However, they will most likely lose a significant amount of information from the hospitals, Sanders said. He does not see any way around that.

With spring in full swing and summer quickly approaching, Texas Tech students will celebrate Arbor Day on Friday with a campus beautification project.

Fraternities, sororities, service organizations, honor societies and campus departments, as well as students from the Health Sciences Center, will comprise the anticipated 80 organizations attending the festivities, said Megan Wright, Arbor Day coordinator.

"It will be fun to hang out (at Arbor Day) because you're there with the student organization you choose to be with and friends," Wright said.

Organizations will be assigned plots of land on campus and will be given specific flowers and bushes to plant, Wright said. Grounds Maintenance workers will determine the landscape de-

Hong Kong reopens schools after SARS outbreak

By Dirk Beveridge/ Associated Press

HONG KONG — Hong Kong reopened most secondary schools Tuesday three weeks after they were closed to keep the SARS virus from spreading, but thousands of students in surgical masks were walking proof the territory still has a long way to go.

The daily number of new SARS cases here has declined in recent days, but World Health Organization officials say that is not enough to consider the disease under control.

At the same time, Hong Kong reported five new deaths Tuesday, bringing the total to 99. Most officials have worst disaster here in years, despite Chief Executive Tung Chee-hwa's expression of optimism Monday.

He said the former British colony was "slowly but surely getting the figures stabilized" after quarantining households of SARS patients and a sharp and sustained drop in new infections — lasting for weeks, not just days — that would show severe acute respiratory syndrome is coming under

The WHO says there are several signs needed to indicate the outbreak is finally contained: when the spread consistently avoided any predictions in the local community is stemmed,

Dr. Lo Wing-lok, president of the Hong Kong Medical Association and an infectious disease expert, said he believed "in three months' time Hong Kong can return to almost normal, not completely normal."

Even then, Hong Kong might continue to have sporadic cases, he said. Health Secretary Dr. Yeoh Engkiong acknowledged Tuesday that Housing to include more Tech residents

MAKING SPACE: Officials to cut single rooms to occupy more Red Raiders.

By Joey Kirk/Staff Reporter

Texas Tech's Department of Housing and Residence Life is taking steps to ensure the availability of residence hall rooms for the upcoming academic year.

Sean Duggan, director of Housing and Residence Life, said they are limiting the number of single rooms and decreasing the number of Gateway students guaranteed to live on campus.

"This is our biggest chance to make more rooms available for incoming students," he said. "We are reducing the number of single rooms to 150 from 450 this past fall semester. We are expecting an increase from 6,300 to about 6,600 students to live in the dorms next fall, but the numbers change daily so it's hard to get an exact estimate."

The Gateway program is designed for students to have a chance to complete prescribed coursework at South Plains College while making a smooth transition to Tech by living on campus, Duggan said.

'We are also cutting Gateway student housing by 175, so it will help us gain 500 more beds next year," he said. "Through limiting the number of singles and Gateway housing, since enrollment goes up, we can meet the higher demand for campus housing.'

Janis Haney, supervisor of Residence Life, said these limitations have been put into effect because of a certain policy.

"We would love to accommodate the wants of our current residents, but because of the freshmen residency policy, where they have remained in campus housing, it is not feasible," she said. "So this will help us make room for everyone wanting and needing to live in the dorms."

Daniel Rice, a freshman theater major from Garland, said even with a roommate, he has sufficient room in the residence halls.

"There is very minimal space within our dorm, but I know that it is

ROTC cadet honored with Marshall Award

By Joey Kirk/Staff Reporter

As the only Texas Tech Army ROTC cadet nominated, Joe Contreras, a senior exercise and sport sciences major from O'Donnell, felt privileged and honored to be selected for the George C. Marshall Award.

"I know that a lot of great people received this award and think my hard work finally paid off," he said.

As the recipient of the award, Contreras was invited to join about 275 other cadets from universities and colleges for a National Security Seminar, where they attended conferences with senior U.S. government officials at the Virginia Military Institute in Lexington, Va., last week.

