14-year-old to face murder charge in screwdriver slaying

HOUSTON (AP) — A 14-year-old boy accused of fatally stabbing a fellow middle school student with a screwdriver soon will face murder charges, authorities said.

The seventh-grade suspect, whose name was withheld, remained in custody Thursday on aggravated assault charges stemming from the Wednesday attack on Samuel Avila, 13.

Police say the older boy admitted stabbing Avila in the head during an 8:30 a.m. fight in the second-floor hallway of Deady Middle School. Avila was pronounced dead eight hours later at a nearby hospital.

Prosecutors have decided to upgrade the suspect's charge to murder but have not decided whether to seek to have him tried as an adult, said Elizabeth Godwin, chief of the Harris County District Attorney's juvenile division.

A detention hearing has been set for Friday morning, and Godwin said the murder charge would be filed as soon as paperwork is complete.

NATIONAL NEWS —

School bus carrying second-graders collides with truck

CENTRAL BRIDGE, N.Y. (AP) — A bus carrying second-graders to a pumpkin hunt collided with a dump truck at a dangerous intersection Thursday, injuring 51 youngsters and adults.

One child was in critical condition, and three youngsters and an adult were in serious condition Thursday afternoon.

The bus was carrying 44 children, four teachers and four adult chaperones from Albany School No. 18 on a field trip to the Pumpkin Patch, a popular Halloween spot 30 miles west of Albany.

"The kids are going to be traumatized," said Sandra Bowles, whose 7-year-old granddaughter escaped injury in the crash. "They are so young."

The empty dump truck, registered to a construction company, was pulling a trailer when it struck the back right side of the bus.

The bus spun 180 degrees and rolled to a rest in grass about 500 feet from the point of impact. The collision caused the front end of the bus to dip onto the pavement, knocking the hood off the vehicle.

WORLD NEWS —

Drunken elephants rampage, killing four in Indian village

GAUHATI, India (AP) — Wild elephants broke into a cluster of thatched huts, guzzled rice beer fermenting in casks and then tore the village apart in a drunken rampage, trampling four people to death and injuring six, a wildlife official said Thursday.

The herd of 15 elephants descended Wednesday on the village of Prajapatibosti, 180 miles east of Gauhati, state capital of northeastern Assam, elephant expert Kushal Konwar Sharma said.

"After drinking the beer the elephant herd became intoxicated and went on a rampage, trampling to death four members of a family," he said. The animals trampled rice paddies and more huts before leaving the area Thursday morning.

Mann: misuse of funds necessary

Former vice chancellor speaks out for first time

by Wayne Hodgins
Editor

As rumors circulate about the funding tactics of certain campus construction projects, a former Texas Tech administrator said all was done for the university's benefit.

Reports that the Office of Facilities, Planning and Construction misused funds come in the wake of a self-sanctioned audit released in September.

Doug Mann, former vice chancellor for FP&C, said the perspective of Tech administrators at the time was to keep campus construction on the move.

"My feelings are the actions that were taken at the time were the best way to keep things running," said Mann, now employed with the architectural firm of HNTB in Dallas. "There was no intent to do any harm."

A total of $737,584.88 has been raided from the English/Philosophy/Education Complex budget to pay for unrelated Master Plan projects around campus. An East/West Highway study, the Frazier Alumni Pavilion site, the Amarillo Campus Master Plan, the Main Entrance Design and the roadway banners that are seen along the Tech Freeway and down University Avenue were just some of the projects funded out of the complex's budget.

Mann said the strides the university is taking, as far as the Master Plan is concerned, allows Tech to expand in new horizons.

"If we could do it all over again, yes, we would do them differently," Mann said. "But at the time, it seemed like the best way to go — to not lose the momentum we had going."

Although Mann left his position at Tech in March amidst the FP&C controversy, he said he did not leave the university because of the problems in the office but left for personal reasons.

The audit cited numerous problems within FP&C because the entity was believed to have been spending money outside of budgetary guidelines, including altered project invoices which charged expenditures to improper accounts.

The results of the audit were turned over to Criminal District Attorney Bill Sowder who

Faculty still bothered about audit

by Andrew Thompson
Staff Writer

Normally, students do not expect to meet with a professor in an office that has mildew growing on the ceiling or bulging tiles burdened with water leaks.

But, as Madonna Gentry would say, this is common in the English building.

Miner, director of the English department at Texas Tech, told The University Daily on Thursday about the problems students and teachers face when conducting classes in the English building.

Miner said the department is upset about recent allegations that funds have been siphoned away from the $42-million budget for the planned English/Philosophy/Education Complex. Miner said her first reaction was horror about a story published in the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal on Sunday. The article reported that more than $737,000 had been taken from the new structure's budget to fund other projects across campus.

