Former Texas Tech Professor Jane Burns donated $1 million to the Horizon Campaign on Monday in the form of a planned gift, bringing totals to $214,050,106 of the $300 million goal.

Chancellor John Montford accepted the donation on behalf of the College of Business Administration at a reception. Burns also spoke on the gift's significance.

"When asking myself why Texas Tech, it all boiled down to the simple reasoning that my heart is here," Burns said.

"I came to Lubbock 12 years ago and fell in love with the area and the people."

The endowment will be given to the university following Burn's death, and will consist of appreciated stocks and Burns'

GOAL ...

ATTAINED ...

Burns explained the tax advantages of donating a pension plan to a non-profit organization and urged other faculty members to consider the same.

If an individual receives funds from a pension plan, they will end up paying close to 70 percent of those funds to the government in the form of taxes," Burns said. "If a university retrieves those funds, they will receive 100 percent of those dollars.' The donation will be used to establish the Jane O. Burns Endowment in the college and will fund scholarships and an accounting professorship. With a previous donation, Burns established an endowment for Tech athletics.

"To me, education is one of the most important factors in the quality of life, and it's something that I know I can do something about," Burns said.

A former professor of accounting in the COBA, Burns retired in 1997. She had the Frank M. Burke endowed teaching position in Taxation for the college.

Montford described Burns as one of the nation's leading authorities on taxation.

Dean of the college Roy Howell spoke about the significance of the gift for the college. "It's an exceptional pleasure to acknowledge a gift that comes from one of our own," Howell said.

"When someone who knows this college says that this is where I want to contribute, it makes us feel good. It gives us a sense of worth and gives us hope for the future."

Ringers offer holiday shoppers friendly hellos for donations By Laura Hensley

The crisp jingle of the tiny red bell Johnie Loyd rings can be heard from the shopping center parking lot.

Busy holiday shoppers hurry past him through the entrance of Barnes & Noble. Some dart past the jolly man, others pause to stuff in a dollar or two or dump their pocket change into the kettle.

But it doesn't matter if they give a nickel or a dollar or even if they don't give anything, Loyd offers a smile, opens the door and wishes them a Merry

This is Loyd's 18th year to volunteer as a Salvation Army bell ringer. Loyd works six days a week, come rain or shine, standing ringing his bell and giving a smile to everyone who passes by. Each year in Lubbock and around the nation, many other bell ringers like Loyd collect money to help people through the holidays and the

"The kettles are a Christmas tradition," said Curtis Parrish of the Salvation Army, "It's hard to go shopping in Lubbock without hearing the bells. It wouldn't be Christmas without them."

The annual Christmas Kettle Campaign officially began the day after Thanksgiving and will continue until Dec. 24. In Lubbock, there are 32 kettle locations and ringers expect to collect about $120,000 in pocket change. All of the donations will be used for holiday assistance, as well as the ongoing social service needs for the community throughout the year.

Last year, the bell ringers raised a quarter of the operation costs for the local Salvation Army. The Salvation Army "I try not to let anyone go by serves more than 10,000 communities nationwide and last year assisted more than 30 million people.

In Lubbock, the Salvation Army provided 15,000 nights of lodging last year for homeless families and served 40,000 meals in the only general emergency shelter on the South Plains.

"We are not just an agency of Christmas," Parrish said. "We do this 12 months a year.'

With the donations collected in the pots, the Salvation Army will be able to help 18,000 families during the holidays. "When you drop a quarter in

On Jan. 13, the facility will be open for students to use, said Jennifer Plantier, marketing and customer service specialist for Housing and Dining. In early February, there will be a grand opening ceremony for the Market.

The Market will offer a different type of dining experience, said Tiffany Enderson, coordinator of marketing and promotions for housing and dining, students will not be given the all-you-caneat buffet style.

"It's a foodcourt rather than a dining hall," Enderson said.

When students eat at the Market, they are given an equivalence to the amount of money the meal is worth. For example, currently, breakfast costs $3.75 and lunch and dinner cost $4.75. The student will swipe their Tech ID to be credited the amount and be allowed to pick and choose what he or she wants to eat. If the student wants to buy extra food they can.

