Don't miss "Ole Coke County" this weekend

Ole Coke County opened Thursday evening at 8:00 with the first performance of the 18th edition of the historical live drama. Given on the last two weekends with two performances each, the pageant was changed for the 1994 annual production to Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of the last weekend of July.

For those who missed the first night, you still have time to see the colorful, fun production. Even if you've seen it many times, there are always new faces, new scenes and new songs.

Lucile Bryan, founder of Ole Coke County, and an able staff of volunteers, takes the audience back in time from the opening Indian scenes, narration by the Rabbit Twister, Harrell Johnston, to the progress of history through several generations to the last hurrah, it's an enjoyable experience.

The 1994 Ole Coke County is being dedicated to Edna Havins, a mainstay of the production since its inception.

She participated in every aspect of the pageant each year - in preparation, paperwork, promotion, music, portrayals, or anywhere she was needed.

Edna died suddenly at her home in November 1993.

The annual pageant will again be held out-of-doors in the Mountain Creek Amphitheatre near the baseball fields in north Robert Lee. Concessions are available. For your comfort take cushions. If space between benches permits, you may bring lawn chairs.

Margaret's father and grandfather came to the Concho Valley in 1872 to establish a ranching operation that extended to Crockett, Reagan, Irion, Tom Green, Sterling and Coke Counties.

Her grandfather, Leasel B. Harris, was instrumental in founding the city of Robert Lee by donating the townsite and gave every Hayrick family a lot on which to move from the former county seat.

A ranchwoman in every sense of the word, she still had holdings in Crockett and Sterling counties at her death. She was an avid golfer from the time of her youth until she reached age 80.

Margaret was preceded in death by her three brothers, Leasel Harris, Wayne Harris and Ted Harris, and her two sisters, Annalee Harris Harrison and Frankie Harris French.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I would like to say "Thank You" to our county officials for surviving what I feel has been a long hard fight for Coke County. In looking forward to the future, you have put yourselves on the firing line and had some pretty good shots taken at you, but somehow you managed to keep what you believed in alive.

Our future depends on people willing to take a risk and try something different. Although nothing is ever "for certain", doing nothing is certainly not the answer either. The juvenile facility is a fact; it is here to stay. We can hope it works as planned and try to profit from it being in our county or just spend our time complaining.

As for James Tidwell - I don't know of any man more dedicated to this county and it's people. The decision regarding his property was not made easily but in the end, and in his heart, he did what he felt was the best for his county and all concerned. I will say I am proud he is my commissioner.

One thing I do wonder about, though, is why Tom Green County residents don't write the Observer-Enterprise to hang their commissioners out to dry.

Mike Denman, a registered nurse from Tuscola, recently joined the staff of the gastroenterosotomy laboratory at Abilene Regional Medical Center. Mike and wife, Nancy, and boys, Kevin and Braden, are former Robert Lee residents. J.W. Denman of Robert Lee is Mike's father.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I have known County Commissioner James Tidwell of Coke County for almost six years. When it comes to integrity and fair play, you won't find anyone with better credentials. I am well acquainted with trying to make decisions without offending some folks and it is not possible. I do not believe Mr. Tidwell wanted to sell a portion of his land for the juvenile correctional facility, and I also feel if someone will compare land prices for highway frontage property, he probably sold it for less than fair market value. I think he was trying to help his county, and in some cases, it takes years to know for certain if the decisions we make are for the better. If I lived in James Tidwell's precinct in Coke County, I would sure like to have him as my county commissioner.

The 1994 Arrott Family Reunion was held at the Senior Citizen Center Saturday, July 23, 1994.

The crowd began gathering about 10 a.m., and by noon we had a fair crowd. Each family brought a vegetable, or salad dish, or desserts.

A lot of visiting and story telling went on till 1 p.m. when the meat and beans were ready and we had a delicious dinner.

The attendance for this year was small. Registering were: from San Angelo, Mitt and Frankie Arrott, Tena Arrott, Jim Bob and Jane Arrott, Sonny Arrott, Randy, Kim, and Tanner Brooks; from Miles, Exa and W. A. HEALTH NOTES

Exercise: Best Medicine

Exercise is not just important for pro and college athletes. It is important for everyone's physical and emotional health. That statement is attributed to two Stanford University clinical professors, physiatrist Jeff Saal and orthopedic surgeon Michael Dillingham, and it extends especially to those who have been hurt while exercising.

Dr. Saal treated Joe Montana after his much publicized back operation in the late 1980's. He says the reason Montana was able to prolong his career is that he keeps a strenuous exercise regimen even to this day. Not even a super athlete can keep at bay the affects of time, but doing the right exercises and using the correct form and equipment can help prevent injuries for weekend athletes and those of us who fit into the occasional category.

When you do injure yourself, modern sports medicine can often help determine ways to avoid reinjury without giving up the sport you enjoy and the exercise so necessary to overall health.

Poison Ivy

Poison ivy has returned in its annual itchy rite of spring, summer, fall and winter.