"Some faculty members called me about it and were extremely concerned," she said.

A petition is being circulated through the English department that urges the speedy construction of the new English/Philosophy/Education Complex.

"Offices flood. Asbestos leaks from ceiling tiles. Students faint because the cooling shuts down," Miner wrote in the petition. "We feel as if the work that we do for Texas Tech is seen as less important than the various other projects for which state money has been allocated."

Miner said she worried about priorities on the Tech campus. She mentioned the new complex's budget does not designate money for faculty and staff furniture.

"If you wanted to come speak with me in the new building, we'd be sitting on the floor," she said.

A letter sent to the department earlier this semester suggested the three departments that will be located the new building would have to raise their own funds for furniture. However, Miner said she spoke with Jane Winer, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, about the misunderstanding.

"It was odd, because if you build an arena, you put in seats, and you definitely do not make the athletes go raise money," she said. "But, it has been cleared up, even though I think the budget should still include furniture. We won't have to raise the money ourselves."

Other faculty members echoed Miner's comments.

Don Rude, professor of English, said he has had several problems with his office and the classrooms he must teach in.

"In the summer of 1998, I had to take my class outside because of the heat," he said.

New program allows students to meet potential employers

by Cory Chandler
Staff Writer

The Alpha Kappa Psi fraternity has set up a new program that allows Tech students to meet potential employers and work with them for a day.

The Mentors Program, which started two years ago, has become a way for students to make contacts with potential employers on a professional level. The program gives them an opportunity to develop relationships that could lead to internships and even future career options.

Dale Duhan, an associate professor of business administration and adviser for AKY, said the program is actually a 24-hour internship. Students visit companies and work with a mentor or an assigned executive for one day.

The program only is available to members of AKY, but in the future, the group hopes to extend the program.

Kendra Gullette, a junior marketing major from Alvin, said Roy Howell, dean of the College of Business Administration, is responsible for most of the funding for the program. AKY provides the rest of the money.

"We provide plane tickets, a hotel (room), 2 meals and taxi rides," Gullette said. "It's like a free weekend for the students."

Gullette, who is vice president of the Alumni Committee for the fraternity, said the program is increasing in popularity.

"The first year we had four to five companies," she said. "Last year, we had about eight. Now we have more than 10 companies involved."

Gullette said she hopes businesses will begin to provide funding as a recruiting expense, allowing more students to become involved with the program. Gullette said if this happens, then AKY will involve organizations other than their own.

Many companies have decided to continue their relationship with AKY. Companies such as the Houston Chronicle and Anderson Consulting in Dallas will be involved with the fraternity for a second year.

Gullette said the program also helps students because companies see AKY as an active fraternity.

"This looks good on resumes because potential employers get to know the fraternity on a first-name basis," she said.

There are no GPA requirements at the moment, but interested students must fill out an application and provide a resume.

Then they are selected by a committee, which includes Howell.

Gullette said the project has been well-received by businesses because they end up working with the "cream of the crop."

She said she hopes to be able to involve more businesses within the next few years.

For more information on the program or the fraternity, call 742-3991.

Bookstore addresses Tech Senate

by Greg Okuhara
News Editor

Texas Tech Bookstore Manager Ed Whitfill spoke to the Student Government Association on Thursday about the status of the store's contract with Tech and how he plans on fixing the problems within the store.

He said he wanted to address concerns brought up by student senators during the Sept. 2 SGA meeting.

Whitfill said the contract with Wallace's, the company who manages the store, expires in June. The school will begin accepting bids to manage the bookstore at the end of the year, including a bid from Wallace's.

"I am, of course, hoping that we can continue the contract," Whitfill said.

Despite his optimism, he admitted there were problems at the bookstore when he arrived during the summer.

"I make no excuses, and I made no excuses last term," Whitfill said. "We were missing a lot of the books, we were missing a lot of the titles, and that is wrong from Wallace's point of view. I don't want to waste time with excuses."

Among the problems he discussed were book buy backs and the cost of new textbooks.

"We are not buying back enough books from students, and we need to correct that," Whitfill said.

He also said some procedures see SENATE, p. 3

met with Tech administrators on Tuesday, according to Sowder's legal assistant, who asked not to be identified.

Sowder has yet to make a decision on whether or not to file criminal charges regarding the audit, according to local media. Sowder could not be reached for comment.

FP&C also was found to be in non-compliance in the way open positions within the department are posted.

Ten of 11 positions were not posted before being filled, which violates state laws.

