Military voting issues draw much interest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Reps. Mac Thornberry and Sam Johnson introduced legislation Tuesday addressing voting problems faced by military personnel.

The legislation joins several other bills that have been filed to adjust election rules and methods. The measure is a response to the turmoil of November's elections in which President Bush was declared the winner after five weeks of recounts and legal maneuvering.

"I think there's a unique federal responsibility to make sure the military can vote and the votes count," said Thornberry, a Republican from Clarendon. He is a member of the House Armed Services Committee and bill sponsor.

During November's elections, thousands of overseas ballots — most cast by military personnel — arrived after their due date. That led to disputes on whether they should be counted.

Governor eliminates convicts from show

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. George Pataki on Tuesday ordered that violent criminals be banned from showing and selling their art at an annual exhibition by inmates, which this year included a serial killer's portrait of Princess Diana.

Pataki asked prison officials to review the show's rules and "to disallow participation by notorious violent criminals," said James Flateau, a spokesman for state Corrections Commissioner Glenn Goord.

Flateau said no decision had been made yet on whether any of the art work in this year's show would be removed.

The state prison commissioner will decide which inmates' works will be barred from future shows, he said.

The portrait of Britain's late Princess Diana was among 10 paintings and sketches by convicted killer Arthur Shawcross for sale at the 35th Annual Corrections on Canvas show, which runs until April 12.

Americans awaiting release from China

HAIKOU, China (AP) — American diplomats met Tuesday night with the crew of a U.S. spy plane, nearly three days after it made an emergency landing at a Chinese military base after colliding with a Chinese fighter jet. An American diplomat said they were in good health but gave no indication when they would be released.

President Bush demanded that China allow the 24 crew members to leave and return the surveillance plane.

"This accident has the potential of undermining our hopes for a fruitful and productive relationship between our two countries," Bush said in Washington. "To keep that from happening our servicemen and women need to come home."

Army Brig. Gen. Neal Sealock, the U.S. Embassy defense attache, was allowed to meet late Tuesday with the 24 crew members. It was their first contact with an American official since their EP-3 surveillance plane landed on the tropical Chinese island of Hainan after a collision with a Chinese fighter jet. "They are in good health," Sealock said of the American servicemen and women.

Stadium may need student boost

By Pam Smith
Staff Writer

A student referendum may take place later this month to determine whether students want to help pay for the renovations to Jones SBC Stadium.

Members of the Student Government Association will vote this week on whether to conduct a student election to determine if students want to extend the bond agreement, already in place for United Spirit Arena, an additional 10 years to raise money to help renovate the football stadium.

"Historically, students have not had a lot of say in the arrangements made concerning Jones SBC Stadium," Senator-at-Large Tim Wright said. "By passing this agreement, students will get a piece of the ownership to the stadium."

Under the current arena bond agreement, students are paying $3 per semester credit hour to help pay for the construction of the arena until 2017. If students vote to approve the proposed changes, students will be paying for the bond until the year 2027.

"This agreement will not cost students anymore than they are paying now," Wright said. "It is just an extension of the bond."

Jim Brunjes, Tech's chief financial officer, said the arena accumulates $1.86 million a year to pay for the bond. If the proposed changes are approved, the extension will generate an estimated $6 million toward the Jones SBC Stadium project in the next 10 years. The entire stadium renovation will cost $90 million.

"The money students are paying is listed under the institutional tuition, which is $40 per semester credit hour," Brunjes said. "Three dollars of that $40 goes to paying for the bond."

T&P limits parking lot population

Campus construction projects expected to take area-reserved spaces for Fall 2001.

By Linda Robertson
Staff Writer

Several upcoming construction projects on campus will come at the cost of many parking spaces for non-faculty members.

Eric Crouch, manager of operations at Traffic and Parking, said construction projects, some designed to alleviate parking problems, are encroaching on existing spaces on campus, which will require reorganization of spaces to accommodate those who park on campus.

"Among other things, the construction of a new parking garage, which will ultimately hold approximately 750 to 800 cars, will take the parking spaces available at the Architecture building," he said. "We will have to reconstruct Flint Avenue and 18th Street so that there is access to the garage, which will be west of Clement Hall."

The construction of the garage, which is slated to start this summer, will cost about $11 million. Crouch said since Traffic and Parking does not receive federal or state funding, the money for the garage has been raised by tickets and selling permits.

"We have been raising the cost of parking for the past few years so that we wouldn't have to raise the price of a permit all of a sudden," he said. "Next year, the prices will go up, but

Citizens tout smoke views

Lubbock business owners expressed their concerns about the economic impact of a proposed smoking ban Tuesday night at United Spirit Arena, while several doctors explained the dangers of cigarette smoke in public places.

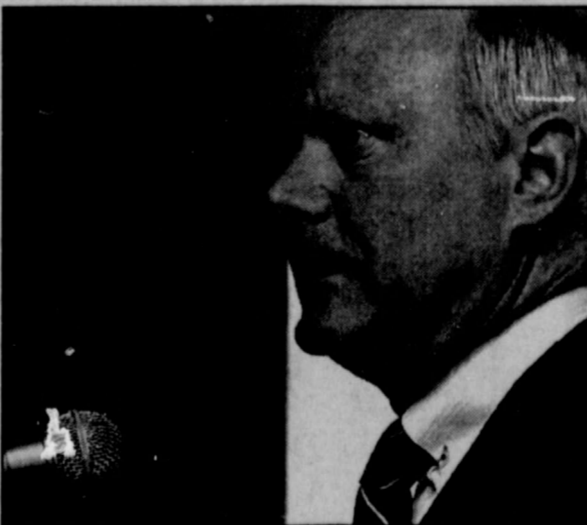

The hearing, which was the Ad Hoc Smoking Ordinance Committee's second this spring, focused on the property rights of Hub City business owners.

