Damaged gas line

A 31-year-old Midland man injured about 3:24 p.m. Thursday when this back-hoe machine struck a natural-gas line was listed in fair condition this morning in Midland Memorial Hospital, a hospital spokesman said. William Linscombe, 815 Brooks, an employee of Polyethylene Pipe System Inc., suffered burns in the accident, which occurred near FM 1379 and County Road 120 in Greenwood. A company spokesman this morning said Polyethylene had been working on the pipeline, but refused to comment further on the accident. The heavily damaged back-hoe machine belongs to Polyethylene, and the pipeline belongs to Phillips Petroleum, according to fire reports.

Arrests made in bombing of Kuwaiti cafes

KUWAIT (AP) — A number of suspects have been arrested in the bombing of two crowded seaside cafes in which 11 people died and 89 were injured, a security official said today.

Authorities halted outgoing flights at Kuwait airport and coast guard boats patrolled Kuwait's territorial waters in an effort to seal all exits from the Persian Gulf country.

No one claimed responsibility for the Thursday bombings, the latest in a string of terror attacks in this oil-rich nation of 1.5 million.

"A number of suspects have been arrested," said the security official, who spoke only on condition he not be identified. "The two time bombs that ripped through the cafes were 25 kilograms (55 pounds) of TNT each, placed by terrorists on the grass under chairs along the playgrounds of the cafes."

Other officials said an unspecified number of Shiite Moslem suspects had been rounded up. There are about 200,000 Shiites in Kuwait, including about 140,000 expatriate workers from Iran, Iraq and Lebanon.

Kuwait has been the target of terror attacks by Shiites who apparently view it as favoring predominantly Sunni Moslem Iraq in its five-year-old war against Iran. Iran is a Persian nation, not Arab, and is predominantly Shiite.

Among the dead was Col. Khalil Gaith, director of supervision and coordination at the Criminal Investigations Department, security officials said.

The Interior Ministry was "flooded" with anonymous telephone calls reporting bombs placed at the Parliament building and other locations. The calls turned out to be hoaxes, the security official said.

The first blast occurred at the al-Sharq seaside cafe in Kuwait city, killing eight people. The second occurred three minutes later at the al-Saliyeh cafe in the densely populated Salmiyeh district six miles away. Three people were killed there, security officials said.

Both cafes were crowded with families enjoying the eve of the Moslem sabbath.

Hospital sources said the dead included an Egyptian worker and 10 Kuwaiti nationals. Full identifications were not immediately available.

Security forces sealed the areas around the two blasts and detoured civilian traffic, witnesses said. Police cleared a public park near the al-Sharq cafe, apparently for fear of more explosions.

"The playgrounds and the cement aisles in the two cafes were littered with torn and burnt limbs, shredded cloaks, shoes and broken water pipes," said one photographer, allowed to visit the site after the bodies had been removed. "Big blood patches covered the cement and walls."

Construction worker Ahmed Osman said of the al-Salmiyeh blast: "I saw children running out of the place with their faces covered with blood. Women screamed and wailed, while men were running aimlessly about looking for their children."

A witness near the al-Sharq cafe who spoke on condition of anonymity said, "Families on the eve of Friday take their children to public parks and cafes, and whoever planted the bomb in the cafe couldn't have picked a worse time."

Four Marines killed in copter crash

TOKYO (AP) — A U.S. Marine helicopter slammed into a hillside on Okinawa island today, killing four crew members who were on a routine training mission, a Marine Corps spokesman said.

The cause of the accident was not known, said spokesman Capt. Dan Trout.

It was the second crash of a Japan-based Marine CH-53D "Sea Stallion" helicopter in three months.

A witness reported the helicopter was "roaring and spouting gray smoke" before it exploded in midair and plunged into a hillside, said local police spokesman Masahiro Nakamura.

Police rescuers earlier reported finding the charred bodies of three crew members, Nakamura said.

Trout said the four were members of "a rotating squad, which means they have family and relatives in the United States." He declined to name the victims pending notification of their relatives, but said they were based on the West Coast of the United States.

The helicopter crashed at about 1:15 p.m. (12:15 a.m. EDT) over part of Camp Butler, the main Marine facility on the southern Japanese island.

June inflation rate zero, figures show

WASHINGTON (AP) — Moderating energy prices combined with another decline in food costs to keep the wholesale inflation rate for June at zero, the government said today.

That enabled the economy to finish the first six months of the year with an annual wholesale inflation rate of 1.4 percent.

The flat figure for June came after four consecutive months of slight increases in the overall index, fueled mostly by higher energy costs.

Meanwhile, retail sales fell a sharp 0.8 percent in June, the biggest decline in 11 months.

The Commerce Department said retail sales totaled $113.9 billion in June, compared to $114.8 billion in May sales. All the figures are seasonally adjusted.

With consumer spending a driving force behind the current economic recovery, the disappointing June sales performance was likely to spur fears about the durability of that recovery.

Food prices, which have been falling steadily since December, were down only 0.1 percent last month because of higher prices for beef and veal and fresh fruits and vegetables.

But the energy component fell 2 percent in June after a 3.4 percent increase in May and a 5.8 percent jump in April. Analysts had been saying that those big April and May fuel price increases would taper off as lower world crude oil prices filtered through the economy. But the 2 percent drop last month was larger than expected.

Wholesale prices overall were up 0.2 percent in May and 0.3 percent in April.

The 1.4 percent inflation rate for the first half of the year compares to a 2.8 percent increase in the comparable period for 1984. But wholesale prices rose at an annual rate of only 0.6 percent in the second half of 1984.

Most analysts had been projecting at least some increase in the June inflation rate.

Fresh fruit prices shot up 4.7 percent last month after declines of 4.5 percent in May and 4.7 percent in April. Fresh vegetable prices were up 5.6 percent last month after a 14.3 percent decline the previous month. Beef and veal prices rose 2.8 percent in June after falling 3 percent in May and 5.6 percent in April.

Gasoline prices inched up 0.4 percent in June after a 3.8 percent increase in May and a 9.5 percent jump in April.

Prices for consumer goods other than foods and energy increased 0.4 percent in June after a 0.1 percent increase in May.

Overall, the wholesale price index for June was 1.1 percent below June 1984. Food prices, which fell at a 5.7 percent annual rate the first half of 1985, were 0.8 percent lower last month than a year earlier and energy costs were 3 percent lower than June 1984.

However, prices for other consumer goods were 2.6 percent higher than a year earlier.

Some other details from the June index:

- Automobile prices rose 0.4 percent for the second straight month, but truck prices fell 0.9 percent.
- There was no change in furniture prices after a 0.3 percent increase in May.
- Prescription drug prices fell 1 percent last month after rising 2.3 percent in May.
- Shoe prices rose 1.5 percent last month after two consecutive months of decline.

All the prices were adjusted for normal seasonal variations.

The Labor Department's Producer Price Index for June stood at 294.0, meaning that goods and services costing $10 at the wholesale level in 1987 cost $29.40 last month.

Lebanese government orders three TWA hijackers to be prosecuted

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The state radio today said the government has ordered three men prosecuted in the hijacking of TWA Flight 847, and publicly identified the reputed sky pirates for the first time.

One American was shot dead and 39 passengers and crewmembers held hostage for 17 days after the hijacking of the TWA jet.

In its 11 a.m. news broadcast, government-owned Lebanese radio said the names of the three men had been "referred to the competent judicial authorities" in the Mt. Lebanon part of Beirut, which includes the international airport.

The news item was dropped without explanation from further broadcasts. Government sources, who insisted on anonymity, said this was done because of instructions "from above."

State radio named the hijackers as Ali Atwi, Ali Younis and Ahmed Gharibeh, but said it had no further information about them or about an unspecified number of "other" accomplices.

The radio said nothing about their being in custody, or whether warrants for them had been issued in the June 14 hijacking.

An earlier account incorrectly listed one name as Gharibeh.

"The names were referred to a prelude to prosecuting them and to take adequate legal procedures against them," the radio said, without citing sources.

Maurice Khawam, prosecutor-general of Mt. Lebanon county, told reporters in Christian east Beirut after a meeting with President Amin Gemayel on Wednesday that his office "will move against the TWA hijackers."

Vice President George Bush could not confirm the radio report, but said in Washington in an interview on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" that U.S. officials were "somewhat optimistic" on the chances of arresting the hijackers.

"There appears to be now in Lebanon, even though the government is separated, an effort to do more about securing the airport," Bush said. "I think they want to do that and to apprehend these people."

City Councilman David Godfrey discusses the possibility of developing a park adjacent to a new $1.3 million YMCA facility with residents of south and east Midland Thursday night. Looking on are, from left, Em Carnett, assistant director of the Parks and Recreation Department; Mayor G. Thane Akins and Oralia Corrales, a city council member.

City park planned near new YMCA

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Advised to "give the park your best thought; come up with something innovative," a group of citizens from various organizations in south and east Midland will work out a request to develop Tolbert Park adjacent to a new $1.3 million YMCA.

The group of about 20 persons met Thursday night at Kerr Center with Mayor G. Thane Akins, council members Oralia Corrales and David Godfrey, City Manager James Brown and Parks and Recreation Assistant Director Em Carnett about proposals to develop the park and construct a community building on the land bordered by Buttarnut and Hemlock.

By the end of the one-hour session, the mayor suggested the group focus on planning the park and requesting federal funds for assistance in addition to deciding how much the neighborhood could contribute in money or work.

JAMES BRADFORD, a 28-year native of Midland who organized the meeting, said they originally wanted Hogan Park swimming pool repaired and re-opened. Ms. Corrales requested the city staff look at the pool and was given an estimate of $600,000 to re-open it. "Talking to some people who know about this matter, they said the $600,000 was a modest amount if we want a first-class pool," Bradford told the group.

Christmas" raised $11 million. USA for Africa followed with a multimillion dollar fund-raising disc, "We Are The World."

Geldof says that, conservatively, Saturday's extravaganza will raise another $14 million.

"It's pathetic that the price of a life is a plastic record. But if that's the way it has to be, you have to use glamour," Geldof said in a newspaper interview ahead of Live Aid.

The concert starts at 11:00 a.m. GMT (7 a.m. EDT) in London's Wembley Stadium before a sellout audience of 72,000 and continues two hours later in Philadelphia's 90,000-seat John F. Kennedy stadium.

Prince Charles, heir to the British throne, and Princess Diana, a keen rock fan, will open the Wembley concert.

The bill includes Status Quo, Style Council, Ultravox, Spandau Ballet, Sade, Sting, U2, The Beach Boys, Dire Straits, Tears for Fears, Queen, Simple Minds, David Bowie, Elton John, Wham! and ex-Beatle McCartney. All are performing free.

"I don't know why they come forward," the Geldof said in a television interview this week. "Maybe it's latent guilt that they're doing so well and that they want to give some of it back. Maybe they just want to help."

A British group, The Who, which split in 1983, has reformed to take part in Live Aid, while Mick Jagger and David Bowie, performing together for the first time, this week recorded the song, "Dancing in the Street."

The video will be slotted into the concert.

Phil Collins will be the only artist to perform at both the London and Philadelphia concerts, whisking to the United States aboard a Concorde flight after the Wembley concert to perform live at JFK.

Each group will perform for about 20 minutes, interspersed with appeals or donations and addresses and telephone numbers of where to send or pledge money.

In the United States, the ABC network will telecast three hours of the show starting at 8 p.m. EDT, and the U.S. cable channel MTV will carry the whole show live.

The British Broadcasting Corp., which is organizing coverage of the Wembley concert with nine satellites and will carry the entire show live on TV or radio, estimates the concert will be available to 85 percent of the world's 600 million TV sets.

Poorer nations will get the entire transmission free, while richer ones are being charged $33,000.

The London and Philadelphia concerts, running simultaneously for eight hours, will include live satellite segments from each other, shown on huge screens in each stadium.

Said Geldof: "Seventy percent of the greatest artists of the last 20 years play live the songs they made famous... that's the ultimate they can give and do it on global terms."

PARK

The alternative he proposed was to develop Tolbert Park adjacent to the new YMCA facility planned on that tract and to build a community center.

Ms. Corrales said the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce Task Force met Monday night and also supported the proposal. "One of the main concerns they said would be preventive types of programs for kids. We work now with PDAP and other drug programs, but it's after the fact. It would also be a place where young mothers could take their kids and provide something for the kids who are going to be our future," she said.

The mayor said the location for such a proposal was appropriate, "much more so than Hogan Park. I think it would serve more people." But he cautioned that the YMCA is a separate entity from the city and the council has no control over it. "We have no say over their programs," he said.

THE COUNCIL in previous years has awarded portions of Community Development Block Grant funds to the YMCA for construction of that new facility because it would be located in a targeted area approved by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

For a multi-purpose community building, the council would need the citizens' input as to what size it should be and what activities could be located there. But once the park is developed and the community center built, the problems aren't over, he warned.

As a member of the Boys' Club board for several years, he said it's taken "a whole lot of work" to keep it going. "To do something like Oralia's described, you're talking about a whole lot of work, a whole lot of time and a whole lot of money."

But the meeting was occurring at a good time, he said, pointing out that the council will be going into budget meetings next week to discuss not only the general budgets but also the ones funded by the federal government, which are Revenue Sharing and CDBG.

"What we need from y'all is something concrete, either in phases or all at once," he said of the park development. "Work closely with the YMCA and our Parks and Recreation people. Then we can see it from the standpoint of financing."

He suggested the group also find its own ways to come up with part of the money or donate time to work on it. Akins cited the Junior League, Jaycees, Kiwanis and Softball Associations as organizations which have helped to develop parks with city money by also coming up with part of the funding from private sources.

LOOKING AT A map of the area, Godfrey said the city has the land available for the park. The problem, however, is that it is located in a flood plain. That involves more public hearings on using it as a park, but it can be accomplished. However, he said, the federal government prohibits locating a community center in the flood plain.

Charlie Johnson with the Black Advisory Council said the YMCA was planning a multi-purpose room at its facility, and that might eliminate the need for a separate community center.

The YMCA, he said, is planning to build a facility that would include an indoor swimming pool for year-round use, basketball and handball courts, women's and men's dressing rooms, offices and a day nursery.

"It's more significant to me if the neighborhood comes in and says 'We've raised X amount of dollars. Now you match it' or 'we're willing to do X amount of work.' You've got a leg up on the allocation of funds if you've got something to put with it," said Godfrey.

Willie Barber said he lives in the nearby Davis Heights Addition and "we would probably stick behind it. We've gotten out and walked door to door and told people to clean up their yards. We welcome this particular proposal. At least get the park. As for funds, maybe we can do work on it."

THAT'S AS GOOD as money," said the mayor.

"We may not be able to come up with the funds as in other areas of the community, but we do have the manpower," said Ms. Corrales.

Ms. Carnett said the first work project in a park is to install an irrigation system. Initial phase development of a park costs about $75,000, she said.

Questioned further about the Hogan Park pool, she said it is "beyond repair. We'd have to start from scratch."

But the group decided the YMCA pool would be utilized more than Hogan, which can be used only three months during the summer.

Akins said the park site "has some pluses because can use CD funds" for development whereas parks in other parts of the city don't qualify for federal money.

"Give the park your best thought," said the mayor. "Dennis the Menace was a showpiece when it was built. People came from all over to look at it. I'd like you to come up with something innovative, something that sets it apart, something you'd be proud of."

Afterward, Bradford said he would contact the YMCA Monday about the plans for their facility.

"We got questions answered tonight as to what extent the city is willing to go into it," said Bradford. "They gave us some direction. It was very positive."

Shuttle crew will be studying sun, stars, other galaxies

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) —

The seven astronauts on the 50th manned flight in America's space program are slated to carry out a "smorgasbord of science" as they study the sun, stars and distant galaxies.

More than half a million gallons of supercold liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen fuel poured into space shuttle Challenger's fuel tanks this morning as the countdown marched steadily toward a liftoff at 4:30 p.m. EDT. The rare afternoon launch, only the third in 19 shuttle flights, was calculated to satisfy lighting conditions for some of the astronomy experiments.

During a weeklong expedition, the astronauts, five of them scientists, will operate a $72 million set of instruments that weigh 33,000 pounds.

With their science experiments, they hope to draw a composite portrait of the sun, learn how solar radiation entering Earth's atmosphere influences the weather, probe mysteries of the electrified gas, or plasma, that surrounds the globe, analyze the sources of cosmic rays and better understand infrared radiation sources in our Milky Way and other galaxies.

"This is the most ambitious scientific mission flown by any government anywhere at any time," program scientist Dan Spicer said.

Spicer said many of the experiments will survey the sun, "because the sun is critical to our understanding all stellar activity. The sun is the Rosetta stone of astrophysics. Without it, you're just guessing."

Bush said that U.S. options were "very limited" regarding the three accused hijackers, but added, "I think we could press for the extradition, trial and prosecution of these criminals and we're not at all pessimistic about being able to get that done."

Atwi was arrested at Athens Airport before boarding the Rome-bound TWA jetliner, but was later freed and flown to join his two comrades in Algiers, where the commandeered plane twice landed.

The other two men had hijacked the Boeing 727 with 153 people aboard shortly after takeoff from the Greek capital.

A police spokesman in Beirut said of the state radio report, "We don't have any information. I can't say yes, I can't say no."

Ten years of civil war have affected the functioning of Lebanon's judiciary. Although arrests are made for crimes, those accused are rarely brought before judges or magistrates, officials said.

In a Thursday news broadcast from Beirut, Christian Broadcasting Network correspondent Les Coleman listed a fourth man as a hijacker, naming him as Hassan Iza-deen, and identifying him as a former bodyguard for Nabih Berri.

Berri is the leader of the main Shiite militia Amal, Lebanon's justice minister, and was a key negotiator in obtaining the release of the final 39 American hostages held in the TWA hijack. Amal assumed custody of most of the captive Americans while the negotiations were taking place.

He quoted his source as "a highly informed intelligence source."

Coleman said Atwi had been working as an air conditioning technician for a year at Athens Airport, and made the contacts which got the weapons aboard.

He quoted the source as saying that all the hijackers lived in southern Beirut, and that "we found posters everywhere (at their living quarters) praising Iran's Ayatollah (Ruhollah) Khomeini."

A leader of the Amal, which negotiated for the hijackers and said it shared their goal of gaining the release of Lebanese held in Israel, has said Berri does not oppose putting the gunmen on trial.

Akef Haidar, Amal Politburo head and No. 2 man under Berri, told The Associated Press on July 6 that Berri "is not against having a trial." But he said Amal could not identify them because it dealt only with their leaders.

Trout said the accident site was about 44 miles northeast of Naha, Okinawa's capital, which is 1,000 miles southwest of Tokyo. The aircraft was stationed at the Futenma Marine Corps base, which is near Naha.

Another CH-53 helicopter from a different squadron crashed into the sea off southern Japan on May 6, killing 17 Marines, while enroute from Futenma Marine Base. By coincidence, a salvage vessel carrying recovered wreckage of that crash was scheduled to reach Okinawa today.

El Puma carries on tradition of 'conjunto norteno'

By YOLANDA BROYLES GONZALEZ

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — If walls could talk, the small yellow building at 5310 S. Zarzamora could tell us much about the evolution of a special brand of Mexican folk music — conjunto norteno — during the past 70 or more years.

El Puma Nite Club, as it is known today, has a long history dating back to the days when cars and paved streets were rare.

Although El Puma now stands at the busy intersection of New Laredo Highway and S. Zarzamora, it originally stood isolated amid Texas woods and prairie. Even from a distance, accordion music could be heard echoing through the countryside around the small wooden structure. It was one of the first public conjunto dance sites; a rural dance site, close to that class of people who originated conjunto music: the Mexican "campesinos" — agricultural laborers.

All conjunto hall of fame members share not only the music but the life experience of having toiled in the sun, picking anything from cotton to sugar beets. Those working class rural origins are still evident among today's clientele at El Puma, both in terms of attire and in conduct.

During the Great Depression and war years a "kermes" was regularly held around El Puma. These outdoor fairs celebrating religious events featured food booths and refreshments, along with all-night music and dancing. Bygone days came to life in the stories told by the original owner, who died not too long ago at age 90. For several decades after its founding, the establishment carried his name: "Medrano's." In his lifetime, Medrano witnessed the rapid urban growth which ultimately surrounded his once rural establishment. What is more, he saw the gradual migration of conjunto music into urban centers such as San Antonio.

Today's Puma still has a country feel to it; nothing fancy, a wooden dance floor, wooden walls and ceiling painted a bright yellow. That antique wooden interior provides the music with a remarkable acoustic resonance. The name "El Puma"

(the cougar) stems from its present owner, Jose Luis "El Puma" Romero. His conjunto, the house band, also carries the name "Los Pumas."

The black wildcat has come to be the club's symbol. Two striking murals by Ernest Montoya depicting black wildcats in their natural habitat decorate the locale. One of those wildcat murals looms above the entrance. Covering the wall behind the bandstand is another huge black cat which peers past the musicians, at the dancing couple.

Jose Luis "El Puma" Romero bears a resemblance to the sleek, dark animal. He dresses in black, has dark eyes and a black moustache. A black Stetson casts a dark shadow over his handsome facial features.

His accordion style is almost effortless.

A native of the southern Mexican state of Colima, Romero is heir to a family tradition of music. His maternal great-grandfather played the Mexican harp and other instruments. He speaks fondly of his 82-year-old grandmother who sings and plays the guitar.

The repertoire of Conjunto Los Pumas leans heavily toward "rancheras" and "corridos," two different kinds of Mexican narrative ballads. Corridos often relate historical events; they comprise the richest source of Mexican-American historical knowledge. Passed on from generation to generation, corridos are a living sung heritage that reinforce collective identity and memory while you dance in polka rhythm.

Los Pumas performs an impressive number of corridos. "I go by what the people like," comments Romero. Between songs, patrons approach the bandstand and make requests drawn from the vast storehouse of norteno music. In keeping with custom, every effort is made to honor the patron's requests.

Conjunto music is a musical expression "sin fronteras," without borders. It thrives in Northern and Central Mexico as well as Arizona, New Mexico, Texas and California. Yet from region to region there are differences in sound. The brand of conjunto played at El Puma is more closely akin to the Mexican norteno tradition. But groups with the tejano style may also be heard there.

Official has licenses from all 50 states

By SCOTT CAIN

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — When customers offered their old, out-of-state license plates, Dallas County Tax Office branch manager Jim Sanders decided to start a collection of them.

"The customers enjoy looking at it," he said. "They just say 'hey, I like that board.' They comment on the colors and designs."

Best of all, however, he said, "It takes their minds off paying taxes."

Two boards that cover most of the south wall are home to 86 out-of-state, foreign, and antique license plates collected by Sanders in the past four or five years.

"This is the license plate office," Sanders said. "I said, 'Why don't I get a collection from all the states? Customers have come in from out of state. They would ask us 'Do you need our plates?' So, I started asking for their plates."

Customers are not required to turn in their old plates.

The collection includes one plate from every state in the nation, the District of Columbia and eight antique Texas plates dating back to 1929.

Foreign tags include New Guinea, Iceland, Tunisia, Germany, Mexico, Canada, South America, Guam and Okinawa. Sanders has never calculated a dollar value on his collection.

His favorite is a white Northwest Territories (Canada) tag outlined in red that is in the shape of a bear on all fours. He has one for each of his other offices in Duncanville and Lancaster and plans to give one to the Tarrant County Tax Office in Arlington, because it doesn't have one yet.

When he first started gathering the license plates, Sanders did not have all of the states represented on his board, so he would label the empty spots. People responded to the blanks.

A friend of Sanders' who works for a national moving van company helped him acquire his first Rhode Island tag. The friend told someone in the company's Rhode Island office, who contacted the state, where an official eventually made a plate for Sanders and sent it to him. It read all zeros and has since been replaced with an updated one.

Updated tags are used when he can get them from new customers, Sanders said. The old plates are destroyed.

The two boards are almost filled, but that's not a problem, he said.

He plans to take down some of his extra plates — he has three for Mexico and Australia — to make room for more.

Rancher doesn't let his stock buffalo him

CANUTILLO, Texas (AP) — Bill Crossland has been a buffalo buff for more 20 years — but living in the city meant all he could do was read about them.

Then he bought a small farm in Canutillo, a few miles northwest of El Paso. That was 10 years ago. Now Crossland finally has his buffalo — 11 to be exact.

At first, the El Paso area's only buffalo rancher thought the bison business was going to be more profitable than owning beef cattle.

Now he's not so sure — it costs him about $800 a month for grain and hay. And the average market price for a 2-year-old animal is about $850. So Crossland, 49, says he hopes only to make his herd a break-even hobby.

Buffalo remain the same kind of wild animal they were in the mid-1800s when their U.S. population peaked at 50 million to 70 million, he says.

"They will tolerate the presence of humans but prefer to be left alone," Crossland said. "They don't want to be domesticated. Don't look at them straight in the eye — eye contact is a challenge, and they will take you up on it."

The buffalo's powerful body, combined with its quick temper, makes the animal difficult to corral when humans challenge its privacy. Owners of meat processing plants are not enthusiastic about handling buffalo, he said.

