Man gets death penalty in woman's slaying

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Bexar County jury has sentenced a 31-year-old man to death for the strangulation and robbery of a woman in a motel room.

The punishment verdict for Manuel Vasquez was returned Wednesday after about two hours of deliberation.

Vasquez was convicted last week of capital murder in the March 19, 1998, death of Juanita Ybarra.

Ybarra, 51, had been strangled with a phone cord in the room she shared with her boyfriend at the Laredo Motel in San Antonio.

Two other men have been charged in the crime. One of them, Johnny Joe Cruz, 24, was the state's chief witness. He testified Vasquez strangled Ybarra on a gang-ordered hit because she hadn't paid a 10 percent street tax on drugs.

Cruz said he helped Oligario Lujan, 29, beat Ybarra's boyfriend, who survived the attack and testified against Vasquez. Cruz also admitted robbing Ybarra's room.

NATIONAL NEWS

One dead, seven missing in explosion at nursing home

FLINT, Mich. (AP) — A basement boiler exploded and knocked down the walls and ceiling of a nursing home Wednesday night, starting a fire and killing one person, fire officials said. Seven people were missing.

About two dozen people were taken to hospitals after the 9 p.m. explosion, Fire Chief Theron Wiggins said.

Firefighters and neighbors helped pull people out of the one-story building, he said, and the fire was extinguished. About 110 people, including 94 residents, were inside when the boiler exploded in the basement of the Clara Barton Convalescence Center, he said.

The seven missing are nursing home workers and were believed to be in the building's basement, Wiggins said.

Hurley Medical Center spokeswoman Stephanie Motshenbacher said one person died on arrival there. She said 16 people were brought to the hospital. One was sent to the burn unit and another to a neurotrauma ward and two others were in critical condition.

WORLD NEWS

Italian apartment collapses, more than 50 feared dead

FOGGIA, Italy (AP) — A six-story apartment building came crashing down upon 24 sleeping households in southern Italy on Thursday, trapping them in a 15-foot-high heap of concrete and dust. Only one family escaped intact, fleeing with seconds to spare after a frantic attempt to save their neighbors.

By nightfall, authorities had accounted for only 17 survivors out of the 70 to 75 people believed to be inside. The latest, a young man, was pulled out more than nine hours after the last survivor had been found. After a day of seeing only covered bodies on gurneys go by, the dusty search crews stopped digging to applaud the rescue, shouting, "He's alive!"

Searchers recovered 13 corpses, wheeling them out under green sheets with broken limbs dangling.

High Flying Raiders Parking fee opens door to scrutiny

by Andy Jones
Staff Writer

Despite the announcement that students will have to pay a $2 fee to park in commuter lots west of the United Spirit Arena, Texas Tech students said the fee will not keep them from attending the Nov. 19 men's basketball game against the University of Indiana.

"I don't think it's going to stop a lot of people from going to the game," said Dusty Tyson, a junior animal science major from Fort Worth.

"It's still not going to go across very well with the students."

He said students will find other places to park, but the fact the administration expects students to pay for parking is unfair.

"Two dollars is really not that much, but it's the principle of the thing," Tyson said.

"As much as we pay in tuition and fees, I don't think we should have to pay if they want us to support our team."

The university seems to find any reason to charge students more money, said Aimee Moreau, a human development and family studies graduate student from Houston.

SEE RELATED STORY, p. 2

"I think the university will do anything it can to get money from the students," Moreau said.

"I think it's ridiculous some of the things we get charged for."

Moreau said the school already takes enough money from students.

"The whole conglomeration is outrageously priced," she said.

Darren Jones, a sophomore telecommunications major from Fort Worth, said students will not be deterred by parking fees.

"Everyone will park in the Weymouth parking lot, or you can just park across from 19th," Jones said. "People will find other ways."

Student Government Association President Douglas Jeffrey worked with Chief Financial Officer Jim Brunjes to devise the arena parking plan.

"I've learned a whole lot about the arena operations this past week," Jeffrey said.

He said he was frustrated at the parking fee situation, but said he was not sure who to direct his frustrations at.

"I'm mad they didn't figure out some way to deal with this problem before, Jeffrey said.

"I don't know who is responsible. I'm mad, but I don't know who to be mad at."

He said he was not made aware of the fee until this week.

"I didn't know about it, but I'm ultimately responsible for it," Jeffrey said.

He said the SGA office went into crisis-mode, brainstormed, and came up with the best compromise they could.

"I did the best I could. All we can do is compromise and make the best of the situation."

Flight instructor David Franklin, a senior management major from Kingsville, offers flight lessons at Stratos Aviation.

Organization helps students reach sky-high goals

by Angela Loston
Staff Writer

A young Brandon Coffman stares in awe as he flies over snow-covered mountains with rays of sunlight bouncing off the tops.

After seeing this breathtaking scene at the age of 6, Coffman, a sophomore general studies major from Shallowater, realized he was destined to become a commercial pilot.