The Market will contain many different types of eateries for students to choose from, Plantier said.

"It is different from regular dining halls in residence halls," Plantier said. "They have different areas for students to choose from.

The Market will have many different theme lines where students will choose Another change to be put in effect when students return will be the opening of Sam's Place at Carpenter/Wells.

Sam's Place is a delicatessen/convenience store where students can get something to eat and shop for school supplies, Enderson said.

Just like the Market, students who wish to purchase something to eat at Sam's Place will be given a credit for their dining privileges. However, only residents of Carpenter/Wells and Gaston Hall/Apartments will be given the equivalency.

All others who wish to purchase something from Sam's Place can do so through Dining Dollars, cash or Tech

Students meet to save recycling program

By Apu Naik

Texas Tech's Students for Environmental Awareness met Monday at the University Center in an effort to save a Lubbock recycling program that the city will terminate in less than three weeks.

Also at the meeting, the group began brainstorming new ideas to increase Lubbock's recycling efforts.

During their Oct. 23 meeting, city council members decided the program has become too costly, and as of Jan. 1, the city of Lubbock will terminate its blue bag recycling program.

The blue bag program is part of the cept glass materials at this time. city's recycling services which first began in 1992 after being proposed by the city

The program makes a weekly collection of recyclable materials from residential areas. Citizens who wish to participate are asked to put recyclable materials in blue grocery bags and place those bags next to their alley trash containers on the day of collection.

Items which can be collected through the blue bag program are aluminum cans, tin and steel cans, plastics Nos. 1 and 2, newspaper, mixed office paper, magazines, junk mail, envelopes and any kind of cardboard. The city does not ac-

In replace of the blue bag program, Lubbock will add two more drop off sites to the one which already exists on 84th Street and Avenue P for citizens to transport their recyclable trash.

Celeste Hoehne, past president of the Texas Recycling council and key speaker at Monday's meeting, said three recycle drop off sites are not an adequate enough solution. "Everyone agrees that there is a lack of participation when it comes to recycling, and that something needs to be done," Hoehne said. "But three drop off sites for recycling are simply not enough, especially when citizens won't recycle when the drop off is right behind their

Ashley Martin, president of the Students for Environmental Awareness, said this could be blamed partially on apathetic citizens, but also on the city, whose only advertisement for the blue bag program are stickers on trash containers

Man executed for 1987 serial slayings

HUNTSVILLE (AP) - A serial killer who blamed uncontrollable "pressures in my head" for his violent sprees was executed Monday for murdering three Southeast Texas women during a nine-month period of 1987.

Daniel Lee Corwin, 40, of Temple, was pronounced dead at 6:33 p.m., seven minutes after a lethal flow of drugs was started into his arms. Corwin spent much of a lengthy final statement addressing six family members of his victims who watched from a few feet away. "I want to express my sorrow and regrets from the deepest part of my heart," he said. "I'm sorry. I regret what happened and I want you to know that I'm sorry. I just ask and hope that sometime down the line that you can forgive me. I think in a lot of ways without that it becomes very empty and hollow and the only thing we have is hatred and anger.'

He also suggested that the state reconsider the death penalty, which he called "two-sided."

"There's pain on both sides," he said.

Corwin was the 18th convicted murderer to receive lethal injection this year in Texas and the first of four on consecutive days this week.

Corwin was condemned under the state's serial killer statute for the murders of Alice Martin, 72, of Normangee; Debra Lynn Ewing, 26, of Conroe; and Mary Carrell Risinger, 36, of Huntsville.

A Montgomery County jury in 1990, after hearing chilling testimony from three rape victims who survived his attacks, took only 25 minutes to decide he should be put to death.

The 99-year term was for the abduction of a Texas A&M University student who was raped and left for dead after having her throat slashed.

On Tuesday, Texas prison officials were set to execute Jeff Emery, 39, for the rape and stabbing death of a Texas A&M University student at her College Station apartment in 1979.