Dr. Stan Glantz, a speaker invited by the committee, said cigarette smoke is enough of a public hazard to warrant government intervention regardless of economic impact.

"A cigarette is a tremendously polluting entity," Glantz said.

He also said the ventilation systems installed in restaurants do not protect people from the hazards of smoke.

"It's like saying, 'I have a really good swimming pool

Council approves several construction projects

■ Several colleges and departments on campus will receive renovations and additions.

By Mara McCoy
Staff Writer

The Facility Allocation Council at Texas Tech recently approved about $850,000 worth of construction for several departments and colleges on campus.

The largest single project on the list, Phase II of the central campus-landscaping project, will cost about $200,000 and begin this summer.

Gene West, vice president for operations, said the central campus project, which will be located at the corner of 15th Street and Boston Avenue, will be similar to the landscaping in the science quadrangle.

The FAC receives about $1.3 million a year from the university, but a portion of the money goes toward annual allocations. West said the council asks for a list of projects, in order of priority, from all department heads and deans.

"We send a call letter out and ask for all the projects the deans and departments have," he said. "We ask them to submit it in priority order. From there, the council will review the lists and then approve as many as they can. We got $7 or $8 million in requests."

Of that, the FAC was able to fund $846,050 worth of construction projects submitted by various departments and colleges on campus.

There are 21 projects that have been funded through the FAC.

Some of the on-campus projects, which total $330,450, range from the $30,000 construction of an 18th Street campus sidewalk to fence repairs for Range and Wildlife, which will cost $650.

The College of Arts and Sciences has three construction projects funded through the FAC totaling $112,900. They include the renovation of B-2 Psychology building, which will cost $12,900. That project, West said, has been under consideration since 1991 but was not considered a priority until recently. Hemmle Hall will undergo a $70,000 renovation project to construct an accessible seating area, and new classroom and lab space will be added to the Women's Gym.

Gil Reeve, chairman of the department of health, physical education and recreation, said his department is in great need of the added space. There is one classroom and a dance studio in the Women's Gym. The majority of classes in the HPER department are conducted in the Men's Gym.

"The renovation will use about one-third of the gymnasium to create a classroom and lab area," Reeve said.

There are three labs on the first floor of the Men's Gym, where all undergraduate teaching, graduate education, individual research and any service extensions take place.

"It all takes place in one room for each lab," Reeves said. "It makes it hard for individuals to conduct research because the room may be needed for a class. This makes it very hard to get set up."

Other construction projects include renovating 311 Agricultural Sciences to make it a multi-media room, which will cost $91,200; renovating the Child Development building entrance and restrooms to meet Americans with Disabilities Act code; renovating the PASS center in West Hall, which will cost $25,000; and constructing a conference room in the Business Administration building, which will cost $20,000.

"This council gives all academic areas a chance to do small projects," West said. "We're just trying to address small projects to help the academic units along."

not as bad as many business owners fear.

"I've heard predictions of catastrophe before, and they never came true anywhere," Glantz said.

Chris Lonngren, owner of Schlotzsky's Deli in Lubbock, said city businesses would suffer if a smoking ban were passed.

"We believe the decision should be made by the market, and ultimately, by the owners," Lonngren said. "The public wants a choice in their dining experience."

Larry Simmons owns several bars in the Depot District and said many cities that pass smoking bans end up repealing them later because of adverse economic effects, adding the restaurant industry would not be the only one to suffer.

"A one-size-fits-all solution will not stand in this case," Simmons said.

Mizzi Jordan, owner of the Koko Motel, said a public ban on smoking would hurt the hotel/motel and convention industry in Lubbock. She said Lubbock is in competition with other West Texas cities such as Amarillo and Abilene for travelers' business.

"I don't have slides or graphics, but I do talk to my customers," Jordan said.

She said the hotel/motel tax is an overlooked contribution to Lubbock's economy. "It built the Civic Center," Jordan said.

Dr. John Turnbow, head of Lubbock Citizens for Private Property Rights, brought about 25,000 cards signed by people opposed to a public smoking ban in Lubbock.

Students give back

The Student Government Association and the Office of Campus Activities and Involvement are organizing Tech Lubbock Community Day 2001. TLC Day is a campuswide community service project where students divide into groups and commit to improving the Lubbock community through a unified effort. By working with many different agencies, Tech volunteers donate more than 1000 service hours in one day!

Tech Lubbock Community Day is the largest single day, student-run service project on campus. When wondering why you should participate in TLC Day, consider the possibility of bringing a variety of students together to focus on the needs of others. TLC participants learn about the social, economic and political issues surrounding the clients and agencies they are working with. TLC Day provides Tech students an opportunity to learn how to work and communicate with other people and learn about the differences that make Tech and the Lubbock community unique.

TLC Day begins Saturday morning. Students participating meet at the Frazier Pavillon at 9 a.m. and end around 2 p.m. From there, student groups are assigned to a community site and sent off to volunteer. Participants in TLC Day complete a variety of tasks, including painting, cleaning, and yard work.

I want to invite and encourage organizations and individuals to register for Tech Lubbock Community Day. TLC Day is an excellent chance for Tech students to show Texas Tech and the Lubbock communities that we are interested in being an active student body and involved in community service in our area. For more information concerning TLC Day contact Ryan Weller at 742-3631.

Ryan Weller is the external vice president of the SGA.

