New plan increases bus services on, off campus

By Keli Johnson
STAFF WRITER

Recent negotiations between Student Government Association External Vice President Leigh Mauer and Citibus officials have allowed an extension of bus services to students on and off campus for the fall.

The SGA has collaborated with Citibus to allow students to purchase one $50 pass for the academic year that enables students to not only utilize Raider Express routes, but also all other Citibus routes in Lubbock.

Because the university is expected to break enrollment records, there is an immediate need to increase bus service both on and off campus.

Mauer said she thinks this is a better plan for the students because $50 will pay for the bus service for the entire year throughout the city of Lubbock as well as to and from campus.

"The service will not be toned down at all as originally planned," she said. "Instead we are increasing all services."

Nearly 12 hours of increased bus service on the red and green routes are part of the plan, especially between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. The additional hours will be from 5 p.m. to 10 p.m.

The Business Administration shuttle also will extend service to students until 8 p.m. A nightly service will be available to students between the hours of 10 p.m. and 3

Students to be placed in temporary housing

By April Tamplen
STAFF WRITER

Housing and Dining Services at Texas Tech have prepared for 200 students to live in temporary housing for the fall semester.

Sean Duggan, director of housing and residence life, said temporary housing is space that is not normally a residence room turned into a room, such as a lounge.

"If you lived in the Horn/Knapp complex, the lounges downstairs would be turned into rooms with bunk beds and locks on the door," he said. "To go to the restroom, students would have to go around the hall to the nearest facility."

Duggan said the students who will live in the temporary rooms have been notified through the mail.

The lack of room space is because of an increase of 300 to 400 students for this fall. Michael Shonrock, vice president for student affairs, said the growth in Tech

Benefit to raise funds for family

By Kristen Gilbreth

Two years ago at a convention in Las Vegas Steve Taylor, director of technology operations and systems management at Texas Tech, received a phone call carrying a nightmare.

His son Cas Taylor, 17, was seriously injured in a car accident while traveling home from Meadow High School.

When Steve Taylor made it back to Texas, he learned the odds of his youngest child ever walking again were slim. The accident had fractured Cas Taylor's neck and pinched his spinal cord.

He said it broke his heart because his son was a typical all-American boy finishing his freshman year. He played football, basketball and was training for the 400-meter run in track.

Although that spring day could have shattered all hopes, they have just changed.

Bush visits Tech exhibit

First lady Laura Bush said she was excited to be back in Texas and have a once-in-a-lifetime chance to view the Vatican exhibit at the Texas Tech Museum on Saturday.

"Lubbock is nice, and the people here are great," she told the Associated Press. "It is great to come back home, it puts me back in perspective. Texans have a very good way of keeping things in perspective."

The first lady flew into Lubbock on Saturday to see the exhibit and visit her friends David and Nancy Weiss.

Bush said since she was on her way to her ranch in Crawford, she thought it would be the perfect time to go to the exhibit.

"Nancy Weiss, a good friend of mine, really started talking about the Vatican exhibit to me a long time before it got started. I know it has been in the works for a long time," she said. "She wanted me to come to the opening, but I had something else scheduled. I want to encourage people to go to (the exhibit)."

Shoppers crowd retail stores for tax-free holiday weekend

■ Officials hope to extend holiday to five to six days and add more taxable items.

By Keli Johnson
Staff Writer

Texans along with some shoppers from out of state flocked to malls and retail stores to take advantage of the tax-free holiday Friday through Sunday. The South Plains Mall was overrun by customers purchasing both tax-free and taxable items.

Nearly all types of clothing, belts and shoes were not taxed under the condition the price of each item did not exceed $100.

Erin Herrick, a sophomore music education major from San Antonio, said she worked at Old Navy throughout the holiday weekend.

"The only slow times were just before we closed, and even then we were packed with people 30 minutes after closing," she said. "I was overwhelmed, tired and concerned about getting to work on time and avoiding an accident in the bad traffic near the mall and Old Navy."

Old Navy had many sales, and managers said they thought employee performance improved from the past year. Last year Old Navy did well during the weekend, and it is possible this year was the same if not better, Herrick said.

Gap assistant manager Phillip Starr said business was about expected, but slightly worse than last year.

