The University Daily will draft resolution

Texas Tech professors will draft a resolution about faculty members voting on their spouse's tenure.

The resolution will be voted on at the next meeting of Tech's chapter of the American Association of University Professors. The decision may be submitted to the administration if it is adopted.

Mindy Stombler, assistant professor of sociology and the secretary of AAUP, said if Tech adopted a policy about faculty members voting on their spouses, it would have more of an impact in larger departments than in smaller ones.

"There are multiple conflicts of interest among tenured faculty regarding anyone's tenure vote," she said. "Either no one with conflicts of interest should vote or everyone should vote, but spouses should not be singled out as the only conflict of interest worth officially prohibiting."

Other relationships that can contain conflicts of interest when voting on spouse's tenure, Stombler said, are gay couples who cannot marry legally, couples who never advertise their unions, people involved in interoffice affairs and business partners.

"By singling out this one relationship, either prohibiting them from voting or allowing to vote, would not have a tremendous impact on the outcome of tenure decisions in the university," Stombler said. "This is more of an issue of professionalism, and spouses are professionals and are hired as professionals and therefore should be able to act as professionals when making the decision whether to Monty Strauss, senior associate dean of the graduate school, said graduate faculty status is driven by qualifications to teach and work with graduate students.

"What were looking at is the intellectual vitality that is appropriate for working with graduate students," he said. "Quantity is not the most important thing. It's easy to count See TENURE, page 2

financial aid approaches

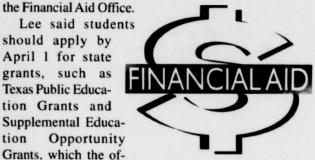

BY JASON LAWRENCE

The University Daily

Texas Tech students not wanting to foot their entire tuition bill have a limited amount of time to apply for financial aid assistance.

Although there is no deadline to apply for financial aid, the Financial Aid Office plans to begin awarding grant money sometime next month, said Jill Lee, an adviser in the Financial Aid Office. Lee said students should apply by April 1 for state grants, such as Texas Public Education Grants and Supplemental Education Opportunity fice is allotted a limited amount.

"When the funds run out, and they (students) file late but otherwise would have been eligible, they aren't going to get grant money," she said.

Lee said files are processed in the order they are received, but students who are late with their paperwork should still apply for other types of aid, such as federal loans

"There's really not a deadline," she said.

"We are still working students for last fall and spring right now."

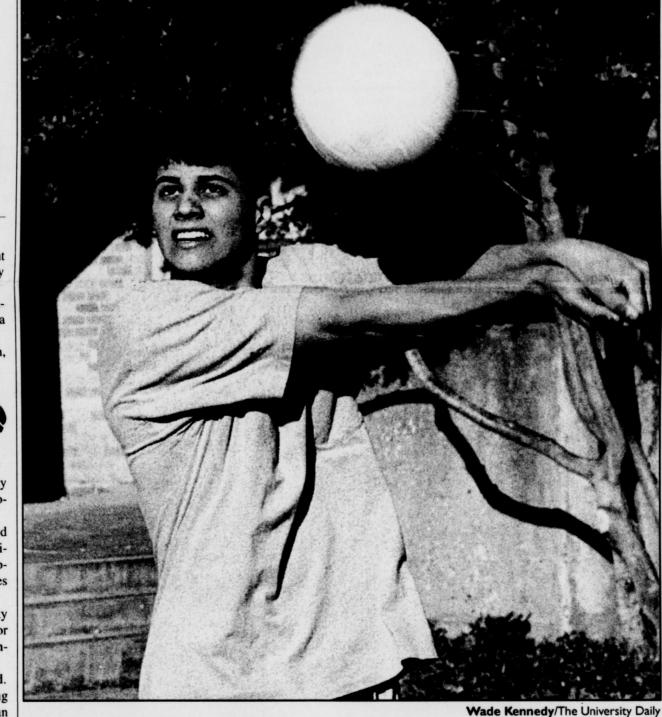

Professor dominates in primaries

BY JAMES WALKER

The University Daily

Texas Tech professor Mark Harmon earned the right to challenge U.S. Rep. Mac Thornberry, R-Amarillo, by defeating his opponent in the Democratic primary.

Harmon, a professor in the Department of Mass Communications, defeated Ed True, a lawyer from Wichita Falls.

