Clinton signs Campus Security Act

Legislation will significantly improve campus security across the nation

By Apu Naik

Universities across the nation can look forward to safer campuses thanks to the 105th U.S. Congress, whose several legislative packages dealing with college campus security issues were signed into law Wednesday by President Clinton.

Both the House and Senate had hearings addressing national concerns about having secret hearings on how to discipline delinquent students, report crime statistics, violent athletes, violence against women and student drug abuse.

According to the Security on Campus, Inc. website, 105th Congress said, "this legislation will significantly improve campus security at campuses across the country by making students more aware, reducing drug and alcohol abuse on campus and increasing services to respond to women who are too often the victims of violence on campus."

The legislative packages are di-

Under the legislation, campus crime statistics are to be disclosed to the public and campus police logs are to become open for public

General provisional changes to laws already existing were passed in addition to student disciplinary records now being released under certain conditions.

Students involved in drug convictions now will be subject to increased discipline.

The legislation also calls for the protection of violence against

Although most of the measures introduced with this legislation are vided into seven different general women and steps are to be taken to additions to current policies, some measures call for changes never seen before within higher education amendments.

Robert Ewalt, vice president for student affairs, said any legislation that would make the Tech campus safer to the public is good news.

"This legislation represents a concern of parents and students to ensure safety within their schools and shows a positive outlook for the future," Ewalt said.

Officials from the Tech dean of students office were not able to comment on the legislation late Wednesday.

The Homecoming Queen and her court will be selected by combining 40 percent of the interview score with 60 percent of the popular vote from

In case of a tie, the candidate with the highest popular vote will be selected as Homecoming Queen.

"I'm really excited and honored about being selected as one of the finalists, and I'm glad everyone who voted decided I'd be a good representative," Blair said. "All of the finalists selected were quality girls, and I have no doubt that they will all represent Tech with a great deal of class.

Cooking up Traditions

Students get chance to meet, greet Masked Rider

By Gretchen Verry

exas Tech students had the chance to meet the Masked Rider Wednesday and enjoy something that does not come around very often - free food from a cookout.

The cookout was sponsored by the Student Alumni Board and gave students the opportunity to meet and greet the Masked Rider without the mask.

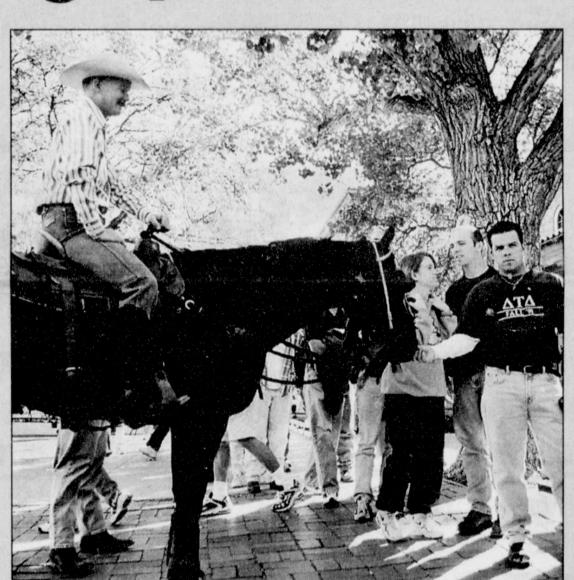

"We wanted to find a way for Dusty (Abney) to casually meet the students," said Logan Spence, a senior agricultural communications major from Lubbock and sponsor of the Masked Rider's appearance.

Students had the chance to speak with the Masked Rider and his horse, Black Phantom Raider, and get pictures autographed.

"The Masked Rider is an important part of Tech tradition, and I think that students should be a part of it," Abney said.

Students were provided with hot dogs and chips by the Ex-Students Association.

"This is an effort on the part of the Ex-Students Association in conjunction with the Student Alumni Board ... to recruit new members to the board by getting the name out to the students," said Leslie Lattimore, a senior public relations major from Levelland, and publicity and promotions co-chairwoman of the Homecoming Committee. "It lets the alumni board get out and meet the students."

The cookout celebrated Homecoming week and brought awareness of traditions and history to students.

Tech cheerleaders and the pom pon squad quizzed students around the cookout on Tech traditions and history and awarded students with gift certificates to local restaurants if they got the questions right.

