Tech cancels classes today

By Jeff Stoughton/Staff Reporter

In response to the attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon on Tuesday, President George W. Bush declared today a national day of mourning.

Texas Tech responded to the situation by canceling class.

The university has placed televisions in the University Center and is showing live news footage in the Allen Theatre.

Kari Markgraf, a senior family studies major from Irving, said Tech's response has been appropriate for the situation, adding that faculty members have been supportive of the students during the week by discussing the attacks in class and offering help to mourning students.

Markgraf said she was glad Tech officials did not cancel class Tuesday because it helped show the nation's resolve.

John Paul Duran, a senior physical therapy major from El Paso, said classes offered students a chance to keep their regular schedules, which offered some sort of stability in an otherwise confusing time. He said faculty members were accommodating to the students who chose to miss class.

Modesto Rodriguez, a sophomore business major from Lubbock, said he would spend today watching the news for new developments.

"Hopefully, nothing else bad will happen," he said.

Tech students have been showing their support for their fellow Americans this week in various ways.

"I think it really shows that no matter how far away we are, we can still show support," Markgraf said, adding that she was impressed with students' responses to Tuesday's attacks. She said she saw a lot of students wearing red, white and blue ribbons and displaying American flags on their vehicles. "I think that's really impressive," she said, "They attacked all of us."

Duran said that since the underlying purpose of terrorism must be to create panic and discord among a nation's residents, it is important for people to support each other. Many students forget that their peers as well as their parents may need support during this time of national mourning, he said.

"I hope that everyone can draw strength from each other," he said.

Duran, a member of Alpha Phi Omega, was among the students who helped collect donations to send to the victims of the attacks.

There will also be a memorial service in the United Spirit Arena today.

Rodriguez said he would consider attending.

"It shows that all of us as students have patriotism," he said.

Community-wide memorial service set for noon at the United Spirit Arena

By Jenny Klein/Staff Reporter

Memorial services are being held at noon today at the United Spirit Arena in recognition of the National Day of Prayer and Remembrance for the victims of Tuesday's attack. The doors will open at 10:30 a.m. for the public.

Scheduled speakers at the service include Lubbock Mayor Windy Sitton, along with Texas Tech Interim Chancellor Dr. David Smith, President David Schmidly, Student Government Association President John Steinmetz and Health Sciences Center SGA President Courtney Youens.

"This is a chance for the Texas Tech community as well as the Lubbock community to gather together to remember those involved in this tragedy, their losses, and our nation's losses," said Jan Childress, assistant vice president for the Division of Student Affairs.

Childress said she is hopeful that students will take the opportunity to participate.

Kelli Stumbo, SGA internal vice president, said it's good that the community can come together for this.

Stumbo said among those who are expected to attend are Lubbock City Council members, a county judge, county commissioners and the Student Senate from the university, the HSC and the SGA.

Childress said these entities were represented at the planning meeting on Thursday.

"Lots of planning has gone into this. It should be an exceptional event," Childress said.

Childress and Stumbo said they both expect a large turnout.

"Overall, we expect close to 12,000 students and citizens to attend," Stumbo said. She said if there is an overflow, people will be sent to Jones SBC Stadium, where the entire service will be broadcast.

Accommodations will be made for parking and transportation, Childress said.

Steinmetz said buses will be running from all campus residence halls and parking lots from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Steinmetz said Student Affairs, in conjunction with the SGA, will have a place set up for monetary donations as well.

"We'll have jugs out to raise money for the Red Cross in New York," Steinmetz said. "We've already raised quite a bit of money from students so far."

He said people will be handing out red, white and blue ribbons and flags.

Steinmetz said this event doesn't just show support for Texas but also for the nation.

Stumbo said she believes the tragedy has affected each and every person, maybe not directly, but as citizens of this nation.

"As patriots, we feel helpless. This will give us a chance to show our support to those involved in this tragic event," she said.

Stumbo said this memorial service is an opportunity to show support for the rescue effort, give thanks for those who survived and to express sorrow for those who did not.

GOOD CHOICES — AND LOTS OF 'EM

They're yours at TTUHSC's School of Allied Health

Anthologists assess and treat patients with suspected hearing impairments and balance problems.

Clinical laboratory scientists play a major role in diagnosis, medicine and study of patient specimens for such conditions of disease.

Physical therapists treat disabilities and pain to restore functional ability.

You told us what you wanted and we listened. Now it's up to you. We think that what you're going to find will amaze you, especially the options that are yours next semester as a student in the School of Allied Health. The health care fields we offer are not only some of the most viable in today's job market — they're also fast tracks to successful futures for anyone who puts out the effort. Choose now from:

- Physical Therapy ■ High demand; diverse opportunities. Help patients regain health after illness or injury. Early acceptance. Opt for dual Master's degree in Athletic Training.
- Athletic Training ■ Work with the physically active to prevent, treat and rehab sports injuries. Entry-level Master's. Opt for dual Master's degree in Physical Therapy.
- Physician Assistant ■ Become a skilled health care pro with academic, clinical training to practice medicine under supervision of licensed physician. Great opportunities, autonomy.
- Occupational Therapy ■ Help clients work, live full lives, overcome disabilities. Early acceptance. Opt for dual Master's degree in field of Vocational Rehabilitation.
- Vocational Rehabilitation ■ Counseling field focuses on working with people with disabilities. On-line curriculum. Work toward CRC certification. Opt for dual Master's in Occupational Therapy.
- Clinical Laboratory Science ■ Assist in diagnoses and therapy planning by analyzing patient specimens for disease. Pre-med mentoring program available.
- Emergency Medical Services Management ■ Distance education Bachelor's program for all EMS professional levels. Individualized programs to meet student goals. Part-time students welcome.
- Communication Disorders ■ Speech-Language Pathology offers assessment/treatment of speech, language, learning and swallowing problems. ■ Audiology helps you master academic and clinical preparations for assessment/treatment of hearing and balance disorders. Doctorate degree offered.

Master's degrees are available after completion of programs in athletic training, occupational therapy, vocational rehabilitation, physician assistant, speech-language pathology and physical therapy.

PERSPECTIVES

IMPACTING A UNIVERSITY

Texas Tech students give personal viewpoints of terrorist attacks

"You see it and it's like watching a movie. Then you realize that it has happened and that is tough to believe. As Americans we are going to stand together and unite."

