Smith addresses operations at HSC

By Apu Naik
Staff Writer

Texas Tech medical school will be enhancing patient services, strengthening research and focusing on academic balance, said Dr. David Smith, president of the Health Sciences Center, during his State of the University Address Tuesday.

"West Texans have a history as a compassionate and caring people," Smith said. "We must break down the barriers that sometimes surround large academic institutions, and all faculty, residents and staff must consider customer service an essential part of their jobs."

Among the areas of most concern for the future goals of the HSC, Smith said research must be a Tech priority. Currently, the medical center generates about $7.2 million per year in research.

"That is not acceptable," Smith said. "That figure must increase over the next five years."

Smith outlined what he considered the most important assets of the HSC: academic excellence, faculty, staff and alumni.

As for future strategic initiatives, Smith said the medical center will focus on opportunities in seven different areas. The strategic initiatives to be tackled by the HSC in the future will include opportunities in the areas of aging, border health, cancer, chronic illness, emerging infections, environmental health and women's health.

Even though state funding has shown a large decline in recent times, Smith promised that Tech was in the progress of undertaking a focused plan to increase funding from state and external sources.

... it's reassuring to see that he (Smith) has a dedicated plan for the future."

In order to strengthen the medical school, Smith affirmed that to be a competitive Tier 1 Status school, academic balance among faculty and staff must first be met.

"It could easily take us the better part of a decade to raise our institution into Tier 1 Status, but it must be done," said Smith. "And, in order to achieve this, we must all place an increased emphasis on academics, research and service."

Other future goals outlined by Smith included plans for interdisciplinary programs, an increased emphasis on the expansion of technology, progress with endowments and scholarships and increased funding for research.

Smith, who has been president of the HSC for two years, also spoke of the many progresses the center has made within its 29 years of operation.

The HSC has flourished in the area of medical-related jobs to the South Plains, growing from 1,453 jobs in 1987 to 3,819 jobs as of 1997. Smith also said after 29 years, the HSC annual operating budget has grown to that of national status, increasing by some $309 million.

"This year's budget of $311,017,729 shows just how far the HSC has grown within the past 29 years," Smith said. "In 1972, our annual budget was around $2 million, and 100 percent of that was gained through state revenue, whereas today, the HSC has quickly become a more independent institution, with only 24.3 percent of our total budget coming from state funds."

John Walls, HSC news and publications director, said the two years that Smith has overseen the HSC have been beneficial.

"Dr. Smith has already accomplished a lot for this institution, but it's even more reassuring to see that he has a dedicated plan for the future," Walls said.

University still renting house

Chancellor's residence not top priority with Tech officials

By Jonathan Biles
Staff Writer

When the former president's home sold for $340,000, it was expected that planning for Chancellor John Montford's new home on the Texas Tech campus would begin.

But Montford, and his wife Debbie, still are residing in the rent home located at 4915 19th St, which belongs to Preston and Darlene DeShan.

The rent on the home is $2,800 a month and has cost Tech about $56,000.

The Montfords have been living in the house for almost 20 months, said Debbie Montford.

John Montford was unavailable for comment.

It was decided by the Board of Regents that a new home would be built on campus for the chancellor in order to better serve the school, said John Opperman, vice chancellor of administration and finance.

The contract on the house will be renegotiated in December when the contract is expired, Opperman said.

Opperman said funding for the chancellor's new home will be received from private donations, but as of yet, no donations have been made or accepted.

Opperman said this is not on the chancellor's list of top priorities.

"When it comes to raising money, the chancellor's preference has been to try to raise money for scholarships and faculty endowment," Opperman said.

Opperman said all renovations that were being made on the rent house are now complete, and no further renovations are planned for the future.

"Everything that needs to be done (to the rent house), has been done," Opperman said.

In the past, there have been questions to whether or not the building of a new home is valid for Tech.

Deputy Chancellor James Crowson said the building of the new home is justifiable in the eyes of the regents.

"I think the board would like to have the house on campus, and they would like to see it used for entertainment purposes," Crowson said.

Opperman said no further plans have been made in effort to begin construction of the chancellor's home.

Construction of the chancellor's house is being coordinated by Board of Regents Chairman Edward Whitacre, who was not available for comment.

The Pottery Woman

Artist throws life into clay creations

By John Davis
Staff Writer

She picked up a chunk of red clay and threw it on the table. She treated it like it was bread dough, kneading it into submission, so that it was prepared to be formed.

