Local deregulation could be prolonged

LUBBOCK (AP) — Electric deregulation won't come as quickly to the Texas Panhandle and El Paso as it will to other parts of the state.

Part of the reason has to do with a lack of transmission lines to carry the load of a competitive market.

Sen. David Sibley, R-Waco, says the Panhandle hasn't met a three-part test, which is necessary to become competitive. And neither the Panhandle nor El Paso has enough transmission lines to carry the anticipated load.

The rest of the state will open its markets to full competition in January.

"If you can imagine trying to fill up a bathtub with a garden hose that is not a good way to do it," Sibley said. "It would be better with a fire hydrant."

The Panhandle and El Paso are on different electric grids than the rest of the state, so Sibley and co-author Rep. Steve Wolens, D-Dallas, wrote into their Texas deregulation bill an exception that allows the Panhandle to go about deregulation at a slower pace than other areas.

Bush talks to Allies about missile system

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — President Bush marveled Tuesday at a high-tech simulation of NATO's military might as he asked America's allies to "work as one" with him on the development of a missile defense system and "new architecture" for U.S. defenses.

"To succeed, America knows we must work with our allies. We did not prevail together in the Cold War only to go our separate ways pursuing separate plans with separate technologies," Bush told an outdoor assembly of Navy and Defense Department personnel.

Later, flying back to Washington, Bush told reporters that he realizes his plans to modernize the nation's military could result in cuts in older defense programs and weapons systems — possibly causing problems for some communities.

But, anticipating a potential congressional firestorm if some major weapons programs are curtailed, Bush said members of Congress "ought to wait" until Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld finishes his top-to-bottom review of the military.

Earthquake strikes El Salvador, 70 dead

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A strong earthquake struck El Salvador on Tuesday morning, killing at least 70 people and adding to the destruction caused by a January tremor in which more than 800 died.

Officials said at least 70 people died and hundreds of houses collapsed Tuesday in a nation still on emergency footing following a 7.6-magnitude earthquake on Jan. 13 that forced hundreds of thousands to abandon damaged or destroyed homes.

"It is true that this is another blow for El Salvador, but I call for tranquility. We have to be calm," President Francisco Flores told The Associated Press after a helicopter flight to assess the damage.

Residents of the capital fled into the streets in panic as the earthquake hit. Major highways were closed by landslides.

The U.S. Geological Salvadorgical Survey said the earthquake had a magnitude of 6.1.

Peggy Sue still under spotlight after Holly era

By Cory Chandler
Staff Writer

Buddy Holly fans around the world know "Peggy Sue" as one of the songs that made the recording artist famous.

To the citizens of Lubbock though, Peggy Sue is more than a part of American pop culture. She is a neighbor, friend and local radio personality as well.

Peggy Sue Gerron, the namesake of Buddy Holly's songs "Peggy Sue" and "Peggy Sue Got Married" has been in the spotlight since she was 17 when she first learned that Buddy Holly's band, the Crickets, had incorporated her name into their music.

Gerron, who dated and later married Crickets drummer Jerry, said she was excited to be a part of the music scene going on then.

"Back in '57 and '58, when the Crickets were writing and performing their songs, teens were in need of a music of their own. We were trying to get away from the big band sound. Buddy was on the cutting edge of music," she said.

She said this is what helped make the Crickets' music a big part of American music history.

"Buddy was terribly talented and very innovative," she said. "He never refused a new thought, whether it was his own or someone else's."

In addition to being a freelance writer and having a morning talk show on Saturdays, Gerron

Alcohol crashes argued

Mothers Against Drunk Driving urge state lawmakers to stiffen penalties.

AUSTIN (AP) — Fresh from last session's victories, Mothers Against Drunk Driving reignited its legislative crusade Tuesday to fight alcohol-related crashes in Texas.

Members spent the day at the Capitol, lobbying lawmakers to ban open containers in vehicles, make it easier to revoke drivers licenses and require alcohol tests for all drivers in serious crashes.

"It seems like this time we sort of got some momentum from last session," said Bill Lewis, MADD's public policy liaison. The group's chief victory last session came when lawmakers agreed to lower the blood alcohol concentration level from .10 to .08.

"None of these bills increase the punishment for drunk driving," Lewis said. "What we're really interested in is stopping crashes before they happen."

MADD members from El Paso to East Texas scurried from office to office talking up their proposals to lawmakers.

Some members said they got the feeling drunken driving won't be the legislative priority it was last session. The spotlight is being occupied by such issues as tight budget concerns, children's Medicaid, clogged highways and prison salaries.

But drunken driving should be a priority until it's no longer a problem in Texas, said Karroll Searcy, a MADD member from Irving.

"So many people are still dying on the roads in Texas. It's still a major issue," she said. "As long as our numbers are leading the nation, then that's way too many."

In 1999, Texas had 1,734 alcohol-related traffic fatalities, compared to California's 1,351, according to statistics provided by MADD.

Rolling to class could secure ticket

By Mara McCoy
Staff Writer

Texas Tech Police Department officials said skateboarders and inline skaters have caused damage to several buildings on campus causing police to discourage students from skating to class.

TTPD Capt. Gordon Hoffman said police generally warn first-time offenders but will issue a citation if the situation warrants one.

"We have had several reports of damage," he said. "We try to warn the students and get them to stop if they haven't done any damage. We're trying to get compliance through participation, but a ticket can be issued."

Hoffman said police usually give students a warning, followed by a citation and then a possible arrest.

"It's whatever the officer needs to do," he said. "The officer can release the suspect pending a filing of charges where the suspect's name is taken and evidence is gathered, or if the officer believes the situation warrants it, they can make a custodial arrest."

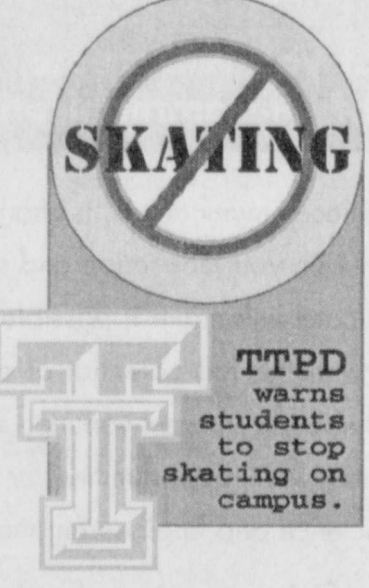

Hoffman said if an officer issues a citation, it is filed through the justice of the peace court, in cases of damage up to $200.

