones, Greg Gallagher, Bryan Briley, Tim Green, Clay Porsch, Scooter Ross, and Julie Dunn.

Members of the All-Region band will meet at Lee High School on Jan. 30 and 31 for the annual clinic and concert. Clinicians for the All-Region band are Howard Dunn from Richardson and Verda Herrington from Austin.

M-SQUARES OF MIDLAND will have a Christmas dance Friday at M-Square. Tommy White is calling the dance to begin at 8 p.m.

WANT TO HAVE YOUR CHRISTMAS GIFT WRAPPED for a small fee and a good cause?

Trinity Presbyterian Church Youth Group will be wrapping gifts at the church this Saturday, and on Dec. 20.

Wrapping will be from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The public is invited to bring gifts by to be wrapped. Proceeds will finance a ski trip for the group.

ANNUAL CHRISTMAS GET-TOGETHER for the Midland Genealogical Society will be at Rosalind Redfern's home.

The party will be at 7:30 p.m. today. A "wishing well" will give members an opportunity to put their requests in for a book that they would like to have for the library.

The Society Board will furnish refreshments, but any member may bring treats if he or she wishes.

ACTIVITIES ARE JUMPING this month at Sage Health Care Center.

Many activities are planned for the holidays and the entire facility is decorated in a Christmas theme, according to a center representative.

Residents at the center were entertained with a Christmas music program by the Sweet Adelines. Residents, staff and family members enjoyed hot chocolate, cookies and Christmas music—barbershop style.

MR. AND MRS. ALAN MARKELL of Yukon, Okla., and formerly of Midland, have chosen the name of Timothy Paul for their son, born Nov. 19 in the South Community Hospital of Oklahoma City. Mrs. Markell is the former Dorothy Jean Krizan of Midland.

Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Krizan of Midland and Mr. and Mrs. Lee Markell of Mobile, Ala. Mrs. Mary Krizan of San Angelo is great-grandmother.

The League of Women Voters will have its general meeting at 7:30 p.m. today at 14 Saddle Club Drive. Dr. Joseph Baressi, assistant director of the Midland Independent School District will be the speaker.

SORORITY NEWS

PSI PHI CHAPTER, BETA SIGMA PHI

Psi Phi Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi met in the home of sponsor Phyllis Speck for its December meeting.

Pledge ritual was given to members Sherri Alexander and Linda Fisher; affirmation ritual for Cheryl Browning, Shirley Collins and Becky Farris; and ritual for sponsor Phyllis Speck.

Service chairman Becky Winkler reported that the chapter would be purchasing clothing to Dress-A-Live-Doll for the Salvation Army and is sending Christmas gifts to their girl in Girlstown.

Ways and Means Chairman Shirley Collins reported that most of the members were completing their first half of painting the city's fire hydrants, and reminded them of their upcoming deadline on this project.

The chapter concluded the evening by singing Christmas carols and then exchanged Secret Sister Christmas gifts.

The chapter will have a children's Christmas party followed by an adult White Elephant party on Saturday.

KAPPA KAPPA IOTA UPSILON CONCLAVE SOCIETY

Kappa Kappa Iota Upsilon Conclave Society met for a Christmas gala banquet and program at the Broken Spoke Restaurant.

Mistress of ceremonies was Nova Lynn Campbell. Others who spoke before the program were Mary Hall and Marjorie Miller, president.

Mince Pie tasty holiday tradition

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

For most of my life, I have celebrated Christmas in New York, but I still associate the holiday with the feast served at my grandfather's home in Virginia, where I spent my early childhood.

The turkey, stuffed with chestnuts, held the center spot at the long board festooned with greens and red berries. It was flanked on one side by a big Smithfield ham.

On the other side was a big bowl of oyster stew filled with small sweet Southern bivalves in light cream with gobs of melting butter.

By tradition, the star role went to the plum pudding, but to me the main attraction was the assortment of homemade pies, especially the spicy mince.

The mincemeat which fills this pie is probably the only dessert that calls for ground beef and suet, along with a formidable list of fruits, juices and spices. It is a good idea to make the mincemeat weeks ahead to let it season. Here's one recipe.

MINCEMEAT PIE

- 5 cups beef round, ground
- 4 cups suet, ground
- 3 cups apples, peeled and chopped
- 1 1/2 cups orange pulp, chopped
- 1/4 cup lemon juice
- 3 (11-ounce) packages currants
- 1 cup brandy
- 3 cups sweet cider
- 1-3rd cup finely chopped orange peel
- 3 (15 ounce) packages raisins
- 1 (8-ounce) package chopped candied citron
- 2 (1-pound) packages brown sugar
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 1 tablespoon cinnamon
- 1 tablespoon allspice
- 2 teaspoons nutmeg
- 1 teaspoon powdered cloves
- 1/2 teaspoon ginger

Combine all ingredients in large saucepan. Simmer 1 hour, stirring frequently to prevent sticking. Prepare pint home-canning jars and lids according to manufacturer's instructions. Pour mincemeat into hot jars, leaving 1 inch head space. Remove air bubbles with non-metallic spatula. Adjust caps. Process pints 20 minutes at 10 pounds pressure in a pressure canner. Yield, about 12 pints.

Secret Pals were revealed and gifts exchanged.

Jenny Ready directed the group in carols.

BETA OMEGA CHAPTER OF EPSILON SIGMA ALPHA

121 members from 13 chapters in Texas attended the state board meeting of Epsilon Sigma Alpha held in Irving.

Members from Beta Omega Chapter in Midland attending were Jean Hughes, Lynda Flippin and Priscilla Drummond.

An arts and crafts fair was held with chapter members throughout Texas displaying their handmade items for sale.

Helen Pearson, guest speaker from the National Foundation of March of Dimes, presented the state sorority members a plaque commemorating the sorority for being the largest single contributor in 1979 and 1980 with over 1,000,000 service hours and $1,000,000 in donations each year.

She also praised sorority members for donating the first iron lung in Texas and for numerous pieces of diagnostic equipment which are distributed to medical centers in the state.

BETA DELTA CHAPTER, BETA SIGMA PHI

Beta Delta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority met in the home of Gail Jones for its regular meeting.

A covered dish dinner was held in honor of Beta Delta's newest members, Seleta Wilson and Jay Zachry.

Plans were discussed for the upcoming Christmas party to be held at Super Roll-A-Rena for members and their families.

Doris St. Peters gave the cultural program on Drama-Art. Next meeting will be in her home.

Driver neglect

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Despite today's emphasis on fuel-saving car care, more than a third of the country's drivers continue to neglect regular auto maintenance, according to a study by an auto-products maker.

The study also showed that fuel and ignition systems — the two systems which can significantly influence gas mileage — are the most neglected.

These conclusions were based on electronic engine analyses performed by Fram Corp. on more than 1,200 cars across the country. Approximately 40 percent of the vehicles showed high levels of emissions.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Great ways to fudge around

DEAR HELOISE:

This is for Vincent who didn't know what the first sign of stiffening is when making fudge:

Many recipes say "pour when the cooked fudge begins to lose its shine during the beating process." This is fine, except almost too late. Often the fudge stiffens up fast after you see it turning dull and you can't get the last bit out of the pan.

My trick is this: after beating awhile, I put a drop of fudge on my tongue and rub it around my mouth to feel if any crystals are starting to form. As soon as any crystals can be felt, I pour the fudge into a platter and it continues to set.

Several years ago I taught fudge-making to seventh grade girls. I had five classes, each divided into six groups. In one day I'd supervise 30 batches of fudge. I learned a lot!

May I pass my experience on to Vincent and any others suffering through a ruined batch of fudge?

Use a candy thermometer and let the fudge cook to 234F. The "soft ball stage" works, and you can learn to test this way. You also can pick up a small, cooled piece and roll it between your fingers; if it holds together in a soft ball, it has cooked long enough.

Corn syrup or cream of tartar will keep the sugar crystals from forming too soon, making a creamier fudge (smaller crystals). Use either one-fourth teaspoon of cream of tartar or a teaspoon of corn syrup (not both).

Always cool the fudge to lukewarm (about 100 to 105F) before beating. Beating hot fudge takes longer and makes it more grainy (larger crystals).

If the batch of fudge turns out too hard, it's because it was cooked at too high a temperature. Reclaim it by returning it to the pan, adding a tablespoon or two of water and re-cooking to the 234F temperature, re-cooling and beating again.

Soupy fudge has been undercooked. Use it as a topping on ice cream or as icing on a cake. It too can be reclaimed by cooking again. One or two degrees will make a difference in how soft or hard the fudge turns out, so it's important to use a candy thermometer.

Sometimes the old arm gives out before the fudge has begun to show signs of crystallizing. Go ahead and pour it into a shallow baking dish and refrigerate for several hours. Often it will set while there. If not, re-cooking is in order.

One last hint: To clean the cooking pan, fill it with hot water and return it to the stove. Let it come to a boil and the mess will melt away. — Mrs. C.F.R.

Thanks for taking the time to fill us in. You definitely seem to have the credentials for knowing how. Hopefully, you've inspired many to try again. — Heloise

XMAS GIFT

Dear Heloise: Last year you carried a delightful letter from a grandmother who received a cherished Christmas gift from one of her grandsons.

She received a card which read, "My gift to you, Granny, is a letter each month." And sure enough, each month she received a letter from him telling of his activities and interests.

That's a good thought again for this year, 'cause I don't know of anything anyone would appreciate more from loved ones than hearing from them once a month.

Just sign me — One Who Longs for a Letter a Month

How long does it take to sit down and jot a few lines on paper, letting someone know we're thinking of them?

Days get long and lonely when family members are far away — sometimes even when they live just across town too.

We're all guilty of getting wrapped up in our own little world and tending to forget those we love.

Granny and other family elders are our heritage, and helped make us what we are today, so let's remember them and let them know we love and care about them. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I read in your column about the lady who had been helpful to her mother in obtaining large print reading material from her local library.

My mother also has cataracts and has great difficulty in reading. We thought of something that is quite helpful to her, and thought it would be a good hint to pass along to your readers.

Having to use a magnifying glass has made it almost impossible for her to read a recipe and follow it properly. We purchased a photo album with the plastic covered sheets and I typed my mother's favorite recipes in all capital letters on cards.

We have inserted these under the plastic covers and now she can easily read and follow the recipes without using a magnifying glass. — Margaret M. Button

I know your mother appreciates this as it gives her one more way of being independent. Thanks for sharing. — Heloise

FABULOUS FIFTIES

Dear Heloise: Need a hairdo in a hurry? Beat one egg white until it stands in peaks. Dab enough on a strand of hair and roll as you want. It'll be dry and ready to comb out by the time you are dressed.

Cuts hair oil too and is good for someone who is laid up and can't have her hair shampooed. — Mrs. H. F. Gsell

CHAIR COVERS

Dear Heloise: To protect my overstuffed chairs, I bought some 60-inch wide fake fur. It wears so well, feels cuddly and is washable. You don't need to hem it either. — B.W.

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

Dear Heloise: I put a 25-pound bag of sugar away for hard times. Well, times are hard and so is the sugar!

Please help! With sugar prices in orbit, I'm about to take off too. I'll be forever grateful and promise never to do it again. — Flossie Flossie, if you have a microwave oven, put the bag of sugar in for just a few seconds (if the bag won't fit, you'll have to try breaking it into chunks first).

It'll soften up in a conventional oven, too. Preheat the oven to 350F degrees then turn it off. Set the bag of sugar on a cookie sheet and as the sugar begins to warm, it should soften. — Heloise

DEAR ABBY

Age didn't whither him, or custom make him stale

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Let SIXTY AND NO STUD speak for himself. At 37, I married a 60-year-old man whose performance would be envied by a man of any age.

I had had two previous marriages and several lovers in between. I'm convinced that age is incidental, and all a healthy, normal man needs to be a good lover is a warm, responsive woman. — NO COMPLAINTS IN SPOKANE

DEAR COMPLAINTS: Read on for a legitimate complaint, from your neck of the woods:

DEAR ABBY: SIXTY AND NO STUD is mistaken when he doubts that men are sexually active at 80.

When I was 70, I married for a second time. My husband was a widower, 85 and amazingly sexually active! I was far from inactive, but this man's demands were so excessive that after the first six months of our marriage I sought help from my physician. My doctor agreed that five times a day was excessive, so he would put me in the hospital a couple of times a year to give me a rest from my husband.

My husband died at 92. Believe it, SIXTY, when Abby says that some men are sexually active at 80, 85 and 90. Believe me, I know! — RESTING AT LAST IN SEATTLE.

DEAR RESTING: Judging from my mail, you know whereof you speak.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who frequently says, "I could care less." What he means is that he really doesn't care at all. To convey that idea, shouldn't he say, "I COULDN'T care less?" — AL IN OREGON

DEAR AL: To say, "I could care less," means one could care even less than he does. When one wants to convey that he cares so little he could not care less, the proper expression is, "I couldn't care less." Your friend is careless about his expressions.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding BEWILDERED IN BUCKS COUNTY, whose wife was always late: I have a lovely mother-in-law whom I love dearly, but she was never on time for anything. Whenever we'd pick her up, we would have to wait about half an hour for her to get ready, and consequently she made US late.

After numerous times of being late ourselves, we figured out a solution. If we had to be somewhere at 3 o'clock, we would tell Mom we had to be there at 2:30. From then on, we were always "on time." — J. IN FLORIDA

DEAR J.: You may have been on time, but your lovely mother-in-law continues to squander half an hour of your time whenever you pick her up. Let's hear it from someone who was "cured."

DEAR ABBY: I, too, was never on time, but my husband cured me of that habit in two easy lessons.

It was simple. Twice when I wasn't ready, he left without me. I was mad as a hornet, but I learned that he who is late gets left. — ON TIME IN TIBURON

CONFIDENTIAL TO ANONYMOUSLY YOURS: Yes, you should express sympathy to the family of a friend who took his own life. Make no reference to the circumstances, but be assured they would be far more hurt were none of his friends to send their condolences.

(Do you wish you had more friends? Get Abby's booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: Abby, Popularity, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.)

Stop the presses, there's been an escape

CHICAGO (AP) — A prisoner who tried an escape at police headquarters ended with a little more publicity than he bargained for — when he wound up in the press room, authorities said.

Police said Robert Michum, 22, awaiting a hearing Monday on criminal trespassing and traffic charges, fled from a crowded courtroom.

He ran down four flights of stairs to the press room where three reporters were working.

"We heard screams and a commotion that sounded like it was coming from the stairway," said Stephen P. Pollak of the City News Bureau. "Then this guy casually walks in, nods a 'hello' and walks over into a side room where the furnace is."

Out in the hall was 250-pound Theodore Sadowski, a sheriff's deputy. He was out of breath after chasing and looking for Michum.

Sadowski, 60, was led to where the prisoner was hiding. He and other officers apprehended Michum and took him to the central detention lock-up.

Thief zone

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A "thief zone" can mean more than the local lockup at the police station.

When drilling an oil well, "thief zones," or fractures in the sides of the hole, extract the lubricating mud which prevents the drill from sticking.

A product developed by Drilling Specialties is added to the drilling mud to plug "thief zones" and prevent mud loss.

Writing hard work

NEW YORK (AP) — Herman Melville worked nearly 25 years as a customs inspector here checking cargoes on newly arrived ships.

The author of "Moby Dick" could not make a living writing books, so he supported a wife and four children as an inspector for less than $4 a day.

Seek second opinion on mastectomy

By WARREN E. LEARY

AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)

Many American women who get breast cancer want a say about having their breasts removed and will likely seek a second medical opinion, according to a national survey.

The government survey, released Tuesday by the National Cancer Institute, indicates women are more knowledgeable than ever about breast cancer and may take more active roles in both detection and treatment.

In the nationwide survey of more than 2,000 women, the institute found "no other medical concern approached the magnitude of response which cancer received."

Breast cancer is the top cancer killer among women, with about 110,000 new cases and 37,000 deaths expected in 1981, the institute said.

Seventy-four percent of the women cited breast removal, or mastectomy, as the primary treatment. But most said they did not want their doctor alone to decide treatment. They want a chance to discuss it with relatives or friends.

Dr. Vincent T. DeVita, director of the institute, said this indicates many women want to play a more active role in decisions affecting their health.

"Fifty-five percent said they would not give their doctor prior consent to remove a breast immediately following surgical biopsy if cancer were discovered," DeVita said. "Instead, they prefer to make the decision about cancer treatment in two stages. Furthermore, 90 percent said they would seek a second medical opinion."

Sixty-three percent believe doctors sometimes remove breasts unnecessarily and this may influence the desire to participate in the decision, the survey said.

The findings indicate most women underestimate the prevalence of breast cancer, which will strike one woman in 11, but overestimate their own risk of getting the disease. One woman in three said she was very likely or somewhat likely to develop the disease.

The survey found women to be generally more knowledgeable about breast cancer and its diagnosis and treatment than in a 1973 survey by the American Cancer Society.

But serious misinformation still exists, the survey indicated. Despite a lack of scientific evidence, 68 percent believed that using birth control pills increased the risk of getting breast cancer. Half the women also believe the mistaken notion that a blow or an injury to the breast can cause cancer.

The survey also found that urban black and Hispanic women generally were less knowledgeable about breast cancer and its treatments than the general population.

DeVita said that despite some misconceptions, women know more about breast cancer than before and are getting more involved in detecting and treating it. This improves the prospect of cutting the death toll from the disease, he added.

Here's how: Amonia cleans grease from marble

By GENE CARY

Copley News Service

Q. I have an Italian marble top table that was refinished some time ago and it had a lovely shine. I used a commercial product on the marble for a long time, and then all of a sudden the surface became dull and sticky. How can I clean it and get the shine back? Thanks for any help you may give. — Margaret T., Randolph, N.J.

A. To remove greasy or oily stains, which usually are circular and darker in the center, wash the surface with ammonia, thoroughly rinse and towel dry.

If the surface remains dull and sticky, the stain has probably penetrated the marble surface. Then try this: Cut a white blotter to the size of your tabletop, saturate it with acetone, place over the surface and cover with plastic wrap to keep it moist. Leave for about 12 hours before wiping off and repeat the treatment if necessary. (Note: Use acetone only on solid marble, the real thing. Acetone will dissolve the binder used in cultured marble.)

To clean and protect marble-top furniture, use a special marble polish or liquid kitchen wax such as Jubilee. Apply as the label directs. Rub onto the surface, then wipe dry to a high sheen with a clean, soft cloth. Use these whenever necessary. Another suggestion: Often marble, particularly in light colors, may appear stained or discolored due to build-up of polishes or wax coatings that have previously been used. This should be removed with pure turpentine, then rinsed and polished.

Q. Our kitchen cabinets, pressed wood, have a moldy smell. Is there any way to remove the odor? — Mrs. R.C., Encinitas, Calif.

A. Once an offensive odor penetrates wood, it is there to stay. Therefore, you must try to mask the odor with a more acceptable fragrance, or a treatment that will make the odor less offensive. Try washing the cabinets with a solution of white vinegar and water, mixed half and half, or a strong solution of baking soda in warm water. The next suggestion was sent in by a reader: Rub vanilla extract into the wood surfaces, using a soft cloth, then wash with baking soda or a vinegar solution.

Q. Posts holding up our porch are beginning to rot. I am making plans to replace the posts, but need some advice on how to prevent future rotting. I intend to apply a wood preservative to the posts, especially at the places where they have contact with the ground. Can you give me some instructions? — Jack Y.M.

A. This condition is generally caused by lack of sufficient ventilation underneath the porch. Remove some of these enclosures and replace them with latticework or screening, being particularly careful to see there is plenty of cross ventilations. Applying a wood preservative is fine, but it would also be a good idea to place the new posts on masonry bases of some kind rather than setting them directly in the ground.

We honor the American Express® card.

Here's a unique gift-giving idea...and an edible one, at that! Easy-to-make cookies which have been spiced up with the flavor of tea make clever greeting card cookies.

Decorate the "cards" with ribbons and write your own personal message in icing for an enticing gift your friends will appreciate.

Send cookie greeting cards

Holiday greeting cards — which we'll soon be sending and receiving — go back some eight thousand years. They were used by ancient Egyptians to accompany gifts exchanged at their new year's festivals. Later on, maidens in ancient Rome, on feast days, wrote messages of love on hand-painted parchment paper; they deposited their "cards" in large urns in the town square for the young men to pick up and read aloud at the feasting. Present-day cards haven't changed much throughout the centuries.

This holiday season, why not give a greeting card that is different? Present those special friends and relatives with cookie cards, like these melt-in-the-mouth

"cards." They're simple to make and fun to decorate with your own personalized messages. This gingerbread recipe has an especially nice "spiciness" to it because instant tea is added to the dough. After the dough has been chilled and rolled out, cut out rectangles and place two small holes along one edge. You can buy ready-made tubes of decorative icing in various colors, or prepare your own. When the icing message is dry, thread ribbon through the holes for a colorful finishing touch.

It won't take much time or effort on your part — but your thoughtfulness and creativity will be much appreciated by those who receive these unusual "cards."

GIFT-GIVING COOKIE CARDS

- 1/2 cup butter or margarine, softened
- 1 cup dark brown sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1 teasp. vanilla extract
- 3 cups all-purpose flour
- 1/4 cup 100 percent instant tea powder
- 1 teasp. baking powder
- 1 teasp. ground cinnamon
- 1/2 teasp. ground ginger
- 1/2 teasp. salt

In large bowl, blend butter and sugar until light and fluffy; beat in eggs and vanilla.

In medium bowl, combine remaining ingredients, except decorative icing. Gradually add to butter mixture, blending well after each addition. Chill at least 1 hour.