"I think this Homecoming is a very important one, because with Tech celebrating their 75th Homecoming, Tech going for their sixth straight win and this possibly being Spike Dykes' 75th win, a lot of exciting things are resting on this game," Lattimore said. "It's important for students to get excited about and involved in everything that's going on." The Homecoming Cookout is expected to continue for years to come.

"I definitely think that this should become a tradition for the school," Spence said.

Russians protest economy, Yeltsin

MOSCOW (AP) — Empty pockets and anger over the failure of Boris Yeltsin's government to end years of economic malaise drove hundreds of thousands of Russians to nationwide protests Wednesday. Disillusionment and pragmatism kept many more away.

Miners, monarchists, students and business people took to the streets from Moscow to Vladivostok in the first major public protest since an economic crisis hit in August, but the peaceful demonstrations fell far short of organizers' predictions they would be the biggest anti-Yeltsin protest ever.

Many Russians eschew politics for reasons ranging from apathy after decades of Soviet authoritarianism to a traditional Russian fatalism that people have to make the best of things. Others shunned the protests because of fear of violence or their association with the Communists, who have the support of about 20 percent of the population.

'We've got to work, to make money. I don't have time for this," said Natasha Krasikova, a sales clerk in the GUM department store adjacent to Red Square, where tens of thousands of Muscovites rallied.

"The only people who go to these protests are the ones who don't have anything to do with themselves."

The protests, organized by trade unions and the powerful Communist Party, appeared to create little momentum for serious change in the world's largest

'These sorts of protests are not the road to revolution," said Sergei Tuchin, 49, an unemployed writer in Moscow who did not take part.

While the demonstrations were spurred by the latest crisis, which has seen the ruble plummet, the markets collapse and inflation soar, most marchers were protesting over months, sometimes years, of unpaid salaries and pensions.

"We will not allow Yeltsin to destroy us," national trade union leader Mikhail Shmakov said in Moscow. "We want a president who solves the concrete problems of the country and doesn't make empty prom-

Milosevic given another chance

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A U.S. envoy gave Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic another chance Wednesday to bow to international demands and avoid NATO airstrikes. But Milosevic remained defiant.

Following his meeting with envoy Richard Holbrooke, Milosevic's office said "attempts were made to overcome the differences" over the crisis in Kosovo province.

Referring to the possibility of NATO airstrikes, the Yugoslav statement said "the threats which are delivered to our country jeopardize the continuation of the political process."

It accused foreign governments of waging "a media campaign against our country" through "one-sided and fabricated reports.'

U.S. officials refused comment on the talks, and Holbrooke left for Brussels, Belgium, to meet Secretary of State Madeleine Albright on Thursday.

Before the talks ended, President Clinton reiterated that Milosevic has to end his crackdown in Kosovo, pull out his special police force and resume negotiations. Kosovo is a provThis is not a penalty Milosevic launched his crackdown Feb. 28 against the ethnic Albanian Kosovo Liberation Army, which is fighting for independence for Kosovo. Hundreds have been killed and more than 270,000 people have been driven from their homes.

Despite mounting evidence of Milosevic's non-compliance and a

U.N. declaration confirming it, Wash ington seemed to lack the international consensus needed to bomb Milosevic into compliance.

The United States is trying to get Milosevic and the ethnic Albanians to agree on a deal that would defer for two or three years a decision on whether to separate Kosovo from

"We are continuing to push for military action against the Serbs," State Department spokesman James Rubin said. "NATO is not there yet."

U.S. officials also face strong opposition from Russia, whose Defense Minister Igor Sergeyev warned Wednesday the move could lead to even more bloodshed in Kosovo.

"This is not a penalty or punishment of an isolated country but almost a real war," Marshal Sergeyev said in Athens, Greece.

Milosevic's repeated references to the "threats" undermining chances for peace appeared aimed at playing on those divisions, not only between the Russians and NATO but within the Western alliance itself.

Important Information for Students! TechSIS Implementation

In an ongoing effort to improve service for our students, faculty, and staff, a new student records system (TechSIS) is being installed. The new system will be faster and more powerful than the one presently in use and will allow the University to introduce new services such as telephone and web registration by the summer of 1999. Other student services to follow will include the use of the web to check grades and a web-based degree audit system.