Letters to the editor

Groups were given a chance

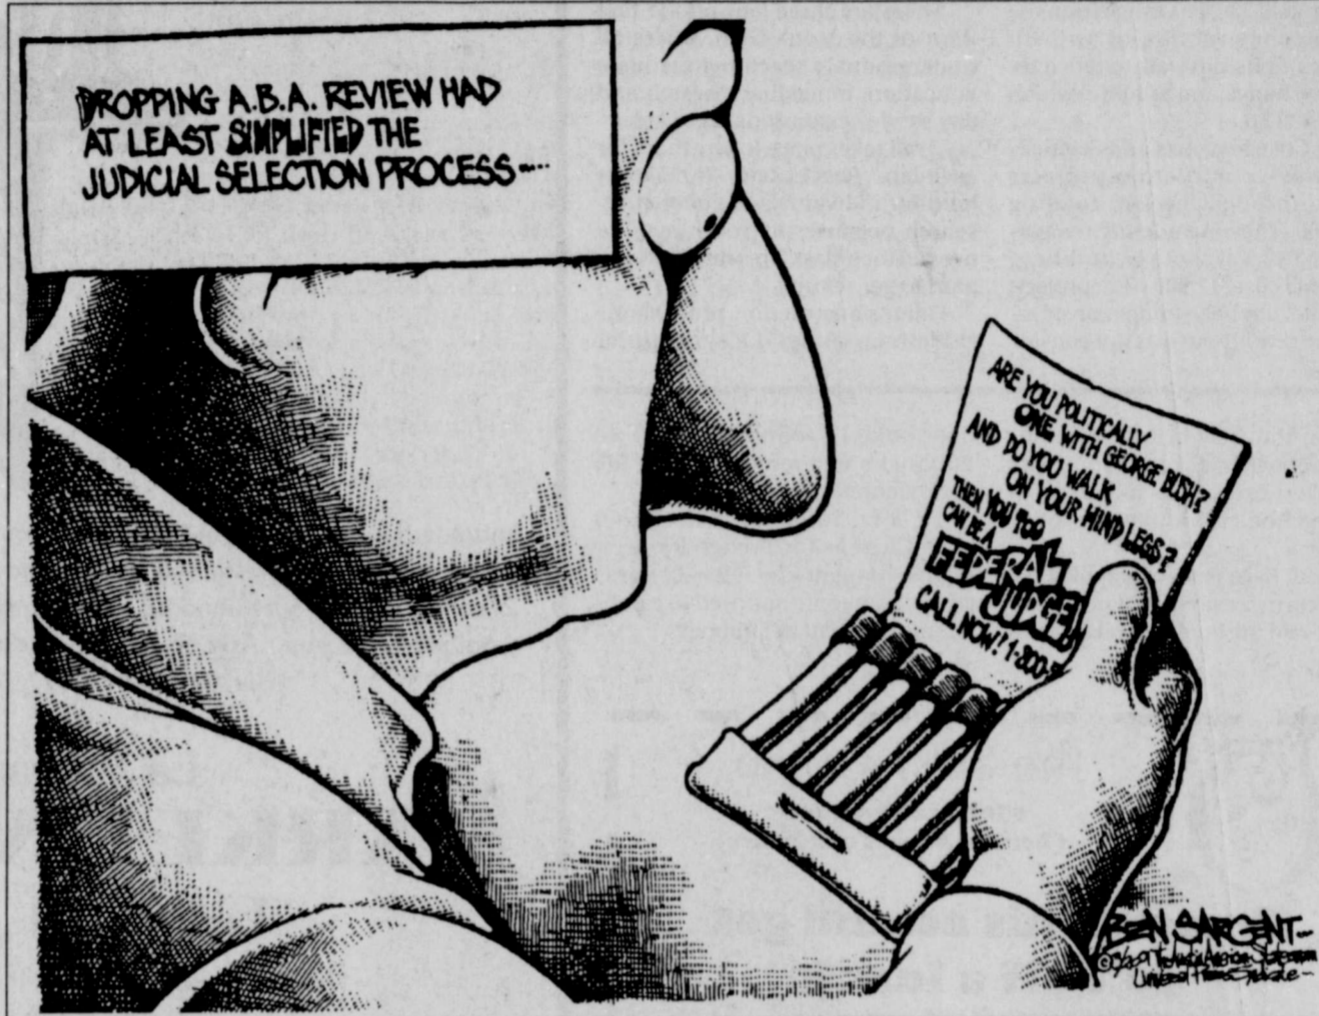

To the editor: In respectful response to Christina Avila's letter about her exclusion from Greek Week 2001 (UD/ April 3), the member organizations of the Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils are the only organizations included in Greek Week, and for good reason! Thirteen IFC fraternities and 12 NPC sororities actively have shown interest and ownership in Greek Week since its inception in November 2000. Multicultural Greek Council Association and PanHellenic Council were left out because they chose not to attend a single planning and organizational meeting to which they were invited. As for the honorary fraternities, they also operate independently of IFC and NPC and conduct their own community events. It is a shame that fun times are negatively judged by people who discriminate themselves by choice and laziness. So, Christina, instead of whining and asking for the world on a silver platter, get out of the house and make a difference in the world.

Social groups gain respect

To the editor: In regard to Christina Avila's letter (UD, April 3). Since coming to Texas Tech, I have seen a very ugly trend in most people who are not considered "Greek." I got the feeling like those who join these organizations are something akin to devil spawn. This campus is so polarized against Greek society that it ignores the positive sides of joining one of these organizations. I'm not Greek. I never will be but not because they lack merit, but because I do other stuff. I think that if a service, religious or multicultural organization wishes to have a week that they celebrate to promote their ideas, then they need to organize and work for it. Why anyone would be offended because other Tech students worked hard, got together and tried to have something positive is beyond me. I would think their actions to be an accomplishment that makes Tech look better and not something to be insulted. Maybe I'm stupid, but I'm really sick of people complaining about the Greeks. I'm sorry people feel excluded, but if all you do is sit around and think of things to complain about, I wouldn't invite you to anything I did either.

