Clinton names Podesta to staff

WASHINGTON (AP) — President investigative woes, brings a number North Carolina at the end of the budget victory on the White House Clinton named John Podesta as his chief of staff Tuesday, replacing millionaire businessman Erskine Bowles with an immigrant's grandson with "a tough hide.'

Bowles, blue blood. Podesta, blue collar," Podesta joked. "I know what it really means to work for the minimum wage and to count your raises in cents and not dollars. ... That is why I'm so profoundly grateful to the president for giving me this chance to serve our country in this hallowed place.'

Clinton said Podesta, a veteran of assets to the chief of staff post, the highest-ranking of Clinton's aides.

"He has a tough hide, a dry wit, a lot of patience in dealing with the president," Clinton said. "He and his family have a taste for riding roller coasters. That will certainly serve him well here.

"You have chosen someone to lead the team in the days ahead that I both admire and respect," Bowles told Clinton. "I could not be leaving you in better hands, my friend."

It had long been assumed that Podesta would succeed Bowles, who go-to man for the president's many is returning to his home state of month to consider a run for governor in 2000. Podesta will assume his new duties in November.

Podesta was among the aides who accompanied Bowles to Capitol Hill to negotiate the fiscal 1999 budget agreement reached last week with Congress. Podesta said they made an odd team - he, blunt and scrappy, Bowles, relaxed and erudite.

"No one ever got confused about which one of us had a passion for golf and which one of us had a passion for amusement parks," Podesta joked.

But after Clinton proclaimed his House colleagues as a true "grown-lawn and walked away in a phalanx of aides, it was Podesta who walked beside him, his arm around the president's back.

"Working in the White House is as high an honor as anyone involved in public service can achieve," Podesta said. "Working here means a great deal to me, and so does working for a president who makes every day count when it comes to solving problems for average people.

Podesta, a 49-year-old Chicago native, is an ultra-connected operative described privately by White up," a man of quirky humor who makes both Democrats and Republicans comfortable, a straightshooter with a low threshold for non-

"John's qualities are also his problem," said White House spokesman Joe Lockhart. "He can't be at all the tables all the time. There's nothing that happens in this building that people don't want John's input on. He's stretched very thin.'

It is at those moments that Podesta's "other side" comes out — a mean, surly presence his White House colleagues nicknamed "Skippy."

Lockhart encountered Skippy once, an experience about which he won't elaborate. "I screwed something up," Lockhart said. "I met Skippy. Then he went home."

Podesta is expected to continue in Bowles' tradition by putting together a hardworking, low-profile White House staff to help Clinton weather impeachment proceedings. He jokingly hinted at that Tuesday, closing the Rose Garden ceremony in his honor by ordering the staff back to

"As we say around here every Friday - only two more working days 'til Monday," Podesta said.

The 333-95 vote reflected a compromise, struck last week between the White House and congressional leaders, that gave both parties victories to "who have grown up and ma-

Clinton was poised to sign it. The sheer bulk of the compromise spoke for itself: About 4,000 pages long, the bill weighed 40 pounds and stood

Texas Tech students learned about issues facing people in gay, lesbian and bisexual relationships Tuesday as a part of a week-long violence in relationships awareness campaign.

Students were addressed by Beth Carlberg, a relationship counselor in Lubbock who deals with violence issues people face in both heterosexual and homosexual relationships.

"I've seen a lot of problems with violence within relationships here in Lubbock, and no relationships are immune to that," Carlberg said.

Students voiced concerns gay, lesbian and bi-sexual relationships often have violence problems that are not reported.

"A couple may have a fight, and may tell the officer that they are just roommates," Carlberg said.

"It's a fear that gay and lesbian couples have.

Another concern faced was a lack of legislation protecting homosexual relationships.

Some people voiced their opinions concerning violence relationship laws.

"I think it's frustrating that we have these old laws concerning violence, and we haven't bothered to do anything to remove those laws," said Jason Grey, a junior music composition major from Midland.

Students were given the opportunity to tell their personal stories about prior abuse in their lives.