"I've been calling my family and telling them I love them, because there were a lot of people who didn't get that chance."

"They took down one of our greatest symbols of capitalism, and while they have succeeded to temporarily handicap it, capitalism is still here. I've been there so it is going to be weird to see the center not standing."

"I just hope everyone just doesn't go out for people who look like the people doing this."

— Kris Nagy, a sophomore architecture major from Philadelphia.

"The whole thing is shocking and very scary. It almost doesn't seem real, watching it on TV, but it is. It's just scary to think about what it might turn into. Something needs to be done, but what happens after that confrontation and how it is going to affect everything else is hard to determine. The lingering thought it might develop into a war is scary."

— Katie Petersen, a sophomore undeclared major from Fort Worth.

"It's a very tragic incident. I think that George Bush is doing a very good job. I'm very proud of our president — he seems to be very compassionate to the victims' families."

"It hits you hard that such evil can be in the world."

— Samantha Cabla, a freshman pre-communication major from Irving.

"Your first reaction is to be stunned. I don't think anyone understands the gravity of the situation and what will occur next. I'll be honest now, I'm really scared about extremist right-wing fundamentalists groups who think they now have the green light to commit other terrorist acts against us or whoever."

"I volunteered for the American Red Cross (Wednesday). The events spurred me into acting to do something unselfish. I know that the Red Cross is always looking for volunteers."

— Stephanie Fain, a freshman graduate student from Houston.

"It's a tragedy. I think as a nation we should stand together, and hopefully retaliate against who did this to us. I've skipped school for the past three days because I've been watching the news on TV. I have four relatives who work in New York City. They were all safe. My uncle actually had to be at a meeting at the World Trade Center at 8:30 but luckily he was running late and saw the second crash. He made it out but he lost his car."

"It's going to be hard to imagine New York City without the twin towers anymore, because it was the center of the world's finance center. It was actually there a couple of years ago and ate at the restaurant on the top floor of the Trade Center and danced at the club. It's just tough to believe it's gone now."

— Jerry Ma, a senior finance major from Houston.

"I just can't believe it happened. It's really, really sad — unbelievable for the whole country. I'm glad we're having the memorial service to honor those families affected by this tragedy."

— Sandra Torres, a sophomore pre-pharmacy major from Garland.

"I think it's preposterous for American innocent people to get attacked in this country. As a Muslim student on this campus, there's no religious way to justify what those people have done."

— Samad Abdur-Razzaq, a freshman business finance major from Colorado City.

"I think it's a tragedy and sad that people can be that hateful."

"I think it's a great job that churches are doing and all the support at the blood drives show that people really care."

— Bonnie Miller, a freshman physical therapy major from Midland.

"There are no words to describe it."

"Outrage is what you feel when someone backs into your car — not when thousands of people die."

"Sadness is what you feel when your aunt dies — not when thousands of people die. It is hard to put how you feel into words."

— C.W. Doyle, a senior finance major from Snyder.

"I was shocked. It is truly unbelievable to think that someone can plan something like this and not have anything go wrong. To even think that someone is capable of this is shocking."

"I have mixed feelings. I used to live in New York and my dad used to work in Manhattan right next to the Trade Center Towers, so it really hits home for me. I know people from there still. I felt shock and disbelief when I first heard. I just kept trying to figure out if it really happened."

— Scott Oglesbee, a freshman architecture and business major from Denison.

"My first thought was 'How could this happen here?' My suggestion for the government would be to save attack as a last option. I am upset but it is best to find (Osama bin Laden). If it is him, bring him here and punish him accordingly. We need to make justice, not war. We need to emphasize that we are taking action against the person who did this, not a country. The United States needs to give the message that this guy is not good, but if we just kill him, someone else will come in his shoes later on and the circle will never end."

— Mario Pialva, a computer science graduate student from Mexico.

— Brandon Roberson, a senior exercise and sports science major from Fort Worth.

"I think America just needs to think through things before committing to a plan of action."

— Logan Brown, a sophomore computer science major from Santa Anna.

"It is such a crazy thing. I think we need to find out who did it and find something to fix it."

Right now there is nothing we can do until we find out who did it. It is really a tragic thing."

— Melissa Vogel, a freshman electrical engineering major from Houston.

"Obviously, this is a great loss for the nation. My initial reaction was one of disbelief."

My wife called and said that a plane had hit the World Trade Center and my first thought was a small plane. I never expected something like this. I feel great sorrow for the loss of lives and the rescue workers who are still there working through the night pulling people from the rubble. I spoke with the people in the corporate Barnes and Noble office in New York and they said that they watched it out their window and it was just like watching a really bad movie."

— Dewayne Campbell, assistant director of the Texas Tech Bookstore.

"Shock. I think I was shocked like everyone else."

"The images were so surreal it was almost like watching a movie. No one counted on something like this happening here. It is still more of a dream than a fact."

— Ike Onuma, a senior English major from Lubbock.

"My first reaction was shock as well. I think it woke some Americans up and said that it can happen here too. We are not as unbreakable as everyone thinks."

— Angie Alexander, a junior psychology major from Levelland.

"If we do find that it is linked to (Osama) bin Laden then we need to ask Afghanistan to give him up. If they don't, then we need to take over and occupy Afghanistan and see it as conquered territory."

"I thought that it was a dream when I first heard about it. I didn't know what to think. I do think that Americans think that things like this don't happen here."

— Josh Gentry, a senior arts and sciences undeclared major from Lubbock.

"I was not really surprised until I saw the footage on CNN. It just doesn't register that something like had happened."

— Julian Russbach, a senior computer science major from Houston.

"Disbelief. Sorrow. It is such a loss. There are several stories of hope like the official, either fire or police, who rode one of the towers down and they pulled him out with just a broken leg. That is incredible."

"I feel absolute anger at the pictures of the Palestinians who are celebrating and passing out candy. I think we need to declare war. Find out who's responsible and wipe 'em out."

— Don Lucas, Tech professor of music.

"I think it is scary. It just shows how unsafe we are. We need to be careful and figure out who did this. It is just still really difficult to grasp."

— Deanna Nazarett, a business administration undeclared major from Albuquerque, N.M.

"It is so sad. I just can't believe it is what it is. We thought we were so safe and now we have to realize that we are just like everyone else."