"Ed brought some important issues into the campaign, and I'm glad he ran," Harmon said. "The next step is to challenge Mac Thornberry to a televised debate. The voters deserve a head-to-head comparison."

In Lubbock County's biggest upset, incumbent county judge Don McBeath lost to Republican primary opponent Tom Head.

Tech political science professor Neale Pearson said Democrats crossing over to vote in the Republican primary might have had an effect on the election. The Democrats may have crossed over to vote against candidates they thought were too conservative.

Head has campaigned on cutting waste in the county government, but his election might mean less funding for county projects such as the library and the juvenile detention center, Pearson said.

"The question is, how do you define waste?" he said. T.G. Caraway, president of the Lubbock County Young Democrats, said the Democratic turnout was higher than expected. The Democrats had no locally contested races See PRIMARIES, page 2

SGA run-off elections today

Texas Tech students will return to the polls today for a run-off election, after no candidate for Student Government Association external vice president captured a majority in last week's election.

Bryan Adams almost won the office with 49.42 percent of the 3,031 votes cast. He will face Chris Wright, who received 28.93 percent, in today's run-off election.

Nicholas Robinson garnered 20.45 percent of the vote, and two write-in candidates received 1.19 percent.

Students in the College of Business Administration also will face a runoff between Tim Wright and Samuel Oldham for the college's final Student Senate seat. Eleven elections polls will open around campus at 9 a.m., but some locations close later than others.

The station located in the University Center will close at 7 p.m.

Polls in Holden Hall and the business administration building will close at 5 p.m.

The other polls, located at the agricultural sciences building, architecture building, English building, the law school, mathematics building, engineering building, mass communications and human sciences building will close at 3 p.m.

Students will be required to present a valid drivers license or current student ID before voting.

Power Punch: Texas Tech student Jayson Morton, a sophomore pre-dental major from Keller, plays volleyball at the courts outside of the Stangel/Murdough Complex Tuesday afternoon.

Federal programs, like Pell Grants, are awarded yearround and are not in limited supply, she said.

The financial aid process is not the same for every student, said Jennifer Fisk, a financial aid adviser.

"Not every student is required the same amount of paperwork," she said.

Fisk said the process usually begins in January, when students should begin preparing their loan applications or receive their renewal applications in the mail.

Tech students also are required to fill out an institutional application form, which lists other sources of financial help, to determine loan eligibility.

Fisk said students need to prepare their tax returns as soon as possible, because they are needed in the application process.

Students planning to receive financial aid this summer should apply by May 1, Fisk said.

"We do have limited grants available for the summer," she said.

Fisk said students with questions about financial aid should make an appointment with the Financial Aid Office or come by to pick up a financial aid checklist and timeline.

"That, along with the timeline, should help them get everything in order to apply," Fisk said.

Tech graduate gives to pavilion fund

BY ANJELA ANAYA

The University Daily

A former Texas Tech student donated $475,000 to fund the Tech exstudents pavilion Tuesday.

The building will be named the Frazier Pavilion, in honor of David Frazier, who graduated in 1973 and was creator and former owner of Harrigan's and Don Pablo's Restaurants. Frazier said he owes much of his success to the university.

"I am grateful that Texas Tech University was here for me," Frazier said. "Texas Tech was my bridge from

"Once you actually write that check, it doesn't hurt anymore," he said. "It just hurts that one time."

Margaret Brannan, president of the Tech Ex-Students Association, highlighted the importance of the new pavilion.

"This pavilion will symbolize the past, present and future through the ex-students, current students and the administration and to the people who will look to the campus for decades to come," Brannan said.

Jim Douglass, assistant director of the Merket Alumni Center, said the pavilion can be used for pre-game receptions and post-game celebrations

"The pavilion should be completed by the first Tech football game this fall or at least by homecoming," Douglass said.

The pavilion will be located southwest of Jones Stadium, which is the University Police Department's fermer location.

The estimated size of the pavilion is 10,000 square feet with a projected total cost of $1,220,000.

Construction is scheduled to begin within one to two weeks.

Anthrax vaccinations for troops begun in Gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) - Air Force and Navy troops in the Persian Gulf got their first vaccinations against anthrax on Tuesday, a Pentagon spokesman said.

"We anticipate that the first round of shots will be completed by the end of this month," Kenneth Bacon told reporters.