A lecture on factors contributing to child abuse will be at noon today in the Senate Room of the University Center, and a panel discussion with survivors of abusive relationships will be at 5:30 p.m. today.

Supplements may offer alternatives

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) -Americans hoping to mimic French successes against heart disease without all that red wine may benefit from supplements containing artery-protecting flavonoids, a researcher said Tuesday.

The findings mean pregnant women, recovering alcoholics and others who must avoid alcohol can still reap the benefits of red wine without drinking.

"We know alcohol is not the critical requirement," said John Folts, a University of Wisconsin heart specialist who presented his research Tuesday at the American Dietetic Association's annual meeting.

"We're looking at the other things to provide the necessary anti-platelet, antioxidant properties that you get with red wine."

Red wine's role in warding off heart trouble was made famous by research showing that the French, with red wine as a staple, have lower rates of heart disease despite their penchant for high-fat food.

Red wine is a source of flavonoids - vitamin-like compounds naturally found in fruits. vegetables and green or black tea that help prevent damage to blood vessels.

"The problem with red wine, which I enjoy, is that there's many people who cannot and should not drink alcoholic beverages," Folts said.

Folts, whose 1973 research led to therapy using aspirin to prevent heart attacks, studied the affect of ProVex CV on 14 people who took the supplement over seven days.

The supplement contains extracts made of grape seeds, grape skins, Ginkgo biloba, bilberries and a specific flavonoid called quercetin. Folts found the test subjects showed "significant and encouraging" reductions in the activity of platelets, the small cells which enable blood to clot.

Because many consumers don't eat enough fruits and vegetables, they likely will miss the benefits of flavonoids without outside help, such as red wine.

"People should consume five to seven servings of fruits and vegetables every day," Folts said. "For those who cannot and will not do this, a flavonoid supplement ... may be useful."

ProVex CV was one of four flavonoid supplements examined by Folts but was the only one to show significant benefit. Larger studies are being planned.

Family in review 'Daddy's Dyin'! Who's Got the Will?' offers laughs for all reed. Lust. Infidelity. Backstabbing, and backbiting. Ahh, the fun of family. But, "Daddy's Dyin'! Who's Got The Will?" gives more to the audience than topics from the "Jerry Springer Show." Though the show pokes fun at many of the ups and downs of a lower-middle-class Texas family, some of the moments are poignant enough to make the audience cry.

By John Davis

Shoehorned into a small strip mall on 34th Street and University Avenue, the theater is intimate, with no more than two rows of chairs.

The thrust stage (the audience surrounds the stage on three sides) forces the audience into an intimate "fly-on-the-wall" relationship with the action on stage.

The action on stage, though not brilliant at all times, will offer the audience a good theater experience,

Campy '60s TV show named an American icon, gets award

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was a zany version of "Swiss Family Robinson" seven castaways on a deserted island, forced to survive on nut and berry casseroles while rescue bobbed in and out of reach — over and over again.

For 34 years and counting, television viewers have sat right back and heard the tale, "the tale of a fateful trip" that landed seven people on the surprisingly luxurious "Gilligan's Island." The original actors in the illfated S.S. Minnow were awarded the American Icon Award Tuesday by Women in Film and Video. The award was accepted by the surviving "Gilligan's Island" actors: Bob Denver (Gilligan), Tina Louise (Ginger), Russell Johnson (the professor), and Dawn Wells (Mary Ann). The four cast members of the campy '60s show were reunited for the award presentation Tuesday on a "three-hour tour" of the Potomac River.

The half-hour show still haunts the television waves in syndication and is considered a classic example of American situation comedies.

"I think it's timeless," Wells said. "Everybody wants to be marooned somewhere on an island.'

The show followed the characters' adventures on an uncharted island in the Pacific Ocean, where they were shipwrecked after the hapless the Mosquitos.

"It satisfies people's fantasies," Johnson said, when asked in an interview about the show's lasting popularity. "Nobody gets killed, no car chases, no murder, no mayhem. Nobody really gets hurt. It reflects a time of innocence in a way, and I think that's very valuable today."