"I don't have exact numbers, but I think last year was better judging by how busy we were," he said. "I think a lot of it had to do with the sidewalk sale the mall had the previous weekend, and customers had to choose which to attend."

Starr said about 85 percent of Gap employees are Tech students, who rotated in eight- to five-hour shifts. He said he hopes sales next year will be better.

Some people said they would rather pay more in order to avoid the chaos and confusion of frantic shoppers than go to the mall during the tax holiday. Carrie Janek, a senior technical communication major from Fort Worth, said she avoided the mall on the tax holiday.

"I never go shopping on tax-free weekend because it's too crazy," she said. "It's not worth fighting the crowd. I buy a lot of my stuff online anyway because Lubbock does not have many of the stores I like to shop at."

Texas State Comptroller of Public Accounts Carole Keeton Rylander said she hopes to extend the holiday in the future.

"In the next legislative session, I am going to propose that we extend the holiday to five to six days, and to include backpacks and school supplies," she said. "There is no need to have a three-day traffic jam when we can extend it to five or six days and alleviate that problem."

Tech's stock drops slightly as market struggles to stay

By KRISTEN GILBRETH
STAFF WRITER

Texas Tech University experienced slight losses in investments as the stock market roller coasted up and down the past few months.

However, Jim Brunjes, vice president for fiscal affairs, said Tech had the second smallest loss in the Big 12 Conference.

"Within the last year, there has been increased commitment to small stocks and decreased the commitment to large stocks," Brunjes said. "Last year the average loss in

.... was 4 percent, but at TTU our loss was 1.4 percent, due in part because of the diversity of our portfolio."

Dick Anderson, senior consultant at Hammond Consultants advises Tech on endowment and investment matters.

"(Tech) has probably about $280 million invested in some form of securities and it is a diverse portfolio," he said. "It would be fair to say that the diversity of the portfolio has given us protection. It is important to diversify a portfolio in order to maximize returns and reduce losses."

The university hires managers and then they broadly diversify on an array of stocks."

"What we do when we look at a university is establish a policy and we judge performance by the policy benchmark," Anderson said. "I am guessing other universities lost about 6 percent, but we won't know for about seven months for sure."

Tech has a numerous amount of stock, which allows no one stock to drastically affect the portfolio, he said.

Recently, Hammond Consultants said they have pulled back from technology stock for universities they work with.

Brunjes said Tech does not make radical changes.

"The university just rides the stock market up and down," he said. "We look at the investments in the stock market as a long term invest for the market," he said. "We don't look at it daily or monthly; we look at the long term, and by long term I mean more than four or five years."

Tech has some funds invested in what is called large capital value. Tech also has funds invested that protect the university against radical changes in the market, Brunjes said. Some types of investments are fixed income securities, like bonds, Anderson said.

"What we view as most important is to modestly change the asset allocation to increase return and decrease losses," he said. "I don't have a detailed comparison with other universities after 2001, but for example, one year ending on June 30, 2001, Texas Tech had a positive 2 percent return and similar institutions lost 3.4 percent."

At the end of the fiscal year Tech lost 4 percent, while the S&P broad market lost 18 percent, he said.

The S&P 500 lost 18 percent while small value stocks gained 8.5 percent.

Small stocks are generally described as small companies that a stockholder would not have heard of trading at very modest evaluations, for example, retail stores like Gap, Anderson said.

Investment companies like Hammond Consultants do not trade, purchase or sell on a stock by stock basis, Brunjes said.

Because of broad diversification that includes a commitment to international stocks and rates and real estate investment trust, there are more small U.S. stocks as opposed to large U.S. stocks and bonds, he said.

"We are in the worst bear market since 1973 and 1974, and it has really been an absolutely horrible market, and there is no other way around it," Brunjes said.

“It would be fair to say that the diversity of the portfolio has given us protection.”

project WALK spinal cord injury recovery for Caswell Taylor

Cas Taylor the 17-year-old son of Steve Taylor, Director of Technology Operations and Systems Management (TOSM) here at Texas Tech, needs your help!

