Wayne makes do on most promises

by Tomi Rodgers/UD

Outgoing Student Government Association President Geoff Wayne claims he fulfilled all of his campaign promises during the 1996-97 year, citing improved relations between the SGA and the student body.

However, some Texas Tech student organization members say that although lines of communication may have been created, efforts were not as effective and productive as Wayne might have hoped.

Brian Hawker, regent membership representative for marketing with Delta Lambda Phi and a senior marketing major from Albuquerque, N.M., said he does not believe Wayne made enough efforts to open the lines of communication with his organization.

"Any avenues he did open in order to make himself or the SGA more open, we did try to utilize, but it didn't work," Hawker said.

Michael Lucid, president of Students for Ecological Awareness and a senior wildlife management major from Houston, said Wayne's efforts were a step in the right direction, but the SGA still has a long way to go.

"They've tried, but I don't think people really realize what the SGA does for student organizations," Lucid said.

With a year of such unexpected changes to the university, Wayne said the goals he made in his platform were goals he followed through with.

During his March 1996 campaign for office, Wayne focused on several issues that directly and indirectly related to communication between the student government and the student body.

In his platform, Wayne suggested several ways to improve this communication, including SGA radio spots on 88.1 KTXT-FM, newsletters, columns in The University Daily and direct contact with students and organizations through speaking engagements, open forums and focus groups.

During his administration, Wayne distributed periodic newsletters to on-campus students, spoke with at least 100 student organizations and, through goals set by the entire SGA executive board, broke some of the communication barriers between the SGA and the student body.

"We worked a lot to get our name out and let students know who we were," Wayne said.

Other efforts made to open lines of communication were the creation of the SGA's web page, which Wayne said has been shown to be one of the most visited sites on the Tech campus, according to survey results.

Wayne also created the Senator Contact system, which matched student senators with student organizations, allowing the senators to serve as a liaison for the SGA.

Although several efforts have been made, many students are not aware of who the 1996-97 SGA president was. In a random student survey conducted by The UD Sunday, only 24 percent knew Wayne's name — and of those, 83 percent were members of student organizations.

Air Force possibly finds missing plane

Military will make move to retrieve wreckage

EAGLE, Colo. (AP) — A helicopter crew hovering beside a sheer cliff in the central Rocky Mountains found what is likely the wreckage of a missing bomb-laden warplane, but saw no sign of the pilot, the Air Force said Sunday.

Because of high winds, a ground crew could not be sent in to examine the wreckage stuck in the snow. The search could begin Monday.

"It is our collective judgment that what we have seen is likely to be A-10 airplane pieces," Maj. Gen. Nels Running said, adding that he is 99.9 percent sure it was Capt. Craig Button's A-10 Thunderbolt.

The plane has been missing since April 2, when Button, 32, took off from a Tucson, Ariz., base on a routine training mission and veered north, heading to Colorado with four bombs aboard.

An Army National Guard helicopter crew spotted the wreckage while hovering within 30 feet of the steep cliff.

A close-up look revealed pieces of gray painted metal that could have been from the plane's interior and several smaller pieces of metal, Running said. Yellow-green paint used as an anti-corrosion coating inside the airplane was also visible, he said.

"Our next step will be to determine with certainty that the sighted wreckage is in fact our missing aircraft," Running said. "We will need to get some pieces to make that absolutely certain."

There was no sign of Button, who could have ejected without the Air Force's knowledge.

The Air Force plans to suspend a military search team from a helicopter to collect pieces of wreckage and look for Button's remains. The search could begin Monday, when a helicopter that can withstand high winds is to arrive from Washington state with the search crew.

"The terrain is very steep, snow covered," Running said. "There is no way to get there easily."

The wreckage was spotted on an unnamed cliff near New York Mountain and Gold Dust Peak, mountains 13,000 feet high, about 15 miles southwest of Vail.

Army National Guard Chief Warrant Officers Richard Rugg of Denver and Dale Jensen of Eagle discovered the wreckage in a site they had previously examined. Snow has melted in the area since it was last searched.

"The first thing we saw was just a couple pieces of paper," Rugg said. "Then something just caught my eye."

... what we have seen is likely to be A-10 airplane pieces.

Veterans share memories about Vietnam War

by Hollye Hodges/UD

Almost 25 years after the last gun shot, the last air raid and the last casualty of the Vietnam Conflict, peace talks continue.

