Aid office deals with understaffing

ANJELA ANAYA

UD Staff Writer

Understaffing in the financial aid office since last fall may have been hurting the quality of service students receive.

Earl Hudgins, financial aid office director at Texas Tech, said the office has had five vacant positions until very recently.

Another position is filled, but currently unstaffed, because the employee is on medical leave. Two vacant positions were staffed this week.

The six positions are administrator, administrative assistant, two advisers, and two clerical positions.

All the positions have been open since last fall except one clerical position, open since January and the administrative assistant position, which became vacant this month.

Hudgins said the office is in the hiring process for the three remaining open positions, administrative assistant, an adviser and a clerical position.

"Our goal is to have all those (positions) filled by the first of next month," he said.

There has been a problem in hiring due to the lack of physical space in the office, Hudgins said.

He said there has also been a problem hiring people because the office is very busy at the start of a term, but becomes much less busy by mid-semester.

For the first time last fall, the office hired 10 temporary phone operators and two temporary desk attendants. Hudgins said the project worked well and that the office will try it again this fall.

The financial aid office normally has 31 employees with a total annual salary of $639,000. The combined income of the six unfilled positions, including the unstaffed position, is about $70,000.

Hudgins said when a position is unfilled, the money is not spent and results in a smaller budget for that year. When the money is placed on hold in this manner it is called "lapsed salary."

As soon as the position is filled, the money is regained and used exclusively for that purpose.

The main effect of the reduced staff has been a lack of timeliness in dealing with students, Hudgins said.

Kurt Abbas, a senior management information systems major from Des Moines, Iowa, said he had a simple question but since the phone lines were tied up, he had to come in person to ask his question.

"I think that there is user-friendly, and then you have financial aid," Abbas said. "My question only took a few minutes to answer and I wouldn't have had to come back up here."

Hudgins said the office makes its best effort to take care of the student.

"We're trying to make sure the students are taken care of to the best of our ability," he said. "The commitment of our university is student service."

Kich rides faith to Lubbock

CAREN CARNEFIX

UD Staff Writer

At 24, Kich has discovered the importance of faith in doing what he loves. A singer/songwriter who recently graduated from Texas Tech, he looks at his music career as emulating a quote from a book titled "The Artists' Way," by Julia Cameron:

"Leap, and the net will appear."

That is just what Kich has done with the release of Everything in Between, his first album.

"To me it's all about faith," Kich said. "I don't know if I'm going to be able to make my living being a musician, but I have complete faith in everything that if I just leap, the net will appear."

Kich, who said he wanted his birth name to remain a mystery, began playing music at the age of 18 when one of his four older brothers gave him a guitar for Christmas.

Inspired by a breakup with a girlfriend, Kich's songwriting began in the fall of 1993, he said. The folk-type songs he writes today reflect more of an influence from other musicians like Ellis Paul and Jane Begley, than his songs on the album, he said.

"A lot of the songs that are on the album are older," Kich said. "Each one of the songs is at least a year and a half, two years old. Now I'm starting to really fine tune my tastes. I've written what I feel is stronger material since then. But to me, when I meet genuine people, they inspire me to write songs."

Kich dedicated the album to his father who died about two years ago of leukemia. Kich refers to his father as the last of a dying breed, and he wrote a song with that title on the CD.

"My father was an extremely classical thinker," Kich said. "He could look at a picture of an old car, and

The Constitution of the United States of America is one of the greatest documents ever conceived by the mind of man. It has provided for the peaceful exchange of power between leaders for 209 years.

The Constitution has been amended only once in the last 25 years, and that amendment gave the right to vote to anyone old enough to fight and die for their country.

Among the guarantees in the Bill of Rights' First Amendment, there is a clause that says the freedom of religion will not be infringed, and the state will not establish an official religion.

This document and these protections have been sufficient to defend religious freedom in this country for more than two centuries. But some members of Congress think this just isn't good enough.

Thursday, the U.S. House of Representatives defeated the Religious Freedom Amendment. The idea behind the amendment was to explicitly allow prayer in public schools.

