Tuition expected to rise

By Apu Naik
Staff Writer

Students can expect an increase in the cost of hourly tuition in order to compensate for this year's decline in enrollment and to increase faculty and staff salaries. Texas Tech Administrators proposed the increase during an open forum meeting Tuesday.

If approved by the Board of Regents during a Feb. 11 meeting, the cost of one credit hour at Tech will increase from $36 to $38, beginning with the fiscal year 2000.

Jim Brunjes, vice president of fiscal affairs, said an increase is needed partially because the university suffered a slight decline in enrollment last fall resulting in lost funds for research and faculty.

"We are still dedicated to making this school a Carnegie I research institution," Brunjes said. "This money will be instrumental in helping this happen."

Tech President Donald Haragan said the proposed tuition increase would generate about $1.2 million, which would be used primarily toward increasing research and strengthening faculty.

"There is no question that we have the heaviest teaching load of any state institution," Haragan said. "We want to raise money for creating the research we need to improve our status."

Compared to other state schools, Tech will now share the state's most expensive tuition rates with five other universities.

The University of Texas at Arlington, the University of Texas at Dallas, the University of Texas at Austin and Texas A&M University will all increase their institutional tuition rates to $38 per credit hour.

Under legislation passed in 1994, no state institution is allowed to exceed a tuition cap of $40 per credit hour. Executive Assistant to the Chancellor Ben Locke said part of that legislation called for a periodic increase in tuition as well.

"Ever since fiscal year 1995, tuition has increased consistently on an annual basis because of the implementation of a stair-case type increase program," Locke said.

As for Tech's Health and Sciences Center, the impact of an increase will not be felt as strongly, said Elmo Cavin, vice president of fiscal affairs for the HSC.

"Next year, the HSC will have about 1,600 students, and the $2 increase in tuition would generate about $90,000," Cavin said. "When you consider that, faculty salaries alone account for about $200 million of our annual budget, this doesn't seem like much of an impact."

But Calvin said the increase will benefit the long-term interests of the HSC by providing additional funding for the center's research and technology.

THE DAY THE MUSIC DIED

Remembering Lubbock's Native Son

By Sebastian Kitchen
Staff Writer

Buddy Holly's life and music is recognized and celebrated around the world even though his career ended early in a plane crash in Iowa 40 years ago today.

A festival, web sites, a street, fan clubs, a statue, musicals, movies, magazines, books and an upcoming museum, celebrate the life and music of Holly, a Lubbock native.

Generations of musicians and fans still listen to Holly's music despite the fact he died Feb. 3, 1959—the day labeled by many as the "day the music died."

The crash also claimed the lives of fellow musicians Ritchie Valens and J.P. "The Big Bopper" Richardson. The men boarded the plane to avoid riding in a cold tour bus.

Holly was born Charles Hardin Holley in Lubbock on Sept. 7, 1936, and the music icon was buried in the city of Lubbock Cemetery. Holly dropped the "e" after his name was misspelled on his first recording contract.

Holly already had made an impact on the music world even though he was only 22. He influenced music greats including Bob Dylan and the Beatles. The Beatles derived its name from Holly's band the Crickets. One of the Beatles once said there never would have been the Beatles if it was not for Buddy Holly and the Crickets. During a tour of England, Holly convinced the band to leave England and become more than a cover band.

Holly changed the Beatles. Both changed the face of music.

Lubbock's native son had several hits to his credit by 22, and his music managed to raid charts well after his death.

This week, Clearlake, Iowa, will play host to festivities celebrating the musicians and their music. The VH1 series "Behind the Music" will mark the tragic event with a show tonight titled "The Day the Music Died."

Although Lubbock does not commemorate the crash, the city instead celebrates his birthday and his music during the Buddy Holly Music Festival in September.

"Our philosophy is that we do not celebrate his death but his life and his music," said Connie Gibbons, director of the Lubbock Fine Arts Center.

Gibbons directs the work on the Buddy Holly Museum, which is scheduled to open Sept. 3. The museum will house memorabilia, including the Fender Stratocaster guitar Holly played the night he died, his famous glasses and featured items and information about other West Texas musicians.

"Holly was the first in rock 'n' roll to die young and in such a tragic way," Gibbons said.

By the time he died, Holly had released the hit songs "That'll Be the Day," "Peggy Sue" and "Rave On." But, more hits were on the way.

Demo tapes that Holly recorded in his apartment later were released and continued to tear up music charts all around the world.