Preheat oven to 375 F. On lightly-floured board, roll dough 1/4-inch thick; cut into 8 (5x7) rectangles. Make 2 small holes along one edge of each cookie. Place on ungreased cookie sheets, about 2 inches apart; bake 8 to 10 minutes. Cool slightly before removing to wire racks; cool completely.

Decorate with icing. When icing is dry, thread ribbon through holes in cookie. For a Double Delicious Cookie, tie 2 cookies together with ribbon. Makes 8 single cookies.

AT WIT'S END

Making a former brothel 'home'

By ERMA BOMBECK

A couple from Chicago recently discovered it's not easy making a "home" out of a former "house of pleasure."

Oh, sure, you can put in a nice lawn, a Doberman Pinscher guard dog, a baby, and a huge sign that reads, "PRIVATE RESIDENCE. KEEP OUT," but to sex seekers, it's kinky and they still pound on the door at all hours of the day and night.

The story brought back memories of a "house" in my neighborhood that was vacated by a madam. Five us sat around one afternoon and fantasized what a house would look like that was decorated in "Early Brothel."

"Well, I don't want to know," said Peg. "Just knowing that house exists in a neighborhood that voted for Reagan is disgusting."

"It should be torn down," said Juanita. "I don't have time to stand at the window all day and check out the cars."

"I wouldn't have known it was there," shrugged Ardelle. "If I didn't get a glimpse of it through a hole in the south hedge."

"Wild horses couldn't get me in there," said Syl.

"What would you say if I told you I could get a key?" I asked.

They said in unison, "We'd kill for it."

From here on in, there is virtually no dialogue to report. Five long-married ladies who acted like they got their children from a 4-H project that got out of hand filed silently through the rooms observing, touching, each with her own private fantasy.

The kitchen was the size of a broom closet. It was lust at first sight. We were stunned by a large room with nothing in it but a pull-down movie screen at one end. You'd have thought we had never seen a mattress floor before.

But it was the bedroom that stopped all of us dead in our tracks. A zebra-skin bar dominated one end of the room. There was a jacuzzi, a steam room, long flowing chiffon curtains, soft music that floated through the air and a shag carpet that went to your knees. A massive stone fireplace was at the other end and mirrors were everywhere. Lots of mirrors.

Seeing a button, I pushed it. It was like show time. The mirrored ceiling came alive with small, dancing stars, creating a celestial mood. The large, round bed, swathed in red plush velvet, began to revolve slowly. Someone could have slung a dead cat through the window and no one would have moved. We just watched that bed go around... and around... and around.

Suddenly, Peg kicked off her shoes, spun through the air, landed in the middle of the bed and shouted, "Hot damn!"

The sign on the front yard read, "By appointment only." It figured.

Professor collects campaign buttons

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Frank Mullen says he could never run for political office because he would spend all the money he raised on the campaign buttons.

An associate professor of political science at Washington State University, Mullen collects political buttons.

His campaign buttons promote old-timers like Henry Clay, Alfred Smith and Wendell L. Willkie and include more recent candidates like William Henry Harrison, Herbert Hoover and Dwight Eisenhower.

Mullen has a "modest button collection" covering 140 years, two closet doors, seven notebooks and six desk drawers.

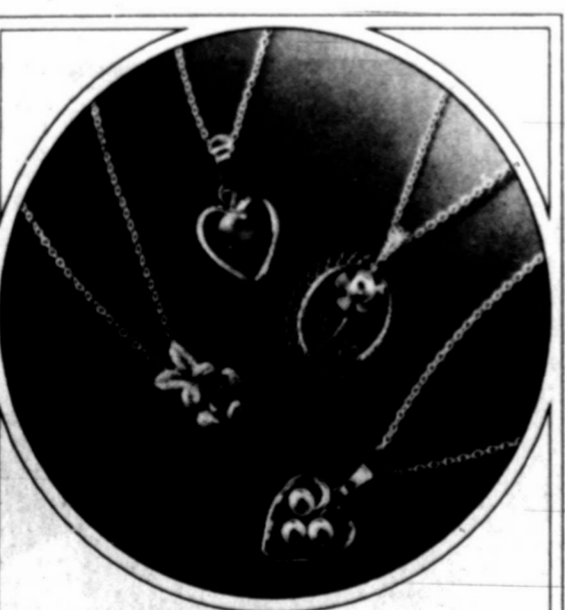

Mullen has a story about each button — and the candidate behind the button.

"You see that mustache," Mullen said, pointing to a Thomas Dewey button. "That may have cost him the election. At least some people blame his defeat on the mustache. They say it made him look like a slick Southern banker."

The buttons reflect the trademarks of the various candidates over the centuries. You can find Teddy Roosevelt in his

"A Full Dinner Basket — (William McKinley)," "Peace With Honor (Woodrow Wilson)," and "Speedy Recovery — Re-elect Hoover."

This souffle-like Chocolate Nut Roll gently holds a whipped cream filling delicately scented with nutmeg and vanilla.

Nutmeg adds spicy difference

Nutmeg is a tradition on holiday grocery lists. Certainly a bowl of eggnog would seem naked without a lavish sprinkling of this exotic spice.

What many folks haven't discovered, however, is the warming, sweetly spicy flavor it can give to other dishes.

NUTMEG-SCENTED CHOCOLATE NUT ROLL

¾ cup all-purpose flour (unsifted)
 1 cup cocoa (unsweetened)
 ¾ tsp. baking powder
 ¾ tsp. ground nutmeg, divided
 ¼ tsp. salt
 4 eggs
 1½ tsp. pure vanilla extract, divided
 ¾ cup sugar
 1 cup heavy cream
 confectioner's sugar
 ¼ tsp. ground cinnamon

Preheat oven to 375 F. Grease a 15½x10½x1-inch jelly roll pan. Cover pan with waxed paper allowing the paper to extend on each of the narrow ends. In a small bowl combine flour, ½ cup cocoa, baking powder, ½ tsp. of the nutmeg and salt; set aside. In a large bowl place eggs and 1 tsp. of the vanilla; beat until thick. Gradually add sugar, beating until smooth. Spread in prepared pan. Bake until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean, about 10 minutes. Meanwhile, liberally dust a dish towel with cocoa. Loosen edges of the cake with a sharp knife. Turn the chocolate roll out onto the towel; carefully remove the waxed paper. Trim off crisp edges. Roll the cake up in the towel from either the narrow or wide side. Let cool on a wire rack, about 30 minutes. When ready to fill cake, place cream in a medium bowl with 3 tbsp. confectioner's sugar, cinnamon and remaining ½ tsp. vanilla and ¼ tsp. nutmeg; beat until stiff. Unroll cake. Spread evenly with cream. Roll up cake. Sprinkle with confectioner's sugar. (To decorate as in photograph place 1-inch wide strips of waxed paper about 1½ inches apart; sprinkle cake between strips of paper with confectioner's sugar.)

YIELD: One 15-inch roll or one 10-inch roll

PECAN MERINGUES

Town centers around peanuts, pigs

By MARJORIE RICE Copley News Service

In Smithfield, Va., "everything circles around peanuts and pigs."

So said Betty Delk, as she drove four food writers through the countryside around the town, on our way to a ham smokehouse.

The hams — dark, salty and ripe with age — definitely are an acquired taste. And a lot of people have acquired it, the hams are the biggest industry of the town, whose population is less than 5,000.

Delk and other members of the Junior

Woman's Club of Smithfield showed off their county's specialties at a luncheon for members of the Newspaper Food Editors and Writers Association.

The group has written "The Smithfield Cookbook," a collection of history, ham lore and recipes from the area. (To order a copy of the 236-page book send $7.75 for each to The Junior Woman's Club of Smithfield, P.O. Box 651, Smithfield, Va., 23430.)

At lunch we feasted on succulent fried chicken prepared by Margaret Reese Tynes at the Smithfield Inn. Simply coated with seasoned flour and fried in very hot oil it was golden and crispy, the chicken perfectly moist.

(The trick is using plenty of hot oil and frying the chicken a few pieces at a time instead of crowding the pan.)

Along with the chicken were some delicious corn cakes, rather like thick pancakes and tasting wonderfully of stone-ground cornmeal.

Cassoulet is tasty and economical to serve to crowds

By MERLE ELLIS

'Tis the season for entertaining; the season for gathering together with friend and family for festive celebration and good food. It may be the season — this year — to go broke! Most of those traditional holiday meats — turkey, crown roasts, rib roasts, geese, legs of lamb, country ham, capons and filet mignons — are as high this year as the traditional partridge perched in a much taller than traditional pear tree.

1. For one, find the price of tradition more this year than I care to pay. I'm serving, instead, a pot of beans in the form of a good cassoulet.

A cassoulet is a lot more than a mere "pot of beans." It is a marvelous French Provincial dish that can make a few bits and pieces of relatively inexpensive meat, combined with beans, into a meal fit for my mother and Aunt Gertrude. This year, that's what they get!

Making a cassoulet is a little like juggling three large balls, two four-legged stools and a small elephant all at the same time. But it can be done easily, one step at a time over a day or two rather than all at once, so that when your guests arrive on the day of the festivities you're done — ready to enjoy! You don't have to worry about dropping an elephant at the last minute.

CASSOULET

- 1 duck, about 5 pounds
- 2 lbs. boneless pork loin
- 1-1/2 lbs. Polish sausage, ring or links
- 1/4 lb. salt pork
- 3 lbs. lamb neck, with bone, in 2-inch cubes
- 2 lbs. or so chicken backs for stock
- 3 lbs. dried white beans
- 2 or 3 lb. white onions
- 2 1-lb., 13-ounce cans whole tomatoes
- 1 bottle of dry white wine
- Fresh parsley
- Bay leaf

Thyme
Fresh garlic
Salt, pepper

Step 1. Make a couple of quarts of good rich chicken stock with the chicken parts.

Step 2. Roast the duck and the pork in a 325-degree oven. The duck should not be covered. Add about one cup of the chicken broth to the pork roast pan and cover. The pork will be done in about 1-1/2 hours — the duck will take about 2-1/2 hours. Set them aside when they are done.

Step 3. Rinse the beans well and remove any that don't look good. Put them in a large pot and just barely cover with water, cover and bring to a full rolling boil. As soon as they are boiling, remove from the heat and let sit for about an hour. This will plump them. If you have lots of time, you can accomplish the same thing by soaking the beans overnight, but I prefer the boiling procedure for plumping.

When they are plump, add 1-1/2 quarts of the chicken stock. Stick in the Polish sausage, salt pork, 2 whole peeled onions, 1/2 teaspoon thyme, a bay leaf, a clove or two of garlic, a couple sprigs of parsley. Bring to boil, skim, reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, for 20 minutes. Take the sausages out and set them aside with the other meat. Continue cooking the beans until they are just barely tender — not mushy. Drain the beans, saving the liquid and the salt pork. Set everything aside.

Step 4. Put two or three tablespoons of the duck fat in a large skillet, add the lamb cubes and brown well over medium high heat. Use more fat, as necessary. When the lamb is browned, remove it from the pan with a slotted spoon. Add 2 or 3 chopped onions and 2 or 3 cloves of minced garlic to the pan drippings and cook stirring until soft.

Add the two cans of tomatoes and a cup of wine, a bay leaf, a teaspoon of thyme and a sprig or two of chopped parsley. Put the lamb back in, cover and simmer for 20 minutes. Then remove the lamb from the sauce and set aside with the other meat. Pour the sauce into a bowl and add three cups of the bean liquid to it and set it aside. Save the rest of the bean liquid, you might need it later.

Step 5. At last, the final step! Carve the duck and the pork into small serving-size pieces. Slice the sausage into chunks. Now, using a huge casserole dish or two semi-huge dishes, put it all together:

Spread a thick layer of beans on the bottom of the casserole. Top with a layer of mixed meat — lamb, pork, duck and sausage. Layer beans, meat, beans, meat, etc. Add enough tomato-bean sauce just to cover. Cover and bake at 350-degrees for 1 hour, or until heated through and bubbling. Check once in a while and if dry, add more sauce, bean liquid or white wine.

Serve with a green salad and hot French bread or crusty rolls. Serves a crowd.

Secondary vitamin deficiency is abortion problem

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Copley News Service

Dear Shirley: I have just been told by my doctor that I have a secondary vitamin deficiency. I don't understand that because I eat very well, and I am even about 10 pounds overweight.

I have had chronic colitis for several years which flares up when I am under pressure in my job. I work in an advertising agency.

What other kinds of vitamin deficiencies are there? I have never heard of a "secondary vitamin deficiency." What does that mean? — Mr. J.P.

Dear Mr. J.P.: I can understand your confusion. There are two kinds or causes of vitamin deficiencies.

A primary vitamin deficiency is caused by a poor diet, sometimes because of poverty or often because of a fad diet. Whatever the reason, the person is not getting adequate nutrients.

A secondary vitamin deficiency can occur because the vitamins may not be properly absorbed, or because of an increased excretion of vitamins from the body. This is often caused by chronic infection or problems such as your colitis.

Your doctor probably will suggest vitamin supplements for you, and I hope you will take them.

Dear Shirley: I have just returned from a visit with my sister's family. I am absolutely shocked at the appearance of my niece. She is 20 years old, but she looks like she is about 14. She only weighs 76 pounds. She refuses to eat, and she is not concerned about looking like a skeleton, yet she is an intelligent girl.

Her parents are very worried and they try to make her eat, but she will not listen to them. Why would a young girl want to look like that?

The last time I saw her, five years ago, she was about 15 pounds overweight, but she looked a lot better than she does now. Have you ever heard of anything like that? — Mrs. D.P.

Dear Mrs. D.P.: I certainly have seen girls with that problem. It sounds like a classic case of an eating and psychological disorder called "anorexia nervosa." It is a rigid ritual of methodical starvation, and medical help is urgently needed, and sometimes hospitalization is necessary.

Since she was once overweight in a society that values thinness, she may have felt guilty, isolated and desperately lonely. She probably lost weight by not eating, and although she is now considerably underweight, in her distorted thinking, she still fears overweight. There may be hair loss, and hair may grow in unusual areas of the body. She may have a low blood pressure weakness and feel chilly much of the time.

Strangely, anorexia nervosa occurs mostly in young girls. Her parents may have to force medical care, because if left untreated, she could die.

Dear Shirley: I am going through the menopause at age 48. My doctor told me to drink at least two cups of milk per day, along with my other food. I am afraid to drink it because I don't want to gain weight, and I didn't think that adults need milk, anyway.

Why should I start drinking milk at my age? What is your opinion? — Mrs. L.K.

Dear Mrs. L.K.: Women need more calcium as they get older, because their bone density decreases with age. They get "brittle" bones. Osteoporosis is more common in women than in men. The female hormone, estrogen, tends to retain calcium in the bones of young women, but as it decreases with age, more calcium is lost.

I suggest that you drink 2-3 glasses of skim milk every day. Avoid excess meat because some amino acids tend to increase bone density losses.

Too much salt and sugar also increase calcium loss, so go easy on them, too. Your diet will have a big effect on whether or not you will develop osteoporosis later on.

Take a lot of leafy green vegetables, low-fat cheeses, seafood with soft bones for more calcium.

Chili, rice makes a good buffet supper

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

We've found a great way to serve chili for a buffet supper.

Accompany it with brown rice made colorful with green and red peppers plus a tray of half a dozen toppings. The brown rice is a welcome change. Ever since I discovered the parboiled variety can be cooked so each kernel is separate and perfect I have been addicted to it. The idea of adding an array of toppings was contributed by my sister Phyllis; she finds guests love this help-yourself idea.

- 1 cup parboiled brown rice
- 1 medium green pepper, seeded and diced
- 7-ounce jar roasted sweet red peppers or 4 ounce jar pimientos, drained and diced
- Toppings: Sour cream or plain yogurt; chopped onion, tomato and avocado; shredded iceberg lettuce and cheddar cheese

In a 12-inch skillet cook the meat, onion and garlic, crumbling the beef with a fork if it is ground, until it loses its red color; remove excess fat if you like. Stir in the chili powder, salt, 1/2 teaspoon of the cumin and the oregano. Add the tomatoes and bouillon, breaking up the tomatoes. Bring to a boil; simmer, covered, about 1 hour or until the chili is the consistency you like. Cook the rice according to package directions, adding the remaining cumin; stir in the green and red peppers. Serve chili and brown rice in wide bowls and pass the toppings. Makes 8 servings.

Party revives familiar ritual

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — While Republicans are busy putting together a government, Democrats are beginning to fight over who will assume their battered party's leadership.

The power struggle is a ritual common to Republicans and Democrats whenever either party loses control of the White House.

As always, it is between the governors and the congressional wing, each group considering itself uniquely qualified to be the out-of-power voice.

Several governors are pushing Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas, one of the Democratic casualties on Nov. 4, for the party chairmanship. The congressional wing hasn't settled on a candidate for the job.

But while the two wings contest for control, the ultimate victors usually are the individuals who emerge as the dominant figures in the party regardless of their base.

Republicans are more inclined to developing ideological bases along with those rooted in elective office.

When former President Gerald R. Ford left office in January 1977, Ronald Reagan's claim to party leadership was his standing as leader of the party's conservative wing rather than his service as governor of California.

At this early stage of maneuvering among Democrats, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts looks like the individual with the sort of national following comparable to what Reagan had in the GOP four years ago.

Kennedy's claim to leadership of the liberals can be contested by Vice President Walter F. Mondale, whose Senate record would have put him far closer ideologically to Kennedy than to Jimmy Carter.

One name not being mentioned among the contestants for party leadership is Jimmy Carter. That may be the way he wants it.

The week after his landslide defeat, Carter told reporters he might keep a low profile in party affairs after leaving office. He said he had no recommendation for someone to succeed John C. White as Democratic Party chairman.

The choice of a new party chairman will be the first test of strength within the party, as well as the first indication of how the Democrats hope to recover from their 1980 defeat.

Not only did the party lose the White House and control of the Senate, it also lost four governorships and scores of legislative seats.

Bill Brock, the Republican chairman who barely escaped being purged last summer by conservative zealots backing Reagan, emerged a political hero because of his determination to rebuild the party from the grass roots up. Brock poured money into local party organizations that gave the GOP its strongest base since the 1920's.

That's one matter of concern to many Democratic politicians.

They are accustomed to losing the White House. They've been the opposition party before and have found it can be fun.

But for a generation, Congress has been a Democratic Party preserve. Now the Republicans control the Senate and the question is whether they build on that or whether the Democrats come roaring back in 1982 or 1984.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California, who also has his eye on 1984, commented at a recent meeting of Democratic governors that "the cutting difference between the Republicans and Democrats will be the economy."

Brown says Reagan's economic policies will prove disastrous.

But he added that "certainly, if Reagan's economic policies work, the Republicans are going to be in power for a long time."

Women trained at three KKK camps

HOUSTON (AP) — A paramilitary arm of the Ku Klux Klan trained women to fire semi-automatic weapons at three Southeast Texas "survival camps," including a facility where young boys were instructed in guerrilla warfare, a Houston newspaper reported Wednesday.

In a copyright story in the Houston Chronicle, camp owner Robert Siente claimed the Texas Emergency Reserve was not "making commands out of our women, just teaching them to use weapons."

The TER is a paramilitary arm of the KKK that trained at Camp Puller, located about 40 miles east of Houston.

Siente, who has denied membership in both the Klan and the TER, said the training was inspired by reports that women were trained to fire semi-automatic weapons in Rhodesia.

Women were trained on the first and third Sunday of each month, men on the second and fourth Sundays at one of three camps located near Houston, said Siente, 51.

"We have a chaplain, so you don't have to miss church. We give it to you in the field," said Siente, who added that he attended the training sessions.

Citing a law that prohibits possession of machine guns, Siente said, "... we are very careful not to have machine guns, but we do have AR-15s, which are the twin brother to the M-16."

"This is the semi-automatic version and this is what we train with."

Siente and Louis Beam Jr., grand dragon of the Texas KKK, developed and operated Camp Puller.

However, Siente temporarily closed the paramilitary camp last week because of "adverse publicity" surrounding recent reports that several Explorer Scouts and Civil Air Patrol cadets were taught how to kill and fire semi-automatic weapons by a KKK member.

Leaders claimed they only taught the youths, ages 15 to 20, how to defend themselves. However, the Sam Houston Council of the Boy Scouts of America rejected a charter application from Post 2125 and disbanded the group.

Siente, who was cashiered as head of the La Porte, Texas, CAP Squadron for his association with the KKK, the fatigue-clad Texas Emergency Reserve "is believed to have a membership of from 200 to 500."

However, he told the Chronicle he attended a May 1979 Klan rally in Mauriceville, Texas, where he was introduced as a "member of the Original Knights of the Ku Klux Klan."

Siente said he was "flattered" to have been asked to attend the rally.

According to the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, which monitors the KKK, the fatigue-clad Texas Emergency Reserve "is believed to have a membership of from 200 to 500."

Court rules used home sales not covered by act

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court held today that the state's Deceptive Trade Practices Act does not cover used home sales in which the seller makes no misrepresentations.

Without writing a new opinion, the court said it could find "no reversible error" in a decision of the 1st Court of Civil Appeals in Houston.

The Houston court had refused to change a Galveston district court judgment that denied triple damages and attorneys fees to Mr. and Mrs. Richard Cheney, who had sued the former owners of their house in Kemah.

The Cheneys refused to pay their note to Mr. and Mrs. James Parks after finding, they said, numerous defects in the 16-year-old house. The Parks were foreclosed, and the Cheneys sued. The Parks filed a countersuit for payment of the note.

A jury found there had been no misrepresentation but reduced the amount the Cheneys owed on the note by $3,800 because of the failure of the house to "meet a standard of habitability that a reasonable and prudent buyer would expect."

Habitability means suitability of a home or apartment for comfortable living.

The Cheneys appealed, saying that under the Deceptive Trade Practices Act, they were entitled to have the $3,800 damages tripled and to have their $12,500 attorney's fee paid by the Parks.