"It was just a beautiful scene for me," Coffman said. "After that day, I just knew I wanted to fly."

Coffman is among many students who share a desire to ascend to higher heights across clear-blue skies. Along with other students, Coffman can elevate his passion for aviation by being a member of the Raider Pilots Association.

"As a member, you get to meet new people and do things to promote your aviation career or your love for aviation," Coffman said.

The organization began in the fall of 1998. The club provides students the opportunity to fulfill their dreams of flying.

David Franklin, a senior management major from Kingsville, said the group tries to encourage people within the community to learn how to fly. Franklin said the group meets at 7 p.m. on Wednesday's at Stratos Aviation Inc., located at the Lubbock International Airport.

Franklin, who also is president of the association, said he offers flight lessons as an instructor for the group.

Upon graduation, Franklin said he would like to take his love for aviation and make it into a career as a flight instructor.

"Mainly, the idea is to help people who have an interest in aviation to further their training and offer connections after graduation," Franklin said.

For five months, Coffman said he also has been a flight instructor. By teaching flight courses, Coffman said he is able to interact with different people.

Coffman said he teaches a diverse group of students, ranging from college students to working professionals.

By attending the flight classes, Coffman said his students are able to live out their fantasy of flying. As an instructor, Coffman said the most rewarding experience for him is knowing that his students will become safe pilots.

"My students are very diversified as far as ages and what they do are concerned," he said.

"I think that it is neat that all kinds of people want to learn how to fly. For many people, it's a way for them to be themselves and a way for them to relax."

During the spring, Royce Courtney, a junior general business major from Joshua, said the group invites local pilots to participate in their fund-raising event Poker Run.

Courtney, who also is the treasurer for the association, said the pilots fly their private planes from various airports to Lubbock's airport for the event. This past weekend, Courtney said the other members flew to the airport in Slaton. Right now, the group is proposing to help restore planes for the Slaton Air Museum, he said.

"I think it's a good organization," Courtney said. "We're trying our best to attract new members."

Courtney said there are almost 17 students who are active members.

The organization is open to all students. Anyone who is interested in becoming a member of the association can call 438-1532 for more information.

Pest control imposters prompt new safety measures

by Tim Loecker
Contributing Writer

Reports of men posing as pest control technicians to gain entrance at two local apartment complexes have prompted property managers around the city to caution residents about their personal safety.

Two similar events occurred in the last two weeks involving individuals dressed as service technicians. They told residents they were performing pest inspections for the property and needed to inspect the residents' apartments.

Apartment managers are working with police to prevent future incidents.

"We want our residents to know that safety is always of the utmost concern," said Kay Fairbanks, administrator of multi-family housing for McDougal Properties.

The first incident occurred Oct. 28 at Farrar West Apartments, located at 5720 66th St. The suspect was dressed as a McDougal employee and told the resident he needed to perform an inspection of her apartment, according to a Lubbock Police Department report. The resident noticed the suspect did not have a McDougal patch, usually worn by employees, on his shirt.

The resident allowed the suspect into her apartment, but stayed on the phone with her mother during the time and kept the front door open, police said.

Fairbanks said the suspect never inspected the apartment, but seemed to be just looking around.

The suspect said everything looked fine and quickly left the apartment.

The victim then called the apartment manager and learned the property was not conducting pest inspections. The Lubbock Police Department was then notified about possible criminal trespassing.

The suspect had attempted to gain entrance to another apartment at the same complex about 15 minutes earlier, according to the same police report.

However, the suspect was denied entrance to the apartment because the resident noticed the suspect was acting very nervous and kept trying to look in his apartment.

Vets honored in flag ceremony

Army ROTC retires more than 100 American flags Thursday

by Will Frederick
Contributing Writer

The American flag was honored at a flag retirement ceremony Thursday at Memorial Circle on the Texas Tech campus.

The Army ROTC and citizens of Lubbock were present to show their support at the Veteran's Day flag retirement ceremony.

Lubbock Mayor Windy Sitton, a guest speaker, stressed the importance of honoring the U.S. flag and the many men and women who serve the country.

"We need to promote this ceremony more so that every student and citizen of Lubbock can see it," Sitton said.

More than 100 faded and soiled

U.S. flags were donated to the ceremony for their disposal.

It is customary to retire old or damaged flags by burning them.

The belief is by burning the flags, the spirit of the flags will be released.

Lt. Col. David Reid said the flag retirement ceremony has not taken place on the Tech campus since 1983, a year after he graduated.

He said Memorial Circle was an appropriate place and Veteran's Day was an appropriate time to involve the community in an event everyone could stand behind as a show of support.

The ceremony began with the National Anthem, which was sung by Laura Vlasak, a Tech student.

A moment of silence then followed the anthem to allow everyone present to remember all the veterans who have served our country.

The retirement of colors involved the lowering of the U.S. flag to half-staff and then the lowering to the ground for disposal.