"Damage to the buildings is expensive in some cases," he said. "Skateboards and Rollerblades have chipped paved walkways, benches, malls, retaining walls, handrails and architectural elements — basically, everything on campus."

The Tech Student Code of Conduct states "any student or registered student organization found to have committed the following misconduct is subject to disciplinary sanction(s), condition(s) and/or restriction(s) ... use of a skateboard, Rollerblades or similar device in university buildings or on university premises in such a manner as to constitute a safety hazard or cause damage to university or personal property."

The Tech traffic and parking guidelines, which TTPD enforces, states in Appendix A, section IV, part K, on the campus, "no person may skate or use a skateboard on or in any university buildings, structures,

The Women's Studies program at Texas Tech reintroduced its annual colloquium Tuesday in order to acquaint faculty members and students and to inform them of the research being done in this field.

Linda Krefting, associate professor of management in the College of Business Administration, gave a presentation entitled "Media Representations of Women: Problematics of Gender and Place in The Wall Street Journal."

Krefting said she used the colloquium as a trial phase to present her findings and research before presenting them in Europe this summer. She showed clippings and articles from The Wall Street Journal that depicted how women are

HSC focuses on addict assistance

By Lnda Robertson
Staff Writer

For years, people with addictions were left to go through rehabilitation programs that had success rates of 12 to 15 percent.

The chairman of the department of anesthesiology at the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center is taking issue with that statistic.

Dr. Alan Kaye is heading up a new program at the HSC to help opiate addicts end their addiction. Known as "rapid detox," the HSC is the only one of 10 centers nationwide to offer its services in conjunction with a medical school.

"I became interested about four or five years ago when I was working on my Ph.D. in pharmacology," he said. "The idea was in the national news, but on searching, there was very little literature and no scientific studies on the subject."

Kaye, who has been the head of anesthesiology for two years, said when he came ready to start the program he encountered some hurdles.

"We thought, because we are a county hospital that we needed a special psychiatric license," he said. "It gave us time to do some research studies to further validate the efficacy of the procedure."

Kaye said the rehabilitation procedure is humane compared to the alternative of slow detoxification.

"We put this person under anesthesia and control the physical signs of withdrawal with clonidine. Then, over five or six hours, we give them a massive dose of naloxone, which is an opiate antagonist," he said. "The best part is that when the pa-

DEATH NOTICE

Laura Lynn Henley

Texas Tech student Laura Lynn Henley, a sophomore early childhood development major from Mesquite, died Feb. 9 as the result of an automobile accident three miles outside of Olney. Flags at Memorial Circle will be flown at half-staff Feb. 26 in her memory.

Funeral services were Tuesday under the direction of Family Funeral Care of Mesquite. Burial was in Restland Memorial Park in Dallas.

Henley was born Feb. 25, 1981, and graduated from Ralph Poteet High School in Mesquite. This was her first semester at Tech.

Survivors include parents Gary and Vicky Henley of Mesquite and Bobby Neil Wilson of Tennessee; brothers Ryan and Jarred of Mesquite; grandparents R.O. and Barbara Henley of Dallas, Cynthia and Bob Wilson of Texarkana, Ark., and Shirley and Rocky Cantu of Mesquite; and numerous aunts and uncles.

The family suggests memorials to the Organ Donation Fund at Shallow Terrace Baptist Church, 9810 La Prada, Dallas, Texas, 75228.

viewed and portrayed by the media.

Krefting used examples from the deaths of Princess Diana and Carly Fiorina as well as a portfolio of cartoons depicting women from the Wall Street Journal.

Esther Lichti, coordinator for Women's Studies, said the colloquium was meant to help students, faculty and staff become acquainted and have a chance to look at each other's work.

She said since Women's Studies is an interdisciplinary field, she has students from across the university who do not know each other.

"Historically, women are the minority on campus, at least as far as teachers go. There are some areas where there may only be one woman teacher, and she does not often get the chance to know other women faculty," Lichti said.

She also said Tech has had a Women's Studies program for 20 years and in the first few years the program had colloquiums regularly. But in time the idea faded away.

"It has been at least 10 years where there has not been an event like this so we decided it was time to revive it," Lichti said.

Only 11 students and faculty showed up for the presentation, but Lichti said the program is still growing and gaining recognition.

T. Jay Brasier, a senior telecommunications major from Katy, said she came to the presentation in order to receive extra credit but found the colloquium very interesting.

"It was interesting to get another perspective on how women are represented in the media," she said.

stairways, elevated sidewalks, access ramps, steps, retaining walls, handrails, malls, benches, fountain areas or other architectural elements."

The section also states skates and skateboards may not be used on or in planning areas, grass areas, seeded areas, on streets open for vehicular traffic, where prohibited by sign, police officer or otherwise prohibited by law or in a manner that is "incompatible with the flow of vehicular or pedestrian traffic."

The Texas Penal Code, which TTPD operates under, states the possibility of fines for criminal mischief, which is defined as "intentionally or knowingly damaging or destroying the tangible property of others."

Consequences can range from a fine of less than $50 for a Class C misdemeanor to a first-degree felony if the amount of damages is $200,000 or more.

Hoffman said TTPD is warning students to comply with the law, but he said students should be aware that charges can be brought against them if the situation warrants it.

"The damages are expensive to fix in some cases," he said. "We have issued tickets in the past but are trying to warn students and get them to stop voluntarily."

through a battery of intake interviews, psychological testing as well as blood tests and screens for mental disorders," he said. "They also need to have a validated follow-up program in place with a medical doctor and a psychologist when they get out of treatment. The physical end is about half the battle."

Kaye said anyone showing signs of psychotic behavior or having a heart that is too weak to take the strenuous body response to the withdrawal is not a candidate.

Duke said in the past it was believed suffering through withdrawal was somewhat therapeutic.

"This program passes no judgement," he said. "We want to help you."

Kaye said the goal of this program is to return someone to functioning society and to potentially prevent some of the crimes associated with addictions, such as robberies and burglaries to pay for the next fix.

"If they are not treated, things get worse for them so that they may end up on skid row as a bum. This treatment is for every person on every street, from the mom taking 20 percoets a day to the college kid who comes from a good background and education who is doing heroin," he said. "They are in the same boat as the skid row bum, they just don't see it that way."

Floral design class budding with student interest

Chel Bearden, a senior agricultural communications major from Mason, displays her floral arrangement at the University Center as part of her floral design class.

By Jennifer Gilbert
Contributing Writer

Judith Wilmington said she never thought her floral design class would be so widely accepted by students and the city of Lubbock after its shaky start.

