HSC to bring nursing home to medical campus

By Gretchen Verry Staff Writer

The Texas Tech Board of Regents approved a proposal Friday allowing the construction of a private nursing home on the Lubbock campus of the Tech Health Sciences Center.

HSC will form a partnership with Sears Methodist Corporation, a private nursing home company out of Abilene.

"This facility will clearly give us an educational advantage in meeting the needs of an aging population, along with building a rapport with the private sector," said Dr. David Smith, president of HSC.

Barbara Cherry, program analyst in the Office of Program Planning and Policy Analysis at HSC, said the facility could in the long run lead to new degrees and programs offered by the

"We have seen, and will continue to see a tremendous growth in a need to provide more professionals to care for them," Cherry said.

Under the agreement, Sears Methodist will be responsible for an estimated $8.8 million in construction and administrative costs associated with the nursing home. HSC will provide the land for the facility, as well as student staff members.

HSC President Dr. David Smith said that the HSC has been asked to help raise funds for teaching facilities that will be located in the building.

"Right now, they (Sears Methodist) are asking us to raise about $500,000 to help to build the teaching facilities," Cherry said.

The facility will belong to Sears Methodist under a 50 year initial lease, with the ability to extend that lease in 10 year increments. After the lease expires, the building will be given to

Under the agreement, one half of the 120 bed facility will be designated for alzheimer patients.

Part of the reason why Sears Methodist was chosen was because of their experience in dealing with alzheimer patients, Cherry said.

Dr. Smith said other schools have training facilities in private nursing homes, but he does not know of any schools that have an on-site nursing home on campus.

"I'm not aware of any schools in the country with a relationship like this," said Smith, as quoted in the Nov. 16 issue of The University Daily.

Cherry said the HSC plans to include various departments from Tech.

"Hopefully we can get to the point where we can include other schools from the main campus, such as psychology and human sciences in the program," Cherry said.

Representatives of Sears Methodist will meet with officials from all four schools included in the HSC, and construction is expected to begin in spring of this year. Occupancy is proposed as early as May 2000.

Infamous Texas killer put to death

being."

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Kenneth Allen McDuff, whose nearly three-decade history of ghastly murders earned him the tag of predator and monster, was put to death Tuesday evening for the abduction, rape and strangling of a pregnant mother of two.

"I'm ready to be released; release me," McDuff, 52, said before dying.

McDuff, whose first death sentence was commuted in the 1970s when the death penalty was ruled unconstitutional, is believed to be the only condemned inmate in the nation ever paroled and then returned to death row for another murder.

He was pronounced dead at 6:26 p.m., five minutes after the lethal dose began flowing.

McDuff became the 17th Texas inmate put to death this year. He received lethal injection for the 1992 death of Melissa Ann Northrup.

"I think my daughter will be at rest," said Brenda Solomon, the victim's mother, in contemplating McDuff's

While McDuff asked for a final meal of two T-bone steaks, his attorneys were at the U.S. Supreme Court seeking a delay so additional tests could be conducted on hair samples that authorities said linked him to Northrup's slaying. Justices refused Tuesday night to stop the sentence from being carried out.

Northrup, 22, was abducted March 1, 1992, from a Waco convenience store where she worked. Her body surfaced weeks later and dozens of miles away in a Dallas County gravel pit. Her hands were tied and she had been strangled with a rope. McDuff also had a second death sentence for the 1991 abduction and slaying of 28-year-old Austin accountant Colleen Reed, and authorities say he may have killed as many as a dozen other people, primarily in central Texas between Austin and Waco.

"What a worthless being," said Reed's sister, Lori Bible.

McDuff, first imprisoned in 1965 for thorities found Reed's skeleton, buried burglary, went to death row in 1968 for fatally shooting in the face two teenage boys in Fort Worth and raping and strangling with a broomstick their 16year-old female companion.