On March 30, 2000, Cas was on his way home from school and was involved in an auto accident. Cas had a fractured neck. The spinal cord was not severed, but pinched badly. Doctors said Cas has a 4% chance of recovering the feeling or muscle control below the point of injury. Cas believes that he will WALK again.

The Project Walk (www.projectwalk.org) organization located in San Diego, could be Cas' road to recovery. Project Walk is an intensive exercise program for people with incomplete spinal cord injuries and a goal of full recovery.

The Taylors face some extremely difficult decisions. The insurance company will not cover Project Walk which is $1500 per month plus living expenses. Cas has made rapid progress since he began therapy at Project Walk. The Taylor family needs your support.

Their goal is to raise $30,000 to help defray expenses for his Project Walk. Please support Cas and his family on:

Wednesday, August 7th

4:30 p.m. - 5:30 p.m.

Skyviews Restaurant 19th & University
Food and beverages with live music provided by members of the Maines Brothers Band.

Donations for the Caswell Taylor Project Walk Fund will be accepted at the door or at ABC Bank, 3721 50th, Lubbock Texas 79412

Coal miners prove to us what America is all about

Last week, nine coal miners were rescued from certain death in western Pennsylvania. Their press conference was a thing of beauty — a lesson about how America really works. Intellectuals may prattle and businessmen scheme, but the real work of America is done by men in uniforms, toiling in places where the rest of us fear to tread.

The news media inspires a kind of myopia. Networks focus on the bad, the cruel and the criminal because these are the actions that disrupt lives. I don't fault them for that, but we have to keep perspective.

There is good news mixed in with the bad, and I think, in many ways, the good news has more to teach us.

Those miners were rescued because a community came together on their behalf. Quick-thinking engineers pumped warm air into the shaft to prevent hypothermia, and rescuers pulled in resources from around the country, racing to beat the clock. This combination of passion and intellect gave us a miracle, as it did in the aftermath of Sept. 11.

In the same week, the Amber Alert system saved the lives of two teenage girls, directing local sheriffs to a secluded location, minutes before they were to be killed.

There are lessons to be learned in all these tragedies — a common thread that should be grabbed and brought into the light.

We are a capable, compassionate country. We struggle against the forces of ignorance and evil, but we are not helpless. We have the weapons and the will to rise above these things that would demean us, and the media has a vital role to play, calling our attention to

michaelduff@michaelduff.net

things that need to be fixed.

As citizens, we fight a constant battle against pessimism. It is easy to give in when our airwaves are saturated with stories about corruption and perversion and death. But I believe this pessimism is based on an illusion.

The media is a magnifying glass, focusing our attention on bad things. But the evils that dominate our consciousness are smaller than they appear. And the strengths of our nation are hidden from us, obscured by a fog of modesty and routine.

There is an iron core of decency in this country — a heart that is not troubled by terrorism, corruption or crime. The heart of America is not Wall Street, Hollywood Boulevard or Madison Avenue. America is not defined by its music, its movies or its stock market.

America is a way of life — millions of ordinary people going to work, loving their children and helping their neighbors — the same quiet benevolence that built this country, alive and well in 2002.

Decency, compassion and hard work are not relics from some bygone age. In honoring the past, there is a temptation to apologize for who we are, a temptation to define ourselves in terms of our weaknesses. The media gives us an illusion of certainty, a sense that what we see on television is all we are.

Don't fall for it. There is more to America than what you see on TV.

Sharp Center a bad idea, waste of money

I believe the Sharp Center, a new facility that will break ground this November, is an unnecessary project. The Sharp Center is a facility that will help student athletes with their academics. What bothers me is not the fact athletes should study, but there are already sufficient facilities to help students with their studies. Is something stopping them from using the PASS Center or the university Writing Center? It is true the $4.1 million project is being funded by donations, but is there a reason we should accommodate athletes yet again?

As a serious student at this school, I see no reason these student athletes should not have academic success already. For instance, the women's tennis team had one-half of its members receive academic recognition this past year. Is there something stopping the football team from achieving the same academic success? Or is it just not a priority? When should we stop bending the rules for athletes just because they have athletic ability? Last time I paid a huge tuition bill I paid it to a university, not a sports club. We already give enough full scholarships to people who add nothing to the reputation of this school. Why does the school continue to alienate potential donors? Oh, I guess the school forgot that academic prowess is more likely to help students earn a living than a low major and four years of college athletics. This project is just another example of the entire university accommodating itself to a small minority of athletes.