However, with an increasing enrollment and financial backing from the community, the class is stronger than ever.

Wilmington, a professor in the plant and soil science department, started floral design (PSS 2210) in Spring 1999 with the hopes she would have enough students to fill the class. Three semesters later, the class closed on the third day of registration with 10 people still on the waiting list.

She said her only disappointment was that there were not any males in the class the first semester. However, in Spring 2000, four male students enrolled in the class and one took top honors at the end-of-semester floral show.

Wilmington graduated from Texas Tech in 1997 with a horticulture degree. She then became certified as a master floral designer by the National Council of Garden Clubs. She has more than 20 years of experience not only in local flower shops but also in national competitions and said she has enjoyed teaching the floral design class for three semesters now.

She said the idea of a floral design class started with a horticulture club judging event.

"You realize that there is much more to the flowers you receive than just sticking them in a vase."

Chel Bearden
SENIOR AGRICULTURAL COMMUNICATIONS MAJOR

The judging event in floral design sparked much interest in the subject, and eventually that interest turned into a class. The class had 14 students on the roster in its first semester in 1999 and by its second semester, enrollment was up to 25. This semester's floral design class has 29 students.

The class is offered every Spring through the plant and soil science department of the College of Agricultural Sciences and Natural Resources and is open to all majors. "My aim is to teach people to be better consumers while also teaching them the basic skills of floral design," Wilmington said. "Students completing the course will learn how to make flower arrangements for their home or even gain the skills to work in the industry."

Shelly McKay, a senior merchandising major from College Station, took the course in 1999 and now works at a local floral shop. McKay also has attended the Houston School of Floral Design as well as the Texas A&M Benz School of Floral Design.

"The floral design class helped me with the mechanics of floral design," she said. "It also exposed me to different styles and shapes of arrangements."

Tech does not offer a major in floral design, but the class can give students some floral design basics in order to begin a career in the field.

The class includes two field trips during the semester, including a group field trip at the beginning of the semester to Lubbock Wholesale Florist and a second field trip where students visit and evaluate local flower shops.

Chel Bearden, a senior agricultural communications major from Mason, took the floral design class in Spring 2000 and said she has benefited greatly from the experience.

"It was a wonderful class," she said. "You realize that there is much more to the flowers you receive than just sticking them in a vase. Mrs. Wilmington makes you want to come to class and learn the techniques."

While the class consists of mostly hands-on designing projects, Wilmington said the students also are graded on quizzes, in-class participation, exams and a final presentation.

The final presentation comes in the form of a floral show in late April. Local floral shop owners and members of the Lubbock Council of Garden Clubs judge students' arrangements and first, second and third prizes are awarded. This year's date, time and place has yet to be announced soon and students and community members are encouraged to attend.

For most students like Bearden and McKay, the final presentation is the highlight of the semester. Donations are made for the arrangements and the money is placed in the Margaret Coil Endowment for Floral Design.

The endowment money will be used to continue the entry-level floral design class and to fund a possible second-year course.

After the first class, Wilmington not only received an enthusiastic reaction from the students in her class, but also received enthusiasm in the form of donations from the community.

Another contribution is especially close to Wilmington's heart.

Elaine Shields, a floral designer who died recently, was a classmate of Wilmington's. Upon her death, her husband, Dr. Charles Shields, a professor at the Tech Health Sciences Center, donated his wife's containers and design materials to the department. This semester's floral design students are the first to use her supplies.

Wilmington said if the previous two classes are any indication, the floral design class is a success. She never imagined the class would receive such a generous reaction.

HOUSTON (AP)—The U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has filed a class-action lawsuit against Prince Food Systems, accusing the cafeteria company of refusing to hire blacks and creating a hostile work environment.

The commission also charged

Company officials said they could not comment on specific charges in the lawsuit but that they have treated employees fairly.

Evolution only is faith

I have taken two natural science classes to fulfill some of my requirements to graduate. The foundational material for these two courses turned out to be more philosophical and less scientific.

I love philosophy, and I love science, but the latter has been injected with a heavy dose of facts that don't sit right with me. I'm talking about how professors flaunt Darwinian naturalistic philosophy as factual science. It's not like this bias toward evolution is an isolated incident — it's been taught most of the 20th century. We know as much about Darwin's warm little pond and the survival of the fittest as we do about our founding fathers.

One of the icons of evolutionists is Carl Sagan, who said, "Evolution is a fact, not a theory." Do you really buy that? The hardest person to argue or debate with is they. Evolution must be right because they say it is. Who are they? They are the scientists, the philosophers, the politicians and the lawyers — people who can't possibly be wrong. But they usually come into scientific issues with a naturalistic slant. Therefore, they find a theory to match their commitment to naturalism. They will take any scientific speculation as a solid fact just to uphold their philosophy.

Charles Darwin, Carl Sagan and probably your science professor all fall into the category of they. But is this elite group correct in their assumptions?

There is a large quantity of mounting evidence that Darwin's theory of macro-evolution is not fact. Darwin was sure that a fossil record would turn up the transition fossils necessary to support his theory. Today we have more than a million fossils, and guess what? Still no transition fossils. Evolution requires that organisms evolve on a piecemeal basis. So what happens if a fish evolves and develops lungs? Does it move up to the next evolutionary stage? No — it drowns.

This pile of evidence that we have to refute Darwin's theory should allow an alternate theory to be taught, such as creation. I know we kicked God out of school a long time ago, but it's time to let him back in. Why? Because the theory of creation by an intelligent designer (God) is every bit as plausible as the theory of evolution.

It all boils down to faith in one or the other. Do you have faith that a transcendent God created you, or do you have faith that you are an accident emerging from the slime? We must decide which of these is absolute. So why isn't a creation theory taught in our American school system?

Either all of our modern scientists are irrational fools who ignore the evidence, or there is something deeper at stake. There must be a deeper implication of this God theory, both for scientists and for us.

Putting faith in creation means that you accept the link between the material order and the moral order. Our origin determines our destiny. It tells us who we are, why we are here and how we should order our lives together in society. It's a total worldview. If we believe that a transcendent God created us for a purpose, then we must ask what that purpose is and how we are to fulfill it. We think there's a lot more fulfillment and happiness in doing things our way. But if you hold to creation, don't you think your creator might know more about what's best for you than you do?

That's fine if you don't agree with me on the theory of creation, because I have faith that it is absolutely true. But do you cling to evolution based on facts, or because the idea of a loving and caring God who created you scares you? If you look deep, past all the smokescreens our society and our education system churns out, you may be surprised at what lies beneath.