According to documents obtained through Texas open records laws, all outstanding expenses that had not been paid at the time of the audit, more than $222,000, have since been paid.

"The money that had been taken from the (English/Education/Philosophy) project has been returned," said Cindy Rugeley, vice chancellor for news and information.

Deputy Chancellor James Crowson said the state auditor's office has been notified of the situation.

"The state auditor may or may not pursue an investigation, but I doubt it," Crowson said.

"A lot of things were going on throughout that process, but neither then nor in the future would it require one at my level to review every voucher."

Crowson said the excuse Mann gave for raiding the new complex fund was no excuse.

"That may have been a reason," Crowson said.

"But it shouldn't have been done."

Crowson supervises the works of FP&C.

Attempts to contact Robert Cameron, project manager for the English/Education/Philosophy Complex were not successful.

However, Crowson said the situation will not postpone the construction date.

"Bids are nearing completion and should be out by the end of this calendar year," Crowson said. "Construction will probably start in January, but that's a rough estimate right now."

Completion of the $42-million project will take about two years, Crowson said.

"My heater shuts down and has been replaced several times, and I had a culture of mold growing on my ceiling. I'm allergic to mold, too."

Rude, who has taught at Tech for 30 years, also said the English department has been promised a new building for about 20 years.

"There are so many problems with this building," he said. "The roof always leaks, yet when we call maintenance, they just tell us that they can't afford a new roof because we have a new building in the works."

Rude also said he and his colleagues have had heaters shut down or blow cold air during the winter months.

Miner's petition also mentioned professors who must teach dressed in gloves, hats and jackets because the heating shuts down.

Professors are not the only ones affected by the problems though.

Lacy Landusky, a graduate student in the English department, said she has seen her share of problems, including a student who slipped and fell on a puddle of water on the third floor of the building.

"There are huge puddles of water all over the third floor when it rains," she said. "Last night, I was working in the office and only cold air came through the heater. There is mold on the classroom walls, and I know about a piece of the ceiling that fell down and destroyed computers this summer. It's a pain in the butt to have to work in these conditions."

Shootout at RHC corral

Re-enactment part of center's Ranch Day festivities

by Andy Jones
Staff Writer

A shootout will take place Saturday at the Texas Tech National Ranching Heritage Center, but local authorities have not taken any special precautions.

The shootout will be a part of festivities at the NRHC's 29th annual Ranch Day from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Events will be free to the public.

John Levacy, a member of the 1880s Tech Saddle Tramps group, said they will be re-enacting a shootout from 1895.

The shootout occurred in Quanah when Texas Ranger Capt. Bill McDonald was ambushed at a depot by outlaws.

"We recreated it all exactly as it was recorded in the newspaper," Levacy said.

"If it's been verified, that is what we recreate."

He said there will be no excessive shots fired like the long drawn-out shootouts as seen in the movies.

The recreation will take eight minutes to set up and a little more than a minute to act out.

"That's typically the way those things went," Levacy said.

The group tries to do things as historically accurate as possible, he said.

The public will be able to enjoy special demonstrations on quilting, black powder and grinding corn.

Stephanie Gray, manager of educational programs at the NRHC, said several themes have been used in the past. In recent years, the theme has been to demonstrate the activities of a working ranch relative to the time period of the structures at the center.

A barbecue lunch will be from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the Burns Pavilion, and children can participate in a stick-horse rodeo. The lunch will cost $6 per plate.

Gray said about 2,500 visitors came to Ranch Day last year, and they are hoping for a better turnout this year.

"We have lots of stuff for the kids, and adults might enjoy the traditional dance and music in the Four Sixes barn," Gray said.

Marsha Gustafson, associate director for marketing and development for the NRHC, said the event is a chance for visitors to see more than the structures at the NRHC's Proctor Park.

Gustafson said the nearly 200 volunteers that help coordinate Ranch Day began preparations at least four to six months ago.

The volunteers made every effort to make everything as historically accurate as possible, Gustafson said.

She said they were fortunate to find blue corn at the Tech farm in New Deal for the corn-grinding festivity to keep their historical accuracy.

Running a modern museum to be historically accurate is not always easy.

"We also had to consider modern inventions," Gustafson said. "We had to plan our carriage rides to not run over sprinkler heads."

For more information on Ranch Day, contact the National Ranching Heritage Center at 742-0498.

were not being followed at the store when he arrived and the store now double and triple checks orders before they are sent to the publishers.

If Wallace's contract is renewed by Tech, Whitfill said he is confident in his abilities to improve the store.

"The last two (bookstores) I left, I left in much, much better shape than when I got there," he said.