Tech does not care about its students

I read the letter to the editor entitled "Doak change shows disrespect for students." I long ago found out that Texas Tech's main concern is not its students.

Not only do we have to wait in lines that extend for what seems like eternity, but also when we have a question it seems like we are sent from building to building and no one seems to have a simple answer.

When my mother came to visit I had a question about my degree plan, and when I went to see my adviser, he sent me to someone else, and so on and so on. My mother's exact words were, "If a business were run this way it would go under in two weeks."

Not only are we treated unfairly at the school, but also it seems the community isn't too happy about having us here as well.

When I was looking for a place to live off campus, people literally asked if we were college students and refused to rent to us.

■ BENEFIT

The Taylor family has hope that one day Cas Taylor will be able to walk on the Tech campus and fulfill his dream of becoming a Red Raider.

Doctors gave him a 4 percent chance of recovery, but Cas Taylor never lost hope.

"Overall Cas has handled this with such a grace and strength," his mother Roni Taylor said. "He never doubted. When he was in (intensive care) he knew he would walk again because of his faith in God."

This May there was another sign of hope. The family came across a Web site for a new program in San Diego, Calif., called Project Walk.

Roni Taylor said it seemed like an answer to prayer. The family took Cas Taylor to the West Coast for an evaluation in June.

Steve Taylor said within the first hour he knew Project Walk was what his son needed to quickly recover, but the cost involved remains the highest hurdle to overcome.

Insurance will not come the therapy, so the family will have to pay more than $1,500 a month, plus living expenses and special accommodations.

The Taylors' said incurring large debts would be the only option available.

Fortunately, Gary Hughes, ING financial advisor, who works with Tech faculty on their retirement accounts, has organized a fund raiser at Skyviews Restaurant, located at 19th street and University Avenue, to help the family.

The come-and-go event is open to the public and will take place from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. Wednesday. Refreshments and entertainment will be provided.

With four Tech faculty involved in orchestrating the affair, Hughes said this is about Tech helping one of its own.

"We are asking the Tech family to come out and make a contribution," he said. "We are hoping to raise $30,000 to help the family."

Steve Taylor, who is putting his other two sons through college, said any help from the Tech community is a blessing.

"Of course we had no idea the fund raiser was going on. Gary Hughes runs my retirement account," he said. "I just told him that our son had decided to go back to back to Project Walk. The next thing I knew he had this whole thing planned that involved the Tech community."

Brandt Taylor, a junior management and information systems major from Meadow, said he will be taking the fall semester off to be with his brother in California.

"He is taking this a lot better than I would," he said. "This has got to be very expensive though, and my parents don't tell us how they are doing in those areas."

Brandt Taylor said he would be grateful for any help the Tech community offered his parents.

Roni Taylor said God has opened doors for them by putting caring people in their path.

"When we found out they were working with this fund raiser it was an answer to a prayer, because we were praying for God to open doors if Cas was supposed to be at Project Walk," she said. "Anything we get will be a great help, and that is a hard thing to do because we are not used to asking for help," she said. "It was great that they were setting this up because it has taken a lot of pressure off of us."

She said her son has been an inspiration to many across the country. She said she receives countless e-mails from people across the country saying his tenacity and strong faith help keep them keep going when hope seems lost.

Cas Taylor said his wish is to be walk across the stage and receive his diploma with his high school graduating class next spring.

"I definitely know I will walk now," he said. "I think I definitely will be walking before graduation, possibly by Christmas, but there is no guarantees."

He said prayer and faith will sustain him until one day he can walk in his father and brother's footsteps and be a part of the Tech family.

"My father has worked at Tech 25 years, so I was pretty much was raised a Red Raider, so I definitely want to go there," he said.

■ VISIT

The Rev. Malcolm Neyland, former judicial vicar of the Catholic Diocese in Lubbock, and Father Richard Bourgeois, head of the North American Patrons of the Arts for the Vatican, gave Bush and 20 friends a personal tour of the exhibit. Tech President David Schmidly was included on the tour with the first lady.

