Care for mentally ill kids is questioned

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas doesn't provide adequate care for children with mental illness, parents and mental health advocates say, leaving many families desperate and bankrupt as they try to find help for their children.

Texas ranks 43rd nationally in funding for its mental health system and many children must do without treatment, the Austin American-Statesman reported in Sunday's editions.

Parents, running out of options, sometimes file minor charges against their children so they will go to juvenile jail, making them eligible for more mental health services. Others give up care of their children to the state.

More than 655,000 Texas children suffer mental health problems, ranging from depression to schizophrenia, the newspaper said.

Many need intensive help, services like hospitalization or residential treatment. In Texas, only the bare necessities of medicine, therapy and some training are offered, and can take weeks to receive.

Bee swarm attacks 77-year-old woman

LAKE FOREST, Calif. (AP) — Bees stung a 77-year-old woman 500 times while she walked in an Orange County retirement community Sunday, leaving her in critical condition, authorities said.

The woman, whose identity was withheld, was attacked when a hive was disturbed by workers at Freedom Village retirement community, said Liz Bear, a spokeswoman for Saddleback Memorial Medical Center.

"She's having an allergic reaction due to the number of stings," Bear said. She said the woman remained conscious while hundreds of stingers were removed and was expected to remain hospitalized for several days.

Paramedics who responded had to don bee veils and protective clothing to treat the woman, said county fire Capt. Paul Hunter.

Princess labeled as unhappy in book

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana was quick to laugh but remained a deeply unhappy person, according to a new biography strongly condemned by her son Prince William.

The Sunday Times printed the second installment of "Shadows of a Princess" by Patrick Jephson, Diana's private secretary from 1987 to 1996, a period that included her 1992 separation from Prince Charles.

Saying his mother's "trust has been betrayed," the 18-year-old prince made his disapproval clear Friday during his first substantial news conference.

"Of course, Harry and I are both quite upset about it," he said, referring to his younger brother. "Even now she is still being exploited."

Buckingham Palace also objected to the biography, with Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Charles issuing a rare joint statement Sept. 15.

COLLEGE STATION — If it was only a battle between the Texas Tech and Texas A&M football teams, the outcome may have been different.

Instead, it was the Red Raiders who seemed to do the most damage to themselves, in a 33-15 loss to the Aggies in front of 83,644 fans Saturday at Kyle Field in College Station.

"When you play a good team like A&M, you have to be precise," Tech coach Mike Leach said. "We played hard, but we just didn't play consistent. We just didn't play mentally tough."

The self-imposed damage came in many forms: poor special teams play, numerous penalties and inconsistent offense.

But somehow, none of that seemed to matter in the first three quarters. The final margin may have seemed large, but it wasn't until the fourth quarter that the Aggies used two Red Raider breakdowns to put the game away.

With 13:04 remaining in the fourth quarter, Tech quarterback Kliff Kingsbury hit Tim Baker for a 13-yard touchdown pass and added the

Professors await presidential debates

Interested parties look for good arguments from candidates.

By Jeff Lehr
Staff Writer

With the first 2000 presidential debate only a day away, some Texas Tech professors are hoping to watch both candidates play a good game of expectations.

Tuesday night, Gov. George W. Bush of Texas and Vice President Al Gore will go head-to-head in the first of three nationally televised debates at three different eastern U.S. universities.

So far, Gore has received a slight edge over Bush in the polls, but Steve Greene and David Lanoue, both political science professors at Tech, believe those polls could end up working in Bush's favor in the long run.

"Politics is all about playing the game of expectations," Greene said. "I think what could really work in (Bush's) favor is everyone's perception of him."

Initially, Bush only agreed to one of the three presidential debates suggested by the bipartisan Commission on Presidential Debates. Bush asked, in his counter-proposal, that two other debates occur on CNN's "Larry King Live" and NBC's "Meet the Press."

Gore supported the talk show forum, but argued that they be held in addition to the CPD debates.

Ultimately, the major networks refused to carry the talk show debates, forcing Gore and Bush to compromise with CPD officials and have three, 90-minute debates in a variety of formats.

Lanoue said he believes Bush's initial reluctance to agree with Gore has given voters a somewhat skeptical impression of the Republican candidate for president.

"It's clear that his advisers don't feel that he is the stronger debater and as good as Gore at handling questions and thinking on his feet," he said. "But, I think he can win just by beating the expectations game."

Greene said it is very possible that Bush could come out of the debates ahead of Gore in the polls because he performed better than everyone thought he would.

Moses looking elsewhere

From staff reports

Deputy Chancellor Mike Moses interviewed on Friday with Dallas Independent School District to become the next superintendent.

The University Daily was unable to reach Moses through the weekend. According to reports in the Dallas Morning News, Moses spent the majority of Friday morning in an interview with the Dallas trustees and was then asked to return Friday afternoon for a second interview. The article also stated a decision will not be announced for at least another week and no offers were made at the time of the interviews.