After she had put it on her wheel and began sculpting it, the clay turned into a tea cup, a pitcher, then a bowl and finally the beginning of what she called "a teapot with an attitude."

Pat Zappe, a potter from Ballinger, came to the Texas Tech Museum, Tuesday, to show an audience how she does her work.

"Thank you for coming to make mud pies with me," said Zappe, explaining that she does take her work seriously, though she calls her workshop "Mud Pies."

"I call my work 'little-old-lady fru-fru,'" Zappe said. "I do a lot of feminine stuff, the more delicate and feminine stuff."

Zappe said she works as a professional potter out of her home in Ballinger. She said besides doing a few shows a year, she also teaches at Montreat Crafts Center in Montreat, N.C.

Zappe also said she sells her work in specialty and gift stores in five states, including the store at the Tech museum.

"I have the luxury of doing a few shows a year, then I come home and work 16 hours a day in a potting frenzy," Zappe said.

While she was making a pot, Zappe said it looks easier than it really is. She said the secret to making a pot somewhat symmetrical was to center the clay on the wheel, then brace your arms on your knees so the clay won't fly out of control.

"It's like a child having a terrible temper tantrum," Zappe said. "You go over and hold them, and eventually, they say, 'OK.'"

Zappe said she was interested in pottery at a very young age.

"My first experience making mud pies was in the sandbox under the Chinaberry tree in Ballinger," she said.

Throwin' Some Clay: Pat Zappe demonstrates how to "throw" pottery at the Texas Tech Museum on Tuesday. Chris Rivali, a Cooper High School student, watches as Zappe demonstrated her skills to an audience at the museum.

She said it was when she and her ex-husband, who was in the Air Force, were shipped over to Turkey that "I really got into pottery."

When they returned to America, Zappe said she wanted to try her hand at making her own pieces. After she began by making dinnerware, she said she just couldn't quit.

"I didn't even know what a potter's wheel was," said Zappe, speaking of when she first began.

"I set up a studio at home. That was my mid-life crisis," Zappe said. "I took up clay, and my husband took up women, so I got a divorce and moved to Austin, Texas with my four kids."

Charlotte Moody, a volunteer co-manager at the Tech Museum, said she met Zappe five years ago at a Christmas show in San Angelo. Moody said she had seen a nativity that Zappe had done and told Charlette Hendrick, the manager

Freshman Council elections underway

By Gretchen Verry
Staff Writer

Freshman Council elections are underway with a record 134 students applying to run for the 25 positions that are open.

"This is really an exciting thing, given that enrollment is down," said Stephani Williams, Freshman Council co-sponsor. "We have 40 more students this year, than last."

The total number of 25 positions is based on enrollment figures and is down from 26 members last year.

"Basically, we take the total enrollment of students with less than 30 hours, and divide that number by 250, and that figure is the number of spots that we have for that year," said Dan Burns, University Center assistant director of operations.

Sponsors also plan to change the format of Freshman Council in order to get them more involved with the Student Government Association.

"The biggest thing we want to do this year is establish a program where

Haragan names West to new position

By Jonathan Biles
Staff Writer

Gene West, interim vice president of operations, was promoted to vice president of operations by President Donald Haragan earlier this month.

West began his interim position in February 1998, when Monty Davenport resigned his position.

West's career with Texas Tech extends back for the past 12 years and will continue with the acceptance of his new position. Before his promotion to interim for the vice president of operations, West was the director of the physical plant where, Haragan said, he had one of the best operations in the state.

Haragan has known West almost 10 years and served as West's immediate supervisor.

"I have known (West) for quite a while, and he has done an excellent job in the past, and I expect him to do an excellent job in the future," Haragan said.

Just like any organization on campus, there is a certain responsibility to those who use Tech everyday, West said.

"We try to treat all the students at the physical plant just like Sears and Roebuck treat their customers," West said. "As far as we are concerned, every student, faculty and staff on campus are customers, and without them, they don't need us."

Assuming his new role, West said he does not feel it is necessary to make any future promises at this time. He said he would like to get comfortable in his new position before he makes promises that he cannot keep.

West did say, however, that he will strongly support Tech's advancements and the Master Plan.

West feels his past position at the physical plant, as well as his military experience, has more than qualified him for his promotion.

"I spent 20 years in the Air Force doing this kind of thing, and I have spent the last 16 years here at Texas Tech," West said. "And as the physical plant director, you are managing about $30 million worth of budgets, so you have a big part of campus operations already."

Following in West's footsteps, Jay Buffington, associate director of the physical plant, has now taken the position of interim for the director of the physical plant.