But the appeals court disagreed and ruled against them.

"The Deceptive Trade Practices Act does not create an implied warranty. ... Under Texas law, there is no implied warranty that used goods are fit for the purpose for which they are purchased. We find that this holding is equally applicable to the purchase of a used dwelling. A buyer of a used home takes the same, subject to wear and tear of use, just as does the buyer of a used automobile," the court said.

In their appeal to the Supreme Court, the Cheneys cited the high court's recent decision that consumers may collect damages under the Deceptive Trade Practices Act from private — as opposed to commercial — sellers who misrepresent the condition of goods.

Nine victims unidentified

CHICAGO (AP) — Two years after the arrest of convicted mass killer John W. Gacy, nine of his 33 young male victims remain unidentified, perhaps because the homosexual aspects of the case make parents reluctant to come forward, authorities say.

That case involved a defective used boat and motor.

"In this state, a consumer will be afforded protection if he purchases a new home from a builder vendor. ... This consumer will be protected if he purchases a used boat. This consumer will also be protected if he leases a used home. To hold that this consumer will not be afforded like protection if he purchases a used home is to ignore modern home buying practices," the Cheney appeal said.

Felon may practice law again

DETROIT (AP) — A legal panel says former Michigan Gov. John B. Swainson, convicted of lying to a federal grand jury five years ago, should be allowed to practice law again.

The three-member Attorney Discipline Board reached its decision Tuesday, and Swainson commented, "I've been called in from the cold."

He now needs the approval of the state Board of Law Examiners before he can resume his practice. The board is scheduled to meet Jan. 30.

Swainson was a Michigan Supreme Court justice in 1975 when he was charged with accepting a $40,000 bribe to get a criminal's conviction reviewed by Michigan's highest court.

He was acquitted of the bribery charges but convicted on three counts of lying to a federal grand jury that investigated him. The state Bar Grievance Board suspended him from law practice for three years.

Twice during his suspension from law practice, Swainson pleaded guilty to drunken driving. Last May, he entered a six-week alcohol abuse treatment program at the Ann Arbor Veterans Hospital. He still attends weekly meetings of Alcoholics Anonymous.

"Alcoholism or a drunk driving conviction has never been considered misconduct by the state bar," said Eugene N. LaBelle, who represented the state bar's grievance panel in the proceeding involving Swainson.

"That is not evidence of competence or incompetence in his profession. It is relevant that there was a conviction, but it should not bar readmission unless it is symptomatic of greater problems."

Swainson was Michigan's governor from 1960 to 1962. He served as a legislative and political consultant to the AFL-CIO from 1977 to 1979 and worked as a governmental relations consultant for a group called the Self Help Addiction Rehabilitation Foundation from 1977 to last August.

Since May 1979, he has been a partner in an antique shop in Manchester where he lives.

Interested persons may register early from 9 to 11 a.m. or 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday or 9:30 to 11 a.m. or 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Friday in the registrar's office located on the second floor of the Student Union Building.

An out-of-district student can enroll for 12 semester hours at a cost of about $150 not including books or additional fees.

Four arrested in Waco grocery extortion try

WACO, Texas (AP) — Four Waco men were held today pending arraignment on federal charges stemming from a plan to extort $60,000 from a grocery chain by claiming that deadly poison had been planted in three H.E.B. food stores, officials said.

Three men were arrested Wednesday afternoon and a fourth was captured late Wednesday night, police said. The arrests came just hours after the stores, restocked over the weekend, reopened.

Although authorities said they believed the alleged plant was a hoax, H.E.B. officials shut down six stores and called in dozens of employees to clear the shelves of all items that could have been tainted.

At a news conference, Waco Police Chief Larry Scott announced the arrests of Steven Van Howard, 24, David Wayne Howard, 21, and Daniel Ray Glenn, 23.

He said all three men apparently were unemployed and had been living in a Waco trailer home. Glenn was arrested at Providence Hospital, where he was being treated for a diabetic condition, police said.

Later, David Lloyd Foster, 19, was arrested at a Waco home, police said. He was charged with theft over $10,000 and jailed under $100,000 bond set by McLennan County Peace Justice John Cabaniss.

On Dec. 4, a caller told H.E.B. officials strychnine had been planted in three of the chain's six Waco-area stores. The caller demanded $60,000 to reveal the poison's location.

Two attempts to meet the caller's demands failed, and H.E.B. officials decided to close down the stores for what they called the "most massive stocking effort in history."

During the 3½-day shutdown, more than 680 tons of food and other items were swept from the shelves and taken to a guarded dump site.

Greg Rampton, an FBI agent from Austin, said he agreed with H.E.B. officials that the extortion call was a hoax.

"There is no indication that there was any poison in the food at any time," Rampton said.

Richard Carter, legal adviser for the Waco police department, said the men would be held in custody pending arraignment before a U.S. magistrate on charges that alleged interference with interstate commerce by threats of violence. The federal charges carry a possible $10,000 fine and 20 years in prison.

Jonathan Wright, 2, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wright, choral director at Lee High School, wanders through the poinsettias to pick a plant. The LHS chorale is selling the Christmas plants to finance its trip to Vienna this summer. Anyone wishing to purchase a poin-

Rabbit gets best mileage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Volkswagen Rabbit gets the best mileage of all cars on the American market, the Ford Escort is the cheapest to fix, and the Pontiac LeMans has the lowest average insurance claims, according to a new government publication.

The 68-page Transportation Department booklet issued Wednesday doesn't tell consumers which car to buy, nor does it rank the best and worst.

But "The Car Book" does give a lot of facts and figures that could help interested consumers. It tells which cars passed government crash tests, which get the best fuel mileage and which are the least expensive to maintain.

For example, the 1981 model with the best mileage is the VW Rabbit Diesel, which gets 42 miles per gallon. The worst-mileage cars — at 16 mpg — were the Buick Riviera, Chrysler Imperial, Ford LTD and Mercury Marquis.

The Transportation Department compilation of facts is available without charge by writing The Car Book, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

The book's introduction says, "We believe that by talking to friends and a trusted mechanic, reading publications about new automobiles and using the information in 'The Car Book,' you will be a well-informed consumer ready to make a wise decision about which car to buy."

Besides information on individual cars, the booklet offers the following general advice:

—Radial tires, while more expensive, can improve gas mileage by 3 to 7 miles per gallon over conventional tires.

—A manual transmission is generally more fuel-efficient — up to 5 percent — than an automatic.

—Some cars are cheaper to insure. They cost less to fix and some companies pass these savings on to owners.

—Installation of a cutoff switch that automatically disconnects the air conditioner during rapid accelerations can increase mileage by 4 percent.

—When buying a used car, the best purchase is generally two to three years old. That is old enough to be depreciated from the new-car price but young enough to present few repair problems.

In the crash tests, the Cadillac Seville, Chevrolet Citation, Dodge Mirada, Ford Mustang, Ford Thunderbird and two-door Plymouth Horizon were the only American-made cars to pass all six checks after being crashed into a wall. Cars failing four of the six checks, the worst score, included the Toyota Tercel, Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme and the Buick Riviera. Not all models were tested.

In other categories: Fatality rates — Ford Mercury (large size) and American Motors intermediate-size cars ranked lowest, with 1.2 occupant fatalities per 10,000 cars. Mazda ranked highest, with 5.1 fatalities. The index was based on data collected from 1976-78.

Safety belt comfort and convenience — All had problems except the Buick Electra Park Avenue, the Cadillac DeVille, Mercedes 300D and Volvo 244. Cars with problems in five of seven measurements, the worst score, were the Chevrolet Camaro and Chevrolet two-door and Pontiac Firebird.

Maintenance — Ford Escort's $115 total was the lowest preventive maintenance expected in the first 45,000 miles. The highest was the Peugeot 505's $728.

Insurance and accident costs — The lowest average loss payment per insured vehicle year was $46. Pontiac Lemans four-door at $64. The highest was the Datsun 280ZX, $244. The figure is what the insurance companies pay on average claims.

Cars for which some companies provide discounts are Chevrolet Chevette, Citation, Impala and Caprice Classic; Ford Escort and LTD; Mercury Lynx and Marquis; Buick Skylark, Century, Electra and LeSabre; Oldsmobile Omega, Cutlass, Delta 88 and Delta 98; Plymouth Horizon; Pontic Phoenix, LeMans, Bonneville and Catalina; AMC Concord; Cadillac Seville; and Chrysler LeBaron.

Cars for which some firms assess insurance surcharges are Dodge Colt and Omni; Honda Prelude; Mazda GLC and RX7; Plymouth Champ; Renault Le Car; Subaru DL; Toyota Corolla, Tercel and Celica; VW Rabbit, Datsun 200SX and 280ZX; Ford Mustang; Mercury Capri; Plymouth Arrow; Chevrolet Camaro; Pontiac Firebird and Grand Prix; Cadillac El Dorado; and Lincoln Mark VI.

Cities going down drain

PEKING (AP) — Peking, Tianjin and several other Chinese cities are sinking because of the uncontrolled draining of underground water, Chinese scientists say.

The northern coastal city of Tianjin dropped 5.8 feet between 1959 and 1979, geologists reported at a recent national conference.

The official Xinhua news agency today quoted the scientists as saying that Changzhou, an industrial city in Jiangsu province, sank half a foot between 1978 and 1979 and Peking, Xian, Taiyuan, Wuxi, and Ningpo were sinking at varying rates.

Rep. Jenrette resigns

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Jenrette, the only target of the Abscam investigation to resign from Congress, choked with emotion and said he's leaving "to spare the House from further embarrassment."

The South Carolina Democrat, who would have had to give up his seat next month anyway, told the House ethics committee Wednesday he would resign rather than face the possibility of further moves to expel him in the last days of the lame-duck session.

"With the desire to spare the House from further embarrassment, I'm submitting to the speaker my resignation," Jenrette told the committee, and paused as his voice choked, "effective today."

A spokesman for the congressman said a letter of resignation was being sent to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill later Wednesday, although the document had not arrived by the time the speaker's office closed for the day.

In Columbia, S.C., a spokesman for Gov. Richard Riley said the required letter or telegram containing notice of Jenrette's resignation had not been received late Wednesday night.

The House ethics committee was meeting today to decide whether to drop a proposal that it recommend Jenrette's ouster to the full House, although one panel member called the action "probably moot" in light of the congressman's resignation.

Jenrette was defeated in his re-election bid last month.

Less than a month earlier, on Oct. 7, he was convicted of splitting a $50,000 bribe from an FBI agent posing as a representative of two non-existent Arab sheiks seeking legislation to allow them to immigrate to the United States.

But Jenrette told the ethics committee in a sometimes emotional statement that he took no bribe and is confident the courts ultimately will clear him.

He said he tried only to help his co-defendant, Virginia businessman John Stowe, get what he thought was Arab financing for a munitions plant to save 550 jobs in Jenrette's district.

The congressman began crying and his voice broke as he told the committee, "I prided myself on trying to help the district. Those people looked to me for the first time ever to help them, and I helped many of them."

The committee recessed for several minutes to allow Jenrette to compose himself.

Jenrette said he hopes to get his conviction overturned as early as next Wednesday at a court hearing.

While Jenrette is the first Abscam defendant to resign from Congress, the House has expelled former Rep. Michael J. Myers, D-Pa., for his conviction on bribery charges in the FBI's undercover probe. Myers lost his re-election bid on Nov. 4.

Two more congressmen were convicted last week — Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., of accepting an illegal gratuity, and Rep. Frank Thompson, D-N.J., of bribery. Both were defeated in their bids for re-election.

Rep. Richard Kelly, R-Fla., who lost his primary election, is now being tried on bribery charges in Abscam.

Rep. Raymond F. Lederer, D-Pa., who was re-elected, and Sen. Harrison A. Williams, D-N.J., whose term ends in 1982, face trial on bribery charges later in the Abscam case.

His messages are remembered

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Mike Kelley goes to work in a red cape over a blue vest, a ruffled tuxedo shirt, formal bow tie, police-style cap and sunglasses. A mechanical monkey rides along on his arm.

Needless to say, Kelley works for himself. He does business under the name of "Captain Telegram," delivering messages people will remember, and he'll do just about anything it takes to see that they do.

"I've got a horn, a whistle and a kazoo," he says. "I've got jokes and songs. One time I rode a unicycle. You have to keep it moving."

The price is $30. But for another $35, Kelley adds a belly dancer to the act. That's a "bellygram."

"A group of Catholic priests bought a bellygram for one of them who was celebrating his 35th anniversary in the priesthood," Kelley recalls. "But most of the bellygrams are for bosses or husbands, someone the sender really wants to see squirming."

Kelley has worked in living rooms, bowling alleys and restaurants.

He's been to the top of the Bankers Trust Building to congratulate an executive on a $44 million insurance deal, delivered jocular condolences to a losing congressional candidate and taken a belly dancer to a junkyard for an exotic happy birthday to a parts clerk.

"There are four dancers who work for us," he says. "We don't have them out jiggling full time, but we get about eight calls on those per week out of about 30 or 40 total grams."

With his eye-catching regalia and non-stop spiel, Kelley has to be careful that the medium doesn't overcome the message. He's given a lot of thought to the psychology of his trade.

"You've got to understand when you do a singing telegram that the recipient is the star of the show," he says. "You have to focus attention on them. And the sender usually likes to be recognized too."

But Kelley says he can't let those considerations stop him from controlling and pleasing the audience.

"Everything is a production, everything is sensational, wild and extravagant," he says. "It's like a portable carnival. People love this hype."

Kelley has worked for singing telegram services in Indianapolis and Birmingham, Ala. He opened his own shop at his home in Columbia in September, and business so far has been good.

"I had to take on another full-time messenger, and I have a part time girl in the office," he says.

Kelley, who doesn't like to give his age ("How old is Howdy Doody, you know what I mean?"), got into singing messages "to make it without the time clock and the boss."

"Besides, it's worthwhile," he adds. "I say that because of the reactions I get. It's not unusual to have the recipient start crying at the idea that someone would send them a singing telegram."

Newspaper at Goddard 'exceptional'

The student newspaper at Goddard Junior High School, Raider Roundup, has been termed "an exceptional example of quality junior high school publications" by the Interscholastic League Press Conference in Austin.

A letter of commendation was received by Brenda Olive, adviser for the student newspaper, informing her that the newspaper is being used as a model for other junior high schools.

The Interscholastic League Press Conference is the largest student journalism association for secondary schools in the United States.

$41 million for basic skills

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas public schools will receive approximately $41 million in state funds during the current school year to help teach basic skills, State Education Commissioner Alton Bowen said Tuesday.

A total of $1.9 million will be available for administering and scoring the state's annual basic skills tests for students in the third, fifth and ninth grades.

Bowen said 992 of 1,099 districts will share in the compensatory funds allocated by the Legislature.

How much money a school district gets in compensatory funds is based on the number of students who had qualified for free lunches in 1978-79 and other federal aid under Title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act.

The funds may be used for teacher salaries, workshops, overtime pay or purchase of books and other teaching aids.

"We have intentionally given the local teachers and administrators as much latitude as possible," said Bowen. "It is the local schools, after all, who know their students best."

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's standing room only at the White House photo office these days, as departing White House staff members line up to locate souvenir pictures of themselves and President Carter.

The official White House photographers have turned out, over four years, a frame-by-frame pictorial history of the Carter presidency — thousands upon thousands of pictures.

And many of the middle- and lower-level Carter staff members, who saw the president only rarely, would like to decorate their dens with a display of pictures of themselves and their soon-to-be former boss.

The only problem is, everyone wants a bunch of pictures and there isn't the time or darkroom staff to turn them out.

The center of attention is the photo library on the fourth floor of the Old Executive Office Building, next to the White House. An entire wall in the spacious office is covered with shelves holding black looseleaf binders containing photographs of the president.

The books are being pored over by the souvenir hunters, remembering a bill signing or a reception where they shook the president's hand.

Billie Shaddix, who heads the White House photo staff, "acknowledged that the end-of-term rush is 'a natural thing,' but he said he has been forced to impose limits.

"We can't turn these out for everybody's album," he said. "We're not going to turn this thing into a circus."

JIMMY'S WHITE HOUSE

Once Carter leaves the White House, and the official photographers begin to focus on Ronald Reagan, the pictures of the last four years will join other documents of the Carter years at a presidential library.

Photographs were also on the minds of the members of a delegation from the Japanese Diet, or parliament, that visited the White House for a conference with Vice President Walter F. Mondale on Tuesday.

The meeting was in the Roosevelt Room, decorated with memorabilia of Theodore and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The vice president was 10 to 15 minutes late for the meeting, and the Japanese took advantage of the delay to pose, one after another, for photographs their colleagues snapped with small pocket cameras.

The backdrop they chose was an oil painting of FDR, their nation's World War II foe.

One souvenir hunter at a White House reception Sunday night was Amy Carter, the president's 13-year-old daughter.

She wandered around the East Room and State Dining Room with an autograph book, looking for some of the entertainment world's best known stars who were guests at the party given in conjunction with a celebration that night at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

Amy appeared most excited when she cornered Pat O'Brien, the actor, and later showed his autograph to the Secret Service agent assigned to her. The agent appeared appropriately impressed.

House Democrats shore up defenses

By JAY PERKINS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democratic leaders may be talking conciliation with the incoming administration of Republican President-elect Ronald Reagan but they're acting to shore up their defenses.

A further strengthening of those defenses could come this week as Democrats meet to debate several rule changes opposed by the Republican minority and to ratify the nomination of four committee chairmen.

In the last two days of caucuses by Democrats who will be members of the Congress that convenes in January, they have:

—Made significant concessions to the conservative Democratic wing, placing several Southern Democrats in key policy slots in an effort to reunite the diverse groups in the party.

—Insured that Democrats will have a 2-1 majority on the Rules Committee, the leadership's last line of defense against programs it opposes, despite complaints by Republicans who wanted more committee members, reflecting the fact that Republicans will hold 44 percent of the seats in the new Congress.

—Limited Republican membership on three other major committees to 40 percent of the total. Republicans wanted 44 percent of those committee slots.

—Nominated Rep. Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois, an ally of House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, to be chairman of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee.

The Democrats are split between conservatives and liberals. And with Democrats holding only a 243-192 majority in the House next year, it means a conservative consensus is likely on several of Reagan's key economic programs.

Democratic leaders agree such a consensus is likely and aren't worried. What they're trying to defend against is possible assaults by conservatives on previously enacted liberal programs. With some of those battles likely to be close, the Democrats want any edge they can get.

Oklahoma Rep. James R. Jones edged liberal Rep. David Obey of Wisconsin, 121-116, on the third ballot. The two tied 118-118 on the second ballot and 100-100 on the first ballot, which included 39 votes for compromise candidate Paul Simon of Illinois.

Jones thus joins Rep. Bill Alexander of Arkansas, selected as chief deputy whip, and Rep. Gillis Long of Louisiana, elected as Democratic Caucus chairman, as Southerners holding new leadership roles.

The makeup of the Rules Committee is especially significant. The panel, traditionally a tool of the leadership, is the traffic cop for legislation, deciding which bills go to the House floor and determining if any amendments will be allowed.

O'Neill had said he wanted to keep a 2-1 majority on that committee and Democrats agreed to make the breakdown 11 Democrats to 5 Republicans, despite the Republican complaints.

The 60-40 Democratic to Republican breakdown on the other three committees also could be significant. Ways and Means handles all tax legislation, the Appropriations Committee determines which programs get how much money, and the Budget Committee decides the overall federal spending level.

Continuation of revenue sharing seems all but certain

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An extension of the federal revenue-sharing program for local governments appears all but certain after overwhelming Senate approval of a multibillion-dollar measure.

The Senate adopted a modified version of a House-passed bill Tuesday, voting 80-3 to extend $4.6 billion in annual no-strings aid to local governments through fiscal 1983. The bill also authorizes, subject to appropriations, $2.3 billion a year for state governments in fiscal 1982 and 1983.

House-Senate negotiators now must work out differences between the two bills before the revenue-sharing extension can receive final congressional approval. That is not expected to be a problem.

The revenue-sharing program, which began during Richard M. Nixon's presidency, expired Sept. 30, but the next grants are not due until January. Groups representing state, county and local officials have strongly lobbied Congress for an extension, saying the program is vital to basic services in cities and counties across the nation.

During Senate debate, deficit-conscious legislators turned back attempts to enlarge the program.

Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, introduced an amendment that would have authorized revenue sharing for states in fiscal 1981, which began last Oct. 1, as well as 1982 and 1983. But Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., argued, "We don't have any money," and the amendment was blocked.

The Senate also defeated an amendment offered by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., that would have established a standby program of up to $1 billion a year more to state and local governments in times of severe recession.

"If you get hooked on this one, you'll never get unhooked from it," argued Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M. "Plain and simple, we can't afford it."

But the Senate also defeated an amendment by Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., that would have eliminated the states' share entirely.

Buckingham Palace presses for less romantic rambling

By SETH MYDANS
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — It was the "Royal Love Train" story that finally cracked the stoic palace facade. Since then, the relationship between Buckingham Palace and Fleet Street has itself become the story.

"Charles and Lady Diana Special," headlined the Sunday Mirror. "Secret Meetings in the Sidings."

And below that: "The Sunday Mirror today can reveal two late night meetings between Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer — the girl many believe will be the next queen."

"The couple met secretly aboard the royal train as it stood in secluded sidings in Wiltshire," the newspaper reported last month. It gave no sources for its story.

"A total fabrication," shot back Buckingham Palace in a statement the palace implied came directly from Queen Elizabeth II. The palace demanded a retraction and an apology.

The Sunday Mirror carried the denial, which raised more eyebrows than did the original story, one week after it printed the offending article. The newspaper also published an exchange of letters between the palace's press spokesman, Michael Shea, and the newspaper's editor, Robert Edwards.