The Dallas Morning News reported that the trustees have voted against two other candidates for the position, and no other interviews are scheduled for the position at this time. Moses told The Dallas Morning News that he has a heart for public education and a heart for kids.

Moses, 48, was hired at Texas Tech in Summer 1999 and is paid a $190,000 annual salary for his duties as deputy chancellor. When he accepted the position with Tech, he said it was a natural progression to move from public education to higher education, following the footsteps of his father.

Before becoming deputy chancellor, Moses was state education commissioner, appointed in 1995 by Gov. George W. Bush. Prior to that he was superintendent for the Lubbock Independent School District. He has also worked as a teacher, principal and superintendent in La Marque and Tatum school systems.

Searchers identified

Diverse roles highlight Texas Tech vice-president search committee.

By Angel Wolfe
Staff Writer

Five groups of diverse individuals have been asked to seek out nominees for five vice president positions available on the Texas Tech campus.

Jim Brunjes, chief financial officer for the Tech system, said the group he is directing has not met as of yet, but will soon.

"I've not begun sending copies of resumes we've received," he said. "I'll be doing that this next week."

Brunjes is in charge of the search committee for vice president for fiscal affairs. Applicants for this position are required to have a master's degree in business administration and have professional and administrative experience.

The vice president for fiscal affairs is the chief financial officer for the university and is responsible for managing, directing and controlling financial affairs of the university, according to the Tech Web page.

"I believe one of the deadlines is Oct. 15," he said. "So about mid-October we will have a meeting."

At that time, Brunjes said, all committees will begin officially reviewing applicants for the positions. He said his committee will discuss what it should do next and begin reference checks.

About 50 to 100 applicants have sent resumes for the five positions, but not all applicants will be interviewed.

Elizabeth Hall, assistant provost, said the committee in search of vice president for student affairs is diverse.

"I'm confident this group will pass on good advice to the president," she said.

President David Schmidly has asked the committees to review all applicants for the positions and give him three to five names unranked but has given no official date as to when the names should be given to him.

The Student Affairs committee is scheduled to meet next week to review policies and procedures of how to go about narrowing down the list of applicants.

Applicants for this position are required to have a master's degree in a relevant discipline and should have experience related to student personnel management and administration.

According to the Tech Web site, the vice president for student affairs will be the senior student affairs officer responsible for administration coordination, development management and planning of the university policies, programs and services related to campus life and student development.

Allan Headley, associate academic dean of the Graduate School, is in charge of the 18 members of the search committee for vice president for research graduate studies technology transfer.

Applicants for this position are required to have an earned doctorate or equivalent terminal degree in a related field. They should have experience in education, research and administration. The position will entail being responsible for advancing the research mission, according to the Tech Web site.

The committee has met once to decide how best to conduct the search. "I am confident we will succeed in getting a qualified person for this position," Headley said.

Bill Wehner, vice chancellor for special projects and interim vice chancellor for institutional advancement, was unavailable for comment on his committee. Wehner is in charge of the search committee for vice president of institutional advancement. Applicants should have a bachelor's degree in a related field but a master's degree is preferred.

The vice president of institutional advancement is responsible for all major gifts in excess of $1 million to the university, according to the Tech Web site.

Marvin Cepica, dean of agricultural sciences and natural resources, was also unavailable for comment. He is in charge of the search committee for vice president of information technology, the chief information officer for the university. The primary responsibility of this position will be for developing and managing university technology and information services. Applicants are required to have a master's degree in management information systems, computer science or a closely related field.

All five positions are filled by interim vice presidents that will stay in the positions until the new employees take office. Schmidly has said he hopes to have all five vice presidents named by the end of the Fall semester.

SPECIAL ADVERTISING SUPPLEMENT TO THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Robert Lance Jewelers offers unique shopping experience to customers

Robert Lance Jewelers wants to make shopping for an engagement ring enjoyable, unique and educational.

Robert Rogers and Lance McIntosh opened Robert Lance Jewelers in October 1993. Both have been involved in the jewelry industry since 1976, and they have more than 24 years experience in serving Tech, Lubbock and the South Plains.

"What is really important to us is customer satisfaction and education," Rogers said.

McIntosh believes Robert Lance Jewelers offers an experience as unique as the jewelry they sell.

"We are different from other jewelers, we have fun and we try to make the experience enjoyable. We build relationships. It is all about relationships with us," McIntosh said. "Relationships that span three or four generations."

McIntosh and Rogers are both jewelers and designers. They will custom-make anything.

Rogers said they could make any idea, picture or drawing a reality. They try not to duplicate and want everything to be an original.

Robert Lance Jewelers also offers a complimentary proposal package that has a $150 value. They will provide dinner at Chez Suzettes, a bottle of wine, flowers and a picture to record the event. Since they have started the promotion, they have given away over 50 packages.