As the flag flew half-staff, the Ranger Company fired a cannon three times to honor the old flag.

At the end of the ceremony audience members were allowed to dispose of torn pieces of a flag.

For cadets like Andrew Crump, a junior business major from Lubbock, the ceremony offered an environment to pay tribute to the flag.

"We're reviving a tradition," he said of Thursday's ceremony.

"The ceremony gives the public an opportunity to see a military tradition."

Andrew Romo, a junior Red Raider ROTC member from Levelland, stands in honor of the flags being retired at Memorial Circle on Thursday. Greg Kreller/The University Daily

Fee to help pay for arena costs

by Greg Okuhara
News Editor

Now that the $62-million United Spirit Arena is finished, the costs do not stop there. Tech officials admit the arena will lose money for at least the first year of operation.

Kent Meredith, general manager for the United Spirit Arena, said he expects the arena to lose money, much like many other new arenas across the nation.

The parking fee that students and general arena-goers will have to pay to park at arena basketball events will go toward paying the massive operating costs of the arena.

However, the money generated from the fee is a drop in the bucket compared to the total costs to host events in the arena.

Students will have to pay $2 to park in the commuter lots west of the arena, and non-students will be charged $3 for basketball events.

Jim Brunjes, Tech chief financial officer, said Tech expects to generate $210,000 each basketball season through the parking fee, but operating costs of the arena will approach $1.6 million for the first year.

"It's just a small part (of the arena operating budget)," Brunjes said.

He said as time goes on, Tech officials hope to learn how to operate the arena more efficiently and lower costs.

Even though the parking fee will be enforced, Brunjes said he wants to iron out some details with the Student Government Association.

He also said he was not sure if the parking fee would deter students from attending basketball games.

Meredith said students who are not happy with the fee need to remember the size and scope of the building.

"This is a major arena, not a little gym," Meredith said.

"I doubt many people know that the $10 million from United Supermarkets and the $3 per semester hour fee from students doesn't go toward the operating costs of the arena."

He estimates the arena will cost about $1,000 to $2,000 per day while events are hosted in the arena.

Although the parking fee is a necessity, Meredith said Tech students and the Lubbock community need to come out to events at the arena and support the arena.

"The bottom line is to have people at the games, but at the same time not to lose money," he said.

Meredith said he feels the basketball teams have worked hard to put a good product on the floor that will attract students to the games and keep them coming back.

During arena events, Meredith said the Texas Tech Police Department will monitor the commuter parking lots, law school and Student Recreation Center parking lots.

Some spectators with Personal Seat Licenses or luxury suites will be able to park at no additional charge in the parking lot north of the arena.

Tech senior receives engineering scholarship

by Ashley Johnson
Staff Writer

Cudnoski

Sean Cudnoski never imagined his last year at Texas Tech as a civil engineering major would be entirely financed before he was awarded the $10,000 College of Engineering Deans Council Scholarship.

Cudnoski, a senior civil engineering major from Lubbock, plans to graduate in December.

William Marcy, dean of the College of Engineering, said the scholarship is given to upperclassmen who have shown excellence in school.

"This scholarship is unique in that it is a one-year award designed so that highly qualified students can complete their senior year with the financial freedom to perform at their highest level," he said.

"I am still surprised and feel very honored to represent the college of engineering."

After graduation, Cudnoski said he plans to continue to work and excel at Park Hill, Smith and Cooper, an engineering firm in Lubbock. Cudnoski was awarded the scholarship in April and given half of the scholarship then. He received the other $5,000 this semester.

Applications for the scholarship are available in 102 Engineering Center. All applications must be received by March 1. The scholarship will be presented in April to a junior or senior engineering student with a minimum 3.0 GPA.

Cornerstone still symbolizes tradition, strength

by Kelly Padgett
Staff Writer

More than 10,000 people gathered in a dusty Lubbock field 75 years ago to witness the ceremonial leveling of the Texas Tech Administration building cornerstone.

The ritual was repeated on Thursday, as the cornerstone was re-levelled and rededicated to symbolize 75 more years of providing education for students.

Members of the Tech administration, along with the Grand Lodge of Texas and the Yellowhouse Lodge of Lubbock, gathered to perform the ceremony.

Chancellor John Montford also was presented with the Community Builder Award by the Masonic Lodge in Lubbock.

The original cornerstone of the building symbolizes more than the building's foundation. The stone stands as a symbol of tolerance, strength and a strong foundation, said Kenneth Ketner, a Horn professor at Tech and member of the Masonic Lodge.

"Masons use these ideals in everyday principles as well," Ketner said. "The cornerstone is the most important stone because if it is not square and well placed, the building will be crooked."

Tech President Donald Haragan said the festivity was special to Tech and the Grand Lodge.

"When I was approached with the idea of the ceremony, I thought it was appropriate to recognize the anniversary of the first building on this campus," Haragan said.