It never seems to fail, whenever I go to a seminar or a workshop, there is a cluster of people who just happened to bust up an insurance company for illegal activities while they did their internship over the summer, or who happened to get an in-depth interview with Linda Tripp while dining at some restaurant.

These are the same people who have glow-in-the-dark resumes they've been working on since they came out of the womb.

Williams named AP player of year

NEW YORK (AP) - Ricky Williams returned for his final year at Texas with modest goals: Win games and have Mission accomplished, and he still gets to play in the Cotton Bowl.

Monday, Williams won The Associated Press' first College Player of the Year Award in balloting by AP member newspapers, TV and radio stations.

"Anytime you are considered the best it's flattering," Williams said, "and to be picked the top player in college football by the reporters who watch the games so closely is truly an honor."

Williams provided college football fans with an extra special season. While running for 2,214 yards and 28 touchdowns, Williams became major college football's career rushing leader and carried his team to an 8-3 record and a Cotton Bowl matchup against Mississippi State on Jan. 1.

"If I was to tell someone before the season that we were going to win eight games, they would have told me I was crazy," Williams said. "For us to come together as a team and surprise so many people with how we played was extra special.'

Williams received 76 of the 143 votes in the AP balloting, easily outdistancing Kansas State quarterback Michael Bishop, who had 17 votes. Kentucky quarterback Tim Couch was third with 15 votes.

Saturday, Williams will be the overwhelming favorite to win the Heisman Trophy, given each year to college football's most outstanding player.

Watching Williams play turned into lots of fun for everyone except the Longhorns' opponents. Just ask Texas

When he ripped off a 60yard touchdown run against the Aggies on Nov. 27, he broke Tony Dorsett's career rushing record and started the Longhorns on their way to a 26-24 upset. He finished the game with 259 yards, giving him a career total of 6,279 yards to Dorsett's 6,082 from 1973-76.

The record-setting run was typical. Needing 11 yards to pass Dorsett's 22-year-old mark, Williams shed a tackler near the line of scrimmage, ran nearly 60 yards and then carried an Aggies defensive back into the end zone.

"That's a run I'll remember for the rest of my life." Texas coach Mack Brown said.

Williams owns 15 other NCAA records, including most career touchdowns (75), points (452) and all-purpose yards (7,206). He also averaged a record 6.22 yards per carry.

Couch, who owns his share of records, recently said Williams was the best player in the

"As many times as he carries the ball, he's just as strong in the fourth quarter as he is in the first quarter," Couch said. "He's an amazing player."

Records don't matter much to Williams. Helping his team turn into a winner again under a new coach was another reason he returned to Austin instead of bolting to the NFL.

"I think the thing that excites me the most about winning an award like this is the fact that people are giving me credit for having an impact on my team," Williams said. "That's what has always been the most important thing to me, helping the team win games."

As all great runners do, Williams credits his offensive line, but he takes things a step further. After all, the Longhorns were trying to rebound from one of the worst seasons in their storied history. "I couldn't have achieved any of the honors I am receiving without the help of my teammates," he said. "They sacrificed so much and worked so hard to help me have a great year. This team is a real special one. We all worked so well together and had a lot of fun.'

UCLA quarterback Cade McNown was fourth in the voting, followed by North Carolina State wide receiver Torry Holt and Ohio State quarterback Joe Germaine.

Raiders battle Horned Frogs

By Jeff Keller

After a 75-74 home loss to the Stephen F. Austin Lumberjacks, the Texas Tech men's basketball squad will travel to Fort Worth to take on the Texas Christian Horned Frogs at 7:05 p.m. today at Daniel Meyer Coliseum in Fort Worth.

Fox Sports Southwest (Cox Cable Channel 20) will locally televise the game in Lubbock.

The Red Raiders (4-2 overall) have the overall seagainst the Horned Frogs 65-41, but the Horned Frogs have prevailed in the last two meetings including a 107-76 victory at Lubbock last year. The loss to TCU last year, at the time, was Tech's worst ever lost at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum. In the four years Billy Tubbs has been the coach of the Horned Frogs, they have posted an 80-45 record. TCU won the Western Athletic lead Conference Championship last year on the way to posting a 27-6 record and earning a trip to the NCAA Tour-

> The Horned Frogs have a 7-2 overall record this season having lost to Rhode Island and Oklahoma State.