Rogers said the new promotion is part of the experience and selling of the romance. He said most men already have it planned out, but for those who do not, Robert Lance Jewelers can help.

They also said competitive pricing and working within the budget of the customers is an important part of the educational experience.

"Shopping for diamonds is what we're good at. Our forte is shopping really hard for stones and diamonds in large lots. We get bigger discounts and we pass that down to the customer," Rogers said. "It is an art of negotiating and we are very good at it."

McIntosh said education is key to their customer satisfaction. They are always willing to sit down with the customer and teach them about the different metals and the four C's - color, cut, clarity and carat weight. All consultations and preliminary design work are complimentary.

Rogers said right now the most popular size ranges from three-quarters of a carat to one and a half carats. He also said the demand for platinum has quadrupled in the last two years. Because there are a lot of decisions that go into designing the perfect engagement ring, Rogers does not encourage guys to buy a wedding set without their prospective fiancée coming in and looking too.

"We recommend that the woman get involved unless it is just a solitaire," he said.

Robert Lance Jewelers offers more than wedding sets.

Several lines of designer jewelry are available exclusively, including the John Haroy Collection, Rosen Block Designs and Zina.

Texas Tech class rings are also featured items at Robert Lance Jewelers. They offer traditional and contemporary designs.

Timepieces featured are Rolex, Tissot and John Hardy. Also available are Tag-Heuer, Breitling, Ebel Movado, Omega and most other major brands. Accessories for Rolex watches are also specialty for Robert Lance Jewelers. They carry diamond dials, and bezels available for most models in several different styles.

Edward Chapa, a master jeweler with more than 24 years experience is available for any repairs you may have. From soldering a sterling charm to setting a five-carat diamond, you will be pleased with his expert skills and the quality for his workmanship.

Robert Lance Jewelers takes customer satisfaction very seriously.

"Other jewelry stores kind of drop the ball. They [Robert Lance Jewelers] call back and let me know when something is in," customer Julie Judah said. "They take care of business. I don't have to call and remind them."

Rogers said the bottom line is they do not want their customers to buy something they do not like.

Robert Lance Jewelers is located at 82nd Street and Slide Rd. in Rockridge Plaza.

From Texas Tech class rings to custom-made engagement rings, Robert Lance Jewelers offer an extremely diverse selection of jewelry for every occasion. Located at 82nd Street and Slide Road, the jeweler has been in Lubbock since 1993.

Column

Marriage may not be the best answer, right now

As I continue with my no politics column subjects, I found myself with slim pickings as far as topics to complain, boast, tout or joke about. To be honest with you, I've lost a great deal of interest in the presidential campaign (yawn). Maybe the debates will liven things up.

So, I turned to a trusty issue of Time magazine, and an interesting cover story caught my eye. It was an article discussing divorce and the long-term effects on the children who come from broken families.

Greg Okuhara

The possible impacts of divorce on a child's life is no secret. Studies have shown that children whose parents have divorced have a greater occurrence of depression, learning difficulties, intimacy problems and other psychological issues. I think we can all agree on that.

What really grabbed my attention in the article was the point of view of Judith Wallerstein, author of "The Unexpected Legacy of Divorce." In her book, and previous works, she contends that parents should stay together for the sake of their children.

Her studies have convinced her and her supporters that a child has a much better chance of flourishing with an unhappy but intact family than happy separated parents.

This is quite a proposal considering 49 percent of marriages, most of which occur within the first four years of marriage, result in divorce in the United States. Wallerstein contends that the estimated 20 million divorced adults today have potentially screwed up their kids. And with more than 1 million children joining the ranks of divorce casualties each year, perhaps I should be thinking about becoming a psychiatrist.

According to a recent Time-CNN poll, Americans want to have their cake and eat it, too. About 66 percent of those polled said children are better off in a divorce where the parents are happy. However, 64 percent said these same children are "frequently harmed" when the divorce happens. Is there a happy medium? I sure hope so.

And why does the forum in which the parents try to decide what will be best for the child after a divorce take place in a courtroom where the child is almost always never present? Shame on the parents and the court system for treating the child like a line item on a prenuptial agreement.

Critics of Wallerstein's idea said her research is too narrow and casts a generalization upon too many.

She's also considered a doomsayer and crank. There are flaws in her methodology. She only interviewed citizens in an affluent, northern California suburb. However, I don't think she's too far off base.

Not too long ago, I heard a rash of stories about friends I graduated high school with and other acquaintances around the same age as I am who were engaged to be married or already were. Now I'm not saying they made the wrong decision. I'm sure there's a good chance some of these unions will last their lifetime — and I hope they do. But I always have to ask if they are too young to make such a commitment at this stage in their life.

Maybe it's just a difference of opinion, but I don't plan to tie the knot for another couple of years. I'm not going to lie, it's on my mind. I definitely look forward to little league games, dance recitals and braces.