The joke has always been that as long as there are math tests there will be prayer in schools

DPS gets tough on seat belt law

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Department of Public Safety is going after Texans traveling in vehicles without using their seat belts.

The agency on Wednesday announced a no-warning policy regarding seat belts. That means a ticket will be issued if a DPS trooper pulls over a driver not obeying the law.

"Texas' seat belt laws have been around for nearly 13 years now," DPS Director Col. Dudley Thomas said. "There's no excuse for Texas drivers not to know about the law and not to buckle up. So there's really no need for warnings."

Under Texas law, anyone in the front seat of a vehicle must wear a seat belt. Children under 2 also must ride in a car safety seat and children under 4 must be restrained in a safety seat or by a seat belt.

People who violate the law can be punished by fines between $25 and $50 per incident. Judges determine the fines, according to DPS spokeswoman Tela Mange.

"It seems the only way to get people's attention is through their pocketbook," she said.

Ms. Mange said the DPS is encouraging other law enforcement agencies to adopt the no-warning policy.

"We're not doing this to raise revenue," she said. "We're just tired of seeing people getting more seriously injured because they are not wearing their seat belts."

Cartoonist remembers youth

BEAUMONT (AP) — When Harold LeDoux was a young student in Port Arthur, families had to buy textbooks for their children. LeDoux's mother told him to take good care of his books so she could sell them at the end of the school year.

Mrs. LeDoux didn't recoup her money — at least not initially. Harold's books couldn't be sold; they were filled with cartoon drawings.

"I announced to my mother and daddy, 'You don't have to worry about sending me to college. I'm going to be a cartoonist,'" LeDoux remembers.

That was more than 50 years ago, and LeDoux still is drawing. His early inspirations were the cartoon strips "Wash Tubs" by Roy Crane, "Major Hoople" and "Out Our Way" by J.R. Williams. Today, LeDoux is best known for his illustrations for the daily strip "Judge Parker."

KA fraternity suspended at UT

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas has canceled the registration of the Kappa Alpha fraternity following a three-month investigation into the hazing of new fraternity members.

The cancellation will be in effect until Dec. 31, 1999, after which the chapter will be on suspension for a year and probation for another year. The school said cancellation is the strongest penalty available in disciplining student organizations.

"It was evident that a pattern of hazing existed in the organization's new member programs," Sharon H. Justice, UT's dean of students, said Wednesday.

Politicians mourn passing of conservative Goldwater

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Figures from four decades of American politics were on hand Wednesday to bid farewell to Barry Goldwater, the straight-talking senator whose failed 1964 run for president launched the modern conservative movement.

Thousands of people heard speakers including Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., honor Goldwater's public service and remember his heartfelt opinions and colorful language.

"Barry Goldwater served America, all of America, a country conceived in liberty, a country that let you pledge any damn thing you wanted as long as it didn't cost someone else their liberty," said McCain, who replaced Goldwater in the Senate. "In all the history of American politics, he will remain a chapter unto himself. The rest of us will have to make do with footnotes."

Goldwater died last Friday of natural causes at his home in suburban Paradise Valley. He was 89.

His public funeral drew two planeloads of congressional and other officials, including House speaker Newt Gingrich, from Washington, D.C., where the Senate shut down because so many people wanted to attend.

"He changed our lives," former first lady Nancy Reagan said as she arrived for the funeral of the man who inspired President Reagan with his conservative views. "I remember him being a completely honest man — blunt, a very funny man."

People began lining up before dawn to guarantee themselves places in the 3,300-seat Gammage Auditorium at Arizona State University.

"He exemplifies the state of Arizona," David Gordon of Scottsdale said. "He was his own person and he spoke his mind. He was one of the few people in Congress that was totally honest."

An Air Force honor guard carried Goldwater's casket into the auditorium, followed by relatives. Hundreds crowded along a walkway to the auditorium as the casket passed, some in shorts, some wearing business attire despite the desert heat.

Some in the crowd cried when Air Force fighters streaked overhead in "missing man" formation, a tribute to Goldwater's service in active military and reserves and his lifelong love of flying.

Goldwater was known nationally as "Mr. Conservative." He relentlessly advocated trimming government, building a strong military and fighting communism, inspiring politicians including Reagan.