Service members in Saudi Arabia and Bahrain were the first to get the inoculations.

Sailors on board ships will start their vaccinations on March 15, and troops in Kuwait will begin their vaccinations the same day, Bacon added.

Defense Secretary William Cohen announced last week that U.S. forces in the Gulf region were being vaccinated first as a "prudent action" to protect them against a possible biological weapons attack by Iraq.

The immunization program consists of a series of six shots for each service member over an 18-month period, to be followed by an annual booster.

At present, there are about 40,000 troops in the Persian Gulf region.

The numbers will return to the range of 36,000 when the aircraft carrier USS Stennis, which is now in the region, takes the place of the USS George Washington in the coming days, Bacon said.

Three propositions on the Democratic ballot also passed by large margins. The first concerned unlimited doctor choice for patients in health maintenance organizations. The second supported prohibiting a sales tax on food and medicine, and the third concerned supporting quality public education.

Overall voter turnout was much lower than expected, said Lisa Marbach, Lubbock's Republican primary administrator. Part of the reason may be that residents are burned out on elections, with the two sales tax elections in recent Texas Tech University Police Department will be testing the tornado warning sirens at 10 a.m. Wednesday.

Tech students are not required to evacuate buildings or go to basements, but the test will not be conducted if weather conditions are poor. The university is required to test the sirens once per year. The four industrial sirens are scattered around campus and make a steady, lowpitched noise.

Return of the Living Dead The Misfits headline concert at Warehouse

BY SEBASTIAN KITCHEN

The University Daily

Mystery surrounds the very presence of the Misfits.

The band's official symbol, the Crimson Ghost, floats on equipment and clothing. The band members' fascination with horror movies can be quickly detected by their hair and clothes. The world surrounding the Misfits and its music reflects a love for horror flicks.

The Misfits will headline a punk rock concert tonight at the 19th Street Lubbock is by far the smallest place the Misfits will storm through during its current tour.

More than 20 years after Jerry Only and Glenn Danzig formed the band in 1977, the Misfits have achieved an unprecedented underground success.

The band slowly has crept into the punk scene and, with a different lineup, is still on the road.

The band seemed to have trouble

After breaking up, the Misfits reached the highest point of popularity

During this time, mainstream powerhouses such as Metallica, Guns N' Roses and the Lemonheads covered the Misfits' tracks, increasing its popularity.

'Whatever' not like being used correctly

E MAMO COLUMNIST

Like most Americans, I found myself watching Jerry Springer the other day while I had a break from class.

Now before anyone freaks out, this isn't going to be a commentary on Springer or his watchers. What I found disturbing were the attitudes portrayed on his talk show and actually, talk shows in general. Granted, the people who go on such shows are not exactly the best monkeys out of the barrel, but they do exemplify the general attitudes of the people of our generation.

What I'm talking about is the evolution of the word "whatever," I think you all know what I'm talking about.

Let's start at the beginning. Whatever is defined as anything, anything that, anything that wasn't mentioned but still fits in the group and the like. With these definitions here is a sample sentence - students always complain about parking, fees, the Greeks and whatever. Whatever can also be used at the beginning of a sentence to give it a feeling that the details aren't what matter, but rather the general principle: Whatever the case, the administration will be slow in its actions regardless of student grievances. These are what "whatever" should mean, however the word has evolved from its primitive uses into its more uneducated and stupid form.

It moved from the more playful use of the word (i.e.: Oh my god, and I was like whatever.) to the use of the word on talk shows, a use that is being said by many people lately. It has become one of the biggest detriments and defining factors of this generation.

For instance, Jenny Jones had a show about women who still partied while pregnant knowing full well that their child had the high possibility of deformation, mental retardation, etc. When they were made aware of this information on more than one occasion, the response from these idiot mothers was - whatever. This, of course, was said in the most uneducated and slanderous tone. I don't understand how this works, when did whatever become the "in" thing to do? What is disheartening about the use of this word is that it conveys certain messages to others. It conveys stupidity, selfishness, apathy, not caring, no self-respect, etc. When someone says that word it has those overtones.