However, I want to make sure everything else in my life is order first. I need to be financially secure. I need to be emotionally, physically and mentally healthy.

As much as I look forward to marriage, I'm in no rush to pick out an engagement ring either (how else can two month's salary last forever — or about four years?).

The question I pose to myself is: Would I stay in an unhappy marriage for the sake of sparing my children possible ill effects later down the road? My answer is I would not place myself in that situation in the first place, I hope. But if it ever did come to that point, I would have to evaluate that situation if and/or when it comes.

I thank God that I have been raised in a stable family with two loving parents. I think that puts me at an advantage compared to others. Not to say that children of divorce will turn out bad, but they do start with a handicap.

So, for all those love-struck fools out there with stars in your eyes, keep on lovin'.

Don't let the statistics keep you from seeking out your ideal soul mate. Instead, work toward defying the odds. If you choose to start a family, make sure you and your spouse are well prepared — in every way possible.

Stereotypes have no place at college

The Greek community is the saddest, poorest excuse for a "community" that I have ever seen in my life. All they do is drink beer, party too hard and haze each other. That's it. That is everything they accomplish.

That's not to say that non-Greeks, or GDIs as they proudly call themselves, are much better. They contribute absolutely nothing to this university as a whole, and individually accomplish very little beyond occasionally attending class. They can't even muster the energy or the brains to haze someone themselves, so they have to spread rumors about the horrific tales of Greek initiation rituals.

At this point, you'd think everyone would for some odd reason be offended, but I think the students in the College of Engineering are a little confused. All these nerds do is study. They have nothing better to do than go to study groups and grow more and more pale from lack of sunlight. Engineering majors are so out of touch with social trends, what from spending the last 394 Friday nights in the library, that they still say words like "golly" and "swell!" You'd think they were Mormon.

You kids in the College of Architecture aren't too far off. It's hard to peg you, though, because quite frankly, you never even leave the architecture building. My first year at Tech, a kid on my residence hall floor went to go work on a project in the architecture building. He just came out last Thursday and asked if it still looks like Clinton will be re-elected.

Then there's that wonderful group of people in the College of Agricultural Sciences and Natural Resources. Stupid farmers' kids. All they do is worry about cotton and tractors. How important can the farming industry be on our nation? Couldn't you people have picked more glamorous majors that actually impact the world?

I would say you should be more like the students in the College of Business Administration, but look at those people. Dressed to the nines every day, walking around like they are the most important people in the world.

Honestly, what does a business executive really do these days, anyway? They have meetings about numbers, how to get numbers up, figuring out why numbers are down and then they go to lunch. In the afternoons, they shop for art for their corner office and head out early. Next day, same thing. There's a real contribution to the world. What's the damn leather brief case for anyway? You can't have that many J. Crew catalogs can you?

Then, on the other side of campus, you have the College of Human Sciences. OK, can we just be honest for one second? Isn't the term "human sciences" just a nice way of saying you're majoring in housewife?

Speaking of housewives, there's also the College of Education students. How can someone wonder why there is no cure for AIDS or cancer when a third of the female population on campus is busy "studying" to be an elementary school teacher? Public schools are going to hell in a hand basket and this is what you choose for your career? Of course, the four males in this college are exempt from these comments because, frankly, we all know why you're enrolled over there (can you say 457:1?).

Let's not forget the College of Arts and Sciences. First of all, who the hell came up with the College of Arts and Sciences? You take two disciplines, as different as our female and male basketball teams, and put them under one heading. You have all the math and science people running around screaming about theorems and the endangered yellow-billed, red-tipped Amazonian tree jumper, mixed in with the long-haired, pot-smoking liberals who major in things like philosophy and journalism because they're too wussy to actually try and attempt to do something with their life. This college makes a whole lot of sense.

Come to think of it, the entire student body is an entire pool of hopeless, disrespectful fools. I mean, you tell them not to throw tortillas, and they throw tortillas. Are they idiots or just hell-bent rebels? Once they get out in the world, society is completely and utterly screwed. And the scary part is that these people actually contain the ability to reproduce and spawn more stupid, more apathetic beings (if this is humanly possible). Everyone on this campus, from the men (how is the eternal quest to get laid going, boys?) to the women (how are the husband auditions going, ladies?) is a sad excuse for a human being.

Stereotypes suck, huh? They piss you off, don't they? They make the small percentage of people the rule instead of the exception, you know?

Remember, whether you're a Beta or GDI, marketing major or hopeful teacher, student or administrator, one thing is a common bond between us all. We're all Red Raiders, and we're all in this whole college thing together.

Act accordingly. Brandon Formby is a senior journalism major from Plano. Heroin jokes and BMW comments can be e-mailed to brandonformby@hotmail.com.