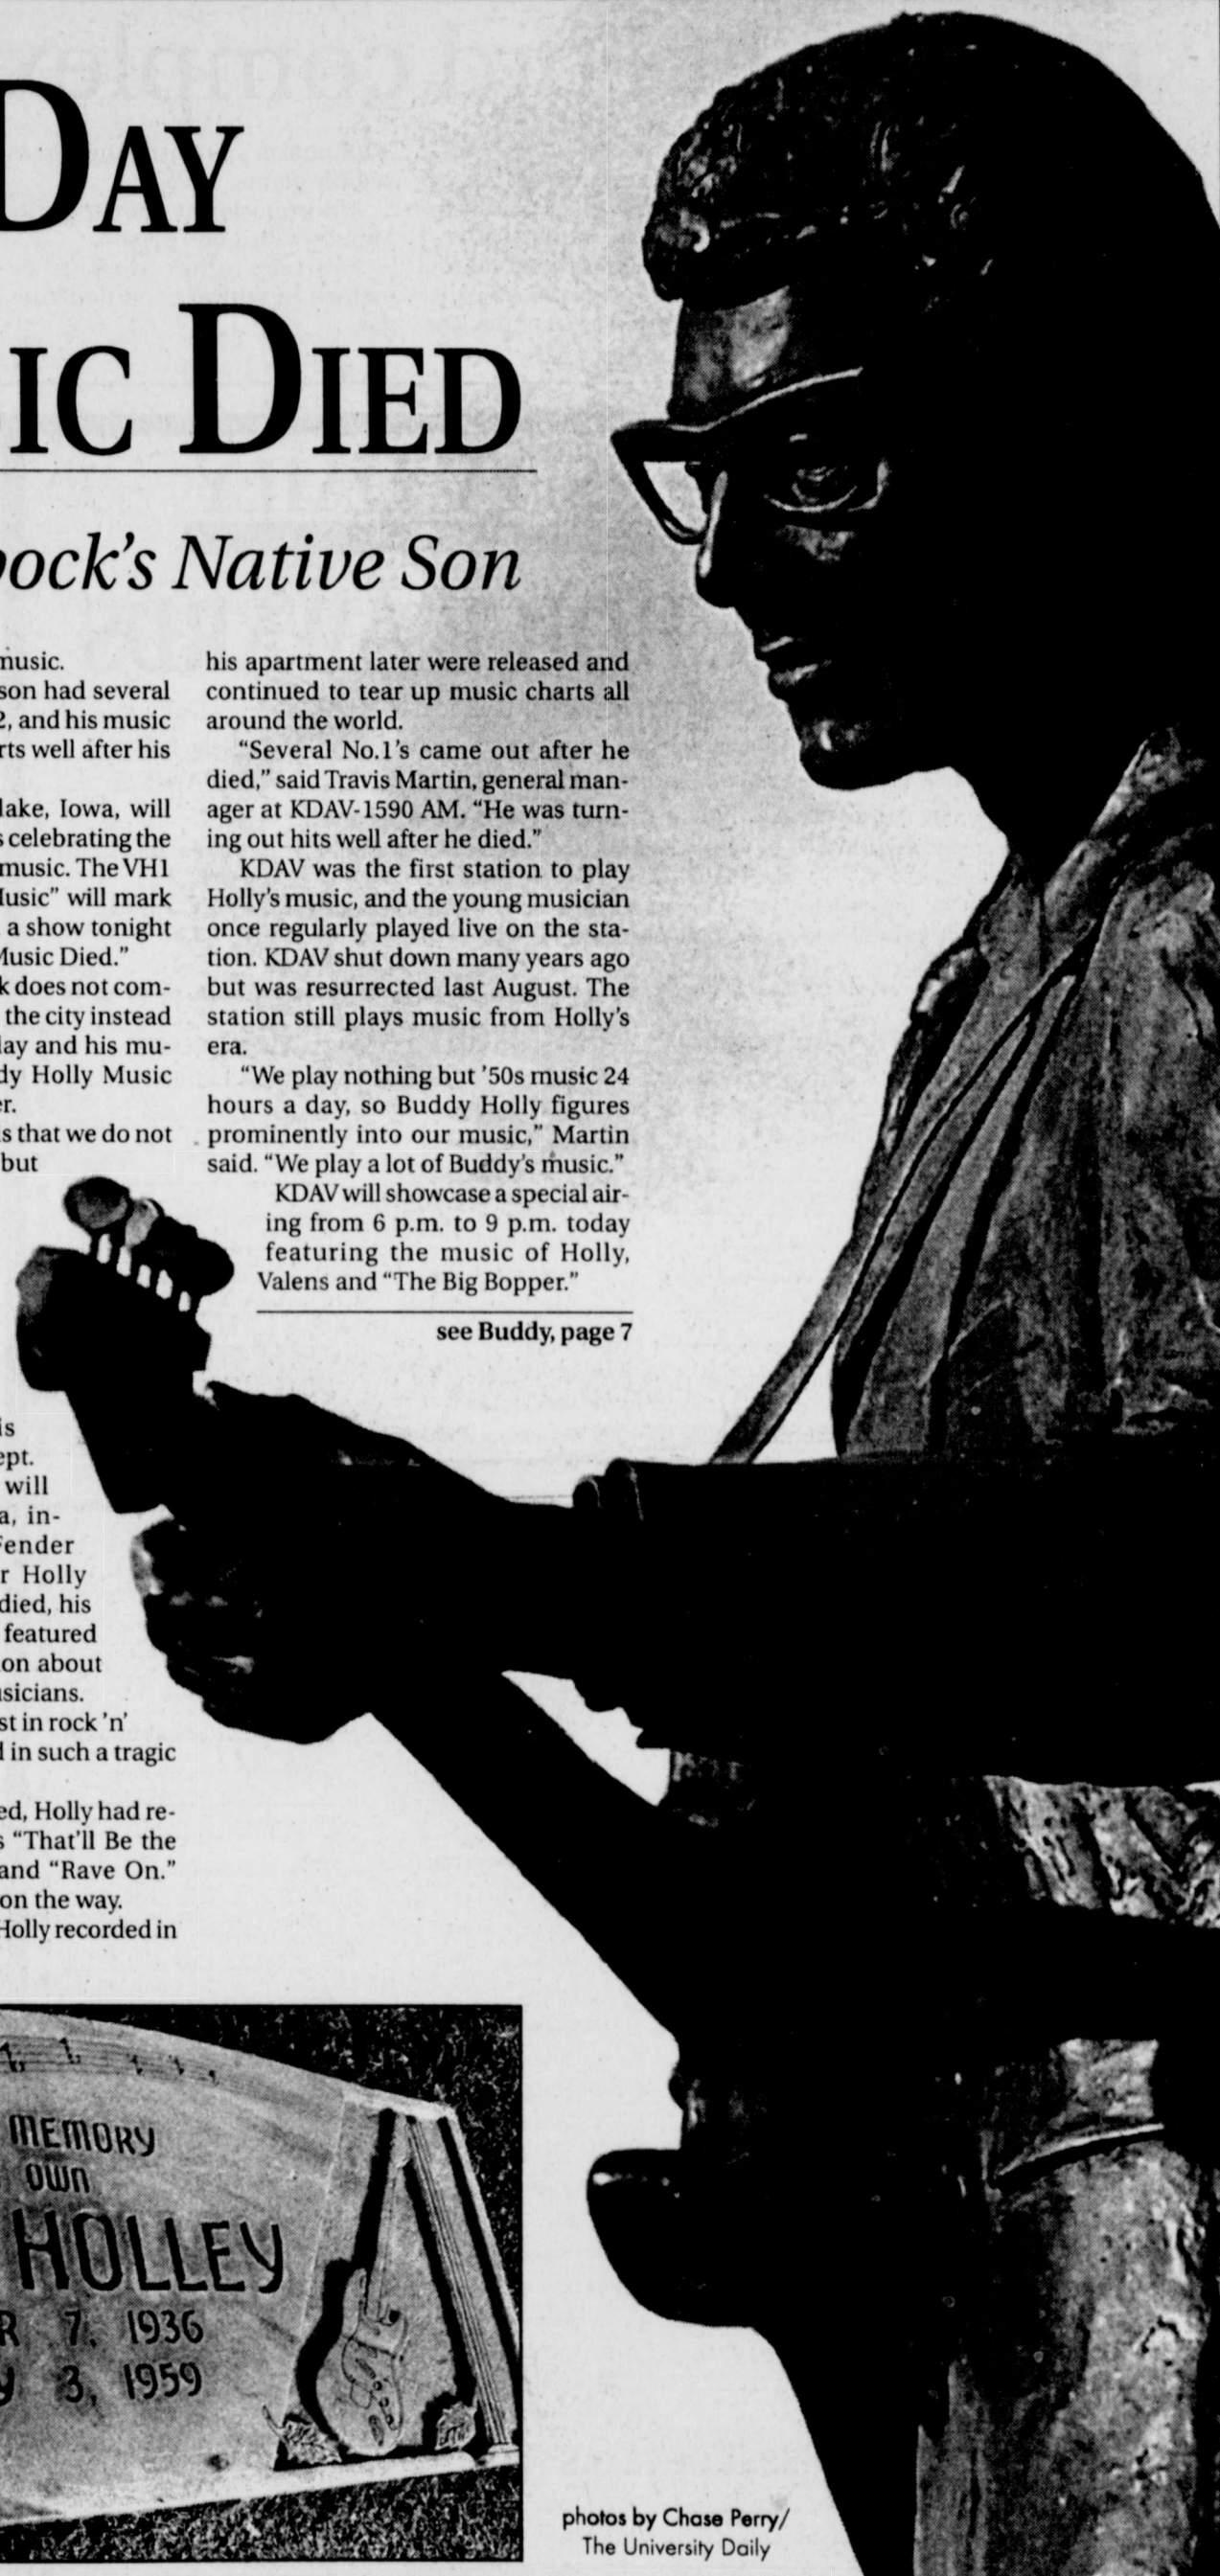

"Several No. 1's came out after he died," said Travis Martin, general manager at KDAV-1590 AM. "He was turning out hits well after he died."

KDAV was the first station to play Holly's music, and the young musician once regularly played live on the station. KDAV shut down many years ago but was resurrected last August. The station still plays music from Holly's era.

"We play nothing but '50s music 24 hours a day, so Buddy Holly figures prominently into our music," Martin said. "We play a lot of Buddy's music."

KDAV will showcase a special airing from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. today featuring the music of Holly, Valens and "The Big Bopper."

Couple will gift to support research

By Melody Ragland
Staff Writer

The Texas Tech Horizon Campaign received a gift of $700,000 Tuesday. The gift was given by Larry and Jane Woirhaye, post-mortem.

The gift was left in the Woirhaye's will, and will support renal research at University Medical Center.

Jane Woirhaye received a bachelor's degree in elementary education in 1964. She died in 1996 of renal failure. Her husband died of diabetes in 1997.

Donald Wesson, interim chair of the Department of Internal Medicine, said the donation comes at an opportune time. He said renal research is on-going.

"The real goal will be a cure rather than manage care," Wesson said.

He said the best therapy for kidney disease is dialysis or a kidney transplant.

"Support is on-going, but the hopes are curing it," Wesson said.

Chancellor John Montford said Tech would be greatly enhanced by the gift.

Helen Geick, Jane Woirhaye's sister, administered the trust.

Geick said the greatest legacy her sister could have left is leaving the fund to Tech.

"We hope this will be able to help those whose suffer from renal failure," Geick said.

Joel Kupersmith, dean of the School of Medicine, said kidney failure is a slow, long-term disease. He said the causes are high blood pressure and diabetes.

