Committee names two Tech endowed chairmen

Brian Smith
THEUNIVERSITYDAILY

Two endowed chairman recipients were named Thursday in a news conference.

Tech faculty members John A. Griswold and Kenneth M. Nugent were named as the first two doctors to receive these positions by a peer committee.

The 10 chairman endowments were set up by the University Medical Center when the institution received $1 million donations for each position in the fall of 1996.

David Smith, president of the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center, said he believes these endowments will enable Tech to compete on the national level.

"This will allow us to keep these two individuals here as well to allow them to do more research and expand their teaching time for medical students," Smith said.

Smith said two more recipients will receive the next chairman positions within the next two months, and he would like to see some of the remaining positions filled with senior faculty members from universities across the country.

Smith said he believes the two men chosen for these positions will represent Tech in a good way.

"They are superb physicians who are nationally known and spend many, many late nights in hospitals taking care of patients," Smith said.

TTUHSC spokesman John Walls said endowments are important for institutions to help recruit and retain outstanding faculty.

"These endowments allow us to aggressively compete against other academic health centers," Walls said.

President chooses Tech graduate for U.S. Army's top legal position

Brian Smith
THEUNIVERSITYDAILY

Texas Tech graduate Walter B. Huffman has been named as the judge advocate general of the U.S. Army.

Huffman was nominated for the position by President Clinton.

Judge advocate general performs two jobs, both of great importance, Huffman said. The judge advocate general is the personal legal adviser to the secretary of the Army and the Army's chief of staff.

Huffman received his undergraduate degree from Tech and then went on to receive a degree from the Tech law school in 1977.

"I received a great legal education from the Tech law school," Huffman said.

"I am quite honored to represent Tech and always have been."

Huffman said on top of all his other achievements, this is his most prestigious yet.

"When you are selected to lead the organization you have dedicated your life and career to, by definiand gives you all the guidance you need."

Wood said she liked working with Huffman because he treats everyone fairly and trusts people to do their jobs.

Conboy said as a legal officer Huffman is hard working, intelligent and loyal to everyone he deals with.

Conboy said he believes Huffman deserves to be the top uniform officer in the Army.

Huffman was named alumnus of the year by the law school last year and outstanding Tech alumni two years ago by the university.

Kathleen Wood, Huffman's secretary of four years, said he is patient, understanding and easy to work with.

"He is the best boss I have ever had," Wood said.

"He is really easy to work with

Cargo plane crashes in Miami

MIAMI (AP) — A cargo plane wobbled and went down after takeoff Thursday, crashing at the edge of the airport and hurling a wall of fire into a bustling business district. All four people aboard were presumed dead.

Flaming debris set cars ablaze and slid up to the doorsteps in the busy strip of warehouses, computer parts stores and flower wholesalers, melting awnings and sending panicked workers scrambling to get out.

"We didn't know it was an airplane. We were going crazy," said Mildred Marquez, who fled from Asian Sources Computer.

SPOTLIGHT on Campus parking

Ginger Westbrook
THEUNIVERSITYDAILY

In a rescue attempt for Texas Tech students overwhelmed with parking concerns, Tech administrators, Student Government Association members and Citibus are implementing Campus Express — a park-and-ride and apartment shuttle service.

"We certainly hope the students will take advantage of this service especially since parking is going to be tight while construction is going on," said Gail Wolfe, manager of traffic and parking.

Citibus mapped two different areas with two buses covering each route to pick up and drop off Tech students from campus.

The company then issued surveys to two area apartment complexes the week before spring 1997 finals and received a positive response from students.

One of the bus routes is along Fourth Street and north Indiana Avenue stopping at Heritage, Intern, Indiana Village, Shangri-La, Heritage, Savoy and Sierra Crossing apartment

• Quickserv Johnny and Angus Gooch

One of Dallas's hottest alternative bands and an up-and-coming band that played on the Lollapalooza tour will stop in Lubbock Saturday.

Quickserv Johnny and Agnus Gooch will play at Stubb's Bar-B-Que, 19th Street and Interstate 27, at 10 p.m. The cover is $5.

• Quickserv Johnny released their compact disc satellitely on Rainmaker Records Feb. 4 and have since received airplay on radio stations nationwide.

Twelve strong and catchy songs have made the album popular throughout Texas and the Midwest. Some of those songs include "Janitor Man," "Since I've Fallen," "Shotgun Hate," "Sun Static Yesterday," "Greater Dover Baytown" and "Elizabeth's Getting Married."

The release of the album came two years after the release of their first album, Beauty Knows No Pain.