Carrie Evans, internal vice president of the SGA, said Whitfill answered all their questions, but wonders if it is a little too late.

"I think a lot of (senators) have that bad taste in their mouths," she said. "He was comparing (the Tech bookstore) to other schools. I think Tech should be treated differently because they have different needs."

Evans, a member of the Tech Textbook Committee, could not speculate on the future of Wallace's or if another company would be chosen.

"We'll just have to wait and see," she said.

SGA President Doug Jeffrey also made a quick presentation to the Senate.

He said he was concerned with the low voter turnout at both the Homecoming queen/UC referendum and Freshman Council elections.

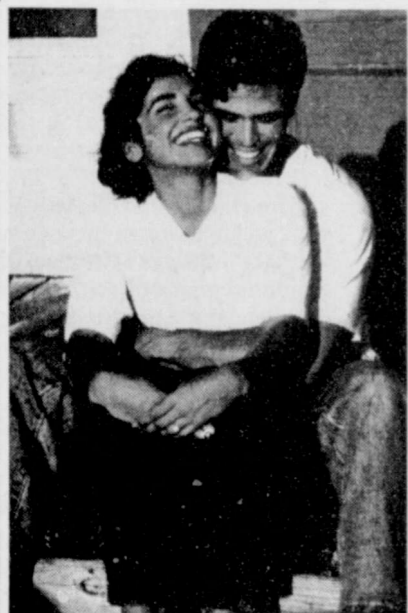

Students will soon be able to vote over the Internet, and Jeffrey said he hopes this helps reverse the low turnout trend.

He also asked for senator's input to help increase the amount of votes cast.

Fonda wrong selection as a great woman

My friends, I want to get very serious here and take just a moment of your time. I want all of you who are reading this to please read very carefully. I have not made up anything of what I am about to tell you.

Cameron Graham
Columnist

With the close of the 20th century, we are being bombarded with constant lists. These lists include such topics as movies, actors, sports moments and so on. One such list being compiled is the 100 Greatest Women of the Century. Now I have no trouble with this at all. Please don't think that I am some kind of sexist pig.

But among such truly great women as Susan B. Anthony, Mother Theresa, Margaret Thatcher and Sally Ride, one name is being considered and that is Jane Fonda. Yes, daughter of actor Henry Fonda, wife of Ted Turner and exercise guru, Jane Fonda, for some reason, is being considered for this list.

This absolutely turns my stomach. As to why, please let me lay the groundwork. It is the 1960s, and America is embroiled in the fire that is the Vietnam War. Among the stories of the war is the plight of the captured American soldiers, sailors and airmen. To these men, the mere mention of Fonda's name is enough to make their skin crawl.

In the late 1960s, Jane Fonda traveled to North Vietnam. Her purpose? She was supposedly on a mission of peace. For some reason, this woman, who had just recently made a movie called "Barbarella: Queen of the Galaxy" (or something like that), felt she could end the war. But what she did there did absolutely nothing to end the war, and her visit resulted in the deaths of American POWs.

Take for instance the story of Col. Larry Carrigan, USAF. He spent six years in the infamous Hanoi Hilton. When he learned of Fonda's impending visit, he and three other captives devised a plan to tell the world that they were still alive. They wrote their social security numbers on small scraps of paper and, while they shook hands with Fonda, they slipped her the papers. While working this line, Fonda would taunt the American POWs with questions such as, "Aren't you sorry you bombed babies?" To these men, they felt that it was an act. But as soon as the camera stopped rolling, Fonda immediately walked over to the Vietnamese officer in charge and handed the papers to him. After Fonda left, three of the men were beaten to death. Only Col. Carrigan managed to survive that hell and has since tried to bring Hanoi Jane up on charges of treason.

But Carrigan's story is not the only one. An anonymous civilian economic adviser who was starved and spent four years in captivity, two of which were in a dark hole, was made to dig graves for people the North Vietnamese shot — including a female missionary and a nurse in a leprosarium. But according to Jane Fonda, it was the Americans who were the war criminals.

When the civilian met with Fonda while still a prisoner, he tried to tell her that the stories of humane treatment on the part of the NVA were a lie. When Fonda reported this to the NVA Officers, this civilian was made to spend three days on his knees on a stone floor, his arms stretched across a metal beam. And if his arms ever dipped, he would be beaten with a bamboo cane.

Years later when he was once again a free man, he had another chance to meet Ms. Fonda. This time he challenged her to a debate on national television. She refused.