"Because buffalo are so unruly and powerful, most packing plants won't let you in the second time. The first time they do so out of ignorance," Crossland said.

A mature buffalo bull's weight ranges from 2,000 to 2,600 pounds — about the same as its beef counterpart.

Young attorney channels anger into helping refugees

By CARMINA DANINI

LAREDO (AP) — Park M. Hughes is an angry young man. At various times, he has been outraged by the Catholic Church and some of its prelates, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, the federal government and people who scoff at the plight of Central American refugees.

But the 35-year-old attorney channels that anger by helping the refugees through his Refugee Legal Services. Established in April, the small, sparsely furnished two-room office is on the third floor of the Sames-Moore Building downtown.

The non-profit service operates basically for Central American refugees, with Hughes conducting deportation defense for those who do not wish to return home. He also contacts churches across the country to raise bond money for the refugees. Other detainees not from Central America are referred to the local Bar Association for assistance.

For the first few weeks after moving here from Washington D.C., Hughes operated out of his car. A small network of new, local friends donated chairs and a desk for his office and even business cards, he says gratefully.

His first clients were referred by Proyecto Libertad in Harlingen, where he worked first as a staff attorney, then as director.

IN SEPTEMBER 1984, Hughes moved to Washington and went to work with the Central American Refugee Center.

The move to Washington was predicated on his belief that Walter Mondale would win the presidency — "I felt there was no way Reagan could win against Ferraro," he says now — and immigration policies would change.

"I hated leaving the border, which I love, but felt that it would be best if I were in Washington," he grins.

The establishment of the new detention center here operated by the Corrections Corp. of America led to Hughes' return to the border.

He almost didn't come, said Hughes.

"I was at a point where I didn't want to do this work any more," he admits. But his outlook changed after an eight-day trip to El Salvador in November 1984.

Hughes says the trip was an eye-opener.

"I'd read about the situation and I knew from what many of the refugees told me but I was shocked by what I saw," he says.

Six months later, he still recalls vividly the six people he saw living inside a cardboard box that had been used to import a Sony television set into the country.

He says the "incredible squalor" he saw in other parts of the world was nothing compared to that in El Salvador, which he calls the poorest country he's ever visited.

WHEN HE and attorney Steve Cooper, who defended Jack Elder, director of Casa Oscar Romero half-way house in San Benito, visited a village not far from the capital, they were detained by Salvadoran soldiers. Hughes says the soldiers pointed guns at him and asked what he was doing there.

"They didn't believe that I was an attorney. They kept asking me if I wasn't a priest. That's because the threat to Salvadoran oligarchy is the Catholic Church," he says.

"For me personally to have seen and talked with the people and to get that sense of what people are going through, was incredible.

"The human rights violations, lack of freedom of movement, of travel, terrorism, is unimaginable by people in this country. There is nothing but death and every day these people say, 'gracias a Dios, (thank God) I didn't get it.'

"There are images that I don't even deal with very much, they affect me so much."

He says there has been a huge displacement in Salvadoran history, with whole families killed. "You don't see babies or men; not young ones anyway."

"Amazingly, even with living through all that terror, the people are submissive but not broken. They still have hope the nightmare will end and things will go back to how they were before."

"That's where I first learned about Laredo, because of the migrant workers who worked there," he recalls. A promotion to production foreman didn't last long because, he was told, he was "much too sympathetic with the Mexicans."

But Hughes continued his advocacy work with the Minnesota Migrant Council, and later was sent back to Glencoe to work with migrant workers.

During 1977 and 1978, he worked as personnel director at a twin plant operation in Ciudad Acuna, Mexico.

In 1979, he returned to college and received his degree in Latin American of 10 children born to an Irish Catholic couple, grew up.

"Oh, we had problems, but we dealt with them," he grins mischievously.

He dropped out of college after three years and began traveling around the world, "visiting other cultures," as he puts it.

can history. A year later, he began law studies in St. Paul. During the summers, he would work in the Rio Grande Valley and following graduation, returned to Harlingen where he began fulltime work with Proyecto Libertad.

HIS JOB there put him in contact with dozens of refugees from Central America. "In Salvador, those who've stayed behind for some reason or another talk of those who fled as the rich. In reality, they're poor; you could even say they're the poorest of the poor," he says. "But they're all, the ones who stayed, and the ones who left, struggling for justice."

Hughes brushes aside suggestions that what he and a handful like him are doing for the refugees is selfless.

Escapee Foote caught near parents' home

BLOSSOM, Texas (AP) — After escaping from a county jail and eluding authorities for a week, convicted kidnapper James Wesley Foote was captured in his parents' hometown with the help of a $2,000 reward offered by the father of the kidnap victim.

Authorities tracked Foote down Thursday after being tipped that he was hiding in a house in this community outside Paris, about 150 miles northeast of the Johnson County Jail in Cleburne, Lamar County Sheriff's Lt. Jerry Robbins said.

Foote had escaped July 4 by scaling a fence at the Johnson County Jail during an exercise period. He had been sentenced to life in prison for his part in the January kidnaping of 13-year-old Amy McNeil — an ordeal that ended several days later in a shootout with authorities.

Authorities said a $2,000 reward offered by the girl's father, Alvarado businessman Don McNeil, led to Foote's arrest. Officials said Foote had threatened revenge against the McNeil family and Johnson County authorities.

McNeil said the reward would be paid to the tipster, whom authorities declined to identify. However, Don Annett, a 47-year-old bricklayer who lives in Blossom, told The Dallas Morning News it was he.

"I nailed him right here. I trapped the boy, that's what I did," said Annett, who told the newspaper he himself had "spent half my life in the pen." He said he served time in Arkansas, Kansas and Texas for theft and counterfeiting.

Annett said a mutual friend asked him about 12:30 a.m. Thursday if he could borrow his car to pick up Foote and bring him back to Annette's house. After the friend left to pick up Foote, Annett phoned the Lamar County sheriff's office, said that Foote would soon be in his house, and promised to call with more information later.

Annett said he called the sheriff's office back about 10 a.m. Thursday to tell him that Foote was at his house. The arrest came a short while later, Annett told the newspaper.

Senior exit exams get preliminary OK

AUSTIN (AP) — State Board of Education members have conditionally approved a final examination that high school students must pass in order to get a diploma.

The preliminary vote came Thursday as the 15-member board began a three-day session. A final vote on "exit tests" will be taken Saturday.

Today, the board's Committee on Students was scheduled to act on proposed rules that would let schools expel or suspend students who bring drugs, alcohol or guns to the classroom. A final vote on the proposal also was set Saturday by the board.

"I think we have done everything we could possibly do to follow the Legislature's instructions," said board chairman Jon Brumley of Fort Worth. "I think we have balanced equity and quality as well as we could."

The 11-1 approval of Texas Assessment of Minimum Skills tests came after a two-hour closed session then another hour of debate over the public vote.

The new test is the result of the major school reform bill passed by a special session of the Legislature last summer. It will be given first this October to 11th graders. If a student fails, there will be three more opportunities to retake the test before the end of the 12th grade.

"This follows up the requirements of House Bill 72, when the Legislature said we must expect more of the educational system of this state," said state Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby.

"We believe it is not only legal, but fair," Kirby added.

Board member Carolyn Crawford of Beaumont suggested that the approved test was too strict and a test now given at the 9th grade level should be used at least the first year.

"I fear we will be in the courts for years," she said.

Kirby said the Texas Education Agency staff didn't believe the current ninth grade test would fulfill the Legislature's requirements.

Kirby estimated that about three-fourths of Texas students would be able to pass the new test this fall.

"This means that about 25 percent will need additional help in the next two years, when the test will be revised again," he said.

The commissioner said the proposed test will have 72 questions on mathematics and language arts.

Of that number, he said, it is possible that 20 of the math questions haven't been studied by some students in some districts because new school curriculum laws don't take effect until this fall.

STATE IN BRIEF

Texans aid firefighters

(AP) — Big Bend National Park officials say 13 staff members have been dispatched to fight fires raging in 14 western states and Canada.

Robert Huggins, park public information officer, said that in addition to the 13, five other park employees are on call to join firefighters if needed.

Huggins said Thursday a five-person crew left for Albuquerque, N.M., Tuesday night, and that an eight-person group followed Wednesday evening.

"That's where they gather the troops," Huggins said. "They regroup and create crews there."

The Big Bend workers were requested by officials of the Intergovernmental Fire Center in Boise, Idaho, to aid the 17,000 people fighting the fires, he said. The fires have charred more than 1 million acres.

Photographers lose suit

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Susan and Herman Kulkens, who took nude portraits of superstar Madonna, thought it would be fairly easy to get the photos published.

But the attempt, which now includes a lawsuit, has given Mrs. Kulkens a headache and sent her husband on a biking trip.

"It's upsetting. I was hoping it would all be over with," Mrs. Kulkens said Thursday after losing an initial court battle with Penthouse magazine.

The Kulkenses sent the magazine 22 black-and-white nude photos of Madonna, but Mrs. Kulkens said she never agreed on a price with publisher Bob Guccione.

The magazine sent the couple $25,000, but the Kulkenses contend the photographs are worth more than $100,000.

Meanwhile, Playboy and Penthouse magazines raced to hit the streets first with nude photos of Madonna. None of Herman Kulkens' photos are in those publications, his wife said Thursday.

In New York on Thursday, U.S. District Judge John F. Keenan refused to bar Penthouse from publishing Kulkens' shots, if it chooses, in a future issue.

Crew 'most educated'

gram's history, and their seven-day mission will call on them to operate a broad range of scientific experiments.

Between them, the seven crew members have a total of 21 college degrees, and mission commander Gordon Fullerton vows, "If there's a problem, we can just overwhelm it with education."

Fullerton, 48, has two degrees, as does the mission pilot, Roy D. Bridges Jr. Mission specialist F. Story Musgrave, 49, holds five degrees — two bachelors, two masters and a doctor of medicine.

Two other mission specialists, Tony England, 43, and Karl Henize, 58, hold three degrees each, including doctorates. Payload specialists Loren W. Acton, 48, and John-David F. Bartoe, 41, also hold doctor's degrees.

Administration attacks interpretation of Voting Rights act

By MERRILL HARTSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is arguing that Congress never intended the Voting Rights Act to guarantee blacks would be elected to public office in direct proportion to their percentage of the population.

Instead, the Justice Department says, a 1982 amendment to Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act was designed to ensure "access to the electoral process — not ensure victories for minority candidates."

These arguments are contained in a friend-of-the-court brief filed by Acting Solicitor General Charles Fried with the Supreme Court in a North Carolina case involving challenged state legislative district boundaries.

The high court has agreed to review a 1984 decision by a three-judge federal court panel in North Carolina invalidating nine legislative districts as illegally diluting the voting strength of blacks. The decision invalidated seven state house and two senate districts involving 30 seats.

The controversy stems from a 1981 lawsuit filed on behalf of black voters who challenged a provision in the North Carolina constitution prohibiting division of counties into more than one legislative district.

Civil rights activists had contended that electing several representatives from each county, rather than the old single-member practice, made it harder for blacks to be elected.

In its brief, the Justice Department argued that nothing in the Voting Rights Act of 1965 permits federal judges to insist on election district boundaries that guarantee safe seats for blacks.

The brief, which also was signed by Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds, head of the civil rights division, said "this is the first case" in which the high court would review a ruling that multi-member election districts violate that 1982 amendment to Section 2.

"Congress could not have expressed more clearly its intention not to invalidate multi-member districting plans where minorities have had an equal opportunity to participate in the electoral process, even if minority candidates did not win a proportionate share of the seats," said the brief. The document was filed Monday with the high court and released Tuesday by the department.

The Voting Rights Act was passed in the 1960s along with a host of major civil rights laws in the areas of housing, employment and other fields. It fully covers nine states, mostly in the South, and partially covers 11 others, all with histories of voter discrimination.

In its brief, the administration noted that blacks have been elected to the legislature from several of the districts that have been challenged in court by black groups.

It also noted that the three-judge court had said "it has now become possible for black citizens to be elected to all levels of state government in North Carolina."

The three-judge panel, however, also ruled that multi-member state house districts should be redrawn as single-member districts in seven counties and two multi-member senatorial districts.

The larger issue centers on an amendment to the Voting Rights Act, which was approved by Congress and signed into law in 1982.

"That provision, enacted after an intense legislative struggle, represents a studied compromise that condemns only those electoral procedures that 'result in a denial of an equal opportunity to participate in the electoral process,'" the Justice brief said.

"That conclusion is a matter of law, the proper conception of which must be established and assured by this court," it added. "The district court considered all of the evidence, but it reached an ultimate conclusion at odds with the correct legal standard."

"If left undisturbed, that decision means that wherever there has been discrimination in the past and some measure of racial polarization in voting in the present, district courts will be free to strike down virtually any scheme that does not — or even those that do — deliver electoral successes proportional to minority voting strength," the brief said.

"This is not what Congress intended."

The department said the lower court "erroneously held" that the redistricting plan at issue violated the amended Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act.

Muleshoe now foster home for wild mustangs, burros

MULESHOE (AP) — Thousands of mustangs that have overpopulated western range lands in recent years are now making Muleshoe their foster home while they wait for adoptive owners.

Randall and Paula Carr, two Tennesseans who handle surplus horses and burros for the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, have opened a holding pen for 2,000 mustangs here.

The horses will later be sold to new owners nationwide from three adoption centers.

"The ranchers in several Western states have been asking the government to take the overpopulated horses off the land because there just isn't enough grass to go around," Mrs. Carr said.

"This facility is just the first step before the horses go to the adoption centers."

While the Carrs have participated in the government adoption program at their ranch in Cross Plains, Tenn., the Muleshoe contract with the Department of Interior proved to be one of their biggest challenges, they said.

After being chosen last year from among 400 applicants who submitted bids for the holding facility, the Carrs were awarded the job with the stipulation that the 40-acre facility be ready to receive the wild horses within 52 days.

"We finished it in 32 days," Mrs. Carr said.

The facility was put in Muleshoe, she said, because the government required that a holding pen be built west of the Mississippi. Muleshoe also was a convenient location as a halfway point for moving the animals to the three adoption centers, and because of its amenable climate.

The first large shipment of wild horses arrived May 10, another in June, and a third is expected in the fall.

Most of the wild horses come from Nevada, Wyoming and Oregon and suffer from severe malnutrition. But on a diet of ground hay, oats and high-nutrition alfalfa cubes, they lose the gaunt look so prevalent in the newer arrivals, the Carrs said.

The Muleshoe facility will house only mustangs, Mrs. Carr said, although wild burros are also in big demand through the adoption program.

"Burros are the craze," she said. "Burros hate wild dogs, and they're good at protecting cattle because of that. They'll stomp any wild animal that tries to attack the herd."

Although each new shipment of horses brings the curious from around the Panhandle who like the idea of being able to buy a horse for a much lower price, the horses cannot be sold out of the Muleshoe center.

Later, they'll be shipped to the Carrs' facility in Cross Plains, Tenn., to another location in the east and to Collinsville in western Grayson County.

"We're hoping that we can eventually talk the government into letting us sell some horses here because so many people have expressed an interest," Mrs. Carr said.

She added that there are some tentative plans to hold a one-day adoption sale in August or September in Lubbock, although "we want to get them all together (the 3,000 mustangs that will eventually end up in Muleshoe) before we have any big adoptions."

Taking the blame

Finally the Pentagon has done the correct thing and struck the right balance in its more considered response to the scandal of outrageously overpriced aircraft spare parts at Miramar Air Station in San Diego, Calif.

Navy Secretary John F. Lehman Jr. announced the other day that Rear Adm. Thomas J. Cassidy Jr. would be reinstated as wing commander at Miramar. But Capt. Gary E. Hakanson, the base commander, and Cmdr. Jerry L. Fronabarger, the base supply officer, would not be reinstated; disciplinary action against them will not be changed.

The three officers were sacked on May 30 without proper investigation or even the right of self-defense. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger announced the decision following renewed congressional assaults on the military budget that were being stimulated by revelations that Miramar purchased $659 aircraft airstrays, $404 socket wrenches, and $2,710 landing-gear locks.

Secretary Lehman reports he "made the decision to relieve those three people" after Secretary Weinberger called him about the horror stories out of Miramar and demanded accountability. The result was a collective Pentagon decision to prove to Congress and the country that such irregularities would not be tolerated.

But this theater didn't play well in Peoria or anywhere else. There was a widespread public outrage at the Pentagon's obvious sacrificing of career officers to deflect criticism from itself. To its credit, the Navy then undertook the sort of thorough investigation that should have been carried out in the first place.

Secretary Lehman is to be praised for righting the wrong done Adm. Cassidy, and thereby acknowledging his error. In doing so, he dealt with the focus of public opinion, which, without knowing the ins and outs of Navy procedure, correctly perceived that responsibility lay with the base commanding officer and supply officer, not with an admiral charged with pilot training and flight operations.

The latest investigation confirms previous adverse inspection reports that listed Miramar among five of 374 naval installations with uncorrected irregularities. The base commander and supply officer cannot avoid accountability for this or for the discipline laid upon them.

Certainly the American public has every right to demand that the military not be wasteful and that officers be accountable for their actions. But that discipline must be carried out in the proper manner and directed at the proper parties. It was not in the earlier decision.

The unfortunate Miramar episode instructs naval personnel everywhere anew about accountability. The Pentagon also should have learned its lesson about accountability to its own people as well as to the country and the Congress.

...Relax, will ya'... There's actually a much better chance of collision or mechanical failure...

Pastora an enigma to Uncle Sam

WASHINGTON — One of the early heroes of the Sandinista revolution in Nicaragua was a colorful and enigmatic leader who was best known as "Commander Zero." His real name is Eden Pastora, and he is now fighting against the Sandinistas he once served.

The profile we've pieced together, from interviews with past and present associates and from the CIA's secret files, leaves the mystery of Pastora unresolved. Is he a democrat, a Marxist or merely an adventurer? Dirty Harry or Davy Crockett?

Eden Pastora Gomez was born about 48 years ago, the son of a Costa Rican mother and a Nicaraguan father who was killed by an officer in Anastasio Somoza's National Guard when the boy was 7. Educated by the Jesuits in Managua, young Pastora is remembered by a classmate as "a very bright kid."

He was studying medicine at the University of Guadalajara in 1959 when word of a student massacre led him to join the underground Sandinista movement. He was one of several student revolutionaries who were sent "to the exterior," meaning Cuba or the Soviet Union, to win support for the cause, while the older men fought as guerrillas in the mountains.

In 1963, a curious incident occurred that may have cast a long shadow over Pastora's later relations with his Marxist compatriots. The young rebel and a companion, Alejandro Martinez, were sent by Fidel Castro to Mexico to pick up $80,000 at the Soviet Embassy. The money was to be delivered to Castro, who would then disburse it to the Sandinistas.

But Castro never got the $80,000. Pastora refused to let Martinez accompany him to the embassy, and returned five hours later. Less than a month after that, Martinez was arrested in Havana, accused of being a CIA agent and of having stolen the Soviet money. He spent several years in prison before he finally won an interview with Castro and told him that Pastora had taken the $80,000. Castro was evidently convinced, because Martinez was released forthwith.

Pastora is the quintessential pragmatist, especially in matters of fund-raising and buying weapons. "We'll buy from the United States if they'll sell to us," he told our former associate Bob Sherman, who interviewed him in his jungle camp in the late 1970s. "We'll go to the American Mafia and the Soviets, if necessary," Pastora added.

In the summer of 1978, the rebel leader became famous when he and a small force of Sandinistas seized the National Palace in the heart of Managua and liberated 59 rebel prisoners.

During the months of civil war that followed, Pastora commanded the Sandinistas' southern front with mixed success. When Somoza fled and the Sandinistas entered Managua in triumph in 1979, Pastora was still pinned down by the national guard in the south. His late arrival in the capital may have cost him a top spot in the ruling junta.

As it was, he served in a couple of second-echelon jobs and finally resigned in July 1981. He traveled to Cuba, Libya and Costa Rica, where he publicly denounced his former comrades-in-arms in April 1982, and formed his own anti-Sandinista force. In the years since, Pastora has excelled at raising money and recruiting soldiers, but has had little success in the field.

A quixotic blend of showman, soldier, patriot and womanizer, Pastora is a genuine "caudillo," or leader of men. He has more lives than a cat, and President Reagan is known to be more than a little concerned that some unforeseen twist of fate could put Pastora in the presidential palace in Managua. No one can be sure which way Pastora would lead his country.

Another dictatorship?

The political picture in Latin America has brightened in recent months by the blossoming of democratic governments where military dictatorships once held forth. It is much bleaker in Africa, though, made so by a political climate in many areas that is hostile to popular rule.

Zimbabwe, for example, where Prime Minister Robert Mugabe continues his threat to turn the country into a one-party state. Mr. Mugabe has just been reelected overwhelmingly in Zimbabwe's first general election since it gained independence five years ago. He won 63 of the 80 seats allotted to blacks in the 100-member parliament.

But instead of hailing the victory as a step toward democracy, he talked of dictatorship. He did not use such an ugly word as that, of course, but spoke euphemistically of creating "one political umbrella." He would rewrite the constitution put together so carefully in London in 1979, and that would include scrapping the provision that guarantees 20 parliament seats to the white population. Fifteen of those seats were won by the Conservative Party headed by former Prime Minister Ian D. Smith, and this provoked intemperate post-election outbursts by Mugabe.

When Rhodesia became Zimbabwe, many had hopes for the dawning of a new democratic day. But that is not what has been happening under Mugabe's heavy hand.

When he assumed leadership five years ago, the white population, numbered 300,000. Since then, 200,000 have left the country. And the spectre of a one-party state, which the Marxist Mugabe has never disavowed, fouls the air.

It is unfortunate that the Prime Minister will not contribute to Africa the trend toward government by the people that is bringing hope to so many in Latin America and for which there were such high hopes five years ago.

Another View:

Who's a freeloader?

Suppose you are a retiree who got tired of sitting around taking life easy, so you went to work and are making more than $25,000 a year.

And suppose you are married and your wife is retired, too, and losing her taste for endless leisure, she got a job also, and the two of you are now earning more than $32,000 a year.

Or suppose you are a retiree who in your active working years put in long, hard hours and labored like a dynamo to earn enough to save. And invest so that when you retired, which you finally did, you would be earning enough from your investments to travel the country or raise horses or buy a ranch or farm or sail the lakes or seas in your own yacht — and you and your mate are in the $32,000-plus bracket.

Suppose that you are in your 70s, and these are supposed to be your "golden years" and you are in one of the categories described above and you are drawing Social Security, into which you and your employer paid throughout your youth and middie age, and to which you continue to contribute if you have a part-time or full-time job.

Under current law, such individuals and couples pay taxes on 50 percent of their Social Security benefits.

So you know what House Speaker Thomas B. "Tip" O'Neill, D-Mass., thinks you are?

He thinks you are a freeloader. O'Neill proposes raising the level of taxation on Social Security benefits for persons in those categories from 50 percent to 85 percent.

"Those people are freeloaders, to be perfectly frank," said he. "To be perfectly frank, that is a fine remark to be coming from Tip O'Neill, who has spent most of his 72 years nuzzling at the public trough, who has just signed a contract to do a book for a million-dollars-plus fee up front and who, along with his $97,900 salary as speaker of the House and his myriad perquisites and associated benefits, is drawing Social Security."

EVANS & NOVAK

Stockman launches last offensive

WASHINGTON — Supposedly authoritative reports that the White House is setting aside tax reform to concentrate on deficit reduction merely trumpet David Stockman's last tax offensive, now entering its climactic phase as he prepares for his Aug. 1 resignation.

In truth, the administration's tax reform timetable is unchanged, with no rewrite under way. What really is happening is Stockman's last-ditch effort to increase taxes before he quits as director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB). Experience cautions that the current White House firm stand against Stockman is no certainty that he will fail, but the three weeks remaining leave the window open only a crack.

What's left of the Reagan Revolution and President Reagan's personal credibility are at stake. Moreover, the president must finally choose sides in the war dividing Republicans into supply-siders who want lower marginal tax rates and traditionalists demanding austerity.

Stockman, who was promoted by supply-siders for the OMB slot after the 1980 election, has since waged annual tax offensives — enjoying budget success. While publicly pressing budget cuts that he well knows cannot pass Congress, Stockman has been increasingly candid in revealing higher taxes as his real priority.

Having survived years of indiscretion, Stockman has grown extraordinarily bold as his departure nears.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

He has made clear he considers tax reform hopelessly irrelevant even though it is the president's principal second-term initiative. Indeed, he has periodically been suggesting the necessity for higher taxes in defiance of Reagan's strictures.

Despite his present isolation from top levels of the administration, he has been astonishingly successful this year. He must be credited with engineering not only Reagan's budgetary concentration, slowing down tax reform, but also retreats in endorsing social security and defense cuts.

Furthermore, influential Republican allies in the Senate match Stockman's disdain for tax reform. Majority Leader Bob Dole and Budget Committee chairman Pete Domenici shocked some colleagues by reviving a tax increase as the means to a compromise, budget resolution. While these traditionalists are driven by sincere deficit-phobia, they are joined by Democrats seeking higher taxes for wholly opposite reasons.