The installation process will begin during the month of October and is scheduled to conclude by early November. We want to assure you that the installation process has been planned to minimally affect any administrative or student services you may use during the conversion period.

If you have any questions about TechSIS, please feel free to contact Ms. Linda Ricks at 742-2907.

Reception to honor past athletes

By Jonathan Biles

In part of the Homecoming celebrations, Texas Tech's 1950s athletes will be honored in a guest reception from 2 p.m. until 3 p.m. Saturday in the Formby room presented by the Southwest Collection/Special Collections Library and the athletic department.

The reception is a private function which will include over 100 guests and former athletes including the 1954 Gator Bowl Most Valuable Player Bobby Cavazos and player Jerry Johnson, said David Marshall, field representative for the Southwest Collections.

During the reception, tapes from the 1954 Gator Bowl and the 1950s football game versus Harrdin-Simmons will be shown show appreciation to the players of third victims' body

AUSTIN (AP) — Nearly seven years after her disappearance, Austin police confirmed Wednesday that a body found along the Brazos River was that of accountant Colleen Reed.

Serial killer Kenneth McDuff was sentenced to death for her 1991 murder but never disclosed the whereabouts of Reed's body.

He was scheduled to be executed Oct. 21 for Reed's murder, but a federal court recently granted him a stay.

By matching dental records, the Travis County medical examiner concluded that the remains belonged to 28-year-old Reed, said Tracy Carol, an Austin police

"I don't think this will change our case," Reaves said.

There is a federal appeal pending. McDuff, 52, is the only Texas death row inmate to be paroled and later sentenced to death again for another capital murder.

Marketing Association doubles membership

By Amy Bishop

In the past year, The Marketing Association, one of Texas Tech's student organizations on campus, has doubled their membership.

TMA is the largest non-Greek organization on campus, said Will Robinson, the TMA president.

"We have now increased the number of our members to 432 this year,"

TMA was established in 1968 and received the award of Student Organization of the Year in 1998 by Leadership Tech. The mission of TMA is to promote professional activities for marketing majors, said adviser Debra Laverie.

"We help to provide our members with networking and with the help of the Career Placement Center, we place our members in jobs by graduation," Laverie said.

"We have been very successful in placing students in jobs. Last spring only one student was not placed with a company."

The members also have a lot of time to interact with companies from Houston and Dallas.

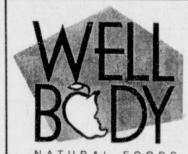

"We have formal meetings where we bring in the companies for a formal dinner. The companies give their presentation, and then the students are able to drop off their resumes and set-up interviews with the companies," Robinson said.

This process works in two ways. The company can choose to take an open sign-up for an interview or they will pre-screen the applicants and choose the ones they feel will be in interest of the company. Internships also are set up for our members, Laverie said.

"We help them to find internships generally between their junior and

Traveling abroad different experience

uring the summer of 1998, there were tons of great movies that hit the theaters. Some of the many included "The Mask of Zorro," "Mulan," "Dr. Doolittle," "Fallen," "Armageddon" and "Lethal Weapon 4."

The last of these movies was highly anticipated and lived up to its high billing in every possible way.

Andrew Schoppe Columnist

Not a single opportunity to toss in a funny one-liner was ever passed

As you may recall, even when there was a car wreck on the freeway during a high-speed chase, when one of the cars nearly crashed into the rear of an 18-wheeler, there was a bumper sticker on the truck that said something like, "If you can read this sticker, you're too close to

Not only did the movie have the expected action shots and endless amounts of humor, but it also passed along some important messages through its story lines.

Early in the movie, after discovering that Chinese immigrants who were being smuggled into the U.S. would be deported, Roger Murtaugh (Danny Glover) decided to do something.

He decided to take a group of immigrants stowed away in a lifeboat to his home to give them a chance to suc-

Later in the movie, scenes showed the immigrants and Murtaugh's family sitting together in the kitchen sharing their cultures and time with one another.

What developed between these two groups of people standing that can only come about when people truly are open to different cultures, qualities and ways of life.

During the first part of this past summer, a group of Tech students had the chance to study abroad in San Luis Potosi, Mexico, for a little more than a month.

As is the case with anything new, the students all had some apprehensions about how the experience in a new culture would go.