Yellowhouse Lodge members said the ceremony compared the hopes elaborated during the original ceremony, and the success of the school today. In 1924, members of the Yellowhouse Lodge laid the cornerstone.

"When we celebrate this event, we symbolically recall the principles used in 1924 and ever since, then try to keep them going," Ketner said.

Gordon Treadaway, a lodge member for 68 years, was one of the three committee members that proposed Thursday's event idea to Tech officials.

"Now, 75 years later, the cornerstone is re-levelled as an entirely symbolic emphasis on its strong foundation," Treadaway said. "As masons, we try to be builders in the metaphorical sense of the word."

Greg Okuhara contributed to this story.

Montford addresses Tech senates

by Brandon Formby
Contributing Writer

For the first time in Texas Tech history, the Student, Faculty and Staff senates met together Thursday at a reception centered around an open forum with Tech Chancellor John Montford.

Tim Wright, a senator-at-large for the Student Senate, coordinated the meeting and said the event came about from a combination of ideas geared toward having members of the three different senates meet each other.

"We basically just wanted the Student, Faculty and Staff senates to meet face-to-face with the administration and use it as a networking tool," said Wright, a senior management information systems major from Plano.

As Montford fielded questions from the audience, members of the three senates were able to voice concerns on issues facing the university.

One subject Montford addressed during the meeting concerned rumors that he would leave Tech to become the University of Texas chancellor. Earlier this week, Montford was named as a candidate for the position.

"A contract is sacred to me," he said.

"I intend to honor the commitment I've made to this university. Debbie (my wife) and I are very happy here."

Montford also discussed the search for a new president and said he knew what kind of person he wanted to fill the position for Tech president, but welcomed input from the faculty.

"In my mind, I would like us to consider a strong leader," he said. "They must have a focus on excellence in academics and research."

Montford also said a job description for the president was in the works and would run in various publications nationwide upon review by the committee.

The chancellor also was faced with questions about the Horizon Campaign, which reached its $300-million goal in August.

Montford said he would like to continue raising money to use as endowments for student scholarships, faculty and chair positions.

"We can't get out of the business of raising scholarship funds," he said, citing a 30-percent increase in scholarship endowments over the past year. "We now need to look at colleges and work on faculty endowments."

SAFETY, from p. 1

Two more incidents were reported last Friday at Savannah Oaks Apartments, located at 5204 50th St. Two individuals attempted to gain access into two separate apartments at the same time, according to another police report.

In both incidences, the two men tried to gain access to female's apartments. The suspects involved are believed to be a Hispanic male and a black male, but authorities are unsure if the events are related, according to police reports.

A black Ford Ranger truck was reported at the Savannah Oaks incident, and a truck with a similar description was seen at the Farrar West incident. Both cases are under investigation by the LPD.

Arrests put Tech, athletics in bad light

Well folks, it looks as if some chickens are coming home to roost over at the Tech athletic department. Now, unless you have had your head in the sand the past week or so, then you all know the situation regarding the two Tech football players arrested on drug charges. Honestly, when I heard of this, I was only mildly surprised.

Now, I say mildly because what amazed me was not the fact that they imbibe illegal drugs, but rather that they got caught and that some kind of punishment seems to be in store for these three unfortunates.

I am not going to sit here and bore you with my view of those who do drugs. Just suffice it to say I think it is something pretty damn stupid. I think most of us can agree on that. But there is a lot that is not being said about this, and I feel I must say it.

First, however, to forestall any potential letter writers out there, I must state that I do not believe that all Tech athletes are into drugs, and I support our football team as long as they are treated on an equal level with students.

Now, the support I just mentioned is seldom there for the mere fact that athletes are not treated on the same level as the regular student. That is just the way it is, and we all know it. Chancellor Montford, Gerald Myers and Spike can say it ain't so, but to these gentlemen I say, and I think I speak for the majority of Tech students, we didn't just fall off the pumpkin truck yesterday.

Now let's get down to cases. Here we have two Tech football players that have been charged with serious crimes.

For those of you who don't think so, consider this: If they are convicted on the charges then that is going to be with them the rest of their lives. It doesn't matter if they go to jail or not. Every scholarship they apply for, any job application they fill out, any mortgage loan they hope to get, will be in jeopardy because of a drug conviction.

There is another point I want to bring up, and it is going to put me on thin ice, but please bear with me. These players are black. They also are prominent black football players. What does this have to do with it? Well, again, I think we can agree that there are not many positive black role models for young black children.

These athletes were indeed role models. No, they may not have acted that way or even believe that they are, but folks, in a town the size of Lubbock, Tech football players are role models, especially in the black community. And like it or not, they have a responsibility to show young black children that it is possible to go on to higher education and to be able to succeed and be the best you can be.

A question remains in all this. A simple question, maybe, but important nonetheless. The answer, however, is up to you the reader.