— Katie McCarty, a senior education major from Rusk.

"I really don't know what we should do. Everyone I have talked to thinks that we should bomb other countries but two wrongs don't make a right. It is just really sad."

— Tamara Duran, a freshman social work major from Odessa.

"I was devastated when I heard. America needs to put its foot down and back up its words."

"We need to stop talking and start acting."

— Charles Lair, a junior public relations major from Corpus Christi.

"I was shocked. I think that retaliation is certainly in order but it is a question of how it should be done."

— Kim Drews, a graduate student and teaching assistant in the math department.

"I thought it was a really bad joke when I first heard. I think we need to be careful because I do not want this to end up in World War III."

— Heather Henkel, a graduate student and teaching assistant in the math department.

I think whatever the government decides, we need to support them 100 percent and show that we are a united country. We need to find out who did this and bring them to justice. We need to show the world that we will not tolerate this.

FBI pursuing many leads

NATIONWIDE HUNT: Attorney General John Ashcroft says the investigation spans from border to border.

By Melissa Guest/Staff Reporter

Attorney General John Ashcroft said Thursday the FBI is working on "thousands and thousands of leads" in their investigation of the terrorist attacks.

Although there have been no arrests, authorities have identified nearly all of the 18 hijackers and are close to releasing the names and possibly the origin of the hijackers, said Mindy Tucker, a Justice Department spokeswoman. The identities of the men who hijacked the four planes with knives and threats of bombs have been ascertained.

The FBI investigation spans from the Canadian border to Florida, where some of the participants learned how to fly commercial airplanes before the attacks.

Jason Norton, a sophomore mass communications major from Lubbock, said he believes the United States is responding as well as can be expected to such a horrible tragedy.

"I think they've been hearing speculation for years, they just didn't know when it would happen."

Norton said he thinks the government will find those responsible for organizing the attacks with time.

"We can't punish the people that did it because they killed themselves," he said. "I think they are doing the best they can."

In spite of the mass destruction and loss of life suffered at the hands of these terrorists, Norton said he did not believe the United States should react with the same cruelty.

"We're not going to stoop ourselves to their level by killing civilians like they did ours," he said.

The hardest part of an investigation like this, Norton said, is placing the responsibility and retribution on the right target.

"I think they are just declaring war over terrorism in general," he said. "If this is just one group within a country, and the rest of the country has nothing to do with it, it would be like if Timothy McVeigh went over and bombed the Eiffel Tower and France declaring war on us."

Norton said students should try to do as much as they can in these kinds of disaster situations.

"Right now I'm just trying to do my part and give blood."

Sheena Bates, a sophomore early childhood major from Graham, said she is hopeful about the quick action the government has taken.

"I think they are doing a good job with all the information the FBI has come up with in just one day," she said.

Although saddened by the attacks, Bates said, Americans cannot be intimidated.

"If we hurt the wrong people, it will just make it worse for us,"

— SHEENA BATES
Texas Tech Sophomore

"I don't know what you could do to stop that from happening," she said. "You can't just stop going to work."

Once found, Bates said, participants in the attack should have to face their victims.

"I just think they should have to deal with the families they hurt and listen to every person affected. They should have to listen to the wife who lost her husband," she said. "It's kind of hard to punish them because obviously they don't have regret. They had plenty of time to back out."

Bates said she hopes the United States will not be hasty in its quest for retribution.

"If we hurt the wrong people, it will just make it worse for us," she said.

Big 12 cancels weekend schedule

By Phil Riddle and David Wiechmann
Staff Reporters

Saturday's Texas Tech versus Texas-El Paso football game, along with the rest of the Red Raiders' weekend sports schedule, was postponed Thursday "out of respect for the nation's healing," according to Tech officials.

"It's a sad time," said Tech President David Schmidly. "We don't need to be playing. We need to pause and memorialize what happened," he said. "It is a time to reflect."

The football game, originally slated for Thursday, had been rescheduled for Saturday following the terrorist attacks on New York and Washington. It was called off indefinitely Thursday as the Western Athletic Conference called off all scheduled games involving its member schools, setting off a domino effect that eventually included Big 12 and Southeast Conference schools.

"I was up most of the night thinking about this," Schmidly said. "I spoke with the UTEP president (Diana Natalicio) and she feels the same way. I will be amazed if any games are played this weekend. Our lives are a lot more than just sporting events."

Tech athletics director, Gerald Myers, said the Big 12 decided to not play all five games on this weekend's schedule to show consideration for the victims.

"It was a general consensus from all the teams," he said. "We felt out of respect of the situation that the tragedy on Tuesday the respect to the victims that we won't play the game."

Schmidly said safety concerns wound up being the overriding factor in the decision, at least for Tech.

"UTEP did an extensive review and sent me an e-mail and said they were prepared," he said. "I was satisfied that they did all they could do, but the border location did cause concern."

Officials at UTEP said Thursday that both teams hope to reschedule the game for later in the season. If the game were

More than 4,700 reported missing in Trade Center catastrophe

NEW YORK (AP)—The ghastly toll of the terrorist attack on the nation's largest city came into focus Thursday, as more than 4,700 people were reported missing in the devastation of the World Trade Center. President Bush said he would visit New York and thank its people for exhibiting "the bravery of America."

The grim process of combing tons and tons of rubble went on.

Mayor Rudolph Giuliani said the city had some 30,000 body bags available to hold the pieces taken from the wreckage, and parts of 70 bodies had been recovered. There were just 94 confirmed dead; 30 or fewer had been identified. And 4,763 people had been reported missing.

"It could turn out we recover fewer than that; it could be more," Giuliani said. "We don't know the answer."

In a call to Giuliani and New York Gov. George Pataki, Bush said he would visit New York on Friday. "I weep and mourn with America," he said, describing Tuesday's attacks as "the first war of the 21st century."

He said he looked forward to thanking the people who "made a huge display, for the world to see, of the compassion of America and the bravery of America."

The president will find a reeling meropolis. A vast section of the city has been sealed off, as emergency workers struggled to cope with the unprecedented destruction.

Work was slowed by hellish bursts of flame and the collapse of the last standing section of one of the towers taken out by suicide jets.