This weekend, Texas Tech hosted its third annual academic conference attended by U.S. and Vietnamese veterans. This year's event was aimed at establishing a more balanced educational perspective about the war.

"This conference was very successful in sharing ideas and information, as well as developing how the Vietnam Center here (at Tech) can contribute to teaching about Vietnam," said Jim Ginther, interim archivist for Tech's Archive of the Vietnam Conflict. "We think it was revealing and well-received by participants."

The event provided the opportunity for soldiers from opposing sides of the Vietnam Conflict to reunite.

"I look forward to the conference every year," said Admiral Elmo Zumwalt Jr., commander of the U.S. naval forces in Vietnam. "It is great to exchange memories and stories with colleagues."

Zumwalt was a member of a discussion panel with representatives from South and North Vietnam where the group discussed the war and how it should be taught.

"Not all personal recognition is accurate — this (Vietnam education) helps to make my memories more correct," Zumwalt said.

"Also, I can be with old friends and get to know them in such a way that I couldn't have any other way."

Tech organizers say they wanted to explore some faults of current Vietnam education.

"The Vietnam War is a complex issue socially, politically and educationally," said James Reckner, director of Tech's Center for the Study of the Vietnam Conflict.

"Because of these challenges, many faculty members on the secondary and college levels gloss over this important time in our nation's history," Ginther said Tech recognizes this point and is trying to compensate for the inaccurate education about the conflict.

"We saw that there is an appalling lack of materials on all educational levels about Vietnam," he said. "A new goal for the Vietnam center at Tech is to create more materials that can be used for education."

Ginther said the weekend created some solutions for this problem.

"The center will try to bring back into print some valuable Vietnam books that aren't available anymore," he said.

Students who work at the exhibit say expanding on the collection will give Tech an advantage for academic study of Vietnam.

"Before too long, anyone who wants to study Vietnam in-depth will have to come through Lubbock," said Scott Mraz, a history graduate student from San Diego.

Earth Day brings global beat to Tech campus

EARTHFEST '97

Booths next to the University Center from 11 a.m.-3 p.m.

by Laura Hensley/UD

Texas Tech students walking to class Wednesday may be able to hear a faint thumping of tribal drums in the distance. The sound will not be coming from the Goin' Band from Raiderland or restless natives, but from the community drum circle of The Global Rhythm Tour, which is part of Earth Fest '97.

From 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Wednesday between the library and the west side of the University Center, Earth Fest will celebrate Earth Day by promoting environmental awareness to Tech students.

"We are doing this to promote environmental awareness on campus," said Michael Lucid, a senior wildlife management major from Houston and member of Students for Ecological Awareness.

The drum circle will provide students with hand drums and give them the chance to come together to make music. Don Davidson, who tours the world with The Global Rhythm Tour, will lead the drum circle.

Earth Fest also will include booths from local businesses involved in environmental issues. Sara Solloway, student activities specialist for UC Programs, said the booths will offer information in different areas in environmental issues.

Free vegetarian foods will be served beginning at 1 p.m. Also at Earth Fest, T-shirts will be sold for $5 to tie dye. A booth also will be set up for henna tattoos.

All events for Earth Fest '97 are free and open to the public.

Administration launches push for weapons treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's world leadership is at stake, the Clinton administration's top foreign policy officials insisted Sunday as they pressed for ratification of a treaty banning chemical weapons. The Senate takes up the pact Thursday in a vote too close to call.

"We are the superpower. We are the leader. This is a leadership question," Secretary of State Madeleine Albright said, her explanation of why the Senate must ratify the convention that imposes a global ban on the use, production, transfer and stockpiling of chemical weapons.

The treaty, signed by 170 countries and already ratified by 72, takes effect on April 29 regardless of how the Senate votes five days earlier. Albright said the treaty, initiated by President Reagan and negotiated by President Bush, "has made-in-America written all over it."

Still, the administration has had to struggle to overcome opposition from Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and the reluctance of Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., just to get a ratification vote before the April 29 deadline.

With that accomplished, administration officials are lobbying hard for the two-thirds vote needed to ratify.

Senate Democratic leader Tom Daschle of South Dakota said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press" that all 45 Senate Democrats will vote for the treaty.

Their View

Tech deserves consideration in magazine

Megan Clark/editor

Take a look at this month's Texas Monthly and prepare to be appalled.

Well, you'll be appalled if you're anything but a Texas A&M Aggie.

