Dallas, for at least the first game of the season, looked to be the team of the 1990s once again.

And yes, of that 49 percent watching were a certain few in Wisconsin, so affectionately known as "cheese country."

Don't think for a minute that Packer fans weren't the first to notice that score and the dominating fashion in which Dallas posted it.

For the first week of the season, it looks as though Green Bay's chances of repeating may be on ice as thin as that which covers their beloved tun-

Ah, the tundra. Dallas, winners of eight consecutive games over the Packers, seven of which were by more than 10 points, travels to football's holy shrine this season, just one of the 19 consecutive games Green Bay promises to win this season.

The Packers swear up and down that Dallas is dead meat once they come to the tundra, that the Cowboys are too soft to win in such a brutal climate. But, maybe the Packers should closely evaluate Dallas' first game.

To begin with, Aikman, who always tears up the Packer secondary > Miller demands respect, and draws double teams away from Michael Irvin. And nobody, not even "Prime Time", can cover Michael Irvin oneon-one. Witness Sunday's seven catches for 155 yards and two touchdowns. Second of all, and most importantly, the Cowboys put up 37 points on a good defensive team without the help of Emmitt Smith. Emmitt undoubtedly will improve on his 69-yard effort against the Steelers, as teams will refuse to copy the Steeler's eight-man front. Pittsburgh picked their poison, willing to stop Smith in hopes of Aikman not being on his game.

It is unlikely that teams will be willing to copy that style, seeing the 37 points Dallas put on the board.

And the final two reasons are obvious. Deion Sanders finally decided to return punts and came within an inch of returning one for a touchdown. Sanders is hands down the best kick returner, save Mel Gray, the modern-day NFL has seen. Add a great kick returner to Dallas, and take one away, Desmond Howard, from Green Bay. Points are adding up in Dallas' favor already. And, oh yeah, in case you had forgotten, Leon Lett returns to the Dallas lineup just in time to play the Packers. See there, if you look closely, it should be easy to spot the cracks in Green Bay's frozen tundra.

And there's only one team that can expose them.

Cowboys keeping win in perspective

IRVING (AP) - On the airplane home from Sunday's 37-7 blowout of the Pittsburgh Steelers, Dallas coach Barry Switzer got on the public address system to warn his players about excess celebration.

"I told them to be smart," Switzer said. "I told them we had already had one screwup (Switzer carrying a gun in the airport), and I didn't want anybody to join me. I told them there was a lot of evening left, and I wanted them to do the right

Switzer also gave the team only 24 hours to think about the

"I told them they had a day to celebrate this one," Switzer said. "Championship teams understand the job they have to do. We know what it takes to win and lose football games. They know if you have to take a sack lunch to a game or a bathing suit and suntan oil." Switzer said Tuesday that games against underdog teams like the Arizona Cardinals next Sunday night are the toughest for coaches and players. He calls it a "sack lunch" game.

"I mentioned Iowa State a couple years ago and got in trouble," said the former Oklahoma coach. "I'm not going to fall into that trap this year. But we know we will have to prepare well for Arizona. They will be at home and ready to play.

"We saw the tape of the Steeler game yesterday, and we had some laughs and jokes. There's a lot of hee-having when you win. But these games (at Arizona) worry you, they sure do."

Dallas has defeated Arizona 13 consecutive times dating back to Oct. 14, 1990 when the Cardinals earned a 20-3 decision at Sun Devil Stadium. Cincinnati beat Arizona 24-21 last week on a touchdown with 38 seconds to play after Larry Centers fumbled trying to run out the clock.

"There is no question Arizona should have won the game," Switzer said. "They dominated the game for 3 1/2 quarters."

Switzer said the reason Dallas had dominated Arizona in the past was simple: talent.

"The Cowboys have had a dominating talent level, that's just being honest," Switzer said. "I just don't see them with 13 Pro Bowl players. But we know they will be ready to play hard."

Dallas played just well enough to beat Arizona twice last season, 17-3 at Texas Stadium in October and 10-6 at Tempe in December.

"We have a lot of respect for the way Arizona always plays us," said Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman.

Paralyzed TCU football player returns to school

FORT WORTH (AP) - Matt Moore was wheeled onto the Amon Carter Stadium field by his father last weekend as TCU football practice wound down.

For the first time since a 1995 accident left him paralyzed, Moore faced his Horned Frogs teammates.

Defensive tackle Matt Harper emerged from the circle of Frogs.

"We would like for you to be our honorary team captain," Harper said. With a humble nod, Moore ac-

"Having Matt here today was a message from God that we can't give up," said linebacker Kam Hunt, who was also a teammate of Moore's at Katy Mayde Creek High School near Houston.

"Matt didn't give up on himself, as we all could see this afternoon."

Many eyes welled with tears, including those of Moore's father, Ron, who was standing nearby as his son accepted the honor. "That was very emotional for us," Ron Moore said.

"I knew the first time we came back out to the field, it would be emo-

"But in some ways, it was also gratifying."

The event was a momentous step in Moore's return to campus and college life after a fall while catching passes before a walk-through practice at Amon Carter Stadium left the former running back's third and fourth neck vertebrae dislocated and left him without feeling from his shoulders down.

As a walk-on freshman in 1994, Moore caught the first touchdown pass during the season opener at North Carolina.

He earned a scholarship to begin his sophomore season but tragedy struck before the season-ending game against Texas A&M.

Moore, 21, had been rehabilitating at his parents' Houston home and returned to Fort Worth last week to begin classes Monday.

The English major will carry six credit hours this semester at TCU, taking British literature and philosophy

"It's exciting being back," Moore said as the wind blew his long blond hair into his face. "But the important thing is, I'm not trying to look too far ahead.

"I'm kind of taking this whole thing one day at a time and see what it's like.'