The rescue efforts were once again hindered by the battered infrastructure in lower Manhattan. The top 10 floors of the 53-story One Liberty Plaza, near the Trade Center site, began buckling and forced the evacuation of some rescue workers Thursday afternoon.

At one point authorities said five Fire Department rescue workers had been extricated from the rubble, two days after they were entombed in a sport utility vehicle. It turned out there were just two men, and they were trapped in an underground air pocket only briefly on Thursday.

A day before, five people had been pulled alive from the Trade Center rubble — three of them police officers.

The effort in New York was mirrored at the Pentagon, where 126 people were believed to be dead — among them a three-star Army general — and 70 bodies had been recovered.

The total deaths at the Trade Center and the Pentagon — as well as those on board the planes that crashed into them and into a grassy field southeast of Pittsburgh — would bring the total to more than 5,000.

That would be higher than the death toll from Pearl Harbor and the Titanic combined. A total of 2,390 Americans died at Pearl Harbor nearly 60 years ago, and the sinking of the Titanic claimed 1,500 lives.

A thick cloud of acrid, white smoke blew through the streets Wednesday after the four-story fragment of the south tower fell. Gusts of flame occasionally jumped up as debris was removed from the smoldering wreckage.

The vast search to uncover the terrorist plot stretched from Miami to Boston to Portland, Maine, and on to Canada and Germany. Up to 50 people were involved in the attack, the Justice Department said, with at least four hijackers trained at U.S. flight schools. Saudi fugitive Osama bin Laden remained a top suspect.

Attorney General John Ashcroft said authorities had "thousands and thousands" of leads. He said they had determined that 18 hijackers were on the planes: five on each of two planes and four on each of the other two.

In Washington, Bush worked with Congress on legislation authorizing military retaliation, and officials disclosed that the White House, Air Force One and the president himself had been targeted Tuesday.

America's NATO allies bolstered Bush's case for military action, declaring the terrorist attacks an assault on the alliance itself.

Ripples continued to spread. The National Football League called off the 15 games scheduled for this weekend, and major-league baseball extended its hiatus through the weekend.

But gradually, some sectors returned to normal. The government gave the go-ahead for commercial flights to resume and some did, but schedules were expected to be in disarray, and heavy security was the rule.

Bond trading resumed Thursday, while Wall Street officials said the stock markets were expected to open again on Monday. The shutdown on the New York Stock Exchange was already longer than the two-day closure at the end of to be played, it would have to be after the Nov. 17 Tech home game against Oklahoma and the Nov. 24 meeting between Nevada and UTEP at the Sun Bowl. Schmidly said that Tech athletics director Gerald Myers and UTEP AD Robert Stull would work on rescheduling the game.

Besides the football game, a soccer match and a women's golf tournament in Albuquerque, along with a volleyball match in Lincoln, Neb., all involving Tech squads, have been called off.

"I am happy with that decision," Raider volleyball coach Jeff Nelson said. "We have some players and staff that were not excited about getting on a plane this weekend."

One of those players, senior Heather Hughes-Justice, agrees with the decision.

"I'm just glad they chose to cancel this weekend," she said. "I don't think it would be appropriate to cheer this weekend."

Schmidly said it is only proper for the nation's sports venues to be silent.

"It is appropriate to pause this weekend," he said. "Right now, it is not important to be engaged in sporting events. We need to respect what happened."

World War II; the next-longest lasted a week, after the 1929 crash.

In New York, the landscape was a haze of gray dust, splayed girders, paper and boulders of broken concrete. Firefighters armed with cameras and listening devices on long poles searched for survivors. German shepherds and golden retrievers clambered over the debris, sniffing.

A morgue set up in a Brooks Brothers clothing store received remains a limb at a time.

Three financial companies with offices in the complex had more than 1,300 workers unaccounted for. MMC, an insurance firm, said it had not been able to account for 600 of 1,700 employees; Keefe Bruyette & Woods, a securities firm, said 67 of 171 employees were missing. Cantor Fitzgerald, a bond firm, said 680 of its 1,000-person staff were missing.

Giuliani was among those who escaped Tuesday's attack uninjured, bolted from a building barely a block from the site when the first of the towers collapsed.

More than 3,000 tons of rubble was taken by boat to a former Staten Island garbage dump, where the FBI and other investigators searched for evidence, hoping to find the planes' black boxes with clues to what happened in the final terrifying minutes before the crashes.

Insurance industry experts say the attack could become the nation's most expensive manmade disaster ever, with payouts ranging from $5 billion to $25 billion.

The densely packed bottom tip of the island, an area roughly five square miles, remained off-limits to everyone but emergency workers. Volunteers emerged from the search-and-rescue mission with grisly tales as they cleared away the twisted steel and glass wreckage of the twin towers.

One body was carried out wrapped in an American flag. When workers hung another American flag from a piece of a transmission tower that apparently survived the collapse, "everybody stopped and saluted," said Parish Kelley, a firefighter from Ashburnham, Mass.

Kelley spent the day working in a crater left by the towers' collapse. As he picked through the rubble, he watched as a man's body — a cell phone still clutched in his hand — was carried out.

"We're looking at a pile of rubble 30 to 40 feet high. Where do you start?" said sheriff's Sgt. Mike Goldberg of Hampden County, Mass., accompanying a search-and-rescue dog.

The discovery of a foot and leg and a cockpit seat led to speculation that one of the pilots had been found, Goldberg said.

Airlines begin flights but changes are coming

(AP) Airlines returned to the nation's skies with limited service Thursday as airports opened their doors to sparse, anxious crowds amid the tightest security since the Persian Gulf War in 1991.

At Sky Harbor International Airport in Phoenix, Sam Hemphill was among a dozen people lined up at a TWA ticket counter.

He said he was nervous about flying but was determined to get home to Jacksonville, Fla. "Whatever happens, happens," Hemphill said. "You have to keep going. If you stop living life, they've won."

The U.S. aviation system was shut down Tuesday after hijacked planes were crashed into the World Trade Center, the Pentagon and a Pennsylvania field.

The first scattered flights Thursday came from abroad, carrying passengers who had been diverted to Canada when the terrorists struck.

The first commercial flight to leave Portland, Ore., since Tuesday got off the ground before noon — a Delta airliner headed for Kansas City, Mo.