Definitions of diversity differ

I usually write about current events, morality and things of that sort. Today, though, I think I'll do things a little differently.

As you might have read two days ago, I've changed my major from economics to psychology and have altered my facial features to resemble those of Richard Nixon. I did, however, keep the same Dumbo-like ears the old Brian Ulrich had — I guess laser surgery can't fix everything.

Since I have this cool new major (bordering on quasi-cool), I am delighted to have the rare opportunity to comment on how people think. And this is the best part: Now that I am an authority on psychology, you have to listen to me!

So here we go. As I continue to progress through college (or digress, to be more precise), I can't help but notice the vast array of ideas, personalities, ethnicities and beliefs people have. I just can't get over the incredible diversity of college students. What's that, not at Texas Tech? You mean diversity isn't 25,000 Caucasian yuppies and country bumpkins who drive Mustangs and V-8 trucks? I see, perhaps that's a good point.

I think we should just have the administration change our admissions policies so that we can attain true diversity. The new qualifying categories for diversity will be: ethnicity, gender, religious belief, species, hairstyle, shoe size, eye color, favorite cola beverage and preferred automobile. Category No.351 on this list will be academic ability. By following this plan, we can make Tech more diverse. Or at least we can get some different kinds of cars in the parking lot.

By the way, I think the local gasoline retailers should pay for the $12 per person hike in commuter parking permits next year, since we faithfully fill up our gas-guzzling Mustangs and V-8 trucks at their pumps every 50 or so miles. I'm sure the administration has a very compelling reason for inflating our parking permit prices a robust 12 percent, so why not let our friends at Exxon and Texaco pick up the tab — after all we've done for them?

Oh sorry, off the soapbox and back to the diversity thing. I think we should give it a shot. It's not that far-fetched, based on the admissions policies of some other universities.

Of course, I'm not being serious with this proposal, but you'd be surprised at what the Tech administration might try to sneak past us in the name of diversity. The University of California's president, Richard Atkinson, wants the SAT requirement for applicants to be discontinued. That's not so bad of an idea, right? Except his reasoning is that his student body doesn't reflect "his ideal racial composition." Atkinson wants to hold blacks to lower standards than whites to gain more diversity. Hold all the black students to lower standards? Atkinson calls this diversity — I call it racism.

The same thing happened recently at the University of Michigan, where Michigan's system of admitting white and minority applicants under different criteria was found to be constitutionally sound by District Court Judge Patrick Duggan. Fortunately, the Supreme Court overturned Duggan's decision.

Racial discrimination, no matter the form, is still racial discrimination, and it is both immoral and extra-constitutional. With all the differing views on morality these days, at least we still see racial discrimination as immoral. Or do we?

Some of these university policies make me wonder. By the way, these are two very real examples that are going on right now. These two schools have actually tried to lower minimum admission requirements for minorities (such as SAT and ACT scores). Simply put, this trend of diversity not only has replaced affirmative action on the campus, it has far exceeded it. Now, universities are discriminating against groups according to their own desires and whims. Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas accurately comments on this trend, "The theory — not only relies upon questionable social science research rather than constitutional principle, but it also rests on an assumption of black inferiority. It's an assumption that blacks cannot succeed with whites."

This same assumption is what holds together the biased admissions policies of several major universities.

So next time you hear the word diversity, ask yourself exactly what diversity means. If it simply means a diverse blend of students, then it's a good thing. But if it means using racial discrimination to attain this blend, then that's a horrible thing — it means that diversity is being used as a clever guise for racism. And, if this is the case, then our culture and our country have actually degenerated back into the same bigotry and racism that we have so desperately tried to escape from. And there you have it. The Nixon-clone has asserted his authority. The psychologist has spoken. Now if I revert back to my old economics major, I can look at these diversity policies this way: At what cost?

Brian Ulrich is an international economics major from Corinth. He can be reached at brianu18@yahoo.com.

Racial discrimination, no matter the form, is still racial discrimination, and it is both immoral and extra-constitutional

Forensics team prepares for national tourney

By Whitney Wyatt
Staff Writer

The Texas Tech forensics team will compete in the national forensics tournament April 7-9 at George Mason University in Fairfax, Virginia.

Trent Webb, director of forensics, said 13 members from Tech's forensics team, which is ranked 15th in the nation, will compete in 33 events at the national tournament.

"(The national tournament) is the cream of the crop tournament," he said.

The Tech team will compete against 1,000 students from more than 100 universities across the nation, Webb said.

The 13 Tech members competing are Stephen Chambers, Dana Coulson, McKinzie Craig, Shane Davis, Anne Feischer, Kyle Myers, Rosanna Narvais, Sorja Raltson, Darren Sliney, Lindsay Stansell, Ryan Smith, Stan Stewart and Rob Vartabedian.

The national tournament consists of 11 different events, Webb said, which are divided into three categories: public address, in which contestants give prepared speeches; limited preparation, which consists of extemporaneous and impromptu speaking; and oral interpretation, which consists of prose and poetry.

This is the toughest tournament, he said, and his team is well prepared.

"They know what they need to do," Webb said. "Now it is just a matter of executing."

Webb said contestants will compete in three preliminary rounds, with the top 24 contestants advancing to the quarterfinals round. The top 12 then will advance to the semifinals round, and the top six then will advance to the final round.