Schmidly said the first lady's visit to Tech was important because it shows respect for Tech.

"I thought her coming to Tech was excellent. She was a warm and friendly person," he said. "I walked behind her when she took her tour and she seemed to have a fondness for the art."

Gary Edson, director of the Tech Museum, said he welcomed the first lady to the museum when she first arrived.

"I had met her when she was the governor's wife and she was personable, charming and down to earth," he said. "When I talked to her Saturday she was just as outgoing as the president's wife as she was when she was the governor's wife."

Edson said he was not sure if Bush's appearance Saturday at the Museum affected the number of visitors who showed up this weekend.

"Saturday was a fairly normal day when it comes to the number of visitors who came in," he said. "Sunday was a very busy day. I'm not sure if we can attribute that to Mrs. Bush or not."

Bush said she has strong ties to Lubbock and Tech. Her father, Herald Welch grew up in Lubbock and attended Tech for two years before he went off to work.

"Lubbock is really like home since my dad grew up here. I have spent a lot of time here," she said. "I lived in Midland and my mother is still in Midland."

After seeing the exhibit, Bush and her guests attended a private reception at the International Cultural Center.

Bush said she appreciates looking at art. She said when she was first lady of Texas, she had contemporary art in her office.

"I think it is important to people all in West Texas and certainly New Mexico. It is a nice thing for people to be able to have the opportunity to see," she said. "My husband would love to be here, but he is committed to Washington right now."

a.m. throughout the duration of the academic year.

Off-campus routes have been re-evaluated to prevent a minimized service. More than 33 hours per day have been added to the off-campus routes by adding two busses for both the north Indiana Avenue and west Fourth Street routes.

Michael Shonrock, vice president of student affairs, said he is excited about the new arrangement.

"We are reallocating about $400,000 from our entire transportation budget and putting it toward increased service on campus," he said. "The remainder of the budget will go toward off-campus, which the passes will mainly pay for."

The budget increase is approximately $400,000, which was acquired through fund balances and some reserves from the division of student affairs and the vice president of operations. For the off-campus routes, the sales of bus passes will account for the remainder of the costs.

Shonrock said he thinks students will be more apt to purchase the passes if they allow students to travel throughout the city.

"For the first week of school, we are allowing students to ride the off-campus busses for free, so they can see if it is worth it to buy a pass," he said. "I think many students will see the advantage in it and we will sell more because of this."

The passes may be purchased at apartment complexes located along north Indiana Avenue and west Fourth Street as well as the Student Government office in the Student Union Building.

■ HOUSING

students in the fall is amazing.

"More students are coming to Tech and that is wonderful," he said. "Now we need to focus on how we can make accommodations for all these students."

Duggan said students who are assigned to a temporary space will move to a room when the space becomes available.

"Every year people do not show up in the residence halls. They either cancel to go to another school or have found other housing," he said. "We will open up spaces when the spaces are available. Housing and Dining Services will look at where and how to move the students into the normal rooms."

The master plan for housing and dining indicates that 1,300 bed spaces should be added during the next 10 years.

Duggan said Tech plans to invest $100 million into the residence hall system.

"The money will be borrowed to build the dorm space and then paid back with room and board rates," he said.

Tech President David Schmidly said new apartments are being built in the North Overton area for Tech students. The apartments are scheduled for completion in May 2003.

"We accept students when they are academically qualified. We tell them if we have dorms available to them," he said. "If we do not have dorms available, we refer them to where they can get an apartment."

Shyamalan continues excellence in 'Signs'

[ FILM REVIEW ]

James Eppler
jeppler@hotmail.com

Writer and director M. Night Shyamalan ("The Sixth Sense," "Unbreakable") has been rightly compared to the great Alfred Hitchcock. His stories are more about characterization and emotion rather than scares. Which is not to say there aren't plenty of jolting scares to be had in his latest film called "Signs." It deals with the appearance of crop circles and the possibility of them being signs of alien life. This isn't "Field of Dreams." But more than that, it's a film about bruised faith in God and things unseen.