Rep. William Gray, Democratic chairman of the House Budget Committee, sounds like Stockman and Domenici in claiming only tax increases can save the economy. But other Democrats on the stalled Senate-House budget conference admit they view higher taxes as the salvation of embattled spending programs. To many Democrats, a Reagan retreat on taxes following Social Security and defense also would complete the vindication of Walter Mondale.

All that House Democratic leaders ask to push a tax boost is a single word from Ronald Reagan, ensuring he will actively support them. It looked as though that word might be in the offing during the Fourth of July weekend when reports spread through Washington that tax reform was being pulled back for repairs with all effort put on deficit reduction.

Another Reagan retreat? Not yet, anyway. The timetable always called for the president to ease up his campaign during the summer while tax reform percolated in the Ways and Means Committee.

Nor is rewriting under way at the Treasury. Assistant Secretary Ronald Pearlman, head of the Tax Policy Division, got a dressing down when he publicly conceded the childcare deduction. For undercutting plans to let Ways and Means chairman Dan Rostenkowski make the changes, Pearlman was ordered to say no more to the news media.

On the overriding tax-increase issue, there is today no search at either White House or Treasury for wiggle room out of the president's pledge. Administration economic analysts warn that a tax increase in today's shaky economy would in short order widen, rather than narrow, budget deficits.

Of perhaps more importance to the decision makers, the president can ill-afford to backtrack on another campaign promise (the most recent retreat being continued observance of SALT II). The most formidable barrier facing Dave Stockman's last tax offensive is the realization of how its success would devastate the Reagan presidency. Once he is gone, the formidable control of the budget process that he has used to drive his own economic strategies will end and OMB will perform as it should; it will reflect the president's own convictions through stronger oversight by White House chief of staff Don Regan.

CHARLEY REESE

Allegiance should be to America

I hope you celebrated the Fourth of July and I hope you know what it is you were celebrating. You were not celebrating world peace, globalism, interdependence, internationalism, the brotherhood of man or other such high-sounding nonsense. You were celebrating the establishment and continued independence of one nation, the good old United States of America.

At the end of World War II, certain elitists among us tried to peddle the notion that nationalism was bad and internationalism was good. They are still at it, as a matter of fact.

Charley Reese

Some educators are talking about providing American youngsters with a global education.

That's intellectual garbage. American youngsters must be given an American education. They must be steeped in American history and American principles so they will be equipped to take their turn at preserving and protecting the independence of our nation and the freedom of our people.

The internationalists laid a bum rap on nationalism. They lied and said it was the cause of wars. Actually, internationalism is the cause of wars and that's as plain as the nose on an elephant's face. It was the attempt to create a German empire and a Japanese empire at the expense of the French, British and Dutch empires which caused World War II, not nationalism.

A favorite ploy of internationalists is to quote Stephen Decatur as saying, "My country, right or wrong, but my country." That's not what he said. He said, "In its relations with foreign powers, my country, right or wrong, but my country." When you're on a ship and another ship starts shooting at you, it's your ship, baby, right or wrong, but your ship because if that sucker sinks, you sink with it.

Thomas Jefferson gave the best definition of nationalism I've ever seen. We could solve a great many of our problems if every American adopted it as his own.

"The first object of my heart," Jefferson wrote to a friend, "is my own country. In that is embarked my family, my fortune, and my own existence. I have not one farthing of interest, nor one fibre of attachment out of it, nor a single motive or preference of any one nation to another, but in proportion as they are more or less friendly to us."

Multinational corporations to cite one example, do not have their fortunes embarked in the United States and since hearts and fortunes seem to stick together, they don't have their hearts here either. That's why, on occasions, you find them lobbying for the interests of foreign countries even at the expense of our own nation's welfare. For examples, see Aramco's efforts on behalf of Saudi Arabia, Gulf Oil's on behalf of communist Angola, and the Committee on East-West Trade on behalf of the Soviet Union and China.

In 1976 in Philadelphia, a sizeable number of senators and representatives signed a document called the Declaration of Interdependence which wrote off the sovereignty and independence of the United States as an anachronistic threat to world peace.

If we had any congressmen with sand in their craw, they would find articles of impeachment against these characters — all of them liberals, by the way — because they took an oath to obey and defend the Constitution of the United States, not the bloody world.

Like Jefferson, I have zip interest in foreign countries except whether they are friendly or hostile to us. I frankly don't care what kinds of governments they have. I am not even for human rights if human rights means, as it did in the Carter Administration, jerking the rug out from under friendly governments so they can be replaced by hostile governments as in Iran and Nicaragua.

I am not for taxing Americans and giving the money to the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund to pay off the debts foreigners owe to multinational banks. I am opposed to membership in the United Nations which has always been a farce but has more recently become an anti-American farce. I do not accept any jurisdiction over my affairs by the United Nations, the World Court, or any other organization or so-called law outside the United States.

We are Americans. We are alive and free because Americans shed American blood to keep us that way. No foreign country has come to our assistance since the battle of Yorktown. We have either fought alone or gone to the assistance of others. We don't owe the rest of the world two cents.

I think we ought to flush the internationalists out of government at every level. It would be nice to have Americans governed by Americans.

Ryan hurls way to 4,000 K's and NL All-Star team

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — It took him 18 years and 10 months to be in a position to notch his 4,000th career strikeout, and when the opportunity came Houston's Nolan Ryan knew exactly what to do.

Just as he had done so many times in his strikeout-filled major-league career, Ryan played New York Mets left fielder Danny Heep exactly as he planned Thursday night, sending the former Astro into the record books as the strikeout ace's 4,000th victim. The accomplishment came on a night when Ryan had been selected to the National League All-Star team for the sixth time.

Ryan needed only three pitches against Heep, a fastball which Heep fouled off, a changeup, which he took, and a curveball that Heep chased and missed.

"That's exactly what I wanted to do," Ryan said. "I went over those three pitches in my mind and I decided that's the way I wanted to do it if I didn't get behind him."

FOLLOWING THE historic strikeout, the normally stoic Ryan looked almost emotional as he doffed his cap to the standing ovation that greeted him.

"I think the fans came out to see me accomplish this tonight," Ryan said. "This was special, I wanted to do this at home. I knew that if I didn't do it tonight I'd probably do it on the road."

"This was my last start before the All-Star break. After the All-Star Game we have a long road trip, so that was my motivation."

Ryan started the game with 3,993 strikeouts and an 85-strikeout lead over his nearest rival, Philadelphia's Steve Carlton, who currently is on the disabled list with a shoulder injury.

HE PITCHED seven innings and had 11 strikeouts, running his career total to 4,004. It also extended his career total to a major-league-record 158 games of 10 or more strikeouts.

"He's a competitor," Mets outfielder George Foster said. "When you face Ryan, you have to be ready, or a lot of guys will be walking back to the dugout. He's one of the most consistent pitchers around to throw as hard as he does for as long as he has. He's lost some of his fastball but not much."

Montreal's Brad Mills was Ryan's 3,509th career strikeout on April 27, 1983, breaking the career strikeout record of Walter Johnson that had stood for 55 years.

RYAN'S MILESTONE strikeout ironically came against the team that he broke into the major leagues with in 1966.

"I didn't have any special team to get 4,000 against, but if it couldn't be the Dodgers, then it might as well be the Mets," Ryan said.

Ryan recorded his first major-league strikeout in a Mets uniform on Sept. 11, 1966, fanning Atlanta's Pat Jarvis.

Ryan, who has five career no-hitters, says he never imagined early in his career that he'd still be pitching in his late 30s.

He attributes his longevity to a devotion to proper pitching mechanics and a lucrative salary structure that allows players to avoid off-season jobs.

"The two keys for me are due to the fact that I've concentrated so many years on good mechanics of pitching and also I've concentrated on being as well-conditioned as possible," Ryan said.

Ryan, who is signed through the 1987 season at a salary of about $1 million per year, says modern-day players have more time to train.

"WITH SALARIES the way they are now, a player doesn't have to worry about getting an off-season job and he can spend more time staying in shape," Ryan said.

Ryan has registered 300 or more strikeouts five times in his career, including a high of 383 in 1973 as a member of the California Angels. He's struck out 10 or more batters in a game 158 times in his career.

Mets starter Sid Fernandez struck out seven Astros and was overshadowed by Ryan's performance but he didn't seem to mind.

"This was Nolan's big night and I couldn't be intimidated, I had to go out and pitch my game," Fernandez said. "I was glad he got his 4,000 strikeouts and I was glad to be part of the game. It's something I'll always remember and tell my kids about. I don't have any kids. But when I do, I'll tell them."

Astros sweeten Ryan celebration

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The big celebration for the Houston Astros was Nolan Ryan's latest strikeout milestone, but there were other personal victories to be celebrated following a 12-inning, 4-3 victory over the New York Mets.

Ryan fanned Danny Heep in the sixth inning Thursday night to become the first pitcher in major league history to strike out 4,000 batters. He finished the evening with 11 whiffs and 4,004 for his career.

Astros Manager Bob Lillis also applauded.

Bill Doran's 5-for-6 performance, including the game-winning RBI in the 12th inning.

The continuing return of shortstop Dickie Thon, who got three hits and scored the winning run.

The end of a string of extra-inning losses, although the Astros still are only 3-9 in overtime games.

The halt of the Mets' winning streak at nine games.

"We had a lot of good performances tonight," Lillis said. "Bill's really got a hot bat, and Dickie had a good night. (Dave) Smith helped with an excellent sacrifice."

Thon led off the 12th with his third hit of the game, a single to left, and was sacrificed to second by Smith. Doran then looped a single over the head of Mets third baseman Howard Johnson to end the marathon game.

Ryan's pursuit of the 4,000-strikeout plateau, unattained heretofore by any major league pitcher, highlighted the game's early going.

Ryan needed seven strikeouts to reach the milestone. It was the 158th time he'd struck out 10 or more batters in one game, extending another major league record.

THE ASTROS scored single runs in the fourth inning on Glenn Davis' single, Doran's fifth-inning single and Kevin Bass' 10th homer of the year in the sixth inning.

The Mets, who scored first in the second on Johnson's double, tied the game in the seventh on Strawberry's sacrifice fly and Gary Carter's single, forcing the extra innings.

"It was inevitable," Mets Manager Dave Johnson said of Ryan's feat.

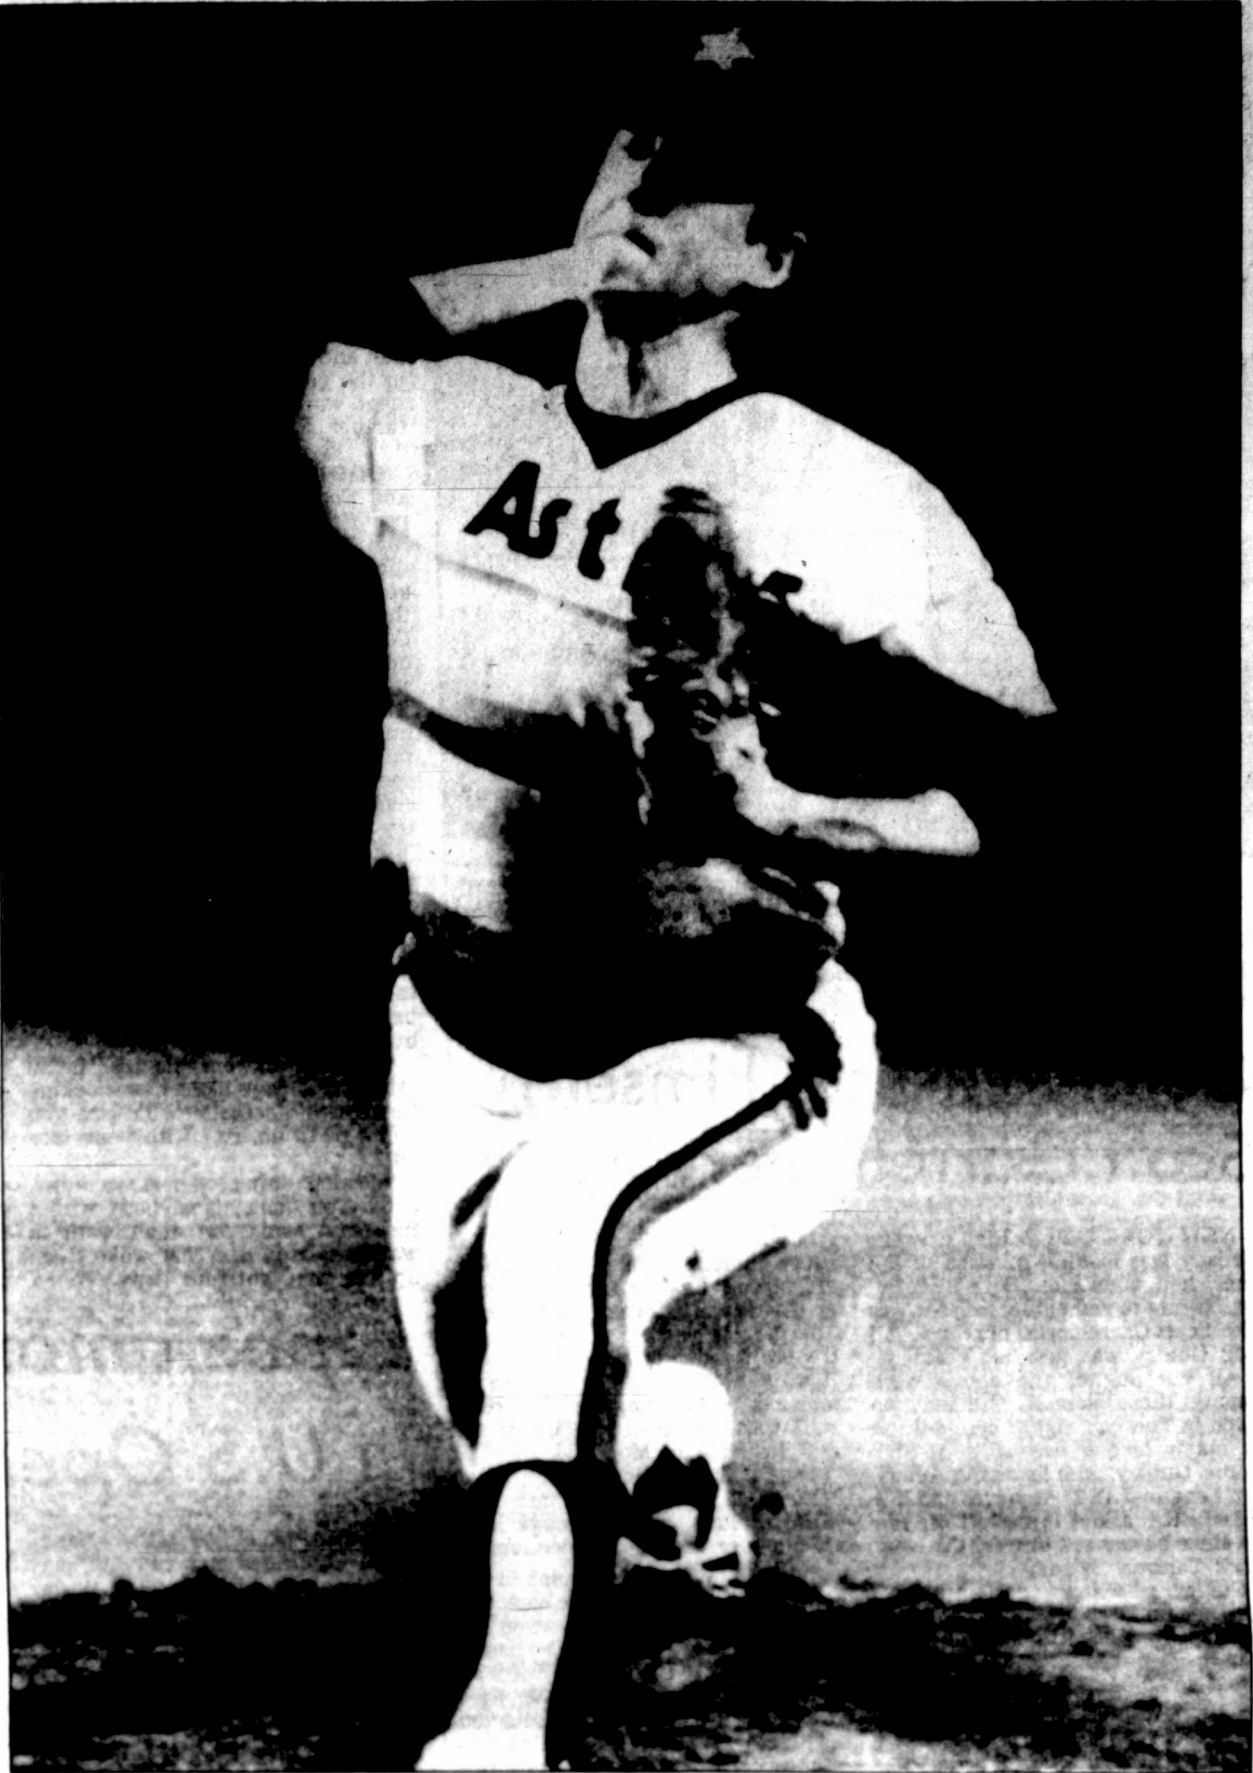

"Just like (Cincinnati's) Pete Rose passing Cobb's hit record. It's a great accomplishment, 4,000 strikeouts. But I think more of a plateau for a pitcher is 300 wins. Strikeouts are great, but the bottom line is not strikeouts. It's winning games."

Houston pitcher Nolan Ryan became the first strikeout mark on Thursday and was also named pitcher in major league history to pass the 4,000 to the NL All-Star squad for the 6th time.

Fehr: Financial problems should not impede negotiations

But owners, players put off talks for another week

NEW YORK (AP) — Donald Fehr, acting executive director of the Major League Players Association, says it isn't necessary for the union to acknowledge that owners have financial problems before an agreement is reached.

"Even if those disagreements (over teams' financial status) persist, we still must negotiate an agreement," Fehr said after a one-hour meeting between the two sides Thursday. "The only way we know how to do it, with the backdrop of the past several months, is to go back to the nuts and bolts, the issues, on as intensive a basis as the parties feel is likely to allow us to make progress."

The two sides canceled a meeting scheduled for today. They will not meet again until next Thursday, after the All-Star break and after the union meets Monday in Chicago to set a strike deadline. "After the strike date is set, whether it turns into several days or several weeks or something in between, it isn't very much time, especially compared to what we have to do and compared with the remarkable progress we have not been able to make in eight months," Fehr said.

THE PLAYERS' chief negotiator added, however, that he has not given up hope for a settlement without a strike.

"Far more sophisticated agreements have been negotiated in shorter periods in other industries," Fehr said. "The auto workers take no more than three weeks."

Lee MacPhail, president of the Player Relations Committee, agreed with Fehr that the financial status issue shouldn't prevent a settlement. "Their position is maybe we will never reach absolute agreement on the problem, but we still have to make an agreement whether we agree on the financial problems or not," MacPhail said. "There may always be disagreement by the two sides on that issue."

MacPhail added that the union's analysis of teams' financial material has held up progress in the negotiations. "When that's done, we'll proceed rapidly, whether there's a strike vote or not," MacPhail said. "The clubs are just as frustrated as the players with the time it has taken. We knew it would take a long time when we brought the problems to the players. We were reluctant, but we had no alternative."

Ward, Cruz selected as All-Star reserves

NEW YORK (AP) — Manager Dick Williams rectified two fan oversights by naming Willie McGee and Pedro Guerrero to the National League All-Star team today, while two perennial American League All-Stars — Rod Carew and Reggie Jackson — will miss Tuesday night's game.

Williams and American League Manager Sparky Anderson filled out their rosters today by naming their teams' reserve players for the game at the Minnesota Twins' Metrodome. Besides pitcher Nolan Ryan who was named to the NL team Thursday, Astros' outfielder Jose Cruz was selected. Texas Rangers outfielder Gary Ward was the lone Rangers lone selection by Anderson to the AL squad.

Results of fan balloting for the two leagues' starting teams were announced Thursday. While neither McGee of St. Louis nor Guerrero of Los Angeles received enough fan support to make the starting team, they were among the five reserve outfielders named by Williams. McGee leads the National League with a batting average of .349, and Guerrero is tied with starting All-Star Dale Murphy of Atlanta for the league lead with 21 homers.

AT THE same time, Anderson passed over Carew and Jackson, both of the California Angels, as he announced the American League reserves.

Carew failed to make the squad for the first time in his 19 major league seasons, beginning in 1967. Carew is the all-time leading vote-

DeWit still undefeated

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Canadian heavyweight Willie De Wit remained undefeated Thursday night when he stopped Earl Louis in the third round of a scheduled six-round bout.

De Wit, the Olympic heavyweight silver medalist, became 5-0-1 with four knockouts when ringside physician Dr. Frank Doggett climbed into the ring and advised referee Rudy Battle to stop the fight at two minutes of the third.

De Wit, a native of Grand Prairie, Canada, but financially based in Midland and trained in Burnet, had been hammering Louis with unanswered left hooks and rights to the head moments before Doggett acted. He also floored Louis with a left hook in the first minute of the round.

Angels streak alive; contest washed out

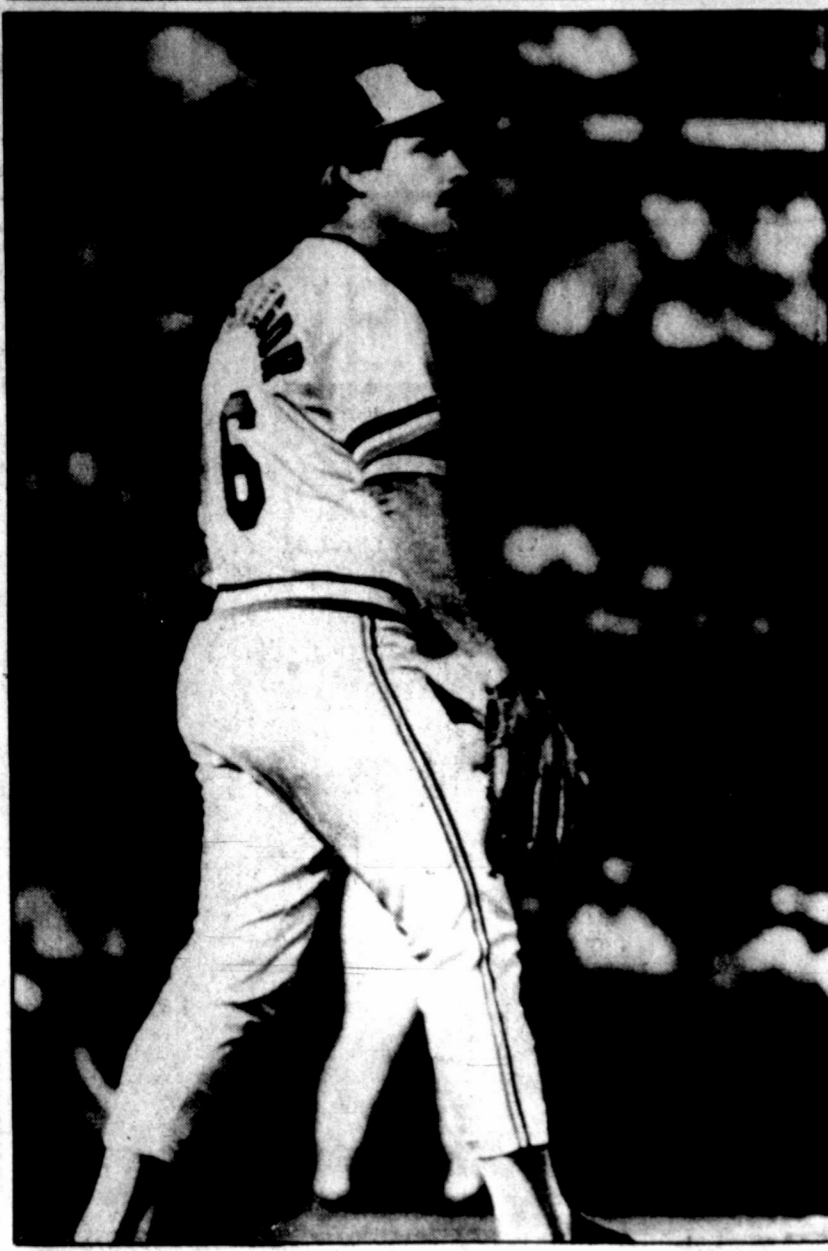

By The Associated Press

The Midland Angels had their All-Star break extended and kept their four game winning streak alive yet another day Thursday as their scheduled game with Jackson was postponed because of wet grounds.

The Mets and the Angels, whose four-game streak is their longest of the season, will try again tonight. Thursday's postponed game will be made up Saturday as part of a doubleheader.

Guidry excuses himself; Scott Garrelts nervous

NEW YORK (AP) — Rich Gossage already was looking forward to the cherished memories. Bert Blyleven was trying to remember what it was like. Scott Garrelts was nervous. And Ron Guidry was just being honest.