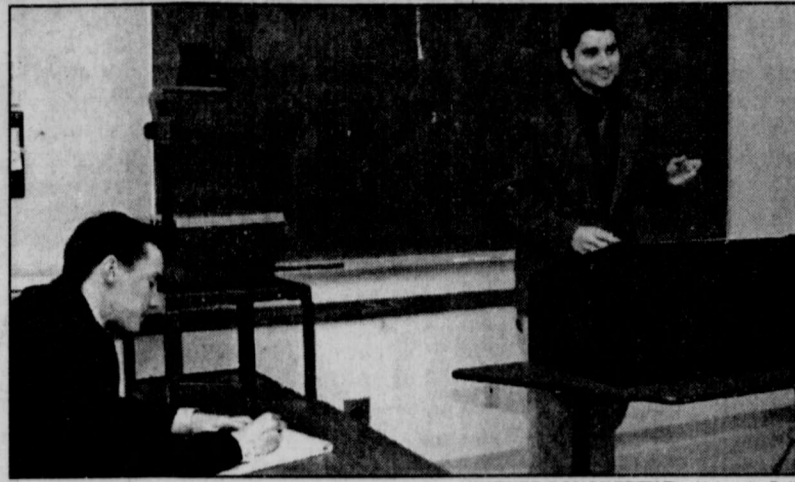

Ryan Smith, a senior communications studies major from Portales, N.M., who is the current state champion in poetry, was a national semi-finalist in prose last year.

"We did really well last year, but I think we will do better this year," said Smith, who will return to nationals for the fourth time.

To qualify for the national tournament, he said a contestant has to place in the top six in three tournaments throughout the year, or a contestant can qualify at the district tournament by placing in the top four. Tech is a district with the University of Texas at Austin, the University of Oklahoma, the University of Kansas, the University of Missouri, the University of Arkansas and the University of Louisiana.

Smith said he is excited about competing at nationals again.

"I think we will have a great national," he said.

Raider softball splits series with OCU Stars

By Matt Muench
Staff Writer

Not one member of the Texas Tech softball team had a smile on their face following Tuesday's twinbill with Oklahoma City at Rocky Johnson Field.

Tech beat the Stars, 5-0, in game one, but dropped game two, 5-3, marking the fourth consecutive series the Red Raiders have split with their opponent.

Raider first baseman Carmen Grindell said losing to a team that is not a Division I NCAA team upsets her.

The Stars are an NAIA squad but are ranked No. 1 in that division.

"We are very disappointed," Grindell said. "This team shouldn't even be in the same ballpark as us."

Tech captured the game one victory with dominant pitching and powerful hitting.

Tech pitcher Amanda Renfro tossed seven scoreless innings, surrendered one hit and struck out 13.

Renfro had a perfect game through six innings but her no-hit bid ended when OCU left fielder Kayla Garrouette squeezed one passed the gloves of Tech shortstop Rebecca Eimen and Raider third baseman Andrea Joachims.

It would have been Renfro's seventh no-hitter and third perfect game.

Grindell supplied the power for the Raiders, hitting two home runs in the contest while catcher Shauna Briggs added her fifth long ball of the season. Tech coach Bobby Reeves said he saw a different team on the diamond in game two.

Tech committed three errors and stranded seven runners on base, compared to game one's zero errors and three runners left on base.

In every series Tech has split, the Raiders have won game one out lost game two.

Reeves said it has to do with focus and confidence, but he is not sure what exactly the problem is.

"I don't know what it is," Reeves said. "If I was a genius, I guess I could figure it out. We should have swept the last four series."

Tech pitcher Maggie Ayers got the starting nod in the second contest but was pulled in the third inning after giving up five runs, two unearned and nine hits.

Renfro relieved her and did not give up a hit the rest of the way.

Reeves said he was hoping to give Renfro a rest but said it would have been trouble if she didn't relieve Ayers.

"I wanted to give her a rest," Reeves said. "It was going to get ugly if I didn't."

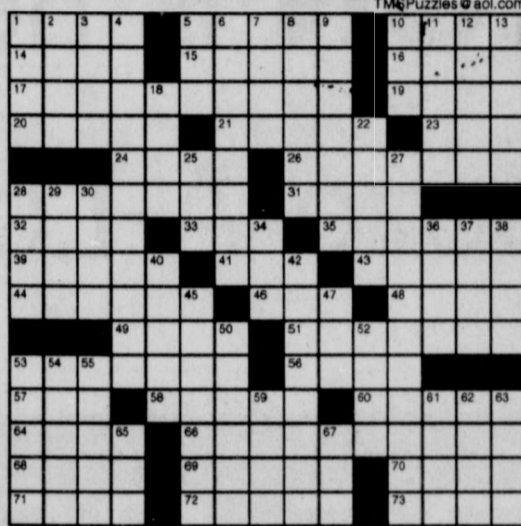

Texas Tech pitcher Maggie Ayers prepares to release a pitch during the second contest of the Red Raiders' doubleheader against Oklahoma City University on Tuesday at Rocky Johnson Field. Tech lost the second game of the twinbill, 5-3, but claimed a victory in its initial contest against the Stars with a 5-0 victory. Tech pitcher Amanda Renfro pitched a one-hitter in game one, taking her no-hit bid into the seventh inning before giving up a base hit.

Expect same old results from new look Texas Rangers

The end of the college hoops season annually coincides with the beginning of spring, as well as the major league baseball season.

Actually, the Texas Rangers began their yearly chant of "wait until next year" Sunday when they dropped their season opener, 8-1, to the Toronto Blue Jays in Puerto Rico.

Phil Riddle

The Rangers spent a 15-year tradition by selecting a Texan to throw out the heroic first pitch. This year's designated tosser was former Dallas Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman.