Campaign reaches new audiences

By Ginger Pope

Texas Tech's fund-raising efforts did not exactly make headlines the first of February, but they did get several mentions between pages 94 and 95 of Texas Monthly.

For the second year in a row Texas Monthly has published a list of top philanthropists, who donated a million dollars or more. Tech was mentioned at least 13 times by the magazine.

Last year, Southern Methodist University was one of the top institutions dona.ed to. This year's list consists of donations given between January and December of 1998, and all donors have to reside in Texas. No corporate gifts were included and gifts, whose donors were not named were excluded.

The many mentions of Tech's name was not that odd to the contributing writer, Ann Castle.

"I'm not surprised because a lot of institutions have capital campaigns, and they move in and out of them. SMU was listed often last year and they were in a campaign," she said.

Castle's research for the article involved scanning newspapers, wire services and contacting news offices at major institutions.

Previous years have shown Texas A&M University and the University of Texas as big money drawers, a tradition Tech hopes to break.

Cindy Rugeley, associate vice chancellor for Tech News and Information, said exposure in the Texas Monthly can do two things for Tech.

"This lets everybody know we're here ... it reinforces to students and alumni we're out here doing a good job," Rugeley said.

Tech did not have to pitch for any of the magazine's coverage, and Rugeley said that says the university is serious about establishing a healthy endowment and a strong alumni support base.

While she has not heard any re-

"This lets everybody know we're here, and ... it reinforces to students and alumni we're out here doing a good job."

Associate Vice Chancellor for News and Information

sponse from Tech supporters about the magazine article, Rugeley does believe it will help in Tech's continuing fund raising drive to get more people on the bandwagon.

"People like to bet on a winner," she said. While the magazine mentioned many of Tech's big donors from 1998, there still are a lot of smaller donors who are just as important, Rugeley said.

"We have a lot that give $50 to $100. This shows we have a grassroots and broad based support," she said.

With recent donations from the San Antonio area, Tech's capital campaign is a little more than $226 million.

While the total amount of donations listed in the magazine was a little more than $15 million it still was not enough to outdo Abilene Christian University, which received $26.5 million from one donor in Kerville.

Bush presenting British leader, New York mayor

AUSTIN (AP) — George W. Bush, Texas governor and potential presidential candidate, will present a couple more high-profile guests next week — the head of Britain's Conservative Party and the mayor of New York City.

The Republican governor is scheduled to meet Feb. 12 with William Hague, the Tory leader, in Austin. Hague wants to talk about Bush's "compassionate conservatism" themes, said Karen Hughes, the governor's spokeswoman.

Bush also will host New York City Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, Hughes said Tuesday.

Giuliani is scheduled to be in Dallas on Feb. 11 for a fund-raising event, she said.

He will travel to Austin that evening, spend the night at the Governor's Mansion and have breakfast with Bush.

"When we learned about that (Dallas trip), we invited him to come to Austin to visit with the governor and spend the night at the Mansion if he can," she said of the mayor.

Hughes said Bush, who opinion polls indicate is a front-runner among possible presidential candidates for 2000, makes it a practice to invite fellow GOP leaders to visit him at the Governor's Mansion.

Giuliani, who's raising money for a possible U.S. Senate run in 2000, and Bush first met in 1997, when the governor went to New York City Hall to congratulate Giuliani after his reelection victory over Democrat Ruth Messinger.

Giuliani has known Bush's father, former President Bush, since the mayor's days in the Reagan Justice Department.

Since he took office in 1995, the Bush guest list has included a number of Republican Party officials.

He has hosted New Mexico Gov. Gary Johnson, along with former Texas Gov. Bill Clements.

At least two GOP presidential hopefuls have spent the night: former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander and publisher Steve Forbes.

Bush currently is trying to decide whether to run for president next

On the day after his inaugural address, the governor acknowledged considering the race and said 2000 might be his only chance.

But he said he won't be making a decision until spring.

"I haven't made up my mind if I'm going to run for president," Bush said then.

"I actually have got three options. I can say no, yes or maybe."

Explosion at Ford complex slows national production

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Ford Motor Co. scrambled to bring in generators Tuesday and get its River Rouge complex back in operation after a deadly explosion halted work there and slowed production at other Ford plants around the country.

River Rouge contains a Mustang assembly plant as well as parts factories that make such things as engines, doors, hoods and glass. If production does not resume quickly, work will be slowed at 16 of the No.

2 automaker's 20 North America assembly plants.

The explosion at a power station Monday killed one person.

Fourteen other workers remained in critical condition Tuesday.

The cause of the blast was under investigation.

Many of the 10,000 workers at River Rouge awaited word on when they could return to work.

Ford assembly plants in several other cities were also asked to scale back production.

River Rouge manager Art Janes wouldn't speculate on when production at the complex might resume.

"I just can't tell you until we push the button and see if it works," he said.

In trying to get at least part of the complex restarted, Ford hauled in six generators at its key stamping plant and four at its engine plant.

An automotive analyst said Ford, like other automakers, has a contingency plan to get parts from outside suppliers.

That could minimize the production slowdowns.

"I foresee really no impact on Ford's earnings," said Richard Hilgert of First of Michigan.

On Tuesday, the explosion's effects were becoming more evident at Ford production sites elsewhere.

Ford cut the eight-hour shifts to four hours at its suburban Detroit plant in Wayne, where Escorts are built; at the Wixom plant, where the Town Car and Lincoln Continental are made; and at its assembly plant at Lorain, Ohio, where Ford Econoline vans are made.

"I foresee really no impact on Ford's earnings."

Lubbock's temporary power outage due to power lines parts failure

Students relying on Southwest Public Service Company were out of power for 14 minutes beginning at 12:36 p.m. on Tuesday.

Don Boatman, general manager of SPS, said the outage was the result of a piece of equipment that had gone bad.

"We had a lightning arrester on 47th Avenue and Avenue U that went out," Boatman said.

SPS was able to cut the faulty piece and replace it with a new piece. The power was restored after the equipment was replaced. Boatman said the lightning arresters are to protect power lines from lightning.

Boatman said. "Outages like this are always expected," Boatman said.

Fair demonstrates importance of students' health

By Greg Okuhara
Staff Writer

Texas Tech students had the chance to have their vision screened or take a simulated sobriety test at a health and wellness fair Tuesday.

TechWell 1999 was co-sponsored by the Student Recreation Center and Student Health Services.

Booths representing all aspects of wellness were setup, each providing activities or games for participants to play.

Stacy Buffins, a senior nursing major from Dallas, attended the fair representing Delta Sigma Theta, who sponsored a booth quizzing people on black history.

"Since it's Black History Month, we decided to have a black history booth," Buffins said. "Some people are here for extra credit, and others will stop when I tell them they can win a piece of candy."

Other booths concentrated on eating nutritious meals.

Paul Cooley, an exercise sports and science graduate student from Copperas Cove, discussed the importance of milk in students' diets.

"I think it's very important (to inform students about wellness)," Cooley said. "We all know about the 'freshman 15' where new students in the dorms are eating whatever and not looking at what they're eating. They don't know which foods are good for them."

Cooley said sometimes students are unaware of what to eat and the importance of good eating.

"They don't take into consideration how important it is for their well-being," Cooley said.

Elizabeth Finch, a sports health graduate student from Dalhart, said students should be informed about healthy eating for everyday life in school.

"It's very important to be healthy, just from personal experience," Finch said. "Since I started eating healthy, I have a lot more energy since I work during the day and for class at night."

Students who attended the fair said they were drawn to the fair to learn more about how they can live a healthier life.

Veronica Mena, a freshman College of Arts and Sciences major from Arlington, said she just happened to be there but was fascinated with the information she learned.

"I liked the computer that tells you the calories and fat you should take in a day," Mena said.

Czarina Caturay, a freshman pre-medical major from Duncanville, said she liked the nutritional aspects.

"Honestly, the things with the food are really attractive," Caturay said. "It helps you see what kind of food and calories you should consume."

In addition to healthy eating and drinking habits, the fair also promoted healthy living. Prevent Blindness Texas sponsored a booth, which provided glaucoma screening.