Plans in works for new Texas execution chamber

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — It looks like Texas will be getting a new death chamber.

Corrections officials are reviewing construction bids to rebuild the death house that's been in use since 1924 at the Walls Unit in downtown Huntsville.

"The new one will address the problem of being able to separate everyone and be a better operation," Larry Fitzgerald, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, said Tuesday.

"It will allow for more space on both sides of the witness area."

The execution chamber underwent a minor renovation nearly three years ago when a wall was erected.

The wall was created for dividing the small witness area in half to accommodate survivors of murder victims who wished to witness the execution of the person convicted of killing their loved one.

While up to five victim survivors crowd into one side of the room, the condemned inmate may select up to five people to watch from the other half of the witness area.

The procedure is designed so there is no contact between the victim's witnesses and the inmate's witnesses.

As now configured, each side of the room can accommodate three to four people who stand shoulder-to-shoulder up against a plastic window to watch the procedure.

Other witnesses, including news reporters, state and prison officials, law enforcement authorities and prison guards stand behind them to try to get a glimpse of the strapped-down inmate, who generally has a warden standing near his head and a chaplain near his feet.

The result often can be more than a dozen people crowded into two identical spaces about the size of a pair of walk-in closets.

"When we included the victim's witnesses ... it was at best a stopgap measure to divide the room," Fitzgerald said.

"This will allow for more space on both sides of the witness area."

Under the new configuration, the victim and inmate witnesses would be seated.

"The plans I have seen call for five seats to be bolted to the ground, kind of like stadium-type seats, to enable those who are not family members a better view of the whole process."

Under the terms of the bid, the winning contractor will partially demolish and replace the roof and walls, install new doors and windows, plumbing and air conditioning, plus exterior work like ramps, paving and handrails to accommodate disabled people.

The bid for contract went out in July. As of Tuesday, it had not been awarded.

The cost of the project was not immediately known.

From 1924 until July 1964, 361 men went to the electric chair in the room, including five on the first day of use, Feb. 9, 1924.

The legislature in 1974 approved lethal injection as the method of capital punishment and the chair was replaced by a gurney.

Eight years later, on Dec. 7, 1982, convicted killer Charlie Brooks Jr. became the first inmate in the nation to be put to death by injection.

Since then, the execution total has reached 158, the highest in the nation among states with the death penalty.

The Texas tally includes 157 men and one woman — Karla Faye Tucker earlier this year.

The chamber was refit in the mid 1980s with the wheeled gurney replaced by a steel table bolted to the floor.

New jail bars were installed along with brighter lighting and a light blue paint job to replace the dark brown on the brick walls.

In 1993, the double pane of plastic windows — on each side of the jail bars — was installed in what prison officials described as a safety and security measure.

A microphone system also was put in so witnesses could better hear the inmate's final words.

“The new one will ... separate everyone and be a better operation.”

senators are paired up with Freshman Council members," Williams said.

The senators, called freshman counselors, will be responsible for getting Freshman Council members familiar with how the SGA works. This will allow them to have experience with the student government before senate elections next spring.

"Freshman Council members will be an ex-officio member on their buddy's committee, and if their buddy writes legislation, we want them involved in that, getting the experience," Williams said.

Another change planned for this year is more member involvement in the decision process. Williams said that members will be encouraged to come up with projects they would like the council to do.

Elections are Sept. 22, and results will be announced Sept. 24. Anyone with under 30 hours can vote Sept. 22 in the residence halls from 4:30 p.m. until 6:30 p.m., or all day in the University Center.

Homecoming queen elections will be Oct. 6. Ten finalists will be selected through a popular vote, and then interviewed.

"The process is based on a 40 to 60 percentage. The popular vote will count for 60 percent of the decision, and the interviews will constitute the other 40 percent," Burns said.

of the museum store, about her work.

"Just finding her was really neat," Moody said.

"It's neat just to know the artist who's kind of from this area."

Moody also said the museum store had been carrying Zappe's work for about five years.

"Most of the time, it sells very rapidly," she said.

Michaela Proper, 13, was one of the people in attendance. She said she had asked her mother to take her.

"I heard it over the news channel, and I said that it'd be very good if you took me," Proper said to her mother.

Proper said she learned a lot about how different glazes work.

Michaela's mother, Sharlan Proper, also said she learned a lot.

"It really stirred our interest because she made us feel like we could go home and do this ourselves," she said.

Lewinsky investigation cost $4.4 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr spent at least $4.4 million investigating the alleged cover-up of the Monica Lewinsky affair — a figure that became an instant political weapon in the debate over penalizing President Clinton.

Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, introduced a Senate resolution Tuesday that would demand Clinton repay the cost of the investigation for misleading the country since January.

"President Clinton has pursued a strategy of deceiving the American people and Congress, and he purposely delayed and impeded the independent counsel investigation,"

Murkowski said. "Equity demands that the costs of the delays should be borne by the president and not the taxpayers."

The White House left open the possibility Tuesday that Clinton might accept a penalty.

Presidential spokesman Mike McCurry said Clinton "does not owe the taxpayers" the $4.4 million, but "if there's a serious effort made in Congress to that, we'll consider it when the time comes." The Starr estimate covers the last eight months of the Lewinsky investigation, without the administration's costs in fighting legal battles that delayed the prosecutor, future reimbursements to witnesses or the other aspects of Starr's Whitewater investigation.

Starr's staff calculated the costs its Washington office incurred between Jan. 15, the day permission was granted to expand the Whitewater investigation to include the Lewinsky allegations, and Aug. 31. The other aspects of the Whitewater investigation already have cost about $40 million over 4 1/2 years — a figure Democrats have used frequently to attack the investigation.

The $4.4 million does not include costs other government agencies — the White House, Justice Department and Treasury Department — incurred waging unsuccessful legal battles to stop presidential advisers, lawyers and Secret Service agents from testifying before Starr's grand jury.

Woman despondent shoots triplets, self

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Miguellina Estevez had been alone with her 2-year-old triplet sons since the boys' father moved out, apparently returning to the Dominican Republic and another woman.

She was 19, had no job and spoke little English.

On Monday, after trying to buy rat poison to kill herself and the boys, police say she shot each of her sons in the head with a semi-automatic pistol and then turned the gun on herself.

Police found her body in the second-floor bedroom of her rowhouse and two of her sons dead nearby. The third boy was hospitalized in critical condition.

The boys were identified as Franklin, Frankely and Fabian, or "Franky."

The tall, thin woman had come here three years ago from the Dominican Republic with her boyfriend, Franklin Sanchez.

About two months ago, recalled a friend, Joselyn Perez, Estevez became despondent after finding another woman's underwear in Sanchez's suitcase.

Confronted with the evidence, Sanchez said he was leaving her to marry the other woman in the Dominican Republic, Perez said. Estevez was devastated. She went to Perez's hair salon almost every afternoon to commiserate.

Earlier this month, her mood brightened a little after Sanchez called and said he wanted to work things out.

On Saturday, however, Estevez went to Pruilina's Grocery and asked for rat poison, saying she wanted to kill herself.

The storekeepers, Lauro Paulina and his wife Marguerita Diaz, told her they didn't have any. "Then she said she wanted to go to Roosevelt Boulevard and throw herself in front of the cars, take her children with her," Marguerita Diaz said in Spanish.

Diaz told her to seek help. The next day, Estevez went back to the hair salon but instead of discussing her problems, she talked about remodeling her house.

A family friend, Francisco Rodriguez, said Ms. Estevez called Sanchez's relatives early Monday, begging them to make her an appointment with a psychiatrist.

He said she apparently got an appointment for Wednesday, but he didn't know any details.

"I don't understand it," Perez said Tuesday. "I couldn't sleep last night."

Police said they were trying to locate Sanchez.

Grand jury begins investigation

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — A grand jury convened on Tuesday to investigate the Jon Benet Ramsey case and use the panel's subpoena powers to get the answers that have eluded police for nearly two years.

The 6-year-old beauty queen was found beaten and strangled in the basement of her home in December 1996, and the failure to make an arrest since then has led to allegations that police and prosecutors botched the case, perhaps even deliberately.

In March, police asked that the case be turned over to a grand jury, saying they need the panel's subpoena powers to get to the bottom of the slaying.

In making the request, Cmdr. Mark Beckner, now police chief, noted that Jon Benet's parents, John and Patsy Ramsey, have refused requests for interviews since he took over the case in December. District Attorney Alex Hunter has said the Ramseys are under "an umbrella of suspicion."

The Ramseys have denied any involvement in their daughter's death. Their attorney had no comment on the convening of the grand jury.

"This is where we've wanted to be for quite some time," Beckner said Monday. "The grand jury can be a good investigative tool and we hope there may be something else out there that we maybe haven't gotten."

A grand jury can force uncooperative witnesses to testify and can compel people to turn over documents and other potential evidence.