People at the food court cheered as the jet took off. Lisa Adamson of Vancouver, Wash., who was among the passengers, said the East Coast terrorist attacks had made her jittery about flying.

"I feel nervous," she said. Passengers flights also left New York's LaGuardia airport, with at least one of them flying over Manhattan, where smoke still rose from the trade center wreckage.

Transportation Secretary Norman Mineta cleared the way for commercial flights Thursday morning, saying airports would be opened and flights resumed on a case-by-case basis — and only after stringent new security measures are in place.

Among the new measures are a ban on curbside check-ins and visitors being allowed to pass through security checkpoints to pick up passengers at gates.

Knives and other cutting tools, even plastic ones, are prohibited, and mail and cargo are temporarily banned from passenger airlines.

Another passenger, Angelica Bridges, 27, said every traveler was searched, every bag was checked by hand and no bags were put on the plane unless it was identified by a passenger.

Agents from the U.S. Marshals Service, U.S. Border Patrol and U.S. Customs were deployed at airport security check points throughout the country.

The heightened security measures are part a broad effort by federal law planned to offer special service in cities such as San Francisco and Cleveland, "where we see demand," spokeswoman Erica Roy said.

United won't resume scheduled service until 9 a.m. EDT Friday.

The San Diego airport was largely deserted, with a few business and vacation travelers waiting for a spot on one of only a handful of flights expected to leave late Thursday.

Skycaps and other airport employees, standing around in small groups talking, outnumbered passengers. And while both Tulsa International and Will Rogers World Airport in Oklahoma were open, departures were limited because many airports throughout the country still were not accepting planes.

At Montreal's Dorval Airport, flights to the United States were still listed as canceled at 11 a.m. EDT, when flights were allowed to resume.

"We're being told that there are no flights on Northwest. Right now, they can't guarantee anything for a week," said Ana Belda of Alicante, Spain, who was waiting with her husband, two children and two friends for a flight to Detroit.

At T.F. Green Airport in Warwick, R.I., travelers at the small regional airport took the delays and heightened security in stride, saying they were not nervous about flying.

"These things can happen 10 years from now or 10 years ago," said Iwona Godlewski, 34, who lives north of Boston and was flying to Sacramento, Calif. "We can't shut down our lives."

Most of the nation's air fleet was grounded Tuesday morning following the hijackings of jets from Boston, Newark, N.J., and Washington's Dulles airport. Even as the FAA imposed new restrictions on passengers, airlines and airports, members of Congress were pointing to security lapses.

Boston's Logan International Airport, where two of the hijacked flights originated, will remain closed indefinitely until new security measures are put in place, Massachusetts Port Authority executive director Virginia Buckingham said.

Newark International Airport reopened Thursday and Dulles International Airport planned service by evening.

New York's airports reopened at 11 a.m., but passengers were not allowed inside the terminals for another two hours.

Israeli David Dajan, an engineer from Tel Aviv on a business trip, said he had to take a train from Boston to New York after the attacks.

"It's not something new for me," he said. "Mentally, I know the feeling. If you start to fear, you stop you life."

At Denver International Airport, Jay Jardim and his wife, Kim, of Silverthorne, Colo., hoped to get a flight to the New York area because Jardim's older brother was missing in the trade center attack.

Jardim's brother was on the 106th floor when the jet hit his tower. Jardim said his brother sent a quick text message but hasn't been heard from since.

"We're just hoping for some sort of priority list for not just us but all of the families of the victims," Jardim said.

CRAIG SWANSON/Staff Photographer
AN AMERICAN AIRLINES customer service agent, organizes airline passengers for a bus ride to Albuquerque Tuesday. The passengers were originally booked for a flight Tuesday morning but circumstances in New York halted those plans.

Mineta urged passengers to allow time to deal with the new procedures. "There will be some inconveniences, but safety will be the first element of our system to be restored," Mineta said.

An Italian jet landed at Los Angeles International Airport, two days after it was diverted to Calgary, Canada, from Milan.

Two dozen city and airport police stood watch inside the international terminal as Alitalia Flight 622, carrying 162 people, rolled in.

"It's very sad what happened and it's good to be home," passenger Raymond Civetello of Alhambra said as tears enforcement authorities to provide a larger police presence.

"We have taken every precaution to make sure it is safe to fly in America," President Bush said Thursday. "There are beefed-up security in our airports, there's increased presence on the airplanes. Yes, if a family member asked if they should fly, I would say yes."

However, major airlines warned that service would take days to return to normal. Some, including Delta, American and TWA, planned limited service Thursday.

Continental canceled all regularly scheduled flights for the day, but

Xenophobia: The fear of foreigners

Many Middle-Eastern Americans are dealing with their country's anger

By Melissa Vuduris/Staff Reporter

This week, America has been the victim of terrorist attacks.

As a result, some Americans have taken matters into their own hands, retaliating against those people in the United States whom they associate with the terrorists.

Some Americans are allegedly treating Arab-Americans, Muslims, Middle-Easterners and others in the country with anger and hostility.

There are reports of community centers and worship centers across the nation allegedly being vandalized, and individuals are allegedly being verbally and physically assaulted.

Professors and students at Texas Tech are speaking out about the alleged assaults and how Americans should be dealing with their anger.

Mark Webb, a world religions professor at Tech, said there are some things that people should understand after the attacks on New York City and the Pentagon on Tuesday.

"There is a lot of assumption that all Muslims agree with this sort of terrorism," he said.

"The main thing I wish people would understand is that this is as crazy as blaming Christians for blowing up abortion clinics," he said. "It's horrible to single out a whole group for the actions of a few crazies."

Ressa Ewalt, a senior mass communications major from Lubbock, said it is hard to trust anyone right now.

"It's sad what's happening to these communities, but it's hard to trust anyone, especially when certain racial groups are under suspicion," she said. "It makes you give a second thought to your neighbors."

"I think it's bad what's happening, but it's hard to trust anyone when our nation is so vulnerable," Ewalt said.

Chad Frazier, a senior international business major from Levelland, said he thinks it is terrible the way people are being treated. "I don't believe they should be treated like that unless they are proven to have something to do with it," he said.

Jacob Heesch is a senior journalism major from Higgins.

"I don't think Arab-Americans should be treated badly in the United States," he said.

Arabs and Muslims attacked, harrassed in U.S.