Who is to blame for this? Well, it could be that the athletic department is to blame. They have been really vocal about their treatment and counseling programs for instances such as this — a little too vocal when you think about it. But you know, when the athletic department starts giving athletes special privileges, and they know they do, then you get people who think they are above everyone else.

And it could be that administrators of Tech are responsible. They have a history of bailing out athletes when they get into trouble. Does anyone remember Zebbie Lethridge? Look in the police blotter published in The UD. Do you think those students arrested for drug possession get help from the Board of Regents? I doubt it.

A real stretch here, but it also is possible that we the students are to blame for letting this continue as long as it has. When we start standing up and demanding that regular students get the same consideration as athletes, or vice versa, then things may change. Otherwise, that English building is going to wind up killing someone.

But in the end, the ultimate blame lies on the three players. They may have just learned that they, and the rest of the Tech's athletes, are not God's gift to this community.

Yeah, they sure do walk around as they are, but they are just three unfortunates who started to believe their own press. And it is something they are going to pay for long after you and I are gone.

Truly, a sad turn of events.

High-tech trends benefit stocks

The U.S. stock market has changed considerably since the last decade. Focus of markets has shifted, and globalization is occurring daily. With all these changes emerge new market trends. The vast realm of technology and its practically ludicrous pace is the forefront of these trends. With the overwhelming expectation of the Internet and its incredible potential, many companies are seizing this opportunity and bringing their expertise into this concept. Some of these companies are the backbone of the information superhighway from fiber optic companies such as Viatel (VYTL) to the protocols and facilitators of the Net's interactivity like Active Software (ASWX). It's a general truth that these days, technology stocks are hot. Choosing these stocks, one has to recognize and understand a corporation's goals, business model, potential and general market trends. This week, I will focus on two possible and probable big plays for the market.

Chris Day
Columnist

Active Software's Initial Public Offering brought around $12 a share. I got in at 17, and it's now trading around 70. That's a pretty good return on an investment. This stock, at the time it was bought, was undervalued and not many analysts were covering it. Its function and clientele spoke for the stock itself. Its clientele included a variety of companies from small companies to government contract with the Department of Defense. What this company does is simplify the retrieval of data from databases and solves a vital communication problem using a variety of company-developed licensed products.

The Israeli tech stock, Ectel Ltd. (ECTX), just recently IPO'd. I got in at 17 3/4 and await returns on it after its quiet period (the period in time required by the exchange in which no news is released and substantial changes in operations is prohibited). I chose this stock because of the ideals of market trends. Recently, other Israeli tech stocks, but specifically Jacada (JCDA) IPO'd, doubled, tripled, had a pullback and will again head toward a solid triple.

By the time this article is read, it will be fluctuating near the triple range. The volume around these stocks is high and anything but dry. The underwriters of these stocks have exceptional reputations and exit strategies. ECTX is a technology company that has clientele including British Telecom, MCI WorldCom and a variety of others. Their products are aimed at quality assurance and monitoring telecommunications networks and includes real-time fraud management, billing verification and considerable plays in a growing online economy. I feel this stock at this time is considerably undervalued. Huge blocks of institutional buying was recorded the week I bought in, and I am positive analyst coverage will begin soon.

Solid Positions for this week are IMGX, ASWX, MSFT and ECTX. Speculative pick is JAWZ (rumored to be filing for Nasdaq listing). Stock watch: JDSU, CSCO, PACW, NITE. Be sure to note this is not a recommendation. All investors should use their own judgments in buying securities.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Letter stereotypical

To the editor: Sometimes ignorance is bliss. But when a person presumes to enter a public forum with the mantle of ignorance for all to see, this bliss may quickly turn into a thick, iron shackle. Since Todd Nolen's letter (UD, 11/9) relies on many misconceptions about women, I feel it necessary (may, gratifying) to expose his logical fallacies for others who may assume that our country is bereft of women who are capable of leadership.

Let's examine some of Nolen's claims. That "there has not been a woman qualified to assume and execute the duties as a leader of the free world" is dangerously wrong. As Nolen uses Elizabeth Dole for his example, I feel that it is only fair to respond in kind. Clearly, Nolen ignores many of Dole's qualifications based on his observation that she is only the wife of a senator. As the wife of a senator, Elizabeth Dole has served in the cabinets of two presidents. America has had a number of presidents with far less experience in national government.

Nolen also claims that Dole is not qualified because she was unable to raise enough money for her campaign. It is patently absurd to think that money equals ability. Under this logic, the American people would simply choose a leader based on the candidate's fund-raising savvy. While Nolen astutely points out that one cannot win based solely on money, he implies that the only people who matter as voters are those with financial influence. As a graduate student with limited funds, I need not even vote for Dole because I do not have monetary clout — if we subject ourselves to Nolen's elitist reasoning.