In case you haven't read the magazine's insightful cover story about how Texas A&M is the university of Texas, that's OK. It's not really worth reading anyway, especially if you attend any other college or university in this state.

The author of the article claims A&M excels over other public and private institutions in Texas in the '90s for a slew of reasons, but namely because its faculty, research, student body and alumni far surpass other Texas universities.

Oh, the university's fine morals, family atmosphere and tight campus community also get included in the article.

All in all, the article is just public relations run amuck.

The best other colleges and universities in the state could do was buy ad space in and around the pages the article is on. The author only points to the University of Texas-Austin as the only real challenge to A&M supremacy in higher education.

Well, for anyone who says all I do is badmouth Texas Tech and should leave to attend and graduate from another university, think again. I like Tech a lot. If I didn't, I never would have decided to come to school here.

I believe Tech has a lot going for it. There a lot of positives at this university that really just need to be improved upon and, with a little push in the right direction, that's easily attainable.

If people at this university put their minds to it, anything can happen. That's obvious because the United Spirit Arena received a tremendous amount of support from students, Lubbock residents and alumni.

Texas A&M also is building a new sports arena in College Station that Aggies tout as the premier athletic facility in the Big 12. Their request to use state funds to build their arena was turned down, but administrators are turning to alumni to help establish an endowment to build it.

And they will.

It's a proven fact that A&M has one of the largest alumni bases at a college or university in the nation. They get more than athletic facilities built there, too. Alumni also support in the way of academic scholarships, endowments, professorships and general donations to buy equipment and refurbish classrooms.

There is a strong core of alumni that do that at Tech, too, but they do not begin to compare to what A&M alumni do for current and future students.

I don't believe A&M deserves to be called the premier university of this state, regardless of the level of alumni or student support. I think the Aggies have a lot going for them, some outstanding students and some excellent programs, but I don't believe A&M students dominate over every other college student in Texas.

There are some equally outstanding students at Tech excelling in academics, athletics, community service and research. They, like A&M students, chose to attend this university because it provides the best learning environment conducive to their education.

Luckily, I am one of those students.

I wish Texas Monthly would have taken the time to interview students from colleges and universities across the state to find out what programs serve what kind of students the best.

Tech offers some of them.

Work at newspaper generates more than pay

Reporting position offers insight into Tech campus operations

Ginger Pope/staff writer

Working at The University Daily has taught me more than just what it is like to be a journalist — it has taught me about Texas Tech.

I began my ladder climbing in the student publications department as a reporter for the La Ventana during my sophomore year, and now I report for The UD. During these years, I have gained a lot of knowledge about how Tech operates.

One thing we all had to get adjusted to quickly was the new chancellor system, which I bet a lot of students still do not understand, especially who Chancellor John T. Montford is.

Anyway, my point is that all the reporting I have done on student life, colleges and Tech administration has probably benefitted me more than the people I write stories for. What I mean is, I have learned all about the Master Plan and what is being proposed for Tech's future. I also know many of Tech's faculty by covering Faculty Senate meetings, and I have met deans of Tech's colleges, the chancellor, the chancellor's deputies and many of Tech's regents.

This does not mean my life is complete now that I have met all these people, but if I were not writing all of these stories, I probably would never have taken the initiative to meet these people or find out what their agendas are.

I also have learned a lot about how the various departments and offices operate on campus, such as the University Police Department, traffic and parking, housing and dining, general counsel, news and publications, Dean of Students Office and facilities planning and construction. Before, I only knew of traffic and parking because of all the parking tickets I have received in the past. I also met a UPD officer once when I was speeding. Other things I have learned about include what type of funding Tech receives, including state, federal and private.

I also have learned how we hire and fire professors, and what involvement students have in the administrative process.

As a reporter, I have learned about student government, seen the lack of student involvement and an immense amount of student involvement, such as the students in the College of Engineering.

My reporting also has led me to understand how student financial aid works and how, when and if student-athlete eligibility is determined. This means I also have met many of Tech's coaches and athletic administrators as well, and, considering my lack of involvement in sports, I never would have met these individuals.

Earlier I said I have learned a lot about how Tech operates and one of these issues is that everything involves a process, some short, some long and some very long. These were the times I learned about Freedom of Information and the Texas Open Records Act.

I guess what I am trying to say is that when I first started coming to Tech, I did not care what went on here as long as it did not bother my routine. I thought I would learn all the things I needed to know in my classes, but I was wrong.