Though Moore realized the transition would be challenging, returning to TCU was always his intention. Moore is accompanied by his fulltime nurse, Jennifer Burns, and will be assisted by two other rotating nurses around the clock.

And for at least the next month, his mother, Lynn, plans to stay with him in a home near campus that the family purchased.

The family, along with Matt, remains hopeful that research in the spinal-cord field could pave the way for a full recovery.

"We're so proud of Matt and the way he has handled this all and gotten back to school," Ron Moore

"I suppose it says a lot about his character.

"Lynn and I both are so proud of

The same goes for Sullivan and the athletic and academic community at TCU.

TCU chancellor William Tucker. athletic director Frank Windegger and other university dignitaries made their way over to shake Moore's hand and offer encouragement as he watched the Frogs in their first controlled scrimmage of the summer. The NCAA's catastrophic injury insurance covers Moore's expenses, and Sullivan's wife, Jean, has spent the past two weeks diligently helping prepare the house while the coaching staff and athletic trainers worked on the landscaping.

"The actions they have taken just shows the type of class act coach Sullivan, his family, the players and school are," Ron Moore said about the Horned Frogs' athletic depart-

"Without them and the wonderful support they have given, none of this would be possible."

For now, Matt Moore is becoming reacquainted with his surround-

"It's really weird seeing some things again," he said. "So many memories are coming back at me.

Soccer changes defense after 0-2 start

BY KRISTIE RIEKEN

The University Daily

After what coach Felix Oskam called the team's best preseason ever, the Texas Tech soccer team is off to the worst start in their four-year his-

Currently the team is 0-2 after suffering a 3-1 loss to New Mexico Friday and a 3-2 setback to Mississippi Sunday.

"This is not the start we were looking for and hoping for," Oskam said. "We made too many mistakes defensively. If you do that, they will put it in the net."

The Red Raiders will kick off Big 12 play Friday when they face Oklahoma in Norman and finish the weekend off with a battle against Oklahoma State Sunday.

Oskam said he will make some changes prior to that game. Those changes, however, will not be personnel changes, but system changes involving the team's defensive scheme.

During spring practice, the team implemented a zonal defense and Oskam said he believes it will work well this year after seeing some success with it in the spring.

"It (the zonal defense) did not go well in the first games, so we are going to go back to a sweeper defense which is man-to-man coverage," he

Freshman walk-on Kellie McCallister, an Albuquerque, N.M., native, started her first game as a Red Raider against her hometown school.

It was an especially unique experience for the 5-3 goalkeeper since she was offered a scholarship to play for the Lobos but turned it down to come to Tech as a non-scholarship player.

"At first I was really nervous because it was my first game and even more so because it was against my hometown," McCallister said.

Oskam was impressed with her play this weekend and said she played well and saved several goals.

McCallister said her nervousness has worn off, and now she looks forward to contributing to the team in Big 12 play.

"I will just try to turn that nervousness into excitement," she said. "I try to come out in the best shape I can be in and help the team."

Sophomore forward Kristy Frantz, who scored Tech's only goal against New Mexico, said she sees team unity as a factor in their slow start.

"Lack of togetherness and lack of communication on the field was a problem in those games," Frantz said. "It seemed like we were a couple of different teams instead of one team united."

In order for the team to improve,

Albert's attorneys ask for sex case dismissal

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Mary Albert's lawyers asked Tuesday that the sexual assault case against the sportscaster be dismissed because a grand jury member once worked for the case prosecutor.

Defense attorney Roy Black contended that Amy Levine, one of the six grand jurors who indicted Albert in May, was campaign manager for Arlington County Commonwealth Attorney Richard Trodden in 1994 and

"Such a close relationship by an advocate of the very prosecutor presenting the indictment clearly taints the makeup of the grand jury in this case, gives the appearance of bias and is in and of itself cause for this indictment to be dismissed," Black wrote

The motion also asks that if the case goes to trial as scheduled on Sept. 22, that the jury not be allowed to consider consensual sodomy between Albert and his accuser as a crime.

Albert is charged with forcible sodomy in an alleged attack on a female acquaintance in an Arlington hotel room Feb. 12.

Sodomy in any form is a crime in Virginia. Defense lawyers want the trial judge to allow the jury to consider only the forcible sodomy charge and deny jurors the option of convicting him of a lesser, consensual charge.

One of Black's arguments is that prosecutors who claim Albert forced the woman to perform oral sex on him should not also be allowed to also argue that the sex was consensual, but a crime nonethe-

"Because consent is not a required element of forcible sodomy, the offense of consensual sodomy cannot be a lesser included offense," the motion argued.

Further, if the state concedes that the sodomy is consensual, it must also admit that its witness lied by saying she was forced, Black

"The commonwealth seeks to bring such a prosecution even though it would mean that the alleged victim of consensual sex is both perjurer for testifying falsely about force, and a sexual criminal for engaging in consensual sex."

Club pro hopes to reach inner-city youth through golf

FORT WORTH (AP)- While Tiger Woods provides the inspiration, Lindy Miller is providing the means.

Woods, of multicultural heritage, has been credited with causing a golfing boom, especially among children and minorities, after his stunning success as an amateur and on the PGA Tour. But inspiration can't buy lessons, clubs, golf balls or pay green fees.

That's why the Lindy Miller Foundation for Junior Golf could become a model for similar programs around

In the foundation's first summer lone, approximately 60 needy free golf programs at five Fort Worth community centers. For many, it was their first contact with the sport.

They learned, some with donated clubs, with wide-eyed fascination the basics of the golf swing, rules, etiquette and how to become better citizens. With the help of several golf pros and volunteers, the youngsters now only began learning the game, but they played for the first time.

Miller, Mira Vista Country Clubs's head professional, has realized for years that wanting to play golf and actually being able to afford it are problems, sometimes insurmountable, for many underprivileged chil-

Miller wanted to help these youngters even before Woods' arm pumpyoungsters of all races participated in ing and booming tee shots made him a household name.