Yet another example: Last week I was bombarded by people who were passing out flyers for the SGA elections, this was being done on a particularly windy day so I said, "No thanks, I will not vote for anyone who takes it upon themselves to pass out flyers which will be thrown on the ground and therefore, contribute to the ever-growing problem of littering." The most eloquent response I got from these advertising geniuses was "Whatever!"

The whole point is this, if you use the word whatever as a cover-up for your insecurity, to justify your selfish desires or to pass off your lacking knowledge of certain important issues or ideas, then do yourself a favor: educate yourself, feel good about yourself and realize that just because you want to do something doesn't make it right.

The word "whatever" isn't a bad word, but it's being used for an evil cause. Take the time to extend your vocabulary and quit using it as a crutch, as a fitall word - it isn't, and it doesn't lend itself to a good impression. The "whatever" phenomena is one that needs to stop because it extends all over this nation and doesn't help anybody when used in its incorrect form. It decreases the credibility of the person saying it and doesn't create a conducive environment for effective communication.

All in all, the trend needs to be stopped, or pretty soon, we might become known as the Whatever Generation. And if I have to speak in your language to get this point across then I'm like whatever.

T lan to travel deep into Mexico Spring Break and have heard of something called dengue fever. Just what is it, and should I be worried?

engue fever is a viral fever and has no vaccine to prevent it. Symptoms include fever, headache, vomiting, nausea and can even develop into serious hemorrhagic fever.

M professor made me get copies of my health records to prove I went to Thompson Hall. I thought that was asking too much. Can they do that?

Actually, your medical records at the post of the post medical records at your hometown doctor's office. Your medical records are private.

It might certify that you have been here for a visit, however, what illness(es) you were treated for is very private.

We don't give written excuses because many years ago students figured out how to abuse that system.

Most professors would like for you to provide the courtesy of a phone call to them to let them know you are sick and will not be in class today, or were not in class today due to illness. It is generally unacceptable to wait three to four days after missing class before notifying your professor of the reason for your absence.

We are open 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, so you can make an appointment that does not conflict with your classes. If you request it, we can provide you with a "verification of visit" slip at the time you are visiting with the health care professional during your appointment ON THAT DAY.

Then, you may show your professor proof of your visit to Student Health Services. This, however, really doesn't constitute a "doctors medical excuse" and really shouldn't be counted as such.

It is up to you whether you want to share what the visit was about or not with your instructor.

Thad a sore throat and runny nose and went to my doctor for medicine. He wouldn't give me a prescription. I felt ripped off and like I had wasted time. Why would he not give me anything?

I think that we often think that if we go to the trouble and expense of seeing our doctor that we should walk away with a written prescription or two.

After all, most of us wouldn't visit unless we really felt bad. The problem is, you probably had a bad cold. You didn't mention whether your doctor suggested over-the-counter medications or not.

That's about the best any of us can do for a regular old cold which is a viral infection. Too many of us have gotten used to antibiotics, like amoxicillin for example, when we go to the doctor and describe general cold symptoms.

And, unfortunately, many health care providers gave out the prescriptions to keep us happy. Now, we are beginning to see the consequences of those actions.

If, for example, you take amoxicillin often enough for something it can't help, like a viral infection, then when something bigger hits you, like a bacterial infection, and you need the fighting power of an antibiotic, it just might not work. Overuse and misuse of antibiotics is causing a great deal of concern in the medical community.

They are beginning to see super bacterial infections which are resistant to available antibiotics.

Just remember, not every visit to your health care provider will end with drug prescriptions.

Sometimes, a check up and good health care advice is the best medicine.

My girlfriend and I are virgins. We ike oral sex, but have decided not to go all the way with intercourse until we get married (about six months from now). Is there any chance of us catching an STD having oral sex together?

You know, it wasn't that many years ago that many people saw oral sex as something extremely intimate, and it usually did not precede sexual intercourse, but followed it after a time of getting into the relationship.

Times change, however, and now many see oral sex as a form of birth control.

It also is seen as an alternative to sexual intercourse so that people can be intimate yet remain "a virgin." People define "virgin" by different terms. Some see virginity as no intercourse and no oral sex.

Some tie virginity strictly to intercourse. The facts are that you can get an STD from performing oral sex and still be a virgin.

If the two of you are completely monogamous, you have a low risk of contracting an STD. The problem is that life holds no guarantees and many people have been surprised to find that their true love has had one slip into unfaithfulness.