Let's take social life for instance. This is something that is very important to students and to people in general. College somehow finds a way to suck you out of that. Sure, they have organizations, groups and clubs, but they are not social life. They are groups which have mandatory meetings and projects; its a forced social life, which one volunteers for. I am talking about the social life that is not scheduled, that does not put restrictions on you.

One can learn a lot from having a social life. For one it relieves stress, it teaches you about social bonds, it cures loneliness, it gives you freedom, courage, etc.

Instead in college, your only social life deals with a desk lamp and the 30 pages of nuclear physics you have to decipher

To create a well-rounded student, college does not have all the answers and for educators to think it does is horrendous. They realize that social life is necessary for the well-being of their tuition-paying student and so they disguise agenda groups as ways to "meet" people.

What they need to realize is that the demand placed on students to actually go to class and work a more than part-time job to pay the bills is more than necessary, because in effect what you have is two full-time jobs.

Upon graduation you should theoretically only have one job that you can dedicate your time to. So how much sense does it make to ask more from a college student who has plenty to worry about and less life experience?

I know you have heard all this before, but it seems so deficient for such a process to occur. It's as if the elitism of academia blinds the eyes of those who are in power.

Sure we want to learn, sure we want to make money to live, sure we are glad about our decision to go to college, but we are not happy with the restrictions education places on us, or at least its process. Academics constantly tell us education does not only come out of a book, that, in fact, most of the time it comes out of life's little genuine experiences. Why is it that the same people from those circles deny us this opportunity that they tout so

I do not know why it is this system seems so self-defeating. It's almost as if academics really do want to turn universities into little factories of khaki-hat look-alikes and do-alikes.

It all boils down to priority, and sometimes one can learn a lot more from eating pudding out of a squeezable tube rather than a mandatory lecture, a technical textbook or a formalized organization of forced volunteerism.

Officer offends student at Tech football game

To the editor: God Biess America. Land of the free and home of the brave ... with liberty and justice for all well, almost all. On Oct. 10, I experienced what I con- would behave that way. sider to be an outrageous obstruction of justice at the Texas Tech football game. And who is the evil perpetrator in this scene?

None other than one of Tech's finest who has sworn to serve and protect the students on this campus.

The officer not only belittled my boyfriend and I but made it very obvious to us and everyone around us he did not believe Hispanics reserve the right to sit in the student section with all the other Caucasian students.

While it is very obvious the majority of the Tech population is Caucasian, I assure you minorities are no different, in that, we too must pay our tuition and fees, not to mention $26 for student section seats at the games.

When a white student approached the officer because he could not find a seat in the student section, the officer did not hesitate to question us, and only us, about our

My initial reaction was shock, as I could not believe in this day and age two students doing nothing but cheering the Red Raiders on to victory, could be humiliated on

My next reaction became anger, and while I felt the urge to scream at this officer of the law, I simply asked explain his motives, the officer simply ignored my questions. I had no choice but to show him my ticket stub, which gave me the right to be there and try to hide my humiliation from the many fans who witnessed the event.

Throughout my life, I have experienced such racism from many of my peers, whom I consider ignorant and uneducated, but I never imagined an officer of the law

I see no other motive for his actions other than the fact we were the only Hispanics in that section.

I assure you this officer's actions will not prohibit me from attending another Tech football game.

I am very proud of my heritage and refuse to let such ignorant behavior inhibit me in any way. I sincerely hope any other person who has experienced racial prejudice has the courage to stand up for themselves.

Maybe someday our country can be the melting pot God intended it to be.

Student's murder revives hate crime discussion

To the editor: With the horrible and utterly senseless murder of the homosexual man in Wyoming, the subject of hate crimes no doubt will be debated with a renewed

Those in favor of "hate crime" laws will point to this as a glaring example of bigotry, ignorance and an obvious need for certain crimes against certain individuals to be judged by a different scale than other crimes against other individuals.