June 1996. Mira Vista officials wanted him to schedule a pro-scratch tournament, with money raised going to a charity of his choice.

"I thought long and hard about it,"

"I thought of the choices that a lot people think about, but I wanted to do something with golf because it has made such a difference in my life. I decided I wanted to give kids, who don't have the opportunities that I did,

"My parents made a lot of sacrifices so that I could play golf, but some kids will never get exposed to the game, will never have a chance to play. I wanted to help those kids."

Miller, a former All-American at Oklahoma State who played on the Miller began mapping his plan in PGA Tour, knew that golf clinics alone weren't the answer.

He wanted something more far

He wanted a comprehensive that not only taught golf skills, but how to improve educational and social

He also wanted a golf course built in inner city Fort Worth and he considers the course as the keystone to his plan.

"There are several junior clinics every year, but these might be one-, two-, three-day clinics, and then that's it," he said.

"After the clinic, the underprivileged kids still can't afford to play and usually don't have access or transportation to a course."

So, the money from that proscratch was to form the beginning of the Lindy Miller Foundation for

It's showing promising growth, and the foundation could, in the near future, realize Miller's goal of building a golf course close to the inner city and affordable.

The foundation was enhanced this summer by a $50,000 donation from Mira Vista members and matching $50,000 by Mira Vista Development Corp. and crescent Real Estate Equities.

Miller has been talking with Parks and Community Services Director Richard Zavala and golf superintendent George Kruzick, both big supporters of the program, about acquiring land for a course.

They have a tentative area picked out at Interstate 30 and Oakland Boulevard.

There's enough land for a regulation nine-hole layout with a practice area and possibly practice holes. Golf resources, headed by PGA Tour player DA Weiberg and former Colonial greens superintendent Don Armstrong, already have plotted a tentative route for nine holes.

"But I don't want the course until we're fully funded," said Miller, who's trying to gain corporate longterm sponsorships for the golf project.

"I don't want to go in undercapitalized and not be able to do this right. I want financing to be a perpetual commitment."

So, Miller expects the program, which is coordinated by Rosemont Middle School teacher Tom Yates, to continue its present course for awhile, although he hopes that some youngsters will compete in Northern Texas PGA junior events next summer.

"The thing I like most of all is this is just not a program to teach kids how to play golf," said Yates, who was a youth pastor for 20 years.

"Lindy's vision is to make allaround students be good citizens of these kids. In the future, we'll have the kids show their report cards, and the volunteers will check on grades and be mentors to the children in other areas of life."

Yates said he has had several of the youngsters' parents, firefighters and seniors from the Meadowbrook Golf Course serve as volunteers.

Youngsters interested in the program must fill out applications at one of the city's five community centers -Martin Luther King, Hillside, Greenbriar, Diamond Hill, or R.D. Evans. During the summer, club pros visit on Tuesdays and Thursdays at each center to provide instruction.

Miller and Yates emphasize that golf is not the only thing children will be taught.

"We're teaching honesty, integrity, goal-setting, social development and getting along with other kids. And there's not a better way to learn than through golf," Miller said.

Sharon Norwood, mother of 14year old Arrington "Tank" Norwood, likes the concept.

"The program gives the children an opportunity to display their own techniques for the golf game," Norwood said of the concept of bringing golf to the inner-cities

"It also teaches responsibility, selfesteem, gives them goals and keeps their minds on positive things in life. I know that Tank has really enjoyed

Tech volleyball basks in Sheraton Shootout victory

BY CHARLES RAPIER

The Texas Tech volleyball team began its season in style by winning the Sheraton Shootout last weekend at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Four Red Raiders were honored with awards from the tournament.

Senior Brande Browne received the Most Valuable Player award.

Receiving all-tournament team awards were junior setter Lisa Hilgers, sophomore outside hitter Courtney Putnam and junior outside hitter Angela Cooper.

With victories over Texas-San Antonio and Portland Friday, plus wins against SMU and Ohio Saturday, the Red Raiders finished the tournament 4-0.

Flag football season opens

Flag football officials needed

Looking for a great way to earn extra money during school?

Do you need a flexible schedule? Want to have fun while you work?

If so, look no further than the intramural sports office.

If you are enthusiastic, dependable and enjoy a sports atmosphere come and join our intramural sports staff as a flag football official. No experience is necessary!

Full training is provided. The first official's clinic will be tomorrow Sept. 4 from 4 p.m. until 6 p.m. Flag football training continues the following week at the same times. All flag football officials are paid $10 per game. And yes, you can officiate and play the same sport. For more information regarding officiating call 742-3351.

Entries accepted soon

Intramural FLAG FOOTBALL entries will be accepted next week (Sept. 9-11) from 8 a.m. till 5 p.m. in

Copies of the available leagues can be picked up in the SRC. Plan to enter as early as possible in order to secure your most favorable playing time and/or location. In order to enter a team simply bring your roster with team members' names, addresses, and phone numbers to SRC 203 during the entry period.

A refundable $25 forfeit fee is also required. The intramural staff is anticipating over 200 teams so plan to enter early.

Fitness at the Rec

Fitness/Wellness Center

The Fitness and Wellness Center, located on the lower level of the Rec Center, offers a wide variety of activities to increase your wellness awareness and give you information to make better lifestyle choices. Blood pressures, body compositions, the use of a computer loaded with "healthy" software and a variety of handouts and information to your questions can always be found for free in the Fit/

Personal Training, Exercise Testing and Prescription and Weight Training classes are offered for additional fees. Register for Racquetball and Squash which are free! Looking for some fun this weekend? Check out the Apple Butter Festival Trip to the Hi-Plains Orchard Saturday. Spend the afternoon picking apples, enjoying music, entertainment and food. The van will leave the Rec at 2 p.m. and return around 5 p.m. There is a $1 donation fee - bring money to buy apples and have fun. Call 742-3828 to register to ride with us or ask for directions to go on your own. We will gladly mail a Fit/Well brochure on campus or check us out on the web at http://ww.ttu.edu/recsports.