> Tech is 1-0 on television this season having defeated the Southern Methodist Mustangs 91-80 on Fox Sports Southwest Dec. 4.

their worse shooting performance of the season in the loss to Stephen F. Austin.

Tech shot 37 percent from the field going 33 percent from threepoint range against the Lumberiacks in Saturday's loss.

This will be the Red Raiders third road trip of the season, and Tech is 1-1 on the road thus far this season.

After the one-game road trip, Tech will return home to face Texas-Arlington at 7 p.m. Saturday at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Cowboys collapse against Saints big mystery

IRVING (AP) — Chan Gailey's tag as an offensive genius took a serious hit down in old New Orleans.

The Dallas Cowboys were still trying to figure out Monday how the New Orleans Saints could hold them to a franchise-low 8 rushing yards in a 22-3 loss.

Gailey, former offensive coordinator at Pittsburgh who was hired by Jerry Jones to spice up the Dallas offense, said the Cowboys' problems were more mental than physical.

"It was the mental aspect of the game where we didn't get the job done," Gailey said. "I saw a team that

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Letter inaccurate, writer wrong about AIDS, abortion

To the editor: I was shocked to see The UD printed such a narrow-minded, ignorant and absolutely disgusting letter Friday. Mr. James Hodges took it upon himself to give us all a moral lesson. Oh yes, he is completely entitled to voice his opinion. But, I'd just like to point out a few things he conveniently overlooked.

AIDS because he or she is either homosexual or promiscuous. I would think a scientist would know better than to say something so ludicrous.

Ever hear of a little boy named Ryan White, Mr. Hodges? He contracted the virus from a contaminated blood transfusion.

And I've got even more news for you, a lot of people contracted the virus in the same way. I am sick of hearing people say homosexuals deserve

AIDS because they are morally wrong. Is it not morally wrong to wish such a terrible virus on homosexuals? Is that a Christian thing to do?

I am a Christian as well, but I read the parts of the Bible that say to love one another. Obviously, some Christians like Mr. Hodges decided to skip over those portions of

So, don't tell us God thinks homosexuality is wrong Actually, I think God would be ashamed to read the things you said in your letter.

Mr. Hodges's deep beliefs in God conflict with his hatred for people who are different.

None of them chose to get HIV. None of them deserve what they are going through. I'll bet Mr. Hodges has never seen someone so sick with HIV who could not get out of Clearly, Mr. Hodges knew one thing: he was right, and people who don't think and behave as he does deserve to get AIDS and die.

Mr. Hodges, I am ashamed for you. Thousands of students read your ignorance and hatred.

They read your attempt to teach us all how to be as morally correct and "God-fearing" as you. You forgot one thing: some of those students have HIV, some have had abortions and a lot of them have premarital sex. You stepped on our toes. Times have changed, my friend.

People should not ignore Hampton coaches' rights

To the editor: OK, so there I am eating my lunch and reading The UD, which by the way has improved greatly this year, and I run across Ginger Pope's column concerning the possible lawsuit by Hampton University.

She makes the point race shouldn't matter in the case of mistaken identity; however, she takes the time within her column to make the observation the coaches from Hampton were black. Well, my first question would be, if you want to avoid the race issue why do you spend half of your column talking about race?

If this column could have been written without mentioning or alluding to the race issue, then why should you be allowed to exploit the race of these individuals in your

To me, it seems you blame them for being black in a white society, because not once in your column do you bother to mention the police officers or the witness could have been motivated by racial prejudices, but rather that to ask the coaches from Hampton were black.

You automatically assume the individuals involved had no prejudices. On what super-intellectual skills did you determine race had nothing to do with this case?

Thus, the point of the lawsuit to determine the truth. If it truly was a racial issue, I would think we should investigate and discuss the situation so we might discover the truth or even change the system if needed. If it wasn't a race issue, then we could move on to more substantive issues.