All but one of the above were among those named Thursday to pitch in Tuesday night's 56th edition of major league baseball's All-Star Game. Guidry, who leads the American League with 11 victories and has a 2.69 ERA, asked to be left off the list since he was starting for the New York Yankees Sunday.

Guidry, who has won 10 in a row, said he knew about his impending selection by American League Manager Sparky Anderson on Tuesday. "I tried to be as honest as I could when I told (AL Vice President) Bill Fischer. I'm not a rookie. I've been to four, so I know what it's all about. That has nothing to do with why I won't go," Guidry said. "What happens here (with the Yankees) is more important."

WITH GUIDRY off the list, Anderson chose eight other pitchers, including three of his own — Jack Morris, 10-6, Dan Petry, 10-7, and Willie Hernandez, who has 18 saves. Cleveland's Blyleven and two Toronto Blue Jays, Dave Stieb and Jimmy Key, were the other starting pitchers selected. Besides Hernandez, the relievers are California's Donnie Moore and Jay Howell of Oakland. The National League staff, selected by Manager Dick Williams of San Diego, included two of his own pitchers, starter LaMarr Hoyt and reliever Gossage. The other starters were Joaquin Andujar of St. Louis, Dwight Gooden of New York, Nolan Ryan of Houston and Fernando Valenzuela of Los Angeles. The relief staff was completed by Garrelts and Jeff Reardon of Montreal.

Moore, Petry, Howell, Key, Garrelts, Hoyt and Reardon are first-time All-Stars, while Gossage leads all pitchers with nine selections.

"THERE WILL be a point in my life when I'm going to look back and think about it — probably when I'm in my 70s," said Gossage, who has 17 saves and a 1.79 ERA. "It's always an honor."

Blyleven, 8-8 and 3.10, was selected once before, in 1973. He said he was honored but wanted "to enjoy this one a little more. I was so young at the time I made my first one, I was more in awe than anything else. I was afraid to ask anybody for their autograph because they probably would have thought I was one of the clubhouse kids."

GARRELTS, WITH a 4-3 record, six saves and a 1.10 ERA, was selected for the first time. He already was anticipating some jitters. "I'm sure I'll be very nervous," he said. "The guys who have been there were telling me how many reporters there are around. They are not going to be talking to me anyway."

NEW YORK (AP) — There are no hard feelings between the New York Yankees and Texas Rangers — except for Joe Cowlie's broken nose and Glen Cook's inflated earned run average.

In fact, Billy Martin, the feisty Yankee manager who has never met a fight he didn't like, phoned Texas second baseman Toby Harrah after the game to tell him there was no animosity following his baseline collision with Cowlie in the third inning of the Yankees' 11-7 victory Thursday night in a game that could have turned ugly.

The Yankees were leading 3-0 thanks to Dave Winfield's two-run homer in the first inning and Willie Randolph's solo shot in the second. Cook, the Texas rookie, also hit two Yankees with pitches. To start the Texas third, a pitch from Cowlie conked Curtis Wilkerson on the helmet and dazed him, but he remained in the game. Umpire Marty Springstead warned both managers against further retaliation.

ODDIBE McDOWELL singled, and Cowlie fielded Harrah's chopper near the baseline and tagged him as they collided. It appeared that Harrah veered toward Cowlie and used his elbows to try and knock the ball loose. Instead, he clipped Cowlie on the nose, breaking it and opening a cut that required six stitches.

"I never hurt anybody or tried to hurt anybody in my life," Harrah said. "I just hope he's all right. I just spoke to Billy on the phone. I understand things, but I repeat — I didn't try to hurt him."

Martin also absolved Harrah of any intent. "He meant to knock the ball out of his hand," Martin said. "I know that. He didn't go out of his way. He was right in the baseline. He didn't mean to hurt the guy. That's hard, clean baseball. It's a shame our pitcher got hurt, that's all."

"He (Harrah) went like this (Martin raised his elbows like a pass-blocking lineman in football). What are you going to do, run with your face out?"

"Cowlie didn't want to hit anybody. You don't hit anybody with a three-run lead. You don't want to wake anybody up. That woke them up and they got four runs."

AL Roundup

COOK HELD the 4-3 lead until the fourth inning. The Yankees tied the score on Bobby Meacham's two-out single before Rickey Henderson walked and first baseman Pete O'Brien made a diving stop of Ken Griffey's grounder and flipped to Cook covering for what could have been the third out.

But Cook missed the bag and was first charged with an error, making the next seven runs of the eight-run inning unearned. Don Mattingly's three-run double made it 7-4 and Don Baylor capped it with a pinch-hit grand slam homer off Chris Welsh. Mattingly had two doubles and a single, and his 19-game hitting streak is the longest in the majors this season.

After the game, however, umpire Durwood Merrill said he would have called Griffey safe anyway because he beat O'Brien's throw. That took away the error, gave Griffey a hit and made all the runs earned, zooming Cook's ERA from 3.44 to 6.55.

TEXAS MANAGER Bobby Valentine had the left-handed Welsh ready to face the lefty-swinging Mattingly, but let Cook stay in.

"There was an alternative," he conceded, "but he (Cook) wanted to do his thing. It was a confidence builder. Mattingly hit a tough pitch. You learn about great hitters."

Regarding the Harrah-Cowlie collision, Valentine said: "You have to take the game to the other team. Toby's play was a good, aggressive play, and we came back to take the lead. The game was meant to be an aggressive game, not a passive game. I would have been very upset if Toby had just stopped and let the guy tag him."

It was the Yankees' seventh victory in their last eight games and gave them a 21-3 record at home against the American League West.

Blue Jays 5, Angels 3

Willie Upshaw snapped a 3-3 tie with a fifth-inning single and George Bell contributed a pair of RBI singles to lead the Blue Jays' offense and Jesse Barfield cut down a potential California rally by tossing out Rod Carew at the plate in the seventh inning to lead Toronto.

Barfield nailed Carew attempting to go from second to third base on a seventh-inning fly ball. Carew had led off the seventh with a double, his third hit of the game, and tried advancing to third when Juan Beniquez followed with a fly to Barfield. But the throw gained importance as both Reggie Jackson and Doug DeCinces followed with singles.

Carew, who needs 16 hits to reach the 3,000 mark, drove in his 1,000th run with a single in the fourth inning.

In winning their fifth straight, the American League East-leading Blue Jays ended the West-leading Angels' four-game winning streak.

"Hopefully, we can come out of here with a couple of wins," said Barfield. "But we have to take it a day at a time. It's going to be a good year for us all the way through, and this is only the beginning."

Twins 5, Tigers 1

Mike Smithson pitched a six-hitter for eight innings and Mark Salas doubled home a pair of runs to key Minnesota's three-run fifth inning and lead the Twins over Detroit. It was the Twins' fifth triumph without a defeat this season over the defending world champions.

Smithson, 8-7, took a four-hitter into the ninth before giving up two singles to start the inning. Ron Davis then came in to register his 11th save with three strikeouts.

The Twins broke a 1-1 tie in the fifth, getting to Randy O'Neal, 5-2, who had his winning streak snapped at four games.

Royals 1, Indians 0

Danny Jackson tossed a six-hitter and George Brett's first-inning home run provided the game's only run as Kansas City blanked Cleveland.

Jackson, 7-6, struck out four and walked one while pitching his fourth complete game and third shutout. He outdueled Cleveland's Vern Ruble, 2-4, who pitched a five-hitter for his first complete game.

"It really wasn't a bad pitch," said Ruble of the fastball Brett clobbered. "It was down and probably not an inch or so above his knees. I threw the pitch right where I wanted to."

Brett, who was named to the American League All-Star team Thursday for the 10th straight year, hit his 12th home run with two outs in the first. His three-hit game, the 15th time he has accomplished that feat this season, boosted his batting average to .359 to give him the league lead in that department.

Orioles 7, White Sox 6
Fred Lyan hit a three-run homer with two outs in the ninth inning to cap a four-run Baltimore rally and lift the Orioles over Chicago. Lynn's drive came on a 2-1 pitch by Mike Strunton, 1-3, and was his third ninth-inning game-winning homer of the season.

"Anytime you leave as many on base (seven) as I have the last few days," Lynn said, "it's nice to come through when the chance arises. Not many times do you get a second chance."

Carlton Fisk knocked in the first three runs for the White Sox with a sacrifice fly in the first and a two-run homer, his major-league-leading 22nd, in the third. The homer by Fisk was his 243rd while playing as a catcher, snapping a tie with Roy Campanella for the No. 3 spot on the all-time list. Johnny Bench leads all catchers with 389 homers; Yogi Berra had 313.

Red Sox 7, Mariners 1

Al Nipper and Steve Crawford combined on a one-hitter and Steve Lyons knocked in three runs, two with his third homer, to pace Boston over Seattle.

Nipper, 5-6, allowed the Mariners' only hit — a sixth-inning RBI single by Ivan Calderon — but walked six in 5 1-3 innings before being relieved by Crawford.

After Bill Buckner singled home a run in the first inning, Lyons hit his homer in the fourth following Rich Gedman's double to make it 3-0. Boston added three runs in the sixth and Glenn Hoffman capped the Red Sox' scoring with a solo homer in the eighth.

Lyons celebrated his mother's birthday and his father's first chance to attend one of his major league games by also making two outstanding defensive plays.

A's 9, Brewers 3

Mickey Tettleton homered, singled and scored three runs and Don Sutton won his sixth straight game as Oakland defeated Milwaukee.

The A's handed Sutton, 9-5, an early six-run lead, scoring three runs in the second inning against Pete Vuckovich, 3-7, and three more off reliever Jaime Coanover in the third.

Sutton pitched seven innings, allowing seven hits and two earned runs in picking up his 229th career victory.

Lopez among leaders in U.S Open scramble

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. (AP) — Nancy Lopez continued her red hot play and shot a 2-under-par 70 to tie for the early opening round lead with two other golfers in the 40th U.S. Women's Open on Thursday.

Former champion Janet Anderson and 24-year-old Kathy Baker, seeking her first professional victory, shared the early lead with Lopez on the 6,274-yard upper course at Baltusrol. Anderson won this event in 1982, her only victory on the tour.

Lopez recorded four birdies and two bogeys as she began her quest for her first U.S. Open title and 33rd victory of her professional career.

A victory would be Lopez's second different major and qualify her for the Ladies Professional Golf Association Hall of Fame once she completed her 10th year on the tour in 1987. In her last six tournaments this year, Lopez has won three, finished second twice and third once.

Anderson had five birdies and three bogeys during her round, rolled in a 25 footer on the 18th hole to go 2-under.

Baker, who joined the LPGA tour in 1983, was 4-under-par after 10 holes, but bogeyed Nos. 12 and 14 to finish tied for the lead.

Jan Stephenson, Betsy King, Lori Garbacz and amateur Dottie Pepper were one stroke behind the early leaders.

Stephenson could have been tied with the leaders but she was assessed a one-stroke on the 11th hole when she accidentally moved her ball marker on the green with her putter.

Alice Miller, who has set the LPGA record this year for money won with $319,172, had an opening round 75. Patty Sheehan, No. 3 on the money winning list this year, had a first-round 73.

Defending champion Hollis Stacy and contenders Pat Bradley, Jane Carer and Hall of Famer Kathy Whitworth had late starting times.

The 72-hole tournament is scheduled to end on Sunday.

Cardinals 6, Padres 0
St. Louis, hoping to run away in the NL East, used the talents of Vince Coleman, Willie McGee and associates to steal eight bases against slumping San Diego. The Cardinals, led by Coleman with 62 and McGee with 36, have swiped 169 bases.

Both Coleman and McGee had two hits, three stolen bases and scored two runs to back John Tudor, who won his ninth straight game. Tudor, 10-7, who worked out of a first-inning jam, retired 18 of the last 20 San Diego hitters to post his fourth shutout.

Dodgers 3, Cubs 1
One of the highs a major leaguer can experience is getting a crucial base hit right after they've intentionally walked the previous batter. Steve Yeager found himself in that position when Chicago walked Candy Maldonado to load the bases in the seventh inning.

Yeager foiled the strategy with a two-run single that broke a scoreless tie and led Los Angeles to its fourth straight victory.

Bob Welch, 3-1, lost his shutout bid in the eighth. Ken Howell pitched 1 2-3 scoreless innings for the Dodgers to earn his ninth save.

Reds 2, Expos 0
Rookie Ron Robinson is perfect record-wise as a major league pitcher, and Cincinnati teammate Ted Power hasn't been too shabby, either.

Robinson, 5-0, and Power combined on a seven-hitter for the Reds, with Power working out of an eighth-inning jam to get his 16th save and seventh in his last seven opportunities.

The Reds, who broke a three-game losing streak, got run-scoring singles by Donn Blardello and Gary Redus in the seventh inning. Joe Heatheth, 5-4, took the loss for Montreal.

Pirates 6, Giants 4
Tony Pena started running and didn't want to stop. Although his run was just insurance, Pena was trying to fire up a team that has been lost in the NL West since April 1984.

After driving in the go-ahead run, Pena scored all the way from first base in the fifth inning on the first of four singles by Joe Orsulak, who also had two stolen bases.

Johnny Ray hit his fifth homer, a two-run shot, for the Pirates, while the Giants' Bob Brenly connected for his 11th homer.

Pittsburgh's Cecilio Guante handed San Francisco its fifth straight loss with 5 2-3 innings of six-strikeout relief.

Braves 3, Phillies 2
When Atlanta's Rafael Ramirez looked up and saw five infielders, he wasn't sure what to make of it. Philadelphia Manager John Felske decided to place outfielder Von Hayes behind second base and go with only two outfielders with the game tied, nobody out and the bases loaded in the bottom of the ninth inning.

The game-winning hit, a drive to right-center field off Larry Andersen, 3-3, was Ramirez's third single of the night and extended his hitting streak to 10 games.

Juan Samuel hit his eighth homer and Glenn Wilson drove in his 60th run of the season to account for the Phillies' runs.

Pokes' White fishes away time until training camp

By ANDY ANDERSON
The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — Randy White may be All-Pro evidence that training camps are an unnecessary evil for professional football players. White enjoyed one of his best years during his 10th season with the Dallas Cowboys, although he did not visit Thousand Oaks, Calif.

But there's no excuse for White to fish through the entire summer this year. There's no salary dispute, no reason for a holdout. He is on a new contract worth millions, and as the time nears to head for the Cal Lutheran training site, White wants to be ready.

Bob Ward and some visitors from the East who help teach the Dallas defenders the martial arts — especially movement, leverage and hand-eye coordination — would have been pleased to have the view recently from a seat in White's bass boat.

FROM THE nose of the craft, the big defensive lineman with a chest the size of a tennis court tests his skills against an opponent that is considered no slouch in the quickness-and-reflex department.

On a recent outing, White cast spinnerbait several feet beyond an alligator's head and ripped it back slowly near the surface. The gator waited patiently, its large eyes periscoping over the water. When the lure came within striking distance, the reptile swung its head and clamped down with its jaws.

"Missed again," White laughed after jerking the lure from the gator's jaws before it could hook itself. "One thing I don't want to catch is an alligator."

For a man whose job restricts his fishing to less than one day a week for more than six months each year, White has come a long way in the 4½ years he has been a serious bass angler. Being who he is has opened the gates to some of the best private fishing holes in the country, of course, and that has been a factor in his fishing education.

IT ALL started just under five years ago when White accompanied his coach, defensive coordinator Ernie Stautner, on a bass fishing trip.

Texas Topic

"I didn't catch a fish," White recalled. "But I was throwing a buzz bait — a Lunker Lure I think it was — and the water was clear enough that I saw a little fish run at the lure and miss it. I think I was hooked from that minute on."

Enter Charlie Waters, a now-retired defensive teammate of White's, and John Haney, father of White's wife, Vicci.

"Charlie had this place up north (of Dallas), and it was loaded with small bass," White said. "The first trip up there I caught about 60 pop-corn bass. It was an exciting day."

Haney's influence on his son-in-law was considerable. A former boat racer and a sportsman in his own right, Haney is a respected businessman (fishing lures and fishing boat electronics) and angler who holds the state record for hybrid stripers at 19 pounds, 10½ ounces.

"He didn't force me into fishing," White said. "But when I got hooked on it, he was ready to help any way he could. I've met a lot of people and learned a lot from being with him, on a lake or at some boat or tackle show where he was manning a booth. And he let me clean some of the first bass I caught in his driveway."

WHITE IS known at many roadside stops from Mount Pleasant to Palestine, Brushy Creek to Edom, Caddo Creek to Koon Kreek, Catfish Creek to Brownsboro, Murchison to Poyner and Monticello to Athens.

And he is respected as a guy that pays his dues.

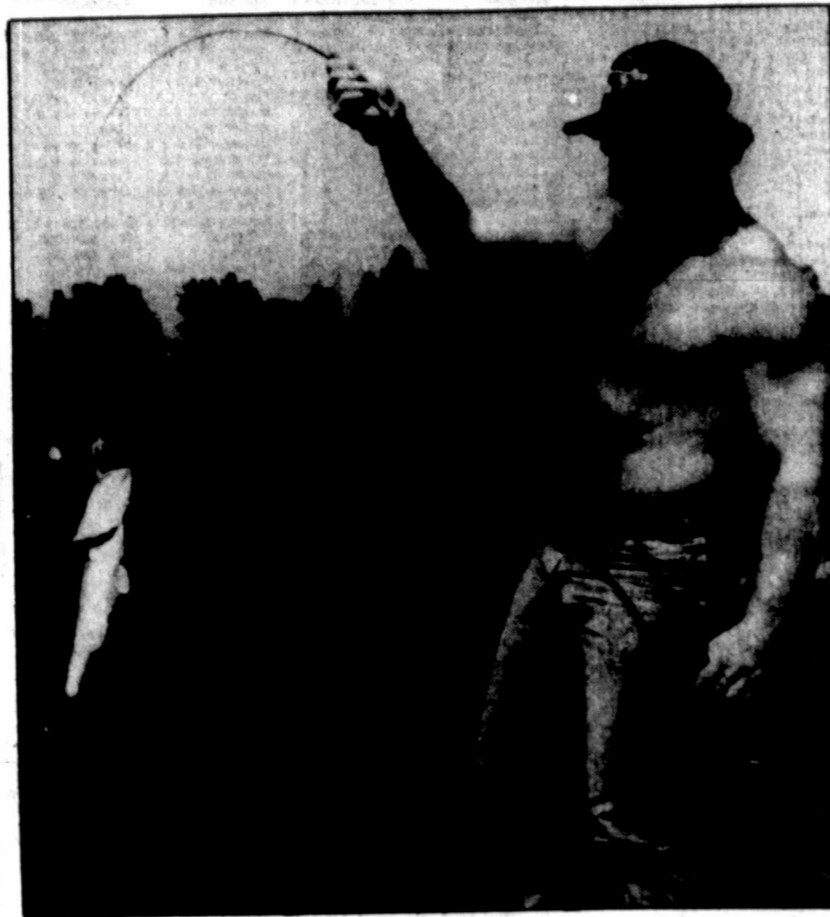

He has spent his share of chilly days and icy nights during the big-bass season on Monticello, at first learning from people like Bob Garcia, Tommy Milam and Jerry Riney. Now, he mostly fishes alone, which may be the truest measure of his dedication.

"I'm not a big-bass nut," White said "but I enjoy the challenge of a lake with big bass, like Monticello. I like to catch fish, but I'm not that hung up on big fish."

White's largest catch from public waters, plus 7 pounds, came from Monticello. He has taken bass over 10 pounds from private ponds. He believes that being able to ply the bass-laden waters of private lakes has helped him hone his presentation and catching techniques faster than the norm, but that he is behind the average bass enthusiast in fish-finding.

Randy White, All-Pro linebacker for the Dallas Cowboys, spends his summer hours bass fishing on Texas lakes.

Spurs sign top pick Hughes

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs have signed first-round draft pick Alfredrick Hughes to a contract, team General Manager Bob Bass announced Thursday.

Bass declined to reveal terms of the contract for Hughes, a 6-5 forward from Loyola University in Chicago.

Hughes' signing comes on the heels of a contract agreement between the Spurs and second-round pick Mike Brittain, a 7-1 center from South Carolina.

"I am impressed with his attitude," Bass said of Hughes. "He really wants to be a player and he wanted to get the contract signed so he could be in our rookie camp next week. He is so intense. He is a non-nonsense type guy who wants to be an NBA player."

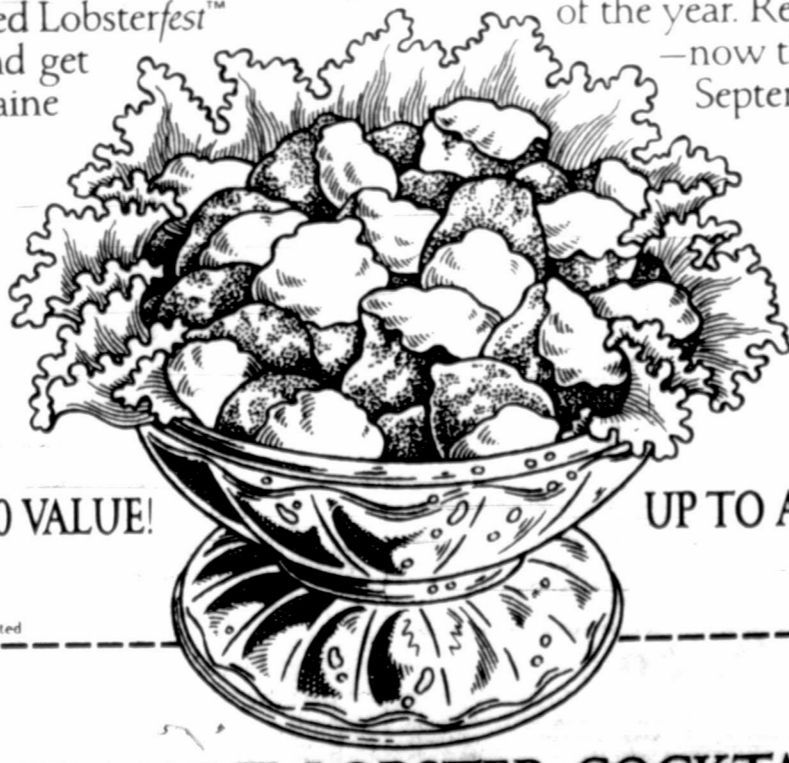

Hughes was the 14th player overall to be picked in the NBA draft June 18.

He averaged 26.3 points a game last season to rank second in the NCAA.

"THOSE TOURNAMENT guys that go out on a lake cold and have to find fish in a hurry and then find some more the next day amaze me," he said.

How has White learned what he has learned so well?
"I watched a lot, I read and I listen. Then I go try something out and see what happens."

White's fishing days will grow less frequent as the summer ticks on, but unlike past years, they will not cease. He is no less dedicated to football, understand, but will keep fishing a few days each week up until he reports to Thousand Oaks the third week of July. White does limit his night fishing, and as training camp nears, he stops completely.

White has made it as a football player, and he is making it as a bass fisherman. Pro football and fishing have helped him emerge from the shell, the backwardness, he seemed to have as a rookie.

WATCHING HIM wield a 7-foot, heavy-action flipping rod as if it were a toothpick is a sight to behold, but watching him be a good ol' boy around the gas pumps, short-order griddles and cracker barrels in those wide spaces in the road in East Texas is amazing.

Even though White is a native of Delaware who attended Maryland and who owns a farm in Pennsylvania, he is more Texan than many native sons. He talks the language and that includes some of the bull it takes to survive among fishermen.

He has an eye out for a place in this creek country southeast of Dallas he loves so well, and the farm in Pennsylvania may be part of the deal. White will someday become "totally Texan."

When Randy White the footballer is ready to retire, Randy White the fisherman should be in his prime.

Hinkle's layoff leaves him with 2-stroke lead

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — After taking a week off from the PGA Tour to work on a problem with his swing, Lon Hinkle saw a definite improvement in the first round of the $500,000 Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

"It was a real nice round," Hinkle said Thursday after he birdied three of the last four holes enroute to a 7-under-par 64 and a two-stroke lead over veteran Jay Haas and Steve Pate.

PGA

"I made some good putts, and I'm very pleased," said Hinkle, who has three victories since joining the tour in 1972 but none since the 1979 World Series of Golf.

Hinkle, with 32s on each side, was one of 89 golfers to match or better par during Thursday's round over the 6,746-yard, par-71 Kingsmill Golf Club course, carded 32s on both sides.

After finishing 56th at Atlanta three weeks ago and then 52nd at Memphis, Hinkle passed up the Canadian Open and went home to Dallas to work on the flaw in his swing.

"IT WAS an incomplete backswing," Hinkle said of the problem. "I have a tendency to start my downswing before I finish my backswing. I just have to slow down a little bit and relax."

"I was very conscious of my swing today," added the 35-year-old Hinkle, who is 65th on the money list year with a best finish of seventh in the Tournament Players Championship.

Playing the back nine first, Hinkle made the first of his seven birdies on the 179-yard, par-3 13th.

A good approach shot on the par-4 18th set up his second birdie, and he used a 9-iron to get within five feet for a birdie 3 on the 408-yard 18th.