Aerobic and Fitness Classes

The regular fall fitness schedule begins today at the Student Rec Center. It includes classes from 6:35 a.m. to 9 p.m., Monday through Friday and various classes on the weekend.

The types of classes Recreational Sports offers on a drop in basis are Steppin' Out, Step-N-Slide, Low Impact, Hi/Lo, Total Body Conditioning, Shape and Tone, Intro to Step/Slide, Water Aerobics, 1\2 & 1\2, Abs & Back and Stretch.

Come to the Rec and try one of these classes for a good workout and a fun time!

The registration fitness schedule is full of a wide variety of activities. These classes are limited and require registration because of their unique specialty. The classes include Knockout Jam, Boxing Techniques, Belly Dancing, Yoga, Squash, Racquetball, Women-N-Weights, Women-N-Free Weights and Men's Weight Training. Register beginning September in the Fitness/Wellness Center of the SRC. Payment is required when registering. All classes begin the week of Sept.

For more information, call 742-3828 or 742-3351.

Sports Clubs to Meet

Women in Sports Club Club Day

The Department of Recreational Sports and various sports clubs are having the Women in Sport Club Day on Sunday from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. Each sports club will be available for questions, provide information and will have demonstrations of their sport.

All students are welcome to come to the Students Rec Center and the grass fields south of the SRC to participate in the activities and try out a new sport.

If you have any questions about the Women in Sports Club Day, call 742-3351.

Meeting

There will be a Sports Club Meeting at 4 p.m. Thursday in room 205 in the SRC. Representatives (all officers) from each club should be present to receive information for the semester.

The topics of discussion will cover club organization, year's budget, procedures, schedules and officer responsibilities. This is a mandatory meeting for all club officers. If an officer cannot make this meeting then the rest of the officers should. If there are any concerns or questions, please contact Pee Wee or Janda at 742-3351.

Get wet at Rec Center

Our top is still OFF!! Come on by and relax at the Aquatic Center while the sun is still out. To kick off the semester, we will be having drop-in water polo every Thursday night from 6-8 p.m. We will have innertubes available if you would like to try it

The Wet Set Club will be swimming the Galapagos Islands this semester. Stop by the Aquatic Center to register and record your mileage.

For those of you who have always wanted to learn to swim we have the class for you. Adult beginner swimming will be held October 6-22 (Mondays and Wednesdays from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m.) for only $15 for TTU students and Fac/Staff.

Club Sports Opportunities

The Recreational Sports Department sponsors the Sports Club Program at Texas Tech University to provide opportunities for students to engage in an in-depth sports experience that is not provided in the structured Intramural Program, Open Recreation Program or Intercollegiate Athletic Program. The focus of the Sports Club Program blends the aspect of learning new skills, practicing with fellow participants and competing with other clubs.

A Sports Club is a registered student organization administered through the Recreational Sports Department that has been formed by individuals motivated by a common interest and desire to participate in a favorite sport activity. The club exists to promote and develop interest in that sport. Its members learn new skills, refine existing skills, engage in competition and enjoy the recreational and social fellow-

This represents whether a school is retaining and graduating those who enroll as freshmen and is often regarded as a measure of how satisfied students are with a school, according to the U.S. News and World Report. Montford said the retention rate is one of Tech's biggest problems, partially because of Tech's distance from the Metroplex and Houston areas.

Judge orders investigation on paparazzi

PARIS (AP) - A French judge declared seven paparazzi to be manslaughter suspects Tuesday in the death of Princess Diana, including one aggressive photographer said to have felt the dying princess's pulse while snapping shots of the car wreck.

A lawyer for one photographer dismissed the investigation as "theater justice," a slap to public outrage over the fact that Diana, her millionaire boyfriend and their driver were killed while being chased by

But an attorney for boyfriend Dodi Fayed's father, Mohammed Al Fayed, said there was "causality" between the photographers' pursuit and the fatal crash, and the elder Fayed was joining the case as a civil party to prove it.

Fresh disclosures, however, pointed anew at a combination of deadly factors in Sunday's accident, including the apparently drunken condition of the driver, a Fayed employee.

A Paris newspaper reported chauffeur Henri Paul's blood alcohol level may have been almost four times the legal limit at the time of the crash - higher than originally believed. The photographers who went before the judge

Tuesday, one-by-one, all had been in custody since being arrested at the crash scene Sunday morning. Judge Herve Stephan placed them under formal

Legislators begin with new promises

WASHINGTON (AP) - Lawmakers began returning from their summer recess on Tuesday with leaders pledging not to let differences over spending bills force another government shutdown. But they also conceded several thorny issues need to be resolved this fall.

President Clinton, meanwhile, might see the coming weeks as fresh opportunity to use his line-item

"I'm not interested in creating confrontational issues or avoiding them," Senate Majority leader Trent Lott, R- Miss., told reporters, as he outlined the Senate's agenda for the coming weeks.

The Senate returned from its month-long recess on Tuesday; the House is back Wednesday.

Both Lott and House Majority leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, warned that a priority item of Clinton's so called fast-track authority for negotiating trade agreements could be in jeopardy.

And little enthusiasm was voiced on either side of the capitol for another item on the administration's wish list campaign reform.

Lott said he wants to wait until the Senate Governmental Affairs committee, chaired by Sen. Fred Thompson, R-Tenn., finishes its review of 1996 campaign misdeeds "to see which (existing) laws were broken."

Measures being taken to ensure student safety

BY CAREN CARNEFIX

The University Daily

With school back in session, students may be concerned about their personal safety at Texas Tech. However, Tech offers various safety services throughout campus.