Col. David Reid, department chairman and professor of military science, was a 1982 recipient of the award from Tech.

"Each person is selected on overall performance, including in college and in the ROTC program, and also their peers help nominate a candidate," he said. "Contreras was the top cadet in Tech's program and he is also ranked in the top 20 percent in the nation from the National Advanced Leadership Camp."

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) -Rescue workers have recovered more than 110 bodies after two ferry boats capsized during tropical storms on different Bangladeshi rivers, and hundreds of people remained missing, authorities said Tuesday.

Some 108 bodies, including those of women and children, were recovered after a double-decker ferry sank Monday in the Buriganga River near the capital, Dhaka, the Shipping Ministry said.

Rescue workers using huge cranes partially lifted the sunken boat from the river bed and towed it closer to shore. Authorities have ordered another salvage ship to try to completely lift the boat, where many bodies are believed to be trapped inside.

More than 200 people were still missing from that ferry.

Survivors said the ferry's crew ignored passengers' pleas to return to shore as bad weather approached. They said dark clouds enveloped the river when the storm hit.

"We pleaded with the crew to turn and steer the boat closer to shore. But they ignored us and told us get back to our cabins," said Mohammad Igbal, a survivor waiting on the river bank for news of his missing wife and sister.

Senate rejects life without parole bill

AUSTIN (AP) - The Senwould have allowed juries in the country's No. 1 death penalty state to sentence a convicted murderer to life in prison without the possibility of parole. After little discussion, the bill failed to receive enough votes for it to come to the floor for a full de-

Current law allows a jury in a capital offense trial to sentence an offender to death or to life in prison. With a life sentence, a convicted murderer is eligible for parole in 40 years.

The bill would have given juries all three options. The life without parole option also would have been available in cases where the prosecution did not seek the death penalty.

Sen. Steve Ogden, R-College ate rejected a bill Tuesday that Station, voted against the bill, saying he believed by changing the capital murder statute as significantly as the legislation would have, the door would be opened to a new wave of litigation over the constitutionality of the death penalty.

"I think it would have put the capital murderer statute back in court chamber until having the support to be litigated for years," Ogden said. .

The bill's sponsor, Sen. Eddie Lucio, Jr., D-Brownsville, said the legislation gives juries another sentencing option and could provide closure for the families of the victims.

"I believe it gives Texas juries the ability to keep dangerous criminals off our streets forever," said Lucio, who said he supports the death penalty.

Forty-six states have a life without parole option, Lucio said.

Heading into a scheduled execution Tuesday evening, Texas had put to death 301 inmates since 1982. Tuesday's planned execution would put at 13 the number of inmates executed this year.

It is unusual for a bill to fail on the Senate floor because typically a senator will wait to bring it to the to get it approved. A bill needs the support of two-thirds of the 31 senators to be considered on the floor. The life without parole bill failed on 19-12 vote, two short of the 21 votes needed. Lucio said he did not believe he would have enough support to bring the bill up for another vote.

The Senate passed a bill similar to Lucio's during the 2001 legislative session, but it failed in the House.

mates as "lab mice." Another 900,000 younger students are expected to return to class Monday. Hong Kong still is feeling the sting of the WHO advisory urging against travel there.

The de facto Hong Kong airline, Cathay Pacific Airways, announced more temporary cuts in service Tuesday, saying it now has scrapped 281 flights, about 45 percent of its schedule, because of a plunge in traffic believed to be costing it $3 million a day.

An estimated 4,000 people worldwide have been infected by SARS, and the WHO reports at least 229 deaths, mostly in Asia.

Even if new infections keep tapering off in Hong Kong, some experts fear the territory's proximity to mainland China, where the disease is believed to have originated and is still spreading, could complicate matters.

Dr. Henk Bekedam, the chief WHO representative in China, said Tuesday he was worried about SARS in the mainland's poorer provinces, where "the public health system has collapsed in the last 10 or 20 years because the government has not supported it."

If mainland China cannot control the disease, he said, "it will be very problematic to deal with it globally. Diseases like this do not respect borders."