Is there a greater need for justice for one murder (or rape, or robbery, or arson, or assault) victim than another?

Is a heterosexual woman's life at the hands of a sexual killer some how less atrocious than a homosexual man's life at the hands of a pair of sadistic brutes?

Consider this: a man discovers his wife (or vice versa) has been unfaithful and determines to kill the offending third party.

He follows through with the act, murdering the spouse's lover.

Now, consider a bigoted individual who decides it is somehow appropriate to kill a homosexual (or a racial minority). He follows through with the act, mirroring his chosen target.

Whose death requires justice? Neither? Or one more than another?

The more conditions and exceptions we place in the way of fair and equal justice, the more impossibly vague that sacred word becomes.

There is a precious line that comes to mind. "With liberty and justice for all." There is no mention of more justice for some than others.

Ours is a brutal world, and our legal system far from perfect. But at least our intention should be equality un-

Trip brings new revelations about dating trip led to a revelation about dating and relationships. Friday, I joined several other women on a road trip to an all women's conference in what is now

In case you have not heard, the Austin and San Antonio area received about 10 to 18 inches of rain depending on where you were.

While we drove to and from Austin with only females on board, it became obvious our conversations were not all that different than had males been in the vehicle. Some girls even dared to burp out loud.

Topics of discussion ranged from mischievous pranks committed, men, cars and trucks, men, sports and then men.

Oddly enough, while talking about men, most of the discussion was on the failed relationships and

This past weekend's wet road frustrations each woman had experienced in dating. It was not just coincidence a lot of discussion focused on men and dating relationships, but it was carried over from the weekend

> While the driving discussions were dominated by this one particular topic, the whole issue is but one small picture in society's mural of dating relationships. A mural that is slowly falling apart.

> One of the issues pulling at the glue is the settling factor.

Women have begun to settle for second best in relationships and in the character of the guys they are

A sign of this is evident as the Week Without Violence is going on now on campus.

A lot of women in today's society are looking for a boost in their self esteem, and they think a date or boyfriend will accomplish this. Therefore, in order to keep this guy around, they will take whatever abuse, whether it be sexually, verbally or emotionally.

Another problem with a lot of dating relationships is there are no limits set as to how far a relationship will go. Nowadays sex is not an uncommon thing for people who are just on the second or third date or who are not even dating. Once a couple has had sex, they have taken their relationship, if they have one, as far as it can go physically and sometimes emotionally.

Recently there was a story about a couple who waited until they were married before they kissed. This is almost more shocking than a scandal surrounding our president.

Bringing up the couple who waited until they were married before they kissed is not to suggest everyone waits to kiss until they are married, but it does point out there can be limits adhered to. Limits can be a good thing some times. They often can help keep people safe physically and emotion-

While girls should not settle for: second best, neither should guys. In order to have a healthy relationship. both sexes should realize they are: worth enough as a person to not settle.

Driving back from the conference, from what I was hearing, it seems like all the girls were reinforced and reassured they do not have to settle. In fact as much as we enjoyed a vacation from the opposite sex, it might have been good for some males to go. so they too could have a revelation.

Raiders look to down Bears

By Brent Dirks ports Editor

Riding a three-game winning streak, the Texas Tech soccer team faces another nationally ranked foe, when the Red Raiders battle No. 17 Baylor at 4 p.m. today at R.P. Fuller Track Stadium on the Tech campus.

"Obviously, winning three conference games in a row will definitely add some confidence to our team," Red Raider coach Felix Oskam said of the squad.

"But I think our kids know they have to play a better game then they did Friday and or Sunday."

The Bears (11-3-1 overall, 5-0-1 Big 12) come to Lubbock in second place in the conference behind Big 12-leading Nebraska.

Baylor's only blotch in conference play was a tie against Texas earlier in the season. The Red Raiders (6-4-2 overall, 3-2-1 Big 12) also notched a tie against the Longhorns this sea-

In their last six contests, the Bears have been almost unstoppable on the defensive end of the field. In that time, Baylor has not allowed a single Sophomore goalkeeper Dawn Greathouse has a 0.73 goals-againstaverage this season.