My friends, to consider such a woman as being one of the greatest ones of this century flies in the face of all logic to me. What has she done that is so great? She grew up the spoiled brat of a famous movie star. Then she got into acting herself, and since she thought she was better than everybody else, decides to try and "end" the Vietnam War. In the end, her actions caused pain and suffering and even death.

What can be done to prevent her name from being included in this list? Admittedly, I really don't know. But my purpose here is to educate you, the reader, about who and what this woman is really all about. People should never forget. Many of the people she branded as war criminals now are just names on a black granite wall. They won't forget. Neither should we.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Rule still applies

To the editor: I want to correct some misstatements given by Mr. Cirigliano (UD, 10/21). Yes, the Golden Rule is still in effect not only for Christians, but also for people of the Jewish, Hindu, Islamic and Buddhist faiths. All of the major religions of the world have this rule in some form. That means that the rule does apply to the majority of the world's population. Mr. Cirigliano is correct in reminding Christians, however, that the rule does apply to everyone. I don't know what prompted Mr. Cirigliano to think that Jesus' commandment to "Love your neighbor as yourself," (Matthew 22:39) has been declared null and void, but what ever the case, Mr. Cirigliano, please remember that no one is perfect. It is extremely hard to love all people all the time. Your bad experiences may have been the result of a bad test grade, a lack of money, or any of the hard time that a college student may come across.

Second, in Matthew 6:9, Jesus is teaching his disciples to pray. In the course of teaching them the Lord's prayer, he says to go into a closet and pray. This was to make sure that the disciples were not praying in public as a performance, a common practice of the Jewish leaders at the time. Jesus wanted to make prayer a special time between us and God.

This should not be interpreted to mean that we as Christians should not actively go out and witness our faith to others. Jesus said, again in Matthew, "Therefore go and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, and teaching them to obey everything I have commanded you" (Matthew 28:19-20).

Third, I am not aware of a problem of the separation of church and state. Christians who do have a problem have not thought through the importance of the idea. It was not created to keep religion behind closed doors. It was created to make sure that a religion would never be forced on anyone. People walking around carrying the Bible and preaching or reading from the Koran from street corners or handing out flowers to promote the Shrine of Holy Mary, Queen of the Celestial Universe is not a violation of the separation of church and state clause.

In conclusion, as a Christian, I want to apologize to Mr. Cirigliano for his bad experience(s). I hope that you will not consider all Christians hypocrites for not being nice all the time. The man was exactly right in telling you if you don't believe in Jesus you will go to hell. I'm sorry if that upsets you. The Bible is not always a fun book to read, but it is always true.

Student takes stand on prayer

Amanda Bruce is a hero. In the midst of the furor over school prayer, the 17-year-old Santa Fe High School student has not hesitated to speak her mind.

She was among 40 people protesting last week outside a football game where fellow student Marian Ward delivered a prayer over the public-address system.

In recent weeks, Bruce has spoken publicly against school prayer, and in doing so, she has placed herself at the center of controversy.

The stand she has taken is not a popular one in the Santa Fe community.

Though Bruce maintains she has supporters in the student body, few have been willing to speak out publicly.

Bruce, a lifelong Catholic, notes that this is not a debate pitting those who believe against those who don't. It's not even a debate of one religion vs. another.

It's a question of whether a Catholic should have to sit in a public school classroom and listen to the equivalent of a Baptist sermon. It's a question of whether the state should give a platform to one religion while making those of other faiths sit and listen.

Bruce maintains it should not. Those of all faiths, she says, should have a right to practice their religion freely, but they should not use the school's public-address system to win converts.

Many of this nation's pioneers fled religious intolerance in search of a place where they could pursue their beliefs freely, without government intervention.

That's what the First Amendment's guarantee of freedom of religion is all about.

No one is banning prayer in schools. No one is claiming that students should check their faith at the door.

Anyone should be allowed to pray in school or at a football game or at a high school graduation ceremony.

The problem arises when the adherents of one faith use the public schools to thrust their views on everyone else. That's the principle for which Amanda Bruce stood up to be counted.

In taking this stand, she is speaking out for Catholics, Baptists, Jews and Muslims. She is speaking out for all of us. She deserves our gratitude and our admiration.

Tech students only seem to care about themselves

Whatever happened to good old fashioned thoughtfulness?

It only takes one tiny event to ignite that column-worthy fire.

In walking across campus one day, a guy's backpack was dangling wide open just waiting to spew notebooks and textbooks across the street, like a freshman making his first visit to On Broadway.

The point, however, is that this poor soul had no idea that his academic life was about to be scattered across Will Rogers' path.

The catch is that no one seemed to care.

He walked with his also-in-the-dark companion at least 100 yards before the inevitable happened.