Shea's letter said his denial was made "on the express instructions of those most directly involved at Buckingham Palace." He requested that the letter be printed.

All along Fleet Street, London's newspaper row, ears pricked up. "Never before have denials been so forcefully put, in language much stronger than any previously used," Anne de Courcy of the New Standard said.

Oliver Pritchett wrote in the Sunday Telegraph that Shea's "stinging and indignant denial at once led to speculation that Prince Charles really did intend to marry Lady Diana."

The object of all the fuss was a shy, blue-blooded 19-year-old kindergarten teacher whose older sister, Lady Sarah Spencer, was a previous front-runner in the press until she married someone else.

The furor over the Mirror article was great fun for the catty columnists of rival tabloids. Jean Rook of the Daily Express said the Mirror "should print cast-iron proof of its allegations. Or withdraw them, and crawl."

The Mirror stood by its story and the story was hotter than ever. The domestic Press Association got the next scoop, with an interview at the kindergarten that had Lady Diana saying she would like to marry soon and asserted she "blushed and giggled" when asked if the prince had already proposed to her.

She immediately denied having said "anything about marriage," and several papers joined in the fun by quoting statements she made to their reporters under such headlines as "Lady Di Appeals to the Star for Help" and "Lady Diana's Plea" in The Express.

Finally, it was all too much for her mother, Frances Shand-Kydd, who did what any outraged mother in Britain might do: she wrote to The Times.

"May I ask the editors of Fleet Street whether, in the execution of their jobs, they consider it necessary or fair to harass my daughter daily from dawn until well after dusk?" Mrs. Shand-Kydd asked.

"Is it fair to ask any human being, regardless of circumstances, to be treated this way?"

Traveling in India, Prince Charles also had a word for the press: "Honesty and integrity are vital factors in reporting and often get submerged in the general rush for sensationalism."

Finally even Parliament was aroused. Last week, the House of Commons tabled a resolution that "deplored" press treatment of Lady Diana but said the House "is angered by the obsession of the media with real or imagined royal trysts and would welcome relief from such boring trivia."

Newspapers themselves then stopped to take a look at what they had been doing.

It was suggested that some interviews were the result of sly chats by reporters who did not identify themselves. It was noted that one photographer had gone so far as to crawl through the bathroom window of Lady Diana's kindergarten to snap a picture.

Keith Deves of the Sun said Lady Diana "is a very nice young girl who is too polite to tell you simply to go away."

The Guardian speculated that it was all a "cruel but necessary ordeal" cunningly contrived by Buckingham Palace to "test her suitability for a royal role" in the glare of publicity.

Finally, the question was raised whether in 20th century Britain any crown prince can find the privacy needed to court and choose his queen — without resorting to trusts on the royal train.

The relationship between Buckingham Palace and London's newspapers is making news following recent reports of alleged secret meetings between Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer. (AP Laserphoto)

West Texas Utilities files rate hike stipulation

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — West Texas Utilities has filed a proposed stipulation with the Public Utility Commission for a $9.54 million rate hike for 52 counties.

The stipulation was filed after West Texas Utilities and intervenors in the rate case reached a compromise agreement on the proposed rate hike.

The utility company had sought to increase electric rates by $12.7 million or 8.3 percent.

The increase, if approved, would affect residents in 52 counties including Brewster, Briscoe, Brown, Coke, Callahan, Coleman, Crockett, Eastland, Motley, Pecos, Reeves, Jeff Davis, Crane, Kent, Kimble, Donley, Edwards, McCulloch, Presidio, Reagan, Sterling, Schleicher, Sutton and Upton counties.

The Texas Retailers Association, Texas Municipal League and West Texas Legal Services had intervened in the case.

The PUC is expected to meet Tuesday to consider approval of the agreement.

Bradley's steals lead Pacer win

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

What basketball fans learned three years ago about the way Dudley Bradley plays defense, Walter Davis knew two years before that.

"He played behind me in college and didn't get that much of a chance to play until I graduated," said Davis, a perennial National Basketball Association All-Star at Phoenix, about his former North Carolina teammate.

"But he sure showed what he could do in practice. He has great anticipation and real quick hands."

Bradley, in his second year as a pro, will never be a big scorer in the NBA — he wasn't at North Carolina, either — but what he showed with the Tar Heels he is also showing as an Indiana Pacer.

His five steals Wednesday night increased his NBA lead to 97 and he also neutralized Davis offensively as the Pacers defeated the Suns 102-90, only the Pacific Division leaders' seventh loss in 32 games. Indiana is now 18-12, the first time the Pacers have been six games above the .500 mark in their five NBA seasons.

"Tonight, I wasn't thinking steal. But a few times I stuck up my hand and the ball was there," said Bradley. "The rest of the guys make it (stealing the ball) easy because they're putting pressure on the other guys."

Davis did score 16 points, but most of them came after Phoenix Coach John MacLeod moved him to forward, where Bradley did not cover him.

"The key is shutting down their guards," said Indiana Coach Jack McKinney of the Suns' attack, which revolves largely around Davis and Dennis Johnson. "If you stop their guards, you've stopped two of their three big offensive threats."

In other NBA games, Philadelphia stopped Chicago 113-100, New York edged New Jersey 106-104, Atlanta beat Detroit 100-92, Kansas City clipped San Diego 112-100, Boston nipped Washington 101-99, Los Angeles trimmed Houston 109-108, Denver defeated Dallas 116-107 and Seattle beat Golden State 108-103.

In addition to the tough defense exemplified by Bradley, the key to Indiana's strong start in 1980 has been balanced scoring.

James Edwards was the Pacers' leading scorer with 17 points, but six others were in double figures and three more had eight apiece.

"The Pacers have been playing a lot better this season," said Davis. "It's essentially the same bunch of guys as last season but they're playing tough as a unit."

The Pacers led only 45-43 at half-time lead, but broke the game open by outscoring Phoenix 13-3 in the opening minutes of the third quarter. The spurt put the Pacers ahead 58-46 with 9:18 remaining and the Suns never drew closer than seven.

76ers 113, Bulls 100
Philadelphia, with the best record in the league at 27-4, won its fourth in a row and handed Chicago its fourth straight loss as Bobby Jones scored 25 points, Julius Erving 24 and Darryl Dawkins 21.

Despite the 13-point margin, the game was close most of the way until 6:0 and 8:0 Philadelphia spurts near the end. The score was 93-91 with 3:24 remaining before Erving scored and Dawkins hit two baskets; then the 76ers had a 105-100 lead with 46 seconds to go before scoring the last eight points of the game.

Celtics 101, Bullets 99
Larry Bird scored 21 points and rookie Kevin McHale hit two turnaround jumpers in the final 72 seconds to lead Boston to its 13th victory in 16 games.

Washington led 83-69 late in the third quarter, but an 18-4 spurt by the Celtics tied the game 87-87. The last deadlock was 97-97 before McHale sank the first of his crucial shots, and the second gave Boston a 101-97 margin with seven seconds left.

Knicks 106, Nets 104
Mike Newlin scored 38 points for New Jersey, but had the ball stolen from him by Mike Glenn in the last minute to help New York edge the Nets. Bill Cartwright led the Knicks with 26 points, while Campy Russell added 17 to pass the 7,000 mark for his career.

Hawks 100, Pistons 92
Atlanta snapped a 12-game losing streak on the road as John Drew scored 36 points, continuing a recent hot streak.

Drew hit 22 points in the first half, then stemmed a late Detroit rally with eight in a row in the fourth period.

Kings 112, Clippers 100
Scott Wedman scored 22 points and Otis Birdsong added 20 for Kansas City to offset the 41 points by San Diego's Freeman Williams, who had 31 in the first half.

The Kings led 68-67 in the third quarter before their 12-0 streak gave them complete command of the game.

Lakers 109, Rockets 108
Jamaal Wilkes scored 32 points, including 15 in the fourth quarter and the last six for Los Angeles in its victory over Houston.

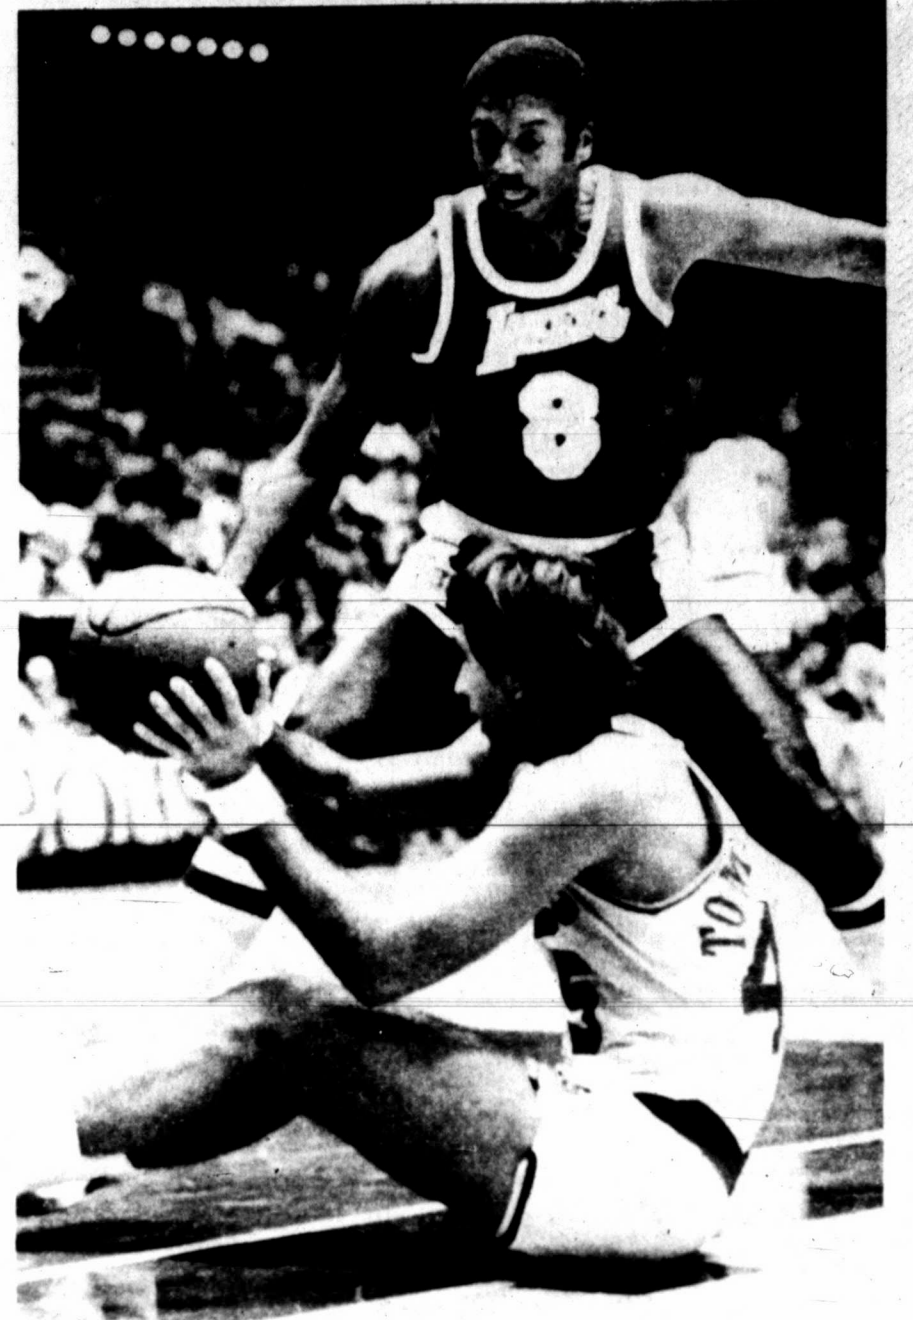

The Lakers trailed 97-95 with 5:30 left before Kareem Abdul-Jabbar hit eight consecutive points, but the Rockets responded with seven straight for a 104-103 lead. Then Wilkes hit his six in a row for a 109-104 Lakers lead with 22 seconds remaining.

Nuggets 116, Mavericks 107
Denver halted a five-game losing streak and extended Dallas' skinn to 12 as Alex English scored 27 points.

David Thompson led an 18-0 spurt by Denver in the third quarter with eight of his 18 points. Kiki Vandeweghe, Dallas' No. 1 draft pick who was traded to the Nuggets earlier in the day, played in his first NBA game and scored six points in 19 minutes.

Sonics 108, Warriors 103
Jack Sikma scored 11 of his 27 points in the third quarter, when Seattle outscored Golden State 31-17, to pace the winners.

The victory was the fifth in six games for the Sonics, who evened their record at 15-15.

Midland runners make

Boston Marathon run

DALLAS — Two Midland runners qualified for the prestigious Boston Marathon here recently while running in the White Rock Lake Marathon.

Jimmy Whitley and Steve Stallings ran the 26.2 mile course in two hours and 43 minutes, which qualified both for the Boston event that will be held next April. Whitley finished 65th in a field of 3,000 runners while Stallings was 70th.

Other Midlanders in the marathon were Richard Kleinhaus, who ran the course in two hours and 56 minutes, and Mike Zinn, who ran a time of three hours and 12 minutes.

Jiminez captures win in unanimous decision

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Lightweight Ricardo Jiminez of Los Angeles hurt Luis Avila in the early rounds but couldn't put him away and eventually won by unanimous decision in their 10-round main event Wednesday night at the Silver Slipper Casino.

Jiminez, who weighed 134½ pounds, stunned Avila, normally a super bantamweight but fighting at 135 pounds, in the second and third rounds with left hooks to the head.

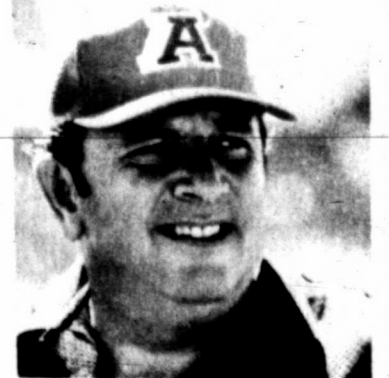

Tony Mason speaker for MHS Fall Sports Banquet Monday

The Midland High Fall Sports Banquet will be held at 6 p.m. Monday in the MHS cafeteria, and Tony Mason, former football coach at Arizona University, will be the featured speaker.

All Midland High sports fans are invited to attend. Tickets are $4 per person and tickets may be purchased at the door. The banquet will honor the fall sports teams, including volleyball, cross country and football.

MHS football coach Pat Culpepper said that a most valuable player will not be named at this banquet, but the Fighting Bulldog award will highlight the event. Also special team members and top weekly players will be honored.

Mason, a popular speaker on the banquet circuit, coached at Arizona from 1977 to 1979 with a record of 16-18-1. In 1979, his team lost 16-10 to Pittsburgh in the Fiesta Bowl. He was also head coach at the University of Cincinnati where he took a team from a 4-7 record in 1973 to a 9-2 mark in 1976, his final year there. He has also coached at

Tony Mason

Purdue, Michigan and the high school ranks. With high school teams, Mason's record is 87-9-7 with seven undefeated teams. He coached in Ohio at Brookfield and McKinley. At Brookfield, Mason compiled a 40-6-1 record in four years with three straight undefeated seasons. He also had a 25-game undefeated streak. At McKinley, he had four straight undefeated seasons and a 47 game unbeaten streak with a six year record of 47-3-6.

Bosox, Angels in big trade

Baseball meetings spiced with trade talks

DALLAS (AP) — The American League finally got into the act at the winter baseball meetings when the California Angels and Boston Red Sox made a five-player deal which included a swap of All-Star shortstop Rick Burleson and young third baseman Carney Lansford.

The Angels acquired Burleson and third baseman Butch Hobson from California Wednesday night for Lansford, relief pitcher Mark Clear and outfielder Rick Miller.

The Angels-Red Sox deal was the first major transaction made by American League clubs at these weeklong meetings. In all, seven trades have been completed involving 34 players.

ANOTHER MAJOR action Wednesday was the signing by the Houston Astros of utility player Dave Roberts for $1.3 million over five years.

The Astros don't seem to be paying much attention to baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn's warning of economic disaster if franchises continue to hand out rich, long-term contracts to free agents.

Meanwhile, American league club owners gathered today for a meeting to consider a second attempt by Edward DeBartolo to purchase the Chicago White Sox for $20 million.

DeBartolo, whose offer was accepted by the White Sox stockholders, was turned down Oct. 24, when he fell two votes short of the 10 necessary to get the franchise.

It was indicated at that time that DeBartolo was turned down because the owners were afraid he would move the team to New Orleans and because of his interest in race tracks.

LEE MACPHAIL, American League president, said Wednesday that DeBartolo would be given another chance here to sway the owners.

"But I am unable to detect any change in their sentiments," MacPhail said. "I was surprised he got as many votes as he got in October and I'll be surprised if his total is any bigger."

MacPhail, in reference to an offer by DeBartolo to sell his race tracks and spend more time in Chicago, said he doubted if that would affect the vote.

In the Angels-Red Sox trade, both clubs felt they had strengthened themselves considerably.

"We have obtained one of the finest shortstops (Burleson) in baseball," said Angels' Manager Jim Fregosi.

California owner Gene Autry said, "we feel Burleson fills a great void we have had at shortstop since Jim Fregosi," nodding toward his manager. "We haven't had a first line shortstop since Fregosi."

Burleson had been having difficulty negotiating his salary with Boston. He and Hobson will move right into the California starting infield, which features Bobby Grich at second and Rod Carew on first.

"It gives us one of the best infields in baseball," said Autry.

HOBSON LOST his third base job at Boston to rookie Glenn Hoffman last season after experiencing elbow problems that required surgery. The Red Sox plan to move Hoffman to his original position at shortstop replacing Burleson, giving the third base job to Lansford.

Lansford, 23, hit .261 with 15 home runs and 80 RBI in 151 games last season for the Angels. Clear, who was 11-11 as a reliever, gives Boston needed bullpen help.

"I think the trade strengthens our club," said Ralph Houk, the new Red Sox manager. "We have had a kid (Hoffman) playing third base who ought to be at shortstop and that's where we'll play him," said Houk. "We got a fine reliever in Clear and Miller can be a fourth outfielder."

The Red Sox aren't through wheeling and dealing. They're still trying to trade outfielder Fred Lynn, who is in the last year of his contract. The Los Angeles Dodgers and New York Mets appear the main contenders for him.

THE METS said they had made a concrete proposal for the outfielder, but refused any details.

Acquiring Lynn likely would help the Mets in their quest to sign outfielder Dave Winfield, this year's most sought after free agent. Winfield reportedly had narrowed his choice to the Mets and New York Yankees, but was waiting to see if the Mets strengthen themselves at this meeting.

A trade given the most likely chance of materializing was being developed by the St. Louis Cardinals and Milwaukee Brewers. The Cards, already involved in a free agent signing and two trades totaling 15 players, were at it again.

The report is that Whitey Herzog, general manager and manager of St. Louis, was prepared to send catcher-first baseman Ted Simmons, pitcher Pete Vukovich and recently acquired reliever Rollie Fingers to the Brewers for infielder Jim Gantner, pitcher Larry Sorensen and outfielder Sixto Lezcano.

In a two-player exchange Wednesday, the Detroit Tigers acquired left-handed relief pitcher Kevin Saucier from the Texas Rangers for shortstop Mark Wagner.

Illinois races past Missouri five, 84-62

By The Associated Press

The Big Ten has proved its mettle for years as one of the best, if not the best, basketball conferences in the nation.

Four teams from the Big Ten are in this week's Top 20 basketball ratings, and one more put in a strong bid for national recognition Wednesday night.

Illinois won its third straight game by swamping 14th-ranked Missouri 84-62.

Craig Tucker and Eddie Johnson, both had 20 points for Illinois. In other games involving ranked teams, fourth-ranked Maryland swamped Fairleigh Dickinson 109-83, No. 18 Michigan tripped Kent State 97-72 and No. 20 Syracuse outscored Detroit 93-79.

Illinois led 41-36 at halftime as Johnson scored 16 of his points, but Missouri went nearly eight minutes without a field goal in the second half and fell behind 68-47 with 8:53 remaining.

The Tigers' leading scorer was Ricky Frazier, with 17 points. Center Buck Williams hit 12 of 13 shots and scored 25 points and guard Greg Manning hit eight of eight for 18 to pace Maryland over Fairleigh Dickinson, who got 27 from Ken Webb.

The Terrapins, 5-0, were tied 21-21 before pulling away with 15 consecutive points in a 2-14 span midway through the first half and a 14-2 binge after intermission.

Mike McGee scored 30 points and Thad Garner added 15 as Michigan also stayed unbeaten with its easy win over Kent State. The Wolverines, 5-0, led 40-24 at halftime and extended the margin to 58-28 with an 18-4 spurt to start the second period.

In other major-college games, Boston College beat Brown 70-56, Georgetown swamped Southern University 79-43, La Salle edged Xavier-Ohio 70-65, Penn crushed St. Francis (Pa.) 76-56, St. John's drubbed Columbia 58-42, St. Peter's clubbed St. Francis (N.Y.) 62-47, West Virginia beat Ohio 69-61, Mississippi dropped Mercer 70-58, South Carolina blitzed Biscayne 80-60, Tulane crushed Roosevelt 109-63, Virginia Tech beat East Tennessee 72-68, Miami-Ohio edged Cincinnati 91-87 in overtime, Lamar tripped Texas Southern 88-73, Oklahoma State nipped Houston Baptist 78-75, Texas Tech ripped U.S. International 77-60 and Washington State beat Montana State 73-59.

Mandlikova gains quarterfinals in South Australian net tourney

ADELAIDE, Australia (AP) — Top-seed Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia advanced to the quarterfinals of the $125,000 South Australian Women's Open tennis tournament with a hard-fought, third-round victory Thursday over American Barbara Hallquist.