Red Raider midfielder Ashlyn Peterson said Tech will have to play aggressively to score against the "Well we definitely can't sit back and play defense," Peterson said. "We've got to knock some goals in. That's the only way to win.'

On the offensive end, junior forward Courtney Saunders leads the Baylor squad with 13 goals and three

"To me they probably have the best tandem forwards in the conference if not in the country," Oskam

"I know they can score goals. They're very explosive and they're well disciplined, well organized and well coached."

The Red Raiders 3-2 victory over current No. 14 Maryland earlier this season will go a long way to help Tech against Baylor, Oskam said.

"(Tuesday) we're actually going to watch the Maryland tape," Oskam

"We just got it in last week. We're going to watch the Maryland tape and see how we did that. Hopefully, that will inspire the kids to play up to that level again.'

A win against the Bears would be a big step toward getting the Red Raiders back Big 12 Tournament in San Antonio, Oskam said.

Tech missed the tournament last

"If we win (Wednesday) we're almost there," he said. "We're more than 75 percent there. Four victories might get us there. We thought it was last year with four victories, and it could have if we didn't lose to Iowa State because we had four victories. Four wins would probably take us

But the regular season still has a number of games to go before the postseason, Oskam said.

"But I don't want to bank everything on one game," he said. "Because we still have so many things to go. We still have to play well and very organized and disciplined."

Peterson said the Red Raiders are ready to prove they can play with

Yankees down Padres, take 3-0 lead in Series

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A change of scenery didn't change a thing for the San Diego Padres.

Yankee Scott Brosius made

Brosius hit his second homer of the game, a stunning threerun shot off relief ace Trevor Hoffman in the eighth inning, and the New York Yankees moved within one win of a World Series sweep with a 5-4 victory in Game 3 Tuesday night.

Out of the Bronx and inside a ballpark that serves up fish tacos, palm trees and beach balls, the Yankees are looking for their first sweep in the World Series since

No team in baseball history has overcome an 0-3 deficit in the postseason, and now the Padres must try to do it against a club trying to cement its place as the best ever.

Andy Pettitte will start for the Yankees in Game 4 Wednesday night, most likely against Kevin

On a night when everything finally seemed to be going right for San Diego - great plays, clutch pitching by Sterling Hitchcock and key hits from Tony Gwynn — Brosius and the Yankees ruined it.

Hitless for five innings against David Cone, the San Diego Padres took a 3-0 lead in the sixth on a burst started by Hitchcock's unlikely single.

Yet with 64,667 crazed fans roaring and the cranked-up rock music blaring, these Yankees would not break.

Brosius led off the seventh with a home run against Hitchcock, MVP of the NL championship and a member of the Yankees' rotation with Cone in

New York closed the lead to 3-2, but shortstop Chris Gomez made an eye-popping catch to start an inning-ending double

But in the eighth inning, there was no one left to save San Diego from the Yankees.

Slumping Paul O'Neill drew a leadoff walk from Randy Myers - once again, the Yankees' patience at the plate paid off - and then manager Bruce Bochy made an early call to the bullpen.

It was Trevor Time, and Hoffman walked in as AC/DC's "Hell's Bells" sent the crowd into a frenzy.

Hoffman had been successful on 53 of 54 save chances during the regular season for San Diego, though a blown chance in the NLCS against Atlanta perhaps was a bad omen.

Hoffman wound up with the loss while Ramiro Mendoza won in relief.

Mariano Rivera held on for a save, working around a pair of two-out singles by Carlos Hernandez and pinch-hitter Mark Sweeney by striking out Andy Sheets with runners at the corners for the last out.

NBA players' union looks at decertification

NEWYORK (AP) - Rather than work rules. returning to the bargaining table, the NBA players' union spent Tuesday pondering its latest loss and debating its next move - perhaps decertification.

"It's very seriously being explored. Some people feel it's the answer because it's our best piece of leverage remaining," said one agent close to the union.