HATE CRIMES: U.S. citizens take vengeance against innocent Arab and Muslim Americans.

(AP) — Arab Americans and Muslims have been attacked, threatened and harassed in a backlash over the terrorist bloodbath, prompting President Bush to urge people not to take vengeance. "Our nation must be mindful that there are thousands of Arab-Americans that live in New York City who love the flag just as much" as other Americans, Bush said in a nationally televised telephone call Thursday to New York City's mayor and New York's governor.

Wednesday night, police in Bridgeview, Ill., turned back 300 marchers — some waving American flags and shouting "USA! USA!" — as they tried to march on a mosque in the Chicago suburb. Three demonstrators were arrested. There were no injuries and demonstrators were kept blocks from the closed Muslim house of worship.

"I'm proud to be American and I hate Arabs and I always have," said 19-year-old Colin Zembra who marched with the group from Oak Lawn.

Federal authorities said they had identified more than a dozen hijackers of Middle Eastern descent in Tuesday's terror attacks in New York and Washington and have gathered evidence linking them to Saudi-born terror mastermind Osama bin Laden and other extremist networks.

Ziad Asali, president of the Arab-American Anti-Discrimination Committee, expressed concern about both the bias incidents and Tuesday's terror attacks.

"Arab Americans, in addition to feeling the intense depths of pain and anger at this attack we share with all our fellow citizens, are feeling deep anxiety about becoming the targets of anger from other Americans," he said. "We appeal to all Americans to bear in mind that crimes are the responsibility of the individuals who committed them, not ethnic or religious groups."

In a show of patriotism, 45 people from the Islamic community in Tampa, Fla., registered with blood services to donate Wednesday, and 30 members of the Muslim Students Association at the University of South Florida signed up.

"You feel the pain twice: once because of what has happened and once because of the looks you get," said Sami Al-Arian, an engineering teacher at the University of South Florida.

In Dearborn, Mich., Issam Koussan said he bought large U.S. flags to fly in front of his home and outside his supermarket after men pulled into his parking lot and yelled threats and racial slurs at his customers.

"I just feel I needed to show my loyalty to this country," Koussan told The Detroit News.

Early Thursday, a Molotov cocktail was thrown against the side of the Islamic Society of Denton, Texas, causing an estimated $2,500 in damage, said Kiersten Dieterle, a spokeswoman for the Dallas suburb. The building was empty and there were no injuries.

In Chicago, a firebomb was tossed Wednesday at an Arab-American community center. No injuries were reported.

In nearby Palos Heights, a man who used the blunt end of a machete to attack a Moroccan gas station attendant was charged with a hate crime, police said. The attendant did not seek treatment.

"The terrorists who committed these horrible acts would like nothing better than to see us tear at the fiber of our democracy and to trample on the rights of other Americans," Illinois Gov. George Ryan said.

In Huntington, N.Y., a 75-year-old man who was drunk tried to run over a Pakistani woman in the parking lot of a shopping mall, police said. The man then followed the woman into a store and threatened to kill her for "destroying my country," authorities said.

A man in a ski mask in Gary, Ind., fired an assault rifle at a gas station where a Yemen-born U.S. citizen born was working Wednesday, the Post Tribune of Merrillville, Ind., reported. Police were investigating it as a hate crime.

In Tulsa, Okla., police said a Pakistani native was beaten by three men late Tuesday in a hate crime. The victim was in a fair condition at a hospital Thursday.

Tamara Alfson, an American working at the Kuwait Embassy in Washington, spent Wednesday counseling frightened Kuwaiti students attending schools across the United States.

"Some of them have already been harassed. People have been quite awful to them," said Alfson, an academic adviser to about 150 students.

Teachers and students killed in Pentagon crash

SCHOOL IN SORROW: Students were on their way to California after winning contest.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Carrying an oversized book bag, Briana Doye said she just wanted to board a city bus, go home and write about her feelings after learning that her teacher and a classmate were among those killed in a terrorist attack on the Pentagon.

The teacher, Sarah Clark, and student, Asia Cottom, from Backus Middle School in Washington, were traveling to California when hijackers took over their plane and forced it to slam into the Pentagon. The pair, along with two other students and their teachers, were part of a National Geographic expedition to the Channel Islands.

Their three-day field trip was to include kayaking, hiking and studying marine animals.

Students and staff were solemn Thursday as they left the two-story brick school after a day of assemblies, discussions and private sessions with counselors.

Briana, 12, said she hoped to be able to read her reflections over the school's loudspeaker on Friday.

Clark was her sixth-grade social studies teacher last year. "She kept it real. She was a great teacher," she said.

Clark's former students cried together, wrote poems and letters and talked all about their teacher and classmate.

Christopher Verner, 13, said classes continued as usual, but that many students spoke privately with counselors. Everyone was encouraged to talk at length about their anger — and to write about it too. Throughout the area, children returned to school for the first time since the attacks.

In Arlington County, Va., near the Pentagon, a 10th grade social studies class discussed the effects of retaliation. Middle school teachers marveled at the resilience of their students. Kindergartners, first-graders and second-graders saw a puppet show with characters who were sad about what was happening on TV.

"We essentially told them bad people do bad things, but there is a difference between bad people and an entire religion or nation," said Arlington County School superintendent Robert G. Smith.

He said it was too soon to tell how many students lost parents or other relatives in the Pentagon attack, in which about 190 people were killed.

Some children drew pictures, many of tall buildings with people flying out of windows.

"That image must have had a fair amount of impact on them," Smith said.

At Madeleine V. Leckie Elementary School in Washington, principal Clementine Homsley said fifth-grade teacher Hilda Taylor's new students were devastated after learning that she was killed.

North Texas mosque target of attempted firebombing

DENTON (AP) — A North Texas mosque was damaged in an apparent fire bombing early Thursday, prompting local authorities to enact a joint terrorism task force to investigate the incident.

A Molotov cocktail was thrown against the side of the Islamic Society of Denton, causing an estimated $2,500 in minor fire damage to the side of the building, said Kiersten Dieterle, a spokeswoman for the city of Denton.

A witness reported the fire to authorities about 2:30 a.m., Dieterle said. She said the building was unoccupied and no one was injured.

Dieterle said the task force, created in the wake of the 1993 Branch Davidian siege near Waco, will pool the resources of the FBI, Bureau of Alcohol Tobacco and Firearms, Denton County Asson Force and other local law enforcement to help investigate the incident.