Craig Silverman, a former Denver prosecutor, said that among the documents of interest to prosecutors would be the Ramseys' medical records, phone records and credit card bills, before and after the slaying.

People who are called before a grand jury can invoke their Fifth Amendment right against self-in-crimination, though prosecutors can then offer immunity and force them to testify.

Denver defense attorney Scott Robinson said there is almost no chance prosecutors will offer the Ramseys immunity. "They're not going to turn the rain off on one of them until they know what actually happened," he said.

The four men and eight women on the grand jury will review more than 30,000 pages of reports and hundreds of pieces of evidence, including items seized from the family's home that could have been used in the beating.

Tech wasting money on renting home

Ginger Pope
Columnist

By the end of the fall semester, Texas Tech will have wasted a little more than $50,000. Yes, again this involves the goings-on with the Tech Campus Master Plan — or the lack of planning. At the beginning of the fall '96 semester, when Chancellor Montford first arrived, Tech regents and administration made the announcement that the chancellor's housing soon would be located on campus. However in the meantime, the university chalks up $2,800 per month for a rent house at 4915 19th St. After one year, this totals to $33,600. The rent total does not even include the amount Tech has spent on renovating the rent house, which at one time was a total of $25,745. These renovations were justified by the administration saying the house is a university facility and there are many Tech-related functions held there. This is true. The house does have university functions, but there are several other on-campus locations that could be used for the same purposes. True, Montford has paid for some of the furnishings to go into the house, but why not invest in a structure that the university will not lose money on. The problem with the rent house is that Tech does not own the property and whatever improvements are made to the house will up the value for the actual owners. Had plans to build the chancellor's house on campus begun soon after the decision to relocate the chancellor's address, then the project could be close to being finished by now. The university could have used the $50,000 for the building of the new house, as well as saved on interest costs for any loans that may incur from future house constructing plans. Last year, Tech sold the house, once occupied by former president Robert Lawless and then Interim President Donald Haragan. The house was sold for $340,000, money again that could have been used for the new house on campus. Sure the Master Plan is subject to many changes in the future, but will these changes bump the chancellor's house off the map? If this happens, then how does the university get its lost money back? Past reports written about the chancellor's house quoted Tech administrators saying the money spent on the rent house does not come out of the classroom, tax payers pockets or student funds.

But just think, the money saved could go into the classroom. The $50,000 plus the $25,000 for renovations added to the $340,000 from the old president's house may not sound like much to the administration or to regents, but to faculty and staff members who are barely scraping by to fund their programs, this money would be pennies from heaven. It seems the administration or regents would realize the waste of funds in this situation, and decide to either begin plans for a new house or go ahead and buy the house Montford is living in, and then sell it when ready.

Future of our nation not impressive

This weekend we hosted a high school forensics tournament and it totally blew my mind. All of us Texas Tech Forensics members could not believe the level of immaturity and stupidity exemplified by these crack-heads. They were very loud, unprofessional and disrespectful. After every round of competition, we all convened to ask ourselves the following question, "Were we that bad at their age?" The answer we came up with was no.

Dwayne Mamo
Columnist

The reason is two-fold: We couldn't have been that bad or else none of us would have made it onto the Texas Tech team, because we happen to think of ourselves as quite good all around. We had coaches who cared enough about us to make sure we had good team presence, and we knew what we were talking about. All in all, though, it was a more frightening experience having to watch these kids try to pass off information, of which they have no idea what they're talking about. Not only that, but to watch them think they are actually successful. See, these kids are more used to going to high school tournaments run by high schools, therefore most of the judges are parents who know equally as much as the children. The dumbing of America in practice.

This is the scary part: the fact that children and adults, actually and mutually, fall for such misinformation, sometimes to the point of believing it. For example, I judged a kid who thought just because the United States managed to lift itself out of the bog 200 years ago, that North Korea would be able to do the same. What a lot of nerve.

I'll tell you what the real problem is: no one these days is being taught how to think. That's what it is. It's becoming an epidemic. People's analytic capabilities are at an all-time low. A perfect testament to this is when products like squeezable pudding actually have directions on the tube for those who can't figure it out. God forbid we actually give people the opportunity to think for themselves anymore. I guess part of the problem comes from our education system. Education systems have shifted its focus from the students to money.

They teach students the best techniques for passing the TAAS, as opposed to teaching them how to make connections between different sets of knowledge. This kind of thing goes on in college but not to the same degree. The difference is, instead of the institution going for the money only (which it does), it's also the fault of the student who only goes to college to get out and get a job.