In life we do a lot of reacting to the world, but in order to know how to react, we have to first know what it is the world is doing, or, in our case, what Tech is doing as an administration, a faculty and as a student body. Only then can we react effectively.

Education key to enlightening us all about diversity

People need challenges in order to understand vast differences

Carrie Kilman/news editor

I've heard a lot of commotion from special interest groups lately — save the rain forests, save the whales, save the unborn babies, save the spotted owl that tastes a lot like chicken.

Everywhere you turn, someone's trying to save something. But what's not being saved may be the most important thing of all — respect and the promotion of unity among even among the most different of people. If you listen to the news or read a newspaper, you'll hear the same message repeated over and over again.

One side believes that gay, pot-smoking vegetarians are taking over the world, while the other side thinks Republicans came straight from hell.

Everyone needs to stop.

Stop and look around.

We still have some basic problems to solve before we worry about when the whole world will stop eating meat or when the conservatives will regain control of the White House. An extreme lack of respect exists in our country.

Sometimes I think I learned some things as a child that many people didn't — most people don't like being poor. Most kids want to learn. Most people think hate is wrong.

Then how come the world so crazy?

How come 80 percent of Americans on welfare are children? How come in east Lubbock, elementary schools are surrounded by trailer parks and gang-ridden convenience stores, while southwest Lubbock schools are the picture-perfect image of suburbia?

A friend of mine said the other day that she thinks most people are just stupid. I disagree — I think most people just aren't encouraged to learn. Education no longer challenges students' minds.

And it's not the responsibility of educators alone to rectify the problem — it's everyone's. School has become a watered-down string of standardized tests, creating a society that, on the whole, consists of a greedy mass of self-indulgent people who forgot that the purpose of life is to impact, teach and help others.

We allow color, orientation, nationality and political affiliation to dictate our actions — a sort of selective version of humanity.

Basic social problems, like race relations and an incredibly underfunded educational system, have not been solved.

Some argue they're worse now than ever, and sometimes I'm tempted to agree.

Sure, I'd love it if companies stopped testing on animals and if the beef industry suddenly went out of business.

To me, all life — regardless of species — is equally important.

But I know that before we can convince people to have sympathy for dogs, cats, birds, cows, horses, etc., we first must teach people to have sympathy for one another.

And that, I'm afraid, is a long way from happening.

One Heart inspires student prayer, unity

by Ginger Pope/UD

About 700 Texas Tech students from more than 10 Christian student organizations gathered at the Lubbock Municipal Auditorium Saturday to proclaim a unity in the cause for Christ.

Danny Lacey, a senior music major from Pottsville, said the groups met because even though people belong to different denominations, they can still believe and work together for the same cause.

The event, called One Heart, included worship and praise. Evangelistic speaker Jon Randles, with the Jon Randles Evangelistic Association, said unity among Christians is about a cause — not a style of worship.

Ben Smith, co-coordinator of One Heart, said many students get caught up in how they do things traditionally in church and forget others have the same beliefs.

"This event allowed students of the same faith to gather together, even though they belong to different denominations and organizations," Smith said.

Students expressed their desire to unify through song and prayer led by Tech students.

The event began at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, but Lacey said planning for One Heart began during the fall 1996 semester.

"A small group came together in the fall with the idea," he said. "When we had our first meeting, 20 students showed up, and everyone had the same vision."

Death row inmates share common traits

DALLAS (AP) — Few condemned prisoners take the death penalty seriously. Most began their criminal careers as juveniles. And overwhelmingly, they had troubled childhoods.

Those characteristics are shared by condemned inmates, according to a survey by The Dallas Morning News. More than 700 of the approximately 3,000 men and women on death rows throughout the United States responded to the survey, described as the most extensive ever of that population.

The results of the 75-question survey, sent in December 1994 and February 1995, were published in a copy-right story in Sunday editions of The News. Work on the survey, along with research and interviews, spanned almost three years.

The newspaper found most death row inmates share certain characteristics in their backgrounds and beliefs:

—Seven out of 10 began their criminal careers as juveniles and went on to commit serious crimes before they landed on death row. Almost four of 10 said other members of their families, typically fathers and brothers, also have been convicted of serious crimes.

—Almost nine of 10 had childhoods marred by poverty, abuse, drugs, alcohol, broken families or lack of any high school education.

Joseph Murphy, 32, killed an elderly Marion, Ohio, woman during a 1987 robbery. Murphy said he was hospitalized for seven months as a child to recover from burns he suffered when a relative set him on fire in his bed. As a child, he said, he was in "nut houses in four states."