But while he was awaiting execution, the Supreme Court in 1972 struck down the death penalty as unconstitutional and McDuff's sentence was commuted to life.

> He won parole about 17 years later when parole board members, facing severe crowding in Texas prisons, released him along with thousands of inmates so they could free space. Northrup and Reed were killed a short time later. The subject of a nationwide manhunt, McDuff was arrested without incident in 1992 in Kansas City, where under an assumed name he was working as a trash collector.

It wasn't until last month that au-

The Austin American-Statesmanreported Tuesday that McDuff secretly helped authorities by taking them to Reed's body and drawing maps to show where the other women were buried in exchange for a reduced sentence for his convicted drug dealer nephew. Prison officials refused to confirm the Justice Department statisticians, victims' rights groups and Texas corrections officials said they knew of no other former death row inmate ever paroled or freed to wind up back among the condemned for another

In Texas, the publicity about McDuff and anger over the circumstances of his release and subsequent killing spree prompted parole officials to tighten their procedures. His name also served as a buzzword as Texas embarked on an unprecedented $2 billion prison construction program.

Tech professor to speak

In continuation of Art in the Library Committee's Readings in Literature Series, Associate Professor of English Fred Kemp will read his fictional works at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Formby Room of the Southwest Collection/Special Collections Library. The lecture is free and open to the public.

Kemp has been with Tech as a faculty member since 1988 and currently serving as director of the rhetoric and composition programs at Tech.

He has served as director of the computer-based writing research program in the English Depart-

Kemp, who has been involved with technology in writing by speaking at dozens of universities and colleges, is co-author of an award winning instruction software. He has also served on boards of national committees in instructional technology.

For more information on the free lecture, contact Librarian Susan Norrisey at 742-2236.

Reese papers for public view

When Reese Air Force Base closed in 1997, due to federal budget cuts, the offices of Reese donated 56 years worth of papers to the Southwest Collection/Special Collections Library.

The donated papers, which contain 17 boxes of materials including fact books, publications, historian and public affairs office files, scrapbook material from the Officers Wives' Club, environmental material, wings histories and memorabilia, are now available for the public viewing.

The collection is available for viewing upon request at the reference desk of the Holden Reading Room of the Southwest Collection/ Special Collections Library.

Abducted oil workers released

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) -Eight oil workers abducted last week by a group of militant youths in southern Nigeria were released Tuesday unharmed and in good spirits, a Texaco official said.

The oil workers - three Americans, a Briton, an Italian, a Croatian, a South African and a Nigerian - were taken hostage by armed youths from the ethnic Ijaw community.

The workers, employees of various oil service companies on contract with Texaco, were taken from an exploration drilling rig near the Niger River delta in southern Nige-

"They appeared to have been well-treated and look fine," said Yusuf N'jie, assistant managing director of Texaco's joint venture company in Nigeria.

Their release came after negotiations between the youths and representatives of Nigeria's military government. The youths had demanded a ransom for the oil workers. It was not known if a ransom was paid.

Iraq insists that inspectors have ignored evidence showing it has complied.

Cross told reporters that UNSCOM was looking forward to "a productive and professional relationship" with the Iraqi government.

While many in the West are suspicious Iraq will balk when the inspections get serious, a scientific adviser to President Saddam Hussein insisted Tuesday that he expected no trouble during the renewed search for arms.

In an interview with CNN, Gen. Amer al-Saadi said Iraq would cooperate as long as rules set out in the agreement signed between Iraq and the United Nations to end a confrontation in February are followed.

Under the agreement, the United Nations pledged to respect the "national security, sovereignty and dignity" of Iraq and to only enter presidential compounds when accompanied by diplomats.

Al-Saadi also stuck to previous Iraqi positions that UNSCOM has disputed, insisting Iraq never had the capability to put deadly VX gas into missiles.

He declined to say whether Iraq would hand over a contentious document on its use of chemical weapons during the Iraq-Iran war, saying it would only discuss with UNSCOM details relevant to its investigation.