Instead of entering higher education for its altruistic reasons to become a more well-rounded, educated, functioning member of society, they enter it to graduate ASAP. And in the process, do what they can to get by with as little as possible. I don't know, I may just be talking impulsively and off the handle again, but there is a problem here.

I don't think it could be denied that, in general, people are not being taught to think. Hell, many students manage to graduate high school without even being able to read or do simple math in their head or on paper.

Maybe the problem doesn't stem from the schools either. Maybe it's the fact that no one has initiative anymore.

Frankly, folks, that's something that cannot be taught. It looks like we may be headed for the second Dark Age if things keep on losing focus as they have already, and people just become more and more apathetic about everything.

Well almost everything, people still care about sex, drugs, Jerry Springer, scandal, the new fall season on TV, etc. All the important issues that directly affect our lifestyle and our future. Perpetual escapism is unhealthy.

READERS ASK

BY JO HENDERSON, STUDENT HEALTH SERVICES HEALTH EDUCATION COORDINATOR

My girlfriend has very sensitive nipples, and it bothers me that sometimes during sex or foreplay I hurt her through my desire to touch them. Please advise me on what we can do to maximize our mutual pleasure.

4) don't bounce, but instead use controlled and slow stretches. 5) do your whole body, not just part. 6) hold each stretch for at least 20-30 seconds and then do it once more.

Does this happen every time? If so, she needs to see a health care provider at Student Health because they should not remain very sensitive all of the time. If, on the other hand, it happens on occasion, many women experience tenderness a week prior to and the week of their menstruation cycle.

Can you get pregnant through pantyhose or underwear?

It is not a very common way, but it could happen. Your clothes would have to be moist enough for sperm lubrication to provide a medium for sperm to live and travel in. I wouldn't use L'eggs as a birth control method if I were you.

There are many other ways and places to touch a person that provides them and yourself pleasure without causing pain. Try a very light almost licking touch, try touching another part of the body that is erotic to you and her.

Can I damage my eyes by looking at my computer too long or not having a good desk lamp?

You cannot damage your eyes by doing a lot of close up work, reading without good lighting, sitting too close to the TV or your computer monitor or reading without your glasses.

Everybody says to stretch before you exercise. How long and how should I do that before I start?

What you will give yourself is a good case of eye strain which means the muscles around your eyes have become tired.

Some guides to stretching include the following advise: 1) stretch on a regular basis. 2) stretch only lightly before a workout. 3) stretch yourself out all you can without causing pain.

I started a fire yesterday frying something on the stove. I got the pan in the sink in time before it got out of hand, but it scared me to death. What would have been the best way to put out that kind of fire?

I have heard everything from water, to salt, to flour, etc. I read from the National Fire Protection Agency that the best way to handle a pan fire on the stove is to smother it with a lid and turn off the burner.

Also, did you know that 80 percent of deaths by fire occur at home. So, I expect your scare will keep you watching those pans from now on.

What is the herb Comfrey? I hear it is good for ulcers, hemorrhoids and bronchial congestion.

Comfrey is a common root that grows in the grasslands. Allantoin may be responsible for its healing action, which promotes cell proliferation.

You can find it in ointments because of its anti-inflammatory properties. Despite the claims of healing uses, ingestion of Comfrey may pose a health hazard and should not be taken by humans or animals in any form.

Consult your pharmacist and/or health care provider if you need medications and don't trust everything you read on the Internet, etc.

The students are back, and, of course, everyone either doesn't know or has selective memory about the rules for bikes and pedestrians on this campus. Would you please enlighten everyone, because I'm tired of dodging rude people.

I would be glad to enlighten everyone, and it's not only students but faculty and staff as well that are guilty of breaking the rules. Rules for bicyclists: 1) Don't ride on the sidewalk because it's hazardous to the pedestrian and a violation of university policy. Also, you can't read the mind of someone walking in front of you if they decide to make a quick turn.

2) Use hand signals so motorists and pedestrians will know you have intentions to turn.

3) When emerging from a parking lot or alley, stop before entering the street.

The rules for pedestrians are: 1) Cross the street using the painted crosswalks only because you have the right-of-way there. If however, you are trying to cross at Flint Avenue near Weymouth Residence Hall (for example) and the traffic light turns red for you and green for cars to travel, don't step out into the painted crosswalk because, in that case, the car has the right-of-way.

2) Every pedestrian crossing a roadway at any point other than a painted crosswalk shall yield the right-of-way to all vehicles upon the roadway.

3) Don't cross the street visiting with other people, wearing head phones or reading a book — be alert.