Letters to the Editor

Participation encouraged for Homecoming

To the editor: When the Homecoming Coordinating Committee began planning this year's Homecoming, we had several goals in mind: to strengthen traditions at Texas Tech, provide outlets for student participation and foster the connection between current students and alumni. We planned several new events to take place during Homecoming that will enable us to reach such goals.

We added the election of a Homecoming King this year to provide more students at Tech the opportunity to share in the prestigious honor of representing Tech. We hope the students will set aside time to vote for the king and queen candidate who best exhibits the qualities necessary to represent Tech.

In conjunction with other student organizations, this is the third year for the Homecoming committee to sponsor a community service event. This year we selected a blood drive as our project. The Homecoming committee recognized the overwhelming shortage in the blood supply in the Lubbock area. We believe that a blood drive provides an opportunity for students to give back to the Lubbock community.

The karaoke contest is designed to give students an opportunity to participate in a Homecoming event with their student organization. This event allows student organizations to compete against one another in the name of Tech spirit.

This year's latest edition to Homecoming week is the former student leaders' alumni reception. The goal of this event is to bring past and present leaders together to share in the experiences of being a student leader at Tech.

The Homecoming Coordinating Committee has worked fervently to ensure that this is the greatest Homecoming celebration that the students, parents, alumni and community have ever been a part of. We hope that all students will take advantage of every event available throughout the week of Homecoming.

Lake Landmark to celebrate 64 years

By Kristina Thomas
Staff Writer

Lubbock Lake Landmark will hold Celebration 2000 to mark their 64th year of archaeological investigation Oct. 12-19. The celebration will also commemorate the 10th anniversary of the opening of new modern facilities and the discovery of information on more than 12,000 years of traditional lifestyles on the Llano Estacado. Although the festivities will last throughout the week, main activities will be geared towards school-age children. The public weekend activities will be held Oct. 14-15. During these days, there will be program demonstrators, who will cover a number of topics such as South Plains basket weaving, pottery and traditional cooking. A blacksmith and a storyteller will also be onsite. Lubbock Lake Landmark's museum educator Susan Shore said the activities are not lectures but rather very visual and some even call for audience participation. "There are many ways that people can participate," Shore said. "We will also have a wonderful storyteller and many different games for the whole family. There will be something there for everyone." There will be family activities and games such as family quilting with no sewing required, a chance to learn how to weave and frontier games. The only activity that will be geared towards primarily adults is a slide presentation titled "Names, Labels, and the Dilemma of Cultural Diversity" by Dr. Frances Levine at 2 p.m. Sunday. Shore said the goal of the festival is to give people a glimpse into a past that most people do not know anything about.

The Lubbock Lake Landmark has uncovered records of human growth in this area dating back to 12,000 years. The museum, galleries and 300 acres of nature trails are open to the public Tuesday-Saturday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is free. Shore said the festival is not only a time to learn more about other cultures and the past, but it is a fun time for students and families. "We are really encouraging students to come up and catch a glimpse into the past and have a little fun," Shore said.

Information available for Study Abroad

Students interested in finding out more information about Texas Tech's study abroad opportunities will have the chance from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. today in the University Center Courtyard. Representatives from Tech's Office of International Affairs will be available to answer questions and give information to those interested. More than 350 Tech students participated in study abroad programs last year, Zandy Crosier, program director, said. Students should begin looking into the study abroad program as soon as they realize they want to participate, she said. Students can also access the study abroad Web site at www.ioaff.ttu.edu/oiastudyabroad.

for a record nine years, and President Bill Clinton's approval ratings have hovered from 55 percent to 60 percent all year.

Lanoue said it is this time of peace and prosperity in America that will cause voters to elect Gore and leave the incumbent party in the White House.

Aside from the peace and prosperity standpoint of Lanoue, Greene said the vice president has done a good job of distancing himself from the negativity surrounding Clinton throughout his presidency.

"Some might think he would be starting at a disadvantage, but I think he's done a good job of separating himself from all of that," he said.

With four years in the Oval Office at stake for the candidates, Bush and Gore are looking to maximize the benefit of the high-profile televised contests.

The debates will begin at the University of Massachusetts in Boston tomorrow, and will shift to Winston-Salem, N.C. at Wake Forest University Oct. 11. They will conclude Oct. 17 at Washington University in St. Louis, Mo.

In the midst of the hotly-contested presidential debates, a vice presidential debate will take place Oct. 5 at Centre College in Danville, Ky., giving Sen. Joseph Lieberman and Dick Cheney a forum for debate.

As far as the push for a debate over issues affecting young people, both Greene and Lanoue said they feel it would be a good idea, but one that would still not be very effective.

"These debates will include the issues affecting people who vote and young people don't," Greene said.

"As long as 40- to 50-year olds are voting at a greater rate, young people will be ignored."

Homecoming events begin

Style Show, Elections, Karaoke, Cookout, Blood and a Pep Rally. What do these things have in common? Well, a lot, actually.