The University Police Department offers a shuttle service, funded by the Tech Housing and Dining Department, for students that operates between 5 p.m. and 4 a.m.

The shuttle vans enable students to travel safely across campus, stopping at residence halls, academic buildings and campus parking lots. A flashing blue light on top of each van distinguishes these vans from the Student Recreation Center shuttle vans.

"The shuttle provides a very needed service," said Dan Hale, public information officer for the University Police Department. "They are our eyes and ears. There's a significant number of riders — more than you'd Shuttle van routes can be obtained in residence halls, the Dean of Students Office, Traffic and Parking Office, the Student Government Association Office, Student Health Services, the Tech library and the UPD.

The blue light emergency telephones, located throughout campus, provide a quick service to students in need of the police. Students can summon help by picking up the phones and pressing a red button. A UPD dispatcher answers right away and knows immediately the location of the phone.

When reporting a crime, time, observation and willingness to get involved are the most important factors,

For on-campus emergencies students can dial 9-911. Students with non-emergencies can reach the UPD at 742-3931.

Giving an accurate recollection and description of the facts and circumstances help officers to find suspects, Hale said. Permanent descriptive features of a suspect, such as height, hair color and distinctive physical characteristics, are especially important.

Hale said the permanent things are the things that help the UPD officers considerably.

"I feel that if a person exercises good judgement, then it is a safe campus," Hale said.

Compared to other Texas campuses, Tech has favorable statistics, he said.

"We like to contribute that to good police work, but there are other factors too," he said.

In a friendly West Texas community, students are more inclined to help one another out, Hale said.

Funding from the federal government enabled the UPD to hire five additional uniformed officers to increase patrolling manpower for the fall semester. The officers, hired in January, trained for the positions over the summer and now are able to patrol the campus in cars or on bikes.

"The increase in manpower is advantageous to us, students and visitors because it has increased visibility," Hale said. "Hopefully people will drive safer and think twice about committing crimes."

One Tech student said she finds safety in numbers. "I feel safe, I guess, where there's a bunch of people," said Tina King, a freshman pre-med major from Anton

"I'd rather be with a group of people even in the daytime. I just feel safer."

Although 1996 crime statistics reflect a decrease in crime since the previous year, students should exercise good judgement to keep safe.

Mass graves give insight

CHACALTE, Guatemala (AP) -When the armed men came, 9-yearold Roberto Sanchez hid with his sister under their bed. His mother was shot dead, apparently shielding the children with her body.

He fled when flames destroyed their house, killing his little sister. It is the sort of story that has become routine as Guatemalans piece together the bloody history of a threedecade civil war that ended in December. Here, survivors say, it was not the army blamed for the butchery.

It was the rebels.

A new project to exhume mass graves at Chacalte is the first probe into guerrilla war crimes since forensic anthropologists five years ago started digging up the secret graves left over from the war.

"This was a dirty war," said Sanchez, who on his way to adulthood learned much about the raid from older villagers over the years.

At least 120 people were killed in one battle at the height of the war.

New institute director utilizes former air base

Texas Tech's new Institute of Environmental and Human Health will be directed by Ronald J. Kendall.

"The institute will access the impact of toxic chemicals on the environment and human health and also educate the public of these effects," Kendall said. "We have an incredible opportunity to move forward and integrate environmental research and education."

The institute, a joint venture between Tech and Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center, will be located where Reese U.S. Air Force Base formerly was, Kendall said.

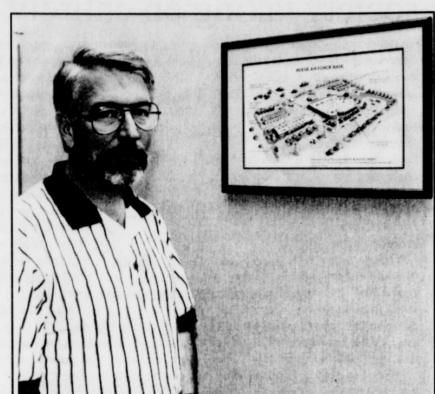

It will create many opportunities for internships and jobs, he said.

"We are very impressed with the quality of students we can get right here at Texas Tech," Kendall said.

Although the institute will try to enhance environmental research at Tech, it also will focus on human health.

"The institute is funded through a variety of sources including federal and state funds, research grants and contracts, particularly from industries," Kendall said. "We feel like what we are doing is extremely important to the state, country and High Plains in terms of water quality, pesticides and groundwater."

Eric McAlpine, a graduate student studying environmental engineering from Amarillo, believes the institute

"If it makes Tech look better, I'm all for it," Alpine said.

"It is programs like this one that will make our degrees worth some-

He also understands the need for such research and education about environmental pollution and how it affects human health.

"Environmental pollution is something that affects us all in many ways, including our health," he said. "This is a great idea because it educates as well as researches."

Kendall received a Ph.D. from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University and an Environmental Protection Agency post-doctoral traineeship from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Kendall was formerly the director of The Institute of Wildlife and Environmental Toxicology at Clemson University and has written several books.

heard that alcohol keeps you on a cold day. If that's the case, then why the problem with carrying my whiskey into a football game on cold days?

ctually, what you have heard is false. Alcohol does NOT keep you warm on a cold day. When you drink, the arteries near the outside layer of your skin dilate due to the alcohol.

This gives you a false sense of warmth when actually you're losing more heat that way. When the arteries are more hidden and not dilated, they provide warmth.

I hear that staph infections cannot be cured by antibiotics. Is that true?

Staph infections are dirty bugs that love to haunt hospitals. The germ, staphylococcus aureus, is the No. 1 cause of hospital infections.

The most common treatment has been an antibiotic called vancomycin, however, doctors in Japan are reporting a new staph that is resistant to everything.

Many of us are guilty of believing that antibiotics can treat viruses and other things, which they cannot. Doctors are being urged to limit the use of antibiotics to reduce the risk that more resistant strains of staph will develop.