Aikman sustained a concussion making the inaugural throw, as well as aggravating a back injury suffered while watching the Final Four, and was promptly placed on the disabled list. Just kidding.

Another name of note on the heroic first pitch roster is former president George Bush, who made it two appearances, last year's solo effort, and a 1991 duet with Shane Wood, a 13-year-old from Brownwood who played soccer, football and baseball, even though he was born without hands.

Others who have thrown out the first pitch for the Rangers include Tom Landry, who, as most of us remember, was driven from his post as the coach of the Dallas Cowboys in Dickey-esque fashion, and Jessica McClure, the Midland girl who had been trapped in a well for three days in 1986.

The Rangers spent a quarter of a billion dollars on a shortstop and about $1.89 on pitching in the off-season, and in the spirit of "spare no expense" put on quite a show for the sellout crowd Tuesday.

Recording artist Jessica Simpson, a Dallas native, sang the national anthem, and a trained eagle named Challenger flew from the centerfield office building at the Ballpark in Arlington to home plate.

There also was a performance of the U.S. Navy Ceremonial Guard Team, the presentation of 50 American flags, a fly-over a pair of B-1 bombers from Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene and two strolling Dixieland bands.

Unless one of those bomber pilots has a 96 mph fastball, or one of the banjo players in the Dixieland bands has a wicked curveball or Challenger the eagle can smoke a slider past Derek Jeter, this season will end up as most of the seasons past for the Rangers.

The Dallas metroplex has the Cowboys, with a record of past success, the Stars, who have won the Stanley Cup, the Mavericks, who are on the rise, and the Rangers. The Rangers have had a few good seasons.

They have made the playoffs twice in the last three seasons, but only after the addition of a third AL division and a wild-card entry. Texas, since 1972, through owners Eddie Chiles, George W. Bush and Tom Hicks, has had the same scouting report.

They can score a lot of runs, but if you get past their starter within the first half of the game, they can be beaten. Disagree? OK, then, quick, name three Rangers' pitchers not named for washed up country singers.

The everyday players Rafael Palmeiro, Ivan Rodriguez and Rusty Greer all deserve a chance to work on an even plane with the Yankees and the Indians.

However, if all the payroll dollars are spent on offensive players, Hicks should at least fork over enough to buy a really cool tee from which to hammer the ball.

Maybe if Troy gets over his injury, he could pitch.

I should have gone to class more. I should have studied more. But then again, I did have a lot of fun.

But Bob Knight just got here! Well, there's always grad school.

I'm going to miss my pledge class. Not financial aid. Definitely not traffic and parking. If they start playing the fight song right now, I'm going to cry, though. I can't believe it's over. And it only took 6 years.

I'm so ready. I think aren't I? Oh, crap!

I still can't believe the guys on my floor did that freshman year. That was a lot of balloons. I'm going to miss this place. Mom and dad never did find out about that jail thing.

Knight introduced to local media

By Jeff Keller
Sports Editor

Bob Knight became more familiar with media members from the Lubbock area, and vice versa, when the new Texas Tech men's basketball coach met with about 25 local journalists during a press conference at the United Spirit Arena on Tuesday.

Knight was tardy to the conference, which was scheduled to begin at 11 a.m. but actually got rolling around 11:15 a.m.

The former Indiana coach apologized for his late arrival and later explained that part of the reason he was late was because he was talking to NCAA officials about the current scholarship situation for the Red Raider men's hoops team next season.

Knight said Tech is fighting an NCAA rule that limits the number of scholarship players the squad can sign this recruiting season. After Knight kicked three players off the team last week, Tech will be limited to nine scholarship players next season.

When Knight was asked to comment on the situation regarding the reason for the dismissal of the three players, his answer was short and to the point.

"Because they needed to be dismissed — period," Knight said.

During the conference, Knight fielded a wide variety of questions concerning everything from movies he had seen recently to next year's squad.

When Knight was asked what he foresaw for his team's success next season, he said he did not have the power to see the future.

"I don't know," Knight said. "If I knew that, we could just get out the New York Stock Exchange and read through it and pick out some things that we all could invest in, and then we would be done."

Knight said he has been pleased with what he has seen from the Raiders, but he would like the squad to step up their effort.

"I really like what I have seen. I mean, I really like what I've seen," Knight said. "The first day I was very pleasantly surprised with what I saw. We've got to have a real increased effort."

The Raider squad has been practicing for 40 minutes three times a week since Knight was hired as coach.

NCAA regulations prohibit practicing for more than two hours a week at this point in the basketball season.

Knight also has been busy with recruiting for his basketball team since being named as the head of the men's program.

Knight said getting the right players into the program will be crucial to the turnaround of a squad that posted a 9-19 record last season and finished last in the Big 12 Conference.

"The first thing is the establishment of a group of players that can turn it around," Knight said. "You have to add players to a situation like this. I am not really concerned about the scholarship situation. The university is appealing that situation."

A short time into the press conference, Knight turned to Associate Director of Media Relations Chris Cook and asked him to get him a drink. Cook returned with the soda and Knight was grateful.

"That's not bad for a football SID," Knight said.

Cook said despite Knight's razzing of him during the conference, Knight has treated him well so far.

"So far, he has been nothing but kind to me," Cook said. "He has been nothing but cooperative while having one of the busiest schedules of any of the coaches."

Knight went on to discuss the schedule his team will compete against next season. He said nothing is set in stone, but he thinks fans will enjoy watching Tech play the teams that should be on the schedule next season.

Knight concluded the press conference by reiterating his position on the Red Raider players who were dismissed from the team last Friday.

Knight followed his answer concerning the players at the beginning of the conference, with the statement that he was finished discussing the matter. When asked about the players later in the conference, Knight seemed somewhat frustrated in his response.