Quickserv Johnny played 250 shows between the release of the two albums and opened for many top bands such as Better Than Ezra, Brother Cane, Deadeye Dick, Deep Blue Something, Goo Goo Dolls, Hagfish, Jackpierce and The Nixons.

Their last album included two of the most popular songs on Dallas radio, "Big Divide" and "Larry." Both songs remained in heavy rotation for several months.

Agnus Gooch, a new radio sensation, just started to receive national radio play. After their stint opening Lollapalooza, they have now started to tour on their own.

"I have heard from local DJs that they think they are one of the next big bands," said Lane Arnold, concert promoter. "This is a show with two bands on their way up in the music world."

To the Editor:

Saturday, Texans go to the polls to vote for or against a $1 billion tax cut.

While most homeowners are expected to save on the average of $144 a year, school districts around the state are having to raise their tax rates to generate more revenue.

Not to cover the loss of money to the homestead exemption, but to cover the increase in minimum salary levels for teachers.

Even though Gov. Bush stated at his press conference this week that the state is providing the money for the teachers' raise, local school officials disagree.

Larry Throm, chief financial officer for the Lubbock Independent School District has said "there's no new money for Lubbock. We're receiving less state dollars."

So, as the governor flies around the state bragging about the largest tax cut in state history, Texans in some areas are going to see their tax bill go up.

The governor's answer to that: "For those school educators around here who feel like they have got to raise property taxes — do so if you feel like it, but don't blame the state of Texas."

So as Gov. Bush goes around the state defending how he has had to rob Peter to pay Paul, we as Texans still do not have adequate funding for our public schools and no real meaningful tax relief.

To quote the governor, "If the people of Texas are silent on the subject of property taxes, the advocates of the status quo will win. So people have to speak up."

Texans will have that chance this Saturday and in November 1998. I think the amendment will pass and that Garry Mauro could be our next governor.

Go vote!

The United Spirit Arena

Budget still under negotiation, while arena construction continues

Jason Curtis
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

While the first stage of Texas Tech's United Spirit Arena's construction is well under way, the building's budget still is being negotiated.

Jim Crowson, Tech deputy chancellor, said construction bids currently are being considered.

"We're working with the apparent lowest bidder through a process called value engineering," he said. "That entails looking at things that can be changed to bring the cost down."

The 12,600-seat athletic arena was approved by the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board in October at a budget of $47 million; however, that number is subject to change, Crowson said.

"The approved budget includes a 10 percent variance for construction costs," he said. "That allows for a total budget of $51.7 million."

Crowson also said the total amount spent so far on the arena — about $6 million — has been in excavation and foundation work.

One of the conditions in the board's approval was that Tech raise half of the money in private and corporate donations.

Ronnie Hill, executive vice president and manager of South West Coca-Cola Bottling Company Inc., explained how his company will give money to the arena.

"We delivered $1 million last year, and we will deliver the other million in September," he said. "Typically, an advertising donation is paid over a number of years. We wanted to deliver Tech's gift as soon as possible."

Lubbock Power and Lighting committed $4.25 million to the project.

At this point, the expected opening date doesn't seem feasible.

Bobby Gleason, associate athletic director

"We gave $4 million up front," said Darrel Oliver, director of sales and services. "We'll pay $25,000 a year for a skybox, marketing purposes and economic prospects."

Oliver said LP&L's on-campus co-generation plant will have exclusive Tech service until 2019.

In addition to the corporate donations, Tech also was authorized to sell up to $90 million in bonds, $47 million of which could be used to pay for the construction of the arena.

"The bonds are outstanding, and we have the proceeds at hand," Crowson said. "We also have the corporate donations at hand."

Crowson also said the portion of the student use fee allocated toward the arena would not be raised to compensate for any funding problems.

The arena is tentatively scheduled to open January 1999; however, Bobby Gleason, Tech associate athletic director, said the opening may be delayed.

"At this point, the expected opening date doesn't seem feasible," he said. "We will not know until the bid is taken care of."

United Spirit Arena: Progress leads to questions

Facility's ability to house concerts remains undecided

Carrie Kilman
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech officials have made few concrete plans regarding how the United Spirit Arena will be equipped to handle concerts, even though construction of the facility began five months ago.

Officials have not decided whether the arena will house its own spotlights or whether Tech will rent spotlights only when needed, said Theresa Drewell, director of Tech's Office of Facility Planning and Construction. The arena manager, a position that remains vacant, will be responsible for making this decision.

To gain support for using part of the general use fee to help pay for the arena, Tech administrators promised students the arena would be equipped to house major concerts. About 4,100 students voted on the measure Oct. 1, with 83 percent in favor of the referendum.