Hinkle moved to 4-under at the par-3 second hole and stayed there until the sixth, when he began his final assault.

Tech '9' signs JC star

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Austin Johnson baseball player Phillip Maldonado has signed a letter of intent to play for Texas Tech.

Maldonado, who has played right field the last two years with McLennan Community College, hit .369 last season.

Following his drive on No. 6, Hinkle used a wedge to reach the fringe of the green of the 365-yard hole, and rolled in a 12-foot putt.

HE REACHED the green of the 516-yard seventh in two shots, and two-putted for another birdie, and concluded with a 25-foot birdie putt on the 452-yard, par-4 ninth hole.

"I've been through some highs and lows," Hinkle said. "I haven't been very high lately, but I'm holding my own."

Haas used a string of five straight birdies to carve out a 30 for the back nine after settling for an even-par 36 on the front.

"I was pretty aggressive today," said Haas. "I haven't played in three weeks. My last tournament was the U.S. Open. Being off for three weeks, I guess I got my batteries recharged."

Haas, whose best finish this year was a fifth at the Masters, got four of his birdies on par-4 holes and also birdied the par-3 13th.

Another stroke back at 67 were Paul Azinger, Frank Conner, Wayne Grady, Mark Hayes, Mike Reid and Larry Rinker.

THE GROUP of 12 golfers at 68 included Hal Sutton, winner at Memphis two weeks ago, and defending Anheuser-Busch champion Ronnie Black.

Actor Victor French says Michael Landon 'real angel'

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — Actor Victor French says it was Michael Landon who recognized the "good" in him and rescued him from a succession of bad guy roles.

For a quarter century, in numerous movies and on such television shows as "Bonanza" and "Gunsmoke," French had played the villain.

"When 'Little House on the Prairie' came along and I heard Michael wanted me for Mr. Edwards, I nearly fell over," he said. "I didn't think he even knew who I was. The network wanted a name actor, but Michael stood by his guns. That role changed my career. Michael is really my 'angel.'"

French was making a kidding reference to his current role as the mortal sidekick to Landon, on NBC's "Highway to Heaven."

French, the son of a Hollywood stunt man, says the role of Mark Gordon on "Highway" is the closest to himself that he's ever played. He's also had considerable experience on the stage, as an actor and director, and for 20 years taught classes in acting.

Landon stars in the series as an angel who must prove his worthiness in Heaven by doing good on Earth. French, as a burned-out cop, accompanies him on his journey of good will across the country.

Of his role, French said: "I'm the guy on the street who responds as the audience does. I'm a little sour on the world. He quit the police force because he felt criminals were getting the best of the system. He's closest to me. We share most of the same values. I don't have to make up stuff. The feelings are mine. I'm as moved by injustice, prejudice and pain as he is."

It was his looks that put him on the path to villainy. French, just turned 50, has curly black hair and a "salt and pepper" beard. His large nose looks like it's taken a few blows. There are pouches beneath his hazel eyes. His voice, when he wants it, can be loud and booming.

"Michael was the first to see beyond my looks," he said. "For years I had to look at myself in the mirror and think: This is the face America sees only as a killer or rapist. But inside me was Mr. Edwards and Mark Gordon. There was a lot of anguish in there."

"I still want to play villains now and then. I think Ernie Borgnine and Jack Palace are great villains who have gone on to good guy roles, but I still like to see them play a bad guy now and then."

French grew up in the San Fernando Valley, which until a few years ago was where most of the movie Westerns were made.

"I'd wander through the vacant lots when I was a kid looking for enough Coke bottles to make 14 cents so I could get into the Saturday Western matinee," he said. French, a self-described "B Western nut," has a portrait, a full-length photo and a horseback picture of "every guy who did a Western."

His father, Ted French, started riding in Westerns when he was 16 at the Flying A Movie Studio in Santa Barbara. He doubled for the stars — and occasionally played a villain.

"I've got Buck Jones' hat and Tom Mix's boots," he said. "My den at home is my cowboy room. I live alone so I can put up whatever I want."

French set out to become a stunt man, too, but discovered "theater arts" when he went to college.

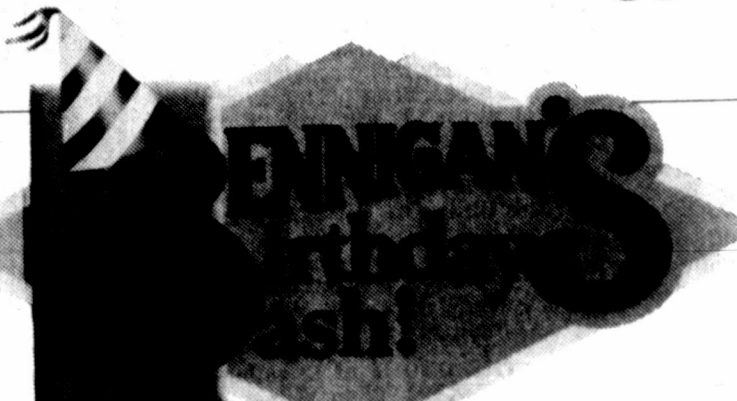

"Acting's not really something you choose," he said. "You'll find that most actors are insecure human beings. Most have some crisis of identity. They don't know who they are so they role-play. I was terrible. I didn't know who I was or what I was supposed to be."

French said he avoids the Hollywood crowd and doesn't like to hang out with other actors. "I like to spend my time with the people I'm called upon to play," he said.

"I'm bothered, too, with the message that television sends out to young people, that the way to solve problems is through violence," he said.

MONEY

Dollar down

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell sharply in light European trading early today ahead of the publication of two key U.S. economic indicators. Gold prices rose.

Dealers said the dollar continued a downward trend which in the past five trading days has brought it to its lowest levels in almost a year. In Paris, it plummeted to 8,8200 French francs, its lowest level since last Aug. 29, from 8,9450 francs late Thursday.

U.S. retail prices and the U.S. producer price index for June were to be published today. Dealers said they were anticipating a 0.3 percent decline in retail sales after a 0.8 percent fall in May. But the producer price index was expected to have risen by 0.2 percent in June, dealers said.

In London, the British pound strengthened despite expectations that British banks would cut base interest rates today by 0.5 of a percentage point to 12 percent and Mexico's decision to cut its oil prices. Britain is the world's fifth largest oil producer.

The pound sterling has gained 10 cents in the past two weeks, helped by relatively high interest rates. It cost $1.3855 to buy one pound, more expensive than $1.3820 late Thursday.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell to 242.80 Japanese yen, a seven-month low, from 242.95 yen at Thursday's close. Later in London, it fell further to 241.85 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late rates Thursday, were: 2,9035 West German marks, down from 2,9410; 2,4205 Swiss francs, down from 2,45825; 3,28425 Dutch guilders, down from 3,3140; 1,883.00 Italian lire, down from 1,894.00; and 1,3536 Canadian dollars, down from 1,3540.

Gold prices rose, apparently in response to the dollar's weakness, dealers said.

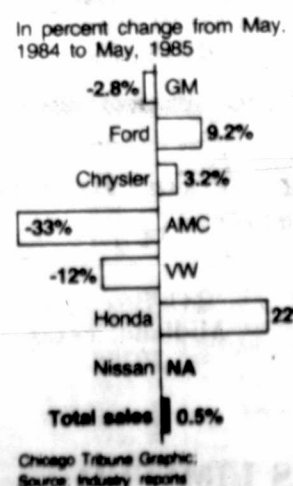

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $314 an ounce, compared with late Thursday's $314.40. At mid-morning Thursday, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $315.05.

In Zurich, the bid price was $315, up from $313.50 bid late Thursday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose the equivalent of 58 cents to close at a bid $315.14.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $6.05 an ounce, up from Thursday's late bid of $6.01.

New car sales in the U.S.

Retail sales make largest drop in 11 months

Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales fell a sharp 0.8 percent in June, the biggest decline in 11 months, the government reported today.

Consumer spending has been a driving force behind the current economic recovery and the disappointing June sales performance was likely to spur fears about the durability of that recovery.

The Commerce Department said that retail sales totaled $113.9 billion in June, compared to $114.8 billion in May sales. All the figures are seasonally adjusted.

The 0.8 percent June decline, which followed a 0.5 percent May setback, stemmed from weakness in sales of durable goods such as cars and household appliances and furniture.

The June decline was the third setback in the past four months and the largest decrease since a 1.4 percent drop last July.

The weakness in consumer sales is coming at a time when overall economic growth has also slowed. The economy during the first half of 1985 has grown at a weak annual pace of 1.7 percent, far below the 4 percent rate which the Reagan administration had been predicting when the year began.

While the administration and some private economists are expecting that growth will pick up in the second half of the year, they could take little comfort in the weak June sales figure and other recent business barometers pointing to a sluggish economy.

Car sales were down 1.5 percent in June after a 1 percent May decline.

Sales of furniture and other home furnishings were down an even steeper 4.6 percent while sales at hardware and building supply stores declined 2.3 percent in June.

In all, sales of durable goods, items expected to last three or more years, dropped 2.1 percent during the month while sales of non-durable goods remained unchanged.

In the non-durable category, sales at department stores fell 1.2 percent while sales at gasoline service stations declined 1.2 percent.

These declines were offset somewhat by a 0.7 percent gain in sales at grocery stores, a 2 percent increase at specialty clothing stores and a 0.5 percent gain in restaurant business.

The government report followed release Thursday of information from the nation's major retailers, who also reported disappointing sales in June. Analysts blamed the weak performance on sluggish consumer demand and unseasonably cool weather, which dampened demand for air conditioners and summer clothing.

Agency offers Texans low-interest home loans

AUSTIN (AP) — Low- and moderate-income Texans will have access to about $176 million in lower-interest home loan money beginning July 29.

The mortgage money will be offered to qualified homebuyers at a fixed 9.75 percent interest rate for 30 years.

The funds are being made available through the Texas Housing Agency in cooperation with lending institutions across the state.

Gov. Mark White said Thursday the program should help homebuyers, builders and the general economy.

"This statewide program will help meet the tremendous consumer demand for affordable homes and strengthen the Texas economy by promoting new construction and sales of existing homes," White said.

The housing agency said the program in most areas of the state will be for persons who haven't owned a home at any time during the past three years.

The agency has established maximum income limits and a ceiling on home prices "to direct the program more effectively to households least able to afford conventional interest rates," the agency said in a statement.

An individual applicant must have an adjusted gross income in 1984 of $33,000 or less. The combined income limit for two or more individuals, or for a family, is $42,000.

According to agency officials, lenders will begin accepting applications on July 29 for mortgage loans on homes costing less than $80,000.

Applications on homes priced higher than $80,000 will be accepted beginning Aug. 5. However, for the first 60 days of the program, lenders are required to give priority to applicants buying homes costing less than $80,000.

The Texas Housing Agency was created in 1979 to provide more affordable financing for low- and moderate-income homebuyers.

Its loans are financed through the sale of tax-exempt bonds.

Nearly 10,000 Texans have purchased homes since the program began in 1980. Current program funds are expected to finance the purchase of approximately 3,000 houses.

Levi says descendants may make $1.1 billion buyout bid

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Descendants of the founder of Levi Strauss & Co., the world's largest apparel maker, are considering making a $1.1 billion buyout offer that would make the 132-year-old company a family business again.

The company announced Thursday that its president and chief executive, Robert Haas, a great-grandnephew of Levi Strauss, was considering offering $50 per share in a leveraged buyout in which the company's assets would be used as collateral to borrow money to finance the purchase.

The descendants of Levi Strauss already own 40 percent of the company's 37.1 million shares.

The company has been plagued for more than a year with relatively stagnant sales, forcing it to close 23 facilities and cut its workforce from 44,000 to 37,000.

"The proposal would have the effect of returning ownership of the company to the families which are descendants of Levi Strauss, the company's founder," the company said in its brief announcement.

The company also said that Strauss' descendants, who hold some of the company's top executive positions and four seats on its 17-member board, would support the buyout offer.

The company made the statement after asking Thursday morning that trading in its shares be halted on the New York Stock Exchange.

After trading resumed later in the day, Levi's stock value soared by $8.50 to $42.50 as 435,500 shares changed hands in composite trading.

During the six months ended May 26, the company's net income more than doubled to $45.6 million, or $1.23 per share, from $17.2 million, or 43 cents per share, a year earlier. However, income for the first half of 1984 included a writedoff of $24.5 million for plant closings.

The company's sales dipped by five percent to $1.13 billion for the six months in 1985.

Levi's sales reached their peak in the early 1980s with annual sales of $2.8 billion.

The Levi company was founded in 1853 by a tentmaker who decided to use some of his material to make rugged pants for prospectors looking for gold in Northern California's mountains. Besides the traditional jeans, the company now makes a wide variety of sportswear for men, women and children that is marketed under the Levi label, among others.

Haas, who has been president since 1964 and served as chief executive and other top positions previously, owns about 1 percent of the company's stock.

His father, Walter Haas Jr., chairman of the company's executive committee, owns 8 percent of the stock; his uncle Peter E. Haas, Levi's chairman, owns 9 percent; and his aunt, Rhoda Goldman, owns 4 percent. Those three, along with Robert Haas, are on the company's board.

Robert Haas' grandmother, Elise Haas, owns 7 percent of the company, and another 11 percent is owned by other descendants.

Jeffrey K. Lyons has been named President of the Permian Basin Personnel Association. Lyons is a Human Resource Consultant with Elcor Corporation and has served on the BPBA Board since 1983. A graduate of Purdue University, he has worked as a personnel vice president and management consultant for the past 15 years.

Serving personnel and industrial relations professionals since 1979, the BPBA is a chapter of The American Society for Personnel Administration, representing 34,000 members nationally. The local association organizes personnel seminars and conducts monthly program meetings on human resource management issues.

Lyons spoke recently at an officer induction ceremony about the Association's purpose and operating strategy. He said, "Our ongoing mission is to provide for the professional development of our members. A key strategy to achieve this next year is to invest more of our association's resources back into the business community. By helping local organizations apply the latest human resource technologies to hire, motivate and develop their employees, we can provide development experiences for BPBA members while producing practical results for area employers."

"Later, as we see that our Association's time, people and financial resources are helping employers achieve their goals, we can expect a

Extension granted in Dodge case

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The National Labor Relations Board has given striking Arizona copper unions more time to file objections to a hearing officer's recommendation that the results of decertification elections be upheld, the agency said Thursday.

Earle Robbins, an NLRB administrative law judge, had recommended June 28 that the board uphold October 1984 decertification elections in which non-striking Phelps Dodge workers voted overwhelmingly to oust 13 striking unions as their bargaining agents. Participants were given 15 days from the June 28 ruling to file objections to seek a review of the case by the full board, but NLRB spokeswoman Iliff McMahan said Thursday in Washington that the unions had been given an extension until July 25 to file objections.

Milo Price, NLRB regional director in Phoenix, had previously accepted Ms. Robbins' recommendations if no objections were filed.

The unions went on strike July 1, 1983 over economic issues after the company, citing low copper prices and the continuing slump in the copper industry, demanded concessions in talks on a new contract.

AMERICAN INVESTOR'S GUIDE Check out benefits of direct deposit

By BILL DOYLE. I have three bonds issued by a telephone company. These are registered in my name and pay interest on October 1 and April 1. I have owned two of the bonds for a number of years and purchased the third on April 13, 1964.

The interest checks are supposed to be deposited directly in my bank account. My bank says it has received the interest checks for the first two bonds but denies receiving the interest for the third bond. The Forms 1099 I received from the bank that is interest paying agent for the bonds show the interest checks were sent out in 1964.

How can I get the missing interest, which amounts to $62.50? A. Start by contacting the interest paying agent bank. Find out the address to which the missing interest checks were sent and if those checks were cashed.

It may be that the interest checks for your third bond were mailed to the wrong address. If your bank didn't receive those checks, it couldn't credit the interest to your account.

If that's the story, those two checks most likely have been returned to the paying agent bank. Have them sent to your bank. There's a possibility that the checks were mailed properly and someone at your local bank goofed by not crediting the two missing interest payments to your account. In that case, your bank should straighten things out.

Direct deposit of interest, dividend, payroll and Social Security checks is gaining in popularity. Increasingly, as with SS checks, it's done by electronic funds transfer — by wire, without paper checks being written.

Direct deposit is a good thing, because there's no delay in deposit and, usually, no worries about loss. Foul-ups such as you encountered are mighty rare.

I own several tax-free municipal bonds in "bearer" form, which my broker is holding. The brokerage firm clips the interest coupons as they come due and credits the money to my account.

My banker says this is risky and the bonds could disappear if the brokerage has serious financial problems. He strongly urges me to take possession of the bonds and keep them in my safe deposit box.

The broker says this is foolish, as I have confirmation slips showing I purchased the bonds and the bonds are listed on the monthly statements I receive. He also says I might miss a "call" and lose interest.

What do you say? A. I go along with the broker. Bonds and any other securities you leave with a brokerage firm are covered by Securities Investor Protection Corp. up to $500,000. Many brokerages provide additional coverage, written by private insurance companies.

In the unlikely event that brokerage firm goes bankrupt, you would get your bonds. SIPC hasn't failed investors since it was set up by act of Congress in 1970.

Your broker makes another good point about calls. Many investors who have possession of bearer bonds don't find out that their bonds have been called for early redemption until they try to redeem an interest coupon six months later. As a result, they lose the interest and the use of their money for at least half a year.

Leaving your bearer bonds with a brokerage firm eliminates that problem, because brokerages watch out for calls and redeem the bonds for their customers.

Q. My broker suggests I move most of what I have in a bank money market deposit account to a money market mutual fund. He claims I would get a higher yield. Is this true? A. Probably. The dividends paid on most money market mutual funds do result in higher yields than the interest paid on most money market deposit accounts.

Technically, a money market deposit account at a bank with Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. coverage or at a savings and loan association with Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. coverage is safer than a money market mutual fund.

However, money market mutual funds use accounting methods that keep the values of their shares constant — at $1 per share, in most cases. Money market mutual funds are virtually risk free.

Japanese firm charged with import violations

HOUSTON (AP) — A subsidiary of a huge Japanese trading company has been charged in federal court with violating import laws by overstating prices of steel shipments, federal authorities said.

C. Itoh & Co., a wholly-owned subsidiary of the import-export company itself, was charged Thursday with nine counts of making false intentions to the U.S. Customs Service.

The criminal information filed by the U.S. Justice Department in Houston charges that C. Itoh & Co. overstated the selling price of nine shipments containing steel coils, wide flange beams, iron coils and nails by a total of about $100,000.

The false statements about the prices of the shipments enabled the company to bypass U.S. laws designed to protect the domestic steel industry from imports priced too cheaply, officials told the Houston Chronicle.

Such laws prevent illegal pricing practices known as steel dumping. The false statements were made to customs officials in Texas between March and October 1981, according to the information filed.

Asst. U.S. Attorney Nancy Holley said the company has agreed in a plea bargain to plead guilty to all the charges. The company will be sentenced in August before U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald, she said.

Hanna Co. sells 60 percent of its ownership

CLEVELAND (AP) — The M.A. Hanna Co. said Thursday that it has sold 60 percent of its ownership interest in WellTech Inc., a Houston-based oil and gas well servicing company, to WellTech's co-owner, Bechtel Investments Inc.

The sale is part of a previously announced restructuring effort intended to improve Hanna's performance in its coal, oil and gas businesses, the announcement said. The sale lowers Hanna's interest in WellTech to about 20 percent from almost 50 percent.

The company refused to give the terms of the deal, but the announcement noted that the company had accounted for a loss on the transaction when in early June it announced a second quarter non-recurring loss of $131 million related to restructuring.

"The agreement represents a step forward in our effort to reduce Hanna's investment in the severely depressed domestic energy markets," Hanna Chairman Robert F. Anderson said in a prepared statement.

Texas Supreme Court lets stand appeals ruling on oil lease

AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court let stand an appeals court ruling in a dispute from Andrews County over the interpretation of termination provision in an oil and gas lease.

The trial court had held for the leasees, Charles L. Walker and others, but the El Paso Court of Appeals reversed, holding for the lessor, Marvin M. Fisher, Jr., the executor of the estate of Nola Fisher.

The 1976 lease involved production from the Yates formation and was generally a standard lease, except for the disputed language on termination, the appeals court reported.

The Supreme Court ruled "no reversible error" had been made, but did not issue a new opinion.

FAA expected to approve air park relocation by August

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Approval from the Federal Aviation Administration, Department of the Interior and Environmental Protection Agency on a master plan for relocating Midland Air Park to a site northeast of the city is expected by mid-August, according to Midland aviation officials.

A final public meeting on the master plan for Air Park was held Thursday in City Hall Council Chambers, with representatives from the engineering firm of Daniel, Mann, Johnson & Mendenhall explaining their proposal.

The public hearings and planning are on schedule, according to Aviation Director Victor White. "We're exactly on schedule from when we hired them (DMJM) last fall. We hope that's a good sign."

Construction will be done on a "fast track" method, he said, with it divided into phases. Plans and specifications will go out for bids according to phases with the first part to be ready for bids this fall. Construction should start in February or March with completion scheduled for late spring 1987 "if there are no hitches," he said.

"A lot of earth has to be moved out there for the paving," White said.

Once phase I is completed and Air Park has been moved to the new site, the city of Midland can begin selling land at the current site, he added.

In Thursday's hearing, Wayne K. San Filippo, chief civil engineer with DMJM, and Ray Landy, project manager, showed the layout for the new Air Park, including location for the runways, hangars, fixed-base operators and offices. The master plan details where additional hangars, parking areas and roads should be located during future expansion.

Councilman Gordon Marcum II asked about the cost of building new hangars vs. moving the current ones out to the new site. Filippo said the plan calls for moving the old hangars, with the exception of one old hangar.

In the Executive Summary prepared by DMJM, it was noted that "examination of the existing Midland Air Park reveals a facility that is currently in poor shape with respect to airfield conditions. The runways are deteriorating and their length is insufficient for utilization by larger general aviation aircraft. The land-side portion of the Air Park, presently underutilized, had, however, reached capacity in 1982, during the recent boom."

Their evaluation showed the number of aircraft based at Air Park to increase at a rate of 5 percent a year, reaching a high of 290 by the year 2004.

The report also substantiated the City Council's actions to move Air Park to the site northeast of the city. Air Park "has become encircled by rapid development that has eliminated vacant areas for future expansion. These vacant areas also acted as buffer zones around the airport. And to handle the expected increasing number of larger aircraft, longer runways would be needed."

The city obtained the site, containing about 2,600 acres that spill over into Martin County, through a land trade with the owner. In exchange, the owner received about 90 acres of Air Park and Midland Regional Air Terminal land.

White said the federal agencies haven't found anything of significant impact on the site that would cause them to reject the plan.

Filippo said the planning process "has gone well. It's generated input from the community."

Southwestern Bell executive explains expansion, rate hike

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland has "turned the corner" in its economic recovery through a pooling of "resources and talents to ensure plans for economic diversification," James "Jim" Adams, president of the Texas Division of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., told the Midland Rotary Club on Thursday in the Midland Center.

And the telephone company, as a vital part of that plan and its partnership in the Midland economy, is investing millions of dollars here in its tele-communications system.

"Just as Midland, and the rest of Texas, must have adequate water resources, good highways, and a solid educational system to attract business," Adams said, "so, too, it must have a first-rate tele-communications infrastructure."

And since 1980, Southwestern Bell has spent almost $100 million in Midland and Odessa in developing a communications system "of unsurpassed quality." Statewide, Southwestern Bell has budgeted more than $1 billion "to expand and modernize" its telephone facilities and has invested that much each year for the past eight years, he said.

"Quality communications doesn't come cheap," he said.

And to ensure the company has the revenue to expand and to maintain quality service, Southwestern Bell is asking the Public Utility Commission of Texas for an increase in local monthly rates, Adams said. Hearings on that request are under way.

IN MIDLAND, the basic monthly rate per customer would be increased by $1.50 to $1.60, which would hike the basic rate from $8.80 to $10.30 or $10.40 per month.

"Our objective is to do the best we can," Adams said. "We need the dollars to meet the growth... We can't continue spending a billion dollars a year without adequate rate relief... What Texans need is quality tele-communications."

Across the state, the proposed rate hike would increase basic service rates from $8.15 to $11.05 a month.

The rate request stems from the nationwide American Telephone & Telegraph Co. divestiture by which Southwestern Bell lost the long-distance revenues which "historically subsidized local service."

Today, Southwestern Bell's local-exchange business generates its revenue.

In Midland, the basic monthly rate per customer would be increased by $1.50 to $1.60, which would hike the basic rate from $8.80 (per month) to $10.30 or $10.40 per month.

Adams noted the "great temptation" by regulators to keep local rates artificially low by charging long-distance companies artificially high rates.

Southwestern Bell's ability to build and maintain a "first-rate tele-communications (system) for Texas will be seriously hampered" without increased revenues, he said.

Nevertheless, Southwestern Bell's management and work force have "become experts at living within our means." He cited saving by the reduction of the company's Texas work force through attrition, the limiting of overtime and the implementation of mechanization and software.