That one slip can bring all kinds of unwanted consequences including an STD. If you have a cold sore (herpes simplex type 1) and put your mouth on your partner's genitals, you can give your partner genital herpes.

You also could choose to abstain altogether until the wedding day. It might pose a much less worrisome environment then your current situation.

Explain to me the difference in the herpes that I get on my lip when I get a cold and the one that you get through sex.

Herpes is the name of a group of viruses. In this group is the herpest simplex type 1 (HSV-1) and herpes: type 2 (HSV-2). HSV-1 most commonly cause sores on the lips (known as fever blisters or cold sores), but it can cause genital infections as well.

HSV-2 most often causes genital sores, but it also can infect the mouth. HSV-1 behaves quite differently in the genital area.

With type 1 infection, people may have a marked first episode, but they are much less likely to have breakouts. in the first year. HSV-2, however, can have several reoccurrences a year. The average is four or five.

In addition, people with HSV-2 also can expect to have recurrences that do not cause recognizable signs and symptoms.

Thus, if you have sex with a partner infected with herpes, they may be in an outbreak and not know it and the condom you are using may not help because a lesion may be in a place the condom doesn't cover.

May I suggest to deal with herpes of either type, talk to your doctor if you think you may have herpes. Remember you are not alone because: millions of people have herpes.

Keep yourself healthy and limit your stress. Don't touch your sores and talk to your sex partner about your concerns.

In Their Shoes

Journalist captures essence of minorities in lifelong odyssey BY LAURA HENSLEY

The University Daily

Grace Halsell has seen most of her life through two sets of eyes.

The small-town girl with big aspirations has lived a life like most could not imagine. She has seen a lot.

She has seen the world through the eyes of a black woman trying to make a living by working as a maid in Mississippi. She has seen the world through the eyes of Bessie Yellowhair, an American Indian. She has even seen the world through the eyes of a scared young woman crossing the boarder illegally from Mexico.

Halsell has written many books about all of these people. She knows what they went through. She knows their pain and problems.

She is these people.

As a successful free-lance journalist, Halsell has witnessed firsthand the cruelty of racism and the reality of being a different color in America.

By changing her identity several times, Halsell has stepped into the shoes of a different race.

"I wanted to darken my skin and live as a black woman back in the late 1960s. I wanted to live among the Navajo and pass as an American Indian. I wanted to swim the Rio Grande and cross the border as an illegal alien," Halsell said.

"I just wanted to see what it was like and find out how serious this problem of racism was. I've always had the desire to be myself and be someone else, too."

The secret of life, she said, is the longing of more life and the desire to much."

Before going undercover, Halsell traveled the world, going to places such as Paris, Peru and Japan. She returned to America and worked as the highest ranking female for the late President Lyndon Baines Johnson's staff.

Halsell left the White House in 1968 and began taking medication to change the pigment of her skin beginning her life as a black woman.

"I describe my experiences as looking through a peep hole," Halsell said. "I've always said I would never fully understand what it would be like to be born and raised as a different race."

Halsell spoke to Texas Tech students Monday at the University Center Allen Theatre and again to a class in the Department of Mass Communications Tuesday. Her message inspired students and left many people thinking about the ugly problem of racism.

"I think it's cool to especially see an Anglo American that did so much just to show the racial problems in America," said Kevan Smith, a junior broadcast journalism major from Dallas. "It's nice that she is continuing today to tell her story and educate people. She opens up old wounds and gets people thinking and talking about it."

Halsell was born in Lubbock in 1923. She attended Lubbock High

Guitar duo to perform series for Tech, Lubbock residents

Texas Tech's School of Music will play host to a concert series by Duo Guitarra at 8 p.m. Thursday in Hemmle Recital Hall.

The duo, composed of James Bogle, professor of guitar at Tech, and Uros Dojcinovic of Yugoslavia, will present songs for the Tech and Lubbock communities.

Tickets cost $5 for Tech students with a current ID and $8 for the general public.

Duo Guitarra has been enthralling audiences throughout the world since its first concert tour of Yugoslavia and Hungary in August 1991.

Composers from many nations have begun writing for the duo, and the duo's own compositions are being performed by guitarists all over the world.

Tech baseball jumps over Horned Frogs, 16-4

BY HEATH ROBINSON

The University Daily

Texas Tech scored in all but two innings against TCU Tuesday, and defeated the Horned Frogs, 16-4, at Dan Law Field in Lubbock.