—Eight of 10 black inmates and six of 10 Hispanic inmates believe that racial discrimination played a role in their sentences.

—Few inmates take the death penalty seriously, either as a deterrent to violent crime or as a threat to their lives. Nine of 10 condemned prisoners believe the death penalty does not deter violence at all. Almost half have never had an execution date, despite spending an average of seven years on death row. About one-third believe they will ever be executed.

"When someone is about to kill someone," wrote a double murderer in a Southern state, "they don't think about the death penalty or premeditation or the consequences. The rage is so great, the act so powerful over your whole mental state, you have no thought of right or wrong."

The inmate suggests 90 percent of the inmates on death row could be released "and live crime-free, productive lives because their crimes were heat of the moment or just being at the wrong place at the wrong time."

The survey, which was drafted by The News with input from a veteran capital murder prosecutor, a death row appeals lawyer, a criminologist, a forensic psychiatrist, a death row warden and a former death row inmate, reflects a cross-section of inmates by geography, race, age and sex.

“When someone is about to kill someone, they don't think about the death penalty.”

counting major from Montrose, Colo., said although Wayne made a big effort early in the year, it did not seem to be successful.

"We didn't have any type of personal contact," Grigsby said. "To open lines of communication, you have to have that personal contact. It can't be done through newsletters or the radio"

However, some students said Wayne's efforts to improve communication with the student body have proved successful.

Cameron Graham, co-chairman of Tech's College Republicans and a junior history major from Lubbock, said Wayne's efforts to improve communication, particularly through the Senator Contact system, have worked well.

"The senator contact system has been one of the highlights (of Wayne's time in office)," Graham said.

"I'm glad to see it had come about and hope it stays in place, with the arena and Master Plan."

Kenny Meixelsperger, a senior finance major from Plano and 1996-97 external vice president, said Wayne has made a conscious effort to make the SGA more accessible to students.

"A lot of it is making yourself visible," Meixelsperger said.

"Geoff did a good job making his presence known, answering questions and always being accessible."

Wayne said his position as SGA president was extremely rewarding, emphasizing the importance of focusing on the future and improving the university as each year passes.

"You can't make everybody happy all the time," Wayne said.

"In the end you've got to look to visions of the future and make decisions. We are sacrificing for the future."

Accounting week introduces students to businesses

by April Castro/UD

The 25th annual Accounting Emphasis Week begins today, featuring the recognition of the 1997 Distinguished Alumnus and top accounting students in Texas Tech's College of Business Administration.

"Its main purpose is to highlight the profession of accounting," said Carl Stem, dean of the College of Business Administration. "We will get the accounting majors involved in a professional way."

More than $100,000 in scholarships will be awarded to accounting students at a banquet 7 p.m. Thursday at the Holiday Inn Lubbock Plaza.

The scholarship money comes from endowments, gifts from alumni and accounting firms, Stem said.

The week will be used to recruit students to the accounting profession and involve educators and students with professional accountants, Stem said.

"The accounting advisory board will meet Thursday and will be with students," he said. "That kind of serves a double purpose because we will be able to bring the professionals in touch with our people."

Dennis Jennings, a partner with the Coopers and Lybrand accounting firm in Dallas, will be named the 1997 Distinguished Alumnus of the College of Business Administration's accounting department.

Other events during the week will include a jobs fair for prospective graduates, a golf scramble and a luncheon, which will feature, Nita Clyde, a partner with Clyde Associates in Dallas, who will speak at the luncheon at 11:45 a.m. Tuesday in Tech's Market Alumni Center Ballroom.

Clyde's speech is titled "Go, Ready, Set: It's a Fast Few Years Ahead for the Accounting Profession."

"The purpose is to recognize and honor students at the banquet Tuesday," said Gary White, director of the area accounting.

"Friday, we bring a lot of alumni and faculty and students get a chance to get together."

The golf scramble will begin at 8 a.m. Friday at the Meadowbrook Golf Course, 601 Municipal Drive.

The events are sponsored by the Tech Area of Accounting, Tech's chapter of Beta Alpha Psi accounting fraternity and the Tech Accounting Society. The luncheon is sponsored by the Lubbock chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants.

Tickets are available through Tech's Area of Accounting.