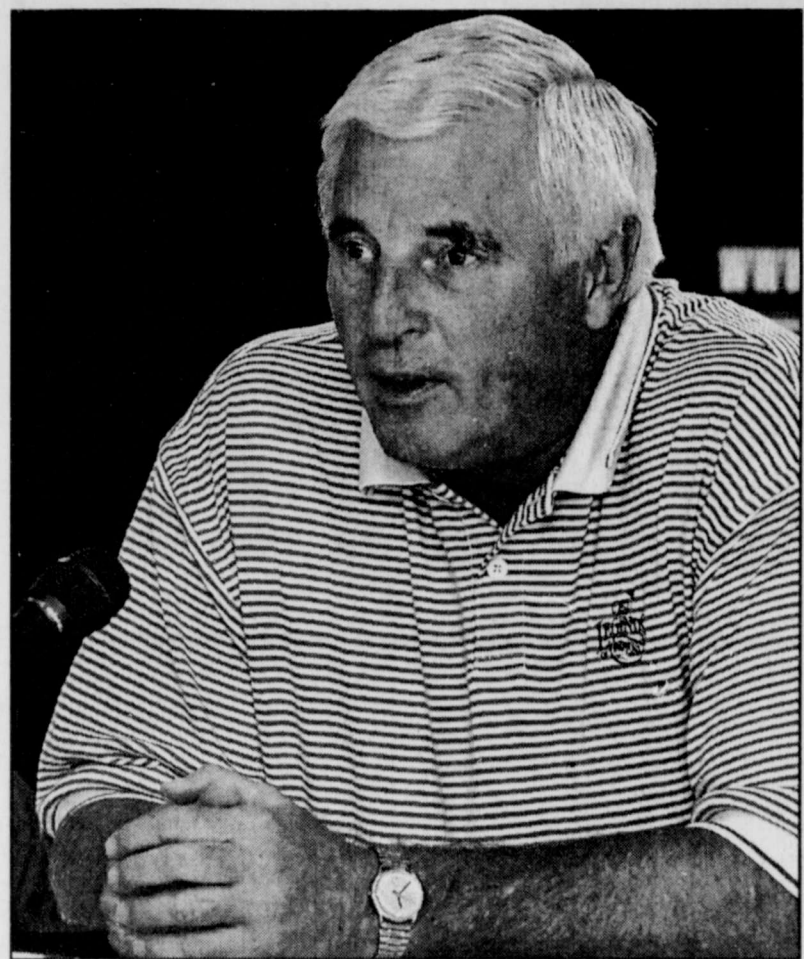

"Didn't I just say that I wasn't going to talk about that anymore," Knight said. "All I did was tell you that I wasn't going to talk about it anymore."

The reporter went on to attempt to clarify the question, but Knight refused to budge.

"That would be talking about it, wouldn't it?" Knight said. "I said I wouldn't."

The reporter said, "fine," which drew further response from the new Tech coach.

"It's not fine," Knight said. "You've got to kind of listen. When somebody said they aren't going to do it, that is what they mean. That is what irritates people."

A-Rod fans three times in home debut

ARLINGTON (AP) — Alex Rodriguez struck out three times and singled in his first home game for Texas, and the Rangers beat the Anaheim Angels, 3-2, Tuesday in their home opener.

Rodriguez, whose $252 million, 10-year contract with Texas is the richest in sports history, struck out swinging in the first and eighth innings, took a called third strike in the sixth and singled in the third.

But he also had his third hit, a stolen base and was flawless in the field.

On the first ball hit his way, he started a 6-4-3 double play in the second. An inning later, he went deep, scooped up the ball and threw Tim Salmon out at first.

Kenny Rogers won the Rangers' home opener for the second straight season and Tim Lincecum converted his first save opportunity for Texas.

Fitness and Wellness Happenings

Summer and Fall Positions Available

Fitness Instructor Position

Fitness Instructors are needed to fill several positions, teaching various group exercise classes. If you are interested in becoming a Rec Sports Fitness Instructor, possess leadership skills and have a basic working knowledge of anatomy, exercise principles and movements, applications will be available in the Fitness/Wellness Center and in the Main Office, Rm 202 of the Student Recreation Center. After completing an application, please sign up for an audition time. Auditions are today and tomorrow from 3:00 - 4:30 pm. If you are interested, please call 742-3351 or 742-3828 as soon as possible.

Fitness/Wellness Assistant and Personal Trainer Positions

The Fitness/Wellness Assistant and Personal Trainer positions are open for the Summer and Fall, 2001 semesters. Job descriptions and applications are available in the Fitness/Wellness Center or in the SRC Main Office, Room 202. Qualifications for both positions include administering various health screenings such as body composition, blood pressure and flexibility as well as instruct patrons on safe usage of equipment. The Fitness/Wellness Assistant positions also include class registration, reservations, compiling wellness information for bulletin boards and handouts, and helping with special events. Personal trainers work one-on-one with SRC patrons in developing individual exercise programs. Applicants need to have experience performing fitness assessments and it is recommended to have completed exercise science classes like theory of weight training and scientific basis. Upper level nutrition majors are encouraged to apply also. Applications must be received by Friday, April 6.

Tri Sport

Have you ever wanted to try a triathlon but are a little apprehensive? Or do you want to get more triathlon training information? If you answered yes then the Tri Sport class would be a great class for you. Tri Sport is a class designed to introduce the sport of triathlon and provide basic training information and workouts in running, cycling and swimming. Interested participants need to be able to swim at least 300 yds, bike 8 miles, and run 2-3 miles to register for the class. The class is on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 5:30-6:30 pm, April 10 - 26. Registration is in the Fitness/Wellness Center. For questions, please email janda.ibtson@ttu.edu or call 742-3351 or 742-3828.