A telephone call to the Islamic Society was not answered Thursday.

It was at least the third mosque attack in two days in Texas following terrorist attacks along the East Coast that destroyed the twin towers of the World Trade Center in New York and damaged the Pentagon in Washington, D.C.

Law enforcement officials who spoke on condition of anonymity said the terrorists had possible ties to countries including Saudi Arabia and Egypt, and Saudi fugitive Osama bin Laden is a top suspect.

Two other Dallas-area mosques were vandalized Wednesday, with no injuries reported.

At least six bullets shattered windows of the Islamic Center of Irving early Wednesday, causing about $3,000 in damage.

And a window at the Islamic Center of Carrollton was smashed by a slingshot-type device, police said.

The FBI's special agent-in-charge in Dallas harshly criticized the vandalism.

"Quite frankly, I should not have to be wasting my time in doing vandalism-type cases with the national initiative with so many deaths and tragedies we've had over the last day," Danny Defenbaugh said Wednesday.

College football off air

SPORTS ON HOLD: Major conferences decide to postpone or cancel sporting events.

(AP) — There will be no major college football on Saturday after the Big 12 and Southeastern conferences reversed field Thursday and postponed its football games this weekend because of the terrorist attacks in New York and Washington.

The Big Ten said it did not officially postpone games, but its 11 schools either suspended home games or had road games postponed for them.

A day after announcing its games would go on, the leagues joined the Atlantic Coast, Big East and Pac-10 conferences in not playing. The NFL also postponed its games.

The schools from the six major conferences plus Notre Dame form the Bowl Championship Series, which picks its top two teams at the end of the season to play in its national championship game.

In addition, the other five NCAA Division I-A conferences — Conference USA, Mid-American, Mountain West, Sun Belt and Western Athletic, also postponed its games. Notre Dame, an independent, had its game at Purdue, a Big Ten school, postponed.

A total of 58 games involving I-A teams will not be played this weekend — 54 were postponed and four were canceled. The games that won't be made up are Navy at Northwestern, Bowling Green at South Carolina, Marshall at TCU and Appalachian State at Troy State.

As of 6 p.m. EDT Thursday, there were still 41 Division I-AA games scheduled this weekend.

Karl Benson, commissioner of the WAC, said the NFL's decision to postpone its games weighed heavily with the colleges.

"It had a very significant impact," Benson said. "We haven't been able to the go five minutes without seeing or hearing reports from the World Trade Center. No one has ever had to face this crisis before, not the commissioner of the NFL, the PGA or myself. The longer you can wait to make a decision the better decision you can make."

Among the most prominent games postponed were three matchups in Florida: No. 13 Washington at No. 1 Miami, No. 8 Tennessee at No. 2 Florida and No. 10 Georgia Tech at No. 6 Florida State.

Saturday's schedule had featured 18 games involving 22 of the AP's Top 25 teams. The SEC, which had said on Wednesday that its games would be played, reversed course Thursday.

"The Southeastern Conference joins all of the other major sporting entities in the nation in postponing all athletic events," the SEC said.

"The conference continues to believe this country must begin the healing process following the horrendous events of the past week and will evaluate all future schedules at an appropriate time."

Earlier Thursday, three games involving Top 25 teams were postponed — Utah State at No. 11 Fresno State, Bowling Green at No. 18 South Carolina and No. 25 Louisville at Illinois.

It was the first inkling that schools disagreed with earlier conference decisions to play. In addition to the NFL's decision, college player reaction and travel concerns played a role in the postponements.

"There was real anxiety as the week went on the part of our football team about traveling by air," Bowling Green athletic director Paul Krebs said.

Even after saying Wednesday its teams would play "except in cases where Big Ten teams and their opponents have mutually agreed to modify or cancel playing dates and times," seven Big Ten teams had its games postponed — Illinois, Indiana, Northwestern, Ohio State, Penn State, Purdue and Wisconsin. The other four teams — Iowa, Michigan, Michigan State and Minnesota — were set to play Big 12 opponents, so when the Big 12 postponed its games, it wiped out the entire Big Ten schedule.

Some games have been rescheduled and conferences will be working to try to reschedule other games. The SEC left open an option of moving it Dec. 1 league title game to Dec. 8 to give teams a chance to fit in postponed games.

No sports leaves gaps on TV

NEW YORK (AP) — Games, highlights, analysis — all gone. Hundreds of hours of live sports programming were erased from national and local TV schedules Thursday when weekend events were called off because of the terrorist attacks.

From the NFL and college football to major league baseball, pro golf and NASCAR, the postponements and cancellations created huge gaps for Saturday and Sunday, the biggest days for televised sports. Tens of millions of Americans will have to find other diversions.

Some networks will give the time to their news departments or affiliates for reports on rescue and cleanup operations from Tuesday's destruction. ABC, CBS, NBC and the cable news networks stayed on the story nonstop into Thursday without commercials.

"A specific determination of what will be aired has not been made yet," NBC Sports vice president Kevin Sullivan said. "It will not be sports."

ABC spokesman Mark Mandel said: "We will be dark from the sports side of things."

ESPN, an all-sports network, lost the largest amount of live programming, with more than 50 hours of everything from boxing and baseball to college and pro football. The network still was hoping to carry CART's race in Klettwitz, Germany — the circuit's first European event — on Saturday at 7:30 a.m. Instead of wisecracking anchors and the ally broadcast sports programs; ABC more than 15, CBS more than 10, and NBC 9 1/2.

Besides all the national programming, individual stations and regional cable networks would have aired local teams' games.

"There is a financial implication," Fox Sports vice president Lou D'Ermilio said, "but it pales in comparison to what's happening in New York and Washington."

Fox will have a large say in how baseball's calendar plays out. With 91 games postponed from Tuesday through Sunday, major league baseball commissioner Bud Selig said the regular season will be extended by a week, pushing back the postseason.

Fox and baseball agreed to a new six-season, $2.5 billion contract last year, giving the network exclusive TV rights to the sport's playoffs and World Series.

Other sports will have to get around to rearranging their calendars to complete seasons, and the networks will be in on those decisions.

"Looking ahead, we already have other things we're committed to and we have to see what we can do in moving things around," ESPN's Soltyis said.