Rope symbolizes Titanic

NEW YORK (AP) — A 9-foot piece of nautical rope that hasn't been touched by sea water in more than eight decades was returned to an ocean liner's pier, brought out of safe-keeping for a memorial to a tragedy.

The rope, part of a private collection, was originally attached to a lifeboat that saved some of the 705 people who escaped the sinking Titanic in April 1912.

The thick, brownish braid lay curled on the Hudson River pier.

For the first time some of the victims' relatives gathered at the now-abandoned wharf where terrified survivors came ashore.

The Titanic sank with 1,523 men, women and children after it hit an iceberg on its maiden voyage from Britain to the United States.

The stricken ship "stood upright like a column in the sea for five minutes, and those in the lifeboats could hear the screams of the drowning," said Nicholas Wade.

State musicians outdo local bands

by Sebastian Kitchen/UD

Live music filled the air Saturday in Lubbock as thousands of people watched on while well-known acts Deep Blue Something, The Hunger and Pushmonkey led a cast of local bands through a day of lively and energetic music.

The bands headlined an entire day of food, music and fun at the annual outdoor Crawfish Festival.

The local bands played to a mass of people who, for the most part, could not have cared if the bands were there.

The crowd played games, drank and ate crawfish while the first four bands played. The crowd was fairly unresponsive to local bands Watertribe, Deja Vu, Mojo Hand and the Buddy Simmons Band.

The crowd awoke as Austin's Pushmonkey took the stage. Pushmonkey set the tone for the rest of the day. The Hunger took the stage as the crowd and the police became more aggressive. Several people were arrested, and beer didn't expect this many people."

The band has played in Lubbock several times, opening for Ian Moore and Candlebox and headlining its own concerts.

Deep Blue Something, like The Hunger, made its first live appearance since ending big tours at the end of last year.

was thrown as the Houston band brought its hits to Lubbock.

The Hunger have received national radio play for their hits "Vanishing Cream," "Undone" and "Terminal Infection."

"We didn't know we were playing outside until this morning," lead singer and keyboardist of The Hunger Jeff Wilson said.

"The crowd was really good. We Deep Blue Something ended its last tour in December, a tour that took them through America five times, Europe several times and one trip through Asia.

"Anywhere you go in Europe, regardless of the language, it is very heartwarming because all of the people know all of the words to all of your songs," said Deep Blue Something guitarist Clay Bergus.

The band played before a crowd of more than 400,000 people at a music festival in Amsterdam.

"That was on the second stage there," said bassist Todd Pipes. "The festivals they have there make Woodstock look like nothing."

The band first was played on the radio in Lubbock and has played here several times, developing a small part of its international following.

The band is well-known for its Top-10 hit "Breakfast at Tiffany's," which has helped them to sell several million copies worldwide.

The local crowd went crazy, jumping around and singing along, when the four men played the song.

The last three bands went over quite well as the mostly young, local crowd got up and enjoyed the music instead of just the food, drinks and sun.

Friday's Puzzle solved:

Mobster wants story of life written right

NEW YORK (AP) — Salvatore "Sammy The Bull" Gravano wanted to set things straight when he told his life story to author Peter Maas. But is the gospel according to Sammy true, or just a self-serving story?

His biography, "Underboss," presents the killer of 19 people as a man of honor, a loyal mobster — a romanticized image contradicted by government tapes, his own actions and the families of his victims.

Men's tennis falters against Jayhawks

by Brent Dirks/UD
The Texas Tech men's tennis team lost its fifth Big 12 Conference match of the year as the Red Raiders were defeated by No. 20 Kansas, 6-1, Sunday at the Lubbock Municipal Tennis Center.

Tech Director of Tennis Tim Siegel said the Red Raiders' (10-12 overall, 3-5 Big 12) loss against the highly ranked Jayhawks was not a disappointing one.

"They're ranked 20th in the nation, and they've been as high as 10th," Siegel said. "Nothing to be disappointing about except in my mind we had four matches where we competed pretty well. We didn't do a good job at four and five, but every other position we were in there."

In doubles, Kansas won the point by winning two of the three matches.

Tylir Jimenez-Ryan Shupe was defeated by Enrique Alvoara-Xavier Avilia 8-5; Steve Wood-Thomas Wheat beat Fernando Sierra-Luis Uribe 8-6; and Petar Danolic-Doug Lacy lost to Trent Tucker-Jeff Erin 8-5.

The Red Raiders losing the doubles point changed the momentum of the match for good, Siegel said.