Intramural Happenings

Intramural Softball

Rain has dampened a great deal of regular season play. Now it is time to head for the playoffs. Playoff schedules will be available after 2pm today. They may be picked up in SRC 203. Playoff action will begin on Sunday, April 8.

3 on 3 Volleyball- Play will be Friday night in the 3 on 3 volleyball tournament. Captains should pick up their brackets in SRC 203.

4 on 4 Air Attack Football-Recreational Sports will offer a 4 on 4 Air Attack Flag Football tournament. Entries must be turned in by 5pm Monday, April 9. Entries will be taken in SRC 203. Play will begin next week!! Since this will be a tournament format, games may be played Monday through Thursday evenings and Sunday afternoons.

Multiathlon

This event is a single elimination event that challenges the entrants to a series of match-ups to determine who is the best all-around athlete. Entrants compete in a best two events of three in each round with winners advancing into new rounds and different events. You may end up climbing the wall for time, playing one-on-one basketball, kicking field goals or running a mile race. Contestants will not know which event comes in any round until the start of the contest. There will be two divisions. Greek Men will be open to IFC point competition groups. Open will be any other man or woman; student, faculty or staff member. Entries are due by Monday, April 9 and the first series of events will be slated for Wednesday, April 11.

Tennis Singles

Intramural tennis singles will be held this weekend. Play will begin on Friday evening. Entries are due by 5pm today in SRC 203 for this event.

Collision! Intramural soccer players from the Ball Kickers and Born 2 Beat collide in an attempt to get to the ball during a recent league game at the soccer arena in the Student Recreation Center. The Ball Kickers won the game 9-3.

BASEBALL TOURNAMENT SCHEDULED FOR APRIL

Entries are due by 5:00 pm April 18th for the annual Recreational Sports' baseball tournament to be held the weekends of April 21-22 and April 28-29. There is a $45.00 team entry fee to cover expenses of baseballs and umpires.

All games are scheduled to be played at Dan Law Field the first weekend and MacKenzie Park and Hodges Community Center the final weekend. Games will be seven innings with a 2 hour time limit. All students, faculty and staff are eligible. Only recent college letter winners in baseball are ineligible.

There is an eight team entry limit, so early entries are encouraged. Baseball, umpires and catching equipment will be provided. If you have any questions please call Joe in the Rec Sports office at 742-3351.

Texas Tech University Libraries

A reception honoring Tech faculty and staff members will be held on Thursday, April 5, 2001. This reception, held as part of the 17th annual Faculty / Staff book exhibit will be held in the Croslin Room of the University Library from 4:00 to 5:00pm. The works of more than 50 members of the TTU staff and faculty will be on display as Provost John Burns presents recognition certificates to the honorees during the reception.

In addition to monographs, the exhibit includes other artistic equivalents such as music scores and video footage. The exhibit will run through May 15, 2001. Both the exhibit and reception are open to the public.

For a list of the works to be displayed and authors names, or for more information about the event contact:

Jim Niessen

Looking for that perfect on-campus job?

The SRC Facilities team is looking for people who are quality crusaders who will gladly teach and actively learn. Recreational Sports is a dynamic and fast-paced department with high expectations, but we also enjoy the journey. Applications for Facilities positions (Equipment Issue, ID Stations/Entry Control, Free Weight Room Supervisors, and Facility Rovers) for Summer and Fall will be accepted Thursday, 29 March through Friday, 13 April. Pick up an application in the SRC office, Room 202.

Now's the BEST time to join our team! This Fall, we will move into the new expansion! Join us in the fun and make it happen! Contact Bob Miller at 742.3351 or Bob.Miller@ttu.edu for more information!

Cholesterol Screening Tomorrow

Studies have shown that people with high blood cholesterol have more chance of developing coronary heart disease than do people with lower levels of cholesterol. The only way to know if your cholesterol is high is to have blood drawn and analyzed by a lab. Give yourself a healthy holiday present and find out what your cholesterol is.

Cholesterol and Glucose Screening will be held in the Fitness Wellness Center tomorrow morning from 6:45 a.m.-8:30 a.m.

The results include Total Cholesterol, HDL, LDL, VLDL and Triglyceride levels. There is an $10 charge for Cholesterol and $3 for Glucose. You must register by call 742-3828 no later than today at noon. For accurate results, it is suggested that you fast for 12 hours before the test.

Your Personal Outdoor Adventures Awaits

Spring is here! This is a great time to get out and visit the natural wonders of West Texas. There are great state parks that offer hiking and camping opportunities within an easy 2 hour drive from Lubbock. The Outdoor Program has information and equipment to make a quick weekend get-away possible. Stop by and see our large rental inventory of camping equipment. This year the Outdoor Program purchased many new tents and sleeping bags. Also available are: backpacks, stoves, lanterns, cook kits, coolers, canoes, maps and advice on local state parks. All the equipment is reasonably priced and will help you get outside the city limits of Lubbock. Equipment may be reserved two weeks in advance by stopping by our office and completing the rental contract. Please stop by our office in room 206 in the Student Recreation Center or call either 742-2949 or 742-3351.

Mountain Bike Race Sunday

The Natural High Mountain Bike race will be held Sunday, April 8 at the MLK course. Registration will be held from 12-12:45 p.m. There will be classes for Men's and Women's Beginners, Sport, and Expert with Beginners leading off at 1 pm followed shortly by the other classes. Donations are $3 for those with a Tech ID and $5 without. Beginners will ride the Beginner course; all others will ride the course including the east side. Try something new—lots of prizes and fun for everyone!