Most Americans believe Kennedy assassination was conspiracy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly three of four Americans believe a conspiracy was definitely or probably behind the assassination of President Kennedy 35 years ago, a survey says.

"More than a quarter of a century after it occurred, many Americans still consider Kennedy's assassination one of the central events of their lives, even more memorable than his presidency," says Dan Davids, executive vice president of The History Channel.

The History Channel and Roper Starch, a New York-based market research and consulting firm, did telephone interviews with 1,007 adults nationwide between Oct. 13 and Nov. 2. The margin of error for the survey was plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Seventy-three percent of those surveyed believe conspirators killed Kennedy Nov. 22, 1963, in Dallas. Eighteen percent said a conspiracy was "probably not" or "definitely not" behind Kennedy's murder. Nine percent of the respondents said they didn't know.

When asked how Kennedy would be remembered, 51 percent said he'd be remembered for his professional work while 34 percent said he'd be remembered for his personal life. About 10 percent said his personal and professional activities would be remembered equally.

Asked to name the greatest president of the 20th century, more people — 18 percent — chose Kennedy than any other president, despite his short time in office. He was followed by Franklin D. Roosevelt with 16 percent, Ronald Reagan with 14 percent and Bill Clinton with 10 percent.

On the other hand, the survey found that 82 percent of Americans Four percent said they didn't think it's "probably" or "definitely" true that Kennedy was unfaithful to his wife while he was president. Yet, most respondents said that even if he was guilty of adultery, it would not be an important historical footnote to Kennedy's life.

Thirty-one percent of the respondents said it would be "somewhat" or "very" important to be remembered. Twenty-six percent it was "only a little" important, 41 percent said it was "not at all" important, and 2 percent said they didn't know.

The suspects were released, and Lubbock police are still considering filing of charges, Walker said.

"I can tell you at this point, we are not sure whether or not they did this," Walker said.

Hampton officials disputed Walker's claims, saying that District Attorney Bill Sowder's office communicated to them orally that no charges were going to be filed.

Walker said he didn't like how "Our women's basketball team had looked forward to playing Texas Tech because they are one of the top women's basketball programs in the country. Due to the sensitivity of the situation, we are unable to make any additional comments until additional information is obtained.

Ticket refunds or exchanges for the scheduled game must be through the Tech Athletic Ticket Office. The actual ticket must be returned. Tech officials, through a release, said all revenue gained through the unclaimed tickets will go back to the Lady Raider program. "While Texas Tech was not involved or aware, this is a very unfortunate situation that all of us regret," Lady Raider coach Marsha Sharp said. "Patricia Bibbs is a personal friend of mine, and we were very excited to host them and the Hampton team. She and her team will always be warmly welcomed at Texas Tech by our coaches, our teams and our fans. I wish them great luck this season."

Making Music Chino Moreno leads rock band's performance in Dallas

By Sebastian Kitchen

Thino Moreno is not a big fan of heavy music. He never really listened to it until he met his bandmates. Some administrators or individuals involved in the goings-on of this university are becoming more and more successful at getting students to eat out of their hands, and many students have forgotten that they are consum-

Recently, one of my classes was used as an opportunity to push certain ideas about what students and ex-students at Texas Tech are obligated to do in advancing the popularity of this university. Sounds like somebody's job is getting pawned off to others.

In this same class, while the students were told that they should do this or that while in school and when they get out, a promotional video of Tech was shown to the students. In the video, the Campus

Master Plan was laid out, and the talking hand enlightened everyone as to what this campus might look like 10 to 20 years down the road. While the drawings of all the buildings and green leafy lawns were ready to jump off the page, one thing was missing - parking.

When it comes to parking one prediction can be made better than any weatherman's forecast, and that is a load of student gripes over parking. However, when students begin talking and voicing opinions the mute button is pushed.