Humans no better than the lab rats

Well folks, the verdict is in. After spending countless hours of research and millions of dollars, we have just finished decoding the human genome. And guess what, the human species days of dominating the food chain are over.

Recently, scientists at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology revealed that the completed human genome only contains one-third to one-half of the number of genes expected. Scientist Eric Lander, head of genome sequencing at the Whitehead Institute at MIT was quoted as saying, "There are only a few hundred genes that we have in the human genome that are not in the mouse genome." This little tidbit will undoubtedly bring a wry grin to the face of anyone who has ever read Douglas Adams, classic "The Hitchhiker's Guide to The Galaxy." Yet the quote of the day, comes from members of the International Human Genome Sequencing Consortium who stated, "There are about 30,000 to 40,000 protein coding genes in the human genome — only about twice as many as a worm or a fly."

We humans, the seemingly indisputable masters of this planet, are being compared in biological complexity to the nematode worm and fruit flies. This discovery completely vindicates Adams philosophical thoughts on man's place in the universe. There is a subplot in "The Hitchhiker's Guide" that spins the tale of a civilization in a situation much like our own. Said civilization spent its resources on building a giant city-sized computer which was to be capable of answering the question of life, the universe and everything. Incidentally if you haven't read this book, it comes highly recommended. The computer takes 7 1/2 million years to complete its program only to answer the ultimate question with the number 42. Just when you think science is unlocking the mysteries which plague our existence, the universe turns around and gives humanity a sucker punch to the family jewels.

The next time you go fishing and bait your worm on the hook, you are actually impaling something which has almost the same biological complexity as yourself. This realization will undoubtedly send several schools of our pompous western philosophy the way of the Ford Pinto, Flo-bee Vacuum Home Hair Cut, or European insights into the meat packing industry. Or perhaps not. Let us then consider the societal implications of this discovery. Despite our lack of imagined biological complexity, the human species possesses many traits which are unique and exceptional. This obviously is not explained by the genome findings. For instance, humanity is the only species which produces art, literature, and developed a written language. Our genus seems to be the only one capable of producing sophisticated tools. To me, this only deepens the mysteries of the universe. Some philosophers will undoubtedly use this fact as proof of the existence of a higher power. Don't get me wrong. I am no creationist and incidentally feel that particular interpretation of the universe to be about as credible as Robert Downey, Jr., offering me $50 to carry a few small "items" through airport security. Come to think of it, this might actually explain the origins of many of mankind's more insipid vices. Vices such as warfare, terror, violence, Kenny G, Geico Commercials and my junior high wrestling coach who swore he was more advanced on the evolutionary ladder because he had an extra vertebrae.

Could it be that man's occasional tendency toward barbarism (i.e. the Holocaust, the rape of nanking or Jessie "The Mind" Ventura's tenure as governor of Minnesota) could be explained by shared characteristics with our less savory relatives? This truly will be among the great intellectual debates of the 21st century. Alas, I do not possess anywhere near the appropriate background knowledge to render a definitive decision on the subject. Now what? Is mankind but an insignificant species that is doomed to trudge away its meaningless existence within its lonely corner of the galaxy? Probably not. Any species capable of creating the likes of beer, pornography and edible panty technology is OK in my book. On a serious note, this discovery highlights the Faustian bargain man has made with the science of genetics. It would appear that like Faustus, mankind has made the proverbial deal with the devil in its pursuits of genetic science. Genetics has the possibility of being either the ultimate achievement of human civilization, this being the ability to literally play god, or its ultimate folly, a nightmare Huxlean genetic class system. It is at this point that a little known fact about the Faustian Legend becomes remarkably analogous to the human condition. In Christopher Marlowe's play "Doctor Faustus," our protagonist is condemned to the fiery pits of hell for his pursuit of forbidden knowledge. Whereas in Goethe's epic work, the character of Faust is ultimately forgiven and redeemed for his pact with Satan. It is up for posterity to decide wither Goethe or Marlowe will write the ending to mankind's foray into genetics. Genetic science will either be mankind's ultimate redemption or its biggest kick in the ass since the Roman Empire decided to let a few hundred thousand Germans crash on their couch until they could find a place. Or maybe it is just like my old junior high coach taught me all those years ago. Play with the bull, you get the horns.

Some do agree with ad

To the editor: This is in regard to the letter in Tuesday's UD objecting to the ad entitled "Do you agree?" Allow me to address common misperception of Christianity to be addressed. Christians are not so much interested in converting people to Christianity. We are operating under a moral imperative to bring a message of love, life and salvation, a message communicated to us directly from the lips of our savior. So now you ask, how is Jesus any different from any other religious figure, such as Buddha or Muhammad? Or for the atheists. Where is Nietzsche and Darwin? So I ask you, where is Buddha? He is dead. Where is Muhammad? He, too, lies undisturbed in his grave. Nietzsche and Darwin? Yep, you guessed it. Where is Jesus? Jesus rose from the dead three days after his crucifixion and is alive still. There are more than 300 prophecies written during a period of several thousand years, telling of Jesus' birth, life, death and resurrection, and every one of them was fulfilled in his lifetime. So when Jesus says he is the only way to God, he says it with the authority of absolute truth. What is unique about Christianity is that we follow a risen Savior, and that is why it is so important for us to tell the world.

has made appearances on "Oprah," "Geraldo," "The Dick Clark Show," Buddy Holly Web sites and VH1.

Gerron said she sees the notoriety she has received from being part of the Holly legacy as a gift.

"I think you could take it in one of two ways," she said. "You can either take what's been given to you and hide it away, or you can accept it, be proud of it, and show it to the world."

Gerron said she has learned to cope with her celebrity status though it sometimes makes it hard for her to live a normal life.

"I try to put forward a certain image," she said. "Everyone does. Sometimes that means that I can't throw on shorts and a T-shirt and run to the grocery store with no make-up on, though."

She said despite this extra attention, she feels comfortable living in Lubbock.

"This is where I grew up," she said. "Everyone knows me. People approach me with questions sometimes, but they are usually nice about it. I feel like I'm at home here."

Gerron said Holly felt the same way about Lubbock.

She said Holly had talked about plans to build a recording studio in Lubbock so he could produce records for new artists.

"Buddy Holly loved Lubbock, Texas," she said.

Gerron said she would like to see Lubbock continue to find new ways to help keep Holly's memory alive.

"Buddy is one of the few things that sets Lubbock apart from every other little town in America. Many towns have colleges, but the Buddy Holly Festival and the Cowboy Symposium give us something unique."