One day after the union lost its guaranteed contracts in a ruling by arbitrator John Feerick, the union pondered a course of action but remained upbeat.

"The players will not back down," union director Billy

Others, including a vocal minority of the agents' council, were pushing for decertification, a move that could lead to a multiyear fight with the team

By decertifying, the union would remove itself as the official bargaining agent for the players. A court injunction would then be sought to end the lockout.

If an injunction were granted, the owners would lift the lockout, open camps and impose new

And if the new rules were more restrictive than the old ones, the players would be expected to file an antitrust suit against the league seeking treble damages.

Wednesday, the agents' advisory council meets in Las Vegas. The next day, Michael Jordan, Scottie Pippen and Karl Malone are among those expected to attend a union meeting open to all players.

Players earlier this summer gave the union's executive council the go-ahead to decertify, so a vote among the rank-and-file would not be necessary.

NFL players chose to decertify after their strike failed in 1987. Their court fight with NFL owners dragged on five years before a settlement was reached.

NBA players who currently have long-term contracts might benefit from decertification, since they would soon start drawing salaries.

But free agents and players who have been in the league fewer than three years would be hurt because they would be forced to sign under the rules of a new system and then would have to wait several years to find out if they would win damages.

Commissioner David Stern and the owners are well aware the union has been considering decertification, and some agents believe the league fears being taken to court on antitrust

Tech hopes to SWARM Aggie run

Stopping the running game. That is the motto game in and game out for the Texas Tech Red Raider SWARM defense.

No. 25 Tech (6-1 overall, 3-1 Big 12) will have its hands full this week, as Texas A&M comes into Saturday's contest after posting a season high 294-yard rushing effort last Saturday against Baylor.

Junior defensive end Taurus Rucker, who has helped Tech hold its opponents to 95.7-yards-per-game on the ground, will once again line up on the defensive line against the Aggies Saturday.

"The first thing we have to do is shut down Dante Hall," Rucker said. "He's probably the best back we've faced this season. They also have Sirr Parker, who can make big plays for

Hall and Parker have accounted for 65 percent of the Aggies running attack this season, as Hall enters Saturday's game with 683 yards on 135 carries for an average of 5.1yards-per-carry.

Aside from the statistics, the Red Raiders will not have to push themselves in getting up for the game against the No. 8 team in the nation at 12-7, Smith was burned three times on the Bears scoring drive that cut the Cowboy lead to 12-10.

On the Bears game-winning drive, Dallas had to change coverage to bring safeties over to help out Smith. This left the middle of the field wide open, and the Bears exploited this coverage system, as they drove down the field to kick the winning field goal

Smith plays as if he has lost all

His latest display of awful play confidence in his playing abilities. He think it is time came Sunday against the Chicago allows a 15-yard cushion to his man Bears. With Dallas up 6-0 in the third on every play just so he will not get quarter, Smith misjudged the speed burned deep or have a pass interfer-

In the past two weeks, Carolina and After Dallas had regained the lead Chicago have run identical pass patterns against Smith in the red zone. Each time Smith has lined up 10 yards off his man. He lines up 10 yards off his man in the red zone. Each time the receiver has cut his route short and ended up catching the pass and getting past Smith who has overrun the play due to the distance he had to make up because of the cushion he allows.

Smith may get thrown on more because he plays opposite Sanders, who is the best defensive back in the league. That is no excuse for him being burned consistently by every receiver he lines up against.

Smith has come up with one interception in his last 27 regular season games. That is just a pure case of not performing. Smith cannot keep using Sanders as an excuse for playing poor defense.

He is playing in the NFL, which might stand for "not for long" if he continues to give up big plays in ev-

I am not blaming the Cowboys' loss to the Bears, or any other team, on Smith. Each win or loss is a team

For the sake of the Cowboys lets hope Smith improves his play because if Sanders retires Smith would be the No. 1 defensive back for the Cowboys. What a scary thought that would be.