"BUT ONE THING we haven't cut back on is our service," Adams said. "Here in Midland, service levels continue to improve."

Adams noted the resurgence in the Midland economy in the wake of the decline of the recent oil boom.

"Certainly, the area has seen some trying times," Adams said. "As a town geared so strongly to oil, you know too well the associated economic highs and lows of the petroleum industry."

Midlanders have "rolled up your sleeves and charted a new course for recovery" instead of just "riding out the slow times and waiting for a resurgence in oil to stimulate the economy."

Adams cited: — The more than 90 Midland companies involved in the manufacture of "everything from semi-conductors and electronics to dairy products and household goods."

— Midland's growing reputation as a "communications-and-data-processing center."

— The upswing in retail sales.

— Improvement in the local "employment picture."

— The ranking of Midland as fourth statewide in the "quality of life" among Texas's 52 largest cities. Only Austin, San Antonio and Dallas are ranked higher in the survey conducted by The University of Texas at Arlington.

— The evidence of a "new spirit of partnership and cooperation" emerging between Midland and Odessa.

"WORKING TOGETHER will certainly enhance the opportunity to achieve the economic goals you've outlined for yourselves," Adams said.

And Southwestern Bell Telephone Company wants to be considered a "partner in that quest," he said.

"We stand ready and eager to play a part in your progress and to contribute our resources so that economic stability is achieved," he said.

During the "fast-paced" boom times, Southwestern Bell's challenge was simply keeping up with the growth.

"Now, we're faced with a new challenge... of keeping up with basic growth and accommodating the needs of new businesses," he said.

"The businesses that deal in

micro-electronics and computers thrive on top quality, sophisticated communications," Adams said. "They won't locate where communications are perceived to be inferior."

Odessa officer suspended for 10 days after probe

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — An investigation into the conduct of the head of the Odessa police departments narcotics division has resulted in his suspension from duty for a 10-day period without pay.

Lt. Jerry Don Smith was involved in a traffic accident in the early morning hours of June 26, which resulted in about $5,000 damage to two vehicles parked in front of residences in the 2200-block of East 14th Street.

The investigation, conducted by Internal Affairs Capt. Mitch Haller, concluded that Smith had violated departmental rules by failing to have liability insurance and by being publicly intoxicated the night before the accident.

In addition to the 10-day suspension without pay, Smith was also cited for failing to control his vehicle to avoid an accident.

McCubbin gets 99 years for murder of foreman

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A 161st District Court jury of eight men and four women Thursday determined that 36-year-old Danny Fletcher McCubbin should spend 99 years in prison for the Sept. 5, 1964, murder of 47-year-old Curtis Smith.

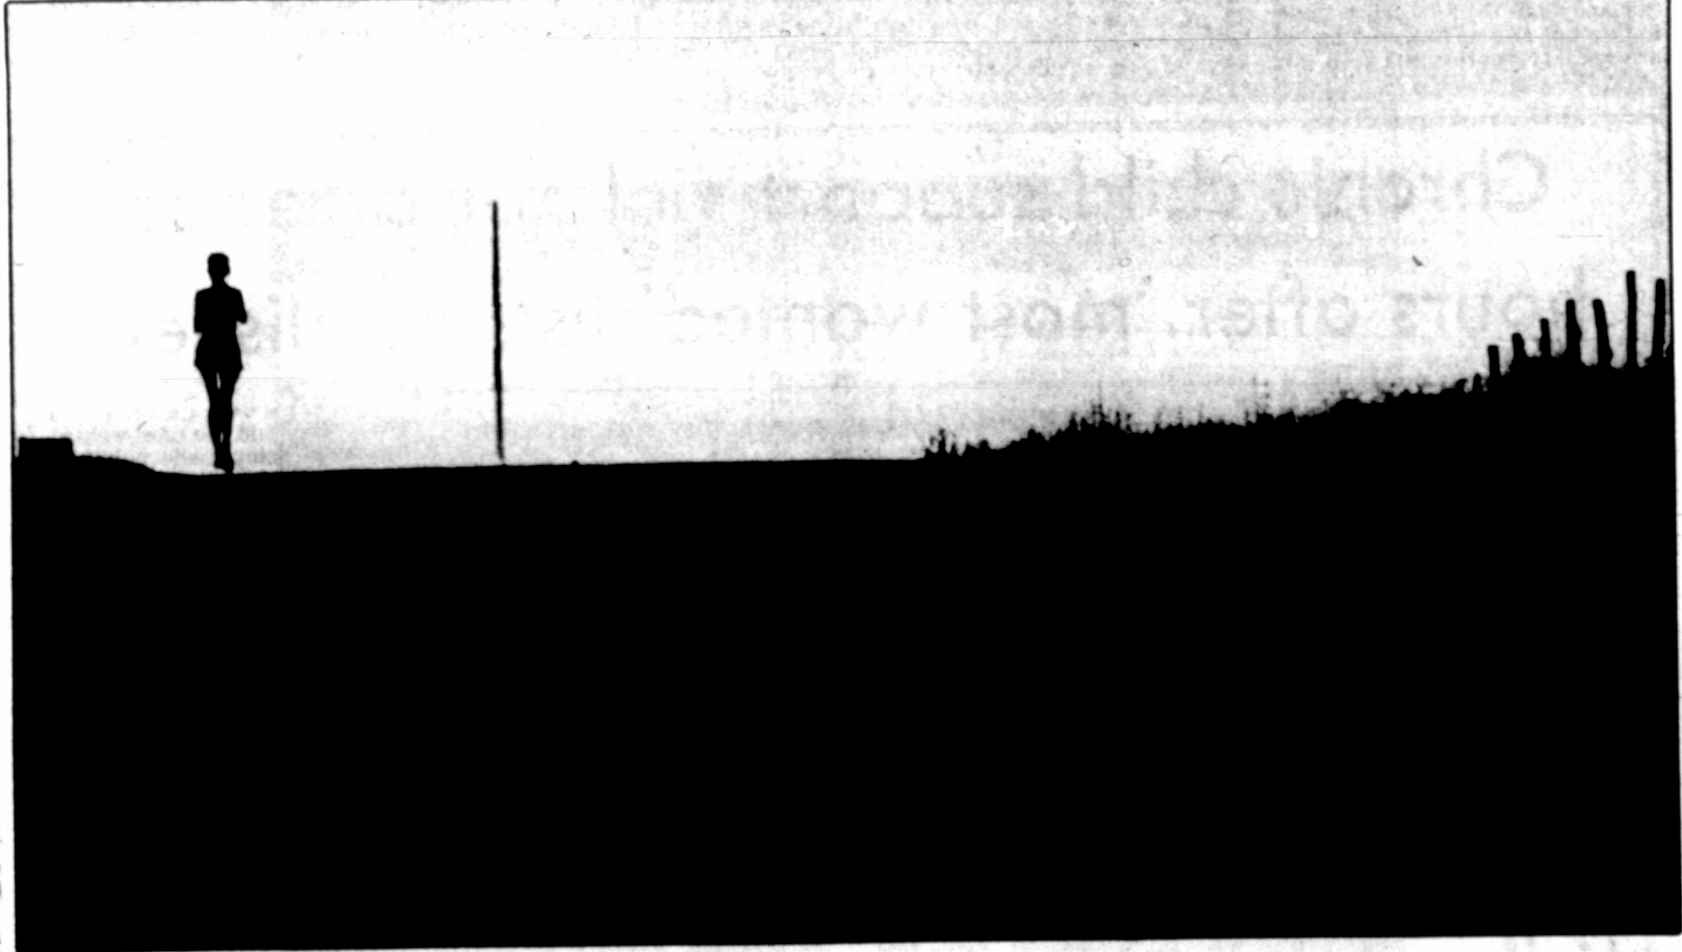

Wednesday afternoon, the jury spent about 25 minutes to find McCubbin guilty of shooting Smith after the operations foreman for Roy's Tong Service had been shot twice with a shotgun by 32-year-old Kenneth Wayne Richards. Richards was convicted in May and was also sentenced to 99 years in prison.

McCubbin, who did not take the witness stand during his two-day trial, appeared unemotional as Judge Tryon Lewis read the jury's sentence determination.

District Attorney Eric Augesen said that while McCubbin's court-appointed attorney, G. David Smith, was calling witnesses during the

Since the 1930s, Stice has watched Midland on the move

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Back in the 1930s, when O.W. Stice opened a grocery store at 122 S. Main St. and built a house at 603 W. Kansas St., his customers were downtown and his residence was out at the city's perimeter.

But the town kept growing, and by the early 1970s most Midlanders were living far from the downtown area, which itself had expanded almost to Stice's back door. His Kansas Street address was now considered downtown, but his customers had fled to the new shopping centers out on the perimeter.

"I thought I was out in the country," he said in a recent interview.

"Now I open up my back door and there's a 12-story building in my back yard."

Stice and his wife Ruby still live in the house they built 48 years ago, but he closed the Cash and Carry Grocery and Market in 1973.

At the time, the Reporter-Telegram noted that three generations of Midlanders had shopped at his store.

"About all Stice could muster to counter the modern competition was offering name-brand groceries at fair prices in a casual, uncrowded atmosphere, and doing business on a first-hand, first-name basis for folks who preferred it that way over self-service savings and lines at the checkout counter," the article said.

Someone asked Stice if he was

"I thought I was out in the country. Now I open up my back door and there's a 12-story building in my back yard."

— O.W. Stice, owner of former Cash and Carry Grocery and Market retiring.

"That's the $64,000 question," he said. "I can't just sit around...but I'm not sure how things will work out."

As it turned out, he didn't retire. Figuring if you can't beat 'em, join 'em, Stice went to work for Gibson's. Declining any positions of responsibility — "I had that long enough" — he sacked groceries at the Cuthbert store until it closed a few months back.

"He was just crushed when it closed," said Ruby Stice, but she added that at 63, her husband might finally be ready for retirement.

Stice came to Midland in 1928 from Brownsville, to haul mail between here and Lovington, N.M., in a Model T. In 1933 he started his grocery in an old M System building across from the Hotel Scharbauer.

There were some bad times during the Depression, when Stice cashed paychecks for City of Midland employees only to have them bounce. But business boomed during World War II, when the Cash and Carry Grocery was cashing paychecks from a somewhat more reliable employer: the U.S. Army.

"It was fantastic," Mrs. Stice said of the business Stice enjoyed from trainees at the Army Air Corps bombardier school at Midland Airfield.

"That's when he really prospered."

"And I had the Scharbauer Hotel trade," Stice added.

But the city was changing from the small town the Stices had found when they arrived from Brownsville. "As the town grew and shopping centers began to build up, (business) just kept on dwindling away," Mrs. Stice said.

"It's changed quite a bit," said Stice. "What hurt me was you couldn't get parking space (downtown)."

Like other retailers, Stice found the downtown area increasingly uncongenial to his type of business, so eventually he closed up shop. But many of his old customers who don't even know the name of their current grocer still remember Stice, and greet him warmly when they see him around town.

"That's what has kept me alive," he said. "I love Midland — I wouldn't live any place else."

El Paso woman ill from California melon

EL PASO (AP) — A 67-year-old woman fell ill after eating two slices of a California watermelon, health officials here said.

The woman became sick after eating the watermelon Saturday, but was "doing fine" Thursday, said Dr. Laurance Nickey, director of the El Paso City-County Health Department.

Nickey said that 5,300 pounds of California watermelons have been picked up at El Paso stores and destroyed. He said no more melons from the state remain.

Contamination of watermelons with the insecticide Aldicarb was blamed for an outbreak of illness in California. Symptoms include profuse sweating, headache and nausea.

An 80-year-old man is the city's second "suspect case," Nickey said. Meanwhile, a California-manufactured brand of cheese was being pulled from the shelves of El Paso stores because cheese from the company was shown to contain the same germ responsible for 51 deaths in California last month.

But state health officials in Austin said Thursday that no cases of listeriosis have been linked in Texas to the third brand of cheese that has been recalled from grocery shelves after reports of illness in other areas.

The cheese, manufactured by Cacique Fine Foods of California, is distributed in Texas through warehouses in Houston and Dallas.

Robert Henna of the health department's Food and Drug Division said city, state and federal inspectors were working with Cacique Cheese of Texas, located in Houston, and Rudy's Food Products in Dallas to determine what stores may have stocked the cheese.

"Consumers are warned not to eat affected cheese carrying earlier expiration dates," Henna said in a statement.

Rudy Guerra, of Rudy's Food Products, said his firm sought the removal of Cacique dairy products from 40 Dallas-area stores as a precautionary measure. The products should have been off the shelves by Thursday, he said.

No chain stores sell the cheese, he said. About 3,000 pounds of the various Cacique brand products were distributed weekly, mostly to small neighborhood grocery stores in predominantly Hispanic neighborhoods.

Midlander, 83, listed fair after two-vehicle crash

From Staff Reports

An 83-year-old Midlander man injured Thursday in an accident on Andrews Highway was listed in fair condition in Midland Memorial Hospital this morning, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Roy Thomas Williams, Route 3, Box 470, was injured about 11:30 a.m. when his 1982 Ford LTD collided with a 1981 Silverado pickup driven by Suzann Thiel, 4400 Holiday Hill Road, according to police reports. Williams was cited for failing to yield the right of way in the accident, which occurred near the intersection of Andrews Highway and Kansas Avenue.

In other reports, a 1970 Ford Torino worth $2,500 was reported stolen by Jay Watson, Route 4, Box 15A. Watson, who owns Watson Automotive, told sheriff's deputies the car was taken from his shop yard on the Rankin Highway south of Interstate 20 sometime between Wednesday and Thursday, reports said.

A $1,695 man's gold ring with diamonds was reported stolen Thursday by Kenneth D. Lett, 3710 Anetta. Lett told police the theft occurred in an apartment at 3601 Andrews Highway.

Carroll Nail, 409 N. F St., reported the loss of two lawnmowers, a weed-eater and an extension cord, with a total value of about $542, in a Thursday burglary.

Two starters worth $500 each were reported stolen from a backhoe tractor by James Brothers Construction. The starters were taken sometime between Wednesday and Thursday from a job site at County Road 1150 and FM 307, reports said.

Oldest grad of UT dies

AUSTIN (AP) — Services for Carl Widen, the oldest living University of Texas graduate before his death this week, were scheduled for Saturday in Austin.

Widen, who was graduated from UT in 1902, died Wednesday at age 101.

The attorney general on Wednesday said the most-wanted lists were being made public to help focus attention on fathers who are failing to pay child support and to solicit the public's help in finding the violators.

"The Fort Worth office has received tips on two other individuals on the list and currently is checking out those tips," he said.

The lists have been compiled for several areas around the state, with more on the way, officials said.

"I hate to see a man go to jail, but more than that I hate the fact that children are not being properly cared for by their parents," Mattox said.

punishment arguments, McCubbin stood up and informed the court he did not want any more witnesses called, that he did not want his wife, who was present throughout the trial, to see the photographs of the murder scene.

Early in the trial, Augesen had introduced several photographs taken by Ector County sheriff's crime scene investigators. The photos left nothing to the imagination as to the brutality of the killing.

Defense attorney Smith characterized McCubbin as having been victimized by Richards during punishment arguments, but Augesen told jurors he was convinced McCubbin shot Smith with three .38-caliber pistol shots to the head, after Richards had shot Smith twice with a shotgun.

McCubbin "burrowed deep down into Mr. Smith's brain and snuffed out the life that God gave him," Augesen told jurors. "There is no way Smith could have been a threat to McCubbin or anybody else," said Augesen.

"They went out to rob Curtis Smith and in the process they killed him," the district attorney told the court.

Next-in-line on death row wants stay

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — The next Texas death row inmate scheduled to die by lethal injection wants an attorney to help him get an execution stay.

"I don't want to die. If an attorney tells me we can beat this case in five to six years, then of course I'll take it," convicted killer John Michael Lamb, 27, said Wednesday.

Bruce Griffiths, an attorney with the American Civil Liberties Union in Houston, said he has not found an attorney to represent Lamb, but hopes to have one by the end of this week.

"There are more cases now than a couple years ago and less of a chance of success" in getting a stay, Griffiths said. Once an attorney handles an execution appeal, "you don't want to do it again," he added.

Lamb, a California drifter scheduled to die July 22, received the death penalty for the Nov. 8, 1982 robbery and shooting death of a man in a Greenville motel room. He fled to Florida in the victim's car, but was arrested and returned to Texas.

Attorney General Jim Mattox said Tuesday that Lamb probably will be successful in obtaining a stay if he wants one.

The execution date is the first one set for Lamb.

The inmate has maintained he is innocent and that he was convicted because his court-appointed attorneys did not represent him properly.

Chronic child support violator arrested hours after 'most wanted' lists published

AUSTIN (AP) — A Fort Worth man was arrested within hours after a list of chronic child support violators was published, and Attorney General Jim Mattox says that convinces him a new "most-wanted" list program will work.

"The fact that the one newspaper in the state which ran the list of names got us some immediate action makes me believe even more firmly that the most-wanted list program will be a success," Mattox said Thursday.

Mattox unveiled his most-wanted lists on Wednesday, asking the news media to help publicize violators in several Texas cities.

The lists (of seriously delinquent child support violators) have been compiled for several areas around the state, with more on the way, officials said.

Within hours of publication of names by the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, one man was arrested in that city, Mattox said.

About 8:15 a.m. Thursday, a newspaper reader in Fort Worth recognized the name of a Fort Worth man and notified the attorney general's regional office there.

Mattox said a warrant was issued for James Thomas Brackeen, 26, who allegedly is at least $4,070 behind in child support payments for his 6-year-old son.

Mattox said court records indicate Brackeen hasn't made a child support payment since 1982. The man was arrested about 11 a.m.

The man was being held in the Tarrant County jail for contempt of court by failing to make the payments. A judge will hear the case and determine what steps should be taken to make certain the payments are made, Mattox said.

Alcoholism is treatable, but incurable, disease

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

If you are among those who think that your father or mother or husband or, heaven forbid, yourself cannot be an alcoholic because an alcoholic is somebody with a dirty overcoat and a beard, who smells bad and sleeps under newspapers on a park bench, you've got another think coming.

There are an estimated 10 to 12 million alcoholics in the United States, and the roster includes executives, children, doctors, bus drivers, lawyers, factory workers, secretaries and others who look and act just like you. Alcoholism costs the United States $117 billion a year in lost work time, family breakups, illness and premature death, estimates the National Council on Alcoholism (NCA).

Just under half the population — about 100 million Americans — drink alcohol, NCA says, and 10 million to 12 million of these drinkers are alcoholic. Only 15 percent of them are receiving treatment.

And for every alcoholic, NCA says, four other people directly suffer consequences.

AN ALCOHOLIC, says the NCA, is someone whose drinking causes a continuing problem in any area of his or her life. The council defines alcoholism as a chronic, progressive and potentially fatal disease characterized by tolerance and physical de-

Quiz can reveal drinking problem

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

You're not an alcoholic, right? These 12 questions can help you decide if you have a drinking problem.

1. Have you ever decided to stop drinking for a week or so, but only lasted for a couple of days? — Yes — No
2. Do you wish people would mind their own business about your drinking and stop telling you what to do? — Yes — No
3. Have you ever switched from one kind of drink to another in the hope that this would keep you from getting drunk? — Yes — No
4. Have you had to have an eye-opener upon awakening during the past year? — Yes — No
5. Do you envy people who can drink without getting into trouble? — Yes — No
6. Have you had problems connected with drinking during the past year? — Yes — No
7. Has your drinking caused trouble at home? — Yes — No

8. Do you ever try to get "extra" drinks at a party because you do not get enough? — Yes — No

9. Do you tell yourself you can stop drinking any time you want to, even though you keep getting drunk when you don't mean to? — Yes — No

10. Have you missed days of work or school because of drinking? — Yes — No

11. Do you have "blackouts"? — Yes — No

12. Have you ever felt that your life would be better if you did not drink? — Yes — No

Only you can decide whether you are an alcoholic. But here's how to score this self test:

(These questions are adapted from the pamphlet "Is AA for You," 1973 Alcoholics Anonymous World Services Inc., New York.)

pendency on alcohol or internal changes from alcohol ingestion, or both.

Each year, about 95,000 Americans of all ages die as a direct or indirect result of alcohol, says Christine Lubinski of the NCA in Washington, D.C. Cirrhosis of the liver kills 30,000 yearly. Alcoholism and alcoholic psychosis cost another 5,000 lives. Accidents, homicides and alcohol-related suicides kill 60,000 a year.

There's a lot of chicken-and-egg argument about alcoholism and behavior connected with it, but some general agreement: It is not a moral infirmity or a weakness; it is a disease, and it is treatable.

BUT IT IS NOT curable, says Dr. George Kolodner, a psychiatrist who heads Washington's Kolmac Clinic, an outpatient treatment center for alcoholism. And because there is no cure, Kolodner advocates abstinence.

"It's not like a broken leg that you can stay off for a while and then walk again," he says.

"I also tell people that there'll be a 'cure' in the newspapers every six to eight months, but that you ought to hold off taking that cure until the person who has devised it has won the Nobel Prize. You can bet that if a cure is ever discovered, the person who does it will get the Nobel Prize."

Unlike social drinking, Kolodner says, alcoholic drinking tends to be self-perpetuating. "I had a guy walk in this morning," Kolodner said recently, "who said he didn't think he was an alcoholic because 'I don't drink every day, but once I start I can't stop.' I said, 'Right, you've got the disease of alcoholism.'"

"It's not what you drink or when, but what happens after you take the first drink, and that's what separates the alcoholic from the nonalcoholic."

IT'S NOT SURPRISING that alcoholism treatment is big business. Americans spend about $1.3 billion each year on such programs, says John Noble, deputy director of the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism (NIAAA) in Rockville, Md. Treatment programs typically fall into three categories: programs within hospitals, residential programs at specialized treatment centers and outpatient programs — or some combination of those.

One kind of treatment option is offered by Comprehensive Care Corp., known as CompCare, which controls 27.3 percent of the alcoholism and drug treatment in the private sector, according to spokesman Ken Estes.

Headquartered in Newport Beach, Calif., CompCare has contracts for more than 110 treatment programs in community hospitals in the United States, plus 17 hospitals owned outright and used solely for the treatment of alcoholism. In the last fiscal year, CompCare grossed $114 million and had profits of $14.1 million, Estes said.

ANOTHER LARGE treatment conglomerate is Recovery Centers of America Inc., which is a wholly owned subsidiary of National Medical Enterprises Inc. of Los Angeles. RCA treats chemical dependency under the name New Beginnings.

Insurance reimbursement is currently in a state of flux, largely because of changes in Medicare coverage for alcoholism treatment.

Tanning parlors unsafe, says AMA

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

If a tanning parlor claims to be safe, it's lying, the American Medical Association has warned.

The sunlamps in the booths give off ultraviolet rays that can cause both skin cancer and damage to the eye's retina, according to an AMA report presented to kick off its annual meeting recently. The report says both ultraviolet wavelengths — A and B — can be damaging.

"Some (tanning parlors) advertise their booths as being so safe that it is not even necessary to wear protective goggles while tanning," the report says. "This statement is simply not true...."

Study suggests autism is genetic

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Autism, the mental disorder that causes children to withdraw and not communicate, is probably genetic, a study of twins suggests.

Researchers in California looked at 40 pairs of twins — 23 identical, 17 fraternal — in which at least one of the two was autistic.

Of the 17 sets of fraternal twins, both siblings were autistic in only four cases. But among the identical twins — who, unlike the fraternal twins, have identical genes — both were autistic in 22 of the 23 sets.

Those figures suggest that the trait is the product of a recessive gene — one that must be carried by both parents for it to be passed on — the Harvard Mental Health Letter reports.

In addition, a higher-than-expected number of the nonautistic twins had some difficulty learning language. The researchers speculate that autism may be a severe form of this language-learning problem.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Older alcoholics drink less

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know some older people who like to drink, but I've never known an older person who showed the serious kinds of problems that younger alcoholics have. Is it possible that older people have learned how to handle their liquor better? — Kenneth, Los Angeles.

Dear Kenneth: Dr. Sheldon Zimberg, of Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York, points out that older individuals, even those who may be considered problem drinkers, generally consume much less alcohol than do younger people. As a result, alcoholism in older people is usually a more subtle condition and has less acute manifestations.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can you please explain how a doctor can tell why a woman has stopped menstruating simply by examining her? With all the late scientific advances that I read about every day, I would think that he would use some of the tests that science has provided him with. Do you agree? — Mrs. W.L., Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Dear Mrs. L.: Tests should be used when indicated, and not used when not indicated. The large majority of women with amenorrhea (cessation of menstruation) can be diagnosed by a physician simply on the basis of a careful history and a thorough physical examination.

For example, simply talking with a patient can reveal whether she has been subject to a stressful period, which may account for the amenorrhea. In such cases, I might ask her about her family, whether there has been a death or serious illness or some other troubling event.

Some of the women I see for the first time have been trying to lose weight on nutritionally inadequate diets. Recent weight loss can alert me to a nutritional basis for the amenorrhea. A history of vigorous participation in athletics would also help explain the disorder.