Lory Ioppolo, marketing coordinator for the Buddy Holly Center, said she feels the citizens of Lubbock do not fully appreciate the influence Holly had on their town.

She said she thinks this is because they have come to take him for granted.

"If you grow up here, you hear his name mentioned all the time and some people get burnt out on it," she said. "We get more visitors from the UK than we do from Lubbock."

Ioppolo said the Buddy Holly Center is working with Texas Monthly, Texas Tech and the Texas Music Office to create a music symposium in September that will showcase artists and music from the Buddy Holly era.

Gerron said though her celebrity was unintentional, she still appreciates it.

"I certainly wasn't expecting it," she said. "But I don't see how any girl or woman wouldn't be proud to have her name involved with rock 'n' roll."

Gerron appears on KRFD-AM 580 from 11 a.m. to 12 p.m. Saturdays. She can be reached at 745-5800.

Loston Harris to play UC Allen Theatre tonight

By Leslie Follmar Staff Writer

Being called the next Harry Connick Jr., Loston Harris blends sensuous vocals and smooth jazz to his debut CD Comes Love. Harris will be performing at 8 p.m. tonight in the University Center Allen Theatre as a special for Valentine's Day. Tickets are $8 for Texas Tech students.

Harris not only is a talented pianist but a skilled singer as well. He was nominated for a 1999 Soul Train award, even though he had no aspirations to perform when he was young.

Studying percussion at Virginia Commonwealth University, Harris has excelled as a musician. Accompanied by traditional jazz instruments, Harris leads all songs with piano, but unfortunately only four of the nine songs include Harris' melting voice.

Already having an audience, Harris could easily improve his market by just singing more on the album. Although the instrumental songs are good, Harris' vocals over-layed on the moving jazz gives half the album an enjoyable sound.

Sounding much like the established big band/jazz vocalist Harry Connick Jr., Harris has combined his own personal stylings with that of popular musicians such as Ellis Marsalis, Frank Sinatra, and Sammy Davis Jr.

Harris also is recognizable from the Michael Jordan "Be You" ads for Hanes. He also has been a guest VJ for BET and performed regularly at White House functions.

Shatner applies for marriage license

LEBANON, Ind. (AP) — "Star Trek" actor William Shatner didn't need a phaser to stun onlookers when he and his girlfriend applied for a marriage license in this central Indiana city.

Shatner, 69, and Elizabeth J. Martin, 42, strolled into the Boone County Courthouse on Monday and paid the $62 out-of-state residence fee for the license application, said county clerk Lisa Garoffolo.

In short order, Garoffolo was swamped by telephone calls, ranging from courthouse employees to Los Angeles television stations.

The Los Angeles couple has 60 days after applying for the license to make it official, Garoffolo said.

His third wife, model Nerine Kidd, died Aug. 9, 1999, when she drowned in the swimming pool at the couple's Los Angeles home.

Nominees for 73rd Academy Awards named

'Gladiator,' 'Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon' lead Oscar race with most nominations

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Hollywood's resurrection of Rome marches on: "Gladiator," the glitzy successor to "Ben-Hur" and "Spartacus," led the Oscar field Tuesday with 12 nominations, including best picture, actor and director.

Another tale of ancient warriors, the Mandarin-language "Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon," was next with 10 — picture, director and foreign-language film among them.

Also receiving best picture nominations were the candy-shop romance "Chocolat," the legal drama "Erin Brockovich" and the drug-trade saga "Traffic."

Steven Soderbergh grabbed two of the five best-director slots, for "Erin Brockovich" and "Traffic" — which could hurt his chances of winning if the two films siphon votes from each other. The last time a director was nominated twice in the same year was Michael Curtiz in 1938, for "Angels with Dirty Faces" and "Four Daughters." (He lost.)

The other director nominees Tuesday were Stephen Daldry for "Billy Elliot," Ang Lee for "Crouching Tiger" and Ridley Scott for "Gladiator."

"Gladiator," the first Roman spectacle since the 1960s, also grabbed nominations for actor Russell

Crowe, supporting actor Joaquin Phoenix and Hans Zimmer's score. The computer wizardry used to recreate ancient Rome was named for visual effects.

"Those effects were crucial," said David Franzoni, a producer on "Gladiator" who also shared an original screenplay nomination for the film. "I'd never seen Rome rebuilt where it looked real. It always looked like a set. I was never convinced from those old movies that I was looking at ancient Rome. But we were able to show what Rome looked like. That Goodyear blimp shot of the Colosseum — you couldn't have done that any other way."

In their heyday, gladiator flicks fared well at the Oscars. "Ben-Hur" won best picture and 10 other Academy Awards in 1959. (Its total of 11 is tied with "Titanic" for the most ever.) A year later, Peter Ustinov took the supporting-actor statue for "Spartacus," which also won Oscars for costumes, sets and cinematography. "Cleopatra" had a best-picture nomination for 1963 and won four technical Oscars.

On top of its stunning visuals, "Gladiator" caught on because the frenzy of deadly spectator sports resonated with audiences, said Douglas Wick, another of its producers.

"There's much of Rome that feels very contemporary," Wick said. "A population distracted by entertainment from more serious issues. The idea of celebrity athletes. ... It always felt relevant."

It was the second year in a row that DreamWorks, the studio co-founded by Steven Spielberg, had the film with the most nominations. "Gladiator" was co-produced by Universal and DreamWorks, with the latter releasing the film domestically. A year ago, DreamWorks won best-picture honors with "American Beauty."

"Crouching Tiger" is only the third film to earn both best-picture and foreign-language film nominations. The others were "Life Is Beautiful" in 1998 and "Z" in 1969. Last weekend, "Crouching Tiger" hit $60 million, passing "Life Is Beautiful" as the domestic box-office champ among foreign-language films.

Top categories shaped up largely as expected, but there were a few surprises. Ed Harris was nominated for best actor and Marcia Gay Harden for supporting actress for "Pollock," a film biography of painter Jackson Pollock that generally had been overlooked for earlier movie honors.

"I'm very proud of the movie and all the performances," said Harris, who also made his directing debut with "Pollock." "This is especially nice since you're nominated by your peers."

The best-actor category includes two other nominees who played real-life creative figures: Javier Bardem as Cuban writer Reinaldo Arenas in "Before Night Falls," and past Oscar winner Geoffrey Rush as the Marquis de Sade in "Quills."

Two-time Oscar winner Tom Hanks was nominated for "Cast Away" and Russell Crowe for "Gladiator."