Sure, administrators will tell you there are student councils, student advisory committees, and plenty of student organizations who get to have a say with university policy. Funny, I distinctly remember a student roundtable I covered last year in which administrators spent the majority of the "working lunch" telling the students what poor spirit they had because there was low attendance at basketball games.

If administrators or school officials were really concerned about the growth of this university, they would listen more closely to the students. See, right now this university is receiving a lot of donations, but many of these donors went to Tech when it was smaller and there were fewer people, meaning there was more personable service and attention to go around. Also, a lot of donors today are promised that a plaque with their name will grace the walls of campus buildings and drive entrances.

All this is fine for now, but what about when the donors today are gone tomorrow or when we run out of wall space? Who will administrators depend on then for donations? Today's students who have voiced complaints about parking, financial aid, poor classes and so on? I would not hold too many wall spaces for future plaques with today's students' names.

Sure administrators and regents are planning ahead for Tech with millions and millions of dollars invested or soon to be invested in the master plan, but are they addressing the issues that would please future donors?

Also, many administrators think they are playing it smart by catering to important or special students, thinking their efforts will pay off in the future; however, who can honestly say which students will go on to succeed or

So, while some administrators think they have a hold on students from the view of their window they may at the same time be losing the big picture.

STATE VIEWS

Fort Worth Star-Telegram on NAFTA and truck safety:

When the North American Free Trade Agreement was approved by Congress, one predicted byproduct was that commercial truck traffic would multiply along the nation's busiest trucking corridors.

And multiply it did. The number of big rigs traveling Texas' primary north-south highways — including Interstate 35W through Tarrant County — has tripled since NAFTA was signed in 1993.

The synapse lapse occurred in not anticipating the correlated increase in (1) the number of vehicles that would be in violation of state and federal trucking laws, or (2) the personnel needed to enforce them.

Texas is so short on officers assigned to inspect commercial trucks that fewer than one in every 1,000 on the road each day face inspection. Of those actually pulled over, one in three has safety defects serious enough to warrant taking the vehicle out of service.

Yet in 1997, the Lone Star State led the nation in fatalities involving large trucks, and there's scant reason to believe that this dubious distinction will go to a different state this year. According to the Texas Department of Public Safety, one in every 10 people killed in Texas traffic accidents last year — 486 people — died in crashes that involved large trucks.

The Texas Legislature will have the opportunity next year to rectify part of the problem by allocating the funds that DPS needs to hire 57 more troopers to inspect trucks. But it wouldn't hurt if Fort Worth would assist in the effort by certifying police officers to inspect trucks traveling along I-35W within the city's limits.

DPS officials say they leave urban vehicle inspections to municipal police departments. Arlington, Dallas, Garland, Irving and Plano have risen to the challenge. With more than 20 miles of I-35W running through Fort Worth, it's time for Cowtown to do the same.

Houston Chronicle on Medicaid integrity:

Texas dentists who together are paid millions of tax dollars to treat poor children should expect and have no reason to fear public scrutiny. When dentists express resentment of such scrutiny, the state officials responsible for doling out those millions of tax dollars should respond with heightened suspicion.

Instead, state Medicaid officials reacted by firing a skillful investigator who was saving the taxpayers money and deterring needless pain visited on small children by unscrupulous dentists.

This is the second time in recent years that state officials have terminated an effective investigator after complaints from the dentists being investigated.

Where in the name of reason is the state's concern for the public interest? Where is state government's compassion for the children suspected of being abused and others who may come to be abused? In the latest instance, state Medicaid officials ended the services of Dr. Don Crow, a dentist on loan from the state Health Department who was using a supercomputer to review Medicaid payments to pediatric dentists.

The Health Department, in turn, put Crow on "emergency leave" and told him he would be out of a job at the end of the year. The emergency, apparently, stemmed from the fact that Crow was too good at his job.

Texas Health and Human Services Director Don Gilbert said Crow, the investigating dentist he was letting go, was "aggressive" and "very conscientious," as if state government had no need of people with those qualities. Gov. George W. Bush needs to set Gilbert and other state health officials straight on that score.