"I felt like we should have won the doubles point already," Siegel said. "That was really the turning point in my mind. We could have won this thing if we had taken the doubles point. That was pretty disappointing."

Tech tried to stage a comeback in the singles, but the Red Raiders' efforts were thwarted by Kansas.

Jimenez lost to Alvoara 6-1, 6-7, 7-6; Danolic was defeated by Avilia 6-3, 6-2; Baranowski's comeback bid was ended by Sierra 7-5, 4-6, 6-3; Wood was defeated by Uribe 6-1, 6-4; Tucker pulled out the victory against Shupe 6-1, 6-3; and Lacy won Tech's only singles point with a 7-6, 6-3 victory over Erin.

Wheat said he was disappointed the Red Raiders could not pull out the victory over the Jayhawks.

"The overall score was 6-1, but we lost three close matches in the third set and played a horrible doubles point," Wheat said. "So if you put that all together we won 4-3. It's good to know that we're playing a highly ranked team, and we were right there."

The Red Raiders finish out the season with a match Wednesday against Texas A&M in College Station. The match against the Aggies was rained out April 4.

Tech then travels to Austin to play in the Big 12 Conference Tournament beginning Wednesday. The Red Raiders' first-round match and opponent will be determined by how they finish against Texas A&M.

Chicago ends season-opening losing streak at 14 games

NEW YORK (AP) — Even the Cubs couldn't keep losing forever.

Chicago stopped its season-opening losing streak at 14 Sunday, rallying in the sixth inning and beating the New York Mets 4-3 in the second game of a doubleheader.

The Mets, who won the opener 8-2 behind a pair of Carl Everett homers, helped the Cubs in the second game. New York blew a 1-0 lead with a hit batter, botched foul popup, double off an outfielder's glove and game-tying wild pitch.

Chicago's 0-14 start set a National League record and was the second-worst behind the 1988 Baltimore Orioles, who began 0-21.

The Cubs had lost 28 of 30 going back to last season before the win. In setting the National League record, Chicago smashed the franchise record of 13 straight losses set in 1944 and tied in 1982 and 1985.

Baseball team completes three-game sweep of KSU

MANHATTAN, Kan. (Special) — The No. 1 baseball team in the nation swept Kansas State this weekend, giving Texas Tech 14 wins in its last 15 games. Tech won stands at 37-5 overall and 17-4 in the Big 12 Conference.

In Sunday's finale, Tech won 12-7 with junior second baseman Keith Ginter leading off the game with a home run.

Tech's big inning came in the fifth when freshman catcher Josh Bard started the Red Raiders off with a double that led to junior right fielder Brandon Toro's two-run homer.

Sophomore Duane Price, who started in center field for junior Jason Huth, added a two-run double to give Tech four runs in the fifth and a 7-0 lead.

Sunday was Price's first start of the season. He replaced Huth after the center fielder was moved to third base in a lineup shuffle.

Sophomore right-hander Monty Ward earned the win after going 6 1/3 innings. He surrendered four runs on five hits and struck out 10 Wildcats.

In Saturday's game, Tech won 6-1 with the win going to sophomore right-hander Shane Wright. Wright moved to 8-0 with the complete game.

This game marked senior first baseman Joe Dillon's record breaking 25th home run. In Wednesday's game against Grand Canyon, Dillon tied the Tech record of 24 dingers set by John Grimes in 1984.

Friday's game was an 11-6 Tech win with the teams combining for 10 errors. The winning pitcher was Tech junior left-hander Jason Gooding (9-0), who allowed six runs on nine hits and struck out seven in the complete game.

Hanspard goes to Falcons in NFL draft

Former Texas Tech tailback Byron Hanspard had to wait longer than most experts predicted before having his name called in this weekend's NFL draft. Hanspard was chosen by the Atlanta Falcons as the 11th pick in the second round, 41st overall.

Hanspard

NFL draft expert Mel Keiper said before the draft that he expected the DeSoto native to go to the Buffalo Bills at the 23rd spot.

The drop in the draft will cost Hanspard dollars, but could allow him to get more playing time.

If he had gone to the Bills, Hanspard would have been forced to sit behind Thurman Thomas for probably two years before getting a chance at the starting job. But with Dan Reeves taking over the head coach's job in Atlanta and doing away with the run and shoot offense, Hanspard looks to have a good shot at starting in the Falcons' backfield with Craig "Ironhead"

Hayward as his fullback.