Sandy Bains with Prevent Blindness Texas said although glaucoma is usually associated with older people, it is just as important for college students to get screened also.

She was also impressed with Tech students' interest in wellness.

"It's wonderful," Bains said of the fair. "These young folks are so nice and they're not afraid to try something, especially concerning health."

Brian White/The University Daily

The pressure is on: Lad Rack, a junior environmental conservation major from Houston, has his blood pressure checked at the Health Fair presented at the Student Recreational Center. Student Health Services and the rec center presented the fair on Tuesday.

"I think it's very important (to inform students about wellness)."

Mortar board accepting spring semester applications

By Lisa Marie Lachmann
Staff Writer

With the start of the spring semester, the Forum Chapter of Mortar Board will begin its annual membership drive.

The board annually looks for new recruits to keep their membership number at 40.

The board is made up of the top 40 seniors based on GPA and campus involvement.

This semester, the board is looking for six to eight new members. Mortar Board membership requirements consist of an overall 3.0 GPA, a minimum of 90 hours by fall 1999 and a graduation date no earlier than December.

Mortar Board is an active national senior honor society devoted to serving Texas Tech and the Lubbock community.

Service, leadership, and scholarship are the main factors in being selected for the board.

The Mortar Board provides opportunities for continued development in education and promotes lifelong contributions to global community.

In the early 1930s, the Forum was an all women's senior honorary organization.

Following the lead of the national organization, the Forum Chapter began accepting men in 1975.

The Mortar Board sponsors such activities as Apple Polishing, Faculty Recognition Week and Chancellor for a Day.

Chancellor for a Day is designed to raise funds for a Presidential Endowed Scholarship.

Ben Trotter, Mortar Board adviser, praises them to be a most outstanding organization.

"Mortar Board services the community with one major project a year and has raised $2,000 to $3,000 in foundation funding a year," Trotter said.

Stephanie Smith, a senior family financial planning major from Lubbock, said being a member of the Mortar Board has given her a lot of opportunities.

"It (the Mortar Board) has opened up a lot of opportunities for me,"

Smith said.

"It has encouraged me to become more involved and continues to improve my leadership skills."

Smith also said the board is very diverse.

"The board is very international,"

Smith said.

"You're meeting people that you wouldn't normally meet."

Application for membership will be available in the Dean of Students Office, room 250 West Hall or the Student Government Association office in the University Center.

Due date for application is 5 p.m. Feb. 5.

Library should monitor visitors

I used to pride myself on the length of time between my visits to the library.

My record is 11 months, set way back during my freshman year when getting an A in my classes consisted of going to class every now and again, taking some sparse notes and skimming the book.

But about two years ago, research papers, presentations and projects began grabbing me by the collar and yanking me, kicking and screaming, into the library.

Hollye Hodges
Columnist

I am a regular library user now. Not to brag or anything, but I have about a 19 percent success rate in my searches for an article or book that will be of any use to me.

So, the other day I was in the library basement doing a periodical search on the computer when a group of three fellow computer users sat down to work on the computers behind me.

Their collective smell brought tears to my eyes.

Their names were Stinky, Smelly and Dirty — the long lost illegitimate, orphan brothers of the better smelling, more hygienic seven dwarfs.

Sadly, these three appeared homeless, and at first, I was just glad they had a place to go to get out of the cold.

They each had a bag chucked full of clothes and books and some other stuff I don't even want to think about.

Just as I was beginning to get used to their lovely mixture of body odor and filth, these guys began surfing the web.

The oldest of three was probably 55 and couldn't contain his excitement when he "hooked up" with a "chickadee" from Finland.

The other two giggled like school girls when their elder's computer date logged off without saying goodbye.

I was in the library basement almost an hour and a half, and all three were still hunting and pecking away at the keyboard when I left.

I contacted the Dean of Libraries Dale Cluff, to find out if the library has a policy on removing guys like Stinky, Smelly and Dirty.

Although library administrators said they hope the computers are used for student and faculty research and study, they let anyone use the facilities.

Dean Cluff said dress cannot be a factor in limiting library access.

I agree. But what about requiring all users pay library fees or at least pay taxes?

If this doesn't work, maybe they could fall back on the traditional sniff test.

So, be sure to wash up before your next trip to the library.

READERS ASK

BY JO HENDERSON, STUDENT HEALTH SERVICES HEALTH EDUCATION COORDINATOR

I don't see anything wrong with a joint every now and then, and I hear that you only get a little hand slap here if you're caught anyway. Is that right?

No, that is wrong. If you are caught in possession of a drug other than alcohol, you automatically are referred to the Dean of Students Office.

There you have the possibility of having to appear before the University Discipline Committee, who determines if you remain a student at this school or not. If they expel you, the suspension appears on your transcript until the suspension period ends.

You must then request the information be removed from your transcript upon your return to the university. Removal from your transcript doesn't automatically happen.

As to your future plans, if you are thinking about a career in law, medicine, the military, FBI, CIA or another government job, just remember many of these places require you to sign a release for information wherein they can check your disciplinary record at your college or university. If you sign a release and the Dean of Students Office has a file that shows you were caught with drugs, then you may have to alter your plans for a future career because the door slams shut in your face. What appears as "fun" or "no big deal" can really screw up your life, so use those critical thinking skills we are teaching you here to judge what you choose to do.

I have been wondering about birth control. What is the cost here at Tech compared to a place such as Planned Parenthood? And do both places use "good stuff," not the cheap stuff?

Birth control pills sold at the Pharmacy of Student Health Services in Thompson Hall cost between $8 and $12.50 per month.

All birth control pills sold at Student Health are brand name medications and not generic brands. You would need to contact Planned Parenthood or any other places on your own to ask questions about costs and the use of brand name medications.

With all the education on breast health, how many women are still dying each year from breast cancer?

The number of women expected to die of breast cancer this year is 44,300. So ladies, do those monthly breast exams a week after your period ends each month. You can get a breast exam shower card at Student Health in Thompson Hall.

I bought some window washer fluid the other day for my car, and now, every time it squirts on cold mornings, it freezes. I thought this stuff was supposed to be freeze-proof?

Check the label to make sure your winter washer fluid contains either glycol or methanol to keep it from freezing. You probably bought a product that is a summer formula. Sometimes these products look and cost the same, but the ingredients make the difference.

My friend's dad died last week, and I have avoided him because I don't know what to say. They were real close. What can I do?

From the book "The Art of Condolence," suggested things not to say are: "You must get back with your life," "You're not the first person this has happened to," "I know exactly what you're going through," "It's better this way" and "It's a blessing in disguise." Some things you could say are: "I'm at a loss for what to say, but I know this must be difficult for you," "I'm so sorry" or "Do you feel like talking?"

I got a nosebleed the other day. How do you stop that?

You didn't indicate how it started. If you get a nosebleed after a hard blow to the head, go to the hospital right away because you may have fractured your skull. If the bleeding just starts on its own with no apparent reason, sit down in a chair and breath through your mouth while you lean forward a little in order for the blood to drip out of the front of your nose and not down your throat. Next, pinch the lower part of your nostrils shut for 8-12 minutes. You can apply an ice pack to your nose to help. Finally, release your nostrils slowly. To keep from starting the bleeding again, take it easy and don't over exert yourself. You want to touch your nose with care, avoid blowing your nose or bending over or taking aspirin. You need to repeat the procedure if bleeding continues. Also, if bleeding is still hard to stop after using these steps, see a health care professional.

Too much time spent waiting in life

Kevin Preas
Columnist

As you well know, I like to notice things. I notice things, and then I write them here every week for you to enjoy.

Here's what I've got for you this week.

Since school has started there has been a continuing theme of waiting in line. People are waiting in line for add/drop, financial aid (after last week I think, we all know how I feel about that), and this past weekend we were waiting for snow. Since September, we had been waiting for the Super Bowl.

I'm still waiting to graduate. You know what, I'm sick and tired of waiting.

Yeah, I know there are some things you just can't hurry up, but there are some things that I should not have to wait for.

Not that my time is any more important than anyone else's. There are just some things we should not have to wait for.