This resurgent scandal does not cast the dental profession in a flattering light. Despite a record of fraud and tragic abuse of children by a few Medicaid dentists in Texas, the Texas Dental Association still resists public oversight to deter and punish further abuse.

TDA President Stephen Schwartz wrote to Gilbert that continued scrutiny of pediatric dentists "could threaten the continuation of the dental Medicaid program in our state." Is he suggesting that Texas dentists will not treat Medicaid patients unless exceptionally high billings and unorthodox treatments are never questioned? Surely the members of his association do not concur with that sug-

One of the most galling aspects of this disgraceful episode is Gilbert's statement that complaints by dentists had nothing to do with Crow's dismissal. If not at the behest of the dentists, why did the Health and Human Services Commission get rid of someone who was doing

After all the talk this year about the shameful misleading of the public, Gilbert appears to have learned little. His motto and that of other state health officials seems to be, "If it ain't broke, then break it."

Whatever the case, one meets all types of people and by the time the binge is over you've met a whole different type of drunk personalities.

I think we are all familiar with some of these: the crying/self-reflective/apologetic drunk who constantly apologizes for apologizing too much, breaking your stuff, and blowing chunks all over your brand new goodwill couch; the violent/ start-a-fight-with-anybody type, e all get into situations this is self-explanatory; and then there's the still-in-the-closet drunk who you thought was heterosexual people frequent bars five nights out until he or she got a little bit toasted on Jim or Jack; and of course we can't forget the all-too-pleasing/twowine-coolers-and-I'm-drunk type who usually end up stripping on the coffee table or passed out naked outside in the bed of a pick-up.

People know about this sort of thing and in knowing so we invite accordingly.

The violent types only get invited when they've made us so mad that we can take advantage of their violence and watch them spar with the side of their house or beat their own windshield. We also make them do weird dares that would hopefully land them in jail for a few hours. We invite the easy drunks to toga parties, the in-the-closet types are usually invited once, not because of their preference but because they usually do way too much overcompensating and become obnoxiously loud and have no control of any of their motor skills and bodily functions. The apologetic types are invited but tricked into making them go home early because the "party is over."

I think this is the whole college experience, this is our education process. We learn how to judge characters effectively, including enhanced personalities.

If it wasn't for college we wouldn't have access to all the great shindigs. If anything it seems like this is a great opportunity to learn how to mix drinks, throw a party, make fake IDs,

In fact, parties should become the new roving campus for the college of business and administration. There are all sorts of economic principles to be learned at these events, they shouldn't be missed, and they prove to be valuable tools for our educa-

I guess the message is don't believe the hype, if you're responsible and not a characterized drunk then having fun with friends and alcohol ain't that bad.

Let's face it, parties are an essential part to a healthy college experience and alcohol needs to be involved, squeezable pudding bashes can't be all that fun, unless you're a

Tech theatre previews 'Opera'

By John Davis

"Mack the Knife." It's an old jazz number done by big-name musicians from Bobby Darin to Ella Fitzgerald.

It will also be performed in Texas Tech Theatre Departments latest production, "Threepenny Opera."

The play, by Bertold Brecht, will be open for a "sneak-peek" preview at 8 p.m. today on the University Theatre Mainstage.

The "sneak-peek" preview allows Tech students to watch the show for free, and pay $5 admission for guests.

Jonathan Marks, director of the show and head of directing, said the show is loosely based on the real story of Macheath, who he said was the most notorious bandit in London during the 1700s.

However, he said Brecht moved the action to the 1800, during the time of Queen Victoria's coronation.

"It's kind of the story of two rival gangs, each of them trying to influence the police," Marks said.

"Outside of that, it's a satirical operetta, and so it's a lot of fun.

"It's about the trouble he (Macheath) gets into with having all those women and the trouble with through 28.

controlling that big old city."