Hanspard wrapped up his Tech career in 1996 after becoming only the sixth player in NCAA history to rush for 2,000 yards in a season. He won the Doak Walker Award as the nation's best running back and finished sixth in the Heisman Trophy voting.

Offensive linemen Casey Jones and Ben Kaufman and defensive end Tony Daniels, who were possible draftees from Tech, were not picked in the seven-round draft and now will have to try their luck as free agents if they want to play in the NFL.

In last year's draft, Tech players hit the jackpot in the fifth round as raider back Marcus Coleman went to the New York Jets as the 134th overall pick and linebacker Zach Thomas went to the Miami Dolphins as the 155th overall pick.

The last Red Raider running back to be selected in the NFL draft was Byron "Bam" Morris, who was picked by the Pittsburgh Steelers in the third round in 1994.

Palmer leads Rangers in 10-5 rout at home

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Texas Rangers have had pretty good pitching and defense all season. Their hitting has been another story.

Texas' bats finally came through Sunday as Dean Palmer hit a grand slam and a solo home run, and Rusty Greer and Ivan Rodriguez also homered in a 10-5 victory over Juan Guzman and the Toronto Blue Jays.

"It was more than timely hitting, it was a lot of hitting," said Rangers manager Johnny Oates, whose team set season-highs with 10 runs, 13 hits and four homers.

Texas scored in each of the first five innings after being shutout the night before.

The Rangers had not scored more than five runs since getting nine April 6.

Greer got things going with a two-out homer in the first and Palmer added a leadoff homer in the second. Palmer hit his team-record sixth career grand slam an inning later, giving him four homers this year — all in the last four games.

"I've always been kind of streaky," Palmer said.

"I'd like to become more consistent. But if I can go out there and help the team, especially when we're having trouble scoring runs, I'm flattered."

Greer improved his career average against Guzman to .600 with three hits and he scored three times. Rodriguez also had three hits and scored twice.

His homer was his first of the year.

The biggest surprise for Texas was No. 9 hitter Benji Gil, who snapped out of a 1-for-18 slump by tying his career high with three hits, including an RBI single in the fourth.

Bobby Witt (3-0) took advantage of the offensive eruption to become a winner in his first three starts for the first time in his career, although he had his least-impressive outing of the year.

Witt gave up five runs on 11 hits in six innings. He struck out a season-high seven and walked one, keeping his season total to two in 23 innings.

That's amazingly low for a guy who has led the AL in walks three times and was sixth last year.

"I'm throwing the way I was in spring training: I'm getting ahead of hitters and using all three pitches to my advantage," said Witt, who beat Toronto for the sixth straight time.

Softball team continues struggles in Big 12 Conference play

WACO (Special)—The Texas Tech softball team dropped both games of a doubleheader to Baylor, 1-0 and 3-0, Saturday in Waco.

In the first game, Tech sophomore pitcher Emily Hayes (11-10) struck out four, but could not get the win as she gave up one run on six hits.

In the second game Saturday, Tech (34-26-1 overall, 1-9 Big 12 Conference) allowed a two-run home run in the first and gave the third run to the Bears in the fifth inning.

Tech bettered its three hits in the first game with six hits in the second game. Junior third baseman Kim Martinez was responsible for half of Tech's hits in the game.

Junior pitcher Danielle Brady (16-11) took the loss. She struck out two and gave up three runs on five hits in six innings of work.

The Red Raiders final conference game is a home doubleheader against Texas A&M Saturday and a doubleheader against Texas Sunday.

Lady linksters face challenge after first round in Big 12 tournament

LAWRENCE, Kan. (Special)—The Texas Tech women's golf team struggled in the first day of the Big 12 Championship Tournament, finishing the first round in 12th place.

The Red Raiders trail first-round leader Texas by 27 strokes.

Senior Tamara Parker and sophomore Brooke Lowrance led the way for Tech. Parker and Lowrance finished the first round in a tie for 26th place. Both shot a nine over-81 on the 6,100-yard, par-72 course at the Alvarado Country Club.

Parker is coming off her best showing of the season, finishing seventh last week in the Susie Maxwell Bering Classic in Norman, Okla.

Junior Kristin Kight finished with a 10-over par 82. Freshman Alana Soliz finished in a 44th-place tie after shooting an 84, and sophomore Beth Covington finished 14 over par, in a tie for 52nd place for the No. 36 Red Raiders.

Teams will play another 18 holes today, and the tournament ends with 18 holes Tuesday.