Hit by international criticism that it covered up information about SARS and aggravated the outbreak, Chinese officials appear to be making bolder public efforts to contain the disease. A radio message broadcast across Beijing sought two taxi drivers, who may have contracted the virus from an infected "male passenger dressed in a long green military-style coat."

tually stopped. Debbie Montford, wife of Chancellor Emeritus John Montford, re-established the event in 1999 with help from the Center for Campus Life, Wright said.

Since then, the event has grown significantly, she said. Several departments are now involved in the planning, including Housing and Residence Life, the offices of the chancellor and the president, and the Tech Police Department.

The ultimate goal for the event, Wright said, is to get more student organizations to participate and apply for awards.

"I think it's a neat outdoor program that ends the semester," she said. "It's a way to give back to where you are every day."

Alpha Phi Omega, a service organization, will be one of the many groups participating in the festivities. Catherine Moore, head

France proposes Iraqi sanction suspension

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - After staunchly opposing the U.S.-led war against Saddam Hussein, France made a surprise proposal Tuesday to meet the United States halfway by calling for the immediate suspension of economic sanctions on Iraq.

U.S. Ambassador John Negroponte stuck by President Bush's demand that because of "the dramatically changed circumstances within Iraq," sanctions should be lifted entirely, not just suspended.

"We now need to work with France and other countries to see how best that can be achieved and how quickly.'

The first Security Council meeting on the future of post-Hussein Iraq indicated divisions remain over who should disarm the country and how sanctions should be lifted.

The French proposal appeared to take Russians and Germans off guard. Neither embraced it, and both supported the return of U.N. weapons inspectors to verify disarmament before sanctions are lifted, which the United States opposes.

as much information to the public as possible, and the interpretation of the new law conflicts with that goal.

"This Council, since last May, has been very open and will continue to be," he said.

However, if there is a law prohibiting the release of information, they will abide by it, he said, although he is not sure the city is considering the appropriate intent of the law.

McDougal has asked Burgess to meet with several individuals who are familiar with these issues, and he has asked the law be on the City Council's work session in May to ensure the city interprets the law correctly, he said.

Associate professor of mass communications Michael Parkinson said his understanding of the new law is that hospitals are not allowed to release medical information about patients. It appears to him that somebody within the city widened the boundaries of the law to include the police department, he said.

"It seems to me that they're kind of stretching it," he said. "It sounds to me like the law was designed to protect the people in hospitals, not the people who put them there."

According to information from HHS, the final regulation applies to health plans, health care clearinghouses and health care providers who conduct certain financial and administrative transactions electronically.

and outstanding speakers, but some didn't make it because of the issues dealing with the war in Iraq," he said. "We had a round table discussion and a lot of knowledge was passed."

Payne said several internationally recognized experts helped with the conference.

"The overall theme for this year's seminar was the transformation of the International Security Environment and the role of the U.S. Military," he said. "Cadets explored the implications of recent world events in the Middle East, the Far East, Africa and Israel. Methods of countering global terrorism and increasing homeland security were also discussed in great detail."

But the main focus was on leadership, Contreras said.

"The most important part of the seminar was leadership because of what we as senior cadets will have to face following our college days," he said.

accommodating to my needs," he said. "The main thing you have to do is organize the way you want it and, hopefully, end up with a lot of extra space."

Research has proven that some students prefer the residence halls to off-campus housing arrangements, Duggan said.

"A lot of people have said that they like the dorms because of their convenience to classes and events like football and basketball games," he said. "We have also confirmed that grade point averages are higher for students living on campus rather than those that live off campus. This can be due to many factors like noise or parties, which can disrupt a student's learning when off campus."

With an increased number of students in the dorms, there is enough room and food to support the extra residents, said Sam Bennett, director of Hospitality Services.

"Since we will have more residents spread out all over campus, we need to be aware that there will be more business to handle and prepare by buying more food and increasing the staff," he said. "The extensive capacity we have on campus is well enough to absorb more people."

The Bledsoe/Gordon/Sneed dining hall will be closed during the weekends next falls because of low meal counts, Bennett said.