The backpack, fighting with its insides to stay closed, lost the battle.

The backpack opened and its contents suddenly became public property.

It seems the only time Tech students care for one another is when our football team wins a game that it wasn't supposed to win.

Notebooks, pens, papers, books — all gone.

An expletive was shouted but still, no reaction from those taking in the show.

And of course, Lubbock's friendly wind chimed in to help the rescue efforts.

Not all was lost, however, as the two participants managed to claw their way to a clean pick-up.

Though the strewn papers were battered and bruised, they did manage to make it through the ordeal.

The question remains — where's the compassion from the onlookers?

They could easily see what was going to happen before the incident played itself out.

Texas Tech isn't Harvard, but it doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure out that the backpack wasn't going to withstand the ordeal, just like it doesn't take a genius to figure out that funds were being siphoned off the budget of the new English/Philosophy/Education Complex.

Where's the love Red Raiders? It seems the only time Tech students care for one another is when our football team wins a game that it wasn't supposed to win.

It wouldn't hurt to actually say something to someone instead of putting your chin on your chest as you walk by yet another stranger on this campus.

No rallying cries from me, but this has gotten ridiculous.

The current train of thought is that we should only care about ourselves, even if someone is in desperate need of assistance.

Hold the door for someone.

Let a pedestrian walk by.

All of this stems from an isolated incident of a guy and his backpack on a mild Autumn day, and it couldn't hurt to mention that the guy happened to be me.

Sci-fi convention draws spaced out fans

by Laura Hensley
TechLife editor

This weekend, "Star Wars" freaks, war-game nuts and Trekkies will get together to celebrate their similarities and differences. But above all, these self-proclaimed freaks will just have some nice sci-fi fun.

Legion West, Texas Tech's science fiction, fantasy and gaming student organization, is sponsoring this weekend's HubCon3.

HubCon3 is an annual event that brings science-fiction fans from all walks of life together for one weekend to meet celebrities, play games and discuss issues in the realm of science-fiction.

"It's a summer retreat for really odd people," said David Scott, Legion West president and senior English major from Coahoma. "It's a time when I get to meet people I admire and respect and can still talk to people with similar interests."

The convention begins at 1 p.m. today and will end Sunday in the Texas Tech University Center Ballroom.

Celebrity guests at HubCon3 include Jeremy Bulloch, who is noted

HubCon3 sci-fi convention today-sunday, UC Ballroom

for his role in "Star Wars" as Boba Fett. Phil Brown, who played Uncle Owen in "Star Wars" also will lecture at the convention. Gene Roddenberry Jr., the son of "Star Trek" creator and creative consultant for "Earth: Final Conflict," will speak Saturday. Jack Stauffer of "Battlestar Galactica" will discuss work on a big-budget film based on the series. James Whitlark, English professor and science-fiction author, will speak about fantasy writing Saturday.

Other science-fiction actors, artists and authors also will be guests at HubCon3.

Saturday and Sunday events will begin at 9:30 a.m. There will be a gaming room and video room open all day with tournaments.

A live-action vampire game will also be during the evenings each day. Vampire the Masquerade is a impromptu theatre game where players pick a character and are given clues to solve a puzzle.

Melonie Mitchell has been involved with role playing for more than three years and will be the head narrator for the game.

"I'd always been interested in role playing and decided to get into it," she said. "Anybody can do it. Basically it's impromptu theater with a little twist in the fact that your character is not human."

Other events include a special costume contest will be at 8 p.m. Saturday with a masquerade ball following.

Scott said HubCon3 is one of many conferences in Texas but attracts a large crowd each year. There are two conferences at Texas A&M, the AggieCon and WarCon. There also is one at Rice University called OwlCon.

"Every year, it gets a bigger and better," Scott said. "This always brings people who like this type of thing out of the woodwork."

Membership passes to the convention can be purchased at the door. All proceeds benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

More information can be found at www.hubcon.org.

Tennessee Tuckness tips Texas scale

Amarillo native rustles up new audience

by Sebastian Kitchen
Staff Writer

Tennessee Tuckness climbs on a stage armed with her vocals and guitar and after a good response, she keeps going back for more. And more people are coming out to see her play. Her folk-blues-rock sound keeps fans coming back to her shows.

"The response I would get from the audience, I thought I must be doing something right if they like it," Tuckness said. "It fed the fire. Whether the audience likes your music, that makes the biggest difference."

And it is good the crowds like Tuckness's shows.

"I am fairly sensitive person as an individual and performance wise," she said.

Tuckness will perform at 4 p.m. Saturday at Hasting's, located at Fourth Street and University Avenue.