"The poison ivy plant family is the most common cause of allergic contact dermatitis (allergic skin rash) in the United States," said Delma P. Posey, M. D., director of the Division of Dermatology at Scott & White Memorial Hospital and Clinic in Temple, Texas, and associate professor in the Texas A & M University Health Science Center College of Medicine. Scott & White is one of the largest multi-specialty group medical practices in the United States.

Poison ivy and its close cousins, poison sumac, and poison oak, thrive in Texas, particularly along streams and moist shady spots. They contain a toxic agent called urushiol, that can cause skin inflammation at even the slightest contact.

"The poison will produce a reaction in the skin of virtually everyone of us. Depending on one's sensitivity and the degree of exposure, the reaction may vary from moderate itching and redness to severe swelling and blistering," Dr. Posey said.

Perennial plant - Poison ivy, a perennial native plant, belongs to the sumac genus of the cashew family. The most widespread variety is common poison ivy, which has glossy green leaves with smooth edges. Other varieties have lobed or toothed leaf margins resembling oak leaves, thus the nickname poison oak. Poison ivy grows as a vine, shrub or small tree. The leaves are always divided into three leaflets.

Oakleaf poison ivy usually grows lower than the smooth-leaved variety. Clusters of inconspicuous white flowers rise from the leaves. The plants also develop white, waxy berries with distinct lines marking their outer surfaces into segments which resemble those of peeled oranges.

Medical researchers have not figured out how to prevent poison ivy rashes. "Strict avoidance of direct and indirect contact with the plants is the only certain way to avoid the rash," Dr. Posey said.

Unfortunately, urushiol can linger throughout the year. People have also been known to get rashes indirectly by handling pets that have brushed up against the pesky plants. "Indirect contact can also include getting the poison from clothing, garden tools or even from the smoke of burning plants," he said.

The best remedy - Dr. Posey added, is strict avoidance. "If you are exposed, a soap-and-water bath within an hour of exposure should prevent an outbreak," he said. Washing may not completely avoid the rash, but it may lessen the severity.

Rashes develop within two days after exposure, but in some sensitive people, the rashes erupt within a few hours. The affected area reddens and swells, and small itchy blisters and bumps form. The blisters first fill with clear fluid and then burst, revealing raw skin susceptible to bacteria and infection. The itching can range from minor to severe. The rash usually reaches its peak after about five days and is usually gone within one or two weeks.

Applying alcohol to the irritated area will make the itching worse. For mild rashes, Dr. Posey recommends Calamine lotion and over-the-counter hydrocortisone cream. However, people with severe reactions should see their physicians for a more vigorous treatment plan. "This may include potent topical and internal cortisone-like medications," Dr. Posey said. Persons with rashes in sensitive areas such as the eyes, face, and genital region should be treated by a physician.

Stay away from the plant - The best solution is learning to identify the plants and staying away from them. Dr. Posey provides these other pointers:

1. Keep pets away from poison ivy plants. The toxins can remain on pets' feet and fur for several days and be transferred to humans.
2. Do not burn poison ivy plants. The urushiol will travel with the smoke in the air, which can cause internal and external reactions.
3. If you are gardening or walking in a poison ivy area, wear long sleeved shirts, long pants, and gloves.

4. Wash contaminated clothing thoroughly and separately.

5. Wash any contaminated part of the body thoroughly with soap and water within 5 to 10 minutes after contact with poison ivy.

6. See your doctor if you have a severe inflammation.

The old saying "Leaves of three, let them be" is true, especially when dealing with this scratchy trio of plants.

Your county extension agent has free information about how to safely get rid of these poisonous plants in your yard and garden.

To make an appointment to see a Scott & White physician, call 1-800-792-3710.

Survivors Benefits

A person dies every six minutes in the United States as a result of an accident. And, accidents are the leading cause of death among young men and women in the 25-44 age group. Sobering statistics indeed. These statistics represent real tragedies in life -- the loss of a wife or husband, mother or father, son or daughter.

Families grieve and try to pick up the pieces of their lives. The personal grief is too often accompanied by considerations of how to replace the loss of income caused by the worker's death. Insurance helps in about two-thirds of the deaths of younger workers -- but only as a lump-sum payment and usually in a much smaller amount than many would suppose. Social Security is a bulwark that most survivors can rely on, though. This fact is seldom thought of when people think about the Social Security program. The Social Security taxes you pay also go toward providing survivors insurance. In fact, the value of the survivors insurance you have under Social Security is probably more than the value of your commercial life insurance. When someone who has worked and paid into Social Security dies, survivor benefits can be paid to certain family members. These include widows, widowers (and divorced widows and widowers), children, and dependent parents. Right now, 98 out of every 100 children could get benefits if a working parent should die. In fact, Social Security pays more benefits to children than any other federal program. Many young workers in their early 20's haven't started their families yet. Some still live with their parents. In cases where a young worker provides one-half or more of the support for aged parents (age 62 and over), if the young worker dies his or her parents may be eligible for Social Security survivors benefits based on the son's or daughter's work record. For more information on Social Security survivors benefits, call Social Security's toll free number, 1-800-772-1213, between 7:00 am and 7:00 pm any business day. Lines are busiest early in the week and early in the month; so, it's best to call at other times.

1994 Property Tax Rates in

This notice concerns 1994 property tax rates for entities listed above. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.