Mel Gibson stars as Father

Graham Hess, a Pennsylvania farmer and former Episcopalian Reverend until the untimely death of his wife caused him to abandon his faith in God. He lives with two children Morgan (Rory Clukin) and Bo (Abigail Breslin) and his brother Merrill (Joaquin Phoenix). Each character has an issue about them, a sign if you will. Morgan's severe asthma, Bo's habit of not finishing a glass of water feeling that it may be "dirty," and Merrill's wounded ego as he blew his chance at the big-leagues as a baseball player.

We first see crop signs as Graham steps into the middle of his corn field to see several entire areas leveled. The stalks are not broken, only bent perfectly. Crop signs appeared in the 1970's but were confessed as a hoax in the early 90's. Graham and Merrill try to hold to the fact that these are just the work of some pathetic geek-boys who "can't get girlfriends."

In watching a Shyamalan film, viewers constantly wonder if they're being played with. We pay close attention and take note of every minute detail. We listen intently as there is not a sound to be heard. Take for instance a scene where there is mass hysteria in a dark room; a flashlight drops to the ground and we are forced to only hear the sounds around us as the camera stays focused on the flashlight on the ground. It would be a relief if we could only see around the corner of a wall or under a door to see what's on the other side. The power of suggestion and possibility is so much more terrifying.

It also is utterly crucial Shyamalan constructs his characters using key scenes of dialogue and interaction. How characters change and deal with their emotional scars is absolutely essential in the unraveling of this deliciously fascinating mystery. It's so involving that every scene holds you in its grasp.

Gibson gives a wonderful performance as he tries to remain strong and fight back tears of hatred and sorrow. The two children, Culkin and Breslin, also impress, as does Phoenix whose skeptical nature is soon broken in half. Also worthy of mention is Shyamalan himself in a strong cameo as a neighboring farmer who has not seemed right in the head after a tragedy in his life. A great musical score by James Newton Howard adds to the Hitchcock feel.

A film like this just goes to prove that you don't need a huge budget and gallons of fake blood to make a scary movie. Shyamalan demonstrates he is still one of the best storytellers working today.

Endochine improves as rock band, performers the second time around

[ BAND REVIEW ]

Rocky Ramirez
ramirez_rocky@hotmail.com

The unique thing about live performances as art is the aesthetic experience is variable. You can't really say the same thing about most other arts. If you think a painting sucks the first time you see it, chances are, it's going to suck again the next time you see it. Likewise, no matter how many times you see Godfather II, it will still be better than part three.

The live music performance on the other hand has the ability to be a great show one night and a snooze-fest the next. Well, the first time I saw Endochine in performance it was something less than memorable.

They were the headlining band in the Rock-U tour and they absolutely knew it. On stage they came off as if they were the coolest band in the world — or at least they thought they were. The guitarists were in full gunslinger stance; heads rolled back as they ever so hiply gazed up into the rafters. Basically they looked like a rock band is supposed to look like, which translates into a band trying very hard to look cool.

If I go to a Creed concert — God forbid — then I am going to expect that kind of showmanship. But if I am at a local show (technically they're from Austin) I want a band to be real.

Saturday night Endochine was back in Lubbock and despite my dislike of their last show, I was there to check it out.

There was a big difference between this show and their last — whereas they were playing in front of possibly a couple hundred at Einstein's, this time around at the more intimate Klusoz, the crowd was considerably less. This contributed to the band's ditching of the flashy showmanship, which I greatly appreciated. Endochine played a definitively better show as a result.

Oh, and the music is pretty good too. Endochine has a fairly enjoyable pop-rock sound that is as clean as it is fun. I have said it before — context makes a huge difference in music. This is a case of context helping the music. The unnatural glitziness of their first show made their pop sound like an act of appeasement. The second time around however, with the showiness out the window, I was able to focus on the enjoyableness of Endochine's sound.

Showmanship is not always a bad thing in music. Kiss would not be Kiss without their incredible shows. But if a band wants to be showy, they should do it because they are in to their music. Being showy for the sake of being showy comes off fake. Luckily for Endochine, there are always second chances.

Florida artist vows to paint all Sept. 11 victims

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The features of New York City firefighter Joseph Agnello are beginning to emerge, sketched roughly in charcoal by an artist who has never met Agnello but is determined to bring him back to life on canvas.