Julia Roberts is the best-actress front-runner for "Erin Brockovich." But her competition may be the strongest among the acting categories, including past Oscar winners Juliette Binoche in "Chocolat" and Ellen

Film spotlights divided Korea

BERLIN (AP) — Director Park Chan Wook brought his film about the divided Korean peninsula to the Berlin international film festival, but he says he sees no model for Korean reconciliation in the city that was once the front line of the Cold War.

"The Korean people look at unification in Germany as something that would not happen in that way," Park said Monday after a showing of "Joint Security Area," which is competing for the festival's Golden Bear prize. "They don't want one part of the country taking over another."

The film, portraying the friendship of four South and North Korean guards, has been hugely popular in South Korea, and North Korean leader Kim Jong Il has received a copy for a private screening.

The timing for the film, released in South Korea in September, came just after a series of reconciliatory steps between the two countries fostered by a summit between the leaders of the Koreans.

Burstyn in "Requiem for a Dream."

"Everybody says this is Julia's year, and she's got a lock on it. Maybe that's true, but I don't know," said Burstyn, 68, who won best actress in 1974 for "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore" and was nominated four other times between 1971 and 1980.

Also nominated are Joan Allen in "The Contender" and Laura Linney in "You Can Count On Me."

"A year ago, if someone told me I'd be getting this, I wouldn't believe it," Linney said. "You Can Count On Me," a low-budget indie film, came out of nowhere a year ago to split the top honor at the Sundance Film Festival. Writer-director Kenneth Lonergan earned a nomination Tuesday for original screenplay.

Besides Phoenix, supporting-actor slots went to Jeff Bridges for "The Contender," Willem Dafoe for "Shadow of the Vampire," Benicio Del Toro for "Traffic" and Albert Finney for "Erin Brockovich."

Harden will compete for supporting actress against Judi Dench for "Chocolat," Kate Hudson and Frances McDormand for "Almost Famous," and Julie Walters for "Billy Elliot." Dench and McDormand both have won Oscars.

The Oscars will be presented March 25 in a live broadcast on ABC-TV.

"The first step is always the most difficult"

Taking that difficult first step is what leads you to amazing opportunities!

If you have never thought about joining a Fraternity, never liked your options in the Greek system or vowed never to join a Fraternity, this opportunity is for you. "Joiners" are those who become part of an organization. "Founders" are those who establish and leave their mark on that organization.

Delta Tau Delta is prepared to offer you these amazing opportunities.

Delta Tau Delta is an historic and progressive fraternity founded in 1858 as an alternative to the norm; a chance for men to become part of an organization that will make their lives truer, fuller and richer than they would have ever thought.

You may have recently read about Delta Tau Delta's return to Texas Tech University in the University Daily. This is an opportunity for young men to do just as our founders did nearly 150 years ago: establish a group on this university campus that distinguishes us from all the rest.

But what makes  $\Delta T \Delta$  and this opportunity different from all the rest?

- Delta Tau Delta is the Academic Leader in the Fraternity World
We consistently outrank every other Fraternity in the Greek world academically. Our recent colony GPA exceeds a 3.2.
- Delta Tau Delta is a Values Based Organization
Truth, Courage, Faith, Power, Accountability and Integrity are the driving forces behind everything we do both locally and internationally.
- Delta Tau Delta is "Committed to Lives of Excellence"
Everyday we push ourselves to be the best that we can as an organization and as individuals. Pushing to be the best ensures that we never become mediocre.

- There is no Existing Chapter at Texas Tech
As a Founding Father of this organization you have immediate control of how the organization will function and the reputation it will have. There are no existing traditions or presumptions of how the chapter should run.
- Delta Tau Delta does not Tolerate Hazing, Alcohol Abuse or Destructive Behavior
These are the reasons why Fraternities have a bad image and why most people do not wish to join a Fraternity. Our goal is to create a conducive environment for our members to succeed and achieve their goals and dreams.
- Alumni are Committed to the Success of this Chapter and its Members.
Our alumni will ensure that this group receives all the help it may need and that the men of the colony have mentors to help prepare them for their future.

Take that first step and realize what an amazing opportunity you have to surround yourself with similar individuals, change the rest of your life and become a Founding Father of Delta Tau Delta.

The Lady Raiders will look to bounce back from their loss to Texas when they travel to Lawrence, Kan., today to battle the Jayhawks at 7 p.m.

VS.

(18-4 overall, 9-2 Big 12)

(9-13 overall, 3-8 Big 12)

Texas Longhorns take it to Red Raider men

A second half rebounding shut-down and 16 turnovers spelled defeat for the Red Raider men's basketball squad as they fell to Texas, 73-56, on Tuesday night in Austin.

The Red Raiders had a 20-18 lead in the rebounding category in the first half but claimed only four boards in the second half as the Longhorns pulled down 24.

Tech started the game off by jumping out to a four-point lead courtesy of two alley-oops. The game remained close through the early goings, but late in the first stanza Texas was able to jump to a 31-21 lead.

Tech closed the first frame on a 7-4 run to go into the locker rooms at half-time trailing by a 34-28 count.

The Red Raiders were able to cut the Longhorn lead to three points at 41-38 at the 13 minute mark in the second half.

Texas extended its lead to 10 with 7:35 remaining in the game then proceeded to go on a 14-2 run to close the door on the Red Raiders.

Tech guard Jamal Brown scored most of his nine points late but the Red Raiders could not reel in Texas as the Red Raiders dropped their sixth consecutive contest.

The Longhorns made nearly half of their shots from the floor in the second half as they shot 48 percent in the period.

Texas shot 44 percent from the floor in the contest.

Texas held an 18-board lead in the rebounding category in the game, outrebounding the Red Raiders 41-24.

Tech's leading scorer in the contest was guard Jayson Mitchell who scored 15 points and kept the Red Raiders in the contest early on with his three-point shooting.

Mitchell was the only Red Raider to reach double-digits in scoring.

Red Raider center Andy Ellis was the leading rebounder for Tech in the contest, pulling down seven boards.