Marks also said the original show opened in 1928, and became a popular "off-Broadway" show in the late

He said Brecht's style of play wrighting tried to make the familiar strange, and the strange familiar, and keep the audience from getting too connected with the action by reminding them they are at a theater performance.

According to "The HBJ Anthology of Drama," by W.B. Worthen, "Brecht's plays tend to be episodic, a disconnected montage of scenes.

The audience must arrive at its own understanding of how the events are linked together, rather than being given an apparently inevitable narrative.'

"I've had a wonderful time doing this show," J.P. Shanks said, a senior acting and directing major from Big Spring who plays J.J. Peachum, the kingpin of the beggar's syndicate.

"It's been one of the hardest shows, but also one of the funniest shows.

"I've never played an evil person The show will also run at 8 p.m.

Just as the lights of Las Vegas attract would-be gamblers, the pastors at Fellowship Church in Grapevine are using bright blue letters painted on the roof of their church to attract more souls and members.

Troupe entertains students, Lubbock

Sound. Lights. Movement. Action. Even a little bit of impromptu acting.

Lubbock certainly got treated to an incredible dance performance last night at the UC Allen Theater.

The Second Hand Dance Company, from Binghampton, N.Y., provided the four-star entertainment for the evening.

The troupe's belief of recycling to save the Earth, found expression in the costumes and props they had gleaned from trash dumpsters and thrift stores. It even prompted the UC to host a Second-Hand clothes drive, which collected items for Catholic Family Services.

The company could not have looked more strange. Consisting of three men, Greg O'Brien is the guy with "no hair." He is accompanied by "long hair," Andy Horowitz and Paul Gordon who bills himself simply as "the other guy."

Each of the dancers explored the space of the stage in several different numbers. The dance numbers told a story in movement that made the audience laugh, concentrate and sometimes gasp in awe.

As the curtain parted, the three dancers began a performance that looked like a spectacle at a board as he was tossed like a pendulum between "long hair" and "the other guy." Then in a few moves and a split second, they shuffled their bodies like a deck of cards, trading the part of the pendulum to each.

This more serious dance piece became more the exception than the rule for the theme of the performance.

The show was clean and crisp. All three performers made the moves, which took incredible upper and lower body strength, look as though anyone could do it.

Though this show was only one night, Second Hand Company can be seen on David Letterman on Dec. 29.

Tech spikers look to homecooking

By Jeff Keller

The Texas Tech volleyball team will try to get back in the win column in Big 12 Conference play today, as they face the Baylor Bears at 7 p.m. today at the Lubbock Municipal Coli-

The Red Raiders dropped their last two conference matches to Colorado and Nebraska last weekend.

Though Tech (19-10 overall, 8-8 Big 12) lost the two matches to Colorado and Nebraska, the experience the Red Raiders earned playing two top 25 teams will help Tech in the long run, coach Jeff Nelson said.

"We played well in the losses and both were great experiences for us," Nelson said.

"I look at the experience as a positive.

Tech will be motivated to get the win against the Bears having lost two conference matches in a row, senior outside hitter Kristen Holmes said.

'Coming off the losses to Colorado and Nebraska we will definitely be motivated to win," Holmes said of Tech's mentality.

Tech beat Baylor in straight games when the two teams met earlier this year in Waco.

The Red Raiders will not take Baylor lightly because of their earlier success this season and will be focused for the match, sophomore middle blocker Janelle Jones said.

"Beating Baylor earlier this season winning."

has nothing to do with the outcome of this game," Jones said.

"In the Big 12, anybody can beat anybody on any night. That is what we have to look out for when we face

Baylor forced Tech to score 16 points to beat them in the first game during the first meeting with the Red Raiders this season.

Nelson said he would like to see his team come out and play well from the start against the Bears this time.