Yet, after just a few days of absorbing the warmth and openness of the people in San Luis, almost all of the pre-existing apprehensions had vanished. Both the people of San Luis and the Tech students had to be willing to adjust some and accept one another.

When the Tech students realized the values and aspects of life that Americans hold dearly are equally treasured by the people of Mexico, inseparable bonds and open minds resulted.

On many occasions, the people of Mexico seemed ecstatic and proud others would try to learn and understand their culture.

This shown brightly through the patience and goodwill of the Mexican people.

Within the United States it is often very common to detect xenophobic attitudes. After all, the United States is a superpower and the leader of the free world. However, outside of the United States' borders are cultures and people who have a great deal to share with the rest of the world. Fortunately, study abroad experiences are tremendous opportunities for people to broaden their horizons through the sharing of life's gifts.

But not everyone has the means or opportunity to study abroad.

That is what is so great about the United States.

With a mix of different cultures all within one nation, people can learn first-hand about what it's like to live in a different country or culture without leaving home.

It is through open eyes and open minds the embers of learning can continue to burn.

Buses, drivers often dangerous for students

Karina Aul Columnist

There goes someone's toes. Wait a minute. They were my toes. Once again, my toes were crushed by an unidentified stepping object. Actually, it was someone who was standing, hanging on to a rail for dear life as the bus driver hurled down the road at frightening speeds, who was doing the crunch-

Monday morning dawned cold and clear.

Emphasis on cold. It was a finger-numbing 56 degrees and the bus drivers were running late. After waiting for only 20 minutes, the bus finally showed up.

I was one of the lucky ones who actually got a seat.

As you can probably tell, I am taking this time and space to write about the buses and the drivers. Actually, it is more like a complaint.

we call buses. However, I am a little tired of the treatment that some of us have been receiving.

For example, in the past few weeks on the red route, there have been some drivers whose bad attitudes show quite clearly.

One girl, not knowing exactly where the bus was supposed to pick her up, waited patiently for a bus to stop for her.

The bus stopped, but as soon as she stepped aboard, she was chewed out by the driver for not standing at the actual stop.

Other drivers are kind, in fact, I even have a favorite.

However, this fact does not excuse the other "bad" drivers' behavior.

They should keep in mind that they are here for the students. The demigods in charge of decision-making decided that since the students

Most of us ride the monstrosities were supposed to park a zillion miles from nowhere, they needed some sort of transportation. Sometimes, I would rather walk.

If we decide to actually ride a bus, a must on a cold day, then we are subjected to all kinds of tortures. Toe crunching is only one of these. There are nudges, bumps, whiplash and, above all, lap landings.

There you are, minding your own business, trying not to think about how much your toes hurt, when suddenly a large mass lands in your lap. Usually, this is a human body, but sometimes it is a backpack full of books. Believe me, a human body is a lot better than 20 tons of books. So what is a lowly student to do? Well, I think we need some more buses. About five more for each route would be good. Also, we need some new drivers. How about a "hello" every now and then. Even a smile would be better than a grunt.

Another must is that these drivers must actually obey the law. If we have to do 20 mph on the roads, then they have to. And what about that little yellow line that some drivers seem to ignore? The sign says that it is federal law that prohibits human beings to stand forward of the line when the bus is moving. I think the drivers need to stop ignoring this. At the speeds they go, it is too dangerous.

Above all, I believe that we, the students, should elect bus drivers. We could all go to vote in Holden Hall or the UC. Either way, we elect the person who is entrusted with our lives. If they, like politicians, promise something and then don't deliver, we can always chew them out on cold Monday mornings.

Clinic offers free depression screenings

By Amy Bishop Staff Writer

Lubbock Regional Mental Health and Mental Retardation will take part in National Depression Screening Day by giving free depression screenings today.

This is a free program which will include viewing a video, completing a screening questionnaire, meeting a health professional to review the questionnaire and receive information about one of America's most common mental health illness-depression.

This is an important day because many people do not know they are suffering from depression, Joseph Banken, program director at Sunrise Canyon said.

"Many of the signs of depression are not known to people, so they could miss the fact that they have it," Banken said.

Many of the signs of depression are changes in sleep patterns, lack of interest in things that use to interest them, extreme guilt, problems with concentration, a change in appetite (less of one or more of one), agitation and serious suicidal thoughts.