"Due to low spending, we decided to close the BGS dining hall down for the weekends next year only because we have too much on board and not enough in cash," he said. "We closed Wiggins hall completely down because of the same reason, but it gives us a chance to add to the master plan."

Cash operations must be advanced before doing anything else, so Housing and Residence Life is getting involved in different activities, Bennett said.

"We are doing different types of things like adding food outlets in the new Student Union construction, which should start up around January 2005," he said. "We are well involved with that operation."

There are certain philosophical assumptions present in our society, and those assumptions creep into everything we do.

The values of our culture show up in everything we learn, even in "objective" fields like history and science.

Daniel Jonah Goldhagen's book "Hitler's Willing Executioners" is remarkable not just for what it says about Hitler's time, but for what it says about

There is a movement in our culture that wants to deny the existence of evil — a massive attempt to rationalize acts of brutality and put every killer into a context where his actions know what was happening in the camps, but if you look at the sheer number of camps in Nazi Germany, if you grasp how crucial slave labor was to their economy, you realize no aspect of life was left untouched by the camp system.

Genocide was not a sport reserved for the S.S. soldiers in police battalions and the regular army zealously participated in organized attempts to eliminate the lews.

Goldhagen recounts a tale from the 101st police battalion, where rank and file soldiers rounded up thousands of Jews, packed them into a synagogue and burned them alive.

Ultimately, the capacity for evil rests not in who you are, but in what you are taught to believe.

That's why it's so important to strive for truth in our daily lives. We have to seek out good information, and we must demand accountability from our teachers and our media. Because, in a very real sense, the things we learn determine what kind of people we will be.

Looking into the tombs of Angelina Jolie ngelina Jolie's grasp on Hollywood is as tight as the form-I fitting outfits she wore in the original "Lara Croft Tomb Raider." The Academy Award winning actress has explored many different acting tombs from action to drama, comedy, art-house films and erotic thrillers.

Jolie won the Best Supporting Actress Oscar for "Girl, Interrupted," in which she played a mental patient. Now she has her fingers in the action movie pie.

"I'm fortunate to be able to do both," Jolie said. "Drama is so heavy and personal. You lose the ability to laugh and be physical. I like that about the "Tomb Raider" film: We find how important it is to be playful."

The first "Tomb Raider" film, though panned by critics, won the actress approval from fans of the video

"I was happy that people accepted me," she said. "It did take me a long time to get comfortable with (the role). They had to talk me into the shorts, though."

Now Jolie is strapping on the shorts and her guns again, and riding her motorcycle into theaters this summer with "Lara Croft Tomb Raider: Cradle of Life."

"There were certain things that were unfinished in the first one," Jolie said. "I wasn't happy enough with it. I really wanted to explore her character more.'

The character of Lara Croft, which Jolie described at one time as a mixture of James Bond and Indiana Jones in female form, was already established by the video game. But Jolie maintains the film made her more human.

"You get a sense of it already in the video game, but I think that she also has a very sophisticated English sense of humor," she said. "But we also really got into the warrior side physically demanding. Jolie said the training is one of the hardest things about the project.

"It's always physically demanding, and I am a parent now, and that's hard. Training is sometimes harder than shooting," she said. "There are things that when you mess up, it hurts. I'm very hard on myself in that way."

Jolie did much of her own stunt work in the first film, to the amazement of the filmmakers. She continues that practice in the second film with such stunts as riding horseback while shooting, skydiving and more. But she said not all of the stunts were

"I hated the jet ski (stunt) originally," she said. "I was really happy to accomplish it."

physical abilities, how does a light action movie like "Tomb Raider" aid in her learning more about the acting

"It's very hard," she said. "It's hard to be the center of attention and loud. It's hard for me, and it would be hard for anyone. It was a matter of loosening myself up. Acting and learning about yourself are the same thing."

Indeed she and the character of Lara Croft have learned more about themselves since the first film. Jolie's father, actor Jon Voight, played Croft's father in the original film. But one notices the absence of his name from the new film's credits. Is this because Croft has gotten over the issues with her father?