4) Remember that Lubbock drivers are not used to snow, ice, rain or anything other than nice dry roads, so when bad weather hits, don't step out in front of a bicycle or car and expect them to stop on a dime.

Reader's Ask is printed in The University Daily to answer any questions about health issues. Drop boxes are set up in the University Center, West Hall and the Student Recreation Center. Not all questions are answered, but most topics will be discussed.

Texans celebrate Mexican independence

HARLINGEN (AP) — Mariachi music, traditional dances and recitations of Mexico's historic declaration of independence are some of the colorful ways Texans are celebrating Mexican independence day.

This year's "Diez y Seis de Septiembre" or 16th of September, will mark 188 years since Father Miguel Hidalgo issued the "Grito de Dolores," his call for independence from Spain.

Mexico won its independence in 1821, 11 years after the Grito and well after Hidalgo's execution by the Spanish.

"Diez y Seis reminds us that the love of freedom and democracy is not just an American phenomenon," said state Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, who has hosted a Mexican independence day celebration for two night of Sept. 15.

The president of Mexico recites the Grito from the balcony of the National Palace.

The proclamation is also recited by state and city officials throughout the country.

Mexican consuls in Texas were tapped to deliver the Grito at various Tuesday night ceremonies.

Wednesday celebrations will include music and dancing.

For the 23rd year, Barrientos is hosting a celebration at noon in the Capitol Rotunda.

Barrientos began the celebrations in 1976, while a state representative.

This year's event includes a speech by historian and archivist Marta Cotera.

There will also be Mexican folk dances, and mariachi and conjunto music.

Lowrance takes home title for Red Raiders

By Brent Dirks
Sports Editor

Texas Tech women's golfer Brooke Lowrance took home a tournament title after shooting a 76 in the final day of the Jeannine McHaney Memorial Tournament Tuesday at the Lubbock Country Club.

After shooting a tournament-best 72 and 71 in Monday's two rounds of play, Lowrance shot a 5 over par on the 6,102-yard country club course to pick up the tournament title to start the season.

"Today was a different story than yesterday, obviously," Lowrance said. "I didn't quite do exactly what I wanted to, but I survived."

At the start of the day's action, two players were closely trailing, but Lowrance said she didn't feel much pressure from the rest of the competitors.

Kathleen Takaishi, from Oregon State, shot a 78 in the final round to finish three strokes behind Lowrance. TCU's Angela Stanford fired a 77 to finish in third place, four strokes behind Lowrance on the leaderboard.

"Actually, I had a pretty confident attitude," Lowrance said of her mentality going into the tournament. "I really never thought about losing, and for some reason I felt like the other two girls weren't playing at the top either, so it kind of put a little less pressure on me.

"I knew all I had to do was play an even round, and I tried. It was a struggle, but I tried."

Lowrance said the tournament win will give her confidence going into the rest of the season as she and the Red Raiders look to improve on last year's performance.

"It will, eventually," she said. "There is a couple of things I learned from this tournament that hopefully I can take into the next. It's always good to win a tournament, and win a tournament playing pretty well."

Individually for the Red Raiders, Jamie Vannoy finished seventh, Jennifer Newhouse tied for 16th, Heather Wrede finished in 22nd, Priscilla Hunt finished tied 23rd and Beth Covington tied for 28th.

Like in the individual standings, the team's standings barely changed with the Red Raiders finishing third in the tournament.

As a team Tech shot a 311 for a combined tournament score of 922. The Red Raiders finished 16 strokes behind No. 22-ranked Oregon State and four strokes behind No. 8-ranked TCU.

The Red Raiders held off SMU, which finished with a 930 for fourth place at the tournament.

Tech director of golf, Jeff Mitchell, said even though the finish was in line with the rankings, he was somewhat disappointed with the Red Raider's finish at the tournament.

"I'd have to say I'm a little bit disappointed in this finish in that I thought TCU was very vulnerable" Mitchell said.

"There the eighth-ranked team in the preseason polls, and I really thought we had a legitimate opportunity to beat them. Those are the types of things you have to take advantage of if you want to get respect in the rankings."

But, Mitchell said he is optimistic

“Today was a different story than yesterday...”

McGwire happy with 62

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Mark McGwire swears he won't mind if he finishes second to Sammy Sosa in the home run chase.

"If he's ahead or I'm ahead, I would not have one complaint, one iota," McGwire said. "You know what, all I can do is control what I do."