But his views and campaign slogan, "In your heart, you know he's right," didn't resonate with voters.

Lyndon Johnson portrayed him as a nuclear warmonger—"In your guts, you know he's nuts," aides offered—and won in a landslide.

Goldwater served five terms in the Senate, retiring in 1987.

Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt, who was Arizona governor while Goldwater was in the Senate, represented the Clinton administration at the funeral.

"If you were to go anywhere in this country, virtually anywhere in the world, you would discover there are two Arizonans who are literally known throughout this planet," Babbitt said. "One is Geronimo, and the other is Barry Goldwater."

"I remember him being a completely honest man—blunt, a very funny man."

HSC offers new dual degree

JEFF RIDER
UD Staff Writer

In the modern world of managed health care, the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center is taking new steps to prepare its students for the business of medicine.

The HSC conducted a press conference Thursday to announce the beginning of a new joint M.D. and M.B.A. program. The program will enable students to develop expertise in both medicine and business.

The new program, only the second of its kind in the nation, is unique because it is the only program like this offer three degree accreditations, the M.D. the M.B.A., and accreditation in the specialty of health organization management.

Students will take medical courses during the regular school year, and work on their M.B.A degree during the summer.

"We want our students to have the sensibilities of a business person, and the sensitivity of a physician," said Dr. Joel Kupersmith, dean of the Tech medical school. "This balance is crucial to health care in this country," he said.

The HSC and the College of Business Administration have worked on the program for several years, in an effort to meet the changing business of health care.

"Like it or not, health care in the United States is a business," said Roy Howell, dean of the College of Business Administration. "This program will equip our students with the tools they need to succeed."

The specialized dual degree program grew out of the health organization management program, which began in 1971 and is still the only joint program between Tech and the HSC.

"This program has several positive elements," said Grant Savage, director for Ph.D. and M.B.A. programs in health organization management.

"We did not want to cut corners." The goal was to successfully integrate both programs, he said.

Of the 63 applicants for the new program, which begins this year, 11 students were chosen from all over the nation, some from as far away as UCLA and the University of Pennsylvania.

"It is important to remember that every one of these students is a person, too," Savage said.

Jason Bratcher, a Tech graduate with bachelor's degrees in French and molecular biology, is the only Tech graduate in the program.

"It is a great source of pride for me that this program is here at my home university," Bratcher said. "The area is familiar, and I love the town. It's really something coming from Tech and entering the program."

Bratcher said he sees the new program a valuable recruiting tool for the HSC to attract Tech students and others from around the country.

Road construction begun on Memorial Circle

ANJELA ANAYA
UD Staff Writer

Road construction is under way on part of Memorial Circle at Texas Tech.

Construction starts on the road next to the science quadrangle parking lot and extends to the neck of the circle.

Dewey Shroyer, grounds maintenance director, said the construction is not only for the Memorial Circle road, but for the south side of the Broadway Avenue exit.

Construction will start on south Broadway after the Memorial Circle area is completed.

The two phases of road construction should be done by Aug. 15, Shroyer said.

He said the north side of Broadway was repaved about three years ago.

The roads will be better than the previous roads, Shroyer said. The roads will be heavy duty, being black asphalt-based instead of caliche based.

The current roads are six inches deep, compared to eight inches for the new base.

"It'll be quite a bit better and it will last longer," Shroyer said.

"And with the buses driving on it we won't have to replace it for another 20 to 30 years."

Shroyer said the new, sturdier roads will only need coating maintenance, to seal up cracks, maintenance which only takes a few days.

Doug Mann, vice chancellor for facilities planning and construction, said the construction is more than just a road improvement issue.

Although a major reason for the road construction is the resurfacing of the road, Mann said the road will be narrowed and the existing island will be extended in order to make the one way more clearer to the driver.

"They're necking it down to where only one car will fit," Mann said. "It's really a safety issue." There is currently a "Do Not Enter" sign posted for those vehicles merging onto Memorial Circle, but Mann said the expanse of road is too large, leaving room for a vehicle to drive the wrong way.