Mandlikova won a 5-7, 6-3, 6-4 victory. She was forced to come from 0-2 in the third set to break Hallquist's service twice and take the match.

The 18-year-old Czech was unable to restrain her disappointment in the second set, however, when several calls went against her. She voiced her disapproval to 74-year-old umpire Phil Read and when she gained no satisfaction slammed the ball into the grandstand in anger.

Mandlikova now meets 17-year-old American Bettina Bunge, who had a straight-set victory over Australian Anne Minter 6-4, 6-2.

Fifth-seed Sue Barker of Great Britain showed her best form with a devastating display against American Diane Desfor, winning her round-three clash 6-2, 6-1.

Earlier in the day the tournament was dealt a blow with the withdrawal of fourth-seed American Pam Shriver.

Shriver, who is suffering from a recurrence of a shoulder injury, made her decision about 90 minutes before she was due to play Betty Stove of The Netherlands.

Goodbye to Terrazas

In every thing gives thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you. 1 Thessalonians 5: 18.

Theodore "Teddy" Terrazas left us Saturday and his passing crushed the heart of Midland.

He left in the fullness of youth. So young at 15, so energetic, so competitive. His life was characterized by those traits, and his death touched us deeply because he had touched those around him when he was here.

He was playing basketball for Midland High School when the end came in Snyder, and his seemingly untimely death sent his teammates and coaches into a deep state of shock. But somehow, if it has to be, that seemed right for Teddy. He loved Midland High and he loved playing sports. And his teammates loved him because he gave of himself — in the MHS halls, on the court and on the football field. He was also a starting linebacker for the undefeated Midland High junior varsity football team.

He wanted to compete for Midland High. The athletic sacrifice was a dear love for him. He never was able to reach his full athletic potential because he was only a sophomore. But he reached his coaches, teammates and classmates. In the end, he reached all of us in Midland.

His funeral Tuesday was attended by an overflow crowd and many there never knew Teddy personally. It was because Teddy touched us in death as he did in life. He made us pause and take note of our own vulnerability.

But Teddy left us his competitive spirit and desire to excel. He would want his teammates to go forward — to seek and obtain all the goals that he had hoped for. Because he loved the battle of life itself. That's why he was so popular.

Midland High football coach Pat Culpepper may have put it best. "We lost a true soldier when we lost Teddy. There are players and there are soldiers. Teddy was a soldier. He was one of the pure in heart."

One teammate near tears said Tuesday, "He wanted to win so bad. I think I will always remember that about him. I hope we can win every one for him this year. I think he would like that. He wasn't on the varsity, but he wanted them to be good too. He just wanted Midland High to win everything."

The Bulldogs won't forget Teddy's brief touch. Tuesday night, just hours after the funeral, Midland High players wore black wrist bands in his memory. The shock had not subsided and they barely won, 50-49, over Lubbock Monterey. Time will heal the wounds and memories will be sweeter and new goals can be reached. That's what Teddy would like most.

And Midland will remember because he touched all of us. And we are thankful for having known Theodore "Teddy" Terrazas even for a fleeting moment.

Boston Bruins down Nordiques in NHL contest

By The Associated Press
Boston Bruins defenseman Dick Redmond may have sounded the death knell of goaltender Michel Dion's career with the Quebec Nordiques.

Redmond scored a pair of consecutive, unassisted goals in the second period, and immediately after the second score, Dion removed himself from the game.

Quebec Coach Michel Bergeron, mystified, put Michel Plasse in goal, watched his Nordiques lose 6-4 in Quebec and announced after the game he had suspended Dion indefinitely.

"It is not acceptable that he lets the team down and simply stops playing the way he did," Bergeron said. "I've called up Mark Young from the minors as a backup to Plasse for the game Thursday night (in Boston)." Bergeron said he was taking the action "on my own" in the absence of general manager Maurice Filion, who was at the NHL meetings in Palm Beach, Fla.

"I have given him (Dion) many chances, and I've shown confidence in him since the beginning of the year," said Bergeron, adding he could go no further with the 26-year-old netminder.

Redmond's two goals, his seventh and eighth of the season, ignited a four-goal Boston second period and gave the Bruins a 6-2 lead going into the final period. Pierre Lacroix and Jamie Hislop each scored for Quebec in the third period, while Plasse held Boston scoreless, facing eight shots, to get the Nordiques within two goals.

Rangers 6, Capitals 2
The line of center Walt Tkaczuk and wings Eddie Johnstone and Steve Vickers scored a pair of goals to spark New York to its fourth consecutive victory. Tkaczuk scored with 52 seconds left in the second period to snap a 1-1 tie, and Johnstone beat Washington goaltender Wayne Stephenson with a 30-footer 6:22 into the final period.

The Rangers sealed the victory with three goals in the final 10 minutes of the game, including Ron Greshner's tally with one second left.

Mike Gartner scored both of Washington's goals, including a second-period score on a penalty shot.

Penguins 4, Canadiens 3
Peter Lee scored twice, including the winning tally with 3:02 left in the game, to pace Pittsburgh past the Canadiens and give the Penguins consecutive victories over Montreal for the first time in the 14-year history of the franchise. Pittsburgh beat Montreal earlier in the week.

Ron Langway and Mario Tremblay scored first-period goals to give Montreal a 2-0 lead, but Pittsburgh scored three times in a 6½ minute span of the second period. Lee ignited the rally with a goal at 2:26.

Canucks 8, Maple Leafs 5
Bobby Schmautz and Per Olav Brasar each scored twice, keying Vancouver. Both of Schmautz's goals came in the third period, when Vancouver rallied from a 4-3 deficit with five goals to put the game away.

Wilf Paiement scored his second goal of the game 20 seconds into the final period to put Toronto one goal up, but Schmautz tied it at 7:17. Dave Williams put Vancouver ahead at 9:43 and Brasar padded the cushion to two goals 43 seconds later.

Kings 7, North Stars 2
Charlie Simmer tallied his 28th and 29th goals of the season to pace Los Angeles over the slumping North Stars, who have won only twice in their past eight games. The Kings, meanwhile, won their 20th game, most in the league.

Simmer's goal at 2:40 of the second period snapped a 2-2 tie, and he connected again with 1:08 left in the game.

Islanders 3, Oilers 2
Mike Bossy scored two goals, including the winner with 31 seconds left in the game, to pace the Islanders over Edmonton. Each of Bossy's goals came on an assist from Bryan Trottier, and the game-winner was Bossy's 30th goal of the season to lead the NHL.

The Oilers led 1-0 after one period on a goal by Stan Weir, but Bossy tied the score 49 seconds into the second period. Blair MacDonald gave the Oilers the lead again at 3:03 of the middle frame, but Denis Potvin tied it 2-2 at 11:37.

Whalers 8, Jets 5
Jordy Douglas and Warren Miller each scored two goals, and Hartford snapped a 5-5 third-period tie with three consecutive goals to extend Winnipeg's winless streak to 25 games, two short of the NHL record.

Michel Galarneau scored the go-ahead goal with 3:07 gone in the final 20 minutes, and Miller's second goal of the game capped the outburst.

Flyers 2, Black Hawks 2
Grant Mulvey drilled a 30-footer past Philadelphia goaltender Pete Peeters with 3:19 left in the game to lift the Black Hawks into a tie with the Flyers in a contest marred by 130 minutes in penalties.

Bill Barber scored both goals for the Flyers, including a tally 4:59 into the third period that gave Philadelphia a 2-1 lead. Ken Solheim scored for Chicago at 9:13 of the second period to offset Barber's first-period goal.

Vandeweghe makes pro debut with Nuggets against Mavericks

DENVER (AP) — Kiki Vandeweghe, who had failed to come to contract terms with the Dallas Mavericks since being selected by that team in the first round of last June's National Basketball Association draft, finally made his NBA debut in a Mavericks' game.

But Vandeweghe was wearing a Denver Nuggets' uniform when he began his pro career Wednesday night in a game against, ironically, the team he had feuded with for six months.

Seeing considerable playing time, Vandeweghe scored six points in the Nuggets' 116-107 victory.

The 6-foot-8 former UCLA forward signed a multi-year contract with the Nuggets earlier Wednesday. Denver obtained his rights after Dallas had unsuccessfully sought a trade with various other clubs. In exchange for Vandeweghe, Dallas will receive Denver's first-round choice in the 1981 draft. In addition, Dallas will receive Denver's No. 1 draft choice in 1985, with the Nuggets getting Dallas' top selection in 1986.

Vandeweghe, a 21-year-old Los Angeles resident, finished his college career as the eighth best scorer in UCLA history. His career field-goal percentage of .570 was third behind only Bill Walton and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, and he established a school record for forwards with a .622 field-goal percentage as a junior.

Brooks given full support

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — The University of Oregon affirmed its support for head football coach Rich Brooks Wednesday by extending his contract for two years through January of 1985.

The university also boosted his salary to more than $46,000 per year as of July of next year, approved increases in pay for all nine of Brooks' assistants and gave the go-ahead for construction of new football offices and training rooms near Autzen Stadium.

The pack is back.

Ammunition getting high

You think we have high prices? According to an article by Jon R. Sundra, Shooting Industry Magazine, the prices we pay for ammunition is a mere pittance compared to prices paid in most African countries. Sundra says that many professional hunters depend on their clients leaving behind surplus ammunition. Ammo is restricted at an "unrealistic" number of rounds which drives the price up. Many professional hunters, Sundra writes, are using rifles in the same calibers their clients use. Calibers such as 7-Magnum, .30-06, .375 or .458 are popular enough that the pros can expect to acquire rounds from their more fortunate foreign hunters.

In the Zambian city of Lusaka, "the one city where ammo and guns can be purchased, the costs are mind boggling," Sundra says. "Apparently, prices are based on whatever the market will bear." Sundra's professional hunter for much of his last safari has paid as much as $150 for a box of 7-Magnum ammo and $225 for a box of .460 Weatherby. I say ouch!

THE WESTERN Sportsman's Club, Big Spring, holds metal silhouette and combat pistol matches each month at their range 11-miles up Andrews highway from Big Spring.

The first Sunday of the month center-fire pistol silhouette shoots take place. Using a large-bore pistol, callibers such as .45 long colt, .41-Magnum, .44-Magnum, and .357-Magnum, shooters attempt to topple metal silhouettes of chickens, pigs, turkeys and rams.

The second Sunday of the month will find the rimfire 22 competitors shooting at miniature sized silhouettes. Both center-fire matches and rim-fire matches commence at 2 p.m. Entry fees for competition are: members $3, non-members $5. Annual membership dues are $18.

JIMMY ODEN, of Midland's impressive First In Sports, Inc., reports that he and his fishing buddies were really putting the crappie away with minnows at the Colorado River recently. He said he they boated in the neighborhood of 115 from the waters near Colorado City.

Local hunters with leases in the Sterling City area report few deer seen. Ron Robey, Big Spring gun shop operator, says his lease doesn't look good probably for two or more years yet. Robey thinks a factor in the reduced number of deer seen relates directly to the increase in oil exploration activity.

Another hunter said he wasn't seeing much, "just a few does and one little buck." When asked if he was hunting from an elevated stand this year, he replied, "Not now. I prefer a raised stand and I've used them in the past but this year there is an oil rig right where the stand used to be."

I suppose that is the price we have to pay for an oil crunch and overseas squabbles. I saw one dandy buck come out of the Robert Lee area. This buck, in obvious good body condition, was a uniform 10-point, with a 19 1/2 inch spread.

SWC winter meetings in 2nd day

DALLAS (AP) — The Southwest Conference annual winter meeting began Wednesday with business managers and baseball coaches the first to arrive from the nine member schools.

Track coaches and athletic directors arrive Thursday with the faculty representatives due Friday.

Items likely related to the NCAA convention to be held in January were expected to produce the most news. They include women's sports, financial aid, freshman eligibility, and junior college transfer rules.

Other items on the agenda include the post-season basketball tournament, rulings on transfer and hardship cases, a report from the radio and television committees, coaches recommendations, and spring sports.

High Sky Bass Club holds final tournament

The High Sky Bass Club of Midland held their last bass fishing tournament of the year Saturday with a "Lake of Your Choice" event. Twenty-eight club members took part in the affair and caught a total of 26 1/2 pounds of fish.

Claiming the top prize was John Kelly with 10 pounds, 6 ounces. Second place went to Charles Erek, 6 pounds, 14 ounces and Glen Hixon took home third on a total catch of 1 pound 8 ounces.

Nona Kelly reeled in 6 pounds 10 ounces of fish to grab the top women's spot.

For 1980, the club's top six fishermen were: Charles Erek 1,072 points; John Kelly 940; Jackie Wilkes 741; Tom Allred 738; Bill Oglsby 638; and Dowd Scott 628. These men will be going to the Regional-State tournament to be held in April. The site of the tournament is to be determined at a later date.

Seattle center will play against Chargers

SEATTLE (AP) — Seattle Seahawks starting center John Yarno Wednesday was cleared to play against the Chargers in San Diego Saturday, after being given an examination of his right knee.

Yarno twisted his knee in a 27-21 loss to the New York Giants here last weekend. The Seahawks' seventh straight defeat.

76ers are honored

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — There are championship teams and there are great teams, but now a team from this sports-hungry city has laid claim to the title of greatest pro basketball team in history.

The 1966-67 Philadelphia 76ers, winners of the National Basketball Association championship in a record-setting, dynasty-busting year, were honored here Wednesday night as the greatest team in the 35-year history of the NBA.

The selection was made last month by the U.S. Basketball Writers Association, and NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien presented plaques commemorating the title to 11 team members, in a nostalgic reunion before a game between the 1980 76ers and the Chicago Bulls.

Philadelphia won the game, 113-100. "The basketball writers made a tremendous selection," said O'Brien. "It's historic in basketball and historic in sports. I congratulate the 76ers." In their best-ever year, the Sixers finished the regular season with a record-setting 68-13 season. They followed that with the NBA championship, ending Boston's eight-year reign by defeating the Celtics in the Eastern finals.

They defeated the Golden State Warriors in six games for the title.

Shriver withdraws from play

ADELAIDE, Australia (AP) — Fourth-seeded American Pam Shriver withdrew from the $125,000 South Australian Women's Tennis Open on Thursday because of a shoulder injury.

Shriver, who is suffering from a recurrence of a chronic shoulder injury, made her decision about 19 minutes before she was to play her doubles partner, Betty Stove of the Netherlands.

Her withdrawal occurred less than 24 hours after the tournament's No. 2 seed, Wendy Turnbull of Australia, announced her withdrawal due to a similar injury.

On Sunday, No. 6 seed Sylvia Hanika of West Germany also withdrew because of injuries.

Wagner to Rangers

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas Rangers obtained shortstop Mark Wagner from the Detroit Tigers Wednesday night in exchange for left-handed pitcher Kevin Saucier.

Wagner, 26, batted .236 with the Tigers last season in just 72 at-bats.

Saucier, a 24-year-old reliever, was 7-3 with the world champion Philadelphia Phillies.

KENNY REDIN'S Fin & Feather

Some call him the "cock of the walk." Others call him the "pride of the plains." While others call him just about everything in the book when they miss a close-in shot.

The bird is the Chinese Ringneck Pheasant. Season on the High Plains of Texas opens this Saturday. Hunters from throughout the United States will be based in and around High Plains cities opening morning and by daylight nary a field holding pheasant cover will be without hunters and their dogs.

WITHIN just the last 10 years, pheasant hunting in Texas, mostly on the High Plains has boomed. The cities and towns of Plainview, Hereford, Dimmitt, Friona, Umbarger, Floydada, Hale Center, Olton, Lazbuddie and several others have been booked by hunters on motel reservations for a year. And the hunters come from everywhere.

Texas hunters several years back ventured to Kansas and Nebraska to bag limits of the colorful pheasants but nowadays, the High Plains harbors huntable populations of birds; with some hunters claiming the Texas pheasant population better than the northern states.

The reason pheasant hunting has become so popular in Texas is that the bird is an introduced species. Prior to 10 years ago, the only pheasant hunting that mounted to anything came in the way of private shooting and hunting preserves. But now with the booming population of ringnecks in the wild, we'll have to consider pheasant hunting only second to deer hunting by terms of popularity. Last year alone hunters harvested approximately 38,000 birds and this year's upcoming season almost promises to be better.

THE CHINESE Ringneck Pheasant is by far the most popular upland game bird in America. Introduced from the Orient in the late 1800s, this colorful bird has adapted quite well in the U.S. grain belt regions. Their original start in the U.S began in Oregon. Due to their brilliant colors and gamey spirits, the pheasant has now reached the hearts of millions of hunters.

HUNTING THE pheasant is unlike any other upland game bird. It may take a hunter eight hard hours of walking brushy lake bottoms and grain fields, but once that first bird bursts from his protective hiding place, those eight hours of walking are forgotten. An explosion of color hits the air at high speed, many times the old wise rooster cackling to beat all hell. The pheasant's sudden break from cover startles the novice hunter causing shotgun pellets to fill the air, not the bird. And many first-time pheasant hunters overreact at the glimpse of a flushing pheasant. They don't judge the size of the bird. The bird appears much larger than he actually is, and many hunters just point and shoot. A successful pheasant hunter aims, leads the bird somewhat and then squeezes the trigger.

Pheasant hunting is not hard. You don't have to be a fowl biologist to successfully bag the pheasant, you just have to know a few, and very few, basics of pheasant hunting.

The High Plains offers the most varied types of hunting in the United States. Playa lake bottoms which serve as wet regions in the summer and dry regions in the winter are by far the best places to find pheasants. The birds use these lakes to protect themselves from natural predators. These weedy and brushy dry lake bottoms serve as nesting and roosting regions. Best times to hunt the lake bottoms are early of morning and late of evening. However, there's a little trick to it. The birds are sometimes hard to flush from the thick brush. Here's where a dog comes in handy. The birds will not run in front of the hunter, therefore a dog can easily find and hold pheasants. If you are not hunting with a dog, then several hunters are required. But don't walk too fast. Ease along the outer rims of the lake bottom, then perform a criss-cross pattern. Every 10 to 15 feet stop, look, and listen. More times than not, the birds will flush as you are silently standing there.

AFTER the sun reaches higher into the crisp December sky, the birds will then move out of the lake bottoms to feed. Corn and milo fields are prime feeding areas for pheasants. But the hunting is tougher. This type of hunting requires a lot of hard walking and less finding.

Here again, the more the hunters, the merrier. Milo fields are usually large in size. And most of the birds are situated in only a small area. Hunters should spread 25 to 30 feet apart and walk at a fast pace. This is because in naked milo fields, pheasants will run on the hunter. It's best to have one or two spotters at the other end of the field to keep the bird from running out. And you can bet, the majority of the birds will flush right near the end.

Season to open—Texas' most popular upland game bird season gets underway this Saturday as thousands of hunters will converge upon the High Plains of Texas in search of the colorful, but wily Chinese Ringneck Pheasant. The season opens Saturday and continues through Sun. Dec. 28. Two cocks are legal per day. (Photo by Kenny Redin).

Jennings triggers Tech victory

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Freshman Bubba Jennings poured in a career-high 22 points to spark Texas Tech to a 77-60 victory over U.S. International University Wednesday night.

It was Tech's fourth straight victory, running its record to 5-1. U.S. International dropped to 2-4.

The Raiders increased their 32-29 intermission lead behind Jennings' long-range bombs and the all-around play of Jeff Taylor. Taylor added 17 points and Nelson Franse had 10 for the Raiders.

Boxing site chosen

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Syracuse, already picked as the site of next summer's National Sports Festival, has landed the rights to host the 1983 National AAU boxing championships and is hoping for the 1984 Junior Olympics, it was disclosed Wednesday.

Syracuse beat Biloxi, Miss. and Spokane, Wash. as the site of the boxing championships in 1983 and local officials said they were in a strong position to land the Junior Olympics.

Aggies facing UTEP

LAS CRUCES (AP) — The New Mexico State Aggies' impressive home court winning streak is in for a severe test tonight from rival University of Texas-El Paso.

The Miners, fresh off an 85-78 win over University of Nevada-Las Vegas, will venture north into Las Cruces for the first of two meetings between the fierce rivals. A return engagement is scheduled for Saturday on the Miners' home court in El Paso.

New Mexico State is off to a slow start, having lost three of its first four games. The only victory came at home against Baylor earlier this month and extended the Aggies' string of consecutive wins at the Pan American Center to 20 straight.

In fact, NMSU has not lost a home game since it was beaten 91-89 in overtime by then No. 1 ranked Indiana State on Feb. 1, 1979.

UTEP is one team that has been moderately successful at beating New Mexico State in Las Cruces in recent years. Although the Aggies won last season, the Miners are 5-5 over the last 10 meetings between the two teams in Las Cruces.

New Mexico State Coach Weldon Drew, who is working with a virtually new team this season, says the Aggies will have to control UTEP's big front line.

"Like Texas and Colorado, UTEP features a very big and experienced front line," says Drew. "We don't match up very well against them."

Battery failure not problem

Dear Dr. Solomon: If pacemakers run on batteries, I assume that eventually the batteries have to be recharged. How long do they actually last? — Don

Dear Don: As a result of recent improvements, it is possible for pacemaker batteries to last five, 10 or even 20 years. Today battery failure should not present any problems in the operation of a pacemaker.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am an insulin-dependent diabetic and am slowly becoming involved in a daily training program. I understand that for some types of physical activity, the amount of insulin I take can be substantially reduced. If I become increasingly active, what are the possibilities of my being able to do without insulin entirely? — Randy

Dear Randy: As you indicate, insulin-dependent diabetics may have to adjust their insulin dosage in relation to the amount they exercise. According to Dr. Lee N. Cunningham, associate professor of physical education at Fitchburg State College in Massachusetts, prolonged exercise, such as an all-day hike, may require that the dosage be cut in half.