I just don't think we can blindly make ill-informed judgments about this case without a trial; a trial where the facts can be presented in a hopefully non-bias forum.

I don't think there has been one problem in any lifetime where ignoring the problem made the situation bet-

As for Hampton University hiring a lawyer to protect its employees, I don't see the harm.

I would contend a university has the obligation to protect its employees from harm when they are on schoolsponsored activities.

I wouldn't imagine Hampton would want the reputation of complacency when it came to the well being of its students or staff.

holiday season and it is the season of giving, I thought I would "give" you a few of the items I have included on my holiday wish list. Topping my holiday wish list is an automated registration system. Come on people our library is online, why isn't our registration system. I really would think in this day of computer technology a system such as this would not be too terribly difficult to come by. All I really want is an improved system that eliminates standing in line with the pissed off guy next to me and member was at my grandma and grandpa's house. Grandma and grandpa live on a farm about a zillion miles from nowhere in Western Oklahoma.

All of my aunts and uncles and cousins are country folk, too. My parents and I are the fancy pants city folk from the bustling metropolis of Amarillo. I was scared to death that Santa would never find me because that big old farm house doesn't have a real address or paved roads leading to it or even a chimney. Anyway, on Christmas Eve that year, my Uncle Jim took his shotgun to investigate a noise he heard

A few minutes later, we heard some shots, and when he came

> He said there was a fat man in a red suit prowling around outside, he caught him, but the fat man got away so he fired some shots in the dark after him.

It was very possible that Santa lay bleeding to death somewhere out in a field around my grandparents

My cousins and I were sure that Uncle Jim had shot Santa and ruined Christmas for us and all the other toy-hungry kids.

We mourned the loss of Kris Kringle until he appeared at our window to see if we were being naughty or nice, ringing his bells

Funny thing was, Mr. Claus looked a lot like my mom.

For our Christmas Eve meal, we door to the Christmas tree with a sefeasted on what my grandma likes to call reindeer stew.

I think she thought it was funny to make Santa's biggest fans think his getaway sleigh drivers were in a huge pot on her stove.

That night, we sat out some milk and peanut brittle for old St. Nick on the off chance my uncle didn't try to shoot him again when he came back to deliver our presents.

And sure enough, come Christmas morning, there were no presents under our real evergreen Christmas tree decorated with popcorn and cranberries on string.

That year, for some reason, Santa saw fit to hide our presents in an upstairs bedroom.

Maybe that's because we had the house booby trapped from the front ries of pots and pans, some confetti, a bucket of water and some strategically placed chewing gum.

That Christmas, my Uncle Jim really got coal and tube socks in his stocking. And us kids had stockings filled with Lifesavers, Slinkies, Strawberry Shortcake dolls, G.I. Joe's, M&Ms and cap guns.

Every Christmas is an experience with my family, and even though they're nuts, I wouldn't trade them.

I guess that's what families are for - to suffer through the holidays

Have a Merry Christmas with your goofy crew.

Garrison, Fernandez help support Red Raider tennis

By Jeff Keller Staff Writer

Lubbock tennis fans were treated to a professional tennis exhibition Sunday at the Lubbock Country

Professional women tennis players Mary Joe Fernandez and Zina Garrison played a best of three sets tennis match. Fernandez won the match in straight sets 6-3, 6-3.

The match was presented in effort to raise money for the Texas Tech tennis program, and more than 600 fans attended the event.

Red Raider Director of Tennis Tim Siegel said he was pleased with the results of the event.

"It was a tremendous event," Siegel said. "It was exciting to put on an event like this for the community. I hope to do something like this every year."

Fernandez paired with Tech men's tennis player Borut Martincevic to face Garrison, who joined Tech men's player Ryan Shupe in a mixed doubles match.

Tech women's tennis players Zana also involved in the event, as each paired with a local tennis player to face off in a mixed doubles match.

"I think it was a good experience for the four players," Siegel said of the Red Raiders. "They represented Tech very well."

Garrison was coming off a layoff from singles play and said she was glad to be playing again and enjoyed the opportunity to face Fernandez.