Someone told me if I put ice cubes my testicles before having sex that my girlfriend will not get pregnant. Is that true?

Yeah, right. That method of birth control works about as well as some other goofy methods and bogus rumors about how not to get pregnant like: douching with soda after sex; first timer's cannot get pregnant; if menstruation is occurring you're safe; if you pull out before coming she cannot conceive; if she has no orgasm she cannot get pregnant; if she uses a spermicide after sex, it kills the sperm and if a condom breaks that has lubricant or spermicide on it, you're Iced testicles only means you go through a painful experience for nothing and the rest of the list means you are playing sexual roulette, and her chances of getting pregnant are really good. Repeat this for five minutes every three to four hours or until the sore heals. The compressing added to the milk's protein drys up the sore.

What advice do you have for a guy who wants to look thinner without all the work of exercise or diet?

How about dressing thinner? Tuck in your shirt for a slimmer line. If you're short, do not wear pants with cuffs and if you rear end could use slimming, try pocketless pans and jackets with built-up shoulders.

Do not wear sweaters or vests that hug your body. Wear a dark colored belt about an inch wide instead of a wide belt. The main idea is to draw the eyes vertically, not horizontally where stomachs, butts and thighs tend to widen. Do not make the mistake that women do and wear something too tight or too big, which either way accents a weight problem. After all, everyone's crazy about a sharp dressed man.

I've been taking iron pills since I heard they give you energy, but instead of making me feel better they make me feel even more tired. I'm thinking about switching to vitamin C since I've heard it's even better. Why didn't the iron pills work?

You need to see a health care professional about being tired. Actually, some people can get iron overload and the iron pills or even vitamin C can be toxic. Your health care professional can order blood analysis and/or check out other problems that might be causing your exhaustion. Self-treatment isn't always a good idea - even for what seems like a simple case of the "tireds."

I live in a neighborhood that has a lot of burglaries. Any advice on how to keep my stuff safe while in class and at work?

One key is to trick the burglar into thinking you are home. If you have to be out at night, leave a few lights on in rooms that face the street. Leave a car in the driveway, except in winter where lack of tracks in the snow indicate the car isn't being used. Don't leave uncollected newspapers out front. Lock all doors, windows and don't put a key outside in the obvious hiding places. Keep your blinds/ curtains closed so the burglar can't see what you have to steal and if you're home. Get to know your neighbors.

As a college bum, I normally frequent grocery stores about once a month, usually around payday, and go through a process I like to call "buy whatever you can, as long as it can all go in a sandwich."

I conduct my binge with care and make sure to purchase what is in the reduced aisle, which is usually that cart all alone and overstuffed.

You know the one I'm talking about, it's full of products with generic labels and made from body parts of animals you never knew existed.

You can usually spot this cart because its probably moving around the store on its own freewill or being pushed around by a three month old turkey. Of course, I do splurge a little and find my way to the lazy man's section and purchase anything that can be cooked within five minutes and in my car engine. I know some of you out there

familiar ground, but have you taken time to actually look and see how much variety there is at your local food mart?

When I went shopping just yesterday I was amazed to find pre-cooked soup in a stylish glass jar. How lazier can people get, as if powdered soup weren't easy enough? What is going to happen next, pre-mixed Kool-Aid and already beaten eggs?

Nowadays you can find salad in a bag, fruit cocktail in a can and a whole tuna salad with cracker meal in an easy one portion container. The list goes on, but I was flabbergasted when I came upon this next feat of gourmet technology. Get ready pudding in an easy to squeeze

It just amazes me how quickly our marketers push out products tailor-made to our fast-paced society. I think the most clever ideas were that of fast-food restaurants, what I lovingly call my grocery store away from Albertson's. I tend to buy most of my groceries from these chain res. taurants, after all they're convenient and fast. As members of the American society, we all fall victim to the fast-paced nature of our lives.

It just amazes me how much people are willing to do to make money off our busy lives. At any rate I'm just waiting for drive-thru burger IV's and five-course-meal jelly beans.

I guess we can start calling factories "Mommy," because from now on they'll be making our "home-cooked meals."

Britons' grief close to home for Americans

DALLAS (AP) — The untimely death of a popular princess unleashed familiar grief in the city where a president died.

At the Sixth Floor Museum, where visitors walk through displays on the life, times and 1963 assassination of President John F. Kennedy, the fate of the young and beautiful Diana evoked echoes of the past.

"Princess Diana suffered an early, tragic death, as did President Kennedy."

Another visitor also noted the parallels between the princess' death and that of Kennedy, who was 46, said Bob Porter, the museum's director of public programs.

In central London Tuesday, a grieving human tide engulfed St. James's Palace, where Diana's body lay in a chapel closed to the public, as the British monarchy and government prepared for Saturday's grand funeral.

The White House announced that first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton will attend on behalf of the United States.

Thousands of Britons waited hours to sign books of condolence at St. James's — ordinary people with special places in their hearts for the young princess.

"Actually, I think the royal family should be done away with," said Irene Treble, 85.

"But Diana was amazing as she had a real common touch that appealed to so many people."

The circumstances of her death - a high-speed chase by celebrityhunting photographers on motorcycles, an alcohol-loaded driver who may have been pushing the armored Mercedes-Benz sedan over 100 mph as it roared through a Paris tunnel — have outraged people worldwide.

An American businessman who said he happened on the scene just after the crash called the photographers "disgusting."

Some witnesses said photographers even pushed aside rescuers and policemen, saying they were ruining their pictures.

Police accused Romuald Rat, of the Gamma photo agency, of obstructing the work of the first officers on the scene.

Study finds TB genes constant, may allow vaccine for all strains

HOUSTON (AP) - Most mutations of the germs that cause tuberculosis are caused by the antibiotics used to treat the disease, according to a study published Tuesday by a group of Baylor College of Medicine researchers.