Have you ever pulled up to the intersection at 19th Street and Brownfield Highway, running late for class, or a meeting or even just trying to get to the bar, and you catch the train. And you wait, and wait, and wait and wait. There is nothing worse than waiting for a train. Just when you think you see a caboose, here comes more cars.

Does that not piss you off?

Why is there a railroad track running through the middle of the city? Why do they run the train during the morning rush? Who sends things by train anyway these days? We do have automobiles now.

I don't know the answer to these questions.

Hell, I just thought of them while

I was waiting for the train to pass.

Where else I hate to wait?

A fast food restaurant.

Have you ever had to wait in line for more than 10 minutes at a fast food place?

People get plain mean. I'm not talking about the people in line, I'm talking about the people working there.

I was in a restaurant the other day, not naming names (Subway), and I had to wait 30 minutes for my six-inch "cold-cut combo."

The lady who was making my sandwich was flashing dirty looks to everyone in line.

Hey, it's not my fault you work at a fast food restaurant (Subway) and can't make a sandwich, but it's your job.

Deal with it. Quit your job.

Do anything, but don't give me a dirty look and don't make me wait.

The whole moral of this column is not that waiting sucks, but that there is no reason for us to wait for some things — if they were properly planned. Change the financial aid system — no waiting. Re-route trains around heavy traffic times — no waiting. Hire people to work in your store who are competent — no waiting.

It's like a great man once told me, always remember the 5 P's — Proper Planning Prevents Piss Poor Performance. Thank you Tim.

Hope you can make it through the week without any unnecessary waiting.

Until next time — when I find something else to go off on.

Rebels refuse to attend peace talks

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia (AP) — U.S. and European envoys failed Monday to win a commitment from Kosovo's rebels to attend peace talks described as the "last chance" for the combatants to resolve their differences.

In another sign the talks are far from a done deal, President Slobodan Milosevic's government in Belgrade announced that the hard-line Serbian parliament will decide Thursday whether the Serbs will show up for Saturday's conference in Rambouillet, France.

Hard-liners loyal to Milosevic and ultranationalists led by Vojislav Seselj hold a majority in the legislature, which last year resoundingly rejected foreign mediation of the Kosovo conflict.

Seselj repeated his opposition to the conference Monday despite threats from NATO to negotiate peace or face allied airstrikes.

Deputy Yugoslav Premier Vuk Draskovic said, however, that "I believe our response must be 'Yes.'"

"The whole world wants us to go, and to say 'No' would mean working to our own detriment," Draskovic said.

In the Kosovo capital of Pristina, the representative of the Kosovo Liberation Army, Adem Demaci, met for more than an hour with American and European envoys. Still, the rebels would not commit to attending the talks.

U.S. envoy Christopher Hill said Demaci promised an answer by Wednesday.

Last week, the United States and five major European powers summoned the warring sides to the conference table by Saturday to negotiate an end to the 11-month conflict. The solution was based on a U.S. formula that would grant Kosovo expanded autonomy but not independence for a three-year period.

After that, the parties could review the status of Kosovo, a province in Yugoslavia's main republic of Serbia. Ethnic Albanians make up 90 percent of Kosovo's 2 million people, and the majority want independence.

In Washington, Secretary of State Madeleine Albright briefed President Clinton on Monday on the outlook for a negotiated settlement. She has already begun discussing with members of Congress the potential use of thousands of U.S. ground troops to keep any Kosovo peace agreement.

Meeting given to promote census

By Apu Naik
Staff Writer

Lubbock city officials met Tuesday evening with members of Texas Tech and the regional director of the United States Census Bureau to determine what steps need to be taken in order to ensure that the 2000 census does not result in an under count similar to that of 1990.

Al Mirabal, the regional director of the U.S. Census Bureau, spoke of the important role the 2000 census will play in accounting for state and federal funding, as well as commending Lubbock's efforts to ensure an accurate count.

"The preparedness I've seen in Lubbock is exceptional, even unusual," Mirabal said.

Mirabal, who is in charge of counting three states, went on to note that since the census of 1970, when there was a response by 85 percent of Americans, census under counts have increased substantially. In 1990, only 65 percent of Americans returned their census forms by mail.

David Buckberry, the Complete Count Committee's director, said in 1990, Lubbock County had an overall non-response rate of 29.4 percent, considerably higher than the national average of 25.3 percent.

And after evaluating the data from the 1990 census, Buckberry found sections of Lubbock with the highest percentages of renters and minorities had the lowest census response rates.

The higher rate of non-response with renters can be attributed to the fact college students make up 15 percent of the city's population compared to the national average of 7 percent among other cities, Buckberry said.

Because of this, the CCC faces the task of trying to improve the response levels of those areas of Lubbock.

And because Tech students make up a large percentage of that renting population, three members of the CCC were assigned to faculty members of the university.

"Students who live both on and off campus are counted within the population of Lubbock because they are here throughout the majority of the year and when the census is taken they are here," Buckberry said.

The city's CCC is composed of 19 local officials who were selected because of their respect within the community and their influence over gaining support for the census.

Tech News and Publications Associate Director Michael Sommermeyer, Health Sciences Center News and Publications Associate Director John Walls, and Yung-Mei Tsai, a professor of sociology, were selected to help stimulate support for the 2000 census among Tech students.

Sommermeyer said making sure Tech students are counted accurately is definitely important for the census because they automatically make up 25,000 of Lubbock's citizens.

One of the main goals of the CCC is to make everyone in the community aware of Census 2000, and one method the group has adopted to tackle this problem is through the discussion of statistical area programs, or activities implemented to improve census participation.

Some ideas the CCC is considering is advertising census information on Tech's campus through outlets such as The University Daily, the Citibus routes on campus and other various sections of the university.

In high minority areas, the city will target schools, churches and neighborhood associations to promote participation in the census.

“Students who live both on and off campus are counted ...”

Marketing Association sponsors internship fair

The Marketing Association sponsored a marketing internship fair for junior and senior marketing majors Tuesday. Associate Professor Patrick Dunne helped with the planning and running of the fair. Dunne said the students have to go through the Career Planning and Placement office to apply for the internships.

"The (fair) is a trial run of what will happen your senior year," Dunne said.

Ten companies participated in the fair, including Southwest Coca-Cola Bottling Co., Walgreens, Dillard's and J.C. Penney. The internships that the companies offer consist of 10-12-week training programs. Although the internships are not all exactly alike, they follow a similar structure, Dunne said.

"The internships are really meant to give you experience like you went through the company training program," Dunne said.

Assistant Professor Debra Anne Laverie said the College of Business only accepts paid internships. The interns can earn a salary and if they are involved in sales, they can earn commission. The internships usually take place during one semester of school, although some are offered during the summer.

"We normally do not let interns go to school while doing the internship," Dunne said.

Last year, 21 out of the 23 interns were hired at the company they interned at.

"The internships program is for the students to gain experience in a marketing job," Laverie said.

Senators unenthusiastic about live Lewinsky testimony, Jordan questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators got their first chance to see Monica Lewinsky's videotaped testimony Tuesday and came away underwhelmed, seemingly dimming the chance that she will be called to the Senate floor. Presidential friend Vernon Jordan was questioned in a new deposition.

Clinton
none of Lewinsky.

While the Lewinsky tapes were being played at four closed Capitol sites for senators and their aides — printed transcripts were available as well — House prosecutors were questioning Jordan in a secure room elsewhere in the building about his assistance for the onetime White House intern.

The Jordan deposition was contentious at times, according to sources familiar with the deposition. White House lawyers asked two questions at the end after asking none of Lewinsky.

On one issue of possible conflict, Jordan adamantly denied he ever asked Lewinsky to destroy drafts of love letters to Clinton, the sources said. Lewinsky has previously testified he told her, "Go home and make sure they're not there."

Jordan's appearance aside, much of the talk at the Capitol was about Lewinsky, who had been questioned on tape a day earlier.

"Based on what my staff told me, there is nothing new. If there in fact is nothing new, I would not expect her to be called" to testify in person, said Robert Bennett, a Republican from Utah.