Women are more likely to experience depression than men, said Keith Minnus, director of assessment and referral services at Char-

Branch Davidians' land trial delayed

WACO (AP) - A state district judge delayed until December a trial in the lawsuit over who owns the Branch Davidian land near Waco where about 80 people died in a fire on April 19, 1993.

Judge Alan Mayfield's action came Wednesday after new papers were filed in the case by Percy Isgitt, a Houston lawyer representing a group of about 20 plaintiffs. The new trial date is Dec. 14.

Jury selection had been scheduled to start Wednesday in the dispute of the property, where the 1993 fire erupted as federal authorities moved on the compound to arrest Branch Davidian leader David Koresh on weapons charges. The tragedy ended a 51day standoff that followed a bloody gunfight on Feb. 28, 1993, that killed four agents from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and six Branch Davidians.

Before then and in the five years since, members of several Davidian factions have feuded over the property. Some have lived on the land sporadically since the standoff ended, including Amo Roden, the ex-wife of former Branch Davidian leader George Roden.

More recently, the land has been occupied by a Koresh follower and several members claiming to have stayed true to the original Davidians after Koresh broke away from the sect. Wednesday's trial involves a lawsuit filed by Trustees of Branch Davidian Seventh Day Adventist Association against Amo and George Roden and Charles Mitchell.

Isgitt said his clients sued to clear the title to the land, which he said consisted of several acres they wish to use as "church grounds."

He described his clients as mostly Branch Davidians who had accepted Koresh's leadership, including some survivors of the 1993 fire.

Isgitt said the ownership struggle predates Koresh's leadership. A "couple of people" have claimed to be entitled to the land,

"There was a dispute among the Davidian followers pre-David Koresh times, and a court-ordered sale of the property," he said. "It was acquired by the church trustees. David Koresh succeeded as one of the trustees. After his death, the trustees filed this lawsuit to clear any doubts as to the title."

Isgitt said his clients have been paying school and county property taxes and maintaining the rural tract. The defendants in the lawsuit are representing themselves, according to the state district court where the trial will be held.

Bonfire moves to new spot

Other Homeoming events planned

By John Davis Staff Writer

With a cool, fall snap in the air, it feels a lot more like football season. What better way to bond with friends on a crisp night than around a bonfire before the big Homecoming game against Oklahoma State University on Saturday.

However, this year's Homecoming bonfire will be at a new site, Urbanovsky Park, where Chancellor John Montford, President Donald Haragan and the Saddle Tramps will break ground for the bonfire center.

"I think that it's a very exciting project," Montford said. "I'm certainly looking forward to the groundbreaking. I think that the area will become an important centerpiece for spirit activities on campus."

Jamie Robertson, last year's Saddle Tramps president, said he was excited to see his idea for the bonfire center finally happen.

"I came up with it," Robertson said. "I drew the first design, and then I gave that to the architect, and he came up with what it is now."

Robertson said his plan was to have three large concrete monoliths that represent the three football conferences in which Tech has played.

According to "Red Raiders Handbook," Tech belonged to the Border Conference from 1925 to 1955, the Southwest Conference from 1956 to 1996 and joined the Big 12 Conference in 1996.

Robertson added the $300,000 to build the bonfire center came from Regent Alan White and his wife, Lisa.

The Whites will be honored for their gift during the groundbreaking ceremony, Robertson said.

"Myself and a friend went to him to ask him for help getting the money,

"At 5:15, the Saddle Tramps are going to retire the Southwest Conference Circle," said Blayne Beal, the public relations director for homecoming committee. "The 'snake dance' will go from dorm to dorm picking up students and follow a route down Akron, picking up sororities, and fraternities, and other service organizations. They will end up at the new bonfire site right at 6 p.m."

During the "snake dance," the Saddle Tramps pick up students from the residence halls, and they walk in a "massive parade of students" across campus to the bonfire site, Beal said.

"This year is the largest it's ever been," Brown said. "We have 85 participants and we're really excited about that. We have everything from student organizations, to Greek organizations, to community members like businesses and elementary schools." Carrot Top said all he needs are the Carrot Top dancers and the Carrot Top interns. The hyperactive redhead gives his audience more than a stand-up comedy show. He gives them non-stop laughs with his visual and physical humor. Carrot Top and his props are back on tour after a break. He started his tour again last night in San Antonio.