Tyson, accusers nearing settlement

GAITHERSBURG, Md. (AP) -Mike Tyson and the two men he's accused of punching and kicking after a fender-bender are nearing financial settlements, the men's lawyers said Tuesday.

There is no deadline, but the former heavyweight champion faces a Dec. 1 trial on assault charges. The charges would most likely be dropped if deals are reached.

'We are at the stage where we believe we will be abie to resolve our civil claims," said Glenn Culpepper, a lawyer for Abmielec Saucedo.

Saucedo and Richard Hardick accused Tyson of kicking and punching them after the boxer and his wife, Monica, were rearended in their Rolls-Royce in this Washington suburb on Aug. 31.

Roger Titus, Hardick's lawyer, said both men filed the criminal complaints for three reasons: so Tyson would apologize, get therapy and compensate them financially.

Tyson met with the men last Friday and the three parted on very friendly terms, the boxer and his lawyers have said. Tyson denies attacking them, but his lawyers acknowledge that he wants to Tyson is still on probation for his 1992 rape conviction, and could be sent back to prison if convicted of the assault charges.

"We've had discussions where we believe we're going to be able to reach agreement," Titus said of the situation.

None of the lawyers would reveal specifics of the negotiations.

Gastineau gets no-jail plea after assault arrest

NEW YORK (AP) - Mark said she had no intention of Gastineau, former star defensive end for the New York Jets, has a plea deal that will get him out of jail and put him into drug, alcohol and violence counseling, his lawyers said Tuesday. Lawyer Amelio Marino said Gastineau will be released Wednesday after he pleads guilty to a misdemeanor charge of assault or contempt for violating an order of protection and for failing to show up for a court date.

Gastineau surrendered to police Monday after a judge issued a warrant for his arrest.

Gastineau, 41, was arrested Sept. 2 on charges of hitting Schorr in her apartment on Aug.

A court complaint said he slapped her face four or five times, threw her against a wall, and choked her while threatening to kill her.

Gastineau was charged with misdemeanor assault, menacing and criminal possession of a weapon. The court complaint said the weapon was a glass cocktail table with which he threatened to hit Schorr.

Assistant District Attorney Amy Belger asked Judge Troy K. Webber to sentence Gastineau to four months.

DALLAS (AP) - Southern Methodist is trying to prove there really is life after the NCAA death penalty. It's been and continues to be a struggle for the Mustangs' football program.

Tom Rossley provided some interesting teams but they never could climb over the .500 mountain.

Along came determined Mike Cavan. The Mustangs finally posted a winning record (6-5) and aimost made it to a bowl game in 1997 before a late-season loss to Texas Christian killed that idea.

This year the Mustangs have fielded a good defense and a struggling offense that has trouble finding an identity and a starting quarter-

Taking applications

The Aquatic Center is taking Lifeguard applications for Spring employment and possibly substituting hours for the remainder of the fall. Call 742-3897 or stop by for more information.

Adult Beginning Swimming

For those of you who have always wanted to swim but were afraid to try, this course is for you. Basic water skills will be taught by an American Red Cross instructor.

The cost is $15 for members of the Texas Tech community and $25 for the general public. The session will take place on Mondays and Wednesdays from Nov. 2 through Nov. 18 from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Water Aerobics will be on Mondays and Wednesdays from 5:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. and on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays from 3:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Long Course Swim

For a change of pace, we set up the pool for you to swim the Olympic distance (50 meter). Long Course swimming will be offered Nov. 7 from 12 p.m. to 1:45 p.m. Stroke Mechanics

Something wrong with your stroke? Cannot quite get that flip turn, but do not know why? Come to our stroke mechanics clinic and let our instructor help you. The workshop will be Nov. 15 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Whiffle Ball Tourney coming up

Do not make plans to go out of town for the weekend of Nov. 6 through Nov. 7. Instead, get your friends together to enter the annual indoor whiffle ball tourney. Have a little fun and take yourself and your friends back a few years when whiffleball was your favorite backyard game. There are more details in the Fitness/ Wellness Center inside of the Student Rec Center.