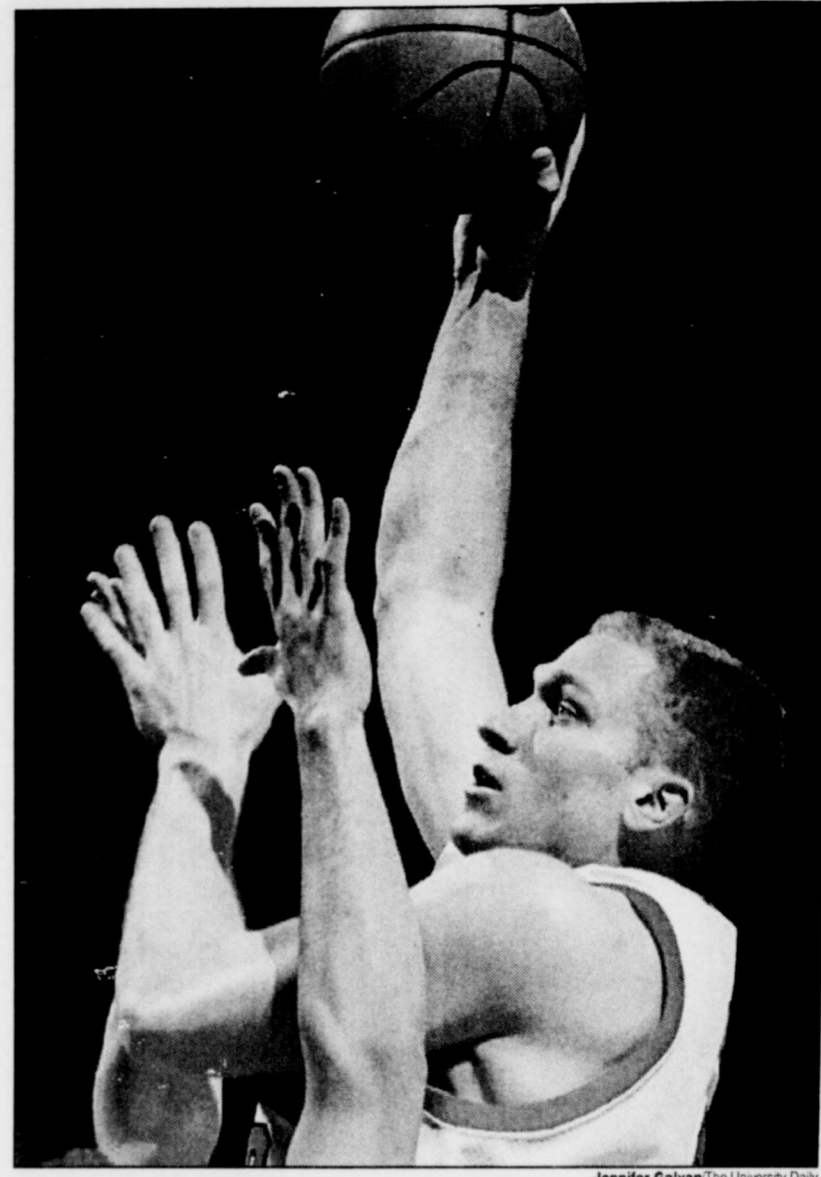

Tech guard Ronald Hobbs saw action in the contest in his first game back following the death of his father. Hobbs played nine minutes and hit both shots he attempted en route to a five-point scoring effort.

With the win, the Longhorns extended their winning streak over Tech to eight games.

With the loss, Tech falls to 8-13 on the season, and 2-8 in the Big 12 Conference.

Texas moves to 18-7 overall and 7-4 in Big 12 Conference action with the win.

The Red Raiders next will travel to Manhattan, Kan., to face the Kansas State Wildcats at 7 p.m. Saturday.

Tech forward Cliff Owens goes for two in an earlier season game. The Red Raiders fell to Texas, 73-56, on Tuesday night in Austin.

Lady Raiders battle Kansas

Tonight the Lady Raiders will enter a domain which they have never left satisfied.

That place is Allen Field House in Lawrence, Kan., and Texas Tech coach Marsha Sharp and her squad travel to the arena to collide with the Jayhawks at 7 p.m. today.

The two squads only have battled in Allen Field House twice, but both times the Jayhawks won by 10 or more points.

However, this season the Jayhawks have not exhibited their winning prowess of Big 12 year's past.

The Jayhawks have had a turnaround since last year's NCAA Tournament.

Kansas has struggled to a 3-8 Big 12 Conference record with a 9-13 overall posting.

Kansas has lost two of its last three games, including one at home to Nebraska, who is next to last in the Big 12 standings.

The Jayhawks are paced on offense by guards Jaclyn Johnson and Brooke Reves who combine to average 30 points per game.

The No. 14-ranked Lady Raiders (18-4 overall, 9-2 Big 12) are on the rebound for the second time in two weeks after dropping their first home game in four years.

Texas knocked off the Lady Raiders on Saturday in the United Spirit Arena, which also gave the Lady 'Horns their first win in Lubbock since the 1993 campaign.

The loss dropped Tech to second place in the conference as the Lady Raiders are now one game behind first place Oklahoma and Iowa State.

Tech still has a shot to win or at least tie for the Big 12 crown.

The Lady Raiders must win the rest of their games, including contests against Oklahoma on Saturday and Iowa State, to close the season in two weeks. They must also get help from other teams in the league.

Lobos take care of Tech baseball

The Texas Tech baseball squad blew a six-run lead against New Mexico on Tuesday on the way to a 12-11 loss.

The Lobos scored the game's final run on a full-count passed ball to claim the victory after trailing 8-2 in the fourth frame.

Tech, now 6-4 on the year, scored a run in the first inning, then added three in the second frame to grab a 4-2 advantage. One run in the third, followed by a three-run fourth inning put the Raiders on top by six before the UNM comeback began.

New Mexico closed the gap to 8-7 in the fifth after scoring four in the bottom of the fourth and adding one in the fifth. The Raiders then exploded for three in the top of the seventh, but gave up four to knot the score after eight innings.

The winning run came across in the bottom of the ninth when Mark Okano bolted home on a passed ball by Raider catcher Tony Arnerich.

Right-hander Mike Larsen was tagged with the loss. New Mexico's James Vermilyea was Tuesday's winner. The Lobos improve to 3-6 on the year with the victory.

Tech's road swing continues when the Red Raiders battle the University of San Diego on Thursday in the first of four games at the Greater San Diego Tournament.

Raider golf finishes seventh at Rice tourney

Junior Kyle Willmann fired a 54-hole 221 to lead the Texas Tech men's golf team to a seventh-place finish at the Rice Intercollegiate golf tournament in Katy on Monday and Tuesday.

Tech's rounds of 288-305-305 was 37 shots behind event champion Kansas.

Where are the sportsmen?

Sportsmanship is defined as the character of a sportsman or sportsmanlike conduct, such as fairness or courtesy.