These are just some of the many activities you can enjoy during this week of Homecoming 2000. The reigning homecoming queen, Melissa Hancock, and KLLL's Rick Gilbert will host this year's style show, featuring the additions of homecoming king candidates. Be sure to pick up your ticket at the University Center for this tonight's extravaganza.

Tech students can purchase them for $2 with their student ID. The show starts promptly at 8 p.m. in the UC Allen Theatre.

The battle for who's going to donate the most blood will commence Tuesday.

Donation locations will be set up at the UC and the Student Recreational Center. The student organization with the most participants will be announced at halftime.

Karaoke is a term often maligned or associated with a worn out filler at a disorganized social event; but what the homecoming committee has in store for the Tech campus is sure catch your attention. Student organizations have signed up to participate in the first annual homecoming karaoke contest. Don't miss an opportunity to cheer for your friends as they walk the plank of stardom. Kiss 104's Michael Carmonlo will emcee the event at 7 p.m. in the UC Allen Theatre.

For the first time, polling sites for the homecoming king and queen selection will be online at various sites around campus, but you can also vote from a remote computer. Students may log on to the Student Government Association Web site, www.sga.ttu.edu, to vote for their candidate of choice. You'll need your personal information number to log on. If for some reason you've forgotten your PIN, go by 100 West Hall, or log on to techsis.admin.ttu.edu/student and click on the student services icon, then the "forgot pin" icon. The menu will walk you through the steps you need to take to get or reactivate your pin number.

Elections are scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday.

Las Vegas band Epstein's Mother performs Friday at the homecoming concert in the Urbanovsky Park Amphitheatre.

However, if you are intent on scratching in a paper ballot, those too will be available at the Student Recreational Center.

This year's cookout Wednesday has been combined with the coaches coffee. Be sure to swing by the University Center's northwest courtyard to enjoy a complimentary lunch provided by the Student Alumni Board and visit with Tech coaches.

Brian Mudd from News Channel 11 will emcee this year's program. Ken and Kelly from MIX 100 are returning at 7 p.m. Friday for an encore performance. They will be hosting the pep rally in Urbanovsky Park. This should prove to be another rowdy, Red Raider rally.

UC Briefly

'Blair Witch' to be shown

Texas Tech Student Activities Board presents "The Blair Witch Project" on at 8 p.m. Oct. 13 in the University Center Allen Theatre. The film tells the chilling tale of three film students who travel to the Burkittsville Woods in Maryland to investigate the legend of the Blair Witch and then mysteriously vanish. One year later, film footage from the trio is found that reveals their terrifying ordeal. A modern horror classic! Rated R. 80 minutes. For more information, contact the Student Activities Board office at 742-3621.

Hitchcock's 'Psycho' to be shown

The Texas Tech Student Activities Board presents Alfred Hitchcock's PSYCHO at 8 p.m. Oct. 27 in the University Center Allen Theatre. This suspense masterpiece unfolds with skill and horror as the lives of a private investigator, a lonely woman and an innkeeper become intertwined in a masterful web of obsession and terror as powerful today as when first released in 1960 ("That's what MOTHER would say.") Rated R. 109 minutes. For more information, contact the Student Activities Board office at 742-3621.

Mark Russell to perform

Whenever Mark Russell is down in the dumps, he opens the newspaper and immediately cheers up. Practically everything he sees strikes him as funny. Some days, he says, the jokes jump off the pages and write themselves.

Mark Russell, political satirist and star of 25 years of PBS specials, will share the laughter and song of politics with the Lubbock community Oct. 17.

Russell works live, fresh and topical performing stand-up comedy while accompanying himself on the piano. Mark Russell comedy specials have consistently been among the top-rated shows on that network.

After serving his full hitch, he found himself in the smoke-filled bars of Washington, D.C., singing his funny songs. When he got a job in a Capitol Hill bar, the first thing he thought was "I've started at the bottom, but I've worked my way down."

Around the time that the new frontier was invading

Washington, Russell invaded the Shoreham Hotel for a risky two-week gig. It lasted for 20 years. The Marquee Lounge became the place where politicians would come to hear Mark's jokes about the thing they had done that day.

Today, his syndicated column is enjoyed all across America as are his CDs, tapes and videos. He has also been a weekly commentator on CNN's "Inside Politics Weekend." He lives in D.C. for what he calls "the same reason a coal miner lives near the shaft."

Mark Russell's answer to the frequently asked question, "Do you have any writers?" is "Oh, yes, I have 535 writers - 100 in the Senate, and 435 in the House of Representatives."

The program, sponsored by the Texas Tech Student Activities Board, is part of the Nightlife Series. Russell will perform in the Lubbock Municipal Auditorium at 8 p.m. Oct. 17. Tickets go on sale today. For more ticket information, call 742-3610.