She also will perform Saturday at the Grapevine Cafe and Wine Bar, 2407 19th St.

Tuckness has been playing guitar for more than 14 years since starting lessons when she was younger.

She started performing in the mid-1980s when she was a student at the University of North Texas.

The Amarillo native is trying to stop in Lubbock more often.

"I want to keep active in the city," she said.

She played in Lubbock about once a month before taking a break.

"There is usually a pretty responsive crowd in Lubbock," she said.

She usually performs at Grapevine or Clouseau's and performs a little differently at each.

At Grapevine, she performs solo. At Clouseau's, three of four band members join her.

"It is just so much different play-

artist spotlight

ing with a full band," Tuckness said. "It makes a big difference."

Life is keeping Tuckness busy between life at home and life on the road.

She tours to support her latest release I Am Not Forsaken, which was released year ago.

"This is all such a learning process — the timing as far as taking the CD on the road," she said. "I wasn't able to do that. Now, I can. The timing is pretty good for me right now. I hate that the CD has been out for a year, and I'm just now hitting it heavy."

For the most part, Tuckness performs regionally — Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

Although she is just now supporting her latest album, Tuckness is in the process of working on a new CD.

"I have enough new material," she said. "When I play, I can throw that at them."

For being out a year, Tuckness is impressed with how her CD is selling.

Selections from I Am Not Forsaken received regular play on Amarillo College's KACV-90 FM. Her song "We Fly" will be on an Amarillo College music sampler that will be released the first of November.

Tuckness said Amarillo is good to its native. She lived in Amarillo for many years before going away to college. She could not stay away from home for too long.

"It is tough to completely remove yourself from your roots," Tuckness said. "That is why I moved back. I am very happy, very content."

Tuckness's best following is at home.

"I have a following. It is natural with a hometown," she said. "I would hope it would be."

Not being far away from Lubbock, Tuckness hopes crowds start to grow in the Hub City.

"What I hope in Lubbock, being so close, is that I'll gain a following there," Tuckness said. "But it'll take a while."

Tennessee Tuckness will perform at 4 p.m. Saturday at Hasting's, located at Fourth Street and University Avenue. She also will play at 9 p.m. Saturday at the Grapevine Cafe and Wine Bar, 2407 19th St.

Soccer team goes after Colorado

by Amy Curry
Staff Writer

The Texas Tech women's soccer squad will face off with the Colorado Buffaloes in Colorado at 4 p.m. today in an attempt to secure a spot in the Big 12 Conference Tournament.

The Raiders also will take on Colorado College at 1 p.m. Sunday in non-conference competition.

Tech coach Felix Oskam said Tech's last four encounters with Colorado have been close calls. The Buffaloes need two wins in order to make it to the tournament, and with the home field advantage, the Raiders are going to have to play one of their best games of the season.

"We have to take care of Colorado," Oskam said. "It's going to be a close game — it's always been close. And this is a must-win game for them for sure. It's do or die for Colorado. But we can't let them take a much-needed win away from us."

With only two weeks left in the regular season, the Raiders still are perfecting their game. They have continued to work on combinations, small-sided games and finishing scoring opportunities. "We've worked hard this week in practice, and hopefully, we'll be able to put in all together this weekend," forward Carrie Graham said.

Tech goalkeeper Brittney Peese said the Raiders can't afford to make the little mistakes that have cost them all four of their conference losses this season.

"Colorado is a good, fast team," Peese said. "We can't expect to just go up there and roll over them because they're not going to lay down and die."

Tech midfielder Lindsay Thompson said it will be tough to hold Colorado off in their home stadium as the higher altitude also may be a factor.

But after last year's season-ending loss to Iowa State, Thompson said the Raiders are prepared to do whatever it takes to make it to the Big 12 Conference Tournament.

"We've learned that we need to win games like this early, so it doesn't have to come down to the last game of the season again," she said. "From day one, it's been our goal to go to the tournament, and we won't let this opportunity slip away from us again."

Tech forward Christy Frantz goes after a ball against Missouri. Frantz and the rest of the soccer squad will take on the Buffaloes at 4 p.m. today in Colorado.

Red Raider football kicks off this Saturday at 6 p.m. against the Baylor Bears in Waco. Tech is 3-3, 2-1 Big 12, and Baylor is 1-5, 0-3 Big 12, going into Saturday's contest.

Raiders look to make bear skin rug

by Patrick Gonzales
Staff Writer

Based upon previous match-ups, it seems whenever former Southwest Conference foes do battle, records and standings can be thrown out the window.

That will be the setting Saturday when Texas Tech and Baylor, for the 57th time in history, face off at 6 p.m. at Floyd Casey Stadium in Waco.