Moreover, it would seem that, accepting Nolen's other generalizations and limited faculties, voting for a woman would lead to the complete annihilation of America. Nolen questions whether a woman would have the resolve to bomb innocent civilians. Apparently, the willingness to harm innocent civilians is a necessary qualification for the office of presidency. I would seriously doubt that any leader, female or male, takes this action lightly. Even considering this position, it would appear that Nolen has been able, without any kind of reasonable research or study, as if they exist, to castigate and categorize women as overly emotional and inherently weak.

However, the most disconcerting assumption offered by Nolen is that women should pacify themselves with the political leftovers. Would Jackie Robinson, and any other African American baseball player, have been satisfied with picking up the bats of other hitters? Robinson was not the best athlete when he played, but he was quite good and more importantly, he was a symbolic figure who became a powerful role model. The doors need to be opened. America should no longer be transfixed by the unremitting ignorance of small-minded people. If Nolen wishes to persist in believing these unfounded, biased, stereotypes, then it is his right. But do not believe for a second that the rest of us will content ourselves with his contribution to a muddled vision!

The Money Pit

To the editor: I assume that most Tech students have seen the '80's movie, "The Money Pit." For those who have not seen it, Tom Hanks and Shelly Long buy what seems to be their dream house. Unfortunately for them, their dream house turns into a real fixer-upper. Everything imaginable, including the staircase, crumbles. They are forced to put tons of money into the fixing of the house. Every time they inquire to the timetable of completion of the house repair, the contractor gives the same answer, "Two weeks." Does this sound familiar to any of you?

The new debate about our own little money pit is about parking fees. Granted, $2 doesn't seem like much, but hey, we are college students. I hope this is not a news flash to anyone, but most of us are either broke or getting pretty close.

The reason we have to pay to park is because of arena costs such as air conditioning and lights. I wonder why we are told about these fees now, a year after the building was supposed to be finished. I can only think of two possibilities. The administration conveniently forgot to mention this when we voted for the arena in 1996. The second possibility is that the administration, due to lack of planning, realized that even more money was needed. And since there was nothing more they could take from the English/Philosophy/Education Complex, they decided to milk the students and citizens of Lubbock.

Enough is enough. I wonder if our own money pit ever will be completed. Unfortunately, lost in all the controversy are the men's and women's basketball teams. This is not their fault. Don't let this mess hamper your support for our teams. Find somewhere cheap or free to park, and get behind the Raiders and Lady Raiders.

Tech parents offer students road-side assistance

by Jamie Laubhan
Staff Writer

A growing list of 27 Texas Tech parents in 11 cities along the route to Austin will be offering a variety of services to students who will travel to this weekend's football game against the University of Texas.

The Texas Tech Association of Parents, formerly the Dads and Moms Association, discussed ways they could help promote student's safety at their general membership meeting on Saturday.

The network of parents will offer the use of their phones, a place to rest, possibly food and any other assistance that might be needed.

"The group's biggest concern is that the students have a safe trip," said Trudy Putteet, director of the Association of Parents. "The network's main goal is to provide safe contacts and safe stops along the way."

A list of homes and phone numbers students can utilize was advertised in Thursday's edition of The University Daily.

The association's decision comes in response to the recent death of Tech student Michael Burrows, who died as a result of driver fatigue.

Siavash Hozhabri, sophomore marketing major and friend of Burrows, said the program has potential, but it is too early to tell.

"It's not a bad thing, but I can't say it's a good thing," Hozhabri said. "There aren't any results yet, but we will know after this weekend."

Robert Deming, a volunteer in the program, was not aware of the recent death.

"We would just be glad to help out in any way possible," Deming said. "We encourage students to stop if they need to rest."

Deming's son, Justin, a freshman engineering major, will be making the journey to Austin. He said he would want his son treated in the same manner.

Putteet agrees with Deming's comments.

"I think the parents are doing this because they would want someone to look after their son or daughter as they would their own," she said.

The Association of Parents plans to provide assistance to students for future events as well. Plans to transport students by charter bus to next year's Texas A&M game are already in the works.

Students are encouraged to contact Putteet at 799-0648 if they incur any problems along the way and need assistance. For more information, visit the Association of Parents' Web site at www.ttu.edu/parentspage.

Raiders set to barbecue Bevo

by Patrick Gonzales
Staff Writer

Even though the battle of the Rickys has passed, this year's Texas Tech-Texas clash will have even more at stake.

In a rivalry that began in 1928, the Red Raiders (5-4 overall, 4-2 Big 12) and No. 10 Longhorns (8-2 overall, 5-1 Big 12) will battle for first place in the Big 12 South Division at 6 p.m. Saturday at Darrell K. Royal-Memorial Stadium in Austin.

A Tech victory would give the squad an opportunity to play for the division title Nov. 1 against Oklahoma. A victory by Texas would clinch the Big 12 South for the Longhorns.

Texas has won 22 out of the 27 contests in the series played in Austin, but Tech has taken two-straight from the Longhorns and the last four out of six.