Tech soccer kicks Oklahoma teams

Tech volleyball beats Kansas in five games

Tech defender Tiana Boyea fights for a ball in Tech's 2-1 win over Oklahoma on Friday at R.P. Fuller Stadium. The Red Raiders picked up their first two Big 12 Conference wins this weekend with the win over Oklahoma and a 4-0 win over Oklahoma State on Sunday at R.P. Fuller Stadium.

Greg Kreller/The University Daily

By Phil Riddle
 Staff Writer

Texas Tech women's soccer coach Felix Oskam delivered a stirring speech to his charges heading into this weekend's home matches.

"I told them that the road to San Antonio and the Big 12 Tournament starts right here," Oskam said. "I told them we had to win here to get back into the conference race and to have a chance at the tournament."

The Red Raiders took his words to heart, battering Oklahoma State 4-0 Sunday. The win over the Cowgirls came on the heels of a 2-1 edging of Oklahoma Friday.

Junior Forward Melanie Brosnahan scored Tech's first and last goals in Sunday's contest to lead the winning effort.

"It feels great," Brosnahan said following Sunday's match. "We came out and finally started finishing our shots."

Brosnahan scored her first goal at the 4:02 mark in the opening period, then drilled her second off a rebound in the six-yard box with just over 22 minutes left in the first period. The goals were Brosnahan's fourth and fifth of the season.

"I was glad to see us get the first score," Oskam said. "Oklahoma State has had a little problem coming back after they get behind, kind of like we have, and it was a morale boost for us to go up in the first half."

Kerrie Graham, a junior forward, ripped a direct kick into the upper left corner of the Cowgirls' goal 59:06 into the match, and freshman midfielder Monica Miller got an unassisted tally, her first this year, less than six minutes later.

The loss dropped OSU to 3-9. The Cowgirls are winless in four Big 12 contests.

Tech opened the weekend with a 2-0 win over Oklahoma Friday.

Graham scored her fourth goal of the 2000 campaign off a Marie Valdez assist for the game winner. Freshman Forward Kerri Campbell set up Valdez less than a minute earlier to knot the score at 1-1.

The Red Raiders had 13 shots on goal to OU's four, including a 6-1 margin in the first period, but still trailed after Oklahoma's Logan Womack gave the Sooners a 1-0 advantage with about 13 minutes remaining in the opening stanza.

"We took a lot of shots," Oskam said. "We just weren't taking good shots. We needed to go out there and test their goalie."

"I think they were trying to lure us in early in the game. They wanted to get behind us and take advantage of their team speed."

A stiff breeze kept the Raiders playing in the Sooners end of the field for the bulk of the first period but didn't yield any early goals.

"The wind played a part as it always does here," Oskam said. "We played a little sloppy early, but we came back and we deserved to win."

Valdez said defense was the key to the Tech victory.

"We played a great defensive game," said Valdez, a junior forward from Isleta, N.M. "It proved to us that we need to be taking shots."

"We came out and dominated," Graham said. "We knew we had to step up and get a win. Now we know we can win any game we play."

Friday's goal was the second for Valdez this season. Graham has accounted for five goals for the Red Raiders during the 2000 campaign.

This weekend's victories lifted Tech to 2-2 in Big 12 play. They are 4-8 overall.

The Red Raiders will look to build on the momentum of their two wins as they travel to face Kansas Friday before visiting Missouri Sunday.

Their next home match is slated for Oct. 15 against Baylor.

The Texas Tech volleyball team found themselves in a familiar position Saturday in Lawrence, Kan.

For the third time in five Big 12 Conference matches, the Raiders went five games to achieve victory in a match.

Tech picked up the win 15-11, 5-15, 7-15, 15-12, 15-6.

Led by senior Colleen Smith with 24 kills and sophomore Melissa McGehee with 23 kills, the Red Raiders overcame a 1-2 deficit to defeat the Jayhawks.

Like they have in each Big 12 match this season, the Raiders won the first game but lost the second game.

The Tech volleyball team found themselves in a hole after falling in game three (7-15).

The Raiders came back and won game four 15-12 to send the match to rally scoring.

The Raiders ended up with the 15-6 decision in game five to give Tech a four game conference winning streak.

Tech is now 15-1 overall and 4-1 in Big 12 play.