"Everything is bigger in Texas," Carrot Top said from San Antonio. "I have big hair so I fit in. Even as a kid I had crazy hair. It was just a little shorter when I was born. The hair is part of the Carrot Top persona. I look like Chelsea Clinton.'

Some of his creations include a boot with a kickstand for drunk cowboys, high heels with training wheels, a fire hydrant with handles for disabled dogs and an briefcase for the lawyers of O.J. Simpson that has a

After a break of three weeks, working on a new movie and sleeping until 3 p.m. everyday, Carrot Top is back on the road with his "Peace and Car-

"It will be fresh again, I am looking forward to it," Carrot Top said. Carrot Top said he always looks forward to a break and enjoys it at first but after a couple of weeks, he starts getting anxious.

"I feel like I'm not doing anything with my life," he said. "It is always good to get back on the road."

During the spring of 1997, the road brought Carrot Top to Lubbock for the first time.

"I had a good time," Carrot Top said. "It's always fun to visit places you've never been. I've only been to Lubbock once, so it will still be fun. The crowd was good. I didn't know what to expect. The crowd was really responsive."

Carrot Top's comedy has put him in front of millions of people live and through television. He thinks he is lucky to have almost all positive responses to his show even though he has some questionable material.

"I don't think people really take me that seriously," he said. "I'm just having a good time. I've gone to see George Carlin and he'll call people losers."

Carrot Top never thought he would be a professional comedian.

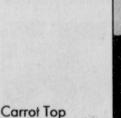

'I was always the class clown," Carrot Top said. "I always made people laugh. People always told me I should be a comedian but I thought 'How do I become a comedian.' I never really planned on being a co-

"People told me 'that was funny but you can't do that, you have to come up with your own stuff," Carrot Top said. "That sucks. That makes it a lot harder."

Carrot Top thought to himself, "How can I do comedy different than other people."

During his third time on stage doing stand-up, he used one prop.

hood Watch sign and questioned the effectiveness of the organization.

The crowd laughed and looked at the comedian as if they were looking for more props.

"It is like a show-and-tell with liquor," Carrot Top said. "I kept building more and more props. It worked for me. I had my own style. I am a very visual guy."

Ten years later, Carrot Top is touring the country entertaining live audiences, has starred in his own movie and makes regular appearances on national television shows including "The Tonight Show" and "Regis and Kathie Lee." Carrot Top has claimed many awards including Entertainer of the Year and Comedian of the Year by the National Association of Campus Activities and the American Comedy Award for Best Male Stand-Up.

"I use current events, things in the news and I observe life," Carrot Top said explaining the way he comes up with material.

Around the time Mark McGwire was accused of using performanceenhancing drugs, Carrot Top came up with a bat that the end screwed off and pills came out.

"I try to keep current, I try to keep updating," he said.

Unlike being a musician, comedians cannot truly practice. They cannot rehearse with the band. Instead, comedians have to wait until they are in front of the crowd to see what the reaction will be like.

"Practicing is on the job," he said. "If it isn't funny, they'll tell you in a matter of seconds. If it isn't funny, I'll make fun of it."

Carrot Top came from a home where everybody worked hard. Nobody had ever been in show business.

"I came from a very modest, humble household," he said. "I never had the wildest dream (of being and entertainer). It's still shocking."

"We looked on it as the spirit of Texas Tech," Lamb said.

The first official Masked Rider was Joe Kirk Fulton, a Tech student, who was chosen to ride a horse named Blackie at the Jan. 1, 1954, Gator Bowl. The horse was loaned to Fulton by Jim St. Clair. Tech played Auburn and defeated them 35-13.

Tripping Daisy performs their 'style' to Lubbock

By Sebastian Kitchen Staff Writer

Anyone who knows anything about Tripping Daisy, does not know them too well.

'That's something known about us," said bass player Mark Pirro. "You never know what you're going to get."

Tripping Daisy is scheduled to perform at 11:30 p.m. Saturday at the 19th St. Warehouse, 1824 Ave. G.

Tripping Daisy's latest album, Iesus Hits Like the Atom, sounds different; the band has two new members on board and people never know what will happen next in the stage show, Pirro said.

The band is even bringing back a multimedia show it had in the beginning before bringing the focus back to the music.