"I think we both have," Jolie said laughingly. "He's dead (in the movie), and you can only bring him back so many times."

Another difference between the first and second film is the change of directors. Director Simon West ("Con Air") was replaced by former cinematographer-turned-director Jan de Bont ("Speed," "Twister"). Did this change in directors alter the dynamic?

"It wasn't so drastically different," Jolie said. "But Jan de Bont has done a lot of cinematography, and these films need to be fun to watch."

When an actor does a sequel in a possible film franchise, the possibility exists for that actor to be typecast in future projects. Jolie said she is aware of this danger.

"I'm just happy to be working, though," she said. "But I've never been offered the part of an innocent daughter or a mom because I guess certain characters are just better suited for me. I'm trying to balance it."

Will balancing it include the continuation of this franchise with "Tomb

Fun and funds on tap at Spring Fling

By David Wiechmann/Sports Editor

The sand volleyball courts at Urbanovsky Park are filled with Texas Tech students every day, and it's all in good fun. This Saturday, however, Red Raiders and Lubbockites can put their skills to the test in the 9th Annual Spring Fling Grass Volleyball Tournament.

The Tech volleyball team will be hosting its largest fund-raiser of the year Saturday at the Rec practice field at 19th Street and University Avenue. It is a major contributor to the team's budget every year, and it generates a friendly and competitive atmosphere.

"It can't not be competitive even Nancy Todd.

Every year the tournament is a success and although fun is the No. 1 objective, winning is still on to lose," Todd said.

Outside hitter Angela Mooney said Tech students are not the only ones who get fired up about the tour- aides the team tremendously as far as sion tend to get pretty excited about the season begins. the heated competition, she said.

There are 10 different divisions in the tournament ranging from youth 12 & under doubles to corporate advanced co-ed 4's.

Todd said the Spring Fling is a chance for the Raiders to promote the Spring Fling should not be an evtheir program and get some attention from the community.

"This is our end-of-the-year fundraiser, and it's a lot of fun for the girls to get out there," she said.

Setter Laura Grote said she wants a lot of people to play in this year's Spring Fling because it will contribthough it's fun," said head coach ute more to the fun and the volleyball program.

"Because it's a fund-raiser, we'd like to get as many as possible since we get almost 100 percent of the profit," she everyone's mind because "no one likes said. "We really want people to enjoy themselves so hopefully they'll come back next year."

Mooney said the Spring Fling

"This is a big fund-raiser for us," she said. "So we can do travel and get the things we need in the fall."

The event is big as well; with an anticipated 120 teams entering the competition and action on 25 courts, eryday picnic gathering.

"We've been putting fliers out for weeks," Grote said. "So I think it will be a good turnout."

Opportunities await Tech at Drake Relays

By Jason Lenz/Staff Reporter

The Texas Tech track and field team makes its way to the land of corn and farmers' daughters this week for the Drake Relays at Drake University in Des Moines, Iowa.

The competition lasts today through Saturday and hosts athletes from all over the country. This is the Red Raiders' first time competing in the meet.

Sophomore pole vaulter Bobby Most said the team has been waiting for the Drake Relays for some time this season.

"This is a big meet," he said. "We've been looking forward to it the whole year. There will be a lot of world-class athletes there, and I think a lot of us are going out there to just do our best, make a name for ourselves and compete at a higher level."

Associate head coach Diane Wholey said Tech should expect tough competition, especially the athletes she has been coaching.

"Speaking specifically to the athletes that I work with who are going in the invitational high jump, they're going to be among the top 10 to 15 jumpers in the country," she said. "It's kind of nice that they're in the mix."

Wholey said she anticipates a good showing from high jumpers, senior Mike Beasley and sophomore Chad Pharis.

Among the other Raiders headed to Iowa are the members of the sprint medley team. Sophomores Albert Booker, Jonathan Johnson and Matt Stewart join senior Julieon Raeburn to make up the team. The foursome finished in first place with the fastest time in the world this year at the Texas Relays in Austin.