And Larry Craig of Idaho, a member of the Republican leadership, responded "probably not" when asked whether there was anything to be gained in calling Lewinsky to appear before the Senate after the trial resumes Thursday.

If the Senate's 45 Democrats oppose live testimony, as expected, only six Republicans would have to join them to move the trial toward beginning closing arguments as early as this weekend. The goal of both parties is to vote on the perjury and obstruction of justice charges by Feb. 12.

One Republican senator who viewed the Lewinsky videotape, Orrin Hatch of Utah, said he believed it would be helpful to have her testify in person.

"It's far better for the public to meet her and make up their own minds," Hatch said. "Personally, I found her to be young, vulnerable and credible. I think she'd make a very effective witness."

And the House prosecutors kept up their push.

"It will be our intention to request live witnesses," said head prosecutor

Henry Hyde, R-Ill., but none beyond the three providing depositions. Hyde said the Lewinsky and Jordan testimony had "strengthened some points" of the prosecution case.

Evan Bayh, D-Ind., after watching the tape, suggested the decision on whether to call her to testify wasn't a major issue. "It won't rank among the great constitutional struggles in the history of our country," he said.

Craig, while not expecting Lewinsky to be called in person, said that if all or portions of the videotape were shown "in no way would it offend the sensibilities of the American people, nor would it offend the decorum of the Senate."

Separately, senators and the White House were talking about a Republican proposal to allow some sort of trial statement that would declare Clinton had done wrong but would not remove him from office.

That found no favor among the Clinton defenders. Such a "finding of facts," said White House press secretary Joe Lockhart, "violates directly the Constitution."

Lockhart said such a statement or a censure resolution, which would need only a simple majority, should be separate from the trial — which should end with a vote requiring a two-thirds majority for conviction. Democrats have demonstrated in several votes that they have the strength to keep the Republicans well short of the 67 votes needed.

Double T Crew taking applications for leaders

By Misty Reed
Staff Writer

The Double T Crew is accepting applications for the 1999-2000 school year.

Students on Double T Crew work to prepare for and lead Double T Days to welcome freshmen and transfer students as well as help them with the transitions they experience as they enter Texas Tech.

Trey Hattaway, director of new student orientations, said students applying must have one constant characteristic — a love for Texas Tech.

"We want a representative group of students," Hattaway said. "They need to be able to relate to students from big or small towns. They need to be able to relate to transfer students, and students of different ethnicities."

Hattaway said ideally the Double T Crew would have representatives from each college.

In order to apply, one must be enrolled full-time during this semester, be in good standing — academic and disciplinary, have a 2.5 GPA, and have completed at least 12 hours of course work at Tech.

In addition, students must have strong communication and speaking skills, creativity, sense of humor, self-motivation and sincere concern for others.

The application process consists of two phases. During Phase

1, students submit a brief letter of application; a resume highlighting campus and community leadership, awards and recognitions; names, titles and telephone numbers of two faculty or staff members as references; a demographic information sheet available in 154 West Hall.

Phase 2 involves an interview in early March that will focus on communication and decision-making skills, as well as personal and professional experiences.

"Students must have a willingness to answer questions and work long hours," Hattaway said. "With students working, there is a more fresh, honest opinion."

Double T Days are designed to help incoming students learn more about the Tech campus.

"During Double T Days I learned where all the buildings were, and I found out many interesting things about Texas Tech's history," said Ryan Biggerstaff, a sophomore electrical engineering transfer student from Wichita Falls. "It was a helpful experience. I plan to apply for Double T Crew."

Students selected for Double T Crew will begin training in April. Members will receive room accommodations in Hulen/Clement during training and conferences. The salary is $1,500.

All applicants will be notified of their final application status by mail the week of March 8, 1999.

DeLay questioned in scandal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aides to House Majority Whip Tom DeLay, assailing reports questioning the truthfulness of statements he made in a civil deposition, on Tuesday attributed the controversy to the congressman's "political enemies."

DeLay himself remained tight-lipped about questions that have been raised in connection with a deposition he gave in 1994 in a lawsuit filed against him in Texas by a former business partner.

The Texas Republican is among President Clinton's harshest critics in Congress and was the first high-ranking GOP leader to call for Clinton's resignation. DeLay has been particularly critical of Clinton's statements under oath about the Monica Lewinsky affair.

In the Texas legal proceeding, DeLay testified that he had not been an officer of Albo Pest Control Co. for two or three years. But three months after the deposition, DeLay listed himself on congressional financial disclosure forms as Albo's chairman.

DeLay's deposition came in a lawsuit by ex-partner Robert Blankenship, who alleged that DeLay and another partner unjustly cut him out of the pest control business. The lawsuit ended in a confidential settlement in 1995.

"Frankly, it's my opinion he lied to me under oath," DeNisco added.

Corea and Burton jazz up Tech

By Laura Hensley
Staff Writer

Jazz musicians, Gary Burton and Chick Corea, are caught in a crossfire of conversation the moment they step on stage together. But instead of exchanging words or ideas, they exchange a musical connection that is rare to come by in the world of music.

They just click. "We think as much alike as we play," Burton said. "With Chick I have had the highest level of musical connection I have ever experienced. With us it's almost on the mind-reading level."

A nearly capacity-sized audience got caught in the sporadic tunes of the jazz duo Tuesday at the University Allen Theatre. As the unique two-some banged out original works on the piano and vibraphone, music fans from all genres enjoyed the bright rhythms and beats.

of conversation," Burton said before the show. "If you have a group of people it's like a panel discussion, each person takes turns giving their view on a topic. If you are giving a speech by yourself, you are lecturing to the audience. But a duet is like two friends having a real intense one-on-one conversation."

Corea and Burton's musical chemistry glowed on stage. The two exchanged bright smiles and encouraging words during the double set show and played tunes from both their old and new repertoires.

"Part of our mind is on what we are doing and communicating with each other and part of it is concentrating on what we are sending out to the audience," Burton said. "We feed off of each other."

The duo first performed together in 1972 at the Munich Jazz Festival. Since that performance they have performed together on several tours and have made five albums together. Two of the albums earned the pair a set of Grammy Awards.

"Writing the music is a pretty easy thing," Corea said. "I just trust my imagination and let it roll. It's the only thing in life where something comes from absolutely nothing."

The music on their latest recording, "Native Sense" was written mostly by Corea. It is their first collaborate effort in 14 years.

Lubbock native had superstar potential, fans around globe

"Of the three, there is no question in my mind Buddy Holly was the one who had a superstar career cut short," Martin said.

Martin believes Holly would have been another Elvis Presley or Roy Orbison if he had been able to continue producing music.

"He had hit after hit, and he was extremely well-known for a guy who died at 22," he said.

"Buddy: The Buddy Holly Music Story" has been a running stage play in London for more than a decade, becoming a staple of the West End theater.

The 1979 movie "The Buddy Holly Story" was a hit and earned actor Gary Busey an Oscar nomination.

People all around the world, especially in England and Australia, are Buddy Holly fans.

Many people travel thousands of miles to Lubbock to attend the Buddy Holly Music Festival every year.

Globally, fans and musicians recognized Holly's achievements, but the city of Lubbock never did until five years ago.

"Up until five years ago, the city of Lubbock and the citizens didn't know who Buddy Holly was," Martin said.

"That's a shame. He was extremely well-known in Europe. He had more fans in England than in Texas."

The situation reminded Martin of an old saying. A prophet is never known in his own land.

Old house becomes like new after restorations

GREENVILLE (AP) — These days, most people drive right on past the place, on their way either to or from downtown Greenville.

Those who do notice the house, which has stood for more than 100 years, likely don't realize its significance among the city's earliest homes.

But Milton Babb knows. His family built the house at 3403 Lee Street in the late 1800s and he visited there often when he was child. Babb recently purchased the home and has set about on a restoration effort.

Renovating the home and the area surrounding it has been something of an obsession for Babb for more than 25 years.

In 1975, Babb, then a student at Greenville High School, wrote a historical essay about the home, utilizing interviews conducted with surviving members of the Germany family. The piece was later published in the Herald Banner.