The study, appearing in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Science, found antibiotics used to attack mycobacterium tuberculosis, the bacteria that causes the disease, are the biggest sources of mutation and corruption in the bacteria.

HIV, the human immunodeficiency virus that causes AIDS, has mutated repeatedly and spontaneously, dramatically complicating the search for a vaccine against AIDS.

That does not appear to pose a problem for tuberculosis, said James Musser, the Baylor associate who led the study.

Unlike HIV and other organisms, the change in the TB germ's genetic structure are not the random ones seen when cells divide and reproduce. Musser and his team found few spon-

"Every gene we sequence is essentially identical regardless of where you recover the organisms — Tibet, Nepal, China, Alaska, the United States, Europe," Musser said.

"The geographic changes are not as dramatic as those seen with something like HIV."

That's good news for scientists working to develop a vaccine against TB. Although relatively rare in the United States, at least one-third of the world's population is infected with the TB organism.

"If we identify a good vaccine, it will probably work on all strains globally. It is so unlike the HIV situation where you have this massive rate of change in the virus," Musser said.

"Similarly, if we develop new antibiotics, they will work on most of the forms of mycobacterium."

According to the study, about 95 percent of genetic changes identified in the structure of the tuberculosis organism were associated with antibi-

The changes make the organism resistant to the antibiotics. That raises the need for a vaccine, since the effectiveness of antibiotics is treating tuberculosis is waning.

Post office shooting leaves two dead

■ Postal worker opens fire on crowd, kills himself

MIAMI BEACH (AP) - A postal worker opened fire today in a crowded post office, critically wounding two women before shooting himself to death as terrified customers fled, authorities and witnesses said.

The man came in the office about 1 p.m., walked behind the counter and shot the two women in the lobby, said Bobby Hernandez, a police spokesman.

"He came around the counter and shot each victim once," said Hernandez. "He exited the post office, went to a tree, looked up in the air and shot himself in the face."

Hernandez said the women were believed to be customers but police said. had no information on whether the gunman knew the women

· A postal worker in Miami Beach opened fire in a crowded post office.

 The scene is only a few blocks from where Gianni Versace was killed.

He couldn't confirm the account by one witness that a woman's complaint about mail service preceded the shooting.

"A lady in line was complaining that the post office workers were too slow, she was protesting loudly," said Judy Rivas, a store worker from across the street who said she was there to check her mail.

Amy Reed, another witness who works nearby, said she saw people fleeing the post office.

"I heard a lot of commotion," she

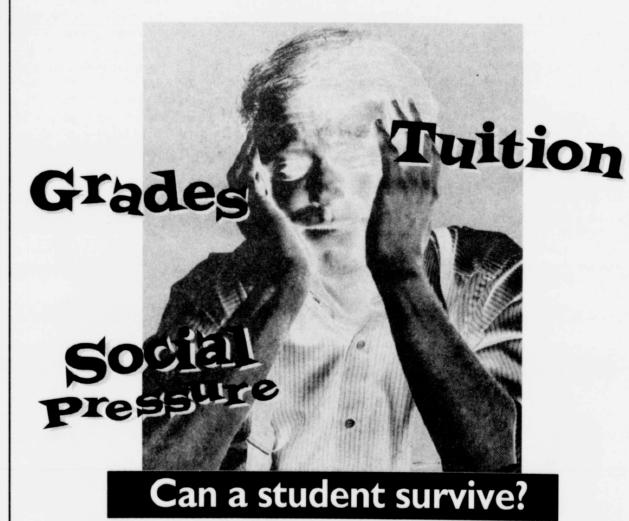

"Dogs were barking, people were screaming and running towards me."

Lorraine Nelson, spokeswoman at Jackson Memorial Hospital, said the two women who were shot " are in the operating room in critical condition. They are from the Post Office shooting, that's all we know."

"My understanding is that the third one is at the scene," she said.

An hour or so after the shootings, a body lay in the parking lot, covered with a tarp.

The scene is only a few blocks from the oceanside mansion where designer Gianni Versace was shot to death in July. The suspect, Andrew Cunanan, was later found dead of a self-inflicted wound.

"Everyone is familiar with song of the movie "Platoon." Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue," said Albert-George Schram, music director and conductor for the LSO.

"Many fewer know his Piano Concerto, which in my opinion, is the greater masterpiece. It taps into our American musical roots — as Rhapsody does also with its references to blues and swing.'

Former Texas Tech School of Music faculty member Steven Glaser will return to Lubbock to perform at the concert. Glaser, a former member of the keyboard faculty, will play Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F with the orchestra.

Schram also said people will be familiar with Barber's Adagio for Strings. The tune is set to the theme

Dog shrink counsels pet, owners

SUTTON, Vt. (AP) - Luckily for ents there since moving to Sutton in Squeeze, a large black and white mutt, his owner knows what makes him

Corey Cohen, a dog behaviorist, knows how to placate Squeeze when he's anxious, and to distract him when he's focusing too hard in a perceived threat. He knows Squeeze isn't being rude: he's just being honest about his feelings.

"He's shy," Cohen explained as Squeeze barked at strangers in his Sutton home. "He warms up to people slowly."

But so many Squeezes out there remain misunderstood. For them, and for their owners, life can be a frustrating turmoil of chewed furniture, chased cars and peed-on rugs.

That's where Cohen comes in.

Cohen, 37, studied human psychology in college and makes his living as a consultant in the field of animal behavior, steering wayward canines and their owners back together.

Cohen and his wife, Phyllis, have had practice in Rockland County, N.Y., and Bergen County, N.J., since 1987, and he has continued to see cli-

June 1995.

Mainly. Cohen tries to bring people together with their pets.

He also hears a huge range of complaints from clients. There are dogs that chase joggers, dogs that bark all the time and dogs that are too scared to leave the house. Aggression is a very common complaint.