However, exercise is not a substitute for insulin. While exercise may decrease your need for insulin, you may always require some.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I read an article in a popular magazine dealing with risk factors for heart disease. After discussing the article with various members of my family and friends, I've come to the conclusion that we are all in danger of getting a heart attack. Everyone I've spoken with has at least one of the symptoms mentioned in the article. Am I missing something, or is the threat of heart attacks really so widespread? — Tom

Dear Tom: Not having read the article in question, I can only speculate about its contents. It seems to me, however, that you are jumping to an unwarranted conclusion.

In the first place, being a risk for a disease does not necessarily mean ever developing the disease. Many people at risk for coronary heart disease — or, for that matter, any other disease — live to a ripe old age.

Having said this, I must add that many Americans do have at least one major coronary risk factor that predisposes to coronary heart disease. According to Dr. Robert J. Goldberg, of the U.S. Public Health Service Hospital in Baltimore, this applies to almost one of every three people. Furthermore, a study of almost 3,500 people showed that 11 percent had at least two of the following three risk factors: high blood pressure, cigarette smoking and a high cholesterol level.

These studies are not designed to frighten the public or to create unrealistic and unnecessary concern.

Disney defector animating new production

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Update on the Disney defectors:

A bit over a year ago, Walt Disney Productions was shocked right up to its mouse ears by the sudden departure of 17 members of the studio's animation department. Such a loss hadn't happened since the 1920s, when another company stole most of Walt's staff as well as his star, Oswald the Rabbit. That's when Walt invented Mickey Mouse.

The recent defection was led by Don Bluth, a quiet-voice but firm-willed artist who had directed the animation of "Pete's Dragon." With the backing of Aurora Productions, headed by two other ex-Disneyites, Richard Irvine and James L. Stewart, Don Bluth Productions was formed.

Operating at first from Bluth's garage, the new firm turned out a short, "Banjo the Woodpile Cat" and a two-minute sequence for "Xanadu." Then Bluth plunged into a feature, "Mrs. Frisby and the Rats of N.I.M.H."

Don Bluth Productions has moved out of the garage and into a modern two-story building behind a savings and loan office on Ventura Boulevard in Studio City. I stopped by one afternoon for a progress report.

I was met by Mel Griffin, the only non-Disney member of the management team that includes Bluth, Gary Goldman and John Pomeroy. Griffin, 37, handles business affairs, and he escorted me through the departments. There seemed to be a pioneering spirit among the 38-person crew.

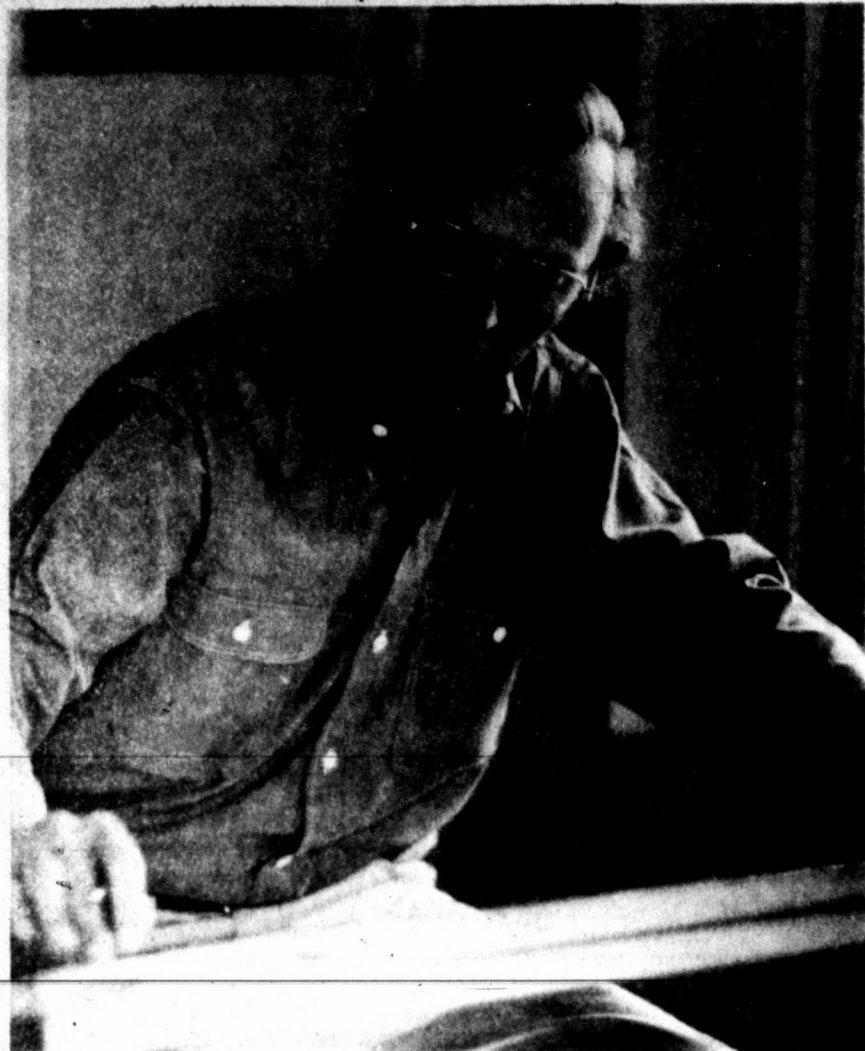

"Don doesn't let us get lazy," explained Dorse Lanpher, 45, who was creating such effects as bubbles, ripples and cobwebs. "It's easy to get lazy in effects. You see a deadline staring you in the face and you're tempted to turn out stuff like those Saturday morning TV cartoons."

The tour ended in a screening room where we were joined by the other three partners. Like all animators, Bluth, 43, is a good story teller, and he delighted in recounting the story of the field mouse,

Mrs. Frisby, and her struggles to save her home and family from bulldozers. She finds allies in an organization of rats who are "beyond man in intelligence and more spiritual as well."

Although most of the animation was penciled drawing, without color, the clips were impressive. With expert voices such as Elizabeth Hartman, Dom DeLuise and John Carradine, the animals are lovingly anthropomorphic, their movements lifelike and lively.

After the screening, the film makers reflected on their new enterprise as well as their old employer.

Watercolorist James Kramer of Santa Fe will exhibit his works Dec. 19 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library, 1805 W. Indiana Ave. Kramer, a member of the National Academy of Western Art, has exhibited his works with the Royal Western Watercolor Exhibit, the National Cowboy Hall of Fame, the American Watercolor Society, the Society of Western Artists and the California Art Club.

ENTERTAINMENT BRIEFS

MC Chorale to present Christmas concert

The Midland College Chorale will presents its Christmas concert at 7:30 tonight.

The chorale, directed by Dr. Charles Lawson, will be joined by the Memorial Christian Church Choir, directed by Bambi Lawson, and the First Christian Concert Handbell Choir, led by Darryl Knapp.

After the concert, which will be held in the recital hall at the Allison Fine Arts Building, an informal carol-singing session will be held in the McCormick Gallery. Hot chocolate and cookies will be served. The public is invited to attend.

Museum sponsoring two tours

The Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., is sponsoring two tours to "The Great Bronze Age of China" exhibition being held at the Kimball Art Museum in Fort Worth.

Both tours will be for one day and are limited to 20 persons each. This highly publicized exhibition offers an unprecedented opportunity to examine numerous masterpieces from China's vast archaeological treasury. Spanning almost two millennia of magnificent cultural achievement, it is this year's number one art spectacular.

Outstanding among the great ritual bronzes, jades and terracotta sculptures, are a group of life-sized warriors and horses from the terracotta army for the First Emperor of Qin, 221-210 B.C. For more information call the museum at 683-2882.

Traveling Art to remain on exhibit

ODESSA — The University of Texas of the Permian Basin Traveling Student Art Show will remain on exhibit at Odessa College's Instructional Building through Dec. 21.

All items on display were completed within the last year. This is the fourth year for the traveling show which encompasses such techniques as drawing, painting, sculpture, ceramics, printmaking, photography, weaving and jewelry.

Churches plan special concert

A special handbell concert will be held in the fellowship hall at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave., Sunday at 3 p.m.

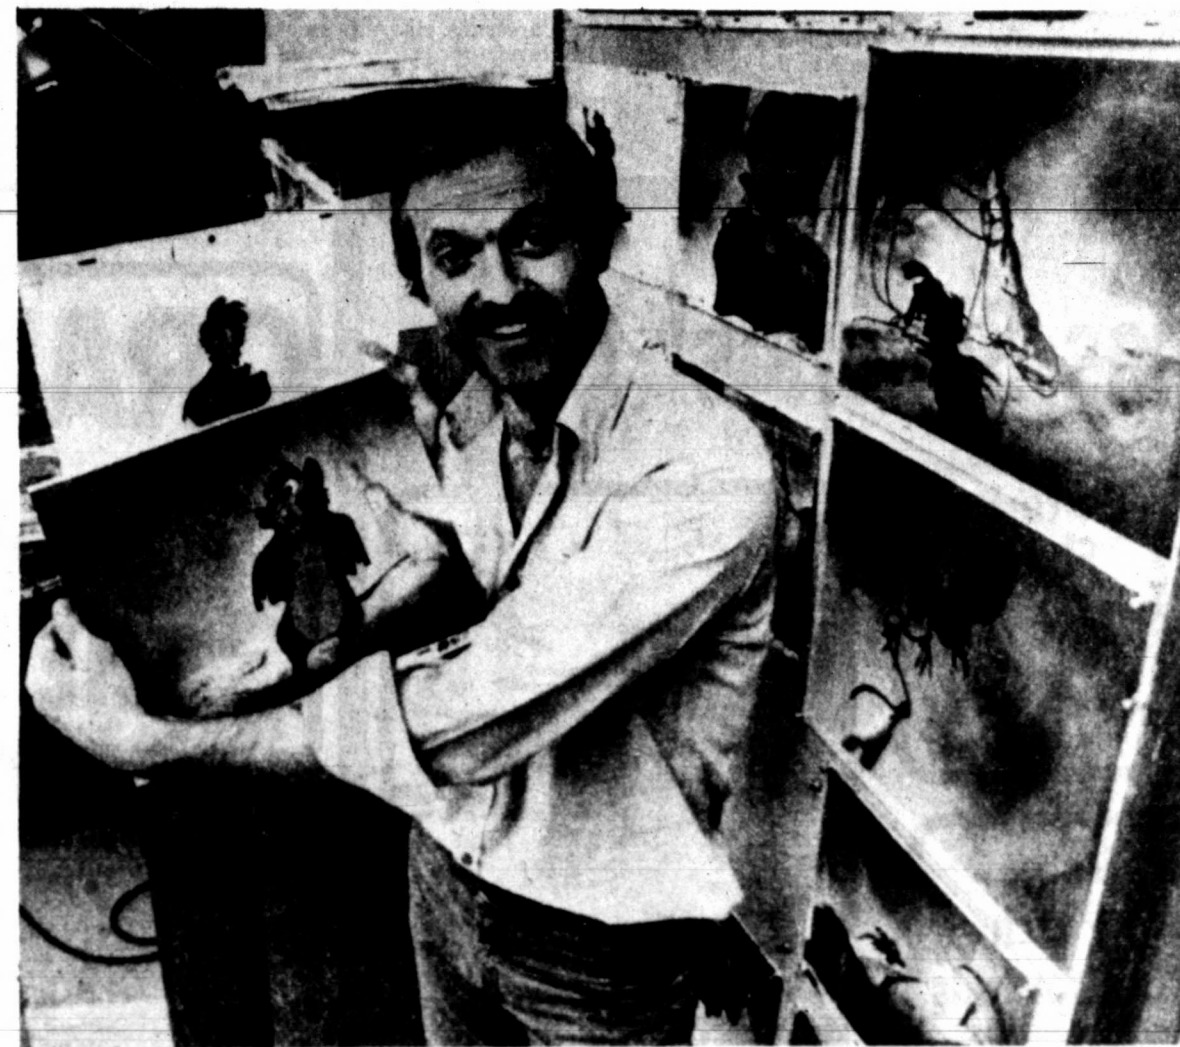

The massed ringing will be performed by the combined choirs from local and out-of-town churches and is the conclusion to a special workshop being held at First Presbyterian Friday and Saturday. The public is invited to attend this free concert.

Theatre Midland's last scheduled performances of "Light Up The Sky" are tonight, Friday and Saturday.

Tonight's performance is at 7:30 p.m. while Friday and Saturday performances are scheduled for 8:30 p.m.

This Moss Hart comedy is a humorous look into the lives of those associated with the theater on opening night. The cast at Theatre Midland do a convincing job of portraying their respective roles making "Light Up The Sky" an evening filled with laughter. Reservations may be made by calling 682-4111.

Walt Disney Productions defector, animator Don Bluth, holds up frames from his new production "Mrs. Frisby and the Rats of N.I.M.H." recently in Los Angeles. Bluth, 43, says animators working for Don Bluth

Productions put out nearly double the amount of film a week that is done by animators working for Disney in a week. (AP Laserphoto)

Advertisements promise new adventures in adult comedy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC's advertisements scream promises of new adventures in adult comedy: "The Series They Tried To Ban In Australia! 'Number 96'"

Below one ad's headline was a cartoon tableau showing, among other things, four undressed women and a transvestite. "The most outrageous group of TV characters ever collected under one roof!" teased NBC. "The newlywed baseball player who strikes out! The starlet in search of a casting couch! The open-marriage couple who are ready for anything!" Etc., etc.

The most outrageous group of TV characters ever collected under one roof, revealed in Wednesday-through-Friday showings this week, turns out to be a mild collection of sitcom types, tittering behind a naughty-soap opera facade.

Outrageous? C'mon. "Number 96" is a landlocked "Love Boat." If Australia tried to ban this, Australia should be admired throughout the Western world. In fact, however, this isn't quite the "Number 96" some in Australia were worried about. The down-under version, according to reliable accounts, really was outrageous, featuring frontal nudity and the sort of comic shock that networks (and sponsors) fear would send American audiences reeling in horror.

So, Americans are getting what they usually get when a network turns its hand to "adult" entertainment — a soft tease that wouldn't raise a blush on a Mississippi spinster. Strictly Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders stuff.

That form would be fine if it weren't used as a substitute for substance — and substance in this case would mean a good laugh or two. Instead, there is this:

Max (Greg Mullavey), of the open-marriage couple, bemoans a mean hangover as he fixes himself a drink. "What did I have in my mouth last night?" he asks. "Our hostess's shoulder," responds wife Marion. And that's one of the show's funny lines. The dialogue soon descends to this level: Max: "I don't think you could handle me (sic) making love to another woman."

Marion: "Why not? Misery loves company."

And you thought you were shed of "The Ropers."

All of this isn't to suggest that "Number 96" is a hopeless cause. The structure of the series — focusing on the schizoid life in an adult apartment building in Southern California — presents interesting storyline possibilities. The creators and the network are clearly trying to out-"SOAP" ABC, and it can be done. There's no reason to suppose that "Number 96," given time to work into a groove and given some snappier scripts, can't be at least as successful as "SOAP."

Bryant Gumbel familiar face on NBC this fall

NEW YORK (AP) — Bryant Gumbel, host of NBC's pro football pre-game show since November 1975, has been a most familiar presence this fall, with a regular spot on the network's "Today" program and his own prime-time series, "Games People Play."

"This multiplicity of roles," says the 31-year-old Gumbel, by any standard one of NBC's most promising young personalities, "is a kind of fact-finding mission for me. It's not accidental that all these things are going on at once, nor is it blind ambition."

"I told the people at NBC when all this began that I was not sure what I wanted to do," he says. "I think now I could see myself doing a 'Tomorrow' show, something like that. I could be comfortable with that."

That's not to say Bryant Gumbel is about to abandon his present role for work in entertainment or news, but the one-time sports director at Los Angeles' KNBC-TV clearly would consider challenge from another area.

"When I first started in this business," he says, "I was asked if I wanted to be an anchorman. I said no, because with sports, something I'd known all my life, I was working from a position of confidence."

"But I must admit there is this overwhelming desire to prove to anyone who wants to listen that you know about something besides sports."

"Howard Cosell, Red Smith with New York Times, they've done that for a long time. And it's not so much proving their own intelligence as it is gaining an extra measure of respect among those who enjoy sports."

"The feeling has always been," Gumbel says, "if you care about opera, or read Studs Terkel, how could you possibly know who's on the offensive line of the Houston Oilers? And that's not necessarily the way it is."

For the time being, Gumbel's schedule is a hectic one. He, his wife and young son maintain homes in both New York City and Calabasas Park, Calif., while he shuttles between the East Coast for "NFL '80" and "Today" and the West for "Games People Play."

"Games People Play" is an hour-long series produced by NBC Sports featuring off-beat competition, often among non-athletes. The series premiered in April, and initially showed some promise. Ratings in recent weeks have been poor.

"I had a lot of reservations about doing 'Games People Play' before I started the show," he concedes. "I thought it might damage my credibility to get into that kind of thing, but at the same time, I didn't want to pass up the chance for a prime-time series."

"I don't think the show has hurt anyone," Gumbel says, "and we've had some fun with it."

A special two-hour "Games People Play" Thursday night at 8 EST features Mike Connors, Bruce Jenner and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar as celebrity guests.

Gumbel joined the "Today" team in September, and files three sports reports each week, broadcast during the 7:30-8 a.m. segment Mondays, Thursdays and Fridays.

Born in New Orleans and raised in Chicago, Gumbel went to work at KNBC in October after a stint as editor of Black Sports magazine. He became sports director at the NBC-owned station in December 1976.

In addition to the NFL pre-game show during the football season, Gumbel is host for the program that precedes NBC's "Game of the Week" baseball coverage.

Gumbel is a key participant in an NBC Sports experiment planned for Dec. 20 — an announcer-less professional football game between the Miami Dolphins and the New York Jets.

He'll be available for commentary only when necessary. The rest of the time, viewers will follow the game much as they would in the stadium, with assistance from the public address announcer. NBC will provide on-screen graphic information.

Marie back with new show, but without brother Donny

By BILL KAUFMAN
Newsday

Marie Osmond, ebullient, pretty and toothsome as ever, is back in a weekly variety hour, performing the customary pastiche of music, dance and comedy sketches. But wait, someone is missing: Brother Donny is nowhere to be seen.

The title of the new NBC series, which so far is committed for a seven-week run (Fridays 8 p.m. EST) is "The Marie Show," and the young TV star is the only member of the famous Osmond family viewers can expect to see.

For Marie, who just turned 21, the new series has evolved into a milestone, both in terms of her career and her personal life. The biggest change is that Marie and Donny have split $5 a team. It was not a split brought on by any discord, Marie carefully points out, but a parting brought on by professional necessity and mutual agreement. Marie has signed a multi-million dollar deal with NBC, which in addition to the current series, calls for movies, specials and other projects. Another factor is that Donny, now 23, is married and has a 13-month-old boy.

Marie has also flown the palatial family coop in Provo, Utah, near Orem, where the Osmonds operate their highly successful $3 million television production and recording center. She's living in her own West Coast condominium and, as she recently explained, "managing to take care of myself perfectly well." And y3s, in response to a rather personal if not impertinent question, Marie said she's "enjoying an extremely satisfactory dating life."

Marie also speaks enthusiastically about the fact that she's called upon to exercise a large degree of authority in producing her new series. "It's very exciting for me to be in control of the show," Marie said. "It's the first time that I'll be performing alone in a prime-time variety situation. It's a completely different feeling when you are solely responsible for what you do." Asked if she had trepidations, she paused. "Maybe a little scared, but it goes away quickly. I'm too busy to let it become a factor. I'm involved in picking dancers, choosing writers, selecting song material. If I don't like something, I say so. It's almost like being so occupied you can't be bothered with being 'cared'."

For anyone recalling the days not too long past, when Marie and the rest of the family were the nation's leading entertainment for the bubble gum set, Marie now presents a far more mature picture. Reverting to talking about herself in the third person, as she seems to often do, she candidly says, "I found that for a long time people had the strange image that Marie is a little air-head. But that's not true. My family always let me be what I wanted to be. There was no puppet being pulled on strings. Sure, I think that Marie at 21 can do more things than Marie at 17, though."

Viewers will also be seeing Marie presented in a different light on her variety series. For example, when in the past, she sang duets with Donny, the pair, of course, did songs and numbers that were innocuous. Now, when she sings with a guest artist, there can be romantic ballads and the appropriate exchange of arm glances and other nuances, impossible to carry out in a brother-sister partnership. Among the guest stars set to appear are Sally Struthers, "Taxi's" Jeff Conaway, and magician David Copperfield.