A quarter-century later, in October of last year, Babb purchased the home and began a project which he hopes will eventually turn into the "Lee-Washington Historic Corridor Association". Babb's dream is to interest local homeowners and businesses into collaborating in an overall restoration campaign for the section of town which will be fed by a planned expansion of State Highway 380.

Babb has chosen his family's home as a personal starting point and has since conducted a thorough investigation into its history.

Joseph P. Germany built the "Second Empire" style home in 1886, after purchasing the lot, which at one time belonged to Greenville founding father M. H. Wright, three years earlier.

The home was owned and occupied by members of the Germany family until 1977 and Babb remembers his Uncle Frank and Aunt Sybil lived there when he visited.

The sentiment is experienced most strongly as Babb climbs the original wood stairs leading to the bedrooms on the second floor.

Babb has lots of stories to tell about the home, whether taken from the extensive research he has conducted or culled from his own nostalgia. While Babb understands the days of the nickel trolley are long gone, he believes a little of the same distinction can be brought back.

"It would be easy to walk along these two streets and just despair at the condition they are in today if you didn't imagine what it was like 75 or 100 years ago and what it could be like again," Babb said.

NFL great Payton has rare liver disease

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — NFL Hall of Fame running back Walter Payton has a rare liver disease and is being placed on a list to receive a transplant. He tearfully asked fans to pray for him.

The 44-year-old retired Chicago Bears running back said he called a news conference today to announce his illness because of the speculation about his obvious weight loss.

He appeared gaunt at his son Jarrett's news conference last week to announce he would play football for the University of Miami.

"Right now, I'm still healthy, even though I look like I've lost weight," Payton said. His doctor said patients in his condition survive an average of two years unless they receive a transplant.

The cause of the disease — primary sclerosing cholangitis — is not known. However, it is not related to alcohol, steroids, hepatitis or any kind of immunodeficiency disease, said Payton's physician, Dr. Joseph Lagattuta.

The disease, which blocks the bile ducts and leads to cirrhosis, manifests itself with fatigue, followed by yellow in the pigment of the eyes and skin, he said.

Lagattuta said the one-year survival rate after a transplant was about 90 percent.

Red Raiders try to tame Tigers

By Jeff Keller
Staff Writer

Unable to pick up a win at home against Oklahoma Saturday, the Texas Tech men's basketball team (10-11 overall 2-6 Big 12) will try to put an end to their four-game losing streak on the road against the Missouri Tigers (15-4 overall 6-2 Big 12) at 7 p.m. today in Columbia, Mo.

The losing streak is the longest regular season losing streak for the Red Raiders since the 1990-91 season where Tech lost its last six games of the regular season.

Lack of confidence is what has plagued the Red Raiders in their current streak, said forward Cliff Owens.

"I don't know exactly when we lost our confidence," Owens said. "It's not good enough to play teams close in the conference, you actually have to win. We haven't been able to put together a string of two good halves in a game yet. So, therefore, we haven't been able to win against Big 12 quality opponents."

If the Red Raiders are to end their losing streak against the Tigers, they are going to have to do it against a team that is on a roll.

The Tigers have won three-straight contests, a streak which began with a win at Kansas. Missouri became the first Big 12 school to beat the Jayhawks at Allen Fieldhouse.

Tech holds the lead in the all-time series winning three of the five contests between the schools, including an 80-60 defeat of the Tigers last season.

The Red Raiders will need a sound effort on offense and defense if they are to repeat last year's success against the Tigers, Owens said.

"It's a winnable game," Owens said. "We're going to have to play well at both ends of the court. But top to bottom in the Big 12, there's really no team that is unbeatable. So, we're just going to have to go up there and play how we're capable of playing."

Tech has gone to the free-throw line 57 times in the last four games connecting on 36 of the 57 attempts.

In their last outing against Oklahoma, the Red Raiders went to the charity stripe only 15 times, converting on nine of them.

Tech coach James Dickey said he would like to see his team at the charity stripe more often.

"You ought to get to the free-throw line more than we're getting there," Dickey said. "We only got there 15 times (against Oklahoma). As much as we emphasize trying to drive and play physical inside, we need to get to the free-throw line. That's not a criticism of the officials. That's lack of aggressive play on our part."

After four straight losses, the confidence level is not easy to measure on the Red Raider squad, said forward Mario Layne.

"It's hard to say what our confidence level is now," Layne said. "Confidence is relative. If you're not winning, your confidence goes down. But if you're winning a lot, your confidence goes up. I think we just need to get one win to get the monkey off of our back and hopefully that will be up in Missouri."

A win on the road against Missouri would be a confidence builder for the Red Raiders, said center Andy Ellis.

Twenty-one games into the season, the Red Raiders have tasted victory only once on the road.

"It would be a good victory," Ellis said. "Any victory in the Big 12 is a good one. But this one being on the road and we've only won one road game this year. That would be a big thing. It would just get us out of a slump, and that's maybe what we need to get back on the right track."

Wade Kennedy/The University Daily
Maybe Next Time: Tech center Andy Ellis will try his luck with the rest of the Red Raiders against Missouri at 7 p.m. today in Columbia, Mo.

Padres continue World Series discount

CINCINNATI (AP) — Figuring they couldn't afford Greg Vaughn beyond this season, the San Diego Padres traded him Tuesday for Reggie Sanders and a couple of Cincinnati Reds minor leaguers.

The five-player deal gave the National League champions an often-injured outfielder and another parallel with the Florida Marlins, who split up their World Series team shortly after their title in 1997.

The Padres also gave up pinch-hit specialist Mark Sweeney and received middle infielder Damian Jackson, who has spent the last three seasons at Triple-A, and right-hander Josh Harris, who pitched at Class A last season.

Since San Diego got swept by the New York Yankees in the World Series, it has given up or lost Kevin Brown, Ken Caminiti, Steve Finley, Joey Hamilton and now Vaughn, who set a club record with 50 homers last season. Vaughn will make $5.75 million — $850,000 of it deferred — in the final year of his three-year contract.

"They're cutting payroll there. They're doing similar to what the Marlins are doing, really," Reds general manager Jim Bowden said.

"All we've been trying to do is get younger," Padres general manager Kevin Towers said. "We've achieved that with Reggie and Damian. The thing that's most appealing is we're able to control Reggie for another year (2000) and Vaughn, we don't know if we could."

Sanders makes $3.7 million this season and his contract has a team option for 2000 at $3.7 million.

San Diego approached the Reds about Vaughn last Thursday and requested Sanders, who doesn't fit in the Reds' long-term planning. When the Padres declined to make up some of the $2 million difference in salary, Bowden lobbied Reds managing executive John Allen to go over budget to make the deal.

"It's a great baseball trade. We just had to evaluate all of the factors," Allen said.

At least temporarily, the trade fills the Reds' biggest hole. They hit only 138 homers last season, 12th in the NL, and traded Bret Boone, their leader with 24, to Atlanta in a deal that brought left-hander Denny Neagle to Cincinnati.

Bowden hopes the trade increases ticket sales enough so the Reds can keep Vaughn for the entire season. If not, they have another marquee player to trade in July for prospects.

"I think with the moves we made, we can compete," Bowden said. "I'm not saying we can overtake Houston or Atlanta or Los Angeles. But I don't see why we can't compete on a daily basis with the next set of clubs."

Vaughn, 33, was one of four players to hit 50 homers last season, his best in the majors. He initially was a disappointment when the Padres got him from Milwaukee in 1996, batting a career-low .216 with 18 homers a year later.

"I wish I could look into a crystal ball and say he would hit 50 home runs again," Towers said. "What we're looking at is to try to balance this club out a little more with guys who are offensive and defensive players and add some speed to this club."

Sanders, 31, once was the brightest prospect in the Reds' farm system. He had a breakthrough season in 1995, hitting .306 with a career-high 28 homers and 99 RBIs as the Reds reached the playoffs.

He hit only .138 in the postseason, striking out 19 times in 29 at-bats, and the Reds were swept by Atlanta in the NL championship series. Cincinnati started cutting payroll after that season and has not been to the playoffs since.