The Jayhawks dropped to 11-4 overall and 2-4 in conference play with the loss.

two-point conversion with a completion to tight end Cole Roberts. With the touchdown and conversion, the Red Raiders (4-1 overall, 0-1 Big 12) trailed, 19-15, but on the ensuing kickoff, Anthony Terrell recovered a Richard Whitaker fumble at the A&M 19-yard line. While running off the field, Terrell celebrated the turnover by gesturing a fraternity symbol over his head. He was flagged for a 15-yard personal foul penalty, giving the Red Raiders the ball at the 34-yard line. Three plays later, the Red Raiders were faced with a fourth-and-one situation at the 25-yard line and elected to go for it. On the next play, Kingsbury took the snap and lofted a fade pass to a wide-open Carlos Francis, who dropped the ball just as he was about to cross the goal line. "It hit my facemask," said Francis, who finished the game with one catch for 26 yards. "It was one of the key plays in the game, and I felt like I let my team down." The Aggies wasted no time in taking advantage of the miscue, as they marched 74 yards in 11 plays for a touchdown, stretching their lead to 26-15 with less than seven minutes remaining in the contest. On the Red Raider's next possession, Kingsbury had a fade pass intercepted by Sammy Davis, setting up the Aggies' final touchdown that sealed the victory. "We had 60 minutes of opportunities (to win the game)," Leach said. "It wasn't just a play here or a play there." The Red Raiders fell behind early in the contest, 7-0, after A&M quarterback Mark Farris led the Aggies on a 51-yard touchdown drive in five plays on their first possession of the game. The touchdown came on a 14-yard dash by running back Joe Weber, which was the first rushing touchdown surrendered by the Red Raiders this season. "That first drive wasn't like our guys," Tech defensive coordinator Greg McMackin said. "But after that, we settled down and played good until the last eight minutes of the ball game. Then they just made the plays, and we didn't." Tech, who went three-and-out on its first offensive possession, responded to the Aggies early score, marching 50 yards in eight plays. However, on fourth-and-nine at the A&M 30-yard line, the Red Raiders opted to fake a field goal. The fake was not successful as the attempted pass from the holder Eric Rosiles was intercepted by Michael Jameson. Jameson returned the interception 76 yards to the Tech eight-yard line. The return set up a 32-yard field goal by Terence Kitchens. "(The Aggies) were calling, 'Watch the fake,'" Rosiles said. "I should have checked it off but things happen." Aided by its up-start defense, Tech pulled to within, 10-7, in the second quarter on a 15-yard touchdown pass from Kingsbury to Baker. But another special team's breakdown helped the Aggies get back on track. With less than five minutes remaining in the first half, Rosiles had a punt blocked by Jay Brooks, giving the Aggies possession of the ball at the Tech 2-yard line. Aggie running back Richard Whitaker punched it in the end zone on the next play to stretch the lead. Overall, both teams totaled 345 yards of offense, but the Aggies converted three Tech turnovers into 13 points while the Red Raiders did nothing with their one takeaway. "This is a tough one to lose," said Kingsbury, who finished the game going 28-of-50 passing for 291 yards and two touchdowns. "We were one play away from breaking it open."

Duval wins Buick

PINE MOUNTAIN, Ga. (AP) — David Duval won't have to answer any more questions about his back injury. Or winning. Playing for the first time in 10 weeks, Duval showed he might be ready to take a run at Tiger Woods, making birdies on three of the last four holes Sunday to win the Buick Challenge. He closed with a 7-under 65 and finished at 269, two strokes ahead of Jeff Maggert and Nick Price, for his first victory in 29 tournaments. "It's surprising to come back this way," said Duval, who earned $414,000. Even more stunning was the way he won. Trailing by two strokes with three holes to play, Duval hit a wedge to 2 feet for birdie on No. 17, then hit a wedge over the 18th flag to 4 feet for birdie. Maggert lost the lead for thrdens. Price caught a nasty lie in the first cut of rough on the 17th, not sure whether it would come out 6 feet long or 6 feet short. His chip came up short, and he failed to save par. He had a 68. For Duval, the victory helps salvage a strange year. He went on a vigorous fitness routine in the offseason but saw one victory after another slip away early in the year, either because of his putting or because of a bad shot at the worst time — like his 6-iron into Rae's Creek at the Masters. Right when his game was rounding into form, he injured his back after the U.S. Open. Still, he wound up in the final group at the British Open with Woods, although six strokes behind. He gave him a brief scare, but Woods went onto more history and Duval went on disabled list. Flat on his back for six weeks, Duval missed the PGA Championship and the World Golf Championship event at Firestone, uncertain when he would return — or if he could return. He came back in style, with his 12th career victory to become only the third active player with that many wins in his 20s.

Lady Raiders ranked in preseason polls

With practice just a couple of weeks away, the Texas Tech women's basketball team has already found themselves in the spotlight. The Lady Raiders have been ranked in the pre-season top 25 by three publications. Marsha Sharp's team is ranked eighth by the ESPN/Dick Vitale's Basketball Preview, eighth by the Women's Basketball News Service and 12th by Athlon's. Tech is the only Big 12 school to be ranked in all three pre-season polls. Iowa State and Oklahoma also broke into the polls. Both the Cyclones and Sooners were on Athlon's list with the Cyclones ranked 11th and the Sooners close behind at 14th. The Cyclones are also ranked 13th by the WBNS. Not only have the Lady Raiders been honored as a team, but they have earned some pre-season awards individually.