Tech's 42-35 win against the Longhorns last season ended a seven-game winning streak and put them out of contention for the Big 12 Championship.

"We're going to go out there and play our hearts out, and there's going to be a party here (Lubbock) Saturday night."

Shaud Williams
Tech tailback

Red Raider tailback Shaud Williams, who leads the squad in rushing with 645 yards, will be making his first trip to Austin on Saturday. "I'm just looking to be a Longhorn killer," Williams said, who needs 250 yards in his last test third in the Big 12, giving up only 99.5 yards-per-contest.

"They're real aggressive, physical and have good speed," Williams said about the Longhorns' defense.

Perhaps the cornerstone of the Texas squad, however, is its offense, which ranks first in the Big 12, averaging 438.2 yards-per-contest.

Tech defensive coordinator John Goodner has the task of creating a game plan to stop the Longhorns' offense.

Texas has the conference's second-leading rusher in Hodges Mitchell along with the third-leading passer in Major Applewhite.

The balanced offensive attack the Longhorns possess is what Goodner said makes them dangerous.

"The biggest concern we have is eliminating the big plays that we gave them last year," Goodner said. "We played good defense in last year's game except for about three plays."

The three plays Goodner was referring to were touchdown passes of 67, 47 and 31 yards to Wane McGarity.

Even though McGarity now is flaunting his skills in the NFL, the Longhorns still have a corps of receivers in Kwame Cavil and Ryan

Greg Kreller/The University Daily

Tech running back Sammy Morris will help the Red Raider squad in its battle against the Longhorns Saturday at 6 p.m. in Austin.

Nuñez, who are leading the Big 12 in receiving.

But despite the Longhorns' different weapons, Tech defensive end Taurus Rucker said the key will be stopping Applewhite.

"He's not just a great athlete, he's also smart and makes great decisions," said Rucker, who is tied for second in the Big 12 with six sacks.

"He's a great quarterback ... I just hope I have a lot of sacks this week."

Another factor the Raiders will have to face is a sold-out Darrell K. Royal-Memorial Stadium which holds 80,082 spectators.

The contest will be broadcast nationally by Fox Sports Net, Cox Cable channel 20.

It will be the biggest crowd the Red Raiders have played in front of all season.

For Williams, it will be the biggest crowd of his career.

"There are a lot of guys on this team that like to play in pressure situations, so I'm not bothered one bit," Williams said about playing in Austin. "We're going to go out there and play our hearts out, and there's going to be a party here (Lubbock) Saturday night."

Shipley perseveres despite injuries

by Patrick Gonzales
Staff Writer

Sprained ankles, jammed fingers and broken bones. Along with memorizing plays and staying in shape comes perhaps the most dreaded task for a college football player — playing with injuries.

Texas Tech middle linebacker Kyle Shipley has had his share of injuries during his five-year career.

This season alone, the senior from Arlington has suffered a sprained knee, a dislocated left wrist, chronically-sore ankles and a dislocated right ring finger. Even though these injuries would make the average human cringe, Shipley thinks differently.

"This season, I've really been injury-free," Shipley said, who also has his daily dosage of bumps, scrapes and bruises.

Despite the injuries, Shipley has never missed a contest for the Red Raiders, playing in more than 42 games in his career.

Shipley dislocated his wrist against North Texas but said the pain only lasted for about two weeks. However, the one injury Shipley said has caused him the most problems through his career has been his ankles. The pain is so strong and persistent he has to tape up his ankles and take anti-inflammatory medication daily to keep the swelling down.

"Half our guys couldn't come out here and play if they didn't tape up their ankles," Shipley said. "It just shows you that the human body is not supposed to be doing this."

For Shipley, the motivation to play through the pain is simple. He loves the game, and he respects his teammates.

"When one guy misses a game or practice because of injury, it just messes everything up," he said. "I could miss practice if I wanted to, but it's just a mind-set that I'm going to do the best for my teammates."

Staying on the field seems to be a driving force for all Tech players.

But despite his dedication, Shipley also realizes there are some injuries that could have long-term effects. Before signing with Tech, Shipley said he talked to former college players and their wives who warned him about the long-term effects of playing college football.

However, at least two more contests remain in Shipley's career, much to the liking of Raiders defensive coordinator John Goodner.

Goodner said Shipley is probably the glue that holds the SWARM defense together.

"Kyle is one of those guys that doesn't get a whole lot of notoriety," Goodner said. "But yet he's continued to give 100 percent. He's been so good for us, and when he quits, I may have to quit."

Red Raiders ride Express to victory lane

by Jeff Keller
Staff Writer

After a sluggish offensive start, the Texas Tech men's basketball team was able to battle its way to a 66-51 victory against Arkansas Express in its exhibition season opener Thursday at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Forward Brodney Kennard slammed home the game's first two points at the 18:47 mark in the first half, but three minutes elapsed before any more points were tallied. After the start, Tech was able to build a lead as big as 14 points at 21-7 with 3:30 left in the half.