To all of the owners, Cohen says the same thing: Get to know your dog. And respect his or her nature.

"There's such a push to change them —there's a mold that people want their dogs to fit into, as if they were punched out of an assembly line somewhere in Detroit," Cohen said.

Cohen's job has taught him a lot about other peoples' dogs as well.

He loves dogs' individuality and their relationship with their owners.

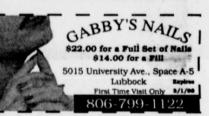

"Domestic dogs really never grow up," he said. "They're totally dependent on us for their survival."

And he says that, yes, those little dogs really do bark more.

"I always wonder if it was a complex they had, being so small," he said

CAN provides Tech students with chance to get involved

BY LAURA HENSLEY

The University Daily

Texas Tech students are always busy. They hustle from class to class, often juggling work and school with a social life.

One of the last things on a student's mind is to cram his or her schedule even tighter. But spending free time helping others and getting involved with various volunteer opportunities can prove rewarding.

"I started volunteering with stuff when I was 14," said Amanda major from Cheyenne, Wyo. "It's not a question of not having time. It's like how some people workout - it's just part of my routine."

McAlpin volunteers with the Adult Education Program during her lunch break. This program is one of the many programs offered through The Community Action Network.

The educational program is offered to more than 50,000 people in the Lubbock area who have literacy problems. CAN, in conjunction with the Lubbock Independent School District's Adult Education Program and various departments on campus, have formed a student-tutoring program for Tech employees.

CAN provides students and faculty with the opportunity to volunteer and

"We really want to get students involved, especially new students. We want them to get connected with Tech," said Sara Solloway, activities specialist and director of CAN.

CAN began in 1990 and is a branch of the University Center Activities office. Students can go any-McAlpin, a freshman architecture time to the second floor of the UC to sign up to volunteer with any activity, she said.

> CAN coordinates and provides information and resources about different volunteer opportunities in the Lubbock community. The program also provides individuals, student organizations, faculty or staff with the opportunity to volunteer in its 12 areas throughout the year.

Mary Donahue, an activities specialist who is involved with CAN's Adult Education program, is always looking for volunteers.

"Anybody who is interested in sharing their knowledge with somebody else that needs help is welcomed," Donahue said.

"But it really doesn't matter, we just need someone who has patience and can sit back and understand where the other person is coming from and wants to learn about other people through this experience."

The volunteer experience calls upon different people with different talents. Because CAN offers various programs, it is able to meet the different needs of a certain volunteer.

"One thing good about CAN is that some activities are one-time things or other programs are semester-long," Solloway said. "We help volunteers find a place where they can fit in and that fits their schedules."

Community action days, food bank work days, Habitat for Humanity and ecological awareness are some of the programs an organization or individual can choose from.

This year CAN is undergoing reconstruction to better meet the needs of Tech students.

"This year we are under construction and accessing CAN's mission and programs, so we are not going to do as many programs," Solloway said. "But we are still offering a lot of activities."

Students soon can have the opportunity to scope out many different ways to get involved on campus. Student Involvement Week begins Sunday with Sport Club day from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. in the Student Recreation

During the rest of the week, several fairs will be happening in the UC courtyard. The Community Service Fair will last from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday.

Representatives from more than 50 community agencies will give information on specific volunteer opportunities with their agencies.

"Next week is really the time to see what you're interested in and sign up," Solloway said.

"I think it (volunteerism) is really a hands-on experience for what they (the students) learn in the classroom depending on their majors. It's a good way to spend time and a good way to really help others."

'Pulp Fiction' pioneer takes to life on streets, rides buses with America

Ask Samuel L. Jackson for an autograph. Just don't forget the magic word.

"I make 'em say 'please," Jackson said.

"That's one of my little quirks, you know.'

Jackson, who in the last six years has risen from a well-respected but 3 star would be tempted to look down little-known cameo actor to a highly visible cinematic success with such hits as "Jungle Fever," "Pulp Fiction" few quirks.

After all, he has spent more than 25 years fine-tuning the craft he first fell in love with on the stage at Morehouse College in Atlanta in the early 1970s.

Now that he's made a name for himself, one would think the 6-foothis nose at the little people. Instead, he rides the subway with them.

"People go, 'You know, you look

NEW YORK (AP) — Go ahead. and "A Time to Kill," is entitled to a like that Sam Jackson guy,' and I'll go, 'Really?'" Jackson said, a wide smile creeping across his face and his right eyebrow lifting mischievously. "But I can't be him because I'm on the subway, and Sam Jackson doesn't ride the subway, he rides around in limos. He's FAY-muss."

> Jackson admits to occasionally throwing around his weight, but he says he limits it to the little things, like scoring a free press pass to a movie or a table at his favorite res taurant. Whatever the case, he is more likely to poke fun than congratulate himself for it.

"It's ME and I want to come into your movie," he said, projecting a rumbling bass as he leans forward on a sofa at The Mark Hotel and puffs up his chest in mock self-importance. "It's crowded out here. Do I really have to stand in this line?"

The real Jackson is friendly, relaxed and unpretentious as he engages in the last of about two-dozen interviews on a recent Sunday afternoon. He saunters overt to turn off a golf game on television that no one's watching before he settles down with his hands folded on top of his head and a bottle of lemon Perrier balanced on the floor between his feet.

Absent is the frowning face and furrowed brow intensity of "187," a short-lived but acclaimed summer movie in which Jackson starred as a science teacher named Trevor Garfield who goes over the edge after being stabbed by a student in one school and threatened by vicious students in another.

But the electric undercurrent that ran through his portrayal of the wired, crack-head Gator in Spike Lee's "Jungle Fever" (1991), and the wisecracking, Bible -reciting hit man Jules in "Pulp Fiction" (1994) is palpable as Jackson drags on a Newport, rapidly taps his feet on the floor or raps his knuckles on the table while mak-