"The Donny and Marie team as a sustaining entity doesn't work any more. It's simply because we have moved on and up into different directions," Marie said. "You can't expect to continue on doing the same things when you have grown into two distinctly different human beings. We'll still do a family holiday special Dec. 13 and possibly a few other group things when we're all together."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, December 12, 1980

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Those born on this date have an abundance of talent and charisma, which may explain why you share this birthday with Frank Sinatra. An optimistic outlook coupled with patience can make this a truly outstanding year where both finance and romance are concerned. An excellent conversationalist, you tend to be the center of attention at business meetings, social gatherings. Higher-ups are quick to spot your leadership qualities, and you will often be asked to act in a supervisory capacity. Intensely loyal to family, friends, job and country, you need to guard against over-extending yourself. Too many commitments can leave you little time for relaxation, meditation.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Secure the goodwill of associates, subordinates. You will need their active cooperation to get a backlog of work out of the way before the holidays.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Secret agreements will not be productive. Lay all of your cards on the table and let the chips fall where they may. You could be pleasantly surprised.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Take others by surprise now and you will gain the advantage. Loved one's fears need to be put to rest once and for all. Get expert help in righting a financial imbalance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You solve financial problem by carefully adhering to budget. Heed the advice of a well-informed friend and shun those who gossip.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Tempers are apt to be short today. Count to ten before voicing any criticisms you may have. Developing new hobbies, interests will help relieve tension.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The ability to write concise memos, letters could mean speedy career advancement. You move up several rungs on the ladder of success because of friend's assistance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Learn to delegate more authority. Younger person is eager to show what he or she can do when given a free hand. Romantic partner's suggestions could leave you feeling defensive.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Organize business and financial activities along more productive lines. Your social life is likely to take a nice turn. The seeds are sown for a life-long friendship.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Attention to detail is very important now. New romantic challenge may be part of the picture. You need to use all of your powers of persuasion to get what you want.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Let your active imagination devise better ways to do the job. Higher-ups will be impressed by an innovative approach. Encourage associates to be more discreet.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your popularity is on the rise and you are the recipient of favors, invitations. Enjoy the increased attention! Associate can show you how to develop successful business tactics.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Show more trust in loved one's judgment. Being overly critical now could drive away the very people that you hope to attract. Make positive suggestions.

Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

We have frequently exhorted our readers to search for an extra chance before committing themselves to a line of play. This hand turned up in the recent World Team Olympiad. Cover the East-West hands with your thumbs and decide how you would play three no trump after the lead of the jack of spades.

North-South were playing 15-17 point no trumps, which accounts for the auction. But even if you opened the South hand with one of a suit, the final contract should be the same.

Declarer has only seven fast tricks, and it seems that the obvious suit in which to develop two extra tricks is diamonds. It is slightly better than 3-4-1 that West holds at least one diamond honor. So almost every declarer won the spade trick in hand and finessed the jack of diamonds.

East won and forced out declarer's remaining spade stopper. Declarer crossed back to his hand with a high heart to repeat the diamond Declarer led the jack of clubs, and when East covered, the contract was home. But observe that if the jack of clubs lost to West, declarer would win the spade continuation in dummy and lead the nine of clubs, and the contract would still succeed if East held the ten.

RUNNELS STRIKE

The Townsend Co. of Abilene No. 1 Dickinson has been completed as a Capps oil discovery in the Clarkirk multipay field of Runnels County, 1/2 mile northwest of Ballinger.

It completed for a daily flowing potential of 90 barrels of 46.2-gravity oil, no water, with a gas-oil ratio of 5,000-1.

The potential was through an 11/64-inch choke and perforations from 3,657 to 3,667 feet.

The upper Capps was topped at 3,650 feet on kelly bushing elevation of 1,897 feet. Other tops include the Cross Cut sand, 3,540 feet; Jennings sand, 3,730 feet; and Gardner lime, 4,000 feet.

A re-entry operation, it was cleaned out to old total depth of 5,000 feet. Operator set 4 1/2-inch casing at 4,374 feet. The plugged back depth is 4,350 feet. Wellsite is 1,242 feet from northwest and 5,590 feet from northeast lines of Charles Osgood survey No. 365.

CROCKETT WELLS

J. Cleo Thompson of Dallas No. 1-36 University, scheduled as a wildcat, has been completed from the Canyon and assigned to the Ozona multipay field of Crockett County, 10 miles west of Ozona.

Operator reported a calculated absolute open flow potential of 530,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations from 6,703 to 6,919 feet. The pay was acidized with 3,000 gallons.

Total depth is 9,070 feet, and 4 1/2-inch pipe is set at 8,815 feet, the plugged back total depth.

Location is 3/4 mile southeast of other Canyon gas production and 1,320 feet from south and 1,220 feet from east lines of section 36, block 31, University Lands survey.

J. Cleo Thompson No. 2-3 University "W" is another new well in the Ozona (Canyon gas) field of Crockett County.

Scheduled as a wildcat, it finalized for a calculated absolute open flow potential of 2,100,000 cubic feet of gas per day, with a gas-liquid ratio of 32.522-1. Gravity of the condensate is 65.3 degrees.

Completion was through perforations from 6,479 to 6,562 feet after 2,500 gallons of acid.

The well, drilled as a wildcat, is bottomed at 8,820 feet, 4 1/2-inch casing is set at 7,576 feet, the plugged back depth.

Location is 660 feet from north and west lines of section 3, block 31, University Lands survey and 14 miles west of Ozona.

The University 31 multipay field of Crockett County gained its second Queen production with completion of J. Cleo Thompson of Dallas No. 2-35 "E" University, 9 1/2 miles west of Ozona.

The well, one mile southeast of the other producer, finalized for a calculated absolute open flow potential of 72,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

Completion was through perforations from 1,064 to 1,074 feet after 50 quarts of nitroglycerin.

Total depth is 8,778 feet, 8 1/2-inch casing is set at 2,183 feet and plugged back depth is 1,170 feet.

Wellsite is 1,660 feet from south and 990 feet from east lines of section 35, block 31, University Lands survey.

Harrison Interests Ltd. of Houston completed a pair of wells in the Ozona, Southwest (Clear Fork) field of Crockett County.

No. 10 John W. Henderson III, 18 miles southwest of Ozona, finalized for a calculated absolute open flow potential of 4 million cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations from 8,851 to 8,940 feet after 7,500 gallons of acid.

Total depth is 9,115 feet, 4 1/2-inch casing is set at 9,708 feet and hole is plugged back to 9,020 feet.

Wellsite is 660 feet from south and 1,610 feet from east lines of section 6, block SL, T&STL survey and one location northwest of other Clear Fork production.

Harrison Interests No. 11 John W. Henderson III "B" was completed one mile north of other Clear Fork gas production for a calculated absolute open flow potential of 1,250,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations from 8,817 to 8,932 feet after 7,500 gallons of acid.

Total depth is 9,972 feet, 4 1/2-inch pipe is set at 9,025 feet. Location is 660 feet from north and east lines of section 6, block SL, T&STL survey and 17 miles southwest of Ozona.

Mayor to quit post

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Lila Cockrell says she will step down as mayor next spring at the end of her third term.

"It has been a glorious six years," Mrs. Cockrell said of her three terms as mayor of the nation's 10th largest city.

"This is a difficult decision for me, as you can see," she said, becoming so emotional she could not finish reading a prepared announcement this week.

Mrs. Cockrell said her decision not to seek reelection was made in concert with her husband, Sid, who had been ill in recent months.

"My husband and I both feel that after 15 years of public service, we would prefer to have more time for family activities," her statement said.

Mrs. Cockrell entered city politics as a member of the city council.

She indicated she might seek another job in the public sector at a later date.

Councilmen John Steen and Henry Cisneros were expected to be the top candidates seeking to replace Mrs. Cockrell in the municipal election next April 4.

Kleberg gas field called rich

AUSTIN (AP) — An Exxon petroleum engineer says approximately 20 billion cubic feet of gas could be produced from a Kleberg County field over the next 10 years if the Railroad Commission approves a recovery project.

John Atterbery Jr. told the commission as much as 30,000 barrels of water a day would be withdrawn from the Alazan, North (H-2) Field, to reduce reservoir pressure.

As the water is withdrawn, Atterbery said, the gas should move upward to low-pressure areas from where it can be produced.

The project could result in recovery of half the gas left in the reservoir, he said.

NEWSPAPER BIBLE

Would you follow him?

Then one day Jesus came from Nazareth in Galilee, and was baptized by John there in the Jordan River.

The moment Jesus came up out of the water, He saw the heavens open and the Holy Spirit in the form of a dove descending on Him.

And a voice from heaven said, "You are My beloved Son; You are My Delight."

Immediately the Holy Spirit urged Jesus into the desert. There, for 40 days, alone except for desert animals, He was subjected to Satan's temptations to sin. And afterwards the angels came and cared for Him.

Later on, after John was arrested by King Herod, Jesus went to Galilee to preach God's Good News.

"At last the time has come!" He announced. "God's Kingdom is near! Turn from your sins and act on this glorious news!"

One day as Jesus was walking along the shores of the Sea of Galilee, He saw Simon and his brother Andrew fishing with nets, for they were commercial fishermen.

Jesus called out to them, "Come, follow Me! And I will make you fishermen for the souls of men!"

At once they left their nets and went along with Him.

A little farther up the beach, He saw Zebedee's sons, James and John, in a boat mending their nets.

He called them, too, and immediately they left their father Zebedee in the boat with the hired men and went with Him.

Big earthquake may be coming

Location likely further south, experts say

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Southern California is edging closer to a devastating earthquake, according to two theories. And one suggests the great quake may hit farther south than generally expected.

Neither theory outlined this week predicts when the long-expected tremor might hit along the southern leg of the San Andreas Fault, which last exploded in a huge quake in 1857. Most earth scientists say that quake will almost certainly be repeated.

Barbara Moths of the U.S. Geological Survey told an American Geophysical Union meeting that for the past half-century, Southern California seems to have been in Stage 2 of a proposed three-stage seismic cycle.

The theoretical cycle was developed by other researchers, but Ms. Moths and co-worker William Ellsworth said, "Our analysis of historical seismicity along the San Andreas Fault... suggests that the concept can be applied to the region along the fault that broke in 1857."

She said in an interview the cycle begins when a great quake suddenly releases the geologic stresses fed into the fault over a century or more.

Stage 1, the theory holds, is a long period of relative quiet, when few moderate to large earthquakes occur along smaller, related faults in the region. As stresses rebuild, however, significant tremors resume, increasing in size and frequency as the cycle goes into the second stage.

The researchers contend Southern California entered that stage in the 1920s. If accurate, that means the region can expect continued large quakes until the current cycle ends with another great tremor. That would be Stage 3.

"We think the evidence supports the idea (that the big fault is marching toward another giant quake)," she said, "but there's no prediction of time."

The 1857 quake, with an estimated magnitude of 8.3, rumbled along some 250 miles of the San Andreas fault northwest of San Bernardino.

Lynn Sykes of Columbia University's Lamont-Doherty Geological Observatory said a study of the recurrence of great quakes around the world suggests the southern half of that 250-mile break will be recharged and ready to slip again decades before the northern end.

"And," he said, "that is still a big enough segment that you might get an earthquake of magnitude 8 or 8.1. Then the other consideration is, might it break even farther to the southeast (than the 1857 tremor)? That's an unanswered question."

Sykes based his conclusions on the idea that "an earthquake occurs when (gradual geologic processes) restore the amount of strain or stress that was released in the preceding earthquake."

The very long 1857 break along the San Andreas apparently did not release the same amount of stress everywhere, he said. Instead, it seems to have broken in two distinct segments.

He said analysis indicates the northern segment released more of its accumulated stresses and will need much more time to be recharged than the southern end.

How long the recharging process might take, he said, can't be determined on the basis of just one tremor. The theory requires precise data on at least two major quakes.

"So one of the keys may be going back and studying (San Andreas) earthquakes prior to 1857. If we can get some good information on the predecessors, we could use these events to calibrate (the system and determine) the time to the next earthquake."

A Salvadoran trooper sits at the ready after recent violence in the streets of San Salvador. Members of the junta announced a reorganization which apparently cuts the influence of the liberal military member further. (AP Laserphoto)

Salvador's junta turns further right

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Members of the junta announced a reorganization apparently trimming the influence of the liberal military member further.

Jose Napoleon Duarte, a civilian member of the junta, said the reorganization would be completed by Monday. He indicated he would be president and Col. Jaime Abdul Gutierrez, a conservative, would be sole commander of the armed forces, further isolating Col. Adolfo Arnaldo Majano, the liberal.

"In the governing junta, you need unity of command," Duarte said Wednesday. "You can't have two commanders of the army just like in administration you can't have five heads." He added the need for unity made reorganization "unavoidable."

"It's obvious that some of us have to accept that someone must assume the responsibility and that we have one leader," Duarte said. "This means we must have one commander-in-chief and one president."

Gutierrez said he had accepted the military's mandate "to save some of the values that were lost with the division of command that had been given to Col. Majano." Gutierrez said Majano was still a member of the junta, but did not have the right any longer to countermand orders as he had done in the past.

"We have violated the principle of unity of command," Gutierrez said. "We have divided the authority. In no army can there be two generals, but we have that problem at both the military and political levels in our government."

The current junta is made up of Gutierrez and Majano, Duarte and Jose Ramon Avalos Navarrette, both of the Christian Democratic Party, and Jose Antonio Morales Ehrlich, a civilian chosen by the other four.

Duarte and Gutierrez spoke to reporters in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, after signing a peace treaty that ended 11 years of border hostilities with Honduras. Majano told reporters in San Salvador he had no information about a reorganization but "would not fight the junta's decision."

Majano and Gutierrez led the coup that overthrew right-wing President Carlos Humberto Romero in October 1979. The first blow to Majano's prestige came in early May when top-ranking military officers stripped him of the commander-in-chief title and gave it to Gutierrez after Majano tried to arrest a leading officer for plotting a coup.

Majano's support eroded rapidly in the next six months as he tried to block transfers of officers who supported him, insisted on pressing ahead with reforms and continued attempts to talk with leftist leaders.

Jiang denounces accusers

PEKING (AP) — Chairman Mao Tse-tung's widow, on trial for her life, has denounced her accusers in court, saying they want to destroy her because they know they never can destroy Mao, foreign diplomatic and other sources said today.

They said Jiang Qing, 67, delivered her bitter accusation last Friday. In effect, she said she was being used as a scapegoat by those who want to discredit the policies of Mao, the "great helmsman," who founded the communist government in China, the sources said.

As she spoke, the microphones and loud speakers in the courtroom went dead and only a handful of the 600 spectators heard her, the informants said.

It was not until Friday afternoon, that authorities decided whether they could satisfactorily edit the film of the morning session and show it on television that night, the informants said. Much of the film that was shown focused on an angry attack by a prosecutor.

Jiang also reportedly denounced her accusers on earlier occasion, calling them "revisionists" who were betraying Mao's ideology. That charge came when she was asked sign the indictment against her on Nov. 10. The sources said that proceeding was filmed three times and only the last print was broadcast.

Previous, official reports have said Jiang tried to shift responsibility to those "above and below her" — regarded by many as a reference to Mao.

China's current pragmatic leaders have been downgrading Mao, who died in 1976, and have moved away from his policy of emphasizing communist ideology first. They have said Mao made grave political mistakes in his later years, but they insist his political errors must be kept separate from the alleged crimes of the Gang of Four. Mao's name, they say, must not be tarnished during the trial.

Jiang and her radical comrades in the so-called Gang of Four are on trial for their lives on charges that they plotted to overthrow Mao in a coup and that they persecuted tens of thousands of Chinese during the turbulent Cultural Revolution of 1966-76.

Before the trial opened on Nov. 20, Jiang was widely reported to have insisted that everything she did was on Mao's orders.

"You should watch the master while you are beating his dog," one Hong Kong magazine quoted her as saying during pre-trial interrogation.

Japan backs off pledge

TOKYO (AP) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown arrived today in Tokyo, where Japanese officials were expected to give him the unwelcome news that they are backing away from a previous agreement to boost military spending by 9.7 percent next year.

Brown flew in from a NATO meeting in Brussels. He has been urging the Europeans to increase defense spending by at least 3 percent and the Japanese to increase defense spending by at least 9.7 percent to counter growing Soviet military might.

Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's cabinet tentatively agreed in July to a 9.7 percent increase in military spending in fiscal 1981, but Suzuki said Wednesday that increasing defense spending by less than 9.7 percent would not strain Japan's ties with the United States.

The mass-circulation Asahi Shimbun, after a briefing for the Japanese press by Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa, interpreted Suzuki's comments as an effort to fend off charges he is bowing to U.S. pressure.

Israelis rescue Italians

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli air force helicopters today rescued 65 Italian construction workers from a work ship sinking in a fierce winter storm off Israel's Mediterranean coast, the military command said.

The rescue took place in 60-knot winds and 13-foot waves as the first storm of the season brought heavy thunderstorms to the Israeli plains and a light dusting of snow to the Jerusalem hills.

The helicopters plucked the Italians from the sinking ship, which broke its moorings during the night, and flew them to a nearby hospital. One of the Italians was reported in serious condition with a skull fracture and two others were hospitalized with minor injuries, the military said. A spokesman said one or two of the rescuers also suffered minor injuries.

The Italians were members of a crew building a pier for unloading coal at a power plant under construction at Hadera, 25 miles north of Tel Aviv.

Midland native, 24 stationed on submarine

SAN DIEGO — Inner space, the depths of the ocean, is as familiar to Brian K. Smith as outer space is to TV character Buck Rogers of the 25th century.

The 24-year-old Navy man, who's a native of Midland, is stationed aboard the USS Flasher, a nuclear-powered fast-attack submarine homeported here.

"As a fire control technician, I do maintenance on the Mark 113 fire control system," said the son of Mr. "My job is important. There's no sense in taking a submarine to sea if the fire control gear isn't working so we can shoot torpedoes in the event that it's needed."

and Mrs. Bobby Terrel Smith of Midland. Smith and his wife, Katherine, currently reside in the San Diego area with their children, Jay-Jay, 5; Alex, 4; Brianna, 2, and infant Terrel.

The petty officer second class explained the primary mission of the Flasher is anti-submarine warfare. Like all nuclear powered submarines, it is capable of operating independently of the earth's atmosphere for extended periods of time. This is a result of power generation by a pressurized nuclear reactor and steam plant which requires no oxygen and creates no exhaust.

Power generated by the reactor provides propulsion and drives the auxiliary generators necessary for lighting and electrical power.

"My job is important," he said. "There's no sense in taking a submarine to sea if the fire control gear isn't working so we can shoot torpedoes in the event that it's needed."

Smith explained the length of time a nuclear submarine is capable of being submerged is limited only by the amount of food that can be taken aboard and the psychological endurance of the crew.

"Being submerged is a peaceful feeling; you're doing your job operationally," he said. "Submarines are supposed to be submerged."

A 1976 graduate of Burnet High School, Smith attended Howard Payne University. He entered the Navy in 1977 and reported to the Flasher in May 1979.

"I joined the Navy because I was single and I wanted to travel," he said. "I think more than that I wanted a challenge of accomplishing something."

Smith, who is submarine qualified, explained that in order to earn that designation a person must become familiar and proficient in operating the equipment and systems aboard the submarine.

"Qualifying is thorough," he said. "When a guy is qualified, he definitely knows what he should about the submarine."

Although Smith is on his second enlistment, he says he doesn't plan to make the Navy a career.

"I re-enlisted last year because I felt I needed more training before returning to the civilian job market," he said.

Even though Smith plans to return to civilian life when his enlistment ends, he says he has enjoyed the time he's spent in the Navy.

"The biggest gripe I have is being away from my family," he said. "I enjoy the job."

"Being submerged is a peaceful feeling; you're doing your job operationally. Submarines are supposed to be submerged."

"I think for someone that's single this is one of the best things they could do," said Smith. "The experience and training you get are great. A submarine is more like a family. It's close-knit and would be great for a single guy or even for a married couple if they don't mind separations."

Smith spends his off-duty time with his family and working around the house.

Navy Fire Control Technician Second Class Brian K. Smith mans the periscope of the nuclear-powered, fast-attack submarine USS Flasher. The Will U.S. action push invasion?

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
European Correspondent
Hearst Special News Service

PARIS — Polish dissidents in exile believe the Carter administration made a mistake in calling attention to Soviet military preparations to march into Poland.

Given the circumstances, they fear that the "American alert" can only hasten the action it seeks to dissuade the Russians from carrying out. They also are alarmed lest the tone of the U.S. warning gives Poles an erroneous hope that America might intervene militarily to thwart a Soviet move.

Even now, there are many Poles who are quite likely to believe the United States would react with force to a Soviet invasion, in spite of all the evidence to the contrary," according to Karol Lambrinski, a dissident spokesman here for the Polish dissident group, KOR.

That would simply create a situation like Hungary in 1956 when defiance of the Russians was encouraged by false hopes of Western deliverance.

The dissident spokesman told this newspaper that while informed Poles realize fully that U.S. intervention must be ruled out, millions of ordinary people in that country probably continue to nurse such illusions. It adds to the volatile atmosphere and helps to make the situation more difficult to contain," he said. When the United States takes the lead in announcing the Soviets are ready to invade, it also suggests to many Poles that the U.S. will also take the lead in resisting an invasion."

The view here is that President Carter, in the dying weeks of his administration, has been torn between avoiding engendering excessive expectations of U.S. help, as happened in Hungary, and taking too little notice of a prospective Soviet invasion, as was the case before the 1968 invasion of Czechoslovakia. He sought a middle ground by closely and publicly monitoring Soviet troop movements. Simultaneously, along with America's NATO partners, he warned of political and economic retaliation if the Soviets act.

The British and French governments reportedly would also have preferred less "American insistence on the imminence" of Soviet military moves. The Western Europeans, like the Polish dissidents, feel that this has probably been counter-productive.

It is thought that the Soviet propaganda machine might even use it as a justification for invading, when and if.

A French official told this newspaper that there is not much sense in pinpointing a Soviet military buildup. "It creates a war atmosphere without a war. Everybody knows that the Russians have the military means to crush the Poles, just as everybody knows that, if they finally decide to do it, we are helpless to stop them. Whether the poles resist will not be determined by U.S. intelligence estimates obtained from satellites.