The Bears (1-5 overall, 0-3 Big 12) lead the all-time series 32-24-1, but enter this year's clash looking for their first conference win.

The Red Raiders (3-3 overall, 2-1 Big 12) are 6-19 when playing in Waco but are coming off a 31-10 victory over Colorado last week.

But despite the squads' differences, Tech defensive tackle Kris Kocurek said anything can happen whenever the two teams meet.

"Every year that we go up to Waco or they come down here, it's a battle," Kocurek said. "They're going to come out fired up just because it's an in-state deal."

"It's going to be exciting, and we're just going to strap 'em on and get after it."

Tech won last year's meeting 31-29 after fending off a late Baylor rally. The Bears scored two late fourth-quarter touchdowns and looked to have tied the game on a two-point conversion, but Baylor quarterback Jermaine Alfred was ruled out-of-bounds on the play after completing the pass.

This year, Kocurek said it will be important to get on the Bears early and not let up.

"The longer we let them into the game, the more confidence they build," Kocurek said. "Just like North Texas, we left them in the game too long, and they pulled off the upset."

The Raiders are coming off what Tech coach Spike Dykes called their best performance of the season.

Most importantly, the Tech squad left Saturday's game injury-free for probably the first time this season.

Raiders Jason May and Kocurek were banged up during the game but returned to practice this week and are scheduled to play against Baylor.

Against Colorado, the Tech offense compiled 460 total yards, almost 100 yards better than its average.

Leading the way was Tech tailback Shaud Williams, who had a career-high 230 yards on 21 carries.

Williams, who is expected to make his second career start against the Bears, said he is aware defenses will start keying on him.

"I'm going to continue to work hard, relax and just enjoy the game of football," Williams said. "I'm not going to put anymore pressure on myself and just let the game come to me."

Williams also said he is going to trust the offensive line and the great job they do blocking.

Tech's Jonathan Gray, who has started all six games at right tackle for the offensive line, said the line just has to keep things in focus in order to continue their success.

"In our performances against A&M and Colorado, we know we can be a good offensive line, so we don't really have to prove anything to anybody," Gray said.

Baylor enters the game ranked last in Big 12 total offense and second to last in total defense.

The Bears are led by Alfred who is one of only three seniors on the offensive side of the ball.

Last year, he torched the Tech SWARM defense for 225 passing yards and a touchdown.

Even though the key for the SWARM on Saturday is to stop the run, Kocurek said the defense also is aware of Alfred's abilities.

"Once we stop the run, hopefully, we can get them in a passing situation so we can get after the quarterback," Kocurek said.

The SWARM is fifth in the Big 12 with 14 sacks in six games.

Saturday's game marks the first of two consecutive road games for the Raiders.

They will play Missouri next week in Columbia.

"This is going to be the most important game of the year by far," Kocurek said. "It's important for us to win these next two games on the road to try to stay on top of the Big 12 South."

Greg Kreller/The University Daily
Tech linebacker Kyle Shipley and the rest of the SWARM defense plan to attack Baylor early and not give up.

Volleyball squad takes on Missouri Tigers

by Jeff Keller
Staff Writer

As the end of the first part of the Big 12 Conference schedule nears, the Texas Tech volleyball squad (13-9 overall, 2-7 Big 12) will try to pick up its third conference win against the Missouri Tigers at 7 p.m. Saturday at Columbia, Mo.

The Tigers are the lone remaining conference team the Red Raiders have yet to face this season.

Tech has never lost to Missouri, and the Red Raiders hold a 6-0 lead in the all-time series.

Tech has beaten the Tigers in straight games in all but one of the teams' meetings.

Tech coach Jeff Nelson said, "I think it's important that we get a win against Missouri. I think it is a must-win kind of match."

Tech is coming off a straight-game loss to Texas, in which it held leads in all three of the games.

Tech outside hitter Colleen Smith had 14 kills, one dig and a .448 hitting percentage against the Longhorns and said Tech will take some lessons from the game.

"I think we can take a lot of positives from the Texas match," she said. "In the Texas match, we played physically pretty well."

"We had a couple of mental lapses at crucial times that hurt us. But I think our physical game overall was really good, and our attitudes were good too."

Tech outside hitter Jenny Donohoo said, "It's been extremely challenging.

"It's a higher level of play which has taken some time to get used to. But overall, I think the experience has been pretty good."

Tech middle blocker Lori Garber led Tech in kills with 20 in a losing effort against the Longhorns.

Garber said even though the Red Raiders have had success against Missouri in the past, Tech will not look past this match with the Tigers.