The money for the purchase or rental of spotlights will come from the arena budget, Drewell said.

"Originally, we had not planned on spotlights," Drewell said. "The building was for basketball only."

Most concert arenas purchase their own spotlights, said Lubbock concert promoter Lane Arnold. Removable spotlights, similar to the kind Tech officials are considering, usually are more convenient because they can be removed when in need of repair.

Purchasing spotlights can be expensive, said John James, who works at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum and Memorial Civic Center. The coliseum's six spotlights cost $12,000 each.

Sammie Prather, co-owner of the sound and light provider Electric Ear of Lubbock, said rental price for spotlights is about $125 per spotlight per day.

According to the arena construction plans, three platforms on the south, west and east sides of the upper deck will be installed, onto which spotlights can be anchored.

An undetermined amount of seats will be lost because of the platforms, Drewell said.

"There's no other real use for the platforms except for maybe television cameras," she said. "Otherwise, they will remain empty."

The music groups that will perform in the arena will come with their own light and sound packages, Drewell said.

But most concert arenas provide spotlights, said Electric Ear co-owner Tom Prather. Major concert performers do not travel with their own spotlights, and many performers expect the concert arena to provide workers to handle the show, he said.

Tech officials have not decided whether they will hire Tech personnel to work the concerts or contract a private company or group of people to handle the concert setup and operation only when needed, Drewell said. If workers are contracted, the cost will come from the performer.

Arnold said a large concert can take 15 to 60 workers, not including the clean-up crew.

The decision of whether to hire personnel or contract workers lies in the hands of the athletic department, Drewell said.

Associate Athletic Director Bobby Gleason said no date has been set as to when these decisions must be made.

"I think right now that's a little premature," he said. "But it's a goal for the university to use the arena for a multitude of events."

The dates the arena will be available for concerts and other non-athletic events have not been decided, he said.

Athletic officials are unsure of the arena's opening date, which originally was scheduled for January 1999, Gleason said. Once an opening date is determined, a date will be set by which the decisions in question will be made.

"We'll probably do that about six to eight months before the arena opens," he said, although he was unable to estimate when an opening date would be set.

Darryl Robbins, an activities specialist for University Center Activities and the adviser for the concerts committee of UC Programs, expressed concern about how accessible the arena will be for non-athletic events.

"It's very difficult to get a venue and a performer at the same time," he said. "I have an idea the same thing will happen with this, simply because it's a sports facility."

Tech officials may shy away from allowing rock concerts in the arena because of potential damage often associated with rock performers, Robbins said.

"The idea of bringing music events isn't a very popular idea among the people in charge of athletic events," Robbins said.

But Deputy Chancellor James Crowson said administrators are taking an "aggressive" approach regarding non-athletic events.

"Athletics would always have first priority," Crowson said. "But it's a very high priority to offer this for things other than sports."

Gleason said the arena manager will be responsible for booking events, including concerts.

Robbins, however, said determining the date of a concert prior to booking the performer could cause problems.

"If it (setting the concert dates) is up to them, it's going to be very difficult to put something in there unless we can do it six months to a year in advance," Robbins said. "The problem with that is that most rock performers book two to four months in advance."

"If students are expected to pay money for this arena, students should be able to get their events in first (before other promoters)."

Crowson said the arena should be able to handle any entertainment or athletic event.

"We will be very aggressive about paid use of the arena," Crowson said. "If it (the arena) is built as we hope it will be, it will be flexible."

Athletics would always have first priority.

The other route is west on Fourth Street and turns around at Wal-Mart at Frankford Avenue with designated stops at Whisperwood, Park & Ride, Highgate, Wal-Mart, Fairway Villas, Branchwater/Villa West, Waterford and Stratford Place.

The designated park-and-ride area is located in a vacated Wal-Mart lot at Fourth Street and Slide Road. The lot is still owned by Wal-Mart.

The Indiana Avenue/Fourth Street schedule will run every 15 minutes from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

The west Fourth Street schedule will run every 20 minutes from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Citibus based its decision on the hours of operation based on the responses from the survey, and few responses requested service after 5 p.m., said Scott Mitchell, marketing director for Citibus.

Mitchell said the two areas are the most obvious routes to reach students, and any student can use the park-and-ride service.

Three of the four buses will be donated by Citibus for one academic year, and the other will be paid for by Tech students through student service fees. There will be no additional charge to ride the bus.

"Citibus is so confident that this program is going to work that we have funded three buses for the first academic year," Mitchell said.