Michael DeMinico — working from a photograph published in The New York Times — will soon dab oil paint on the 9-inch-by-12-inch canvas to flesh out the mustached visage of the 35-year-old Agnello, one of the more than 3,000 people killed in the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

Then DeMinico will move on to the next photo and then the next, until he has captured on canvas all

Sept. 11 victims as they were in life. He works alone, usually, in the garage studio at his home, but the project has evolved into something much bigger than one man's response to a national tragedy.

DeMinico, a 50-year-old trial lawyer, is an accomplished painter who sells other works for thousands of dollars. To him, creating the portraits seemed a logical step in his own struggle to comprehend what had happened.

"At least in personal terms it would give me some kind of sense ... of the real scale of this," he says. "There would be plenty of slabs going up to commemorate the event. I thought the measure of this thing was in the individual, and not just some name carved on a stone somewhere."

What began as a private, self-help exercise has turned into a public art project over the past few months as word has spread. People have responded with letters, phone calls and donations, and a nonprofit foundation has been set up to support the effort.

DeMinico, who is married with two children, has scaled back his law practice to pursue the project. He is now spending 25 to 30 hours a week on it, preparing to put oil to the initial group of 15 portraits. He figures it will take several years to finish them all.

The idea arose from his reflections on the six-month anniversary of the attacks in March. In April he took out a notice in the Times announcing his intentions and seeking comment from victims' families and others. He printed his phone number and the address of his Web site.

People who saw the ad called and wrote. About a dozen families sent along alternate pictures of their loved ones from which he will now work.

New York Gov. George Pataki's office called about possibly incorporating his project into a larger plan to commemorate the victims. A documentary film crew also has begun chronicling his work and will follow him to Fairhope, Ala., next month where he will sell some of his other paintings in a fund-raiser for the Sept. 11 project.

DeMinico has plenty of ideas about how and where the portraits might be displayed. Gallery space in New York or Washington might be logical, he says, but ultimately he sees the decision being made by the families. "This is resonating, and that's gratifying as an artist, to feel as if what you're doing is making that connection, bridging that gap. That's what I think art is about."

Full squad practice begins for Raider football team

By STAFF REPORTS

Texas Tech held its first full-squad practice of the season Saturday at the practice field located south of Jones SBC Stadium. The Red Raiders practiced once in the morning and once in the evening consisting of individual and group work, team periods and work on the kicking game.

Tech coach Mike Leach praised the morning workout by saying the squad had a great first practice. However, he was not impressed with the night workout on day one.

"I thought we'd get a little more in the afternoon," Leach said in a press release. "The effort is there, but we need to continue to be more polished."

Tech will continue two-a-day workouts through Sunday and will put on full pads for the first time Wednesday.

Tech wide receiver Anton Paige said the team needs to focus on mental toughness during these first weeks of practice. He said everybody looks great.

"We have come out the last two days and picked up where we left off in the spring," Paige said in a press release. "We are working on polishing up our game and are continuing to focus on our mental toughness, not the soreness."

The Raiders open the season in the Pigskin Classic against Ohio State at 1:30 p.m. Aug. 24 in Columbus, Ohio. The game will be televised on ABC.

Texas Tech quarterback and Heisman Trophy candidate Kliff Kingsbury, left, drops back for a pass next to backup quarterback B.J. Symons, right, during practice drills of Tech's first full squad practice of the season Saturday at the Tech practice field located south of Jones SBC Stadium. Tech opens the season against Ohio State at 1:30 p.m. Aug. 24 in the Pigskin Classic in Columbus, Ohio. The game will be televised on ABC.

Rangers head into final 51 games still struggling, even after big outburst

ARLINGTON (AP) — When the Texas Rangers scored 36 runs over two nights, the highest two-game total in the majors this season, they showed what they had thought their big-bash offense might be capable of more often.

But those two games in which the Rangers had 41 hits against the New York Yankees and Boston, the top two teams in the AL East, were only a tease for a team headed for its third straight last-place finish in the AL West.

The Rangers, who were off Monday, followed up their explosive outburst by losing to Boston's ace pitchers, and failing to score against both of them, over the weekend.