Tech fastpitch ready for Big 12 run

By Brent Dirks
Staff Writer

This year, the Texas Tech fastpitch softball squad isn't going to wait for an invitation to the NCAA Tournament — they plan to earn one.

"Part of what hurt with not getting an invitation last year was that we beat six of the top 10 teams in the country, and we went 7-3 the last 10 games of the season," said Tech coach Renee Luers-Gillispie, whose team last season finished in the top 25 with a 45-19 record but failed to earn a tournament invitation.

"Basically, we're not waiting for a vote this year. Our goal is to be able to prove ourselves first—thing by winning the conference, and then we get the chance to automatically go into the regional."

And, Luers-Gillispie is returning a strong foundation to help achieve that goal.

Only one starter from last year's squad, catcher Jessica Karenke, will not return for the Red Raiders after graduating.

Beyond replacing Karenke, third baseman Kim Martinez returns to the Red Raiders this season after spending a season with the Lady

File Photo

Hop, Step and a Bunt: Tech outfielder Sandy Butler is one of 15 returning players from last year's squad. The Red Raiders open play Saturday at New Mexico.

Raider basketball squad.

In 1997, Martinez led the Big 12 in batting averages while earning all-region and second-team All-Big 12 honors.

"We've got two junior college catchers to replace Karenke, and they're going to make us that much better," Luers-Gillispie said. "And with Kim Martinez coming back with her stick and at third base, that will be good news for us right now."

The Red Raiders start their 1999 season Saturday and Sunday against New Mexico in Albuquerque, N.M. The Big 12 season begins for Tech March 27 against Baylor in Waco.

"We probably have one of the toughest schedules in the country this season," Luers-Gillispie said.

In 1996, Tech finished 4-4 overall and 1-20 in the first season of the Big 12. That record quickly improved to 34-29-1 overall and 1-13 in conference play in 1997. Last year's squad completed a 10-7 conference record to build off of.

"A lot of it is being able to work together for two years," Luers-Gillispie said. "Most of these girls we've had for two, and some even three years together. Any time you can keep the girls that long, they continue to get better."

A change for the Red Raiders this year will be their home facility.

After calling the Berl Huffman Complex home for the past three seasons, the team will use the Tech intramural softball fields for home games this season.

During the 2000 season, the squad will use the on-campus softball stadium. Construction on the new stadium is slated for later this year.

All-Nighter Winners

Team individual tournament winners at Friday's Rec Sports All-Nighter are as follows. The indoor soccer winners were Mushii. N.S.K. claimed the men's three on three basketball championship while Whatchamacallers won the women's. All That won the two on two co-rec basketball. Larry Howard claimed the three point shot championship, Matthew Sellers the table tennis, David and Jason the spades tournament and Kathy Suchy the women's racquetball. Kurt Shirkey won the men's A racquetball division and Harry Jackson the B racquetball division. Recreational Sports thanks all the students that participated and made the 19th annual All-Nighter successful.

Spaces open for kayaking workshop

Sign-up now for the kayaking workshop that can change your life. This workshop will meet five Thursdays starting on Feb. 18 and will culminate with a weekend of whitewater kayaking in the Hill Country near San Marcos. This workshop will teach you the essential information and skill to help your development on becoming a competent paddler. The workshop is only $110. This includes the five classroom/pool sessions and the weekend trip. Spaces are filling up quickly, so register soon to assure yourself a spot.

To register stop by room 206 in the Student Rec Center or call 742-3351 for more information.

If you are hesitant about signing-up for the class, try the one time kayaking pool session on Feb. 4 at 5 p.m. This session cost only $3 and will give you a taste of what the sport of kayaking is all about.

Workshop offered about fly fishing

The Outdoor Program is offering for the first time a multi-session workshop on fly fishing. This class will be taught by a local expert and will meet on four Wednesday nights at 5:15 p.m. beginning Feb. 10. This class is intended to introduce outdoor enthusiasts to the sport and art of fly fishing. Participants will gain essential information for their development as a fly fisher.

Not only will they receive hands-on casting instruction, but will also learn about equipment, knots an fly selection. The cost to attend this workshop is only $20, so register early to assure yourself a spot in this class.

To register stop room 206 in the SRC or call 742-3351 for more information.

Watch Out Below! A student is ready to pounce on an adversary during the Rec Center All-Nighter Sumo Wrestling contest. Tech students enjoyed an evening of varied activities Friday at the 19th annual event including hypnotist Tom DeLuca.

Fitness Motivators for February

The Fitness and Wellness Center has several activities to get you motivated to workout.

Cholesterol Screening will be held tomorrow morning from 6:40 a.m. to 8:30 a.m. This is a total lipid profile and the results include total cholesterol, HDL, LDL and triglyceride counts. Blood is drawn by the University Medical Center technicians. The cost is $8 for the lipid profile and $2 for a glucose screening. Please register by today at noon by calling 742-3828. Payment is due tomorrow morning.

Entries for the annual Ironman Triathlon Challenge are due Friday. You have 15 days, Feb. 6 through 21, to complete the Ironman distances — 2.5 mile swim, 112 mile cycle and 26.2 mile run. The cost is $8.

A Circuit Workshop will be held Saturday at 2 p.m. Learn how to use the Circuit Room (selectorized weight) equipment. The cost is $2. This will be repeated Feb. 11 at 8 p.m.

The Annual Pre-Valentine's Day Run is Feb. 13 at 11 a.m. This is a Co-Rec Predicted Time Run where couples predict one total time and individual times are added together. The couple closest to their predicted time as well as the fastest couple win coupons from Orlando's restaurants. Individuals are encouraged to run. Two more coupons will be given away through a drawing after the race. Come and enjoy this two mile run.

A Marathon Workshop, for those interested in running a marathon, will be held by the Rec Center Feb. 15 at 4 p.m. Learn how to train to successfully complete the race. For more information on any of these activities, please call 742-3828.

Outdoor Program needs student staff

The Outdoor Program is looking to hire staff to work in the rental, climbing wall, workshop and trip programs.

This is a great opportunity for anyone looking for a learning experience in leadership and the outdoor field. Fliers about the jobs are available in the Outdoor Program in Room 206 in the Recreation Center.

Basketball schedules ready for pick up

The Intramural Basketball League schedules will be ready after 2 p.m. today. Come by room 202 in the Student Recreation Center, to pick up the schedule for you and your team.

It is important that you know who, when and where your team is playing.

For more information contact the intramural office at 742-3351

Innertube water polo registration ends tomorrow

Intramural innertube water polo for men, women and co-rec sign ups will be the highlight sports for intramurals this week.

Entries for these activities will be accepted in Student Recreation Center 202 through Thursday.

Teams wishing to enter are reminded that the earlier they enter, the better their chance of selecting a favorable playing time will be.

Team managers should bring a list of player's names, addresses and phone numbers to SRC 202 during the entry period along with their refundable $30 forfeit fee to select their regular season playing time.

Playing in innertubes in the water will begin Sunday.

Table tennis doubles tournament

Recreational Sports will sponsor a table tennis doubles tournament next Friday, Feb. 12 at 5:30 p.m. in the Rec Center Lounge.

Check-in will be 15 minutes prior to match time. Entries for the event may be picked up at the SRC today during the hours of 8 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Brackets will be available on Friday at noon. Men's A and B, Women's A and B, and a mixed division will be offered as dictated by entries.

Each of the division winners will receive intramural champion T-shirts.

For more information about the tournament, call 742-3351. Or come by the SRC room 202 during office hours.

Thanks for making the All-Nighter successful.

Racquetball singles tourney upcoming

Racquetball singles entries will be taken through Thursday, Feb. 4. The two-day tournament will begin Friday, Feb. 5, at 5 p.m., and again at 10 a.m. Saturday morning.

Depending on registration, divisions for men and women are "open A" and "open B."

Participants must be available to play both days and need to provide their own balls.

A match will consist of the best two of three, 15 point games with an 11 point tie breaker format. Brackets will be available by noon on Friday, Feb. 5, at the Rec Sports Office, room 202.