The win moves Tech to 14-7 on the year and a perfect 10-0 at home. TCU fell to 12-8.

Red The Raiders started quickly, plating four in the bottom of the first inning. Second baseman Keith Ginter walked to lead off the first, and moved to second when Jason Landreth was hit by a pitch single by Kevin Jordan. Junior Rodriguez and Mark Austry then hit consecutive doubles, and Tech had a 4-0 lead.

"We got off to a quick start, and I think that helped," Tech coach Larry Hays said. "The guys did some good things with the bats today."

Tech refused to let TCU, who split a two-game series with the Red Raiders in Fort Worth earlier this season, into the game.

After Tech made it 5-0 in the second, Tech starter Jesse Cornejo allowed the Horned Frogs to get on the board in the third.

Ginter booted a ground ball from David Wallace, scoring Chris Connally. Royce Huffman scored on a Matt Howe single, and TCU had the bases loaded, trailing just 5-2.

But Cornejo struck out Mike Scarborough and forced Brad Rogers to ground out to end the inning. Red

The Raiders then plated eight runs in the next three innings to ice the game. starter Ridenour (0-2) left after pitching just 3 1/3, allow-

"Jesse really struggled on the mound today," Hays said. "And we made some errors in the field that really hurt him as well. But we got some good relief, and our hitting won it for us."

Steve Watkins pitched 2 2/3 scoreless innings to end the game, and Brennan Burns and Rodriguez each added three hits.

In all, the Red Raiders pounded out 16 hits, compared to 10 for TCU. Each team committed three errors.

"I feel like the lineup is really coming around," Burns said. "We are getting a little better every day. I got a little lucky today with the Astro Turf and aluminum bats. They really helped on some of my hits.'

Burns was one of six Red Raiders with two RBIs. Rodriguez scored three times and collected two doubles and a single.

The effort was Rodriguez's best in weeks. In the last 12 games, the junior shortstop has seen his average drop over 60 points.

"It felt good to hit the ball hard a few times," Rodriguez said. "I think I was hitting it pretty well, I just couldn't find the holes. But I also saw the ball better today than I have in a while."

For Cornejo, the win pushed his record to 4-2. He allowed four runs, three earned, in 6 1/3 innings. TCU collected nine of their 10 hits off Cornejo. The junior left-hander struck out five batters, but also walked four and hit two Horned Frog batters. There were six hit batsmen in the game.

"It was kind of a wild game out there," Burns said. "It was cold, and it lasted a long time. But I think we played pretty well, and it was good to get another win at home."

The Red Raiders and Horned Frogs will play again at 2 p.m. today at Dan Law Field.

The Red Raiders likely will pitch Shane Wright.

Winning moves: Texas Tech baseball catcher Josh Bard slides into home just under the threatening arm of a Texas Christian University catcher. Tech won the game against the Horned Frogs, 16-4, Tuesday at Dan Law Field. The Red Raiders play TCU again at 2 p.m. today at Dan Law Field.

Boles rebounds on, off court

BY JASON BERNSTEIN

The University Daily

As she went for a score in last season's Big 12 tournament, senior post Crystal Boles fell to the floor. But she did not go down writhing in pain. She went down because she thought she was fouled. Little did Boles know that she had torn her anterior cruciate ligament in her left knee and would be sidelined for the remainder of the season.

"The hardest thing was having to sit there and watch us lose," Boles said of the injury that occurred just 63 seconds into the game against Kansas State. "I think the injury made me mad more than anything else. When I got hurt, I didn't think I was hurt when I came out of the game."

The Lady Raiders not only lost the game, they lost their all-time leading shot blocker.

Boles accumulated career seasonhigh marks in games played, games started, minutes, field goals made and attempted, assists, steals and blocks for the 1996-97 season. She started in 21 of Tech's 29 games while playing in every Big 12 contest.

"I was satisfied with my season last year," Boles said. "It was just really different for me because I had never had an injury that I had to come out of the game for."

This season, Boles has rebounded from her injury to compete in 18 games, averaging 8.6 minutes per contest. She has grabbed 32 rebounds while helping solidify the inside defense by blocking 19 shots.