With 51 games left over the final eight weeks of the regular season, the Rangers are a season-high 21 1/2 games behind AL West-leading Seattle. Their 47-64 record is the worst at this point since they had only 42 wins in 1985.

There is a 16 1/2-game gap between Texas and the rest of the division. Seattle, Anaheim and Oakland — the only teams the Rangers will play their final 20 games — are all in playoff contention.

Pedro Martinez and Derek Lowe, the Boston teammates who are leading candidates for this year's AL Cy Young, both pitched seven shutout innings in their starts against Texas.

Martinez (15-2) struck out 10 and allowed just three singles before leaving Sunday night's game with an 11-0 lead. Texas scored against relievers Alan Embree and Chris Haney to make the final 11-3.

"It's not easy losing a game like that," said Rangers manager Jerry Narron. "Getting blown out isn't easy if you are young or old."

That came two nights after

Lowe (15-5) shut out the Rangers over seven innings in a 13-0 Red Sox victory.

That was the first time Texas had been shut out at home since April 8, 2000, a stretch of 213 games. And it came in the first game after the two-game stretch in which the Rangers won 17-6 over New York and 19-7 over Boston.

Only the Red Sox bullpen kept the Rangers from being shut out again Sunday night.

Texas finished its homestand 5-5 against the A's, Yankees and Red Sox. The Rangers are 8-17 since the All-Star break.

Despite the team's struggles and going 0-for-3 Sunday, All-Star shortstop Alex Rodriguez is hitting .311 and leads the majors with 37 homers and 94 RBIs through 111 games. He led the AL with 52 homers last season, when he didn't hit No. 37 until the 124th game.

Second baseman Michael Young, who was 2-for-3 Sunday and had one of the hits off Martinez, has 10 hits his last 18 at-bats over five games.

Dear Red Raiders,

Put on your Red & Black, get your guns up and get ready for a great year!

On behalf of the entire Texas Tech faculty, staff and administration, I welcome you to the 2002-2003 academic year.

I hope this will be a wonderful year for every Red Raider, and I hope the knowledge you acquire and the friends you make this year will be with you throughout your lives.

The Student Services Guide is a good example of the information available to you on campus to answer your questions and give you pointers for a successful semester. I hope you will take advantage of this guide and other resources as you adapt to the campus environment.

Best wishes for a great year at Texas Tech!

The Student Counseling Center is staffed by licensed psychologists, doctoral interns and other doctoral graduate students. The staff is experienced with problems and issues related to college students and strives to be inclusive and honor diversity such as race, gender, sexual identity, cultural background, abilities, etc. All services are confidential.

AccessTECH

INFORMATION

The mission of AccessTECH disability support program is to provide students with full access to and participation in the academic environment and university community.

AccessTECH embraces the diversity of the student body and celebrates a culturally sensitive and accessible campus through outreach and partnerships with many university organizations and departments.

The department's goal is to provide reasonable accommodations and a supportive, well resourced environment to students with disabilities in order to remove barriers to their education and therefore encourages, empowers and challenges students to excel.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT ASSOCIATION

INFORMATION

The Student Government Association represents the student body in all areas of student concern.

The SGA provides students with the Off-Campus Housing Guide, New Student Guide, the Word coupon book, student insurance, Safe Ride, voter registration and Citibus campus route maps.

The SGA oversees student fees and funding for student organizations and sponsors Tech/Lubbock Community Day, Take-a-Kid to the game and RaiderGate.

Jeremy Moore
Student Government Association President Kelli Stumbo swears in Internal Vice President Jeremy Brown and External Vice President Leigh Mauer in April.

SERVICES

Your Student Government Association is working on many different initiatives for the year. The SGA strives to become more representative of the student body by creating more programs.

- One of the largest programs being implemented this year is Student Organization Advisory Congress.
  - SOAC is an advisory congress that is made up of representatives from all registered student organizations at Tech. This congress will voice any ideas and concerns of the students to the Student Senate so the SGA will stay informed.
- A Multicultural Center housed on campus also is being implemented this year to better serve all students.
- The SGA continues its dedication to school spirit and will coordinate more Rowdy Raider Rallies and other programs for students to support their school.
- The SGA, this year, has taken responsibility of coordinating the Senior Gift.