In all these instances I've cited, extensive testing would be unnecessary and therefore a waste of the patient's time and her money.

For Beverley, Atlanta, Ga.: Smoking, even in the absence of other risk factors, increases the risk of sudden cardiac death about five times.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Parents looking for some answers to son's problems

Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — On lined notebook paper, where innocent doodles once interrupted advanced Spanish and math homework, are the purple-crayon mottoes of a 13-year-old boy:

"Stoners live
Stoners die
But even in heaven
We'll still get high."

The slogans were scrawled by Kevin (not his real name), once an above-average boy who skipped a grade because he was so bright.

But that was the old Kevin. The new one has taken LSD and Quaaludes, run away from home and given the family dog marijuana.

The transformation of Kevin began at 11 years old, the age his parents believe the suburban Redondo Beach youth first smoked marijuana.

In the years since, his mother and stepfather have run into a juvenile nightmare, colliding with bureaucratic walls and legal roadblocks trying to find help for an adolescent gone astray.

Jim and Jane Burdick's story is one of anger and frustration, of losing control of a child who began to control them, and of eventual helplessness in dealing with a son who is incorrigible but who has not felt the weight of the law for his "crimes."

The Burdicks have dealt with police, probation officers, attorneys, psychiatrists, diversion programs, foster homes, private hospitals and a parent support group, only to come up empty.

In a crusade of sorts, they have written letters to everyone — including President Reagan — asking for answers about the kid who once dreamed of being an astronaut but who now admits he has a love affair with drugs.

Kevin's problems first surfaced in December 1983, when he was caught in a marijuana transaction at an elementary school, where he was taking gifted student classes.

He was suspended from school briefly but because it was his first offense and involved a small amount of marijuana, police suggested the 12-year-old get counseling through the South Bay Juvenile Diversion Program.

Kevin began attending sessions with a diversion counselor and a private psychiatrist, and was transferred back to his former elementary school to get him away from a peer group his parents didn't like.

A month later, Jane, 29, a manufacturing planner at TRW, said she came home and found her only child "in a fog," stoned from smoking marijuana in a park.

Within weeks, he was expelled from another elementary school for possession of a hash pipe and his parents tore down his clubhouse after they found marijuana pipes, cigarettes and Playboy magazines inside. Instead of going to Boy Scout meetings, he was keeping the dues money.

In the next months, Kevin was withdrawn from counseling after the therapist said it was a waste of time, put on restriction by his parents, and suspended from high school for being truant 17 days in a month, stealing hall passes and forging notes.

When the family dog started acting strangely, a veterinarian determined the pet had been fed marijuana.

One day, Jim overheard his stepson say "homeboys would take care of" his parents. Without explanation, the couple found an empty gas can on their front porch.

Police were called on several occasions, but they had no authority under juvenile laws to take any action. They could only lecture Kevin.

"We've even been told to lie and say he's committed a crime to get him into the juvenile justice system," said Jim, a 43-year-old electronics company quality-assurance director and Kevin's stepfather for three years.

The couple checked Kevin into hospitals for drug treatment on two occasions, but he ran away from both, leaving them with a bill of $25,000 (which may not all be covered under their insurance plans).

Finally, after the family spent 16 months going around in circles, a juvenile detective agreed to help put Kevin in a temporary foster home until a solution could be worked out.

In those first weeks after Kevin's drug problem surfaced, Jane wishes he would have been "locked up in Juvenile Hall to scare the hell out of him."

Organization founded to help parents, autistic children

Copley News Service

He spoke in simple sentences, while proudly showing off his sketchbook.

"I did the mountains and the flowers and the sky and the clouds," he said in a loud monotone, sharing a simple color drawing with a visitor.

His smile was shy, but friendly. He seemed eager to please, but there was a bridge between himself and the rest of the world that was impossible to cross.

Mark Rimland continued leafing through his book, answering questions with the direct simplicity of a child.

Yet he was not a child. He was a gentle young man with a cruel and baffling learning disability called autism.

"I'm 29 years old," Mark said, when asked his age.

"I draw and paint," he said, when asked about his artwork.

"I enjoy swimming," he said in response to a question about his hobbies.

IT WAS LATE afternoon and Mark Rimland had just come home from school, a special school for him and others like him in El Cajon, Calif.

Moments earlier, his father, Bernard Rimland, said there was always something different about Mark, right from the start.

"The first symptoms were (seen) the day he was born," said Rimland. "He was hyper-alert, looking around as if he could talk."

"And he began to scream, and he screamed incessantly for hours at a time."

Soon, there were other signs that Mark wasn't like other kids.

He would speak in sentences before he was 1 year old, but the sentences were like tape recordings of things he heard. He could parrot a nursery rhyme, but wouldn't ask a question.

Nor did Mark like being touched or held, like other youngsters.

"He was like a robot," Bernard said. "A screaming robot."

AUTISM, COINED FROM the Greek word "autos" or "self," describes a variety of symptoms that include withdrawal from human contact, sensory confusion, parrot-like speech, a compulsion for sameness and repetitive, self-stimulating behavior, such as tapping teeth.

Occasionally, this can escalate to more violent actions, such as head-banging or flesh-biting.

The symptoms are sometimes accompanied by surprising talents, musical ability, a feel for art or a surprising ability to memorize events.

Mark has an uncanny gift for remembering the dates and even the times of events in his life that others would likely forget.

He enjoys art and has sold some of his drawings, his father said.

"He's far beyond what we thought he might possibly be," Bernard said of his son. "When he was 3 or 4 we were told to institutionalize him and that he was totally helpless. He's far from totally helpless."

THERE WAS NO ONE who could help Gloria and Bernard Rimland when they first were confronted with the unusual behavior of their young son.

Mark's pediatrician couldn't find anything physically wrong with the boy; autism wasn't well-known at the time.

"I had a Ph.D. in psychology for five years and I hadn't even heard of autism," Bernard recalled.

"My wife had remembered reading a case history in a textbook when she was in college about a child who walked around repeating nursery rhymes in a hollow monotone. So we tracked down that book and went to the library and saw the listed references for the book."

For the next several years, Rimland devoted his life to finding out everything he could about his son's condition.

WHAT HE FOUND, he said, shocked him.

"I was thunderstruck by the startling ignorance of the so-called experts in the field," he said.

What started out to be a research paper turned into a book called "Infantile Autism," published in 1964. The book won him worldwide acclaim, challenging the notion that the condition was brought about by cold, unfeeling parents.

Instead, Bernard posed the theory that autism was rooted in a biochemical abnormality in the brain, that it was a neurological disease like cerebral palsy or muscular dystrophy.

The theory was a relief to the thousands of parents who previously had to bear the burden, the stigma, of somehow being at fault for their child's problems.

"We had parents who were divorced because of this," Bernard said. "We had parents who committed suicide because they believed they caused this disorder. This was a terrible blow to a person's pride, self-esteem and everything else."

AFTER THE PUBLICATION of his book, Bernard began receiving phone calls and letters from parents of autistic children throughout the country. They invariably wanted more information, comfort and ways to help one another.

He'd arrange for groups of people from the same area to get together, thus setting in motion the National Society for Autistic Children.

Today, this support group with 130 chapters operates out of a small storefront office in San Diego. The files contain case histories from all over the world; by cataloging and studying these cases, Bernard has come to better understand the complexities of the condition.

From that office, he still answers calls and receives mail from worried parents. The voices and letters come from as far away as South America, Europe, Japan and Turkey.

He also has become a one-man crusader for a vitamin approach to autism, particularly vitamin B-6, a therapy attacked by members of the medical establishment as unproven.

BERNARD SAID STUDIES are beginning to confirm his theory.

"It doesn't cure the disease but it does bring about noteworthy improvement from one-third to half the kids, depending on the study you're talking about."

Bernard acknowledges that vitamin therapy isn't the whole answer. Research into brain chemistry and genetics may pave the way to a better understanding into the causes and possible treatments for this condition.

Dr. Bernard Rimland, founding director of the National Society for Autistic Children, with his son Mark, who is autistic.

"I think it's an extremely important development," he said. "I think no one knows how many autistic kids fall into this category. But no matter how small a category it may turn out to be, the model it presents is extremely important for the stimulus it gives to others to try to do the same thing for other forms of autism."

In the meantime, Bernard said he's still going to fight for his son. "He's going to be normal or I'm going to be dead," he said.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You were way off base in your answer to "Confused in Queens" who "loved" the man, but hated the engagement ring her fiancé had surprised her with. You said, "Tell him you love him and you know he wants to please you, so if it's possible to exchange the ring, you'd like to go with him and select one that's more in keeping with your taste."

Abby, whatever happened to "It's the thought that counts"? To me, the uglier the ring, the more special it would be. It may not be my taste, but it's obviously my future husband's taste, and to exchange it would be wrong. Living with a ring that is not my taste would be small potatoes compared to hurting my fiance's feelings.

Your answer had an ERA ring to it — ROMANTIC IN SACRAMENTO

DEAR ROMANTIC: ERA my eye! A woman who hasn't the courage (or good sense) to tell her fiancé how she feels about the engagement ring he surprised her with will surely withhold her feelings about the more important aspects of their relationship for fear of "hurting his feelings."

I am not suggesting she use a meat cleaver to make her point, but a marriage doesn't stand a chance unless both parties speak their minds about what they like and what they don't like.

Read on for an opinion from a jeweler.

DEAR ABBY: Having been in the retail jewelry business for many years, I've waited on hundreds of men who come in alone to buy engagement rings, and most of them haven't the faintest idea of what their intended would like.

I show them plain rings, fancy rings, all kinds of rings, and they all end up asking me, "What do you think she'd like?"

Of course I don't know the lady's taste, so I select a ring and tell him it can be exchanged. Then I suggest he bring the lady in and give her a voice in the selection.

No names, please. I don't want this to sound like a commercial. — RON IN OMAHA

DEAR ABBY: I am 54, divorced, and for the last three years I've been in love with a married man I'll call Roy. He and his wife are separated. She says she is satisfied with things the way they are, and she will fight any divorce action Roy initiates. She refuses to seek employment, saying Roy has to support her.

Roy hesitates proceeding with a divorce because he will have to give her practically everything he has worked for all his life. He is 59 and concerned about income for his retirement.

I love him and feel life would be meaningless without him. Do you see a solution? — ROY'S WOMAN

DEAR WOMAN: If it's marriage you want, Roy will have to pay the high cost of leaving in order to free himself and marry you.

If he can't — or won't — you are just another woman who's in love with a married man.

You can either stick with him and accept things as they are, or say goodbye. The choice is yours.

DEAR ABBY: I am pregnant for the first time, and I get very upset when people start telling me about miscarriages, stillbirths and other horror stories about crib death and any number of tragedies that have happened to them and other people. It really bothers me because I realize something like that could happen to me, but why remind me of it just before I have my first baby?

I suppose they want to prepare me for these tragedies in case they happen to me, but are we ever

I hope this makes your column. You can't imagine how upsetting it is for a woman who is pregnant with her first child to hear these depressing stories.

Thanks for being there, Abby. I feel better just being able to write this. Maybe someone will see this and think twice before she speaks — ENOUGH TO WORRY ABOUT (Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. All correspondence is confidential.)

Dogs contract heartworm from mosquito bites

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mosquitoes are back in Americans' yards and that is more than an annoyance — it can pose a deadly threat to pet dogs.

The problem is heartworm, a disease spread by many varieties of mosquito that is often fatal to dogs. If untreated, heartworms can grow to six- to 12-inches, clogging a dog's heart and blood vessels and eventually killing the animal.

And symptoms often don't occur until the disease is well advanced.

So, the Humane Society of the United States is urging dog owners to get their pets tested and to begin giving them preventive pills.

While the disease is very hard to cure, the pills that are available prevent it from starting if given daily during mosquito season.

Most veterinarians can do the simple blood test and provide the pills.

Crystals play vital role in energy research

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Large man-made crystals grown like big pieces of rock sugar candy are playing a vital role in research into a new energy source.

Scientists at the University of Rochester's Laboratory for Laser Energetics are using half-inch slices of a manmade crystal called KDP in their efforts to tap fusion power — the energy that fuels the sun. The crystals are slowly grown in vats of solution until they are one-foot square and one-and-a-half-feet long.

When an infrared laser beam is passed through a slice of such crystal, it is converted to an ultraviolet beam — a key step in harnessing fusion energy.

Italian mosaic colors Strawberry Fields

Yoko Ono

Two Italian craftsmen began work Thursday on a 10-foot reproduction of a circular Pompeian mosaic for one corner of the 2 1/2-acre area. "I would like to thank Italy for this, which will remind all Italian people about their roots," said Ms. Ono, 50, who has provided $1 million for landscaping Strawberry Fields, a tear-shaped section of the park named after a Beatle song in honor of Lennon. It is expected to open Oct. 9, his 45th birthday. Lennon was shot to death in 1980.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Cartringtons of television's "Dynasty" won't be rubbing shoulders with Elizabeth Taylor, her publicist says, laying to rest months of rumors that she would appear on the popular nighttime soap opera.

Elizabeth Taylor

"This rumor has been going on for quite a while now — months," Miss Taylor's spokeswoman, Chen Sam, said Thursday. "Let's just hope this puts an end to it." The 53-year-old star appeared recently in a cameo role on the daytime soap "General Hospital" and is scheduled to appear in a segment of "Hotel."

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A member of a gang convicted in a series of murders says a film starring Sean Penn and Christopher Walken could make it impossible for him to obtain an impartial jury in a retrial he is seeking.

"At Close Range" began shooting May 29 in Tennessee and is due for release early next year. David Johnston, 37, one of three brothers convicted in four 1978 murders, told a Chester County Court judge Tuesday that the film was one reason why a new trial should be granted quickly.

Their father was convicted in six slayings to cover up their million-dollar burglary ring. A spokesman for the county district attorney's office said Thursday that a ruling would come in a week or so.

Katherine Moore, publicist for "At Close Range," said the film was a docudrama "inspired by the real events."

SAN MARINO, Calif. (AP) — A gunman threatened to kill the father of rock star David Lee Roth, lead singer for the group Van Halen, unless a $25,000 ransom was paid, but police said the victim managed to escape.

A man walked into the offices of Dr. Nathan H. Roth, 56, and asked to see the optometrist Wednesday, San Marino police Sgt. Paul Butler said Thursday.

"The suspect produced a small handgun and told Dr. Roth he would be killed unless he paid the suspect $25,000," Butler said. Roth fled to a nearby gas station, where he called police.

A search for the gunman in this suburb 10 miles northeast of downtown Los Angeles was unsuccessful, Butler said. It was not known if the assailant knew Roth was the rock star's father.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A woman faces a 20-year prison sentence after admitting in federal court that she bilked entertainer Ed McMahon out of $180,000 while she worked as his bookkeeper.

Ed McMahon

Nancy Hedman, 34, of Stone Harbor, N.J., pleaded guilty to two counts of transporting forged documents across state lines. Sentencing is set for Aug. 22.

According to a plea agreement presented by Assistant U.S. Attorney William B. Carr Jr., Ms. Hedman embezzled the money by writing checks on McMahon's account and forging the signature of her employer. She was arrested in April.

She left the firm three years ago but apparently retained access to the office and a supply of checks. She cashed four of the checks between 1983 and last March, Carr said.

McMahon, 62, announcer on NBC's "The Tonight Show With Johnny Carson" and on several others, was out of the country and unavailable for comment, his Burbank, Calif., secretary, Madeline Kelly, said.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — A New Haven bar owner is playing songs like Bruce Springsteen's "Dancing in the Dark" and Prince's "I Would Die 4 U" and the rock superstars don't like it.

They and several other singers and groups accused Thomas DeFilippo, the owner of Keg House Cafe, in a U.S. District Court suit of failing to pay royalties on copyright songs performed at the nightclub.

Humidity helping in battle with fires

Associated Press

Moist air helped a legion of firefighters battle Western fires that have charred more than 1.2 million acres, but new blazes left one area looking "like a moonscape" today.

Humidity "has just given us a chance to take a breather and maybe make some headway," said Scott Brayton, a spokesman for the Interagency Fire Center, a logistics and information center in Boise, Idaho. "The general situation is still very critical."

However, the moisture that helped crews against the 13,800-acre Los Gatos, Calif., fire and a 150,000-acre blaze in Idaho, was only temporary. More hot weather was forecast today with temperatures in the 90s.

The 6th Army put 1,000 troops on alert in case help is needed, a spokeswoman said at the Presidio in San Francisco, but officials haven't decided whether to use the troops.

In Southern California, 150 trailer park residents fled a 300-acre fire near Malibu that authorities said may have been arson. About 400 Girl Scouts and residents of 75 rural homes were moved away from a 350-acre fire at Lake Hemet, 100 miles east of Los Angeles.

Elsewhere, there were signals of victory. In San Luis Obispo, Calif., where a 75,000-acre fire was stopped just outside city limits, residents hoisted a banner reading: "We love firefighters. Thank you for saving our city."

More than 1,000 fires burned Thursday in Arizona, California, Idaho, Nevada, New Mexico, Montana, Oregon, Utah and Washington. Others were contained or controlled in South Dakota, Nebraska and Wyoming. Fires in Colorado and North Dakota were out, the Boise center said.

About 42,000 new acres of range and brush erupted in flame in various states Thursday, adding to more than 1.2 million acres that have burned since late June, Brayton said. Wildfires have charred 380,280 acres since June 27 in California alone, destroying 175 homes and killing three people.

The largest group of firefighters ever mobilized from all parts of the country, attacked 393 new fires Thursday, Brayton said. None were major blazes.

The Lexington Reservoir fire near Los Gatos was 60 percent contained Thursday after destroying 15 homes and five cabins. Property damage was set at $4 million and firefighting costs at nearly $1 million.

Napalm was dropped on the fire Thursday from a helicopter and save private television, radio and micro-wave towers, as well as a relay station for firefighters' emergency communications atop Mount Loma Prieta.

CIA clerk charged with spying

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government of Ghana used a love affair between a relative of that nation's leader and a CIA clerk to identify U.S. undercover agents as well as Ghanaian dissidents secretly cooperating with the CIA in the African nation, the FBI says.

"We do not yet know the full extent of the damage" to U.S. interests, Assistant U.S. Attorney Justin Williams said on Thursday at the arraignment of Michael Agbotui Soussoudis, a citizen of Ghana, and Sharon M. Scranage of King George, Va., both of whom are charged with espionage conspiracy.

However, Williams said the seriousness of the charge, as well as potential additional security damage if Soussoudis should be released, made it necessary that the Ghanaian be held without bail, a request quickly granted by U.S. Magistrate W. Harris Grimsley. Miss Scranage also was held without bail.

Both were scheduled for formal detention hearings next week on the charges, which could lead to life sentences in prison if they are convicted.

According to Justice Department sources who spoke only on condition they not be named, Soussoudis, a self-employed business consultant, and Miss Scranage, a $22,000-a-year CIA clerk, became lovers in Ghana's capital of Accra in 1983.

The FBI's affidavit, signed by special agent Julianne Slifco, accused Miss Scranage of furnishing, at Soussoudis' request, detailed descriptions of the CIA's operations in the African nation, including names and information about communications equipment.

In addition, the FBI said the Ghanaian obtained a CIA report on efforts by Jerry J. Rawlings, leader of the military government of Ghanaian, to get weapons from Libya. FBI Director William H. Webster Sharon M. Scranage, a clerk for the CIA, is led by two FBI agents to an appearance before a federal magistrate in Alexandria, Va., Thursday. Miss Scranage is accused of turning over secrets about U.S. spying in Ghana to a relative of the leader of Ghana.

said the alleged spying over the past year and a half was unearthed by the CIA itself, but no further details were revealed.

However, an intelligence source quoted in today's Washington Post said the alleged disclosure of confidential CIA data was a "disaster" for CIA operations in Ghana.

"It's very bad," said the source, whom the newspaper did not identify. "It tells people in Africa, 'Don't work for the CIA.'" a relative of the leader of Ghana, and Justice Department sources said he was either a nephew or cousin of Rawlings, who took over Ghana in a military coup and now chairs its provisional national defense council.

Ghana Embassy spokesman Harry Marshall was away from his office and unreachable for comment Thursday.

According to the U.S. government's criminal complaints against the two, Miss Scranage returned to the United States two months ago after being asked by Soussoudis and other Ghanaians to get further CIA secrets from the agency's headquarters near Washington.

During Soussoudis' arraignment, government attorney Williams said, "There is strong evidence that he... is actively engaged in espionage against the United States." He added that Soussoudis was "in effect, associated with and serving the intelligence apparatus of the government of Ghana."

Soussoudis said, "I am not associated with any intelligence service in Ghana; I am just related to the head of state, that's all."

Miss Scranage answered formal questions about her age, residence and salary during her separate hearing but made no comments about the charge against her.

In the court affidavit, FBI agent Slifco said the alleged spying began in December 1983 when Miss Scranage, then a seven-year CIA veteran, was assigned to the agency's station in Accra as an operations support assistant.

The affidavit said Soussoudis actively sought the names of Ghanaian dissidents who were cooperating with the CIA, so he could have them arrested by the Ghanaian government.

Bush calls for Lebanese factions to protect airport

WASHINGTON (LAT) — Vice President George Bush urged warring Lebanese factions Thursday to jointly protect the Beirut airport from terrorists, saying the move could ease U.S. pressure for a complete shutdown of the hijack-plagued airstrip.

In remarks to the National Press Club, Bush said such a move is vital to continued operation of the airport if Lebanese President Amin Gemayel's government remains unable to carry out international accords guaranteeing travelers safe passage through foreign air terminals.

"We would like to be able to tell American travelers, 'You can go there at minimal risk.' And we can't do that now... We've got to see this situation corrected, and let's hope it will be, because we simply cannot put our people at risk."

President Reagan urged a ban on Beirut airport flights shortly after Lebanese terrorists released 39 Americans whom they had removed from a TWA jetliner hijacked by Beirut last month.

Ex-hostage has surgery

CHICAGO (AP) — A 57-year-old former TWA hostage is "doing fine" after surgery to remove a potentially fatal skin cancer spotted by doctors in West Germany during a post-hijacking examination, the man's family said.

Simon Grossmayer, who underwent surgery Wednesday to remove a dime-size tumor, probably would not have had the tumor identified at this stage had it not been for the hijacking incident, said Dr. James R. Hines, chief of general surgery at Northwestern Memorial Hospital.

"Physicians at the American Medical Center of Wiesbaden, West Germany, deserve credit for such a thorough examination," Hines said.

"He's doing fine," Nora Grossmayer, 21, said Thursday of her father, listed in good condition and resting comfortably. A hospital spokeswoman said Grossmayer is scheduled to be released today.

Grossmayer's skin cancer, malignant melanoma, is the least common but most dangerous of three major types of skin cancer, which will kill 6,500 to 7,500 Americans this year, a hospital press release said.

Defector being debriefed

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. authorities are continuing an intensive debriefing of a high-ranking Czechoslovakian diplomat who defected to the United States two months ago.

Unidentified government sources said Thursday that the interrogations by FBI agents and other U.S. officials began May 14 when the U.S. government granted political asylum to Milan Svec, the No. 2 man in the Czech embassy here.

The sources would not elaborate on why Svec, deputy chief of the Czech mission in this country, defected, but they said he was willing to have his defection made public at this time.

They declined to describe the government's reasons for granting asylum in this case, but did say that Svec's family also had been granted asylum in the United States.

Sanctions approved against South Africa

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican-controlled Senate, breaking with long-standing Reagan administration policy, is calling for limited sanctions against white-ruled South Africa to protest "evil" apartheid laws that discriminate against 23 million blacks.

"No group has a right in any country to be a master race," Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said Thursday, hours before the 80-12 vote by which the Senate joined the Democratic-controlled House in approving sanctions.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Sen. Foreign Relations Committee, added the bill would "distance this country from the evil of apartheid," the system of discrimination he said runs "counter to American concepts of decency and justice."

It was the first time the Senate has voted for economic steps against South Africa, and amounted to a statement that President Reagan's policy of "constructive engagement" does not go far enough. There was no immediate response from the White House to the legislation, although the president has consistently opposed sanctions in favor of his policy of seeking change in South Africa through negotiations.

Differences between the House and Senate bill will have to be worked out before a final product can be sent to the White House. Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole indicated he thought the president would be willing to sign the Senate measure, and Kennedy said that after such a "clear and compelling" Senate vote, "I would not think that the president would have any alternative but to sign it."

The measure cleared following a four-day, conservative-led filibuster and unusually sharp rhetoric on the floor. So strong were the feelings that Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., told photographers he did not wish to pose for pictures with Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who sharply attacked him a day earlier for "unwittingly (serving) the cause of communism" by mounting a filibuster.

Helms declared his filibuster a success, saying he had prevented "loading the Senate bill with the kind of garbage that Senator Kennedy and others were proposing."

Kennedy and others originally had sought to add sanctions to the measure, but in a roll call before final passage, conservatives maneuvered the Senate into voting 90-2 against the stronger, House-passed bill.

Conservatives stressed their opposition to apartheid, but said it was a mistake to impose sanctions against South Africa, a nation that Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., termed, "an ally, a friend in every war."