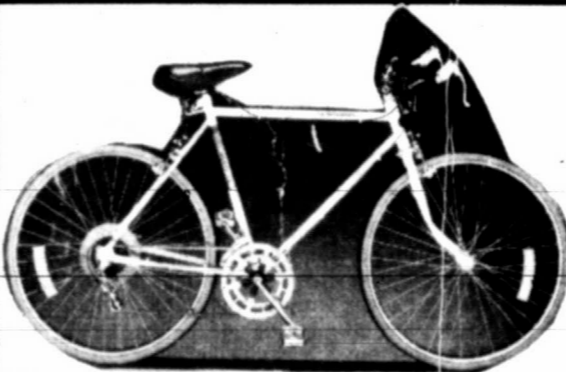

"Given a choice, Western European government officials apparently would have favored letting Moscow know what it risks in terms of economic and political reprisals if it moves into Poland and letting it go at that.

Soviet invasion might be beneficial

By KINGSBURY SMITH
National Editor,
The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — A Soviet invasion of Poland might have one beneficial result for the West.

It might curb, if not stop, the buildup of Soviet military strength with western technological and economic aid.

Russia's military might, with its overwhelming conventional force superiority and its nuclear strategic parity with the U.S. is, according to western intelligence sources, due to a very considerable extent to the sophisticated equipment, technological know-how, and economic assistance it has received from the west.

The value of the goods which Russia has bought from the west in the last 10 years is valued at $50 billion. The equipment has included machine tools, computers and other advanced technological equipment that has gone into missiles, tanks, command control and communications, spy satellites and radar.

Russia's Eastern European communist-ruled empire has also benefited both militarily and economically from western aid. Much of it has been acquired by the Soviet Union and its satellite states with western loans and credits which no one expects will be paid back, except for interest payments the western banks receive. Even the interest payments are financed by western loans.

Without this financial aid, the Soviets and their Eastern European puppet regimes would have been unable to spend the vast sums of money they did on the buildup of their military power. Russia would have had to subsidize to a much greater extent than it did its own economy and that of the satellite states.

LENIN PREDICTED THE capitalist countries would some day provide Russia with the rope with which to hang them. That, in effect, is what the West has been doing.

The Soviet bloc governments in Europe owe western financial institutions approximately $60 billion. Russia alone owes $10.2 billion. Poland owes nearly $20 billion. Western experts on international finance, such as Lord Lever, former adviser to the British Government, doubt that any of the principal of these loans will be paid back.

Western eagerness for export markets and the illusions of allied leaders about detente led to a breakdown of the restrictions imposed during the cold war on military-related technological aid to the Soviet Union.

An allied organization for controlling exports to the Soviet bloc, called COCOM (Coordinating Committee), listed strategic materials and technologies that could not be shipped to Russia and its satellite states without government exemption. The United States at first applied the controls strictly, but some of the European allied governments, especially France and West Germany, granted more and more exemptions to their own manufacturers eager to get markets the Soviet bloc countries were offering, providing western banks financed the purchases.

Under the Johnson, Nixon and Ford administrations most of the exemptions were granted by the European allies. Since the Carter administration came to power, the U.S. has accounted for more than 60 per cent of the exemptions. The rationale for indirectly building up the Soviet bloc's military power was the hope that the closer the Soviet Union became linked economically with the west, the less tempted it would be to undermine the western democracies. That has not, of course, proved to be the case.

SEN. HENRY JACKSON (D.-Wash.) recently said the allied export control system is a shambles. "The United States and its allies have been selling the rope to the Soviets," he added. What we haven't sold, we have been giving away in educational, governmental and technical exchange programs. What we haven't given away, they have been stealing."

A detailed report on the military-related aid the U.S. and its European allies have given the Soviet Union was contained in a recent article in the New Republic magazine. Compiled by Arnaud de Borchgrave, a senior editor of Newsweek, and Michael Ledeen, executive editor of Washington Quarterly magazine, the article said that for nearly two decades the west has been helping to build up Soviet military strength.

The article cites the sale to Russia of an advanced type of American ball bearings that are indispensable for missile guidance systems. Also, the sale of computers and computer parts to a Soviet factory that produces missile launchers.

Britain, West Germany, France and Italy have all made trade deals with the Soviets that indirectly strengthen Soviet military power. When President Carter proposed strong economic sanctions against the Soviet Union for its invasion of Afghanistan, the French and West German governments refused to go along.

President-elect Reagan has made clear that he questions the wisdom of supplying the Soviet Union with military-related technology as long as Moscow continues to pursue its policy of world domination.

A TOP REAGAN adviser told the (name of paper) that if the Soviets move militarily into Poland to crush the workers' movement for greater union freedom from communist control, the Reagan administration, when it takes over next month, is likely to curtail the issuance of licenses for the shipment of advanced technological equipment to Russia, and would undoubtedly urge the European allies to do likewise.

Sen. Patrick Moynihan (D.-N.Y.) told a news conference Tuesday that an invasion of Poland would lead the United States to halt all grain, machinery and electronic equipment shipments to the Soviet Union.

He said he had spoken to many members of the Senate, adding:

We are very much of the view that we are not going to feed the army that rapes Poland. We are not going to guide the missiles that rip through Polish factories."

Soviet, India call to dismantle foreign bases in Indian Ocean

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The Soviet Union and India today called for the dismantling of all foreign bases in the Indian Ocean area and the return of Diego Garcia Island, used by the U.S. Navy, to Mauritius.

A joint declaration issued at the conclusion of Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev's visit voiced "serious concern over the hotbeds of tension in Southwest Asia."

It condemned "all forms of outside interference" and declared that "negotiated political solutions alone can guarantee a durable settlement of the existing problems of the region." The declaration made no mention of Afghanistan.

A group of Afghan exiles shouted anti-Soviet slogans near the airport and a group of pro-Soviet demonstrators waved red flags as Brezhnev's jet took off for Moscow today at the end of the three-day visit.

In a major policy speech Wednesday, Brezhnev defended the presence of an estimated 85,000 Soviet troops in Afghanistan and said life there was moving "into a normal peaceful track" since Moscow intervened militarily a year ago to support the Marxist regime against Moslem rebels.

His visit to New Delhi was widely regarded as an attempt to placate India and other Third World nations that opposed the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan but otherwise maintained friendly relations with Moscow.

In his speech, Brezhnev also called on the United States, China, Japan and other countries to join Moscow in renouncing force, military bases and nuclear weapons in the Persian Gulf region, where tanker movements have been seriously disrupted by the Iran-Iraq war.

The State Department dismissed Brezhnev's plan as "basically a reiteration of longstanding Soviet proposals," saying there appeared to be little that was new or different in the offer.

The Japanese Foreign Ministry said it presumed Brezhnev's plan revealed Soviet concern over oil shipment routes in the region and "we will not dismiss it out of hand."

Nothing new seen in Brezhnev's plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says it finds "little that is new or different" in Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev's proposal to guarantee peace in the Persian Gulf.

Brezhnev, during a visit to India, proposed the plan in place of the "Carter Doctrine" for U.S. defense of the oil-rich region.

The State Department said Wednesday it was studying the statement, which it said is "basically a reiteration of longstanding Soviet proposals."

Ray Jenkins, an assistant press secretary for President Carter, said, "The text of the speech is being reviewed. But at this time we have no reaction." Meanwhile, the office of Richard V. Allen, foreign policy adviser to President-elect Ronald Reagan, said Allen would have no comment.

Nixon says maneuvers may be designed to intimidate Polish

CHICAGO (AP) — Military maneuvers being conducted along Poland's frontiers by the Soviet Union and other Warsaw Pact nations may be designed to intimidate Polish labor unions, former President Richard M. Nixon says.

"The Soviet Union could have a goal of discouraging the unions' aggressiveness," Nixon told reporters Wednesday at a dinner honoring W. Clement Stone, Chicago insurance magnate and philanthropist.

"If that is accomplished, they will not move (into Poland militarily)," the former president predicted.

During his brief remarks to reporters, Nixon also declined to predict whom President-elect Ronald Reagan might name to Cabinet positions. The former president said only he expects the new president to "name very good men."

Nixon also said that after Reagan takes office he expects to give advice on foreign policy to the new president from time to time but envisions "no formal role" in the administration.

Stone, Chicago insurance executive and a heavy contributor to the Republican Party, was being honored as "Chicagoan of the Year," by the Chicago Boys Clubs.

About 1,300 tickets at $150 each were purchased for the event, and Gov. James R. Thompson and Mayor Jane Byrne were among those in the audience. Nixon's attendance at the dinner had not been announced by the organizers in advance.

Looking tanned and fit, Nixon, in a short address to the gathering, praised Stone for his intelligence, enthusiasm and humanitarianism.

"I have never known a man who gave more and asked for less than Clem Stone," said Nixon.

The former president left the dinner immediately after it ended and was to return to New York City on private plane.

Polish crisis built up to challenge

EDITOR'S NOTE — The writer has been in Poland for extended periods in the past four months covering the major changes under way there.

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The crisis in Poland started five months ago when the communist government raised the price of meat. It has built up to a challenge to the traditional relationship between the workers and the government in communist states.

A wave of crippling strikes followed the meat price increases. It won Polish workers the right to form unions independent of Communist Party control, something considered anathema by Vladimir Lenin, founder of the Soviet state and the apostle of communism.

Large, secular institutions outside party control represent potential rivals for power. The big fear now is that the Soviet Union will intervene to re-assert its authority as it did in Hungary in 1956 and Czechoslovakia in 1968.

The Polish crisis began July 2, when then-Premier Edward Babuch announced an end to subsidies on meat, raising the price of some cuts as much as 100 percent.

Babuch's move was economically sound. But the people felt they were being made to pay for 10 years of mismanagement that put the country nearly $22 billion in debt to the West.

Within hours, workers at steel and tractor plants in the Warsaw area and at a vehicle parts plant near Gdansk struck. The government quickly granted pay raises of 5 to 10 percent to help offset the price increases. That encouraged more strikes, which resulted in more pay raises.

A WEEK LATER, dissident sources reported that workers in 33 factories across the country had staged job actions, winning an average wage increase of 10 percent. No strike leader had yet gone to jail.

By July 11, the scattered strikes had mushroomed. Workers at 22 enterprises around Lublin, a city of 300,000 in southeastern Poland, joined the walkouts. Railway workers there blocked service to the Soviet Union.

The government felt it had to control the strike wave. But the 1980 Summer Olympics were about to begin in Moscow, and the Soviets could not afford an embarrassing squabble in a neighboring country.

On July 20, the government agreed to a settlement package which included a 15 percent pay raise and amnesty for strike leaders. Authorities bypassed the official trade unions controlled by the Communist Party, negotiating directly with strike committees.

That established two precedents crucial to the independent labor movement: the right to strike without fear of punishment and to form representation groups apart from the official organizations.

Rather than control strikes, the agreement encouraged them. In August, they spread to the politically volatile Lenin Shipyards in Gdansk.

Some 10,000 shipyard employees stopped work Aug. 14 and laid down demands that constituted a blueprint for social revolution, among them the right to form free trade unions, the right to strike, an end to censorship and access by the church to the mass media.

The strike leaders included electrician Lech Walesa and other men who had engineered the December 1970 protests in Gdansk, Gdynia and Szczecin which the Polish army crushed.

TEN YEARS OF reflection had taught them valuable lessons: stay organized, avoid provocations, ban liquor. Disciplined, well organized worker committees soon plunged the Baltic region into a near general strike, paralyzing the nation's economy.

Within the leadership of the Communist Party, the labor unrest gave rivals of party leader Edward Gierk the opportunity to force a confrontation. On Aug. 24 the party Central Committee fired Babuch and more than a dozen confidants of Gierk. Within two weeks, he himself was dumped, after suffering a heart attack, the announcement said. Stanislaw Kania replaced him.

Faced with the threat of nationwide sympathy strikes, the government bowed to the strikers. On Aug. 31, Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Jagielski signed the Gdansk agreements accepting all their demands, including recognition of independent trade unions.

Nationwide strike committees merged under Walesa's leadership into one union, Solidarity, which claimed 10 million of the country's 18 million workers. The old official Trade Union Congress began melting away.

Soon the old adversaries — Walesa and the government — found themselves sharing a common problem, controlling their internal rivals. Kania began the largest purge in Poland since 1956, dumping national and regional party members who refused to accept the changes.

WALESA FACED A challenge from mavericks so flushed with victory that they want to strike for anything and everything. Work stoppages began at hospitals, railway lines and textile plants. The economy was threatened with more disaster.

The crisis reached a climax during the last week of November when Solidarity's Warsaw chapter called a steel strike over demands to reform the security services, a political demand striking at the heart of the party's control of the country.

Walesa in a dramatic pre-dawn appeal warned the workers they might be inviting "guns and tanks," and they ended their walkout on Nov. 28. After that the labor front was quiet, but the Russians apparently were not satisfied.

Foes fighting problems together, Bentsen says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opposing political factions are beginning to band together to help solve the nation's growing economic problems, says Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

"Back in the days when all the pundits were predicting a cliffhanger on Nov. 4, I was saying we would see a whole new emphasis in economic policy regardless of which side won, because there was no alternative," the Democrat said Wednesday.

"Today, in the cold light of December, we can see the clear outlines of agreement on the pillars of a new economic strategy for the 80s," he said.

The senator said normally divergent forces have begun to line up behind policies to increase productivity, to encourage more spending by the private sector and less by government, to reduce the tax burden, to restore incentives to the marketplace and to cut back on "regulatory fog."

Bentsen spoke at a bipartisan conference sponsored by the Joint Economic Committee he has chaired for the past two years. His term ends when the new congressional session starts in January.

The one-day conference included representatives of government, business and labor and was designed to develop an economic program to present to President-elect Ronald Reagan.

Bentsen said the American public is prepared to give the president-elect a grace period to develop a workable economic program. "We can help him take advantage of a promising alignment of forces in our economic universe," the senator said. "We have a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to succeed in the future where we have failed in the past."

Using inflation as an example, he said that the public is ready for the first time in years to examine its own inflationary expectations that contribute to the cycle.

"For the past 15 years, inflation has been a fact of life in this country," Bentsen said. "But today we are at a watershed. We await a new administration that has promised and won a mandate for new approaches to old problems."

He said the public also is prepared to give the new administration the benefit of the doubt in hopes of finding a cure to inflation.

"I'm ready to work with President Reagan, his administration and the new Senate leadership to restore stability and real growth to the American economy," the senator said.

Bentsen said problems have built to a critical mass while political paralysis has gripped the nation for the past 10 years.

"This conference will be a success if we can set aside the differences of the past and work together to achieve the unity that is necessary for the true strength of America," he said. "When we're united, this country has the assets to overcome any challenge and succeed as never before in our history."

Clayton's defense debts wiped out by friends

DALLAS (AP) — Texas House Speaker Bill Clayton has wiped out the $250,000 debt he incurred while winning acquittal in his Texas Brilab trial, thanks to back-to-back fundraising dinners in Uvalde and Dallas.

The Dallas function alone netted $245,000 Wednesday night, as 560 supporters attended a $500-a-plate dinner at a fashionable downtown hotel and heard former Gov. Dolph Briscoe and longtime Democrat Jess Hay of Dallas praise Clayton and his wife, Delma.

"After a long, hot summer, it's nice to be with you in Dallas on a fall afternoon and evening," Clayton said, in an apparent reference to his Houston trial, which lasted several weeks.

The crowd included more than 50 people from Clayton's home district in West Texas, and they were asked to stand for special recognition.

Hay, a longtime party fundraiser, was master of ceremonies for the dinner.

"We are here to express our appreciation to a great public servant who is our kind of Democrat, our kind of Texan, our kind of American," Hay said of Clayton, who has been elected to three straight two-year terms as speaker and is expected to be returned again.

"We are here to express our abiding conviction that life is good, that they are good, and that our system is big enough to cope with and correct injustice when and if it occurs," Hay added.

Hay praised Clayton and his wife "for the sacrifice they have been willing to endure as a price too frequently extracted for those in public office," and the crowd broke into applause.

Clayton and Austin attorneys Randall Wood and Donald Ray were acquitted Oct. 22 in Houston of all federal racketeering, extortion, bribery and conspiracy charges stemming from a 10-month FBI undercover Brilab (bribery-labor) investigation.

Clayton, the attorneys and Deer Park labor leader L.G. Moore were indicted June 12 in connection with an alleged "insurance kickback scheme." L.G. Moore is to be tried at a later date.

Prosecutors charged Clayton accepted a $5,000 bribe from FBI informant Joseph Hauser to use his influence to reopen the bidding on a lucrative state employees insurance contract.

Clayton, however, argued he thought the money was a campaign contribution and he planned to return it.

Briscoe was listed as honorary co-chairman for the fund-raising dinner, along with former Gov. Allan Shivers, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Comptroller Bob Bullock.

Shivers, Hobby and Bullock could not attend but sent messages of support for Clayton.

Briscoe, in short remarks, said in the 48 years since Briscoe was first elected to the Texas Legislature, "I have never known a more dedicated, sincere or hard working legislator than Bill Clayton."

"He is the most effective speaker I have ever known."

The former governor called Clayton a man of "integrity, honor and dignity. I am pleased he is going to serve another term as speaker of the Texas House."

The Texas hot pepper: It's a neglected item

HOUSTON (AP) — There are many things taken for granted in Texas, like a fall sunset, or a spring of bluebonnets, or a summer on the beach, or a winter in the Big Bend.

These things are accepted, shrugged off, a way of life. But nothing is more neglected or ignored as the hot pepper.

It can be a fat one, a long, skinny one, a yellow one, a red one, a green one.

A hot pepper should be placed at the Alamo, at the Battleship Texas, at the Johnson Space Center, as a symbol of Texans.

There are many ways to eat a hot pepper. Cut them up with some black-eyed peas, or mustard greens, or with a beer, or take them without a chaser.

Personally, I like them with black-eyed peas, mustard greens, beer, whiskey, chicken, steak, cornbread, or without a chaser.

Those peppers clean out the mouth, relax the stomach, tingle all the way down to the toes.

Now for those who may be drinking persons, nothing can disguise the smell of the noon booze break like a couple of good hot peppers.

Eat a couple of jalapenos and everyone turns their heads when you talk and never suspect you have belted a few before returning to work.

The best are the long, skinny ones you grow in your own garden and then put aside and with a special recipe make them hotter than they were intended to be.

In Hempstead, Texas, there is a little lady who does just that and you can buy them on the counter at a liquor store, which is right, because you will need something to extinguish the flames.

Also, those suffering from hay-fever, or sniffles, need only to smell the open bottle and the nose is cleared.

The peppers clear the stomach of all acid, the teeth of all decay, and the only trouble is that once you get hooked on the hot peppers, not many people will kiss you.

Anti-feminists name Mrs. Davis

FORT WORTH (AP) — A new anti-feminist religious organization, founded by electronic evangelist James Robison, will have as its co-director Karen Master Davis, wife of millionaire oilman Cullen Davis.

The organization is to be called Christian Women's National Concerns, with its goals to be announced during a 10 a.m. news conference at the Davis' West Fort Worth mansion, organizers said Tuesday.

In a press release mailed from Robison's evangelical headquarters in Hurst, a Fort Worth suburb, Mrs. Davis said, "We want to train women to be an effective force in preserving the rights of our children and families."

Mrs. Davis was a key witness in Davis' two highly publicized felony trials in which he gained acquittals on charges of murder and murder-solicitation. At the time of the trials, the couple was not married.

"Feminist organizations have infiltrated the mainstream of every facet of American life," she said. "The time has come to renew our dependence on the biblical principles through the commitment of our time and energy."

Davis and his wife made a public profession of faith May 6 when they joined the First Baptist Church in Euless, and since have held several Bible study sessions in their home, have spoken at Robison's evangelical meetings and have attended Pro-Family Forum sessions in Fort Worth.

GREETINGS:
YOU ARE HEREBY COMMANDED to appear and answer before the Honorable 318th Judicial District Court, Midland County, Texas, at or before 10 o'clock of the Monday next after the expiration of 20 days from the date of service of this citation, then and there to answer the petition of SERANIDA RUIZ ANDERSON and PHILLIP DAVID ANDERSON, Petitioners, filed in said court on the 8th day of December, 1990, requesting termination of the parental rights of WILLIAM MARION FRAZOR, JR. and SERANIDA CHRISTINE FRAZOR, MOTHER and FATHER of the child, DR. 11413 on the docket of said court, and to show cause why the termination of the parental rights of said child should not be granted. The nature of which suit is as hereinbefore stated. Said children were born the 27th day of November, 1969, in Midland County, Texas, and the 22nd day of June, 1972, in Midland, Midland County, Texas.

The Court has authority in this suit to enter any and all orders in the children's interest which will be binding upon you, including, but not necessarily limited to, the termination of the parent-child relationship, the determination of paternity, and the appointment of a conservator of the estate of said child. If you fail to appear and answer as hereinbefore stated, the Court will grant the petition for termination of the parental rights of said child and will appoint a conservator of the estate of said child in accordance with the provisions of the laws of the State of Texas.

Witness my hand and the seal of said Court of Midland County, Texas, this 11th day of December, 1990.

By: William Sanderson, Deputy Clerk of the District Court of Midland County, Texas.

JOHNSTON-MACCO Schlumberger

ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT

Johnston-Macco, an oil field service and manufacturing division of Schlumberger Limited, is currently looking for a qualified individual to fill the recently established position of Administrative Assistant to our Central Region Manager.

The responsibilities of the position include:
- Acting as the primary financial and administrative liaison between the Central-Region field organization and our Houston, Texas headquarters.
- Preparation and analysis of monthly financial and operational reports pertaining to profit center and product line performance.
- Development and implementation of improved reporting procedures in connection with a decentralization of accounting, administrative and data processing functions from headquarters to the region office.
- Budget preparation and control.

The successful candidate should have an accounting degree and 1 to 3 years experience in either an accounting or financial capacity. In addition, the individual should be a self-starter that can work effectively with top management. Good analytical and communicative skills and a working knowledge of EDP are also required.

The position offers a competitive starting salary and benefits package and represents an excellent career opportunity in a rapidly growing, progressive company.