"It was a good match down there," Nelson said of Tech's first match with

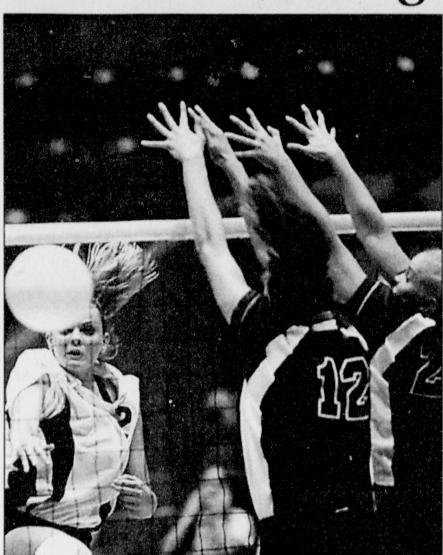

"I think we need to come out and play better in the first game this time. We're playing better volleyball this time, but Baylor is not a team that we can take lightly. They've got a lot of positives on their team. We need to play more consistent and tougher from the start in this match and we need to come out with all guns fir-

Unlucky week for 'Boys

Irving (AP) — This could be a lucky week for the downtrodden Seattle Seahawks. They may not have to face Deion Sanders on Sunday as a punt returner or a wide receiver.

Sanders, who has returned punts 59 and 69 yards this season for touchdowns, injured his left big toe early in Sunday's 35-28 win over Arizona.

He had to wear a house shoe on the foot on the plane ride back from Phoenix and has been limping around the Cowboys practice facility at Valley Ranch this week.

Dallas coach Chan Gailey said on Tuesday it didn't look good for Sanders to be playing on special teams or offense where he has caught 7 passes for 100 yards.

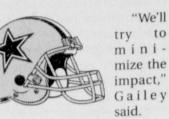

Gailey just hopes he gets a full day at cornerback from Sanders.

'We'll probably have to reduce Deion's role unless we get one of those minor miracles," Gailey said. "It could come down to a game day decision. There appears to be a limit of what he could do offensively and returning punts.'

The Cowboys secondary dissolved into confusion after Sanders left the game against the Cardinals and Jake Plummer went on to pass for three touchdowns and 465 yards against a depleted defense.

When you lose one guy it shouldn't make you crumble," said Gailey. "But Deion is a great, great player and a great leader. It does have an impact when he is out of the game.'

Gailey said the Cowboys will be much better prepared against Seattle and Warren Moon if Sanders can't go.

can have people in there playing at a winning level if not a Deion level.'

Sanders has five interceptions this season and has returned one for a touchdown.

With Sanders limited in practice, Charlie Williams, a fourth-year veteran from Bowling Green, will get a lot of action this week.

"Charlie played fairly well last week," Gailey said of Williams. "He didn't light it up but we expect him to play better with more repetitions in prac-

Kevin Smith, the Cowboys left cornerback, was expected to be ready for the Seahawks although he suffered a separated shoulder against Arizona.

Trainers popped the shoulder back in place and Smith was experiencing some soreness.

Gailey said he couldn't be too hard on his secondary despite the blitz by Plummer in the scond half.

"The biggest thing was the way Plummer bought time for his wide receivers to work their way downfield," Gailey said of Plummer. "You can't cover for five or six seconds.

We have to be smart about how we contain the quarterback (Moon). We have to understand the rushing lanes and keep the quarterback contained. We better find an answer because we're facing a guy just like Plummer."

Tech searching for leaders

LUBBOCK (AP) — The vacuum created by the departure of guard Cory Carr to the Chicago Bulls and several other seniors has left the Texas Tech Red Raiders frantically searching to fill a giant void of experience, leadership and depth this season.

As Tech's season opens Thursday, its prospects for successfully filling the space don't look prom-

Critics say the best the Red Raiders can hope for is a good year to build upon. But players claim they're not ready to concede this season to rebuilding just yet.