But the Red Raiders allowed the Express to shave four points off the lead and went into the locker room at halftime with a 29-19 lead.

In the second half, Tech was able to keep the Express at a distance as it never allowed them closer than 10 points.

The Red Raiders built a lead of 20 points at 64-44 with 3:35 left in the game, but the Express outscored Tech 7-2 the rest of the way to give the Red Raiders their final margin of victory.

Forward Mario Layne led Tech in scoring on the night with 16 points. He also grabbed three rebounds in the game but went 4-of-9 from the charity stripe.

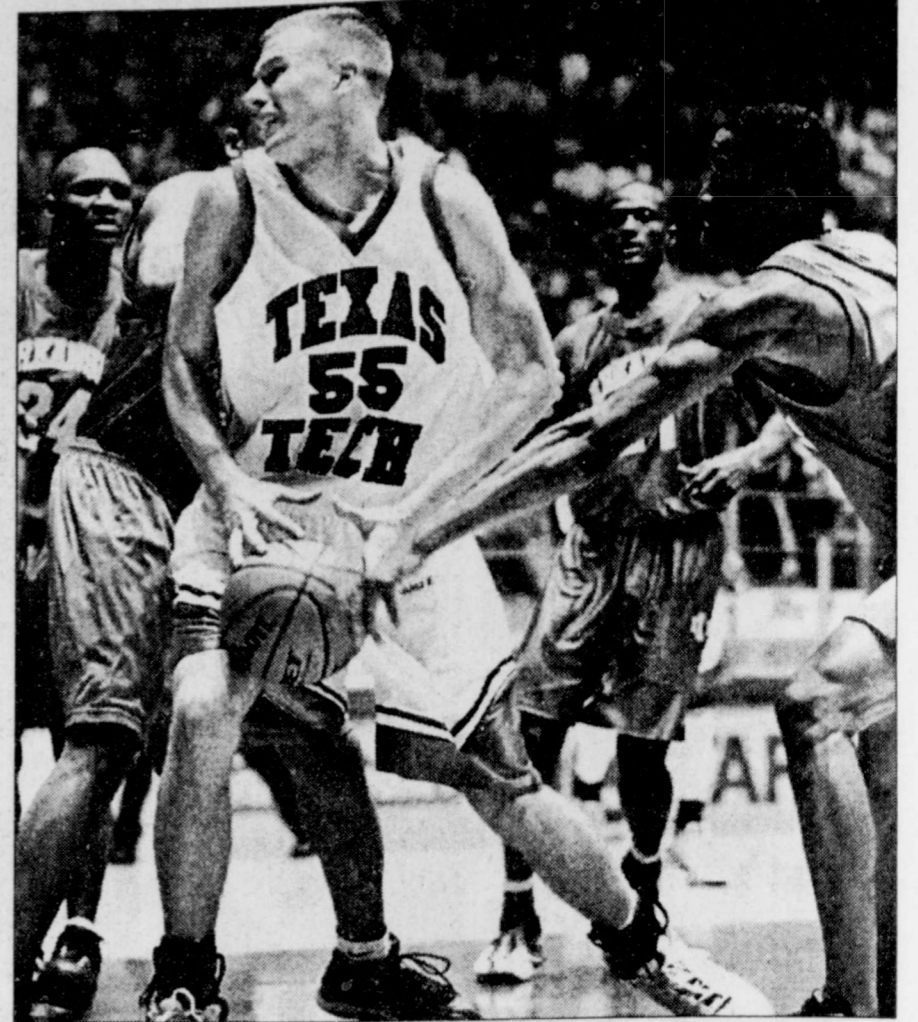

Layne said the team had a good night, but he hopes he and the team can improve from the free-throw line.

"I think even though I had a pretty all right night, the whole team had a pretty good night," Layne said. "I felt that I shot the ball not too good from the free-throw line. As a matter of fact, the team didn't shoot free throws as well as we have in the practices and the workouts."

Tech guard Rayford Young had 10 points and four assists against the Express and said it felt good to get back out on the courts and play and win.

"A win is a win," Young said. "We came out there and did some good things, but we're going to have to work on a lot of things if we are going to try and win our two games next week."

Tech out-rebounded the Express of 40 to 32 with Kennard leading the way with 14 boards.

Layne said Kennard's effort played a big part in Tech's victory.

"I think one of the unsung heroes was Brodney Kennard," Layne said. "He had 14 rebounds in the game, and we are going to need him. He just did a helluva job tonight. On the boards, he was everywhere. I mean, 14 defensive rebounds, what more could you ask."

Tech's next contest will be against Global Sports at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Kennard said this opening win against Arkansas Express was good, but the Red Raiders still have a long road ahead of them.

"I think this is a pretty good start to the season," Kennard said.

"But we still have a lot more work to do. We can't be satisfied with beating Arkansas Express. Even though they are a great team, we've just got to get better."