"She has definitely been a strong player and a strong person," said fellow senior Alicia Thompson of Boles. Boles said the possibility of not returning to the Lady Raiders never entered into her mind.

"The rehab was definitely challenging," Boles said of her comeback effort. "Rehab was hard, but it was one of those things that I expected to be back no matter what. The doctors and trainers helped draw up a timetable of when I was going to be back."

The timetable, as it turns out, could not have been more perfect as she worked all summer to strengthen her knee for a possible return in the fall.

"The day that I was released to play full-contact was the first official day of practice," she said of her return to the court.

Boles' return to the team certainly did not hurt the Lady Raiders' chemistry as they have posted a 25-4 record while winning the Big 12 regular season and tournament championships.

"I think I have finally recovered 100 percent, and I don't have any pain anymore," Boles said of her recovery. "I knew I'd be able to play again this year. We're doing well as a team, and that's all you can really ask for."

Boles has definitely returned in full-force, or perhaps even stronger, as the Lady Raiders prepare for their second Final Four run in five years.

"I think everything makes you stronger, so you just have to go in with the best attitude you can," Boles said of her mentality. "Your goals change from scoring points to walking. It's a big difference."

Needed: Summer Camp Counselors

Applications are being accepted from students interested in becoming counselors for the Recreational Sports Summer Camp offered this summer.

The camp is designed to improve the sports skills of the children, but the emphasis in on FUN!

Instruction is geared so that every child will be a winner- not by defeating another child, but by acquiring a new skill or improving skills already present.

This is a noncompetitive camp with a recreational approach to sports. There are three two week sessions: June 1-12 and June 15-26 for children seven to 12 years of age and session III, July 6-17 for children 10 to 14.

Sports offered during the sessions are tennis, racquetball, basketball, softball, archery, rock climbing, rappelling, outdoor skills, soccer and whiffleball.

Each session runs Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. until noon. So, if you are interested in working as a camp counselor, teaching skills in one or more of the sports listed above, drop by the Recreation Center and fill out an application. Applications are due by 5 p.m. on Friday, April 3. The current stipend is $6/hour.

This is an excellent opportunity to work part-time with children and still be able to take afternoon classes.

For more information, contact the Rec Sports Office at 742-3351 or stop by room 202, in the Student Rec Center.

Sports Club Briefs

Rock Climbing Club

Six members of the Rock Climbing Club competed Feb. 28 in the Rock Rodeo Climbing Competition at Hueco Tanks State Park near El Paso.

The competition was a national competition with climbers from all areas of the country.

Two members placed in their respective division. Eric Quinton placed first and Rob Ross tied for fourth place in the intermediate division.

If interested in finding out more information about the Rock Climbing Club, call 742-3351

Tech Cycling Club

There were six members of the cycling club that placed in the Texas Series Mountain Bike Race in Lajitas, Texas. In the beginner senior I division, Kevin Burpo, Brady Shipman and Brian Rodgers received first, second and third, respectively. Chris Briggs and Stephen Crewes placed first and fifth overall in the sport senior I division and Chad Christian placed fifth in the sport senior II division. The club competes in road races and mountain bike races. If interested in training with the club, call 742-3351

Get Down! A run is scored after a close play at the plate during an intramural softball game between APO and the A-Bombs. APO went on the claim the victory 21-11.

Basketball Champions determined tonight

The countless fouls, violations, forfeits, defaults, blowouts and close games count for little now as tonight the six teams best able to overcome the adversities of an intramural will determine the bragging rights set aside for a champion.

The women's championship game is scheduled for a 5:30 p.m. tip-off, while the men's rec league is at 6:30 p.m. and the men's all-university women's division are ATWABA, Playground Legends, Tri Delt and Court Jesters. The men's rec division is represented by Fur Traders, Hustlers, Stink Plus and Swat. The men's all-university teams are 19th Street, Bustas, Phi Delt 'A, FIV-5 and Beta 'A.

Those individuals interested in watching the championships should check the schedule posted at racquetball court #7 or call or come by the intramural office at 742-3351 for changes in these times.

A Special Thanks!!!

Recreational Sports would like to say thanks to all of the individuals that gave blood during the blood drive this past Wednesday.

This blood will help during the week of Spring Break. We will have another blood drive during the fall semester, so make sure you save us some blood.

Thanks again for giving, for your help in helping others.