Raeburn said he knows other competitors are gunning for them now. "I know they want to beat us,' he said. "We want to win, and so we're going to try to run our best. I'm hoping that'll be enough."

Raeburn said the whole team enters the competition with confidence. "In the 4-by-

"Everyone's expectations are high," he said. "All of us are going into this with a positive outlook. None of us hopes for the worst, but we all go out there, do our best and hopefully bring back a name to Texas Tech."

Wholey said she is optimistic about the team's chances overall this weekend

"On the whole, the team ought to do well," she said. "The team has been coming back off a lot of injuries. So I think the relays ought to be kicking in; the distance runners ought to do great. It's certainly geared more toward relay-type competition as opposed to individual running events, but I think those that are competing individually are going to do really well."

Tennal to transfer from Lady Raiders basketball

Texas Tech Lady Raider basketball coach Marsha Sharp announced Tuesday that guard Miklannet Tennal wishes to transfer from Tech to seek playing basketball elsewhere.

In a press release, Sharp said she believes Tennal wants to play somewhere she would be guaranteed more playing time.

"I think Miklannet decided she wanted to try and play her final season somewhere where she would be assured to play more minutes and be an impact player," Sharp said.

Tennal played in 30 games this season in the Lady Raiders' run to the Elite Eight and averaged 3.2 points per game in 11.2 minutes a game.

It is Sharp's policy that she will not comment on the matter any further than the press release.

4 On 4 Flag Football Playoffs Begin

Tonight marks the first night of football playoffs. All teams in the Greek Black Division will play tonight. Defending Greek, and All-University Champions, Kappa Alpha A will begin their title defense against Phi Delt D. Other teams to watch in the Greek playoffs will be Fiji A, Phi Delta Theta A and Kappa Sigma A. Coincidentally, these 4 A teams represent the top 4 Fraternities in the overall Blanket Championship race. Greek Red will take the field on Thursday with Theta Chi, Theta Xi, Delta Sigma Phi and Phi Kappa Psi as the top seeds.

The Men's Open Championship will head through Franchise. There are 7 unbeaten men's teams heading into play. Play for Men's Open will begin tomorrow night. Da Pups, WAB and the Untouchables all sport perfect records but Franchise has emerged as the team to beat.

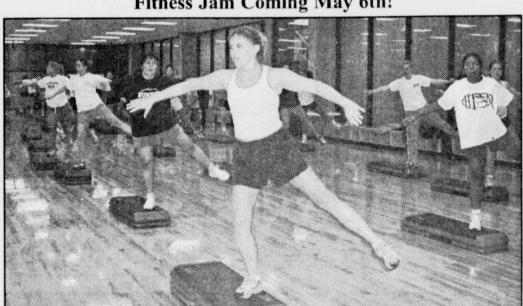

Co-Rec play will also begin tomorrow night. Top seeds Bibendum's, the Lil' Black Sheep and Alpha Kappa Psi all await winners of tomorrow's games. This is the first year that a women's champion will be crowned in Co-Rec spring football.

The championship of the Women's Division looks to be a rematch of Lil' Black Sheep and Tri Delt. During the season, the Sheep took the contest 14-12 and the two teams look to lock up in the championship game.

Home Run Derby &

Softball Skills Challenge; Tue. 4/29 7pm Can you hit it long? Got speed around the bases? Test your softball skills against others in the softball skills and derby competition. All you have to do is come by the fields at 7pm!

Red Raiders vs. Mickey Mouse? Campus

Four Tech students earned free trips to Disney World just by participating in the Target ACIC Fitness Assessment, one of the many events put on by the Student Recreation Center this school year. This National competition that involved students from over 200 schools, had participants compete on their own campuses in 4 fitness tests encompassing strength, flexibility, endurance and speed/agility. The top four schools with the most Male and Female participants were eligible to send their winners to the national competition that will be held May 19-12 in Orlando. Chris Leisinger, Josh Lee, Suzanna Beck and Abby Alexander will represent Tech. We are proud of all the participants and look forward to our finalists representing Tech and best of luck!