Kich started performing at Lubbock coffee houses while he pursued a studio art degree at Tech. Lubbock is the first stop on his one-man tour to promote the album.

"This is where I started writing and playing music, and to me, it's a bit of a homecoming," Kich said. "I am really excited about playing Durham's. A lot of my heroes have played at Durham's. To be able to play on that stage is a huge moment in my life."

Audiences like Kich's style of playing, said Hawk Durham, owner of Durham's Coffee House, 5109 82nd St.

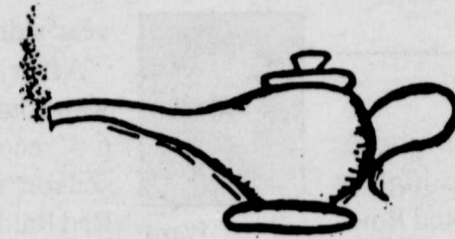

"He likes to involve the audience," Durham said. "He's not afraid to stop and talk to the audience and tell them what a song's about."

Kich will perform at 9 p.m. Friday at Coffee Haus, 1401 University Ave., and 8:30 p.m.

Tuesday at Durham's.

Shortly after graduating from Tech in July, Kich journeyed for six months with 30 books as companions across the United States and Canada. The purpose of the trip, Kich said, was to ponder and decide what he wanted to do with his life.

"When I got back, there was no doubt in my mind," Kich said. "I don't know if I'll be a musician in five or 10 years. I've made up my mind to do what God wants me to do. If the CD sells good, that's wonderful. I'm here to live as best I can."

Six Red Raiders chosen in draft

BRENT DIRKS

UD Staff Writer

Texas Tech baseball pitcher Monty Ward was the highest draft pick among six Red Raiders taken by Major League Baseball teams during the annual amateur draft Tuesday and Wednesday.

The 6-foot junior from Lubbock Monterey was taken by the Kansas City Royals in the fourth round as the 107th pick in the draft. The Royals selected former Red Raiders Joe Dillion and Jason Gooding in last

After Ward, who compiled a 6-3 record last season for the Red Raiders, the Cincinnati Reds and the Houston Astros were the only other two teams to grab up Tech talent.

The Astros chose Tech senior second baseman Keith Ginter in the 10th round.

In the next round Houston chose Red Raider third baseman Kevin Jordan. The junior from Midland hit .354 with 88 RBIs last year.

The Astros' last pick from Tech was junior catcher Brandon

Buckley in the 29th round.

Cincinnati first pick from the Red Raiders was junior outfielder Duane Price in the 20th round. Last, the Reds chose Tech pitcher Eric Cooper in the 24th round.

Former Tech pitcher Steve Watkins was also chosen in the 16th round by San Diego.

No Texas state bragging rights for Astros, Rangers

HOUSTON (AP) — The creation of interleague play should've brought the Texas Rangers and Houston Astros together to battle for state bragging rights just like the Texas A&M Aggies and the Texas Longhorns do.

Instead, AL vs. NL play returns for a second year on Friday and again there won't be an all-Texas matchup.

The Rangers will host the San Diego Padres at The Ballpark in Arlington this weekend while Kansas City Royals visit the Astros in the Astrodome. Texas' other interleague foes will all be from the NL West, while the Astros' AL opponents will be from the AL Central.

This is the second year of baseball's two-year interleague experiment. Should it continue beyond 1998, there's still no guarantee the Texas teams will ever meet during the regular season.

Rangers president and general partner Tom Schieffer doesn't like that.

He said he would prefer to be heating up a rivalry with the Astros rather than playing faraway teams with limited drawing power.

"I keep saying the best rivalry in Texas is Texas and Texas A&M and the reason is half the people have somebody linked to A&M and the other half to Texas," Schieffer said. "It's that close proximity that breeds a great rivalry."

"The same thing can happen in Major League Baseball, but it's hard to make that happen if you're not playing."

Interleague rules dictate that teams from one league play their geographic equivalent from the other league, meaning AL West teams play NL West, and so on. The Astros are in the NL Central and the Rangers are in the AL West.

"Initially, it would have some appeal, but it's not as apparent as some other rivalries," Astros general manager Gerry Hunsicker said.