I guess Bernard King doesn't have access to a dictionary. Maybe he gets to use it next semester,

Phil Riddle

King, who is starting in Disney's upcoming, "The Most Obnoxious Aggie," really needs some lessons on sportsmanship. I don't know who is to teach this class. Professional athletes spend too much time posturing after doing their jobs. How many times have you seen an NBA player, pick one, make a basket, then jump in his opponent's face. What is that impressionable youngster like Bernard supposed to make of this? What else could he make of it? After doing what he has been coached to do, prepared to do and on scholarship to do, he was so surprised that he actually did it that he immediately started performing rituals designed to embarrass his fellow combatants on their floor. No, nobody got hurt, but athletics got another black eye because of it.

Student athletes as a whole took King's actions as their own, because like it or not, they are all lumped together. And sportsmanship took a backseat in the Aggies all-important drive to 11th place in the Big 12. Thanks Bernard. The Burnt Orange Cattle Maidens also showed their true colors Saturday.

They played an inspired game and pulled off a major upset, beating the Lady Raiders on their home floor for the first time in 41 games. After a contest like that, players should shake hands and congratulate each other, winners and losers, over the battle whether you're happy about it or not.

That is unless you live in Austin. The fact that you've been an underachiever all season comes to a head and an honorable victory turns into an embarrassment by stomping on the Double T at midcourt and turning the Guns Up into a middle-finger Austin salute at game's end. They all must have autographed pictures of Terrell Owens in their lockers.

It's not enough for the Aggies and the 'Horns to get the money, the poll recognition, whether deserved or not, and top-of-the-line facilities for all sports. There has to be a crowning embarrassment for their vanquished foes.

I know that most of the athletes at A&M and UT are probably good people who do the right things and maintain standards of sportsmanship. Those are the people most hurt by their teammates' displays on Saturday. They will be linked to the childish antics of Bernard King, who was shocked that his team could actually finish in that coveted 11th position, and to the Lady Bulls who played well and won, then didn't know how to be gracious afterward.

Tech will win again, both teams, and when they do, I hope the members of the teams remember what sportsmanship means.

Parnevik back to defend Hope

LA QUINTA, Calif. (AP) — Jesper Parnevik knows a little something about comedy as well as golf. His dad is one of the most popular comedians in Sweden, and he's known to be a bit wacky himself.

There was nothing funny, though, about the way he won the Bob Hope Classic last year. This was more a nail biter than a belly laugh, with Parnevik needing to rally with a final-hole birdie for his third PGA Tour win.

The 97-year-old Hope was on hand to watch Parnevik finish a roller-coaster round and beat Rory Sabbatini by a shot. He plans to be back this year to see the 42nd Hope unfold on four area golf courses.

The 90-hole event begins Wednesday in the rain-soaked desert, with four rounds of pairings with celebrities and other amateurs before the final round on Sunday at the Arnold Palmer Private Course at PGA West.

This year's event is missing some of golf's biggest names, with Tiger Woods, Davis Love III and Phil Mickelson among those taking the week off. But the 71-year-old Palmer will be on hand for a rare PGA Tour appearance, and everyone will be paying homage to Hope.

"Bob Hope was one of my father's favorite comedians," Parnevik said.

"Even though I am too young, my dad always said he was one of the great spontaneous comedians that we've had."

Parnevik hopes he'll be around at the finish, though his wife's imminent delivery of their fourth child could upset those plans.

"It could happen any day," Parnevik said.

Parnevik returns to the desert still trying to find his form after hip surgery to correct a problem that began bothering him after he won the Byron Nelson Classic for his second win of last year.

He continued to play the second half of last season, but tired of fighting a big hook caused by his inability to get through the ball.

"I could get it around, even hitting 40-yard hooks. I almost won one that way," Parnevik said. "But it was not fun and not the way I wanted to play, so that's why I decided to have the hip surgery."

Parnevik came from off the lead in the final round last year to win.

His final-round 65 put him in position, but he wasn't able to light his usual victory cigar until Sabbatini failed to birdie the final hole.

The 65 was Parnevik's 11th straight round under par to start the year, but this year has been much different. He has made the cut in only two of four tournaments, something he blames on not doing the little things needed to score.

"I feel strong. I can swing fully. I don't have any restrictions," Parnevik said.

"Golf is very hard. It's the scoring ability or the ability to hole the 10-footers, or the up-and-downs. Golf is played under such a small margin of error."

XFL promises to speed up contests

NEW YORK (AP) — If ratings for the XFL keep sinking, its operators might consider pitting angry NBC executives against one another — no pads allowed.

The XFL promised Tuesday to speed up its games after Saturday's double-overtime contest caused a 45-minute delay starting "Saturday Night Live," reportedly infuriating the show's founding producer, Lorne Michaels.

The resurgent "SNL" was hoping for one of its biggest shows of the year with movie and singing star Jennifer Lopez as host. Instead, the ratings were deflated by the late start.

The unpleasant irony for NBC, co-owner of the XFL with the World Wrestling Federation, is that NBC Sports President Dick Ebersol used to produce "Saturday Night Live."

"Dick Ebersol totally understands and empathizes probably better than anybody with the importance of 'SNL' getting on at 11:30," NBC Entertainment President Jeff Zucker said. "To the degree that he can assure us and Lorne that he'll be off on time, he's done that."

Ebersol wasn't talking Tuesday, but his spokeswoman, Cameron Blanchard, said the XFL will cut its pregame introductions by at least five minutes, shorten the halftime breaks and try to keep the clock moving.

For example, the time clock will start when the ball is placed on the line of scrimmage following incomplete passes and changes of possession, instead of waiting until the ball is snapped.

The first Saturday night XFL telecast ran 23 minutes long. Since there was a repeat "Saturday Night Live" on that week, nobody seemed to mind.

But this past week's game between the Los Angeles Xtreme and Chicago Enforcers was delayed because of a power outage and a serious injury that caused a 14-minute stoppage of play. In addition, the game went into double overtime.

Zucker stopped short of saying NBC will cut away from XFL games in the future if they run over their allotted time.

"This was a string of unbelievable things that I don't think can be repeated ever again," he said. "We're not going to pull the plug on an overtime situation, but I don't think we'll be in that situation again."

Michaels was not available for comment on Tuesday. There were reports he was so angry on Saturday he briefly considered ordering a repeat "SNL" episode aired. The actors actually began the show on time, and it was aired via tape delay across the country.

The XFL audience dropped from 13.9 million its first week to 6.5 million last week, according to Nielsen Media Research.

NBC sports and entertainment representatives were even arguing over what caused an upsurge in NBC ratings around 11:30 on Saturday night. The entertainment side believes that when viewers tuned in expecting "SNL," while sports says the competitive game had something to do with it.