'We are bringing that element back," Pirro said.

"People will be stimulated other than through auditory senses. It just felt like it was time to bring it back. Before, some people might have got confused where the focus was. Now, we are a lot more confident about the band and what we want to do. The focus will always be on the music."

Texas Tech students will have the opportunity to spend the night at The Library tonight, but not studying dancing.

The grand opening of a new Lubbock night club is set for tonight. The Library, located at 2216 Interstate Highway 27, will open its doors at 9 p.m. for the first time with hopes of appealing to the college crowd with mainstream dance music.

"We want to be original and different," said Jay King, general manager of the club. "We are really excited about getting into the Depot District and getting involved."

King said the name of the club was an effort to appeal to the college crowd. He said many other clubs are named The Library and the name has good marketing opportunities.

"You can tell your parents you were out all night at The Library and they won't understand," he said. "We wanted for people to stop and think about the name. It has a catch to it." will welcome anyone 18 and over. Roadhouse Ruby's building but is nors. King said on Sundays, and

Other features to the inside of the 1200-plus capacity club are a TV screen video wall and refurbished sound and lighting systems.

'Yeah, I'm going to be nervous," McCallister said.

That chance to return to the starting position she held most of last year has been almost a month and a half coming after she suffered an arm injury during one of Tech's final practices before the season-opener against SMU.

"I was going for a one-on-one, and what we needed from her."

Cowboys have new look

IRVING (AP) - Before Chan Gailey arrived as the Dallas Cowboys coach, "Load Left" was the standard play for the Dallas Cowboys in short yardage situations.

The ball was handed off to Emmitt Smith who ran to his left behind fullback Daryl Johnston and offensive linemen Nate Newton and Mark Tuinei.

The opponents knew the play was coming. Their problem was stopping it.

For years they couldn't and the Cowboys were the best in the had no trouble stuffing the play. The most famous example was a fourth and one from their own 30-yard line against Philadelphia in 1995 when Barry Switzer went for it and the Eagles stopped the play to turn the game around in a 20-17 Eagles

Under Gailey, the former offensive coordinator at Pittsburgh, opponents have no idea where the Cowboys will attack and can't be sure which weapons they will use.

"People can't predict what we're going to do, what we're going to throw at them," said Smith. "I'm not surprised about the success we've had. Our new system allows us go out and play and to make plays. I feel our offense is getting good enough to compete with anybody in the NFL.'

The Cowboys (3-2) are third in the NFC in offense and the average of 27 points per game is fifth in the NFL.

Dallas averages 145.9 yards rushing, second in the NFC and fourth in the NFL.

Their 209 yards passing average puts them in the top 10 in the Teams can't load up on the Cowboys running game. If they do, they get burned by Deion Sanders, Ernie Mills or Billy Davis, all of whom have taken the load off Michael Irvin.

Last week in a 31-10 victory over Washington, the Cowboys rediscovered their tight end position as a threat. The Redskins weren't ready for it as David LaFleur had four catches for 29

The offensive line also is vastly improved in pass protection, permitting only five sacks, second best in the NFL.

"Statistics are nice but the bottom line is did you win the game?" Gailey said.

"That's where our focus is more than yardage are numbers."

Against Washington, Smith and Chris Warren each rushed for more than 100 yards. It was the first time a pair of Dallas running backs had surpassed 100 yards since Tony Dorsett and Robert Newhouse did it in 1978 and only the third time in club history last

"The great thing about our offense is that we can get even better," Smith said.

'We're just scratching the sur-

Warren said Gailey's system 'keeps fresh players in the game. Emmitt's the starter but I'm ready for whatever comes my way. I don't care if I carry the ball five times or 25 times.'

Smith and Warren have lockers next to each other.

Someone asked if there would ever be a game in which they would be in the backfield at the same time?

"Who's going to block?" Warren answered with a laugh.

'Not me, hoss," Smith shot back. "That's why we've got No. 48 (Johnston)."

McCallister said a year of experience playing with the Red Raiders will help her this season. In 1997, McCallister started 15 games, recorded 75 saves and two shutouts Few Texas schools offer scholarships to kickers, and Brown was lightly recruited by programs in his home state. If not for that summer football camp in Lincoln, he might have tried out for one of the Texas teams.

But that's not how it went, and Brown said he has no regrets.