South Africans strike out at whites

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Unrest by blacks agitating against white-minority rule has spilled over into white neighborhoods, with blacks dragging two white women from their car in one suburb and marching illegally in another, authorities said.

The white women, one 38 and the other 21, were slightly injured Thursday when club-wielding blacks stoned their car in a Johannesburg suburb and dragged them from it, said police headquarters in Pretoria.

The mob then stole the car, police said. A spokesman, who demanded anonymity in keeping with police practice, said the women were driving a black woman to her home in Alexandra township. The black woman fled.

Police said they used whips to disperse black marchers in Vereeniging, a white industrial town south of Johannesburg. No arrests or injuries were reported.

About 450 blacks and 3 whites have been killed since the current wave of anti-apartheid protests broke out last August, but most of the violence has been limited to black townships.

About 450 blacks and three whites have been killed since the current wave of anti-apartheid protests broke out last August, but most of the violence has been limited to black townships.

Young black rioters opposed to the system of racial segregation, known as apartheid, that denies them the vote and citizenship have directed most of their attacks against black policemen and local council members who are seen as collaborators with the white establishment.

Elsewhere, one black was killed, nine were injured and 34 arrested in a surge of violence in 19 black communities across South Africa, police said Thursday.

Police headquarters in the capital of Pretoria said officers used tear gas, shotguns, whips and rubber bullets to scatter crowds that set fires and threw stones, mostly Wednesday night and Thursday morning.

A black man was killed in Daveyton, near Johannesburg, when a police truck on fire, said a police spokesman, who also demanded anonymity.

The black township of Duduza was reported quiet a day after Bishop Desmond Tutu led a suspected black police informer to safety from a mob that shouted for his death.

Unofficial sources said as many as 16 persons have been killed in the past week in Duduza and three other townships near Johannesburg, in violence stemming from black opposition to apartheid, South Africa's policy of race separation.

In Uitenhage, a Volkswagen factory remained closed for a second day in a dispute over the company's plan to lend 12 small buses to the New Zealand All Blacks' rugby team when it tours South Africa starting this month.

The team, named for the color of their shirts, created bitter controversy when it announced it would play in South Africa. Anti-apartheid groups say the tour shows support for white-minority rule.

Some 3,500 union members, mostly blacks and mixed-race people, went on strike at Volkswagen to protest "the building of buses for the pleasure of the privileged minority while our townships burn."

Meanwhile, Foreign Minister R.F. Botha told reporters in Pretoria that he doubted the seizure of a Dutch teacher from the grounds of The Netherlands' Embassy would worsen relations between the two nations, which he said "are already as bad as they possibly could be."

The teacher, Klaas de Jonge, has been arrested by South African police on June 23. He escaped from a police car on Tuesday and fled into the Dutch Embassy, but police followed and rearrested him.

Botha said De Jonge was suspected of helping the outlawed African National Congress guerrilla movement stockpile arms in South Africa.

However, Dutch officials in The Hague lodge a strong protest over the "serious violation" of their embassy's diplomatic immunity.

Turk charged in pope plot jailed for smuggling

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Authorities today said they had arrested Bekir Celenk, a reputed Turkish mobster charged with involvement in a plot to kill Pope John Paul II, and put him in a military prison.

Celenk's arrest came several hours after he was brought to Ankara from Istanbul in police custody. He was being held in Mamak outside Ankara.

The arrest order was issued after preliminary questioning by a martial law prosecutor who has jurisdiction over all smuggling cases.

The charges against Celenk were not immediately revealed. In Turkey, charges are usually contained in an indictment, issued prior to the start of a trial.

But the charges apparently were related to smuggling because the warrant was issued by the court handling smuggling cases.

An officer in the legal department of the Istanbul martial law command said earlier that Celenk was under investigation for alleged arms and narcotics smuggling.

Mehmet Ali Agca, the Turkish terrorist who shot the pope on May 13, 1981, has claimed that Celenk acted as an intermediary for a Soviet diplomat in Bulgaria to offer $1.2 million to Agca and two other Turks, Musa Serdar Celebi and Oral Celik, to kill the pontiff.

Agca is the star witness in the Rome trial of the three Bulgarians and four Turks accused of complicity in the papal assassination attempt. The Turkish terrorist is also servicing a life sentence for shooting the pope in St. Peter's Square.

Celenk is wanted by Italy both for trial on complicity charges in the pope's shooting and on arms and drug smuggling charges. Turkey has announced Celenk will not be sent to Italy because Turkish laws bar extradition of a Turkish national.

Turkish court officials, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said Atilla Aytek, chief of the police smuggling squad, participated in the interrogation of Celenk at the martial law court.

WORLD in brief

Black boxes to be examined today

CORK, Ireland (AP) — The two "black box" recorders from the crashed Air-India jumbo jet were being flown to India today where officials hope they will reveal why the Boeing 747 plummeted into the ocean, killing all 329 people aboard.

But some Western aviation officials reportedly are worried India lacks adequate facilities to analyze the recorders.

Aviation officials of several Western countries expressed unease to the press about having the recorders examined in India but refused to go on record, not wishing to embarrass the Indians.

The officials urged the Indians to have the recorders examined as quickly as possible in Britain or the United States to determine the cause of the third worst crash in aviation history.

The Guardian newspaper of London, meanwhile, suggested today that the approximately $7 million operation to recover the recorders may have been in vain because they ran on the plane's power system.

"If, as is thought, there was a complete electrical failure at the time the disaster struck, the tapes will not show anything," the newspaper said.

Turkish tanker struck

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraqi warplanes fired a missile into the Turkish supertanker M. Ceyhan today, setting it ablaze in the Persian Gulf near Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal, marine salvage experts reported.

Bahrain-based maritime salvage sources said the 226,145-ton Turkish ship was "abandoned by its crew after the missile blast ignited a huge fire in the stern section."

The sources said the M. Ceyhan was raided at dawn about 100 miles south of Kharg at almost the same location where another Turkish supertanker, the M. Vatan, was raided last Tuesday.

Both tankers belong to the Turkish shipping company Cerrahogullari T.A.S. of Istanbul and were on lease to Iran to shuttle crude oil from Kharg to the makeshift Sirri Island terminal, out of range of Iraqi warplanes.

ASEAN pledged aid

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz pledged more American military aid to Southeast Asia today, saying the region was increasingly threatened by the Soviet-backed "bully," Vietnam.

"Regional bullies cannot be allowed to terrorize and intimidate their neighbors," he said.

In remarks prepared for delivery to the foreign ministers of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, or ASEAN, Shultz also urged war on international terrorism and drug trafficking, pleaded for freer international trade and sounded some positive notes on recent U.S.-Soviet relations.

Shultz did not read his prepared speech, saying he wished to conserve time at a dialogue session between the United States and the six ASEAN nations.

He gave no indication that Washington would take any initiatives in dealing with the Vietnamese occupation of Cambodia, but stressed the United States will not recognize Vietnam until it pulls its forces out of Cambodia.

Congressional action assures toughest anti-erosion laws

WASHINGTON (AP) — The year 1985 already is shaping up as one conservationists will long remember — the year Congress took serious aim at the erosion problem that washes away billions of tons a year of precious topsoil.

Action this week in the House and Senate agriculture committees, coupled with recent Reagan administration endorsement of a new land-retirement program, virtually assures that new farm legislation will contain the toughest anti-erosion laws in decades.

"It's a real high-water mark," said Maureen Hinkle, Washington lobbyist for the National Audubon Society. "It's the first time they have taken the appropriate steps to protect the natural resource" of farmland.

Perhaps the boldest action came Thursday in the Senate Agriculture Committee, where an already tough "sodbuster" provision in the emerging farm bill was made even tougher by broadening it to an unprecedented degree.

The sodbuster language denies farm-program benefits — everything from direct subsidies to price-support loans to disaster relief — to farmers who break out previously unplowed fragile ground to plant crops.

As originally proposed, the bill would have denied such benefits to farmers who plowed up delicate acreage after the legislation was passed. Land already in cultivation, even if erodible, would have been exempted.

But on a motion by Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., the panel moved to do away with all such exemptions in 1988, or later for land whose erosion potential has not been formally determined by the Soil Conservation Service by that date. A farmer still could avoid losing federal subsidies if he tilled the delicate acreage under an approved conservation plan designed to prevent erosion.

Peter C. Myers, assistant secretary of agriculture for natural resources and environment, called the panel's move "historic" and "a very big, big step." But he conceded the matter will be controversial.

"As a farmer, I don't like anybody to tell me how to manage my land," Myers said. "But as a soil conservationist, I don't think farmers should farm erodible land."

The House Agriculture Committee had passed its own version of tough sodbuster legislation earlier in the week, although it kept in a clause exempting currently tilled delicate land from the penalties.

In addition, the House panel approved a new program estimated to cost upwards of $11 billion over the next 10 years to pay farmers to idle their most delicate land and plant it in trees or grass for at least a decade.

The Senate appeared poised to call for a similar conservation reserve program, and Agriculture Secretary John Block already has endorsed setting aside at least 20 million acres of delicate cropland.

"Things are looking good for conservation," said Daniel Weiss, a lobbyist for the Sierra Club, which has made soil erosion one of its major legislative priorities this year.

Hinkle said that while soil conservation measures are on track, she still expects opposition to be felt from some farmers who have philosophical objections to government intervention in their land-management practices.

Some of that concern also was expressed by Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., who said the added teeth in the sodbuster provisions could surprise farmers now planting on rolling farmland that could fall under the definition of "erodible."

"This thing has never been discussed with farmers. They are in the dark about what is highly erodible," Melcher said.

But Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., noted that much of the erodible land now being farmed was put into production because federal programs rewarded producers who expanded their acreage bases by giving them higher subsidies.

"It's important to me that we do not continue to pay people who plow up highly erodible land," Boschwitz said. He and other supporters of the provision noted that cutting back cultivated acreage also could help efforts to cut back surplus production, which has depressed commodity prices.

Less than acre yields 20,000 pounds tomatoes

HOUSTON (AP) — The Weinberg family are veterans when it comes to growing vegetables and fruits. But this year's 20,000-pound tomato harvest from less than an acre stunned the north-west Harris County family by surprise.

"In all my life, I've never seen tomatoes like this year," said Mrs. Warvin Weinberg, who with her sons, Marvin Jr. and Stuart, farm about 30 acres of land west of Tomball.

The bumper tomato crop came from just two-thirds of an acre.

In the space of just a week's time, the Weinbergs say they gathered about 10,000 pounds of tomatoes. For a few days they worked until 2 a.m. packing the tomatoes, Mrs. Weinberg said.

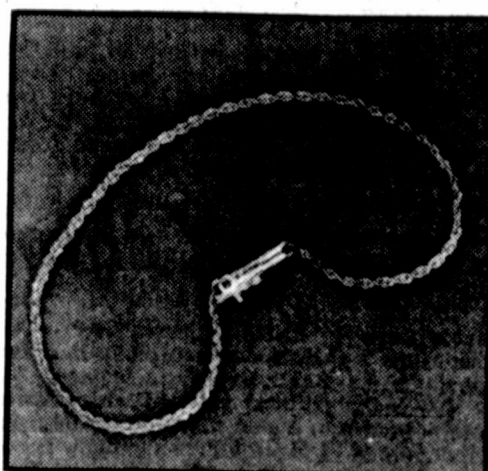

Marvin Weinberg doesn't know why tomatoes produced so heavily this year. The weather didn't seem to be perfect, in fact, the dry weather forced farmers to turn to irrigation, and lately it's been too wet, he said.

"We thought the fruit would be small but they ripened to a good size. We've had several weighing a pound and one-half," he said.

The Weinberg farm is one of the last tomato operations left in Harris County, said county agent.

It's important to control white grubs in lawn

White grub control in lawns is important during the summer season May and June as beetles emerged from the soil and swarmed in late evening during May and June in Midland County. Females layed their eggs and white grub worms that hatched are feeding on roots of bermudagrass and St. Augustinegrass in home lawns. Once grubs begin feeding, control measures should be taken.

Treatment time varies with the particular area of the state and ranges from early July in South Texas to mid-August in the Panhandle. Midland County Agents have already found heavy infestations of grub worms in Midland. Homeowners should check now for grubs and if they are found you should treat immediately. Timing of application is critical for adequate control. To be most effective in controlling grub worms we recommend one application of chemicals the first of July; second application July 15th; and a third application on August 1st.

White grubs in excessive numbers can heavily damage lawns. Check for white grubs by cutting a square foot section of sod with a shovel and examining the roots and soil to a depth of four inches. Examine at least one square foot of sod for 1,000 square feet of lawn area. Chemical treatment is needed if there are more than four grubs per square foot of sod.

Oftanol, Diazinon, Dursban or Dylox provide adequate control, and should be used at recommended rates given on the chemical container label. The granular form is easier to apply and to wash into the soil than liquid or spray formulations. After using granules, drudge the grass with a two sack or water hose to knock them down into the soil. Then apply enough water to wash the granules into the soil.

Apply diazinon sprays at the rate of 2 1/2 gallons of water, including the insecticide, per 1,000 square feet to wash the insecticide into the soil. Wetting the lawn before spraying also helps. Always keep children and pets off the treated lawn until the grass is dry.

The key to white grub control in home lawns is proper timing of chemical applications and getting the insecticide through the grass to the root zone where grubs are feeding.

1. Texas summers are usually hot and dry, and that means homeowners must give careful attention to watering their yards and gardens. Here are some tips on getting the most from irrigation water so as to keep plants and lawns healthy while keeping water costs down.

1. Practice slow, deep watering to allow roots to penetrate deeper so that plants become more stress-resistant.

2. Soaker hoses and drip irrigation systems work well on trees and shrubs. It's more efficient to water at night or early in the morning because evaporation is less. However, night-time watering can promote more disease problems.

3. Too much water can be as detrimental, or even worse, than not enough. The rate at which water is applied should be no more rapid than the rate at which the soil can absorb it. Never fertilize landscape plants when soil is dry. It's best to water the area one day, apply fertilizer the next day, and then water again. Fertilizer will do no good unless it is dissolved and moved down into the soil.

4. Shrubs and trees near foundations, under eaves or on southern and western exposures need frequent watering because they often get less benefit from rainfall and have to deal with heat reflected from walls.

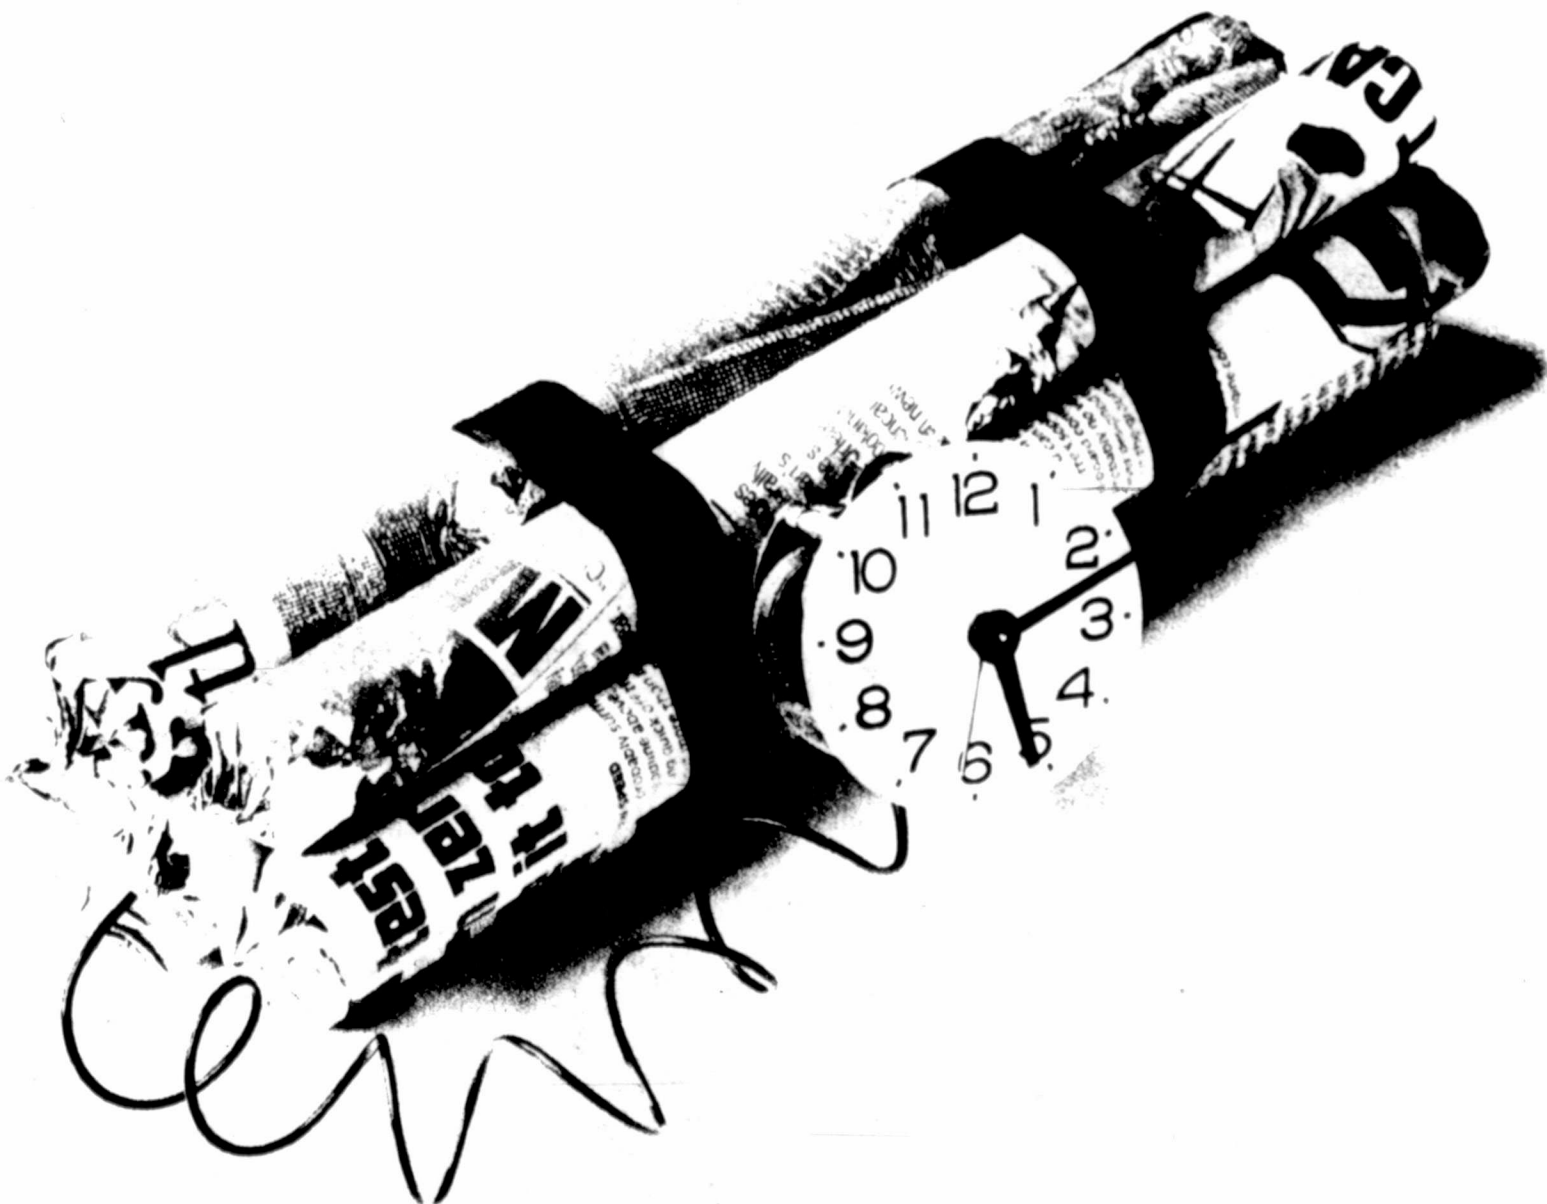

5. Plants on mounds or slopes suffer from drought stress more easily than those on level areas, so these require more frequent watering.

6. Use an organic mulch of pine bark, chopped straw, hay or similar material to reduce irrigation needs.

7. Treat water as a valuable resource. Use it to water plants when needed, but do not waste water. Although considered a renewable resource, good water supplies are becoming scarce in Texas.

Officials: Coke drinkers' loyalty underestimated

Associated Press

Randy Donaldson, a public relations manager for Coca-Cola Co., was sitting in his mother's den in Huntsville, Ala., one night during a late May weekend visit, watching television and drinking new Coke.

Goizueta

All of a sudden, Donaldson's mother spoke up. "My mother said she liked the old Coke better. She just said, she liked new Coke, but she liked the old Coke better," Donaldson says.

Donaldson, 35, wasn't the only Coca-Cola employee subjected to unsolicited comments about the new vs. the old Coke. Others were accosted by neighbors, at cocktail parties, at the country club.

And Atlanta headquarters was being barraged with thousands and thousands of angry phone calls and letters that wouldn't abate. The negative reaction to the April 23 announcement continued to receive widespread publicity.

One critic wrote, "Changing Coke is like God making grass purple."

Another letter was addressed to "Dear Chief Dodo," and that one was passed directly to Chairman Roberto Goizueta. Said Goizueta at a news conference Thursday, "It kind of became chic to say, 'I don't like new Coke.'"

It was increasingly clear that one of the world's foremost marketers had made a big mistake. Company officials had underestimated the loyalty many Americans felt toward the old Coke.

How did that happen and what were they going to do?

Company officials, who said serious discussions about bringing the old formula back began in late June, provided a behind-the-scenes look at giant Coca-Cola in action in interviews. The final OK came Monday, they said.

The decision was ultimately Goizueta's. But Donald Keough, the president, Ira Herbert, executive vice president in charge of marketing, and Brian Dyson, the 52-year-old president of the company's domestic unit, played major roles. Dozens of employees and consultants of all types took part, spokesman Donaldson says.

The board of directors was informed, Herbert said.

Rumors had begun to circulate on Wall Street and among reporters late last week that Coca-Cola was planning to bring back the old Coke. Officials don't know where the rumors originated, but Herbert said they "ran like a brush fire."

Coca-Cola executives meanwhile stonewalled inquiries. They said later that they didn't want the story to get out in bits and that they had planned to make the announcement at a news conference on Thursday.

But then there were inaccurate reports that the new formula would be scrapped and company officials became alarmed as the pace of trading in Coca-Cola stock quickened.

Meanwhile, the portly, silver-haired Keough — he looks like actor Lorne Greene — went to an Atlanta studio at 2 p.m. Wednesday to film an advertisement announcing the return of the old Coke under the name Coca-Cola Classic.

Back at headquarters, artists worked on the can design, which is red with "Coca-Cola" in script and "Classic" in modern type.

During the afternoon, company officials became increasingly concerned that investors might be buying and selling stock based on bad information. And they wanted to make sure they complied with Securities and Exchange Commission disclosure rules.

"It wasn't a question of panic," Herbert said. "We were sorry we had lost control."

The company decided to issue a statement. Transmitted on the Dow Jones News Wire at 3:18 p.m. Wednesday, it said Coca-Cola indeed would bring back the old Coke along with the new.

Around that time, Keough was handed a telex from a disgruntled customer in Maine, who threatened to organize a boycott of the new Coke and asked for the old one back.

Keough said he immediately sent a reply: "You've got it."

The company got 6,000 calls in the hours after the announcement, another 7,600 overnight, and 1,300 in the first hour of business the next day.

"The texture of the calls turned from 'You sons of bitches,' to 'I love you,' — just like that," Herbert said, snapping his fingers.

Taping the 30-second ad took Keough eight "takes," Herbert said. The company used the fourth, after deciding Keough looked warmer and more believable than a professional actor, who was also tried, Herbert said.

The company asked the networks for the network news time slots on a few hours notice Wednesday, after deciding to rush the announcement. The networks were cooperative, Herbert said.

The ad was flashed via satellite to a facility in New Jersey. Tapes were flown by helicopter to New York and delivered by courier to the networks by 6 p.m. EDT, half an hour before they start their broadcasts, Donaldson said.

The ad ran seven times Wednesday night, once in each of the three network news programs, the other four times in prime time.

Keough had to perform again on Thursday, when Coca-Cola provided details at a 1 1/2-hour news conference in Atlanta that was patched into a New York hotel for hundreds of reporters and industry analysts.

As always, that cheerful red was everywhere, in the background, in the banners, in the executives' ties. An American flag stood on the platform.

Associated Press

Pepsi-Cola officials have literally been losing sleep over Coca-Cola Co.'s announcement that it is bringing back the old Coke, a Pepsi-Cola spokesman says because Pepsi-Cola officials have been so busy since Wednesday afternoon responding to "media inquiries" about their company's reaction.

Spokesman Ken Ross said, Pepsi-Cola's reaction to Coca-Cola's announcement was this: "We're not surprised. Very obviously people across the country do not like this (new) Coke. We now have the opportunity to compete with one product that lost to Pepsi in millions of taste tests and against one product that the public hates."