"I think this team has a lot of talent, but we're going to need everyone to play their role every night," said Bonewitz. "If we can get that to happen, we can do some damage in the Big 12. We need guys to step up and play like veterans now ... We're looking at right now, not next year."

Returning this year as starters with Bonewitz are Rayford Young, Cliff Owens and Johnny Phillips. Six members of the team are new-who averaged 12.9 points last season, Young, who averaged 15.4 points, and James Ware, a transfer from Midland College.

But if Tech is to find any success in the Big 12 this season, Coach James Dickey said the team will have to establish an inside game to help replace the 23.3 points contributed by Carr in his final season. Even with Carr, the Red Raiders where 13-14 in regular season play and 7-9 in Big 12 play during the 1997-98 campaign.

"We'll be a perimeter team but we'll have to work the inside and even out this ballclub," Dickey

Glavine records another Brave award

NEW YORK (AP) — The NL Cy Young Award returned home Tues-

Tom Glavine edged reliever Trevor Hoffman to win his second NL Cy Young Award, the sixth time in eight years an Atlanta Braves pitcher has earned the honor.

"It's a good feeling to be part of a pitching staff that has won as many awards as we have," Glavine said. "It's great to get it back in the organization after Pedro (Martinez) won it last

In the closest balloting for the award since 1987, Hoffman received the most first-place votes but fell 11 points short of Glavine, who appeared on three more ballots.

The 32-year-old left-hander became the first Cy Young winner not to receive the most first-place votes.

Another Padres pitcher, Kevin Brown, was third with eight firsts, eight seconds, 12 thirds for 76 points. Glavine's teammates, John Smoltz, the 1996 winner, and Greg Maddux, who won the award from 1992-95, tied for fourth with 10 points each.

Glavine, who also won the award in 1991, led the league with 20 wins and was tied for third with a 2.47 ERA. He became the sixth NL pitcher to win the award more than once.

"This validates what I did in 1991," he said. "If you look at the list of multiple winners, it is pretty select company. It is something to be proud of."

Glavine received 11 first-place votes, 13 seconds, five thirds and was left off three ballots for 99 points.

Hoffman had one of the most dominating seasons ever out of the bullpen, saving 53 games in 54 chances for the Padres. Hoffman got 13 firsts, five seconds and eight thirds. The San Diego pitcher was left off six ballots for 88 points.

The 32 voters from the Baseball Writers' Association of America list the top three pitchers on their ballots.

The last time the NL Cy Young vote was this close was 1987, when Steve Bedrosian beat Rick Sutcliffe by two votes and Rick Reuschel by three.

The last time any BBWAA award winner failed to receive the most first-place votes was in 1995 when Seattle's Lou Piniella beat Boston's Kevin Kennedy for AL Manager of the Year. It happened three times in MVP

"It just goes to show that a lot of guys had great years and deserved consideration," Glavine said. "I'm not concerned with how many votes I got or first-place votes I didn't get. I had enough to get the award."

For much of the season Glavine wasn't even the best pitcher on his the clear-cut winner into August," Glavine said. "Barring something crazy, I didn't think I could catch him. I got on a roll and took advantage of the fact that Greg was not Greg in most people's eyes.'

Glavine's win returns the award to Atlanta. Martinez won last year, and Maddux won in 1992 for the Cubs, the year before he signed with the

Sink or Swim

On Nov. 11, at the Student Aquatic Center, we were dazzled with the butterfly stroke and amazed by the quickness of the freestyle during the day's meet.

From the men's Team Division, Sugar Land All-Stars won with the help of Casey Carter, winner of first place in the 50 yard freestyle with a time of 28:21. Joel Schuh won first place overall in the men's individual division. He took first place in the 50 yard freestyle, 100 yard individual medley and second place in the 50 yard butterfly. From the women's individual division, Julia Ness attained first place after swimming the 50 yard breaststroke, 50 yard freestyle and the 50 yard butterfly.

Thank you to everyone who participated. For more information, contact the Student Rec Center at 742-3351.