For the use of three buses for one year, it costs about $47,000 per bus. This totals $141,000 a year.

"Down the road, I think it's something we need to fund, but right now it's nice to try something out at someone else's expense," said Russell Thomasson, Student Government Association president.

Citibus hopes the shuttles are successful enough that they can incorporate them into their yearly service, Mitchell said.

If the shuttle service proves successful after the trial period, funding for the buses will be in the hands, or pockets, of Tech officials and the Student Government Association.

During the United Spirit Arena construction, Thomasson said, "I would like to try to have them — the administration — pick up the tab for this."

Thomasson said he does not think this attempt will work, but it is something he will try for.

"By the time a student got in his car, drove to class, found a parking spot and walked to class, we figure it would take as much time to ride the bus," Mitchell said. "We're hoping this will alleviate some of the congestion on campus."

Another solution to the parking problem is the construction of the temporary lots located west of KTXT-TV and are expected to be finished Sept. 2 depending on weather conditions.

The lots will offer about 700 to 800 parking spaces for commuters.

As far as a parking garage is concerned, Wolfe said, "We don't have any funds to build a garage at this point. It would take several years to set aside money to build a parking garage because they are very expensive."

Tributes honor local music legend

Sebastian Kitchen
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Lubbock musician Donnie Allison not only portrays his idol in a musical, but he also will release an album in tribute to him.

"I see no greater honor than to portray my hero on stage," Allison said.

The Lubbock native will release a compact disc in tribute to the late Buddy Holly. The album will be titled A Tribute to Buddy Holly.

The CD will be released Sept. 4, three days before what would mark Holly's 61st birthday.

The release date also is during the Buddy Holly Music Festival, Sept. 4-7.

Allison will portray Holly in "Buddy! The Buddy Holly Story," during the festival. It will be the second year he has performed the title role.

"I am happy to be doing this again," he said.

Ten productions of the musical will take place at the Cactus Theater, 1812 Buddy Holly Ave., during the festival.

Tickets cost $20, $15 and $12.50 and are on sale at the theater box office. Tickets also can be ordered by calling 762-3233.

"After Donnie portrayed Buddy last year, we felt compelled to record this tribute to Buddy Holly," said Don Caldwell of Caldwell Productions, which runs the Cactus Theater and the shows performed there. "West Texas is known for amazing musicians. Donnie's talent really carries on that tradition — one that we can all be proud of."

The album will join the genius of Holly and his band, the Crickets, and the unique vocals of Allison.

Allison is one of several West Texas musicians to do tributes to Holly. Others include Roy Orbison and Waylon Jennings.

"You can't turn on the radio without some Buddy Holly influence," Allison said.

He also will be joined during the festival by several other performers including Carl Perkins, Joe Ely, Johnny Tillotson and the Maines Brothers.

Deep Blue Something and Ian Moore will both headline concerts at the festival.

"I see no greater honor than to portray my hero on stage."

Morris suspended for violation

WESTMINSTER, Md. (AP)— Bam Morris of the Baltimore Ravens will miss the first four games of the season because of substance abuse, leaving the team without its star running back.

"It's up to Bam whether he'll be back or not," coach Ted Marchibroda said Wednesday. "I just sort of feel that Bam let his teammates down."

Morris apologized Wednesday and said he planned to play later in the season.

"I'm sorry for my behavior with the team," he said after practice at Western Maryland College. "It was a mistake on my part. I let my teammates down. I let my mom down. I let my wife down. I let everybody down."

This was the second time Morris violated the league's substance abuse policy. Last year, he was suspended for four games after pleading guilty to marijuana possession.

Morris reportedly told teammates he failed a drug test several months ago. He learned earlier this week his appeal had been denied.

The NFL said he must sit out until Sept. 22, the day after the Ravens play at Tennessee. He will be eligible to return for the Sept. 28 game at San Diego. He may still practice and play in exhibition games, but Marchibroda does not expect to use him.

"We have concern for Bam's health and future," Ravens owner Art Modell said.

Modell said he agreed with NFL rules, but that he thought Morris deserved a second chance with an appeal. Modell said the suspension was disappointing because Morris was in good shape.

"He came in (to camp) in the best shape he's been in since his early days in Pittsburgh," Modell said. "I like Bam personally. I think Bam needs some direction. He needs some self-discipline, obviously."

The 24-year-old running back tested positive for alcohol during a urine screen in January, an infraction that carries a mandatory four-game suspension since it was his second violation.

Morris, a fourth year running back out of Texas Tech, said he would continue to work out and watch the team so he could return when the suspension is over.