"The exact time that postponed games are eventually played is something the leagues have to work very closely with TV to figure out."

"The exact time that postponed games are eventually played is something the leagues have to work very closely with TV to figure out."

Wall Street putting off all trading until Monday

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's stock markets plan to resume trading on Monday, ending a four-day shutdown following the destruction of the World Trade Center, officials said Thursday.

Stock market officials, who made their decision after meeting with representatives of the city, investment firms and local utilities, said they would test market systems Saturday.

If the test goes well, trading will resume at 9:30 a.m. EDT Monday.

The shutdown of the New York Stock Exchange, the nation's oldest, will have been the longest since a weeklong closing after the 1929 crash.

About $100 billion worth of trades are conducted every day in the United States, according to the Securities Industry Association.

Hundreds of offices were destroyed in Tuesday's terrorist attacks and the death toll is feared to climb into the thousands.

Hundreds of other firms were forced to flee buildings that were damaged or closed, and many companies are setting up operations at replacement offices far from Wall Street's narrow alleys.

NYSE Chairman Richard Grasso said no one in the financial industry suggested that resumption of trading was more important than the massive effort to recover "those who are still with us that are trapped in the wreckage" of the trade center.

Earlier Thursday, treasury bond and commodities futures contracts resumed trading in abbreviated sessions.

Bonds are not tied to a physical site, while most futures trading occurs in Chicago.

Trading was subdued and relatively light as futures activity resumed on the Chicago Board of Trade and Chicago Mercantile Exchange, where one broker called it "hollow trading" in the absence of activity on Wall Street.

A jump in bond prices indicated that investors, nervous about the economy even before Tuesday's terrorist attacks in New York and Washington, were seeking safe haven investments.

But the lack of volatility reflected increasing hopes that the Federal Reserve will lower rates for the eighth time this year.

"It's very different today," said William Dalenberg, who trades Eurodollars at the Merc. "Everyone's still grieving. Everyone's very cautious, I think, about getting into the market."

Many traders tucked small American flags in their jacket pockets.

In overseas stock trading, Asian markets staged a modest recovery Thursday, while European markets opened almost unchanged.

Market activity on both continents Europe was subdued as investors awaited the reopening of U.S. stock exchanges.

Damage to the American Stock Exchange, located in a building not far from the World Trade Center, was so severe that parts of its operations might be temporarily relocated to the NYSE, which remains intact, or to other regional markets, Grasso said.

The local telephone provider, Verizon, said one of its five switching centers near the disaster site was out of service.

Some 200,000 lines and 3 million data circuits, or private lines that normally serve business customers, were housed in the building.

Offices of hundreds of companies were destroyed and hundreds of other firms were forced to flee. Even as they sought word on missing employees, companies worked nonstop to set up operations at replacement offices in New Jersey and elsewhere.

Many firms, while speaking of their new arrangements, would not specify exact locations for security reasons.

Merrill Lynch cannot access its football field-sized trading floors in the World Financial Center, which also suffered significant damage.

"We have contingency plans for activities to be carried out at other locations. In fact, I'm speaking to you from an emergency location right now," said Merrill Lynch spokesman Rich Silverman.

Still, the industry's task was made somewhat easier because many financial firms have their operations in other parts of New York or in other cities.

Morgan Stanley, the biggest tenant in the World Trade Center towers, keeps its trading desk elsewhere in New York.

The towers were home to stock brokers who dealt with investor accounts.

Amtrak train crashes into freight train

WENDOVER, Utah (AP) — An Amtrak train carrying stranded airline passengers and others to California on Thursday crashed into a freight train, derailed and caught fire in the western Utah desert.

There were no serious injuries. "It knocked me out of my chair and almost instantly the car filled with dust," said Scott Stopper, 41, who was stranded in Denver after taking a flight Tuesday.

"Instead of taking a flight home, I thought it would be safer to take a train," said Stopper, who lives in Campbell, Calif. "Now we have to take a bus."

The derailed train was the California Zephyr heading from Chicago to Emeryville, Calif., in the San Francisco Bay area, said Amtrak spokeswoman Cheryl Jackson.

Amtrak said 263 passengers and 14 crew members were on board.

Two locomotives were pulling 15 cars, including seven passenger cars.

Authorities said it appeared the collision happened as the eastbound Union Pacific freight train was pulling onto a siding to let the Amtrak train pass.

Tooele County Sheriff Frank Scharmann said the Amtrak train was going about 30 mph.

Utah Public Safety Commissioner Robert Flowers said the Amtrak train should have slowed down even more to allow the freight to get out of the way.

Peggy Polk was awakened by a loud bang and the swaying of the train.

"My daughter was hollering, there was smoke coming into the cars and we were going to jump out of the windows," Polk, 51, of Richmond, Calif., said from LDS Hospital in Salt Lake City.

Polk, who suffers from asthma, had difficulty breathing.

She was one of six people taken to hospitals for treatment of broken bones and smoke inhalation.

Amtrak officials said at least one locomotive and a baggage car had burned but all of the cars remained upright.

Uninjured passengers were to complete their journeys by bus.

John and Emilie Kovich, of Rockville, Ind., were in a sleeper car when the trains collided and they were left with only their pajamas.

"We have nothing," said John Kovich, wearing only his purple-and-white striped pajamas.

Red Cross volunteers were going to buy the couple clothes so they could continue their cross-country trip.

The accident happened east of Wendover at about 5:30 a.m. in a desolate area of salt flats and desert.

Wendover is in west-central Utah on the Nevada line, about 120 miles west of Salt Lake City.

Amtrak's number for family members seeking information: 800-523-9101.

Coaches suggest flag decals on helmets

WACO, Texas (AP) — The American Football Coaches Association is asking colleges across the country to place a U.S. flag decal on the back of helmets in honor of the victims of this week's terrorist attacks.

"This will serve as a reminder to all of our players, coaches, supporters and those watching on television that, though we are playing a game, we want to recognize the terrible loss that our country has suffered," AFCA executive director Grant Teaff said in a statement.

"We want to emphasize the patriotism that we feel for the greatest country in the world," he said.

A letter was faxed Thursday to head coaches at all NCAA and NAIA schools requesting the stickers be placed on the helmets as soon as possible and that they be worn through the end of this season.