Entering Tuesday night's doubleheader against Pittsburgh, McGwire had just three singles in 18 at-bats in six games since hitting homer No. 62, and had been caught by Sammy Sosa.

He also sat out the first game, in part to protect a bad back that forced him out of a game in Houston after four innings on Sunday.

"Whatever I end up with, I end up with," McGwire said. "And does it make it any less if I don't lead it? No."

McGwire has had a pair of 29 at-bat homer droughts this year, but winces when they're mentioned. He prefers to look at the big picture.

"I've seen some of the headlines: 'Stuck on 62.' We've spoiled these people," McGwire said. "Holy mackerel. I get singles now and they're, like, boo. I want to hit .300."

McGwire entered the day batting .292 and wants to hit .300 for the third time in his career. He said if he needs a home run to tie Sosa for the title on his final at-bat of the season and also needed a hit to top .300, he'd go for average.

McGwire wants people to know about the friendship that he's developed with Sosa. Sosa ran from right field to embrace McGwire when he hit No. 62 in St. Louis; McGwire telephoned Sosa for a congratulatory call on Monday.

Longhorns, Cowboys regrouping

Jeff Keller
Sports Reporter

In all of the chaos and hoopla surrounding the pennant chase in professional baseball and the start of the season in both college and professional football, college volleyball has been left by the wayside.

The Red Raider squad is 8-1 on the season and are only getting better.

Tech had not even lost a game until the last match of the Red Raider Classic against high-powered and high-ranked California-Santa Barbara last week.

Perennial Big 12 volleyball bullies Texas and Nebraska had better beware of the Red Raiders on the court this season.

• Congratulations to Sammy Sosa for tying Mark McGwire in the home run race. Not to take anything away from McGwire, but Sosa's home runs may mean more as the Cubs are still in the hunt for a postseason berth and possible World Series run this year.

• How about those Texas Longhorns?

Once again our friends from Austin gained a Top 25 ranking in football simply because they have one star player (Ricky Williams), and after all, they are the Longhorns.

And again the Longhorns lost to UCLA in a blow-out and lost their Top 25 ranking in the national polls. Could this be a trend?

After surrendering 36 points to Big West weakling New Mexico State and getting embarrassed on national television by UCLA for a second straight year, UT should resurface its field with Big Chief Tablet because the only thing they look good on is paper.

• Cowboy fans: it is not time for us to hit the panic button just yet. Though everyone let out a collective "arghhh" when Troy Aikman went out of the Denver game with a broken left clavicle.

There is still hope for this season as the Cowboys try to rebound from a big loss.

One reason is because there are still 14 games left in the regular season for the Cowboys to show what they are really made of.

Another reason is that division foes Washington, Arizona and Philadelphia are still winless.

That leaves Dallas in a tie with the Giants for the lead in the NFC's Eastern Division.

If Dallas is going to survive this stint without Aikman, the Cowboys defense is going to have to shape up. They cannot allow 514 yards of offense to anyone and expect to win. The secondary of the Cowboys is the most suspect of all, as Kevin "pass-interference-on-No. 26" Smith is not the pass defender he once was.

Dallas needs someone to cover the side of the field opposite Deion Sanders.

Smith covers it too well, as evidence of his league leading seven pass interference penalties last year. Dallas may need someone else to replace Smith.

On the bright side for Dallas, Jason Garrett did an admirable job of filling in for Aikman in the second half of the Bronco matchup and has led Dallas to victory before as a starter.

Anyone remember the Thanksgiving Day game against the Packers in '94? Garrett threw for 311 yards that day and led the Cowboys to 36 points in the second half helping the Cowboys to a comeback victory over the Packers.

With coach Chan Gailey's new offense leading the way, the Cowboys should be able to stay in contention for a playoff berth until Aikman's return.

Jeff Keller is a sophomore broadcast journalism major from Cloudcroft, N.M.

Olajuwon to stay fit

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets aren't letting Hakeem Olajuwon work, so he's taking it upon himself.

Unable to formally train as a Rocket because of the ongoing NBA lockout, Olajuwon has turned to former University of Houston track coach Tom Tellez to stay in shape and recover from surgery on his left knee.

"I've been trying to learn the proper technique of the track runners," Olajuwon told Houston reporters. "Running properly, good form, which makes running much easier and helps me tremendously on the court."

Tellez has coached 12 Olympians, including nine-time gold medalist Carl Lewis, before retiring earlier this year. He has teamed with former UH triple jump star Frank Rutherford to help Olajuwon train.

"He's training like a world-class triple jumper now," said Rutherford, an Olympic medalist.
